NUMBER 32

Mr. A. H. Kudner

The people of Carrizozo and Lincoln County were shocked and grieved beyond expression at the untimely death of A. H. Kudner which occurred in Los Angeles, California hospital on the 18th of February, 1944. For about twenty years, Mr. Kudner had been coming to his O--O Ranch, seven miles from Carrizozo to spend his brief summer vacations. He became extremely popular here and his beautiful O Bar O ranch became one of the show places of the county. When Mr. Kudner and his family were here, the place was the scene of an annual picnic which was attended from all over the state. Too much cannot be said in praise of Mr. Kudner. He had ability, generosity, a keen mind, and a knack for making friends.

Mr. Kudner was born at Lapeer, Michigan, December 7th, 1890.

He was graduated from the Lapeer High School, after which he was employed on his father's newspaper; later he became a reporter on the Detroit Free Press; after going to New York he was reporter for the New York World. He became interested in advertising in a professional way, and was employed by several of the larger advertising companies. In 1915 he organized his own agency and was successful from the start, mainly because his ads were appealing and full of "pop". He was president of the Arthur Kudner Advertising Agency, Inc. He wrote successful ads for the Red Cross and for the Liberty Loan drives of former years. Like other young men of 1918 he served in the United States Army. He was nationally known in the advertising field, and in 1929 was awarded the Harvard prize for the best written advertisement. He was also a magazine writer and contributed articles to the Atlantic Monthly and other magazines. Mr. Kudner was chairman of the board of the American Association of Advertising Agencies in 1934. He had many enterprises, all successful. He was the author and finisher of many of the attractive advertising schedules of the Buick Company of Detroit.

Mr. Kudner had been at Palm Springs, California for a few days rest. Upon his return to Los Angeles, his heart was affected; after entering the hospital pneumonia developed and he was unable to overcome the two maladies. He lived in Maryland and his business offices were in New York.

Mr. Kudner was devoted to the great Southwest—a lover of the country and its people. He will be missed by thousands of Southwesterners who were all personal friends. His survivors are his widow, Mrs. A. H. Kudner, a daughter, Karyl and a son Arthur. Funeral services were held in the Chapel of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City, after which his remains will be cremated and his ashes brought to the picturesque O--O Ranch for interment. Pall bearers who are known here were Mr. Harlow H. Curtice general manager of Buick motor division and Mr. Quentin Reynolds, author.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Montes of Hondo, Feb. 21, 1944, a daughter, Alberta Jane Montes. The baby is the granddaughter of the new jailer, Mr. G. Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hutchinson and baby are here visiting their parents.

"WE Pledge Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all."

Dan Conley, Jr., Coxswain U S N, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Conley of Carrizozo, returned home on furlough after 7 months in Naval hospitals. Young Dan, veteran of Guadalcanal, Rendova and Munda battles, was the only survivor of his boat, being rescued off Munda on the 4th of July last. He has been assigned to Shore Duty in San Francisco.

Corpus Christi, Texas, Feb. 18. Fenner Davis Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Jones of Corona, N. M., graduated today from the Naval Air Training Center and was commissioned an ensign in the U. S. Naval Reserve. He is a former student of Eastern New Mexico College, Portales.

Privates Joe Beltran of Lincoln, Benny Garcia and Fermin Montoya of Carrizozo were home on furlough this week.

Cottage Cafe

Will open for business Tuesday, Feb. 28. Rooms for rent. Mrs. McKibben

A Request

Would like the cooperation of the public in helping to keep clean windshields by removing all stickers from the windshield except the brake and light stickers and the federal stamps.

There will be a N. M. State Patrolman in vicinity checking motorists for drivers licenses, brake and light stickers and the 1944 license plates.

Please dim your lights at night on meeting approaching traffic and if they are already dimmed please signal so as to acknowledge other motorists signals.

Alfred M. Dow, Patrolman. Note—I will be in Carrizozo every Monday and will be glad to help in any way possible.

Dinner-Dance

Last Friday the 18th the Stitch and Chatter Club entertained sixty guests at the Community Center Building with an 8 o'clock Dinner-Dance. Of the sixty guests present, seven were soldiers stationed at Tularosa. All the ladies were beautifully attired in evening gowns, each was presented with Taliaman Roses and gentlemen had white Carnation buttonniera. The center piece on the punch bowl table consisted of red carnations surrounded by ferns, while the center piece on the serving table was a lovely mixed bouquet. After a most delectable dinner, everyone danced to music from a Nickelodeon. Every one reports a delightful evening.

Miss Elizabeth Jordan is now employed at the telephone office.

Wm. Kimbrell of Piecho was in town last Friday. Mr. Kimbrell was formerly tax assessor of Lincoln county.

Mrs. Shirley Phipps arrived home Tuesday night from Clovis where she has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Pierce Humble.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greer are going to move back to Carrizozo before long. Fred, who was stationed at Norman, Oklahoma has been discharged from the army.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoffman had a regular family re-union at their home here Thursday. Present were Lieut. and Mrs. Harold Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Jones, Mr. and Mrs. James Duncan and children Mr. Jones has been inducted into the army as Mrs. Jones, nee Dorothy Hoffman, will remain with her parents while he is in the service. After a 15-day furlough Lt. Hoffman will report at Topeka, Kansas for duty.

Woman's Club Held Interesting Meeting

The Carrizozo Woman's Club met Feb. 8th at Community Center, with Pres. Mrs. Zumwalt presiding. One verse of America the Beautiful was sung, with Mrs. Burns at piano. Salute to the Flag was given. Mrs. Radcliff as House and Home chairman, gave out government bulletins, on home methods of stain removal from fabrics. Mrs. Gallacher reported the chili dinner had cleared $35.

