With The Men--
--In Service

Col. Maurice Lemon and family left last Monday for Randolph Field, Texas where he is to be stationed.

Lt. Col. T. A. Spencer, Jr., arrived home Sunday for a much needed rest. He is a Senior pilot and group operations officer. He has many decorations, including the distinguished flying cross, air medal and seven bronze oak leaf clusters.

Sgt. Albert Roberts of Kirland Field, Albuquerque spent the past week-end here visiting his wife and mother and other members of the family.

Petty Officer Otto E. Prehm who has been in a hospital at Pearl Harbor for some time has been honorably discharged from the Sea Bees and is at home. He arrived home this week in time to spend Thanksgiving Day with his mother.

FORT STANTON COAST GUARDSMAN CITED BY MACARTHUR AND BARBEY

Special to Lincoln County News-- Coast Guardsman James T. Thompson, ship's cook first class, Fort Stanton, New Mexico, has returned to the States after having served more than 16 months aboard a Coast Guard-manned LST in the Pacific. Veteran of the invasions of Cape Gloucester, Saipan, the Admiralties, Hollandia, Aitape, Wake, Biak, Nogmfoor and Sanspor, Thompson won commendation from General MacArthur for the storming of Biak and Wakde, and award from Admiral Barbey for action at Cape Gloucester. Thompson will spend his leave with his wife Flossie and 9 year old son, James.

Special to the News, Carrizozo, N. M. An Eighth Air Force Liberator Station, England--The B-24 Liberator Four-engined Bomber Group in which Pfc. Ronald E. Carville of Box 433, Carrizozo, New Mexico is a member of Station Defense recently was cited by Major General William E. Kepner, commanding 2nd Bombardment Division, "for distinguished and outstanding performance of duty."

The citation in part reads: "The devotion to duty, determination and tenacity of purpose exhibited by personnel of the group reflect great credit upon themselves, their organizations and the United States Army Air Forces."

The Group, which recently completed its 100th combat mission, is commanded by Colonel Luther J. Fairbanks of Burt, Iowa, and had previously been cited by Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, commanding Eighth Air Force, for low-level destruction of a bridge across the Loire, near Loire, near Eloy, France. Demolition of the span was ordered "regardless of cost." To achieve visibility necessary for destruction of the bridge it was necessary to descend below clouds to 6500 feet, an altitude usually considered extremely hazardous for four-engined bombers. From this height the target was reduced to a heap of smoking rubble. It was the first low-level bombing ever performed by four-engined bombers from England.

Earlier the group had been officially commended by General Doolittle for combat achievement on its first mission, an attack on Berlin and the longest initial assault ever flown in the European Theater. The attack was one of the heaviest daylight bombings of the German capital on record.

During its first 100 missions, "overcoming adverse weather conditions and fierce enemy fighter and anti-aircraft opposition," the group attacked 41 targets in Germany and 59 targets in enemy-occupied Europe. Forty seven hundred (4700) tons of bombs were dropped on vital enemy installations.

RAIL TRAFFIC CONTROLLED FROM STATION TO STATION IN FRANCE

With United States Forces in France--In isolated spots along one of the rail lines in France, a group of the Transportation Corps are keepers of a Railway Operating Battalion keeping the traffic moving toward the front lines. The supplies, which are being carried through these points, are the life-line of our advancing armies, and it is the duty of these men to see that engineers receive all instructions and directions along the line so the goods will be delivered.

These men are on special duty from their battalion headquarters, and are assigned in groups of two's and three's to stations along the rail lines of the Second Military Railway. The men in this particular battalion have been on duty since they arrived in France. Some of them have not left their posts at all.

Approximately 40 trains a day pass through these stations with supplies of food, fuel, and equipment. These men have to keep the tracks clear and space the trains. This is done by a method of slow or fast orders, which are given to the engineers at various points along the tracks. Each man knows the condition of his portion of the track and whether it is clear, slow or fast, and this information he passes on to various train crews as they arrive at his station. Sometimes it is necessary to hold up a civilian train in order to allow a supply train to pass through. It is through the signals of these men that the tracks are kept clear and the rail traffic kept moving.

In places where there are two men stationed they work in shifts of twelve hours apiece. This does not mean, however, that the man off duty leaves his post. The time is usually spent in catching up on their much needed rest and relaxation. Their office is the barracks and their mess hall. It is usually one room which formerly might have been a ticket office, into which they have moved several cots, a small stove and their necessary operational equipment. Their communications with the other stations and the passing of the trains serve as their contact with the rest of their battalion.

The majority of the men assigned to these stations have had some previous experience in railroading before receiving their technical training in the Army. They have held positions as operators, signalmen and flagmen in civilian life and know their job well. This particular railway operating battalion is sponsored by the Southern Pacific Railway and is part of the San Antonio Branch. The unit is under the command of Major Walter Marlin, 2938 54th Avenue, Oakland, California.

The man from Lincoln County stationed at one of these stations along one of the lines to the front is listed below: Staff Sgt. Robert C. Hillburn of Corona.

"HALT! Who's there?" The sentry's cry, ringing out in the still cold night, broke into Laura's thoughts as she was hurrying home...

"I'm Laura Archer, Colonel Archer's daughter," she told the grim-faced leatherneck who was barring her path with rifle at the ready...

"Any other proof? Otherwise, you don't move on," the guard broke in. Laura knew she was wrong, but she wouldn't let a boot get away with turning her from the post where her father was commanding officer...

"You just call the colonel," she ordered curtly. "Look, lady, don't you know anyone less than the Skipper?" the guard asked...

"If you don't, you'll be up for office hours tomorrow," Laura threatened. "Corporal of the Guard, Number Seven," the marine sang out and, when the shouts for him had echoed down the line from sentry to sentry...

"This lady says she's Colonel Archer's daughter, Corporal, but she has no identification," the sentry reported. "She threatened me with office hours if I don't call the Skipper."

"I wouldn't call him out in this storm for another stripe," the corporal vowed. Turning to Laura he asked, "Are you really Colonel Archer's daughter? I've been here seven months and I've never seen you around."

"I've been off to school. Please let me in," Laura pleaded. An hour later, having been grilled by the men on duty, a tired yet fuming Laura was sent to her father's quarters, where she was admitted on assurance from the sleepy colonel that she really was his daughter...

