Mrs. Nettie Lemon has been ill with influenza this week.

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

Legionnaires, Ex-Service Men, Mothers, Fathers, Wives of Men in the Service

The National Commander of the American Legion has issued a Battle Cry for all of us to rally to the support of the American Legion Omnibus Bill, which is a Bill of Rights for G. I. Joe and G. I. Jane, who are now in the armed forces.

This widespread Bill of Rights, covering every need of our fighting men and women when they return, is suffering from political jockeying in Washington and needs the strong support of every one of us, if our boys will return to find an America appreciative of their sacrifices. Twenty-five years of fighting for the welfare of our brave men and women who have so successfully defended our homes and yes, our very lives, has given the American Legion a wide experience, which is written into the Legion's Bill of Rights now before Congress.

If you want your boy and mine to return to an America which will say, "I am sorry but I have nothing for you," then disregard this plea. But if you value their services, which in fact, "Keep the Bombs off your Home Tonight," come to their rescue quick.

Write a penny postcard IMMEDIATELY to Hon. Antonio M. Fernandez and Hon. Clinton P. Anderson, Capitol Building, Washington, D. C., requesting their full support of the American Legion Bill No. H. R. 3917. Also write Senators Chavez and Hatch asking their support of Bill No. 1617, which is the same bill in the Senate. This is very important. Get your cards in the mail today.

Discharged Veterans of World War II see me or the adjutant of the post near you for forms to fill out for your muster-out pay.

Dan Conley, Adjutant & Svc. Officer.

1943 Federal Income Tax Returns

The current form requires more detailed calculation to arrive at the proper tax; thus, it is apparent that more time is needed to advise taxpayers and complete their returns. So that our office can give more time in each community than heretofore and the Deputy Collector can still complete his itinerary before the filing date, some places must be covered earlier this year. A second trip to a particular locality cannot be made. It is our hope that the taxpayer will not wait, but will take advantage of any assistance that can be rendered him. Harry W. Bliss or W. J. McAulay, at Courthouse, Carrizozo, from Wednesday, Feb. 23 to Saturday, Feb. 26, 1944.

Gordon McKinley Wells

Mr. Gordon Wells passed away at the Marine hospital in Fort Stanton, Feb. 11, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Wells was well known throughout the county, having served as county commissioner for two terms and was always active in every good cause. He was highly respected for his honesty, kindness of heart and devotion to his family and friends.

Mr. Wells was born in White Oaks, Mar. 2, 1897, and was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wells, who were pioneers of Lincoln County. He was a veteran of World War I. Besides his wife, Dorothy Brooks Wells, he is survived by five sisters: Mmes. Hunt, Roswell; Coe, Tularosa; Palmer, Oklahoma; Severance and Douglas, Los Angeles. The funeral was held at Fort Stanton last Saturday at 2 p. m.

J. Robert Sears, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Sears of Capitan, has earned academic distinction at N. M. I., Roswell. For the 1st semester of 1943-44, Sears was one of 24 of a class of 151 3/c to be placed on the honor roll and become a member of the Honor Society. He expects a High School Certificate in May.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fall so severe impairment that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be itching backache, pers. acid in the urine, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feeling of nervous shakiness and loss of sex and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are some: more burning, acidity or too-frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wise when kidneys lag. Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your druggist!

Remodel Your Clothes to Get That 'This Season' Style Look

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

LIKE to sew? If you do, the present "duration" period brings opportunity to your very door, knocking as it never knocked before...

The sketches in the illustration herewith have a story all their own to tell as to ways and means of achieving smart camouflage for dresses too good to discard yet needing some deft touch to give them a "this-season" style look...

The dress with the fitted bodice and the dirndl skirt was once trimming of any sort last season. To give it a new look the resourceful owner thereof lavished intricate braid trim on waist and skirt...

Dress-Up Sweater

The evening sweater is a major fashion theme now that the mid-winter social season is at its height. This white wool rib-knit dinner sweater is bound with black velvet and worn with a black velvet skirt...

Modish Black Raincoats

The latest news in rainy-day wear is that of modish black raincoats. Various types are shown. One style is of black rayon weave lined with a bright warm pile fabric...

pattern makes it easier to achieve a pleasing design. The pretty and very fashionable low square neckline of the black velvet bodice, also the above-elbow sleeves shown to the left, are finished off with a ruche trim of snowy organza...

Centered to the left, a simple crepe frock has the worn places on the waist completely concealed under two wide scalloped bands of contrast fabric, with matching bands on the sleeves. Black on black is smart for this, either black velvet on crepe or black satin. Color contrast would also be effective.

The girl with the long bob in the lower left corner takes pride in telling her friends how she transformed a much worn ugly-duckling dress into a chic frock by making a new bodice front of a plaid remnant found in the family scrap bag...

Jeweled Ornaments Trim Latest Shoes

One basic pair of step-in shoes or flatteringly simply-styled pumps with a collection of interchangeable ornaments is a new formula for footwear that will tune to all occasions. In your favorite bootery you can now buy smart buckles of every description, from fabric-covered to handsome steel types...

