Hunting and Fishing Licenses Expire March 31

The State Game Warden called attention to the fact that all hunting and fishing licenses expire on March 31. After that date any person who hunts or fishes should be sure he has the new 1944 license. The new licenses are now in the hands of the printers, and will be sent to the license vendors as soon as possible, but under prevailing printing difficulties it will probably be March 20 to 25 before they are available.

The Warden urged that every one who purchases a license to hunt or fish this year ask the vendor for a game law digest (it's free) and become thoroughly familiar with the rules and regulations.

Flak Fails to Halt Carrizozo Pilot

An Advanced South Pacific Air Base, March 10. Staff Sgt. John F. Kramer, Brooklyn, N. Y., is one of the Mitchell bomber crewmen ready to testify that raiding the Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain, is hardly a "milk run" yet.

Sgt. Kramer's pants were torn off by a flak burst over that target Tuesday. But his plane, with Major Truman A. Spencer, Jr., Carrizozo, N. M., at the controls, returned safely.

Wins Fourth Leaf Cluster

(El Paso Times)
Tech. Sgt. Gerald J. Dinwiddie, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dinwiddie, 506 N. Campbell St., has been awarded his fourth Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of an additional Air Medal, according to a release from the 18th AAF Headquarters in the South Pacific.

Sgt. Dinwiddie, who is an engineer with a bomb squadron and veteran of many attacks against the Japs, entered the Army in January, 1942. He has been overseas about ten months. Sgt. Dinwiddie was a crew member of the "Mechanical Misarrange," Flying Fortress which hammered Rabaul and New Britain. At that time, the Fortress had made 58 raids over enemy territory.

The citation accompanying the award reads "For meritorious achievement while participating in sustained combat operational missions, and when flights are of a hazardous nature during which there was traversed an area where enemy antiaircraft fire is effective, or where enemy airplanes or exposure to enemy fire is habitually encountered."

—Sgt. Dinwiddie was born in Carrizozo, when his father was a section foreman here several years ago.

Pfc. Padilla, son of Ramon Padilla of Capitan, was home on furlough last week.

In New Guinea

S/Sgt. Bill Marler, 24, of Carrizozo, whose wife, Effie, is a Wac in North Africa, is now serving with the 6th Army in New Guinea as motor sergeant of a battery. A reporter found him in a garage consisting of a tin roof over a sand floor, replacing a wheel on a 2 1/2 ton truck. "I hear from my wife regularly, but the letters usually take a month and a half," he said. She nipped up to Pfc. the other day. "While waiting for action, Marler is living in one of the finest camps in New Guinea. They have tents with wooden floors, movies under the stars every night, good swimming in warm waters, and the chow is the best in New Guinea.

Degner—McDaniel

Miss Henrietta Degner and Mr. Dee L. McDaniel were married last Sunday in Alamogordo by the Rev. Stone at the First Methodist Church. Mrs. McDaniel is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Degner and has spent most of her life in Carrizozo. For the past 2 years she has been employed by the County Health Dept. She is quite attractive and popular. She was Worthy Advisor of the Order of Rainbow Girls and a leader in the Methodist Sunday School.

The groom was born and reared at Nogal. He too is popular and industrious. He has been employed by the Southern Pacific water service for several years.

Extension specialists from State College will be present to discuss miscellaneous topics affecting the agricultural and livestock industries. Discussions and up-to-date information will be given on Production Goals, Farm Labor, Farm Machinery Outlook, Insecticides and Diseases, Fertilizers, Support Prices, Price Ceilings, Post-War Agriculture and other topics of interest.

All farm and ranchmen and women are urged to attend one of these meetings.
Carl P. Radcliff,
County Extension Agent.

Promoted to Sergeant

Cpl. Eugenio Lucras, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emiliano Lucras of Corona, has been promoted to sergeant in New Guinea, and is leader of a light machine gun section in the cavalry. While awaiting action, Lucras' troop enjoys baseball games, movies, a post exchange, showers, a recreation tent and a good ocean beach.

Crippled Children Easter Sales Appeal

Within the next week or ten days citizens of Lincoln County will receive letters of appeal from the New Mexico Society for Crippled Children containing a packet of Easter Seals. You will be asked to buy these seals. Your purchase will enable the Society to carry on its sorely needed program of rehabilitation for crippled and handicapped children of New Mexico; a program which does not aim to duplicate the efforts of other agencies, but to supplement and include those children for whom funds from other agencies are not available. There is no more appealing picture than that of a crippled child deprived of the pleasures, enjoyment and opportunities "like other kids." The humane hearts of Lincoln County citizens through their purchases of Easter Seals, will make possible the restoration to health and happiness of many more of these little ones. So, when you receive your Seals, remember these children and send in your contribution. If you do not receive your seals write to Box 95, Carrizozo, or to 206 S. 3rd St., Albuquerque, and ask for them.

Blessed are they whose prayers in deeds find wings,
Whose hands in gifts of humble service bring.
And in His lowly children serve their King.
Blessed are they who hear the Master plead,
In every cry or human word or need;
Lol in their hearts the Lord is risen indeed.

Seeks Nomination For District Attorney

W. T. Scoggin, Jr., who has been district attorney since he was appointed by Gov. Dempsey to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of M. A. Throck, formally announces his candidacy for election to the office, subject to Democratic primary of June 6. Petitions for placing Mr. Scoggin's name on the primary ballot are now being circulated in Dona Ana, Otero and Lincoln counties.

Mr. Scoggin was born July 12, 1909, in Las Cruces. He finished grammar school in California, while a patient in Dr. Lowhan's orthopedic hospital; finished high school in Las Cruces in 1928, and graduated from A. & M. College in 1932. He read law six years in the office of Atty. Edwin Meehem; took LaSalle university's correspondence course in law and has a degree from that school. He was admitted to the New Mexico bar in March of 1941.