Next morning, when Laura came tripping down to her father's car, she found that aquare-jawed, lean and hated face behind the wheel. "Where to, Miss Archer?" Private Gillespie queried.

"My father will be out in a minute," she answered. "The colonel will tell you where to drive." Private Gillespie's neck reddened. He offered weakly, "I'm sorry about last night, Miss Archer, but you know the General Order."

She turned her upturned nose toward the parade ground and began a close inspection of a platoon which was drilling there. Private Gillespie watched in the mirror. "Nice looking platoon," he ventured. "That D.I. was my bunkie in boot camp. He sure does put them through, doesn't he?" He continued his monologue, his warm drawl melting the icicles from his listener. He told her his name and about his ranch back in Texas. Then he brought up the sore subject again. "I said I was sorry about last night, Miss Archer," he began, but just then he had to spring out to open the door for Colonel Archer. He was ordered to drive to the parade ground where the colonel was to inspect the recruits completing basic training that morning.

Laura decided to see the review from the car. Private Gillespie returned to the front seat and resumed his watch. "Today's pay day, Miss Archer, and I have liberty tonight, will you have dinner and go to a show with me?" he suggested. "It would kind of make up..."

Just then the rear of a tank banging along the drive halted the one-way conversation. From the parade ground, a thousand frozen-faced recruits, waiting at attention, saw the man in the turret swept to the ground by a low-hanging limb. His left foot, straining unconsciously for a foothold, nudged the left shoulder of the driver, who was operating the massive iron monster by signals. The tank swung to the left, the guide lying unconscious in the road.

The colonel's car leaped ahead, its motor screaming, as Private Gillespie turned the key, touched the starter and let out the clutch. It pulled to one side and stopped as the clanging tank roared past.

Colonel Archer and his aides ran toward the car. "Are you all right, Laura?" her father panted. "Of course," she smiled, "because your driver knows how to use a rear-view mirror. Father, please ask him to dine with us tonight."

Quilted Fashion Is in Vogue; Here Are Ideas for Home Sewers

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WOOL isn't the only way to achieve warm comfort on a smaller oil ration this winter. Now's the time to take your grandmother's quilting bee and turn cottons and rayons into snug cold weather fashions...

to achieve the puffy, luxuriousness of quilting. Patterns for muff and beret are also easily available. The beret is a gay fatterer to you and the large toasty-warm muff is a really practical affair in that it has a concealed pocket that buttons up and shelters all the little things usually carried in a handbag.

Bulkiness used to be the bugaboo of quilted fashions that only expert fitting skill could overcome. Nowadays reversible dirndl skirts, sleeveless hug-me-tights, slacks, coat linings or other popular new quilted styles out streamlined fit can be turned out satisfactorily by using one of the plastic-like dress forms that exactly duplicate feminine figures, curve for curve.

The little sketches scattered around on the background show five different ways to achieve warmth without wool. Put your quilter attachment to work on a detachable coat lining as suggested in this group of helpful hints as to what magic can be performed with a sewing-machine quilting attachment.

Some of the most popular quilted designs that can be achieved quickly with the aid of the quilter attachment are horizontal cross-bar, double cross-bar, diagonal, diamond and double diamond effects. These designs are known as "plain" because the lines are straight. Trapeze design with curving lines call for transfer patterns. Once you realize that the entire length of fabrics needed for making a garment should be quilted before any fabric cutting is done, the rest is as easy as stitching a straight seam.

If you want to keep your hands warm, see for yourself how easily you can transform a quilted velvet strip into a stunning muff. There's nothing smarter-looking than a muff of this sort carried with your tweed suit.

The quilted beret-and-muff ensemble pictured costs less than four dollars to make. All that's needed is a yard and quarter of brilliantly colored velveteen that you can easily find in the piece goods section. The rest of your money goes for interlining and sheet wadding that helps

You can replace worn-out jacket sleeves with quilted versions that are both smart and practical. Add twin patch pockets on the skirt of the same quilted type for perfect teamwork.

Reversible quilted bathrobes, housecoats and skirts are just a few more suggestions included in the thumbnail sketches for keeping you comfortable, warm and fashionable for the duration.

Curtaining Your French Doors to Harmonize With Window Treatments

By Ruth Wyeth Spears

HOW to make French door curtains harmonize with the window treatment in a room is a question that always arises. Frequently, over-draperies are omitted for the doors even though they are used for windows. The same glass curtain material is then used as for the windows, but a heading and rod is used both top and bottom. However, over-draperies add dignity.

Either a wooden or a metal rod extending well beyond the sides of the door frame may be hooked in place as shown here in the diagram. This permits the doors to open without interfering with draperies.

It is not necessary to repeat window valances over doors though it may be done if desired by using a valance shelf or a cornice box placed high enough for the bottom of the valance to be just above doors that open in.

NOTE—This sketch is from a new book by Mrs. Spears called MAKE YOUR OWN CURTAINS. This 32-page book is full of smart new curtain and drapery ideas with illustrated step-by-step directions for measuring, cutting, making and hanging all types from the simplest sack curtain to the most complicated lined over-drapery or slatted valance. Whichever your curtain problem here is the answer. Order book by name and enclose 15 cents. Address:

Back View Interest

Here is a handsome coat which displays fur artistry at its best. It seems that there is a new styling technique being adopted this year which calls for back view interest in all sorts of ways, yokes, flares and so forth. In her mink collection Esther Dorothy shows the coat illustrated and it is interesting to note how beautifully blond chiffon mink has been handled as if it were a fabric. Note the full swing back and all blouse also the famous drop shoulder line with extra wide sleeves and cuffs turned back.

Jumper Frocks Are Popular for Tots

If you look about you will sense the fact that almost every little girl is wearing a jumper type dress of some sort or other nowadays. These pretty, practical jumper frocks are apt to be of almost any material from black or bright velveteen to plaid or checked wool, or corduroy which scores high in looks as well as in its never-wear-out reputation. Spun rayon and gabardine are also popular, not only because of their wearableness but because of the wide color range they offer. The young fry are having lots of fun this fall in dressing up in gay little plaid taffeta frocks when they go to parties and such. They like the checked taffeta dress in navy, red or brown tones and they adore the little velvet ribbon trims. From tiny tots on up, children are wearing cunningest-ever jacket and skirt suits of checks or plaids.