Highlight Your Costume By Using Striped Accents

A new dress trimming vogue is contributing much charm to spring costumes. It is that of adding striped accent to your dress or blouse or suit via accessory touches of striped rayon, taffeta or faille—maybe to face lapels; to frame a collar, or to provide a flaring cuff for a simple sleeve...

Fur Dyed to Match Coats

Among fashion's smartest are the new wool coats in pastels, collared (some have tuxedo fronts) with fur dyed to match the cloth of the coat it trims. The dusty pinks, and soft pale blues are liked by the young set but there is a new vogue starting for tawny yellow wool coats trimmed with a fur dyed to match.

Save Deer Skins For War

The State Game Department today attracted attention of all big game hunters to the fact that deer and elk skins are urgently needed for military use. General Conservation Order M-310 of the War Production Board frizo all deer skin leather for military purposes.

Hunters are urged to channel their deer skins into the trade so that they may be processed and used for the armed forces. State Game Warden Elliott Barker said, "In New Mexico, dry skins of deer and elk may be sold. Practically all hide buyers will accept your deer skin, and it will then be made available for war material. Turn it in to your local dealer."

Facts on the rubber situation by
Phillips Petroleum Company, operating a 90,000,000 pound butadiene plant, for an annual production of rubber equivalent to 11,000,000 tires

THE RACE FOR RUBBER is right now entering the homestretch. Swiftly and surely, the nation's synthetic rubber plants are approaching peak annual production of 850,000 tons:

Despite this record-breaking achievement, the next six months are the time of crisis, because the full fighting power of rubber is needed for war: Tires for planes, and combat trucks and cars; rubber for life rafts and landing boats; rubber for bullet-sealing tanks and electrical insulation; rubber for a thousand and one victory needs.

This is why only the most essential civilian drivers can be supplied with new tires of synthetic rubber at least until late in the year. The rest of us must continue to save miles and rubber, and recap in time to keep rolling:

As a major producer of butadiene (the chief ingredient in synthetic rubber) and 100 octane aviation gasoline, the Phillips Petroleum Company presents these facts as a contribution to general understanding of the present transportation problem:

With us, as with every American motorist, the needs of war come first. But when victory is won, car owners will begin enjoying the benefits and product-improvements flowing from Phillips' gigantic chemical plants, devoted to producing new and better things from petroleum gases as well as petroleum. Ration Reminders
Shoe Stamp No. 18 will be good for an indefinite period of time. It has been announced over the Radio that 16 points will be required for a pound of butter. Olcomargarine will still require 4 points.

Ration Book No. 4
The red and blue stamps, which are for meat, dairy products and processed foods as at present, will be used in conjunction with red and blue tokens, the latter to be introduced early in 1944, and given by merchants in change. Green stamps will be used on an "interim basis," with blue processed food stamps, in much the same manner as the brown stamps in Book 3 are being used this month in the meat-fat program.
Twelve of the 96 unit stamps, printed in black, are designated for sugar. An equal number are marked for coffee, which is no longer rationed. These and 72 others, marked "spares," will serve for any additional foods rationed, the OPA declared, its purpose being to provide for any contingency, since the new books are expected to serve for two years, as compared to 4 or 5 months for previous books. The cost of printing is about the same, around $1,500,000, it was stated.

Part of Sgt. Edward Straube's left foot was shot away at Ferryville, near Bizerte, North Africa. At Halloran General Hospital, Staten Island, N. Y., they are building up his foot again. Sgt. Straube, from Perth Amboy, N. J., buys War Bonds regularly.

The nickname of Pvt. Milton Lieberman, 27, of Brooklyn, is "Clark Gable." He was wounded in Sicily last August and has been at Halloran since October. Every payday $12.50 is taken out for War Bonds. Lieberman is buying. How many do you buy?

Protein Livestock Feed Badly Needed

Albuquerque, Jan. 13—Declaring that the heavy snowstorm last week generally over northern New Mexico was the last storm most cattle in northern New Mexico could stand without heavy death loss in cattle and next year calves, E. G. Hayward, President of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association today stated that unless immediate relief was sent the state in the way of more protein livestock feed that thousands of cattle and next year's calves would be lost in northern New Mexico in the next month.

"As New Mexico produces only 11 percent of the supplemental livestock feed ordinarily used on our ranges, and since we have not received as much as 15 percent of the amount usually received from other feed raising states, the point has been reached where the government should requisition from crushing mills and fairly distribute the available protein cake in the most critical areas of New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma, Hayward said. "Unless this is done, New Mexico has no chance whatever of securing adequate amounts of feed to carry cattle through the winter months."

"At present the government is distributing 50 percent of the available soybean cake and 20 percent of the cottonseed cake, but a fair share of the remaining portion of the soybean and cottonseed cake which is now distributed by dealers and mills is not coming into New Mexico, Hayward said.

You Might As Well Confess!