A committee was appointed, Mrs. Nicholas, Miss White and Mrs. Jane La Rue to investigate costs of water and labor for beautifying grounds with trees and shrubs around the Center building.

Mrs. Hall had charge of the program "White Oaks." Two songs were sung by assembly, "Long, Long Ago" and "Auld Lang Syne" with Miss White leading and Mrs. Burns at piano.

The program in form of a news paper with Mrs. Mary Johnson as editor. She had an interesting paper on White Oaks, taken from magazines and papers. One item, that White Oaks was certain, either the Santa Fe R. R. or Denver and Rio Grande would go through the town. Another item was that coal was being hauled from the mines by teams to town of White Oaks, about 6 miles, for $1 40 a ton. Mrs. Lemon as society editor, told of reception and dance in 1891, for Mr. Albert Ziegler and his bride. White Oaks was 100 miles from the R. R.

Mmes Stimmel and Smoot had a paper personal items, from 1894 1899, 1902, 1906 Also a letter read, written in 1916, from Dr. Paden to Ben Stimmel, who had moved to Oregon.

Mrs. Hall read ads from local paper of 1890, telling about hotel and church.

Hootones Mrs. Davis and Miss White served sandwiches and coffee.

Mrs. B. S. Burns, Reporter.

First In The Heart Of Washington

There were a lot of "firsts" attributed to Washington, but in the heart of this great patriot there was only one first: his country—our country. While we are fighting for what he founded, let's put personal ambitions behind us and make this country our first thought, too.

THROW AWAY HARSH LAXATIVES!

Millions Have Ended Constipation with Simple Fresh Fruit Drink

Don't form the habit of depending on harsh, gripping laxatives until you've tried this easy, healthful way millions now use to keep regular.

It's fresh lemon juice and water taken first thing in the morning—just as soon as you get up. The juice of one Sunkist Lemon in a glass of water. Taken thus, on an empty stomach, it stimulates normal bowel action, day after day, for most people.

And lemons are actively good for you. They're among the richest sources of Vitamin C, which combats fatigue, helps resist colds and infections. They supply vitamins B<sub>1</sub> and P, aid digestion and help alkalize the system.

Try this grand wake-up drink 10 mornings. See if it doesn't help you! Use California Sunkist Lemons.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Sash Curtains That Have Long Tradition

WHEN we think of the type of curtains used in Early Colonial cottages, crisp frills and ruffles usually come to mind. It is true that ruffled curtains were used in Colonial times but the curtains of the first homes in the New World were of the casement or sash variety. We must remember that as late as the discovery of America glass windows were rare. They were of the casement type with tiny

Diamond-shaped pieces held together with lead. Simple straight curtains to keep out the glare and give privacy were the next logical development.

Frills and larger panes of glass came later but sash curtains were also used with these new windows. They are also being used with good effect today for rooms where an informal atmosphere is needed.

NOTE—This is the first of a series on modern adaptations of period curtain fashions. There is another interesting treatment of a sash-curtained window in BOOK 2, and the method of fitting casement draw curtains is illustrated in BOOK 4 of the series of 10 booklets on sewing for the home. SIMPLIFIED TAX FORMS ARE REALLY NEEDED

THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS when the farmer figured his profits or his loss by what cash, if any, he had left at the end of a year are no more. His Uncle Samuel demands an accounting that means double entry bookkeeping and then some.

He can eat the eggs the farm fowls provide and make no return on them but should Mrs. Farmer exchange some of those eggs for groceries the cash value of such groceries must be accounted for as a part of the taxable income.

These indicate but a few of the many items in the accounting system the farmer must operate if he is to comply with the demands of Uncle Sam and keep out of serious trouble. His problems are even greater, if that is possible, than those of the manufacturing industrialist.

The fact is income tax reporting for all classes of citizens has reached an impossible point. Just how impossible is illustrated by a 62-page explanatory book the treasury has issued.

The tax problem can be, and must be, simplified if the citizen of any class or in any line is to be expected to comply, and pay his or her share. Under the present setup, as defined by the treasury department, it will cost the average taxpayer more to supply the information the government demands than the value of the tax he pays, without considering the headaches. The fines that can, and may, be imposed for a violation of the unexplainable rules can amount to more than the total tax collected.

Our own sports program is the biggest of its kind in the world. But it isn't a regimented thing, designed to fit a people for battle.

Our own sports program is the biggest of its kind in the world. But it isn't a regimented thing, designed to fit a people for battle.

Those words come from a man, who, in his own words, is indebted to the game of baseball. He played sand-lot ball, the collegiate variety, and professional ball.

NO INDIVIDUAL, group, class or party in America has a monopoly on the desire and intention to win the war. Even the most rock-ribbed isolationist proposes to see that job to a finish.

COMPARING OUR LOT with those who have more rather than with those who have less, makes for discontent and unhappiness.

Speaking of Sports by Bob McShone. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

BASEBALL, and organized sports in general, have an able, eloquent friend in Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois.

Speaking before the annual dinner of the Baseball Writers Association in New York, Senator Lucas did an excellent job in stressing the value of sports as a morale builder in wartime.

Among other things, he said: "Baseball's record since Pearl Harbor will go down into history as a great achievement. The players, managers and owners have made contributions in many ways.

You will recall what happened at the Olympic Games in Berlin just before this war. Hitler's unsportsmanlike manner was on display before a world audience.