He taught school in Dona Ana county seven years and in 1939, became county assessor, serving two terms. At the close of his last term he was appointed assistant district attorney. During the time he was teaching, in 1937, he was president of the state principals' association, and last year, was president of the state organization of county officials.

Mr. Scoggin has been a victim of infantile paralysis since he was two years old. Infected, physicians believe, during a paralysis epidemic while on a family visit in Little Rock, Ark., he collapsed on a train coming into El Paso while enroute home. Friends cite his fight against that disease as one of the evidences of his ability to handle the district attorney's office with success.

Married 11 years to Marie Davenport, he is the father of three

Food Processing & Cold Storage Locker Plant

Our municipal power plant is now completing arrangements for the addition of a food processing and cold storage locker plant which will be installed in connection with existing power plant equipment. The specifications will also include about a 2 ton ice maker.

The plant will consist of 250 lockers, 60 percent of which will be reserved for families who are ranchers or farmers or, are otherwise producers of foodstuffs. It is necessary before priorities can be obtained from the WPB to purchase equipment, that 150 lockers be rented in advance. The requirement is merely proof that the plant will be used. Such plants are being encouraged by our government in communities that can qualify, for they are a necessity in our drive for food conservation.

See Mr. R. B. Moore, the enterprising plant manager, for any details you do not understand. He will be glad to explain and attend to the rental of lockers. Mr. Lovelace also will be glad to explain to interested parties.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
In 1912 tropical Americas produced their greatest output of rubber—62,000 tons. It is expected that we will have imported 41,000 tons from these countries in 1943, an important supplement to our synthetic supplies.
Some experts estimate that there are around 300 million Hevea (rubber) trees in Latin America. Most of them are in jungles, difficult to get at.
"Alcohol and driving don't mix" may still be a worthy admonition, but nevertheless, millions of gallons of alcohol are needed as a raw material for the production of tires now so essential to driving.

Keep Buildings Tight, WFA Urges Farmers

Grain Spoils, Stock Sicken in Leaky Barn

Farmers have done a better job of maintaining farm machinery than farm buildings. In fact, in only four years since 1921 have investments in farm buildings equalled depreciation. Eventually, farmers find that buildings are essential tools—just as essential as thrashers, reapers or plows. But too often, farmers realize this only after a building has developed the "shakes," or after a weather-beaten roof allows moisture to get through it where it can attack the building and the cattle, hogs, feed or machines stored there.

Of what use is it to raise an extra hundred bushels of grain, the War Food administration points out, if that grain is to be lost in a granary with a leaking roof? Of what use is it to expand poultry flocks if as much as 30 per cent may be lost because of uninsulated, damp structures? Why attempt to raise more livestock unless steps are first taken to save the 20 to 40 per cent which never reach maturity because of poor or inadequate shelter?

Like home owners, farmers are apt to forget that roofs can never "relax" in the battle with wind, rain, ice and snow. While some roofing materials cannot be obtained, non-critical, fire-resistant asphalt roofing, which is easy to apply, is available.

Many New Uses Found For Chicken Feathers.

The government is taking all elder duck down and geese feathers, leaving chicken and turkey feathers for civilian use.

About 60 per cent of feathers for pillows, quilts and cushions come from Europe and China in peacetime—forcing manufacturers during the war to improve domestic supply sources, which now also must be tapped for increased war needs.

Public prejudice against chicken feathers for pillows and cushion stuffing has waned somewhat because of improved methods of preparing them, manufacturers said, adding that now they are more sanitary, while a curling process has made them softer.

More than 100,000,000 pounds of feathers now are produced annually from American poultry flocks, compared with only about 23,000,000 pounds before the war. About 65 per cent of the total is made up of chicken feathers.

Even in surgery, feathers have taken on a new value. Chemists have developed a method for dissolving them and producing a protein plastic. Threads of this plastic can be used as sutures for closing wounds because they are strong and are absorbed by the body.

Trade sources say that down makes ideal sleeping bags for soldiers and for fliers' jackets. Kapok, formerly used extensively in America as pillow-stuffing, now is unobtainable from the Dutch East Indies and available supplies on hand are used by the government.

Poultry flock owners get about five cents a pound for chicken and turkey feathers and approximately $1 a pound for down from waterfowl.

Don't Use Too Much Seed

In buying seed, it is wise to plan the amount needed for the space to be planted. A half-ounce of carrot seed, for example, might all be put into a single 100-foot row. The half-ounce of seed would contain about 12,000 seeds, and if 60 per cent of them were to grow, according to the germination test, that would mean nearly 11,000 plants in the row, or about 100 to 110 little carrot plants to each foot of row. Actually 25 seeds to the foot is about right.

WHEN a product wins and holds customer-preference year in and year out you know its leadership is established on merit. On every score, by every yardstick of value, it has met and passed the test of critical public appraisal.

Since Firestone developed the first practical pneumatic tractor tire 12 years ago and put the farm on rubber, farmers have shown an ever-increasing preference for Firestone Ground Grip Tires. Save Deer Skins For War

The State Game Department today again called attention of all big game hunters to the fact that deer and elk hides are urgently needed for military use. General Conservation Order M-310 of the War Production Board froze all deer skin leather for military purposes.

Hunters are urged to channel their deer skins into the trade so that they may be processed and used for the armed forces. State Game Warden Elliott Barker said, "In New Mexico, dry skins of deer and elk may be sold. Practically all hide buyers will accept your deer skin, and it will then be made available for war material. Turn it in to your local dealer."

Warning--Posted

Hunting & Trespassing is prohibited on the G. E. Smith premises.