Almost everyone likes a mystery—almost everyone enjoys the thrilling excitement of tracking down a criminal with an ace detective. But come on a little ashamed to admit reading mysteries. Well—you need not be. Maybe you didn't know that many college professors, bank presidents, great scientists, captains of industry, even the President of the United States all like their mysteries. In fact, millions of Americans are reading more mysteries today than ever before. Why? Mainly because these fast-paced, easy-reading stories are both relaxing and refreshing. It is for them—and for you—that we are publishing

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine

Edited by Ellery Queen, famous detective of the radio, the movies, and best-seller books, it is devoted exclusively to the best in detective crime short-story literature. And we mean literature. The fact that a story owns its plot to crime and detection need not prevent its being well written. Short detective fiction that is well written is not too readily available. But we are finding them—in books, in magazines, in the files of famous authors—and by arrangement with other publishers as well as with authors, we reprint in the approved Reader's Digest manner the best detective fiction to be procured. Such masters as Danzell, Hammett, Agatha Christie, Stuart Palmer and Ellery Queen are to be found in it.

But stories are selected on their merits, not on authors' names. Tough and suave, casual and swift, comic and tragic, they are mingled with refreshing variety and stimulating change of pace. Rare gems, fit for the most critical, delight'ul to the most naive. You will find the most critical, delight'ul to the most naive. You will find the new magazine well printed—sharp and clear, kind to the eyes. You will find the size same as the Reader's Digest—convenient to hold, to handle, to slip into your pocket. Beating Japan's Torpedo Planes

By Frank Morris

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

I was on the bridge of a Pacific fleet aircraft carrier. Suddenly, straight as an arrow, a Jap torpedo plane came on less than 40 feet above the water and headed directly for our starboard bow. Through the night, it looked to the gunners on this maiden flat-top, about to be under fire for the first time, like one of those wooden miniatures they had learned to identify in shipboard lectures on a Mitsubishi 97 single-engine low-wing job.

But this was no model. Its size doubled every second until you could even see the pilot plainly. On it came, unhesitating, malevolent, into a stippled wall of steel hurled at its nose from 5-inch cannon, 20- and 40-mm. machine guns. The sleek torpedo pendant from its belly seemed as big as the Hudson tunnel, hanging there poised for its plunge into the ship's vitals.

The onrushing plane was less than two hundred yards from the ship. Now was the time for its torpedo to be launched. Fate and the carrier's gunners willed otherwise.

A direct hit caught the steel tube of death before it could be released, and its shattering explosion sent plane and crew hurtling across the carrier's bow to oblivion in the sea almost under the big ship's forefoot.

As Carrier X plowed right through the blazing debris, the mechs on our hangar deck, spying two of the plane's crew floating along in their mushroom-shaped life jackets, hurled curces and wrenches at them.

Two More Mitsubishis Downed.

A half-minute later another torpedo plane came skimming at us from the starboard quarter. Our gunners owing their mounts around sharply, opened fire and caught it squarely in midair before it could launch its fish. A puff of black smoke, a burst of orange flame and the Mitsubishi crashed into the sea.

The third plane in the attacking team made its run right on schedule to just another 20 seconds. This one was aimed directly ahead of our starboard side. Our gunners connected again. The blast of their shells tore the left wing apart, and the plane lurched to one side as it dropped its fish. The Jap pilot attempted to pull out of his spin, but his plane was beyond control and plunged into the water. The torpedo, meanwhile, streaked on past the carrier's stern, missing it by an uncomfortable margin.

"Whoa! Three runs, no hits, three errors." A baseball fan standing at a microphone of Carrier X announced the score.

Three more torpedo planes, using the same tactics, tried another attack on our task force half an hour later. This time they selected as their target one of our sister carriers zig-zagging along a few miles to port of Carrier X. They had no better luck. The guns on every ship in the vicinity concentrated on them until each in turn was shot down before it could do any damage. For a while, we thought Carrier Y was in danger, when one of the planes exploding in the air appeared to be heading for a crash landing on her flight deck. However, it dived into the water on her port side, and the flaming wreckage drifted astern.

Revenge Attacks.

Both of these attacks on us, made shortly after noon, were inspired by revenge. That morning we had tweaked the Sun Emperor's royal case. Our task force had sent its planes in—hundreds of them—to pay a visit at Kwajalein, a Japanese stronghold in the western Marshall Islands.