Sash Curtains That Have Long Tradition

WHEN we think of the type of curtains used in Early Colonial cottages, crisp folds and ruffles usually come to mind. It is true that ruffled curtains were used in Colonial times but the curtains of the first homes in the New World were of the casement or sash variety. We must remember that as late as the discovery of America glass windows were rare. They were of the casement type with tiny

Diamond-shaped pieces held together with lead. Simple straight curtains to keep out the glare and give privacy were the next logical development.

Folds and larger panes of glass came later but each curtain was also used with these new windows. They are also being used with good effect today for rooms where an informal atmosphere is needed.

NOTE—This is the first of a series on modern adaptations of period curtain fashions. There is another interesting treatment of a sash-curtained window in EBOOK 12 and the method of fitting casement draw curtains is illustrated in EBOOK 13 of the series of 10 booklets on sewing for the home. SIMPLIFIED TAX FORMS ARE REALLY NEEDED

THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS when the farmer figured his profits or his loss by what cash, if any, he had left at the end of a year are no more. His Uncle Samuel demands an accounting that means double entry bookkeeping and then some. Such a bookkeeping system as but few trained accountants could operate. He must know the cash value of the corn he raised and fed to the hogs; the cash value of the food he raised and fed to the harvest hands. He must separate the gasoline he used for farm work from that used in taking the family to the movies, to church or for any other family convenience. He can deduct from his taxable income the cost of repairs on such part of the family residence as is used for farm purposes but not on any portion used as a residence for his family.

He can eat the eggs the farm fowls provide and make no return on them but should Mrs. Farmer exchange some of those eggs for groceries the cash value of such groceries must be accounted for as a part of the taxable income.

These indicate but a few of the many items in the accounting system the farmer must operate if he is to comply with the demands of Uncle Sam and keep out of serious trouble. His problems are even greater, if that is possible, than those of the manufacturing industrialist. He must differentiate between what he and his family consume and what he provides for the preacher when the reverend gentleman drops in for a meal. It is all cooked in the same pot but one portion is deductible and the other is not.

The fact is income tax reporting for all classes of citizens has reached an impossible point. Just how impossible is illustrated by a 62-page explanatory book the treasury has issued. In an effort to tell his citizens and nephews just what they must do if they are to avoid a serious chastisement our Uncle has used some 50,000 words, and when you have read it all, if you ever do, you will be more confused than before you made an effort to understand.

The tax problem can be, and must be, simplified if the citizen of any class or in any line is to be expected to comply and pay his or her share. Under the present setup, as defined by the treasury department, it will cost the average taxpayer more to supply the information the government demands than the value of the tax he pays, without considering the headaches. The lines that can, and may, be imposed for a violation of the unexplainable rules can amount to more than the total tax collected. A bit of horse-sense simplicity is greatly needed.

ENGLAND'S PROPAGANDA IS EFFECTIVE

OLD ENGLAND is a clever and effective operator in the realm of propaganda. I do not condemn her methods or the results. I admire them and wish we, as a nation, could do as good a job. During World War I she invited to visit Europe as her guests several selected groups of newspaper, magazine, periodical and trade press editors. I had a first-hand view of the methods. To each and all of these editors was shown and told all of England's war efforts, the good and the bad. Quite naturally the good predominated. No favors were asked of anyone in any group. There was no intimation that publicity of any kind was desired. Through these visits the entire staffs of every publication represented were influenced and through them public sentiment for England was, and is still being, created. That sentiment is the foundation on which is built the respect, confidence and cooperation of the people of the two nations. A condition that makes for the good of civilization generally. England's clever and broad policies of propaganda and her methods of applying them result in a betterment for all the civilized world, including England. She is not afraid of the truth. What she does with words and deeds we attempt to do with dollars. In such a contest we play a second part.

SOME YEARS AGO A CONCERN that operated a number of branches suddenly changed hands. The manager of one of these branches writing to another of the branch managers, used the phrase: "It is good-by to comfort now." The man who wrote that was looking for an easy way of living, not for an opportunity for building success. When last heard from he was driving a coal truck.

NO INDIVIDUAL, group, class or party in America has a monopoly on the desire and intention to win the war. Even the most rock-ribbed isolationist proposes to see that job to a finish. There might be an argument as to the methods or cost of winning, or under what leadership, but there is no argument as to the intended result.

COMPARING OUR LOT with those who have more rather than those who have less, makes for discontent and unhappiness.

Speaking Sports by Bob McShane. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

BASEBALL, and organized sports in general, have an able, eloquent friend in Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois.

Speaking before the annual dinner of the Baseball Writers association in New York, Senator Lucas did an excellent job in stressing the value of sports as a morale builder in wartime. In fact, no person directly connected with baseball would have been able to make the same kind of a speech. It would have been a trifle too fulsome.

Scott Lucas

Among other things, he said: "Baseball record since Pearl Harbor will go down into history as a great achievement. The players, managers and owners have made contributions in many ways. The tremendous assistance given in bond sales is only one of the many ways in which baseball and its fans have patriotically responded. Our boys on the battle fronts throughout the world keep in close touch with the game, the players and the World Series. Like letters from home, baseball is indeed a morale builder."

Olympic Games

You will recall what happened at the Olympic Games in Berlin just before this war. Hitler's sportsmanlike manner was on display before a world audience. His Aryan supremacy illusion was shown for what it really is—simply a myth. If his deranged mentality and these other subhuman minds of the Nazi leaders could have understood the meaning of Hitler's behaviour and the defeat of the supremacy mania, as shown on the sports field, we might not today be engaged in war. The sports field might have foretold the German people their fate if they followed their deluded Fuehrer.