Would your car take-off and fly with 100-OCTANE GASOLINE?

"I had a strange dream last night," said the A-Card Driver. "Somehow I got a tankful of 100-octane gasoline; and when I left the gas station, my 1939 puddle-jumper had such fantastic pep and power that it took-off and sailed right over the head of the traffic cop."

Strange dream is right! Because strange as it seems, today's 100-octane aviation gasoline will not greatly improve the performance of today's cars. Your present engine was designed for the gasoline which was available at the time you bought your car, and 100-octane would add little or nothing to its satisfactory operation.

When victory comes, however, automotive designers will undoubtedly develop smaller, much higher compression engines which will deliver remarkable mileage and power with post-war super fuels.

When that day arrives, Phillips will be ready... because Phillips was one of the first, and remains one of the largest makers of high octane aviation fuels. Phillips present production of 100-octane gasoline could fuel enough Flying Fortresses to drop 600 tons of bomb on Berlin daily. And soon the figure will be stepped up to an equivalent of gasoline sufficient to drop 800 tons of bombs per day on the German capital.

Actually, this American super fuel is not gasoline made by ordinary refinery processes. It is a true synthetic chemical, made by chemical processes which rearrange the petroleum hydrocarbon molecules.

That is why we say: Every time you see the Phillips 66 Shield, let it remind you that Phillips refineries, in addition to producing gasolines, lubricants, and fuel oils... are also gigantic chemical plants pouring out weapons for victory.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Sorry Judge, my shipment of suspenders still hasn't come in. Some articles around might scarce these days. I don't get anywhere near as much as I could sell."

"With the war going on, Frank, we've got to expect these things. It's true of luxuries just as it is of necessities. Take whiskey, for example. There's a real shortage in that. It's to be expected when you realize there hasn't been a drop of it distilled in this country since way back in October, 1942."

"The only thing distillers have been making during that time is war-alcohol for the Government. So, I wasn't surprised a bit to read how bootlegging and black markets have sprung up around the country as a result of the dwindling supply. Our 13 years of prohibition proved that if folks can't get legal whiskey, they'll get illicit whiskey. Sure hope the shortage doesn't last too long. I'd hate to see this country turned over to the bootleggers again."

Ration Book No. 4

The red and blue stamps, which are for meat, dairy products and processed foods as at present, will be used in conjunction with red and blue tokens, the latter to be introduced early in 1944, and given by merchants in change. Green stamps will be used on an "interim basis," with blue processed food stamps, in much the same manner as the brown stamps in Book 3 are being used this month in the meat-fats program.

Twelve of the 96 unit stamps, printed in black, are designated for sugar. An equal number are marked for coffee, which is no longer rationed. These and 72 others, marked "spare," will serve for any additional foods rationed, the OPA declared, its purpose being to provide for any contingency, since the new books are expected to serve for two years, as compared to 4 or 5 months for previous books. The cost of printing is about the same, around $1,500,000, it was stated.

They will be used the same way as stamps, but will be good at any time. Ration coupons may be issued by Local Boards and OPA offices.

Save Tin Cans

A plea to housewives to continue preparation and salvage of tin cans in areas where tin can campaigns are authorized by the War Production Board was made today by the regional WPB conservation manager.

Even the tin can collection in some areas isn't exactly what it should be, the urgent war need for the super-critical tin contained in cans has not diminished in the slightest.

The need for tin is greater than ever. Our job now is to perfect collection methods and to salvage every can possible.

Housewives are urged to continue to observe these simple rules: Open both ends of the can. Wash thoroughly. Remove paper labels. Flatten the can merely by stepping on it. Deposit in a separate box or container for collection.

Efforts to Aid Small Enterprises Are Revived

By BARROW LYONS

Plans are being made to assist small business on a scope never before attempted...

These plans arise from a growing awareness by leading politicians and administrators...

Barrow Lyons

because it has been the life of an independent citizenry and one of the chief supports of a democratic form of government.

But during the war small business has been more dependent upon big business than ever before...

Several good men have been defeated in trying to help small business through governmental agencies...

Now the emphasis is shifting. Those concerned with the fate of small business are asking where it will come out in the struggle for supremacy and survival after the war.

Early in January a group of congressional leaders urged upon Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production board...

Congressional Support

In canvassing the SWPC situation, Mr. Maverick discovered he probably would get a good deal of support from congress...

He also realized that he must obtain cooperation from the existing private organizations representing small business.

One of the first things Mr. Maverick did when he became SWPC director was to get possession of the 43,000 patents held by the alien property custodian.

But the most important step Mr. Maverick took was to set up the SWPC technical advisory service, which is helping small businesses in all parts of the country solve technical problems.

Above all, Mr. Maverick is building a strong staff looking toward a long-time operation, because he realizes the effort will be a long, tough fight.

Between 1933 and 1941 he was a special assistant United States attorney general in anti-trust cases, and since 1941 he has headed the Small Business unit of the department of justice.

Dr. Luther Gulick, a leading authority on government administration and organization, has been assisting in organization.