New Fabric Sensation Is Bright Plaid Taffeta

Rayon plaid taffetas are selling for everything this season. If you want to add a telling touch to your appearance, wear something of plaid taffeta. Maybe a blouse—either tucked-in style or the new long torso overblouse that is apt to climax at the back with a bustle-back bow or at the hipline with a huge softly tied bow of selfsame plaid as the blouse. The newest dress sensation is the cocktail gown that is made all of bright plaid taffeta. Young girls like their evening formal of plaid taffeta with full skirts that rustle and with bodice tops that are quaintly fitted to form. Ascots, draped turbans and gloves have also gone plaid taffeta in thrilling ways.

"Almost Everyone Will Fly"

Above is the caption of an article which reached our desk in pamphlet form a month or so ago, and about the same time we received a copy of "The Civil Aviation Bill" (H R 8420).

I read them both with deepest interest. In the pamphlet two sentences especially struck me: "If your city has no provisions to accommodate Personal Aircraft, air travel will pass you by." and "To put your town on the Air map of the United States is an opportunity well within the grasp of any community."

We happen to have a nice little landing field, with a local young man, Marvin Ruberts in charge, but when the war is won, these facilities will of necessity be increased.

Facilities for private flying in America haven't materialized yet, but they will; the utility of the airplane for personal use has been demonstrated right here, by several. One outstanding example was the late Mr. Kudner, who almost any day flew from his New York home to his Carrizozo ranch. He of course had a landing field at his ranch. We have plenty of space for these facilities when and if the people become air minded enough and enthusiastic enough to provide space for air parks, flight stops and air harbors. Again referring to the pamphlet, I see the 1- Air parks are to provide landing space for non scheduled planes, or personal aircraft. Air parks should be located near the business section to be convenient for the business man or housewife.

2-Flight stops Just what the name implies, are intermediate landings between cities spaced at intervals where the distance is great.

3-"Air-harbors are to be located on bays, rivers, lakes, and sounds"

Of course the harbor part of it needn't worry us, as we aren't famed for rivers and lakes. But runways should be 2,000 feet long and 800 feet wide. The air parks should be constructed in the shape of the letters X, T, L, or V. They are considered very inexpensive in comparison with railroads and highways. At least 16,000 communities will be connected by airways following the post war period and the government is urging communities to plan in advance for this new and progressive growth.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Wm. A. M. Borden says: "There must be a wide distribution of landing facilities for civilian flyers throughout the United States and these ports must be built wherever it is economically feasible, so that all Americans can take their rightful part in the growth of America's air future."

The Civil Aviation Bill (H R 8420) deals with the legal side of the air transport problem as it affects interstate and foreign commerce and it seeks to anticipate the conditions which must be met, such as lessening ground hazards and to extend and perfect the weather reporting service and to look toward improved administration of its governmental regulations. Of course state rights, alien control, zoning and safety are to be considered.

KNOCK, KNOCK, WHO'S THERE?

New Mexico's 31 county AAA offices had a busy month in October, handling office calls, letters and telephone calls totaling 3,744. But after an average of 4,815 requests for information in August and September, October looked like annual leave.

In October, most of the farmers and ranchers who wanted information from their AAA office went to the office to get it just as they did in August and September. Two thousand and eight hundred and eighteen pushed open doors to ask questions about 17 major programs, as compared to a measly 520 letters and 406 telephone calls.

There was an upsurge of interest in the protein meal program, as offices attempted to answer 190 questions, as compared with 122 in September and 44 in August. Most of the other questions concerned conservation practices, dairy feed payments and gasoline applications.

RED CROSS ITEM

Plans are completed for Red Cross Message forms 1616 to be taken to the Philippines.

One message, length limited only by space on both sides of the form, subject U. S. Army overseas mail censorship, will be accepted until November 30th from relatives and friends to U. S. prisoners of war and U. S. civilian internees in the Philippines whose address is known, for delivery after they are liberated.

Although the Red Cross cannot guarantee delivery of each and every message, all efforts will be made to reach addressees so that they may establish direct contact with their families as soon as possible after the islands are liberated. Forms 1616 for these messages are obtainable from local Red Cross representatives of Lincoln County and should be returned to them for forwarding.

Our Job Is to Save Dollars Buy War Bonds Every Pay Day

Our War With Japan

The Sixth War Loan marks a new turn in the war both on the fighting and the home fronts. It points our tremendous war effort definitely in the direction of the Pacific. During the first five war loans Americans were primarily thinking in terms of beating Hitler.

Now our government asks us for a loan of 14 billion more dollars, of which five billion dollars must come from individuals. Why? Haven't we nearly finished off our so-called Number 1 Enemy? Can Japan hold up our powerful war machine very long? Your son, brother and friend in his Pacific foxhole wouldn't raise such questions because they are up against realities, not day dreams. They kill or are killed. They pray every waking moment for a sky-darkening cover of friendly planes. They thank America for giving them the finest medical care in the world when their rendezvous with destiny in a Pacific jungle is at hand. They know the war with the Japs is just beginning.

Here are some other Pacific realities so that you will understand why there must be a Sixth War Loan and why it is absolutely necessary that it be a success:

The Allied Military Command has estimated that it will take years, not months, to lick Japan.

Japan's present army numbers about 4,000,000 with 2,000,000 more men available and fit for military service who haven't been called up to date. Another 1,500,000, between the ages of 17 and 20, are not yet subject to the draft.

The Jap Air Force is growing. In addition to millions of native workers, Japan has a potential slave force of 400,000,000 conquered people. 50% of Japan's labor force is made up of women. Another 25% boys and girls under 20, the balance men. The Jap workday is twelve to sixteen hours with two days off a month. The Jap cannot leave his job, change it, or strike: The highest daily wage equals about three American dollars—30% to 75% of which goes to taxes and compulsory savings.

The Jap, as our men in the Pacific know, will fight to the death. As far as the Jap is concerned, the outer Empire—and the men who defend it—are the expendables. The Jap will fight the Battle from inside the inner Empire.

The Jap believes that we shall weary of war too easily and too early.

In the invasion of France, supply ships had an overnight run to make. In the coming Battle of Japan, ships in the Pacific will have long-reached round trips that often take five months to make.

These realities are worth thinking about before you keep your home front rendezvous with a Victory Volunteer. Perhaps you will feel that the national personal Sixth War Loan objective—purchase of at least one extra $100 War Bond—is entirely too small for you. The better we face the realities confronting our forces in the Pacific the quicker the whole bloody business will be over and the sooner we will welcome home our fighting men. That's an American reality to work for with all our dollars and our sweat.