Baseball and football never managed to make much headway in the Yaterland. There is probably a good reason—from the Nazi viewpoint. The Germans are great believers in calisthenics, to the exclusion of other body building measures. Those calisthenics seemed to fit the self-styled master race to its own brand of goosestepping. And the Germans goosestepped into war.

Our own sports program is the biggest of its kind in the world. But it isn't a regimented thing, designed to fit a people for battle. Sports in America have been on a voluntary basis, with the love of competition and a natural desire for physical fitness the strongest motivating factors. We do not play golf, baseball, tennis, or any other sport with the idea of building ourselves into supermen. We merely enjoy sports and want to feel physically fit.

Nazi Creed

That isn't the Nazi's creed. Physical fitness to them is a means to a definite end. That end is the conquering and subjugation of other races.

The football fields of America do not know an aristocracy. The names on team rosters are ample evidence of democracy.

A vocal few wanted to abolish all sports immediately after the declaration of war. Here is Senator Lucas answer to them:

"As an American who loves the game of baseball, I sincerely believe in the patriotic purpose of sports in this great emergency. The players, the managers and the fans can be grateful and proud of the war record of all sports. My hope is that we in America can continue to show the rest of the world that we take our sportsmanship into every part of American life. The test of this war has been our fine national cooperation. . . . We had no 29 years in which to prepare! It is simply the American spirit of cooperation and the will to give and take which is bringing us success."

These words come from a man, who, in his own words, is indebted to the game of baseball. He played sand-lot ball, the collegiate variety, and professional ball. He was in the pro ranks for three years and the money he made helped him earn a law school degree.

In the Senate last November Senator Lucas presented facts and figures to show that professional baseball is essential in wartime to maintain public morale.

It is obvious that all types of sports are benefiting from the support given them by an interested observer and former participant.

SPORTS SHORTS

Brud Holland, All-American end at Cornell, is coaching a shipyard's basketball team in Chester, Pa.

The war department says more than 630,000 soldiers saw Sgt. Joe Louis in action on his recent camp exhibition tour.

Minnesota's hockey team drew 12,822 spectators in the first six games this season. Last year the team drew 11,535 in eight games.

The Magic Lanterns: Tallulah Bankhead, whose cinema career was wrecked a decade ago with cheery stories, didn't make that blunder again. She comes back in "Lifeboat," fashioned by John Steinbeck and directed by the mighty Hitchcock. It's a highly set-worthwhile vehicle. Its story deals with the adventures of nine in a boat through the courtesy of a Nazi sub. A Nazi gets aboard the boat, and from then on, in Steinbeck's devastating dialogue, you get a swell look at a rat. Tallulah gives her role plenty of vigor, and there are good jobs by Wynne Burdick, Gwen Anderson and Henry Hull. "Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman" puts Basil Rathbone to work at his silky gumshoeing. He prowls around to discover that all those suicides aren't what they're cracked up to be. "Of These I Sing" is to be filmed, probably hopeful of getting a free ride on the Presidential campaign.

I Remember It! Bob Dunn wonders if you ever heard about the late Jim Thornton, the vaudeville star, when he was teamed with Gentleman Jim Corbett. Mr. Thornton was an elbow-bender, and whenever he went on a spree, the act was cancelled. It happened at the Palace Theatre.

Corbett went, looking for his partner and located him in a saloon with a terrible looking bum. Corbett bawled him out and refused to give him money for one more drink. To which Thornton, in regal tones, said to the bum: "Mr. Russell, this is Mr. Corbett. Throw a louse on him!"

Mail This to Someone: We saw it in Coronet. It should be handed to people who cash in their War Bonds. A man scheduled for induction the next day decided, before going to sleep, to cash in his Bond the next a. m.

That night he dreamt he was in a fox-hole fighting Japs. One Jap charged at him with a bayonet. Fighting his own rifle, our hero was about to save himself by pulling the trigger, when his sergeant tapped him on the shoulder and said, "Sorry, but the man who paid for your rifle wants it back."

The Morning Mail: "Dear Walter," writes Maurice Rocco, "It must be an alibi, but it still gets the biggest laugh wherever gamblers gather. About the wife who going through her green's pockets found a slip of paper on which was memo'd 'Ruth.' She asked him: 'What's this mean?'" "Oh," he said, "that's a horse I played today." Then the phone rang. She picked up the receiver. "Darling," said the Mrs., "your horse wants to talk to you."

Behind the Scenes: Greta Bennett, a New York opera critic, spends spare hours at the movies. In one film revival she saw a actor listed as "Alexander Brown." Greta cracked her menary to place a familiar name on the unknown player. Then a close-up showed the trouper had oddly scarred thumbs. It was Richard Bennett, in a meager role, who disguised himself in two critics' names, Woolcott and Brown. Miss Bennett, you see, was Richard Bennett's first wife. She remembered a boyhood accident that nearly cost him his hands.

The morning after movie director Edmund Goulding first visited Hollywood (many years ago), he was awakened by his host's valet, who stood by the bed offering him a small golden bowl filled with a clear liquid. Only half awake, Goulding stared at the bowl. Was it a finger bowl? Surely not at this hour. Was it something to drink? He finally decided to ask the valet. "What the devil is this, anyhow?" "The temperature of your bath," intoned the lackey. "Will you kindly let me know if it is satisfactory, sir?"

Big City Vignette: Two 12-year-old boys were enthused about the new record-chewing their taffy and otherwise being kids—at a movie theater last week. . . . Then came Greer Garson's short-appealing for infantile Paralysis contributors. . . . The house lights went up, and the ladies with the coin boxes passed them. . . . Probably thinking children had no money, a box-passer skipped the two boys. . . . One got up and chased her several rows back before he could catch her. "Here lady," he kept calling, "lady, here!" . . . Limping on his braced leg to give his little bit—so that some other youngster—not so fortunate as he—could go to a movie and giggle and munch candy and also give.