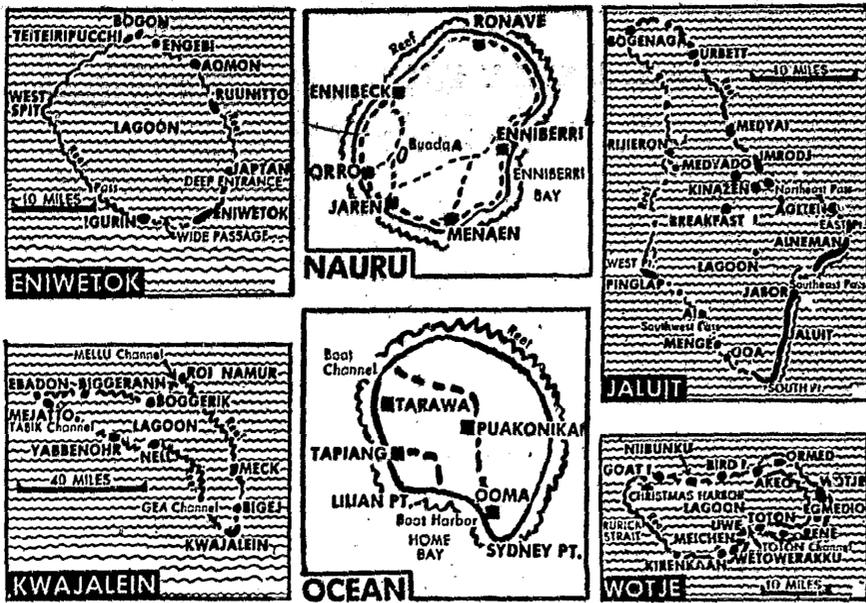

That visit hadn't done the Japs any good, for it roused up some of their cruisers and other ships in Kwajalein harbor, destroyed a sizable amount of the Imperial air force and disrupted things in general. So Kinging those suicide torpedo planes at us was just an example of blind fury, and we suspected there would be more of them tossed at us throughout that day and night.

Apparently what made the Japs particularly resentful was the fact that our task force had penetrated deep into an area they had believed to be impenetrable by an enemy surface force.

Steam Past Jap Bases.

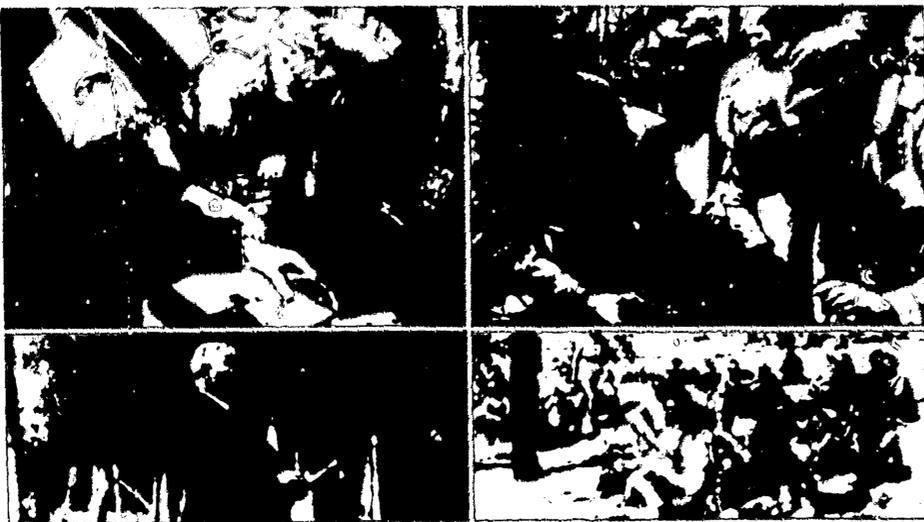

To get within bombing range of Kwajalein, our carriers and escort ships had to steam for most of 24 hours through passages between islands the Japs had been using for months as air bases and military outposts. Rear Admiral "Baldy" Pownall thumbed his nose at Wotje and Matakop as he guided his task force past these Jap island air bases to reach his objective. It was a bold maneuver and one the Japs knew nothing about until the first bombs and torpedoes struck Kwajalein.

Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

FOOD AND THE WAR

Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes called a meeting of the War Mobilization committee the other day to discuss the vital question of food for 1944. In preparation for the meeting, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones had his staff prepare a lengthy report on food prices, farm labor, machinery and other phases of the farm problem.

This report was distributed before the meeting so that members of the War Mobilization committee would have time to study it, but it soon became apparent that general Judge Jones had not read carefully his own report—if at all.

When he began to talk about the drastic need of farm machinery and the restrictions on its production, WPB's Donald Nelson quickly picked him up. Obviously, Nelson had read Jones' report and had some facts of his own to refute it. He pointed out that the only thing getting a higher priority than farm machinery on the war production schedule was the landing craft program, and that the President had ordered landing barges placed ahead of everything else.

"You wouldn't put farm machinery ahead of landing barges, would you?" asked Nelson.

"Well, it won't do 'em any good to land if they haven't got food," replied Jones.

Undersecretary of War Patterson also tangled briskly with Jones over farm deferments. Patterson pointed out that there were 750,000 boys between 18 and 21 with permanent draft deferments because they were farmers.

"This is greater than all the other deferments of the entire country," said the undersecretary of war, adding that, while agriculture should be in a preferred position, it should not be a "haven for draft dodgers."

"Well, the army's got to have food, doesn't it?" replied Jones.

HOG MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hog farmers all over the country are dizzy over conflicting directives from Washington. A farmer turns on his radio one morning and learns that Washington wants him to feed hogs heavy. Next, he is asked to market them lean. Next, just as he is snatching the extra corn from the pigs, a hurry call comes from Washington to feed 'em fat again.

Farmers are thinking of staging a little satire to express their feelings. Entitled "Make Up Your Mind, Washington," it has the following chorus:

"How can a man know what you mean,
Whether a hog shall be fat or lean?
Make up your mind and stick to that,
Whether a hog shall be lean or fat!"