For Freedom's Sake

READ THE ADS Along With the News

To the People of this Community

The best way to observe the defeat of Hitler is to buy an extra War Bond. In thousands upon thousands of American homes today there is pride and eagerness. From these homes have come fighting men who died to bring us this far on the road to decisive victory over all our enemies. It will take more sweat, more tears, more toil, more and greater individual sacrifice before we see Japan in the rump. These barbarians of the Pacific planned for us. How much more blood and tears depends on every individual American war worker and Bond buyer.

The Sixth War Loan symbol—a bomb hurling down on the Rising Sun—can only come to reality with your individual help. Buy at least an extra $100 War Bond above your normal payroll savings. That's the least you can do to back up your fighting men.

Recipe for a Perfect Marriage

Dee and Jane Cupper celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary last Saturday. Having so many friends, it seemed like half the town stopped in that evening to pay their respects.

Little Ida Moffat brought a home-made poem to read, called Love Enduring. Bert Childers added "Silver Threads Among the Gold" Will Dudley made a speech and proposed a toast.

And as I watched that toast—Dee with his glass of beer, Jane with her buttermilk—I thought to myself: There's a recipe for happy marriage. Two folks with different tastes—no doubt an honest fault or two—who through the years have learned to live in tolerance and understanding.

From where I sit, Dee and Jane are a mighty good example to young married people of today—an example of how moderation, tolerance and understanding can build lasting happiness and solid homes.

And as I watched that toast—Dee with his glass of beer, Jane with her buttermilk—I thought to myself: There's a recipe for

LAW ENFORCEMENT CONFERENCES

Mr. D. A. Bryce, special Agent in Charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, El Paso, Texas, has announced the schedule for the third series of FBI Law Enforcement Conferences, to be held in New Mexico and West Texas, commencing November 27th.

These conferences are held under the direction of Mr. John Edgar Hoover, Director of the FBI, in compliance with President's Directive of September 6, 1939, asking for the cooperation and assistance of all local law enforcement agencies in the internal security program. The conferences are open to all duly constituted law enforcement officers, including auxiliary police, mounted patrol, sheriff's posse members, railway police and honorary deputy sheriffs.

The forthcoming conferences will be held in New Mexico in the following cities on dates set forth and will be held in courtrooms of the courthouse in each city. The hours of the conferences are from 7:30 p. m. until 10:30 p. m.: Albuquerque, November 16th; Roswell, November 22nd.

In West Texas the conferences will be held at McCamey, Texas, in the McCamey High School Auditorium from 7:30 until 10:30 p. m. and at El Paso on November 27th in the Hotel Paso Del Norte, from 7:30, to 10:30 p. m.

All law enforcement officers are urged to attend these conferences.

New Mexico in Wartime

Persons who plan to eat their Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners at restaurants can rest assured they will pay no more than last year. The district OPA office has announced. In no case, under OPA regulations may the price of a Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner exceed by more than 15 per cent the restaurant's regular prices for Sunday dinners of the same class. The regulations provide that eating and drinking establishments may charge higher prices on Thanksgiving or Christmas, only if they customarily charge higher prices or holidays, the OPA says.

The OPA ceiling price range on turkeys for November and December is from 60 cents per pound for young fully dressed and drawn turkeys to 55 cents per pound for the less desirable classifications. This top November ceiling is two cents below that of October, district OPA officials report.

Beer Suits Filed

One decree has been issued, and another suit filed in the Valencia County court at Los Lunas, the district OPA office has announced.

Judge Henry G. Coors has signed a decree suspending Ignacio Chavez doing business as the Central Bar, Belen, from selling beer for 15 days, the OPA announced. A second suit, which is pending, seeks to suspend John Poich, doing business as the American Bar at Grants, from selling beer.

Edgel To Denver

Ralph L. Edgel, senior price assistant for the district OPA office, has been promoted to assistant regional executive officer, with headquarters at Denver, John D. Bingaman, district OPA director has announced. Mr. Edgel has been with the OPA for more than two years.

With The Men— In Service

A. U. S. ARMY RECONDITIONING CENTER, ENGLAND—In what condition does a hospitalized soldier return to duty? Is he in good physical shape? Is his state of mind healthy? The Army says yes.

Men released from hospitals, after battle wounds have healed, are now sent directly to United States Army Reconditioning Centers. These centers, modeled after British types have the job of rebuilding the soldier into the fine fighting man he is, the man that cracked into France, and is going back to finish the job.

But to finish the job, he must be in shape mentally and physically. This is accomplished through close coordination between the medical department and line officers who, too, have suffered combat injuries.

Here is what is happening daily at the reconditioning center in England. The soldier arrives after a stay at a general hospital. He is immediately assigned to a company commanded by a line officer who is responsible for his observance of military discipline. The next day he is given a complete medical examination and is graded according to his physical condition. He is then ready to start on the road back.

Each day his time is fully occupied. His physical training is under the direct supervision of graduates of the Army Physical Training School.

Calisthenics, games and remedial exercises are given with regard to his ability to perform them. Training films, lectures and demonstrations help to recall his military training. At the end of the week after a test march, he is ready for another medical examination. If the examination and the reports of his instructors indicate, he is put in a higher grade where physical training is stiffer, the schooling more intense.

After a period of weeks of progress, and after final medical examination, the soldier is once more the same man who crossed the Channel, and is ready to go back.

How is his frame of mind? That, too, is taken care of. At the reconditioning center, under the command of Colonel S. L. Cooke, H. C., of Chatham, Virginia, it's not all work and no play. Col Cooke, a veteran of the Sicilian campaign, knows well the mind of the wounded man. Recreational facilities are many. The Soldier can talk war, politics and peace with his buddies over coffee and sinkers at the Red Cross. He can pitch horseshoes, play in the baseball team or softball league, take French and German language instructions, see a movie, have a "bitter" or two at the recreation hall. He is encouraged to attend religious services, Catholic or Protestant, at the Chapel, or transportation is provided to Jewish services at a nearby town. He just doesn't brood. And he leaves the center mentally fit.

The system is working. And its harvest will be reaped in the healthy condition and attitude of the veterans of this war.