Thumbnail Picture: Raymond Paige read it long ago. About the diplomat from Europe, who after witnessing Congress in action the first time, observed: "Congress is strange. A man gets up to speak and says nothing. Nobody listens and then all disengage."

Hitchcock: Lee Shubert, the theater magnate, was complaining of a sore throat. "That's what you get," scolded a wag, "for counting your money out loud."

The Collector said that, in accordance with this policy, salary stabilization forms, application blanks, payroll forms and other literature will be available in Room 103, in the office in the Federal Building in Albuquerque. The service is intended to save business men the trouble of correspondence or traveling to obtain forms and general information regarding salary stabilization regulations.

Save Deer Skins for War

The State Game Department today issued attention of all big game hunters to the fact that deer and elk hides are urgently needed for military use. General Conservation Order M-310 of the War Production Board froze all deer skin leather for military purposes.

Hunters are urged to channel their deer skins into the trade so that they may be processed and used for the armed forces. State Game Warden Elliott Barker said, "In New Mexico, dry skins of deer and elk may be sold. Practically all hide buyers will accept your deer skin, and it will then be made available for war material. Turn it in to your local dealer."

Ration Book No. 4
The red and blue stamps, which are for meat, dairy products and processed foods as at present, will be used in conjunction with red and blue tokens, the latter to be introduced early in 1944, and given by merchants in change. Green stamps will be used on an "interim basis," with blue processed food stamps, in much the same manner as the brown stamps in Book 3 are being used this month in the meat-fat program.

Twelve of the 96 unit stamps, printed in black, are designated for sugar. An equal number are marked for coffee, which is no longer rationed. These and 72 others, marked "spares," will serve for any additional foods rationed, the OPA declared, its purpose being to provide for any contingency, since the new books are expected to serve for two years, as compared to 4 or 5 months for previous books. The cost of printing is about the same, around $1,500,000, it was stated.

"TOURISTS" in our western wonderland

Southern Pacific is host to thousands of men in uniform now "visiting" the West for the first time.

Some had never been aboard a train till war came. Many had never been away from their home city or village.

These bright, sturdy youngsters with faces pressed against our train windows—what do they think of our western country? Will they want to travel here again after the war when they can do as they please?

NOW THESE YOUNG MEN are riding along the bayous and cypress glades of Louisiana and across the great sweep of Texas and Arizona on our Sunset route...

Or down through the Midwest and along the old Long Horn Trail on our Golden State route from Chicago to El Paso... across the colorful Southwest with its buttes and mesas.

Or on our Overland route they follow the historic path of the Forty-Niners over the High Sierra and down through the old gold workings to San Francisco. Or climb the Cascades and the Siakiyous on our Shasta route, past lakes and forests of the Pacific Northwest. They are seeing new horizons of America.

AMONG THOSE WHO KNOW these wartime tourists best are our "train riders"—the S. P. passenger representatives who act as liaison officers between the military and the railroad. The train riders tell us these boys are absorbed in what they see.

"Gee, what a big country!"... "Think I'll come back some day and fish that stream!"... "What crops do they raise here?"... "Swell country, huh? I sure would like to look around out here again when this is over!"... "My, this is a pretty place"—and then with constant loyalty and some wistfulness—"but you ought to see my home town!"

Yes, we think a good proportion of these service men now sampling the West will come back as peacetime travelers. Then they'll see Yosemite and Lake Tahoe, Carlsbad Caverns, our giant Redwoods, Crater Lake, and other attractions.

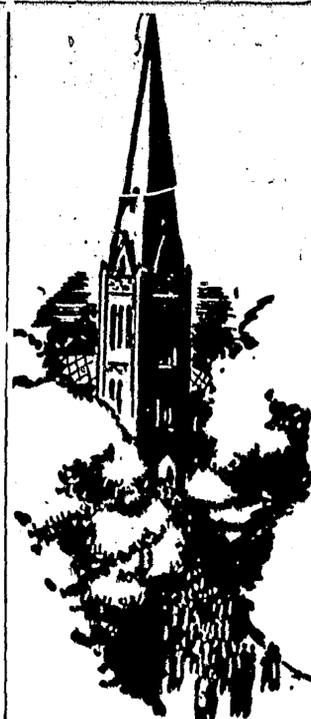

WHAT THESE TRAVELERS THINK and feel interests us as railroaders, as westerners, and as fathers with sons of our own in the service. Right now we of the railroad are doing our best to handle a very heavy traffic load, to keep the war trains rolling, and to provide our passengers in uniform with the best transportation possible during wartime.

Until this war is won it's up to each of us to give our armed forces the kind of backing that will assure the greatest number coming back safely!

We look forward to the day when we can serve these men again, and in better fashion. After the war we will be able to provide service not only better than the wartime variety, but service improved beyond any previous peacetime standards.

Protein Livestock Feed Paddy Needed

Albuquerque, Jan. 18 Declaring that the heavy snowstorm last week generally over northern New Mexico was the last storm most cattle in northern New Mexico could stand with at heavy death loss in cattle and next year calves, E. G. Hayward, President of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association today stated that unless immediate relief was sent the state in the way of more protein livestock feed that thousands of cattle and next year's calves would be lost in northern New Mexico in the next month.

"As New Mexico produces only 11 percent of the supplemental livestock feed ordinarily used on our ranges, and since we have not received as much as 15 percent of the amount usually received from other feed raising states, the point has been reached where the government should requisition from crushing mills and fairly distribute the available protein cake in the most critical areas of New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma, Hayward said. "Unless this is done, New Mexico has no chance whatever of securing adequate amounts of feed to carry cattle through the winter months."