However, the situation is not entirely the fault of the bureaucrats. In normal times, 225 pounds is a good average weight for hogs. The American market likes its bacon lean. But for lend-lease purposes, extra production was required, especially to supply lard for the Soviets. So farmers were implored to feed to heavy weights.

Came the corn shortage, and farmers were implored to stop feeding, market their hogs, and release the corn for shipment to dairy and poultry areas. Each change was implemented by shifts in the federal price supports.

But the hog run became phenomenal. January's slaughter broke all records. Hogs became a glut on the market. Farmers couldn't get near the slaughter houses. They had to keep on feeding. Hogs automatically got heavier, at the rate of 15 pounds a week. But if they got over 250 pounds, they passed the support level, and the packers docked them. Fearing to lose money, farmers jammed their hogs into market channels, and the run became chaotic.

So now Washington has swung back again, and is inviting farmers to feed to heavier weights. The support price has been extended to 225 pounds.

Note: Probably no decision of War Food administration was made with greater reluctance, and the support price will be reduced again as soon as the hog run tapers off.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington real-estate agents are evading price ceilings by requiring new tenants to decorate apartments at their own expense. . . . To park 'em in tighter, a Washington bus driver called out, "Push to the back, folks, and get together like you were in church."

Ed Stettinius, undersecretary of state, discovered that ambassadors returning to Washington had no space in the state department building. With one phone call, he fixed up a suite of six rooms.

Sen. Ralph Brewster of Maine, a dry, used to have a hard time refusing drinks at capital cocktail parties. "But now," he says, "with liquor so scarce, I'm the most popular man at the party!"

British embassy officials, mindful of food and liquor shortages here, are avoiding the usual diplomatic entertaining.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

With synthetic tires about to be in general use, experts emphasize again that good is important in determining tire mileage. The legal limit of 33 m.p.h. has been found to be the best mileage conserver with synthetic, just as it was with tires of crude rubber.

The cards lose elasticity if they grow older, which accounts for many blowouts when a well-worn tire strikes a rough spot in the road.

War-time regulations are saving nearly 200 million tires miles a year for the country's highway transportation system. Converted into tires, this conserved mileage means a lot to the rubber program.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anna Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes on an assignment to Puerto Rico where Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, is stationed as a U. S. Army intelligence officer. On the boat she meets a young Puerto Rican, Miguel Valera, and an engineer named Richard Taussig, of whom she is immediately suspicious as a spy of the fact that he is like a typical tourist. She does not know that he is, in fact, a German agent ordered to destroy Puerto Rico's water supply. Pete meets the boat, but does not tell Anna that he, too, has reason to be suspicious of Taussig, although his commanding officer so far refused to act.

CHAPTER III

Anna closed the door of Room 110 behind her and stood for a moment, listening under the open transom. The door of Room 108, a few steps down from hers, had been slightly ajar, and without knowing why or how she had felt that somebody was standing behind it, waiting. She heard it close quietly, and listened for steps along the waxed floor, but there were none. After a moment she went across the room to the window and looked down into the sunlit patio where she and Pete had been. The windows of 108 opened onto the patio too.

She turned and went over to her baggage stacked in the corner on the other side of the window. Again without knowing exactly why, she opened the flat case lying on top of her steamer trunk, and looked inside. It was just as she had packed it, and yet somehow it wasn't. The flat rubber band around the batch of letters of introduction lying on top of her dressing gown was twisted as if it had been slipped back hurriedly. She had put it carefully flat so that it wouldn't mar the edges of one of the envelopes that was broader than the rest.

She looked back at the door, then reached to the table and took her compact out of her handbag. She opened it and struck the powdered leather puff sharply on the polished brass face of her suitcase lock.

"Anne the girl detective," she thought as she blew the powder off the way a police inspector had showed her once in New York. On the brass oblong were three clearly defined thumb prints. The most distinct was probably her own, the others were larger.

She began to unpack her things humming softly to herself.

As she was almost through she heard the sharp quick click of high heels cut in the hall, and a light double knock on her door. She crossed the room and opened it.

"Annel! My dear! How simply wonderful!"

The girl standing there, in a blue-checked gingham dress, a blue bow in her luxuriant curly hair, her baby blue eyes sparkling with joy, held out her hands.

"You don't remember me! Why, Annel! It's Sue Porter—Sue Lattimer!"

The sixth form of Miss Oakley's fashionable school for young ladies flashed back into Annel's mind.

"Sue! Of all people! What are you doing here—of all places!" Annel cried. "Of course I remember you. You haven't changed a day. Only where's your uniform? You still look sixteen."

Sue laughed.

"Well, I'm not—I'm twenty-three, and Mrs. Russell Porter, and the mother of two bawling infants, aged four and two and a half."

That all flashed back too. Spoiled, willful, curly-headed Sue who got letters from boys when the rest of Miss Oakley's young ladies were gangly and lank-haired and hopeless everywhere except on the hockey field.

"But what are you doing down here?" Annel demanded.