One of the members of this rehabilitation center is: Pvt. Manuel C. Carabajal, Lincoln, N. M.

Donnelly's Successor Named

Commander Alfred Stanford of the U. S. Navy has been appointed deputy administrator in charge of Information for the OPA at Washington, the district OPA has been informed. He takes the place vacated by Dr. Thomas C. Donnelly, who has returned to the University of New Mexico as head of the department of government.

Give him a CRISP WAR BOND for a CHRISTMAS present to be remembered. KEEP ON BUYING THE ATTACK.

100 OCTANE GASOLINE won't grow wings on a car

EXPECT NO MIRACLES from your present car if the tank were filled with 100-octane gasoline.

Its motor was engineered specifically for the gasolines which were available at the time you bought your car. To secure the benefits of very high octane fuels, post-war motors will have much higher compression ratios, will be smaller and lighter, and will deliver greatly increased power and extraordinary mileage.

All this will be possible because of the super gasolines to be made available for motorists in the post-war period. And you have every reason to expect that Phillips will be among the first to offer these vastly improved motor fuels soon after victory.

Why? Because Phillips is today one of the nation's five largest producers of 100-octane aviation gasoline. Phillips is also one of the leaders in the war production of butadiene for synthetic rubber.

These achievements are a direct result of Phillips long years of peacetime research to extend the frontiers of knowledge concerning hydrocarbon chemistry. Other accomplishments, which cannot now be told for security reasons, flow from Phillips wartime exploration of the limitless possibilities of chemical production of new and better things from petroleum gases as well as from petroleum.

This is why we say: Every time you see the Phillips 66 Shield, let it remind you that Phillips refineries, in addition to producing gasolines, lubricants, and fuel oils... are also gigantic chemical plants pouring out weapons for victory.

ONE PLATE PER VEHICLE

The State Motor Vehicle Division announced that New Mexico motorists will carry one license tag in 1945 as in 1944. New Mexico license plate steel was ordered prior to relaxation by the WPB of steel production for license plates. Accordingly this State will go on a one plate per vehicle basis, with production promised for December, he explained.

The color scheme for 1945 plates is to be white numerals on a blue background for passenger cars, and white numerals against a maroon background for trucks.

WOOL GROWERS CONVENTION

February 6 and 7 have been set as the dates for the 1945 convention, wool show, and wool school of the New Mexico Wool Growers' Association. The convention will be held in the Hilton Hotel in Albuquerque.

"Wool growers should ship their show fleeces to Louis McRae, manager of the Wool Warehouse Company, by November 10." This will allow time to sample and weigh each fleece before the wool show. We also plan to make cross sections of a sample from each fleece again this year.

Information from wool growers indicates that 100 fleeces will be entered in the open classes, from 50 to 60 in the junior show. Angora goat breeders also plan to enter few outstanding Mohair fleeces.

Their Bonds and Stamps Buy a Jeep

"We're buying one," yelled youngsters at the Whittier School, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, when they saw the jeep above. Actually they expect to have bought enough war stamps and bonds by the middle of December to pay for two jeeps for the armed forces. The army sergeants in the picture motored over from Sioux Falls Air Field to show the boys and girls just what their savings are purchasing. (Army Photo)

FOOD'S PLACE IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD there is a need for all the food the world produces.

To utilize the food of the world is a problem of finance and distribution, not a reduction of supply. The solution is not the problem of any one government, but of all governments, though a movement in that direction needs leadership.

We raise wheat and corn and hogs and cotton; Brazil produces coffee; Cuba, sugar; Norway, fish; Australia mutton, and so throughout the range of food and farm products.

There was a need for the surplus we destroyed, but there was lacking a means of financing its distribution. With that solved those who died would have lived, and there would have been a market for all the American farmer produced.

"An ever-normal granary" is not a one nation problem, as it was in Egypt in the days of Joseph, but is a world problem. There can, and should, be a method of utilizing the surplus of any one nation in meeting the needs of the people of other nations.

Providing the necessary system of finance and distribution calls for brains not politics. America can provide the brains if, in the effort to do so, politics are forgotten. We have a practical, not theoretical, brand of economists who can, and would, supply the formula needed to finance and distribute the food of the world so that all peoples may be fed and the farmers of all nations have a market for what they produce.

The international food conference, held behind closed doors, did not find, or did not seek to find, such a solution. The thoughts of each participant were of the selfish interests of the nation he represented. Pick a dozen of the right type of broad visioned, practical Americans and assign them the task of providing a workable plan of finance and distribution. When they have done so present that plan to other governments for approval. Out of such can come a real solution of the problem of finance and distribution of world food supplies, the lack of which makes possible the devastating famines that are an almost yearly occurrence in some section of the world. Food is of more importance to the human race than is oil or metals or rubber. When the problems of food for the world is solved the American farmer and those of other nations will have a market for all they produce.

LANTERNS STILL ARE IMPORTANT ITEM

IT SEEMS BUT A SHORT TIME since a lantern was an essential in every rural home. It lighted us to and from church on dark winter nights; it accompanied us on any evening visit to a friend; it kept us on the path when nature called us to that wee house in the back yard. It was only a comparatively short time ago, as time is measured, when no town or village enjoyed street lights of any kind. Until we arrived at the stage of street lights, and some other modern conveniences, the lowly lantern was our guide. I had not even thought of lanterns for years. To me they had gone the way of other out-moded things. Then I met a man who told me his business was that of selling lanterns. I wondered where he got them and to whom he sold them. He explained his firm operated a large plant, employed hundreds of men, at making nothing but lanterns. He showed me his orders. Those for a carload at a time were not exceptional. The lantern is still an American commodity in quite a sizeable way.

AS RAYMOND MOLEY SAYS, we have a thousand planners but no plans for the reconversion of industry to peacetime products. The first thing we know the war will be over, the need of war supplies will have stopped; millions of workers, including discharged servicemen, will be seeking jobs, when there are no jobs. The answer may be disaster on the home front because the planners procrastinated instead of working at the job of planning.

Stalin Hits Japs

Premier Stalin, of Russia, is shown in this radio photo as he addressed the Soviet Union. He castigated Germany and Japan as aggressor nations. His talk renewed speculation that the Soviet Union will make available some of its resources to the Allies of the Pacific war. Whether this aid would include rail par-ticipation, or would cover uses of Russian bases has not been determined. Russia's position in north-east Asia is even more vulnerable than Japan's.