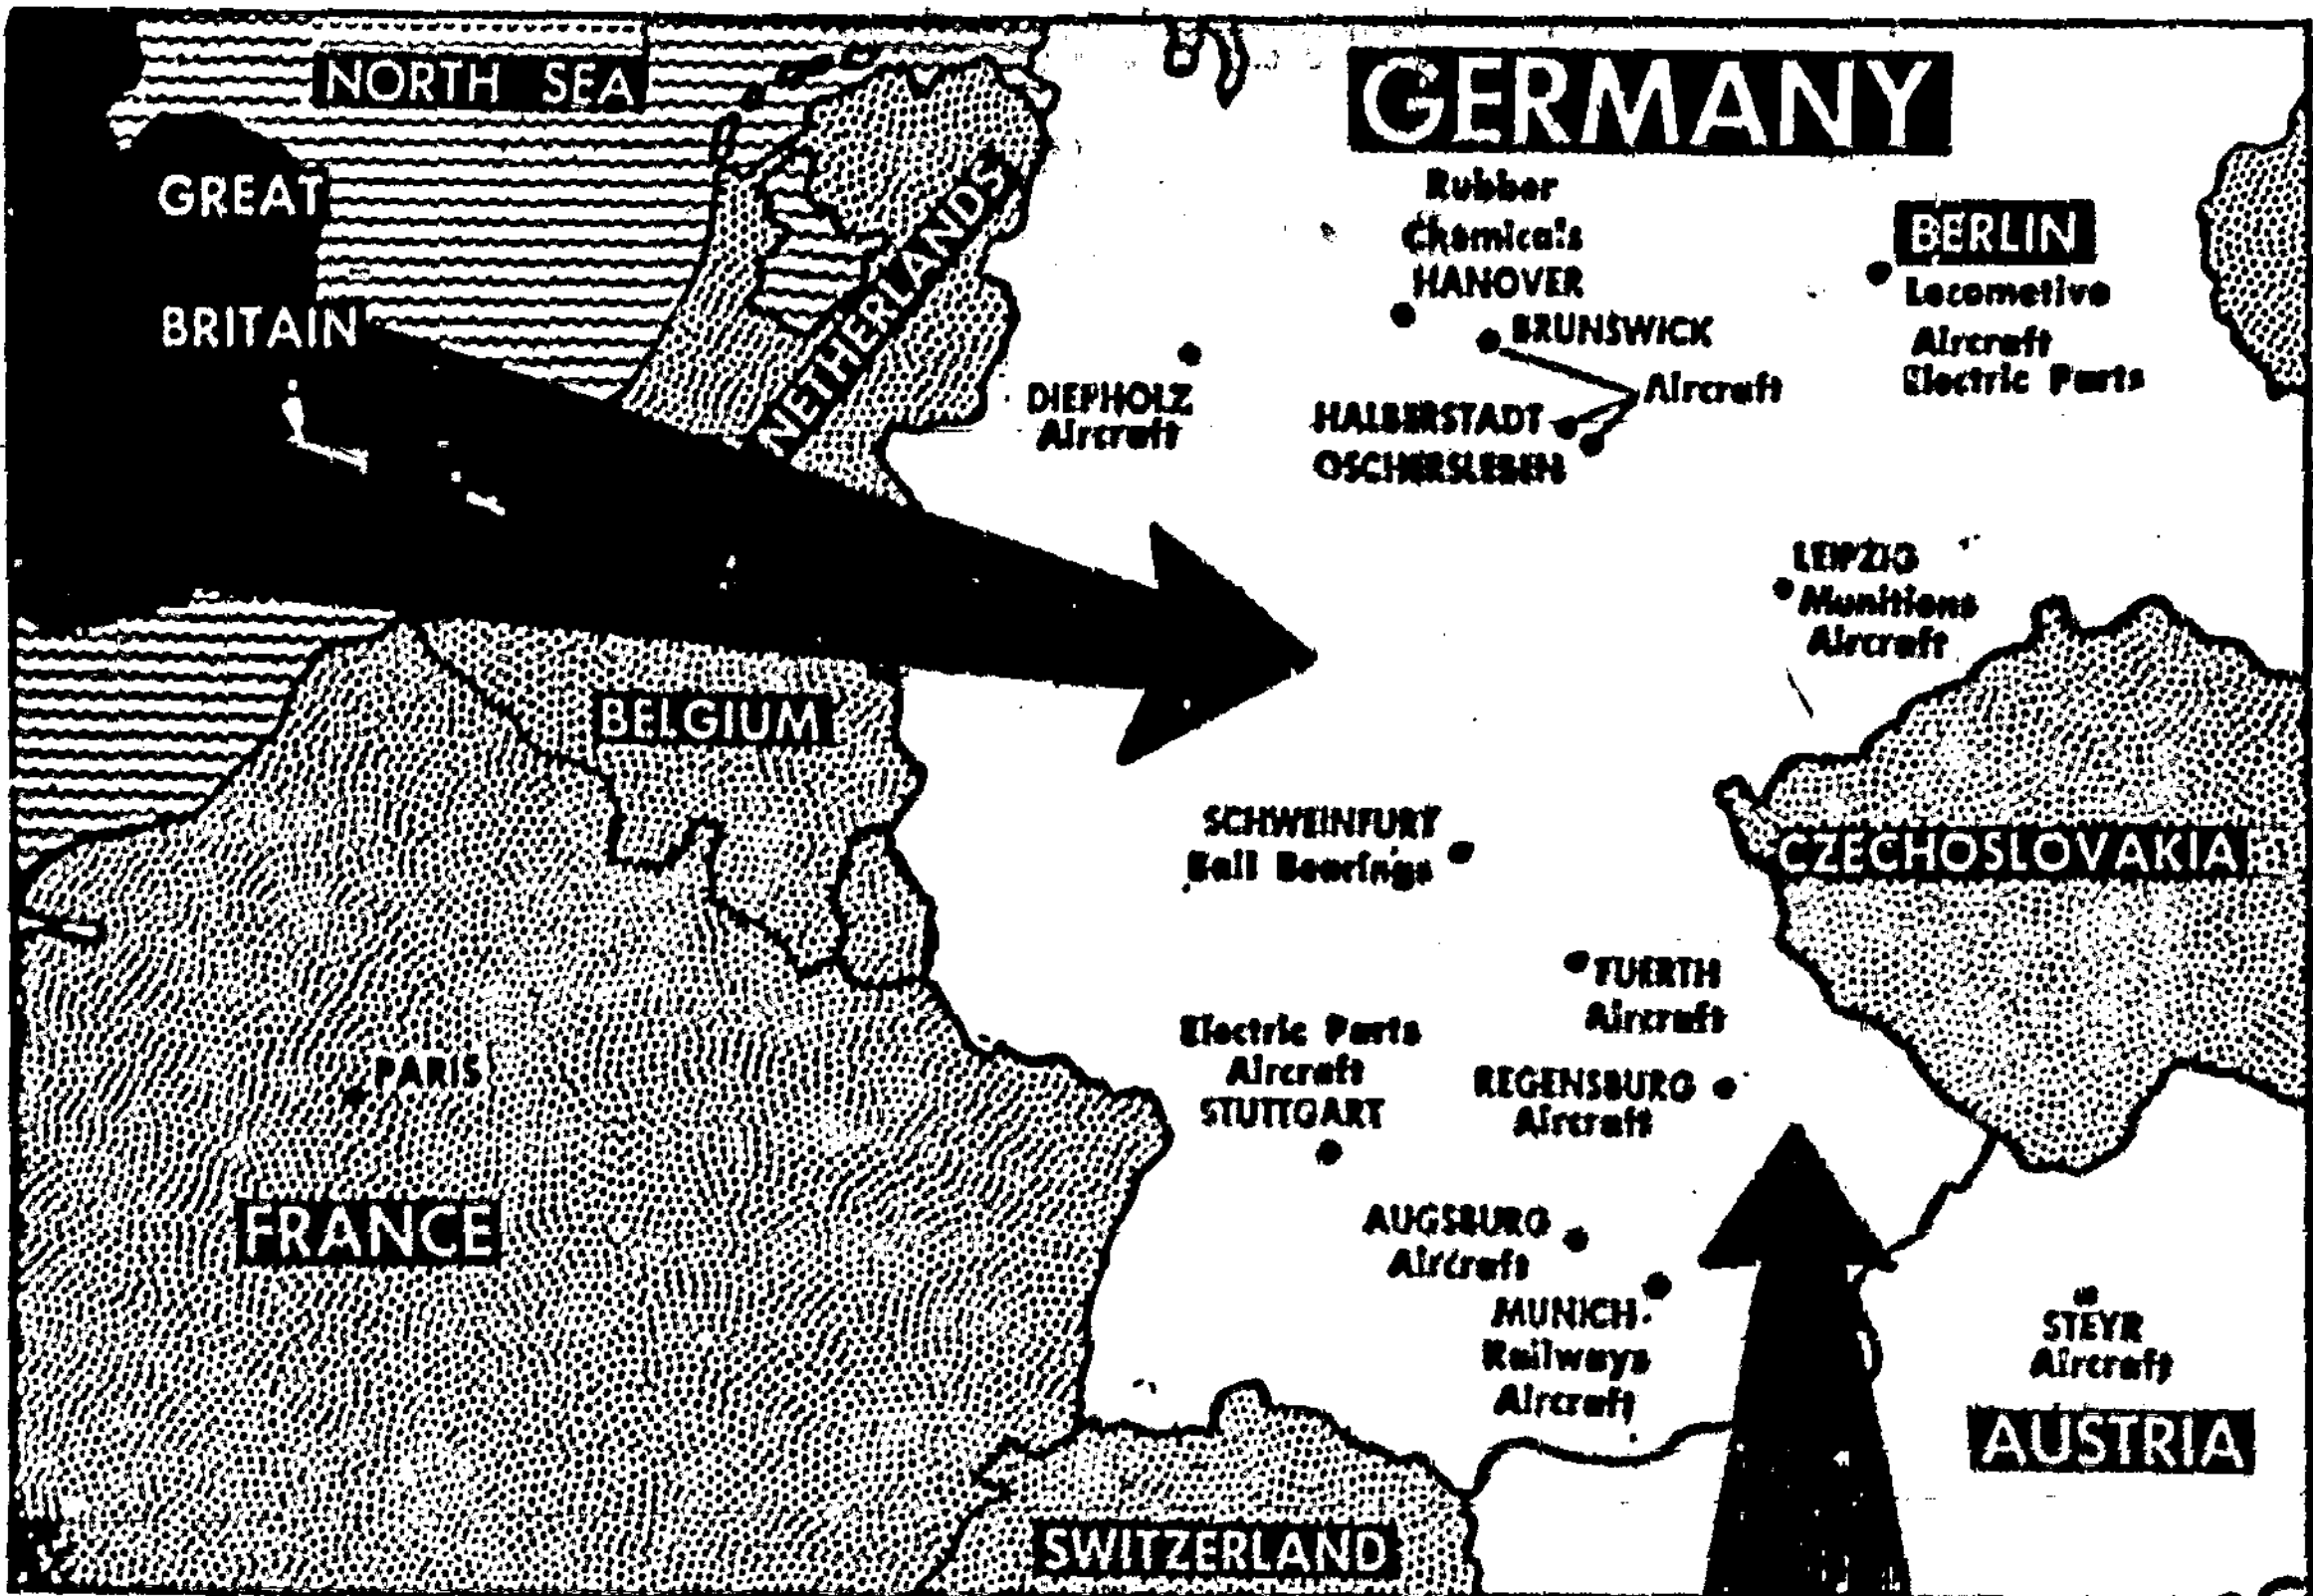

Dr. Henry P. Goldmann, recently with the Brookings Institution, who has aided many governmental bodies, will be finance authority.

Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND DRAW PEARSON

LATEST ON CIVILIAN GOODS

The Truman committee is about to issue a report which will be good news to manufacturers, to say nothing of the housewife...

The Truman committee will recommend that the War Production board go much further than the army has been willing in restoring production of civilian goods.