Sue sat on the bed and crossed her feet under her.

"Oh, darling, Russell's firm sent him down," she said with a grin. "It was more money, and I thought it would be a wonderful chance for him to get ahead. I thought it would be romantic. You know—the tropics? I hadn't heard about cockroaches and termites. I simply hate it. We're trying to get transferred."

She brightened expectantly.

"—Did you meet a Mr. Taussig on the boat?"

Annel nodded. "Why?"

"Because I want you to help us with him. You see, he's awfully important to Russell. He's one of the world's leading sanitary engineers, and that's what Russell is."

She swung her bare brown legs off the bed and went over to the window. "That's Russell down there with him now."

She turned back, her blue eyes appealing as a child's. "You see, Anne, I have to do everything I can, because . . . well, it was my fault Russell didn't finish M. I. T. He was going back, but the baby came, and so . . . you see?"

Annel nodded, looking over Sue's shoulder. Down at a table by the fountain Mr. Richard Taussig, in a white linen suit and brown-and-white oxfords, his finger tips together in a contemplative arch, looking much more civilized than he had in his curious get-up aboard ship, was listening to the young man beside him.

"Doesn't Russell like it here?" she asked.

drooped. She looked like an unhappy six-year-old.

"Yes, he likes it all right," she admitted half heartedly. "It's really me that wants him to get away. That's why I'm having Mr. Taussig to dinner tomorrow night. So he can talk to Russell. You'll come, won't you? And be awfully nice to him! Please, Anne—will you?"

She looked out the window. "Russell's leaving, so I'll have to go now. Remember—eight o'clock. Russell will come for you. Oh, look—there's Diego Gongaro."

A tall heavy-set man of about fifty, with iron-gray hair, the pockmarks on his face visible from where they stood, was sitting at one of the small tables at the corner of the terrace, absorbed in his newspaper and cup of coffee. He had a short clipped mustache and shaggy eyebrows, and an air . . . definitely an air, Anne thought.

"Who is he?" she asked.

"He's your friend Miguel Valera's uncle. But he's not like the Valeras. He mixes with the Americans. Of course he's Spanish, he's not Puerto Rican. And my dear—"

She lowered her voice to a whisper. "—He has a mistress. You know it's quite customary down here. It's perfectly above board, except their wives pretend they don't know it. Well, I've got to go. It's perfectly swell having you down. I'll see you tomorrow."

Annel nodded.

She turned back to the window. As she looked down, she saw Diego Gongaro get up and make his way casually through the arcade into the hotel. Almost immediately Richard Taussig got up too. Even more casually he strolled over to the table Diego Gongaro had left and picked up the folded newspaper.

He came back to his chair and sat down again. Annel watched him unfold the paper, moving back instinctively, a little behind the long chintz curtains. She could see very clearly the piece of letter paper inside it.

Mr. Taussig glanced around him, glanced up at her window, looked down at the paper in front of him a moment, and slipped it unobtrusively into his pocket. He put the newspaper down on the table, got up and strolled into the hotel.

The Officers Club at El Morro was inside the gate, overlooking the golf course, the graveyard and the Atlantic Ocean. It was part of the old Spanish barracks.

When the waiter had gone Annel said, "Look, Pete—do you know anything about a man named Richard Taussig? He was on the ship."

"Sure," Pete said cheerfully. He kept from looking at her. "I know all about him. He's an internationally known sanitary engineer. He's dining with the General on Friday, and the Governor Saturday. Why?"

"I just wondered. Do you suppose he can do anything about the water supply at the Granadita?"

"I wish he'd start here, if he can. But you don't have to worry about Mr. Taussig. He can't help his face. He's Okay."

He poured the rest of his beer into his glass.

"Any other information? Public Relations is sort of my job."

"Then do you happen to know Russell Porter?" Annel asked.

"My dear, I know everything," Pete said blandly. "Russell Porter is the local representative of Consolidated. He's in charge of a big job they've got."

He looked at his watch. The officers had thinned out, leaving the women sitting around. "I'll see you tonight. What about dinner?"

Annel shook her head. "I'm dining with somebody else."

"Not Miguel Valera?"

She smiled. "Why not? Don't tell me you're like Sue Porter?"

He looked at her soberly.

"Look, Annie, you haven't fallen in love with that guy, have you?"

Her gaze wandered out across the rolling green lawn to the ocean. She had asked herself that all the way from the Granadita. The note she'd found in her mail box—"You have a caller, so I won't disturb you, but I'll be around at six and if you aren't engaged may I take you to dinner?"—had set her heart dancing and her eyes sparkling as she stuffed it into her bag and ran out to the taxi. Maybe that was what it was. She hadn't been in love often enough to be very sure about it. But it was something—something new and different.

Miguel Valera waited for Anne to sit down. It hadn't occurred to her that they wouldn't have dinner alone, or that she could be suddenly dashed as she was when she stepped out of the elevator and saw his uncle Diego Gongaro and his cousin Graciela there in the lobby with him.

"I understand you are a newspaper writer, Miss Heywood," Don Diego said. His smile was quick and warm.