BRITAIN'S BANKRUPT STATUS

One of the most important documents bearing on the postwar world soon will be issued by the British government in the form of a White Paper. It will be a survey of Britain's financial position and a frank admission that she is bankrupt.

The White Paper will tell in detail how British investments throughout the world have been liquidated to pay for the war and will come to the conclusion that, if the British Empire is to continue free trading, she must have outside help.

The alternative to free trade and free competition, the White Paper will say, is a system of barter, restricted trade and cartels, such as that practiced by Germany after the last war. International cartels, of course, have been blasted publicly by President Roosevelt and one British corporation, Imperial Chemical Industries, already has been prosecuted by the justice department on a charge of conspiring with the Du Ponts before the war to control the world production of certain chemicals.

According to inside word from the diplomatic corps, the publication of Britain's frank survey of her bankrupt financial position will coincide with the secret conferences now taking place here between Lord Keynes and U. S. officials regarding the renewal of lend-lease.

With the war in Europe nearing a close and with U. S. forces now getting a greater proportion of war supplies direct from the United States, British war needs for lend-lease are dwindling. However, the British have proposed in Lord Keynes' private conversations, a new type of postwar lend-lease whereby the British could resell goods to foreign countries in order to reestablish their export trade.

Word leaking from the diplomatic corps is that Lord Keynes now proposes a total lend-lease allotment to Great Britain of 6 1/2 billions for 1945, of which 3 1/2 billions could be reexported in British trade. Most of this would be in the form of American raw materials which the British would process into finished goods and then sell. The British do not propose that finished American products be given them for reexport, but only that they get lend-leased raw materials to re-vo their crippled industries.

One proposal is to set up a new postwar lend-lease court composed of one Britisher and two Americans which would decide which goods could be used for British trading purposes. The whole plan will be submitted to congress probably before Christmas.

ARMY'S PREFABRICATED BRIDGES

One of the great but little known stories of the Western front is the way in which army engineers got a group of bridge experts together nearly two years ahead of the European invasion and designed fabricated sections of bridges which would exactly replace specific bridges in France, Holland and Belgium.

Through the European underground, army engineers were able to get exact measurements of the bridges which they knew would be destroyed by the retreating Nazis. Each part was numbered, and special assembly crews, trained in England, rehearsed the job of putting them in place.

When the invasion came, these bridges traveled so close behind our advancing armies that they were frequently ahead of the field kitchens. And on arrival at a destroyed bridge its replacement was a matter of hours.

HILLMAN WOULD END PAC

Sidney Hillman didn't advertise it but, during the last days of the campaign, he took steps to disband his controversial Political Action committee. The final decision will not be up to him alone, for the whole thing will be threshed out at the CIO national convention in Chicago. But not waiting for the convention, Hillman sent notice to most of the 200 members of the PAC staff that they go off the payroll before then.

Originally PAC was set up as a permanent organization, and there are several schools of thought inside the CIO regarding its continuation. One group, including auto workers president R. J. Thomas, wants to keep PAC alive. Hillman, on the other hand, wants to shut up shop, concentrate on New York politics, and also get his health back.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

All during the war, FDR has been a close reader of Carl Sandburg's "Lincoln" and has continued his reading during the campaign. Someone who dropped into his private study one day found a copy of the book open to Lincoln's war days. During the 1864 campaign, McClellan's followers accused Lincoln of squandering public funds, mismanagement of the government, destroying "civil liberties," meddling with the war, and standing out for "unconditional surrender."

GIRL OVERBOARD

by GEORGE F. WORTS

WNU RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Zorie Corey, a blond girl, is expected by her employer's wife to deliver in person some thirty invitations to a party on a rainy evening. She picks up the invitations and starts out, but discouraged, leans against a telephone pole and cries. A handsome stranger comes along, learns her story, grabs the invitations from her and tears them up. Zorie meets her fiancé's uncle, Admiral Duncan, who practically forces her to accept a job to edit his memoirs. Zorie's Aunt Hannah protests, but Admiral Duncan wins. The handsome stranger picks up her suitcase and brings her to the steamer, "Samoa." On board, Miss Amber Lanning claims occupancy to the same stateroom.

CHAPTER V

Zorie closed her eyes, because they were suddenly filled with tears. These tears were, as usual, tears of fury directed at her meekness. She leaned back against the pillows. She intended to take a shower in a moment and dress in the bathroom.

She fell asleep. The ringing of the telephone awoke her. She opened her eyes and looked about the stateroom with dismay. It was empty! Miss Lanning had finished dressing and was gone!

Zorie glanced at her wristwatch. It was 7:21!

She answered the phone. It was Paul again. His tones were the icy reserved tones of a man who is furious but who, because others are present, is controlling himself.

"Zorie, what's become of you? We're all ready to start dinner."

"I'll explain everything," Zorie answered tremulously. "I won't be a sissy."

After she had taken her shower, and was looking for a bath towel, she learned why. There had been four hand towels and four bath towels. Miss Lanning had used them all. They were strewn over the bathroom floor.

A hot wave of anger went over Zorie, and for a moment she stood, dripping, with her fists and her teeth clenched. At that moment, she hated the slim, beautiful, arrogant Miss Lanning.

She opened her trunk, having to look through her bag for the key, and found three hand towels she had intended embroidering for Aunt Hannah's birthday. They were mere wisps of towels. She could not dry herself at all thoroughly.

"Some day," Zorie announced, "I'm going to be like that. I'm going to be arrogant and ruthless and brutal."

She dressed with haste. She had little time to give her hair. She slipped into the navy-blue dress, zipped it up and stepped back and considered herself in the mirrors.

She opened the door. A man was standing in the corridor a dozen feet away with an unlighted cigarette in his mouth. He was flicking the wheel of a lighter. He held the flame to the cigarette, but his eyes were on Zorie and they remained on her as she shut the door and started along the corridor toward him.

He was a short man in a dark gray suit, with wide sloping shoulders and scrubby-looking dark hair. Slanting eye-sockets gave his dark eyes a cynical expression.

As she passed him, his eyes narrowed, and they were as bright, as alert, as the eyes of a ferret. He made her feel uneasy.