"At present the government is distributing 50 percent of the available soybean cake and 20 percent of the cottonseed cake, but a fair share of the remaining portion of the soybean and cottonseed cake which is now distributed by dealers and mills is not coming into New Mexico, Hayward said.

Air Engineers Get There First

By Robert McCormick

Aviation engineers in Italy are apparently just good little gremlins, scooting hither and thither, building airports where no airports should ever be built, and building them just at the time somebody needs them.

The men and equipment responsible for making the Salerno airdrome a decisive factor in the Italian landing were our aviation engineers, one of the least publicized units of the army air force, yet one of the basic influences in every victory we've won so far in the Mediterranean.

Aviation engineers, riding their bulldozers, go right in amongst the bullets, into the front lines, or ahead of them. Their main jobs are to build new airports in conquered territory, as they did exceedingly well in Tunisia, and to repair captured airports, as they did so nobly in Sicily.

The big boss of the Aviation Engineers is Brig. Gen. Stuart C. Godfrey, a wiry little person who looks, acts and talks just the way you'd like to think all our generals do. General Godfrey describes himself simply as "General Arnold's engineer," but he is likely to end up the most important engineer in modern history. His title is Air Engineer, Army Air Force.

As a sample of how Godfrey's men work, there is the story of how they built five airports in three days near Ghebla, in North Africa.

Brig. Gen. Donald Davison, engineer commander in those parts, was looking for one of his companies. He started through a sector occupied by an American armored division. Officers stopped him, and asked him if he knew he was in the front lines, and headed right out into no man's land, beyond even the American's outer patrols.

"Damn fools" are up ahead. Davison obviously did not know. The surprise on his face would have detonated a bomb. He asked the boys if they'd seen anything of a company of aviation engineers. The answer was quick and positive.

"Yea, we have," said one of the officers. "If you mean those damn fools who wouldn't pay any attention to us and took those big machines out. We think they're about 10 or 15 miles down the road."

Finally Davison found his engineers. They had put in a few defensive guns, had dug themselves all trenches, and were at work building an airfield right under the Nazis' noses.

In three days—three days is 72 hours of work to the engineers—the men built five serviceable fields and moved north 110 miles to the area around La Ser, to grind out more airdromes.

The five-in-three deal was the result of careful planning and fast movement. The whole North African battlefield had been looked over from the air, and spots picked out which seemed generally favorable for landing fields. When it developed that a batch would be needed specifically around Ghebla, the engineers again flew over the ground, choosing more definite locations.

Then the engineer troops, with their bulldozers and scrapers and shovels and all the rest of their equipment, went roaring overland, marching day and night, and they went so fast that they paid no attention to the fact that they had gone clean through the front lines. Or if they did notice it, they were too stubborn to care.

Their ability to build airports just one jump ahead of our combat airplanes is one of the big reasons we gave the Axis such a bounding around in North Africa as well as in Sicily. By having airfields up front, we kept our air support constantly with—and ahead of—our troops.

There could be no delays in bringing up our airpower. The tactical air force always had to get places ahead of our troops, to blast down enemy resistance before our troops arrived. The strategic air force had to reach deeper and deeper behind the enemy lines, hacking at the channels through which the enemy brought up food, munitions and other supplies. Both groups constantly had to be as near the Nazis as they could get.

This meant turning out airfields at an amazing rate. It meant battling out barren mountains, filling in colossal mudholes, trying to hold down expanses of drifting, destructive sand. It meant using flammable machine labor, carrying special power equipment and airborne engineers hundreds of miles at a time by air, and working night and day in bleak stretches of battlefields.

That's what the aviation engineers are up against. Yet they conquered the airports so fast that the pilots never knew, from day to day, where they'd find one next.

Washington Merry-Go-Round DREW PEARSON

COMPLAINTS OF 'WASTED MANPOWER'

The fathers' draft has brought on a new series of complaints about "wasted manpower" in the armed services stationed in the U. S. A. Pending a call to action, a feeling of idleness and waste becomes a demoralizing factor. The men on the home front generally suffer most from the age-old service disease of "just waiting around."

The type of thing that happens in the waiting period is illustrated in a confidential survey made at the naval dirigible station at Lakehurst, N. J., which brought forth the following facts.

- 1. The navy uses 100 to 115 men to handle a blimp when it lands, whereas Goodyear handles the same blimp with 15 civilians.
2. As at many shore stations, duty usually consists of 24 hours on, then 24 hours stand-by (which means waiting around to see if anything happens), then 24 hours liberty. Then this is repeated. Many men complain that the 24 hours of loafing at stand-by could be used for some constructive type of work.
3. More than 1,000 civilians are employed to recondition ships at high rates of pay, while enlisted men who could do the job and need the training lie around idle.
4. A high wire fence, guarded by armed soldiers, surrounds Lakehurst. Then, inside the fence, a marine guards the outside of each hangar. Then, inside the hangar, two civilians also stand guard.
5. The Lakehurst commissary, which handles about 100 customers per day, is staffed to handle about 1,000. It has 10 clerks, 2 commissioned officers and 1 cashier. Any civilian groceryman plus an assistant could easily handle the whole business.

Multiply Lakehurst's wasted manpower by the navy's many other shore stations and it runs into thousands of men.

Note: The men themselves are not to blame. Most of them chafe at inactivity, want to see action. Effect on the Men.