Anne was instantly aware of two things. The first was that he thought it amusing that such an attractive young woman should be anything of the sort. The second was that it was odd he should have known it. She had carefully concealed it from Miguel. Pete Wilcox was the only other person on the island who knew it. Unless . . . She thought about the letters in her suitcase. There was one to the correspondent of the press syndicate her father's papers used in Puerto Rico. And that meant that Diego Gongaro must have talked to Richard Taussig during the afternoon—and that they'd talked about her. It was all very curious.

"I've worked on my father's paper, if that's what you mean," she said. "I wasn't much good."

"I am pleased to hear that, Senorita. We believe a woman has a higher place in society. She should let her husband take care of her."

"But if she hasn't a husband?" Annel said.

"That surely wouldn't be difficult for you, Miss Heywood."

Graciela put her untasted cocktail on the table. Her cheeks were flushed.

At no time would Anne ever have believed that the appearance of Mr. Richard Taussig could effect anything but disaster. Just then she was distinctly relieved. She actually found herself smiling and saying "Good evening" with the utmost cordiality to the man she objected to more than any other man she knew.

"Good evening, Miss Heywood," Mr. Taussig said. He turned to Miguel. "You must be delighted to be back home again. It's so perfect here."

Annel found herself blinking a little. Mr. Taussig, dressed in immaculate white linen, was as courteous as Don Diego himself.

"This is my uncle, Mr. Gongaro—Mr. Taussig," Miguel said.

They shook hands. "This is a great pleasure, Mr. Gongaro," Mr. Taussig said. There was nothing to indicate that they had ever seen or heard of each other before.

It was the same when they all went into dinner together. Only once did she have the quick sense of fear that she'd had the afternoon in the ship's library. That was when Mr. Taussig started to put his green guide book on the floor beside his chair. She held out her hand, not because she wanted to see it but because it was something they could talk about that perhaps Graciela could talk about too. She hadn't said a word since he came. Annel tried to analyze what had happened just then. What he said was, "Now, now, Miss Heywood, this is my book." It was bland and playful, but there had been something else in it.

Mr. Taussig put the book down on the other side of his chair. "Of course when the bases here are finished, I imagine your unemployment problem will be bad," he said. "I understand the five-hundred-acre law will work an additional hardship on your father, Mr. Valera?"

"My father is not a corporation, fortunately," Miguel Valera said.

It was the longest meal Anne ever sat through. If her own voice had been a victrola record and her smile on a motion-picture screen across the room they couldn't have been more detached from her. It seemed hours before the coconut sherbet served in polished half coconut shells came and went and they had coffee. At least, she thought as they finally got up to go, she was sure of a number of things she hadn't been sure of before. One was that Miguel had asked her to dinner just because he was Latin and polite to visiting firemen. Another was that Graciela was not bright enough to realize that, or to realize that her open resentment of Anne was stupid. Or maybe it wasn't. Maybe Latins liked their women to be jealous.

But chiefly she knew that she was either stark raving mad or that Richard Taussig was something profoundly different from what they all thought he was.

By Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

"I'll get into an argument with Gene Tunney or anybody else who says that football has no training advantage in the armed forces."

The speaker was Lieut. Tom Harmon, former Michigan All-American halfback recently recuperated from burns suffered when he bailed out of his blazing plane in China last October.

Harmon isn't exactly soft-spoken in speaking of the value of athletics to the armed services. His feelings are positive. In a recent interview he expressed himself quite forcibly on the subject:

"Speaking merely as a former football player, I want to say that American pilots excel Axis fliers because they are better competitors, and the reason is that they have played organized sports since they were kids."

He asserted that American pilots have a "tremendous advantage" in aerial battles—"they don't like to lose, and when somebody is throwing lead at you, it makes a big difference."

"When I walked out of the jungles last spring and got back from that raid in China last fall, my football training really counted. I don't think I could have made it either time without that advantage."

"That advantage" is an important one. Two men may be similar in strength, intelligence, weight and the other factors which influence the survival of the fittest. But if only one of the men has had athletic training, nine out of ten times he's the man who comes through with flying colors in an emergency.

Outlook Divided Regarding Baseball

More than one major league club owner, with an unparalleled number of private problems, is distinctly pessimistic over the 1944 outlook for big league baseball.

Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, probably voiced a minority opinion when he expressed serious doubt about baseball's chances of operating during the coming season. In the gloomiest statement made to date by any major league executive he said: "The way players are being taken by the draft, it does seem questionable whether we will have enough left to start the season."

The Cardinal prey said he considered 10 players—eight pitchers, two catchers, five infielders and four outfielders—the absolute minimum with which a club could go through the season.

Checking over his available material, Breadon discovered that he did not have 10 men he could depend on definitely to start the race in April.

Dual Problem

Dewitt stated that "there's a dual problem not only of having enough players but of having players of major league caliber. After all, we can't put a municipal league team on the field."

Peckinpaugh agreed with Breadon's estimate of a 10-man minimum, adding: "Right now we have—or think we have—at least that many, but what we'll have two weeks from now is problematical. We're all in the same boat, at least."