She found an elevator and went up to B Deck. As she entered the wide cross corridor, she saw a man coming down the stairs from the deck above. She noticed him only because he looked so smart and at ease in his white dinner jacket and black trousers. His shiny black hair was graying at the temples, and he looked distinguished and important. Also, he seemed foreign and interestingly dissipated. He was the kind of man about whom you might say that the skin under his eyes was the graveyard of his follies.

As Zorie's glance became a stare, and her heart suddenly pounded, he noticed her. He stared, then smiled with one corner of his mouth. His lids came down a little and he now looked as a blasé man might look when he scents prey.

He said in a cultured, purposeful voice, "Good evening!" and paused. Zorie stared at him a moment longer with bright fascinated eyes, then started down a corridor almost at a run.

Men with dark faces and little white scars under their left eyes were, she supposed, not unusual, yet she was sure, she was positive, that this black-haired, dark-skinned man with the little star-shaped scar under his left eye was the man she had seen in the green sedan when Steve Duncan had hid behind the telephone pole—and her.

Paul opened the door to her knock. She walked into the room with her heart still pounding. Steve and the admiral were at the other end of the room, which was fully twice as large as the room she and Amber Lanning were sharing. Beyond was another large room.

The three men wore white or pale-colored evening jackets and black trousers. She glanced at Paul, tall and straight and splendid-looking, with the expression in his eyes she had been prepared for.

"I'm sorry I'm late," she said meekly.

"Being late," the admiral said, "is a beautiful woman's privilege."

With his curly white hair, his furrowed red face and his lean erect-ness, he looked distinguished. Something happened in his china-blue eyes as he took her in an almost imperceptible tightening. His expression did not seem to change, yet he betrayed, as his eyes quickly ran down her, surprise and disappointment.

She glanced quickly at Steve. He looked very brown and huge and handsome in a beige dinner jacket with a blue bow tie and a blue silk carnation the shade of his eyes. She wondered if he knew that the man she had just seen was aboard.

He was looking at her as if he was delighted with her. It mystified Zorie. The admiral had betrayed disappointment in her appearance, and she had not been surprised. Steve was gazing at her with unmistakable admiration. Why? It seemed that whatever the basis was for their contacts, he was always mystifying her.

He slowly grinned, turned and went into the other room. He returned with a white flower in his hand. It looked a little like a gardens, but its white petals were more fragile. It had a spicy-sweet odor that was strange and exotic.

"With the compliments of Admiral Duncan," he said in his deep voice. "It's an old island custom."

He put the flower in her hair. As he bent down and fixed the flower he said in a voice too low for the admiral and Paul to hear, "I'm proud of you, baby."

Zorie was more mystified than ever. No man had ever before put a flower in her hair. Her cheeks were burning. She could not decide whether he was making fun of her, being sorry for her, because of her wrinkled dress, her lack of makeup and Paul's cool disapproval of her tardiness, or whether he was deliberately teasing Paul.

Whatever his motive was, she felt grateful. "Thank you," she said, with warmth. "What is it?"

"White ginger." He picked up a cocktail from a tray and handed it to her, but before she could accept it, Paul said curtly, "Zorie doesn't drink, Steve."

It wasn't true. Although Paul disapproved of drinking, because of its demonstrably harmful effect on brain tissue, both of them sometimes had a cocktail or two at faculty parties. Paul was furious because she was late, and he was punishing her.

Steve was sadly shaking his large curly head. "What a pity," he drawled, and drank the cocktail.

Zorie had never known such luxury. Two waiters, or stewards, served the dinner and their obvious awe of Admiral Duncan, who barked at them and criticized every dish, reminded her that he was not only a garrulous and meddling old man but a very rich and powerful one.

She was glad when dinner was over.

Paul said, "Let's go up and dance," which surprised her. "I'd love to," she answered, hoping that Steve would accompany them. His presence would postpone the inevitable scolding, and she was determined to question him.

But Steve said carelessly, "I'll see you in a few minutes."

In the hall, Zorie waited for Paul to begin. When he didn't, she glanced up at him. His profile was more thoughtful than stern. He asked her how she thought she would like working for the admiral, and she answered cautiously, "All right."

ous of Steve. "I'm not falling for him," she said.

"No?" He laughed softly, but with no humor. "Well, you wouldn't be the first of my girls he's tried to steal."

"Did he," Zorie asked demurely, "have much luck with the others?"

"He's always had a very smooth line," Paul replied. "Watch out for it."

"I shall," Zorie promised.

They started to dance. Paul danced well but without much enthusiasm. He didn't dance often enough to keep in practice, and if you aren't in practice, you bump into people and apologizing. He became annoyed. The slight rolling of the ship kept sending him off balance, and that annoyed him, too.

The ship rolled more sharply than usual. Paul and Zorie went sliding to the end of the floor with a mass of other dancers who seemed to think it was fun.

Paul did not. "To hell with it," he said crossly. "Let's take a turn on deck."

"All right," Zorie agreed.

Just then Steve's deep, lazy voice said "Is it against maritime law to cut in?"

He was grinning at Paul. "Try it!" Paul said curtly. "I'm not the shark god's type."

He walked away. Steve had his hand lightly under Zorie's elbow, balancing her as the ship made another deep roll.

"Do you mind?"

"No," said Zorie. "Paul doesn't like to dance."

His blue eyes were admiring her. "You do."

"Yes, I love it." She felt rebellious and reckless.

"So do I," Steve drawled.

He took her lightly in his arms and they started to dance.

Steve was evidently experienced at dancing not only in crowds but on rolling ships, because they bumped into no one and when the ship rolled he seemed to know how to dance with the roll, so that their rhythm wasn't broken and she lost the fear she had had with Paul that her feet were about to shoot out from under her. Steve danced smoothly and he led firmly. He was so easy to dance with that Zorie felt herself relaxing.

She looked about for Paul and saw him go out on deck.

"Are you the shark god's type?" she asked.

"I'm the shark god's adopted child," Steve answered. "When I was a kid, on Kauai, I did a lot of surfing in dangerous water. An old Hawaiian family took a fancy to me and their god happened to be the shark god, so they put me through the ritual. They wanted to protect me against all dangers in or on the sea."

"It sounds pagan," Zorie murmured. It also sounded characteristic of Steve.

"It is," said Steve.

She laughed. "Are you pagan?"

He grinned lazily down at her. "Incurably."

She wondered why he wanted to dance with her—why he was bothering with her. There were many pretty girls on the floor, and every time Zorie glanced at one of them, she was staring at Steve. He could have been dancing with any of them, yet he seemed oblivious to them. Why?