One significant indication of how glutton the navy is with manpower is in the boot-training camp, designed to transform a civilian into a sailor. This training used to last three weeks. Now it has been running four months or more. And after finishing this boot-training, thousands of men lie around for months in OGI's (outgoing units) awaiting assignment to a school or other activity.

In the past year, also, many enlisted men come to the conclusion that navy schools are being maintained mainly for the purpose of keeping them occupied.

Slump in Draft Quotas.

Most significant fact about the manpower situation is that, all last summer, the army and navy were getting less than the quota of men they requested from the draft boards, but did not complain. Few people outside the government realized it, but even at the time the fathers' draft was under vigorous discussion on Capitol Hill, the army and navy were not complaining about the failure of draft boards to fill the quotas.

During the first months of 1943, draft boards overfilled their quotas. But in April, they began to slump off. In that month, the army-navy asked for 324,000 men but actually got only 233,000. This would not have been significant if it had occurred in one month only. But in May, the services asked Selective Service for 323,000 men, got only 224,000. However, there was no complaint from either the army or navy.

Again, in June, the services asked for 320,000 men, but got only 223,000. In July, they asked for 299,000 but got only 223,000, only slightly more than the June figure despite the fact that the quota requested by the army and navy had been increased. In August, the army-navy request dropped to 220,000, and the draft boards supplied only 221,000 men—a scant 70 per cent of the number asked for. In September, the army-navy quota was 213,000 men, but they got only 214,000 or 70 per cent of what they asked for.

However, at no time did the armed services make any protest. They seemed content to coast along with what the draft boards were giving them.

This was all during the period when the father-draft was under serious discussion and when the administration was taking a vigorous stand that fathers had to be drafted.

What the answer is, no one quite knows. Highup army-navy officers probably know but won't talk. However, the Truman committee may ask some potent questions.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes on an assignment to Puerto Rico where Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, is stationed as a U. S. Army intelligence officer. On the boat she meets a young Puerto Rican, Miguel Valera, and an engineer named Richard Taussig, of whom she is immediately suspicious in spite of the fact that he looks like a typical tourist. She does not know that he is, in fact, a German agent ordered to destroy Puerto Rico's water supply. Pete meets the boat, but does not tell Anne that he has reason to suspect Taussig. Later Anne discovers that her bags have been searched.

CHAPTER IV

Anne put her key in the lock and opened the door. There was a funny taste in her mouth, as if she'd bit into a sweet orange and found it was a sour one.

"I'm glad Pete's in San Juan after all," she thought, with a sudden twinge of conscience. "I wonder what he's doing?"

Pete Wilcox, if she'd known it, was at that moment two floors below her in the Granada bar. He'd watched her all through dinner, seen her gay and charming and radiant as a sunbeam, talking to three men.

The other girl Pete didn't even see. He watched Anne and Miguel leave the dining room.

"They're going to dance," he thought. He looked at himself in the mirror over the bar. The faint green cast of his face couldn't all be mildew, he thought with a twisted grin. "Take it easy, Captain Wilcox," he said to himself.

Anne put her hand out to put out the light, and changed her mind. The room glowed with a faint silver phosphorescence from the rising moon. It was the moon she and Miguel had watched growing rounder and whiter the last three nights, she thought with a little ache inside her.

The chook that off impatiently, crossed the room and looked down into the patio. Don Diego Gongoro had just finished lighting Richard Taussig's cigar and was lighting his own. Then Anne's heart beat a little more quickly. She glanced back at the door, her cheeks flushed a little. The idea that popped into her mind, she knew, was one that should never have occurred to a well-brought-up young woman. She dismissed it sharply.

Her hand shook a little as she opened the door. There was a light over the transom in Room 103. It was not the ceiling light; it was not bright enough. It must be the one on the table or beside the bed. She started trying to remember whether it had been there before. She hadn't looked, she had been so intent on the conflict in her mind as she went into her own room. It might be the maid, she thought, listening. Or Mr. Taussig might have left his light on.

She crossed the passage after a moment and topped lightly on the door. There was no answer and no sound from inside. Her heart was pounding in her throat. She had either to do it or not to do it, she told herself—but she had to be quick about it in any case.

She put her key in the lock and turned the knob. Mr. Taussig had not locked his door. She opened it slowly, glancing back behind her down the hall, and slipped inside. She had taken two quick steps along the passage between the wall and the closet when the dimmed light went off, leaving her in sudden absolute darkness. Somebody inside the room moved with swift catlike silence. She stood rooted to the floor in terror, her voice frozen in her throat. A man's hand strong as steel closed over her mouth, stifling the cry that sprang to her lips. She was whirled around and moved back to the door so quickly and easily that she didn't have time to struggle. The door opened, she was in the hall again; the door closed. She ran, breathless with terror, across the passage into her own room and stood gripping the door-knob, her heart beating violently. Very slowly then she raised her hand to her face and touched it with trembling fingers. In the dim light above the open transom she had caught one flashing glimpse of the man in the room. It was Miguel Valera.

A chill stabbing awareness that she was for the first time in her life up against stark reality that thrust friendship aside, as Miguel had done with her, made her hand relax slowly from her door-knob. She reached out to switch on the light, changed her mind and stood there listening warily. He was coming out. She heard the door across the passage close quietly, the key turn softly in the lock, and his footsteps retreating quickly along the hall. Still without turning on the light she went quietly through the narrow passage between the closet and the wall into her room. She stopped at the foot of her bed, shrouded in white mosquito netting, and glanced back at the door.

"I wonder . . ." she thought. "I just wonder."

What if Miguel Valera had realized there was something odd about Richard Taussig too? That could explain it. He could have left Graciela for a minute just to come up and see, while his uncle and Taussig were talking.