(1) War contracts are being cancelled at an increasing rate. The war department cancelled 10 1/2 billions in contracts as of January 31...

(2) Tremendous stockpiles of steel and other materials have been accumulated—far more than can be used for the war.

(3) The military was slow in curtailing civilian production. Now it is slow in letting the country get back to civilian production.

Therefore, the Truman committee recommends that while we cannot "soon resume full-scale civilian production, we can produce limited quantities of a few scarce additional items classified as essential."

SOME REVEALING FIGURES

The impending Truman committee report will reveal that 100 big corporations hold 70 per cent of all the war orders; furthermore, these 100 first companies of the nation had only 30 per cent of the country's business before the war...

Norman Littell, hard-hitting assistant attorney general, will get a boost from the Truman committee for hurrying up government payments to the farmers and others whose land was seized by the army and navy.

American labor doesn't look so bad when contrasted with British labor. The Truman committee will find, despite the national service act, long operating in England, there were 1,630 English strikes involving a manpower loss of 1,670,000 man-days.

President Roosevelt didn't know it, but the Truman committee had prepared some devastating evidence supporting him on one of the most controversial phases of the tax bill—renegotiations of war contracts to recapture excess war profits.

Nevertheless, all the members of the committee except Mead of New York, Kilgore of West Virginia and Wallgren of Washington voted to over-ride his tax bill veto.

LOUIS BROMFIELD, THE PROPHEET

Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard is chuckling over a letter he has received from the Reader's Digest, signed by William Hard Jr., associate editor.

At the time, Wickard wrote to the Digest, refuting Novelist Bromfield, offering to write an article to tell the other side of the story and saying we would have plenty to eat.

They confided privately to Bromfield that they were embarrassed by reactions to his story, but publicly they stood on his gloomy forecast.

February has now come and gone. People are eating well despite Bromfield. American farmers have written the refutation. Actually, we have a greater accumulation of stored foodstuffs than at any time in history.

Wickard couldn't resist the temptation to rib the Digest, and recently sent to Editor DeWitt Wallace a few figures about the overflowing granary.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Each day, White House reporters are given a list of the President's appointments, beginning usually at 10 a. m. with cabinet officers, military and naval advisers, diplomats, congressmen or other callers.

Reports from Bolivia indicate that the new government, which the state department refuses to recognize, is becoming more and more entrenched.

DOAN'S PILLS

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes on an assignment to Puerto Rico where Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, is stationed as a U. S. Army intelligence officer. On the boat she meets a young Puerto Rican, Miguel Valera, and an engineer named Richard Taussig, of whom she is suspicious, although she does not know that he is actually a German agent ordered to destroy Puerto Rico's water supply. At the hotel in San Juan Anne's luggage is searched, and she suspects Taussig. Anne and Mr. Taussig have been invited to dinner at the home of the Russell Porters. Sue Porter and Anne went to school together.

CHAPTER VII

"It's early, Miss Heywood," Mr. Taussig said as they came into the lobby and Russell's car moved out of the drive. "Why don't we have a night-cap together?"

"Oh, thanks a lot," Anne said. "But I've really—"

"I'd like to talk to you, Miss Heywood," Mr. Taussig said quietly.

Mr. Taussig was looking at her intently.

"All right," she said. "In the bar?"

He waited for her to sit down, and signaled the waiter. He might be making a mistake, he thought. "I may as well come to the point at once, Miss Heywood," he said pleasantly.

Anne's throat tightened.

"All right," she said. "What is it?"

The waiter put their glasses down on the table. Mr. Taussig raised his. "To our better understanding, Miss Heywood."

Anne raised hers. She was aware of what Barbara had called the veiled scrutiny behind his impenetrable lenses.

"—It is your interest in me that confuses me slightly, Miss Heywood."

Anne looked at him blankly. "What do you mean, Mr. Taussig?"

"Oh, not interest d'amour, Miss Heywood. I don't mean that. I mean interest in my . . . shall we say, belonging? Last night, for example?"

Anne sat perfectly calm and completely controlled while the whole bottom of a kind of lovely dream inside her dropped out in chattered fragments. Miguel had told him.

"I was just returning the compliment, Mr. Taussig," she said. Her voice was calm and detached. She thought she saw him start, but she couldn't be sure.

"May I ask what you mean by that, Miss Heywood?" he asked quietly.

"You went through my bags yesterday, didn't you, Mr. Taussig?"

He was staring at her in open and undimmed astonishment. Anne misunderstood. What if she was wrong? What if it hadn't been he at all? She didn't know—she was only guessing, actually.

He recovered his composure in an instant. If she had lied, he wouldn't have known . . .

"—What makes you think I did such an incredible thing?"

"Your thumb prints, Mr. Taussig," Anne said. If she'd been wrong, he could deny it, and she would apologize.

He thought quickly. His hands had been moist from the heat. He smiled.

"I think you've jumped to a very hasty conclusion, Miss Heywood. You have a bag just like one of mine. The porter put yours in my room. I opened it, but I closed it at once, of course, and had the porter take it to your room and bring mine to me. You'll find there's usually a simple explanation for most things, Miss Heywood."

"Then I apologize profoundly, Mr. Taussig," Anne said. "I'm glad we talked about it."

She got up and held out her hand. She could see the indecision in the cold blue gleam of his eyes fastened on hers. He wasn't sure whether she was telling the truth or not. And she knew he had lied.

Anne lay in the luminous half-dark under the oblong tent of cheesecloth around her bed, trying to think without feeling . . . trying to separate the things she knew from the things she suspected but did not actually know, without coloring them with her own emotions.

"But I'm not wrong about it," she told herself. "I saw it. It's one of the things I know . . . even if I don't know what it's all about."