"Why did you put this flower in my hair?"

"Because I was delighted with you for taking my advice. I happened to be in the room when Paul phoned you. I thought he was being pretty stuffy. The longer you kept us waiting, the more I admired you."

So that was it! He thought her tardiness was due to her having decided to show Paul that she couldn't be ordered around!

"Do you know," Steve asked, "that you've made my grandfather as happy as a kid with a new red engine?"

"Why?"

"He likes to have a pretty girl around," Steve answered, "and he's sure you're going to do wonders with his book. You've got to be tough with him. If he takes a wrong slant, don't hesitate to back him down. You're clever. You can. Do you mind if I sit in on some of these sessions?"

"Won't it be dull for you?" Zorie asked.

"No. I'm interested in the book. Nobody's ever written up the family and I'd like to see it done right. It's really the story of Hawaii as illustrated by one amazing family. You're going to fall in love with Uluwehi. Has Paul told you much about it?"

"No."

Steve was still holding her lightly, and dancing smoothly, and paying attention to no one on the floor but her. Zorie felt reckless and gay. Steve was flirting with her. He was managing to say nice things to her without making love to her. Her feelings about him were so contradictory that she felt confused.

She realized that his charm, his warm personality were dangerous weapons that he used with deliberate intent. She was not often suspicious of people, but she could not help being suspicious of this tall, deep-voiced young man with his graceful ways. There was simply no reason for him to be wasting his time on her.

Zorie wondered if Paul was jeal-

Culling Out 4-Fs Will Insure Winter Profits

It's Easy to Pick Out Loafers in Any Flock

Culling of laying hens should start the day they are hatched. Weak and deformed chicks will never pay for their feed. Slow maturing, slow feathering pullets are a liability.

Poor layers will molt early, slowly, and will have coarse, meaty, or Broad back, steep body, straight keel and pin bone—mark of good layer.

Very thin, weak-looking heads. Those with yellow, coarse, beefy flesh are not good layers and should be culled out, as should those with small, sunken eyes.

When in good health, a poor layer will have rounded, fat shanks and will retain their yellow color in shanks and beak.

A poor layer will be shallow-chested and round-bodied and have thick, meaty, rigid laybones with a rounded narrow back and hard abdomen. The slacker will also have a narrow spread between the pelvic bones, one or one-and-a-half finger widths.

The wise poultryman, even though he does not trespass, will know of the past performance of families and will breed only from those that have proven themselves for health, vigor and egg laying. When he purchases baby chicks or pullets, he will purchase only those tested and of a proven high producing egg strain, as well as from a strain free from disease.

Most culled pullets and hens will bring a good price on the market, or can be utilized for home consumption or canned. Where locker plants are available, it will be profitable to store them until they are needed. Locker plant rental will cost less than feeding a non-producer.

Improve Dairy Ration With Proper Minerals

Natural feeds should supply enough of most minerals needed by dairy cows. However, mineral elements might be deficient in some farm rations, in which case dairy cattle may require supplements of calcium and phosphorus, in addition to the regular farm-grown hay and grains.

Timothy is sadly lacking in calcium, alfalfa and clover containing three to four times as much of this mineral. It must also be remembered that some excellent legume hays may be deficient in phosphorus if grown on soils that lack it and on which phosphorus fertilizers are not used.

When little or no grains are fed, dairy cows may benefit from phosphorus supplements. Usually the grains will furnish all the phosphorus needed by live stock.

New Farm Facts

The giant Entelodont was the earliest known hog, often reaching a height of 10 feet.

When pigs are confined to a pen or floor, even for a week or two, anemia is likely to develop.

Lime lost from the soil by drainage is equivalent to more than 700 pounds of limestone an acre a year.

A dollar will buy thousands of matches, and a single match can destroy millions of dollars worth of farm property.

Burning off weeds is condemned as a pasture practice—it injures desirable grass plants, mulch, and leaves ground exposed to erosion.

DDT, the new powerful insecticide, promises to be one of the greatest gifts to farmers of the century. Supply will be limited as long as the armed forces need it so great.

Surplus Fat for Soap

Following butchering operations there is usually a surplus of fat as well as fat that has become old and rancid which can be used to make soap. Heat the fat until it is well melted, adding one pound of lye in three pints of water to every seven pounds of fat. Mix and stir slowly until the mixture resembles honey, pour into granite or wooden containers and cool. The fat should not be heated more than 150 degrees Fahrenheit.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Newly 2,000 rubber tires daily were required in North Africa to replace tires which had been worn out or destroyed in action.

As a result of the diversion of the petroleum by-product to aviation gasoline, about 50 per cent of the butadiene produced for synthetic rubber processing so far in 1944 came from alcohol plants.

When you wonder about the shortage of civilian tires, bear in mind that in the time it takes to build one 24-inch airplane tire at B. F. Goodrich factories, seven 3.25-20 truck tires or sixty 6.00-16 passenger tires could be made. And airplane tires are "meats" these days!

Next time you hear a Southern Pacific train whistle in the night, think of it as something more than a lonely, haunting sound. It is a reassuring sound—a promise that even while you sleep, the war trains are rolling. It's the confident voice of an industry that's doing the biggest job in its history, and will be in there pitching long after the war is over.

Wouldn't you like to know the language of the train whistles? Below we show you:

What S. P. train whistles mean

We haven't room to explain all the whistles, but here are the commonest ones. The "o" stands for a short sound, the dash means a longer sound.

- ■ ■ ■ Warning whistle when train is approaching a highway crossing.
- ○ ○ When train is running, this means it will stop at next station, which is not a regular stop. If train is standing still, this signal warns that it is about to back up.
- \ One long whistle is sounded a mile before train reaches stations, railroad crossings, drawbridges, etc.
- ○ ○ ○ Signal for brakeman to protect rear of train. He must go down the track with necessary flagman's signals.
- ○ ○ ■ Signal for brakeman to protect front of train.
- ■ ■ ■ This signal orders brakeman to return from the west.
- ■ ■ ■ ■ This signal recalls brakeman from the east.
- ○ ○ This tells other trains that a second section is following.
- ○ This is the engineer's answer to most signals from other trains.
- ○ ○ ○ ○ A succession of short sounds is a warning to persons or livestock on the track.