Personally, he would have very little sympathy for any club that threw in the towel at this early date. Fear of the future seems to dictate too many decisions.

It is not unreasonable to believe that the public will lose confidence in baseball if it isn't sound enough to last through a crisis.

Along with that loss of confidence would come a loss of interest. Just one season without baseball and the game would lose some of its standing as the all-American game.

No matter how many men there are on the roster next year, and no matter how ancient or decrepit they are, each major league club should operate next year—unless, of course, the government should order otherwise.

Dwarf Fruit Trees Suited to Gardens

Smaller Plants Produce More; Easy to Handle

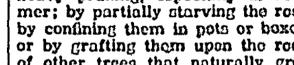

While dwarfing of fruit trees is a common practice in Europe, there has been comparatively little interest in this practice in this country, says W. L. Howard, a University of California professor of pomology. In "Home Fruit Growing in California" he outlines the advantages of this method of cultivation in small orchards and home gardens.

Europeans, he says, have perfected special methods of training known as espallier and cordon, with numerous variations, which cause the trees to be smaller than normal. Climatic conditions of western and southern Europe are very well adapted to fruit growing, and the people as a whole are far more garden-minded than we are. Since, however, land is scarce and the average citizen with a tiny garden wants to grow as many things as possible, dwarf fruit trees seem to have been the answer.

Small Deciduous Trees.

Most if not all of our deciduous trees are reduced below their normal size in three general ways: by heavy pruning, especially in summer; by partially starving the roots by confining them in pots or boxes; or by grafting them upon the roots of other trees that naturally grow more slowly or remain smaller. The use of dwarf or partially dwarfing stocks is the method chiefly employed both here and abroad, although careful pruning is important in holding down excessive wood growth and in keeping dwarfed trees both small and fruitful.

Although pears are commonly grown as dwarfs in this country, dwarf apples are seldom seen. In Europe peach trees are reduced in size in order to adapt them to cold foggy climates by growing them against walls or under glass. The small need for such special-purpose trees in this country accounts for their scarcity.

Dwarfing a tree is popularly supposed to shorten its life. This is not necessarily true, although in practice dwarf trees are often permitted to overbear and consequently do not live so long as they might otherwise do. Under expert management such an English and French gardeners give their trees, dwarf pears, for example, may live to an age of 75 years.

Dwarf Apples.

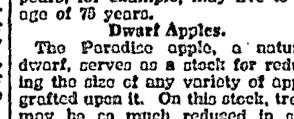

The Paradise apple, a natural dwarf, serves as a stock for reducing the size of any variety of apple grafted upon it. On this stock, trees may be so much reduced in size that they can be grown in 10- or 12-inch flower pots. If planted in the ground they will range in height from three to six feet, the height depending upon the variety. The training they receive—that is, the kind of pruning—has much to do with their size. The Doucin apple is a natural half-dwarf. Varieties grafted upon that root attain about half their normal size.

Dwarf apples are trained to various shapes. The young trees are often set two or three feet apart and made fast to a three-circle trellis for no particular purpose except the ornamental effect they give. They are generally tilted over at an angle of about 65 degrees and kept pruned to a system of spurs. They will begin bearing the second year. This is a favorite method of training in the English fruit gardens, but the trees require much detailed attention. It would be safer for the amateur to set them about four feet apart.

Dwarf apple trees usually bear too heavily but, if judiciously thinned, will produce larger fruit than the same variety does on standard roots. Even with only fair treatment, dwarf apples should live for 25 years, provided they are kept fertilized, are properly pruned, and are not allowed to overbear—the last being the most important. Under ideal conditions they will live much longer.

"I WAS CONSTIPATED FOR MANY YEARS!"

Now I'm 'Regular' Every Morning!

Constipated? Then here's an unsolicited letter you'll want to read:

"I'd been troubled with constipation for many years. Was taking laxatives and pills all the time and feeling very weak and run down. A month ago I began taking KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily. Now I have a regular natural movement every morning which helps me feel my best." Mr. Samuel D. Clark, 212 Kings Highway, Brooklyn, New York.

What is this compelling magic of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN? It's the natural way to become "regular" because KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN contains a really "got at" common cause of constipation—namely, lack of sufficient "cellulose" elements in the diet. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements, which help the friendly colonic flora stir up and prepare the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative! Doesn't work by "sweeping out." It's a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If you have constipation of this type, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN or several ALL-BRAN muffins regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find lasting relief! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Save Tin Cans

A plea to housewives to continue preparation and salvage of tin cans in areas where tin can campaigns are authorized by the War Production Board was made today by the regional WPB conservation manager.

Even the tin can collection in some areas isn't exactly what it should be, the urgent war need for the super-critical tin contained in cans has not diminished in the slightest.

The need for tin is greater than ever. Our job now is to perfect collection methods and to salvage every can possible.

Housewives are urged to continue to observe these simple rules: Open both ends of the can. Wash thoroughly. Remove paper labels. Flatten the can merely by stepping on it. Deposit in a separate box or container for collection.