Actually there were only two other things she really knew, when she came down to it. One was that Taussig had opened her bag and had gone through her letters and had not told the truth about it. The other was that Miguel had told her she was in his room.

The rest of it was in that dangerous border line of intuition and suspicion. That was what she had to watch. Still, even Barbara French had recognized what she called Taussig's veiled scrutiny.

Anne shook her head. It didn't do any good to go over every detail of a day or two days the way she was doing.

"Night's a magnifying glass anyway," she thought.

She reached down, pulled the thin blanket up from the foot of the bed, and settled back into the pillows. She wasn't going to think about it, and she wasn't going to think about Miguel.

She closed her eyes. Just as she did the telephone on the table beside her jangled stridently. It rang again before she could pull the mosquito netting out from under the mattress and free her arm.

"Hello," she said.

"I'm sorry." It was Pete's voice that came from the other end. "I was just wondering about you . . . if you got home all right. I hope I didn't wake you up."

"Of course," she said at last. "Don't tell me it's part of your job to check up and see the tourists are all properly in bed every night. What are you doing up at this hour yourself, Captain Wilcox?"

"I've just been to a meeting of the Fulange, my child," Pete said cheerfully. "It's called something else now, but it's the same old leopard with the same old spots. Go back to bed. I'm putting you on the Clipper tomorrow, remember."

"You mean you're taking me out to dinner tomorrow night. I'll see you about six. Good night, dear."

Anne put down the phone and wriggled back under the net. She sat up, crossed her legs under her and sat staring through her filmy gauze box at a lighted ship moving across the window in the silver ocean beyond the reef.

"The Fulange. Of course. I never thought of that."

A whole new pattern wove itself quietly in front of her. For the moment she forgot Miguel and Richard Taussig and herself. Here was nically across the narrow pebbly causeway out the Bayamon Road from San Juan. On the right the garbage dump smoked with evil-smelling pervasiveness. Beyond it, in the shallow head of the bay, two dredges pumped softly and monotonously, filling the murky ooze swamp that stretched on the left of the road, making firm new land for the U. S. Navy. It was dotted with a couple of thousand oranges just then, where a truck had gone off the road, and just behind it a station wagon like Mr. Taussig's had gone like a dive bomber motor-deep in the mud, its rear wheels still going around. A constant stream of khaki-colored Army trucks and open field cars trundled noisily past it, and private cars darting in and out, trying to pass what seemed to Mr. Taussig to be an already solid line into town.

An accident would be easy enough, he thought—up in the hills where there was no soft cushion of mud and slime. He frowned. There were certain complications he expected and did not mind. He was used to accidents when necessary, though he preferred to avoid them. He was even used to the emotional equation that women sometimes brought in . . . but not on the level that the girl in 110 across the hall had presented. He was more used to the kind of thing he was headed for now.

The public car stopped on the side of the crowded road under an almond tree.

"—Caparra, senior."

The driver pointed to a low shed-like group of buildings just beyond a stately fence. They looked more like subterranean mushroom sheds than the ruins of the villa of Ponce de Leon, the first governor, who built his first capitol here four centuries ago, before he abandoned it and Puerto Rico to go on his search for the Fountain of Youth, and found instead Florida and death.

Mr. Richard Taussig was only superficially interested in the blue and yellow tiles and in the story of the Indian Cacique and the great Conquistador who is still heard, and even seen, clanking up the ghostly stairs in his battle armor. He tipped the caretaker enough to make him remember him but not enough to make him suspicious, and made his way along the shaded road under the Indian almonds and flamboyants to a roadhouse. There he drank a bottle of cool pale ale in the garden and read his guide book. That was for the record too, in case one was being kept. So far as he knew, no one had followed him; but doubtfulness and plausibility were a habit as much as a plan, and in the half-world that Mr. Taussig operated in, overconfidence was more dangerous than wanted time.

"I can go to Rio Piedras—to the University—out this way?"

He tipped the waiter and pointed to the left fork of the road he had come on. "And to the Tuberculosis Sanatorium on the way?"

The man nodded. "Si, senior. Gracias, senior."

"If I walk along a public car will stop for me?"

"Mr. Taussig set out, walking slowly. The road was less crowded than the other branch. Nevertheless he walked past the blue stucco house set behind a great hedge of red and pink hibiscus, because a cart loaded with sugar cane was passing it just then. When the road was empty he turned back, went quickly through the tall gate in the hedge and closed it securely behind him.

Diego Gongora's car stood in the drive. Taussig glanced at his watch. He had allowed himself forty-five minutes to compensate for the temperamental disregard of time that was another complication of the Latin craze that irritated his precise mind. He had not wanted to arrive at the house of Diego Gongora's mistress until Gongora was there himself. He was disturbed about her, just as he was disturbed about Graciela. In fact, there were too many women in all this altogether for his liking. All except little Mrs. Porter. So far as he could see, she was the one simple aspect of his problem. His impulse had been to go see her that morning, but he had rejected it. It was best to let the first move come from her.

He went up the steps, reached out to ring the bell beside the iron-grilled door, and stopped. From inside he could hear loud and hysterical weeping. It stopped abruptly, and a woman's shrill voice cried out in rapid Spanish:

"But why? Why, Diego? Why not let all of that alone? Why endanger yourself and me and your family? What is there to gain that?"

She stopped as suddenly as she had begun. A heavy chair moved, there were sharp steps on the tiled floor. Taussig stepped back, came across the porch again, scraping his rubber-soled shoes on the tile, and rang the bell. In a moment Diego Gongora came from an inner room through the portiere made of colored glass beads and short lengths of fine bamboo. He smiled cordially as he opened the grill. Whether he was unaware that his caller had heard the end of the scene, or was simply unconcerned, Mr. Taussig could not tell.

"Come in," he said. "I am happy to see that it is possible for you to be late also, my friend."

Richard Taussig gripped the open window ledge of the crowded station-wagon with one hand and hung on to his guide book and his yachting cap with the other. He was in one of these new vehicles known locally as public cars that provide a vast network of cheap transportation for the island and make taxi-drivers and chauffeurs a political bloc that no party dares to ignore. At the moment the car was careening ma-

PEAKING SPORTS

By Bob McElhane

THE interest shown by the armed services in almost every branch of sport is good evidence that Sergeant Louis' exhibition tour to theaters of operation will prove to be one of the most popular shows yet staged by the army's special services division.

Sergeant Louis, king of the heavy-weights, boxed before at least 1,000,000 soldiers during his recent five-month, 20,000-mile tour of more than 100 army posts. He was accompanied by his uniformed coterie of five boxers and a trainer.

In addition to Joe, the group included Corp. Walker Smith, better known as "Sugar" Ray Robinson, welterweight, to boxing fans; Private George ("Jackie") Wilson,

SERGEANT LOUIS

First Sergt. George Nicholson, Corp. Robert Smith, Sergt. James Edgar and Corp. Robert J. Payne, trainer.

It wasn't an easy tour for the boys. They started in August at Fort Meade, Md., on a series of one and two night stands. They swung through New England, reversed their trail, zig-zagged across the northern half of the country, moved down through California and returned eastward.

Grueling Grind

During the trip they played to thousands of soldiers daily in every army service command, visiting wounded in hospitals, special training units and colder prisoners in stockades. They staged impromptu boxing shows and made as many as six personal appearances in one day.

There was the usual amount of grilling concerning the Louis expedition within this country. But it wasn't curious. The routine was for Joe to box two or three rounds with Sergeant Nicholson, who happened to be Joe's favorite sparring partner in prewar days, or with Corporal Smith, the other heavyweight. Smith and Sergeant Edgar boxed for three rounds and Private Wilson usually sparred with a soldier volunteer.

At least one factor kept the tour from becoming the usual two-a-day vaudeville act. Joe often was challenged by an ambitious soldier stationed at some particular camp. The Brown Bomber was always agreeable. He took on the hopefuls and never tried to make a match appear one-sided. He never carried his opponent, although naturally enough he held back on the lethal wallop which brought him a world title.

More About Rule Changes

Lou Boudreau, major league baseball's youngest manager, has placed himself in the ranks of those experts who believe a few rule changes would prove a boon to basketball.

Although baseball has brought him his greatest fame, the Cleveland pilot speaks with authority concerning the court game. If your memory isn't too feeble, you'll hark back to the time when Lou, now an assistant coach at Illinois, scored 157 points for Illinois in the 1923-27 season and helped pace the team to a Big Ten championship.

Lou added his bit to the increasing criticism of basketball rules by advocating the return of the center jump. He told the Chicago Basketball Writers' association that "make the rules coincide with the increasing speed of the game."

"When I was playing basketball, if a team took between 40 and 50 shots a game, it was considered good," said Boudreau. "Now teams take between 70 and 80 shots. The game is so fast that it makes it tough on players, coaches and officials alike. They don't have time to gather their wits and collect themselves as they did in the days when the ball was being brought to the center for a jump."

Boudreau knows both sides. An assistant coach at present, he played basketball under the old rules, particularly in high school when he led Thornton, Ill., to a state title in 1933 and finished second the next two years.

Like quite a few other coaches—and medical experts—he is interested in seeing high school basketball slowed down for the sake of the youngsters who must burn themselves out trying to maintain the rapid pace. Many authorities feel that today's game is too fast for growing youngsters.

That Old Iron Bed Can Be Modernized

THE hack saw will prove to be a handy tool in the modernizing of an old iron bed. With the aid of such a saw the cage-like bars at the foot may be cut off close to the cross bar at the top of the legs. The head may also be lowered and knobs and projections also may be cut off.

When the bed has been cut down the head may be padded with cotton basted to muslin or with an old quilt. A slip cover may then be made to match the bedspread.

FINE WHISKIES

You Might As Well Confess!

Almost everyone likes a mystery—almost everyone enjoys the thrilling excitement of tracking down a criminal with an ace detective. But come are all the ashamed to admit reading mysteries. Well, you need not be. Maybe you didn't know that many college professors, bank presidents, great scientists, captains of industry, even the President of the United States all like their mysteries. In fact, millions of Americans are reading more mysteries today than ever before. Why? Mainly because these fast-paced, easy-reading stories are both relaxing and refreshing. It is for them—and for you—that we are publishing

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine

Edited by Ellery Queen, famous detective of the radio, the movies, and best-seller books, it is devoted exclusively to the best in detective crime short-story literature. And we mean literature. The fact that a story owns its plot to crime and detection need not prevent its being well written. Short detective fiction that is well written is not too readily available. But we are finding them—in books, in magazines, in the files of famous authors—and by arrangement with other publishers as well as with authors, we reprint in the approved Reader's Digest manner the best detective fiction to be procured. Such masters as Dashell, Hammett, Apatha Christie, Stuart Palmer and Ellery Queen are to be found in it.

But stories are selected on their merits, not on authors' names. Tough and suave, casual and swift, comic and tragic, they are mingled with refreshing variety and stimulating change of pace. Rare gems, fit for the most critical, delightful to the most naive. You will find the new magazine well printed—sharp and clear, kind to the eyes. You will find the size—same as the Reader's Digest—convenient to hold, to handle, to slip into your pocket. You will find the cover as pleasing to look at as a book jacket. And you will find the contents the most satisfying quarter's worth of good entertainment you have found in many a day. On sale at all good newsstands—35c a copy.