She slipped to the window and looked down into the patio. Don Diego Gongoro and Taussig were still sitting there, their cigars still quite long. That came as a little shock to her. What had seemed an eternity could have been only two or three minutes at the most. Then she started. Miguel Valera was coming through the arcade, alone. Graciela must have been sent home, or something. He strolled across the patio, drew up a chair and sat down with the other two.

Anne stood watching them, her heart rising. Whatever it was, if Miguel was on her side . . . and then she caught her breath sharply. He had said something to Taussig, who turned quickly and looked up at her window. Don Diego turned slowly in his chair and looked up. Miguel was telling them. And she hadn't thought of that. She hadn't really thought about that at all, but in some way she had just taken it for granted he wouldn't tell.

"I wonder where Pete is," she thought miserably. It was the same old pattern. It always came back when she was in trouble. If only she knew where to find Pete!

She looked down into the patio again. Mr. Taussig was getting up. Anne's eyes moved across the grass. A man was sitting alone at the table in the corner, where Don Diego had sat reading his paper that morning. She looked away, and then looked back sharply. It was Pete.

Pete went through the lobby and started across the gallery under the portico. The juke box blared from the bar behind him, and with the orchestra out on the terrace a wailing tenor was singing "Perfidia" . . . "I found you, the love of my life, in somebody else's arms . . ." He tossed the cigarette he'd just lit into a palm tub and turned back again. His orders were to lay off, and in the Army orders were orders. In the newspaper business an editor might not run a story, but he never tried to keep you from getting it if you could. And just now Pete's training and instinct—the old nose-for-news sort of thing—told him not to leave, to go back and the hell with G 2.

The door opened, she was in the hall again.

He went through the lobby out into the patio. The ocean pounding on the reef and breaking again on the rocks just across the balustrade softened the strident clamor of music from the bar. The place was empty except for Taussig and Diego Gongoro sitting by the fountain smoking their cigars. They stopped talking for an instant when he came out, and started again, obviously on another subject. They couldn't have been talking about the beauty of Puerto Rico all that time, he thought. He sat down at a table in the corner and ordered a Scotch and soda. The window of Anne's room was dark. There was a light in the hall window, and one in Taussig's near the angle of the wall. He saw it go out abruptly. Probably the maid, he thought.

He saw Taussig look up, and move slightly. Then the light went on again. Taussig moved again, glancing up at Anne's window. Or Pete thought he did. He wasn't sure. It was still dark.

"You must make a visit to my brother-in-law's Central," Diego Gongoro was saying affably. "I shall ask him to arrange it. They are cutting and grinding the sugar cane now, and I'm sure it would interest you. And to his coffee plantation in the mountains. That would interest you very much too. The trees are beginning to blossom now, and they are very beautiful. Perhaps Miss Heywood would be interested too. She is a very intelligent young lady. Perhaps she is too intelligent. It can be a dangerous quality in a woman. I mean, of course, that no man wants a woman who—"

He broke off abruptly. Pete Wilcox, trying to look casual and relaxed in a wrought-iron chair that was not designed for either, was listening intently. There was something in Diego Gongoro's tone that implied a meaning underlying the superficial conversational one. He was watching the center arch, and Pete, glancing around, saw Miguel Valera come out into the patio and pull up a chair beside them.

"I was just saying how intelligent your friend Miss Heywood is, Miguel," his uncle remarked easily.

Miguel shrugged. "I don't know about that. She's very charming, certainly."

"There was no reason to get hot under the collar, Pete told himself. Maybe Anne was deliberately concealing her intelligence. Sometimes she did it without deliberation. Furthermore, there was nothing offensive in preferring a girl's charm to her intelligence. Latins weren't the only ones who did that.

"What have you done with the young ladies, by the way?" Taussig inquired.

"My cousin is with some of my other cousins. Miss Heywood had a tiring day. She's gone upstairs."

"I hope you'll remember your suggestion about the sugar plantation. I'm sure Miss Heywood would enjoy it too."

"I'm sure we can arrange it, Mr. Taussig. I'll speak to my father. Are you engaged tomorrow?"

"I'm afraid I am," Taussig said. "The Army is taking me on a tour of the island, stopping at Borinquen Field for lunch."

Mr. Taussig bowed to both of them. "Goodnight," he said.

Miguel Valera turned to his uncle and spoke again rapidly. Pete caught Graciela's name and "casa," and decided that Miguel was telling his uncle to take the girl home. At any rate Gongoro left. Miguel and Pete were alone in the patio, and the light in Anne's window was still on. Pete, watching with a kind of forlorn hope for one brief glimpse of even her shadow on the screen, trying to make up his mind not to go and call her up just to hear her voice and know she was there, started to get up. As he did Valera rose and came across the grass.

"Good evening, Captain," he said. "If you aren't in a hurry I wonder if you'd join me in a nightcap?"

For a moment the two of them stood facing each other, the Latin tall and slender with gray eyes and black hair, the Saxon tall, lean and rangy with hazel eyes and curly-blond, tow-colored hair, each taking the other's measure.

"Thanko," Pete said. "Glad to."

They sat down. Miguel called the waiter.

"You're at Headquarters, I understand," he said when he had ordered.

"That's right," Pete said. "And you?"

"I was ordered to Buchanan. But my orders were cancelled. I was ready, and thought I might as well come home. It was too cold in New York for me anyway. I'd been up for several months on business for my father."

"You're a lawyer, aren't you?" Pete asked. It sounded as if being a lawyer in a time like this was a little like being a snake in the grass, which was not what he had meant. Miguel laughed.

"A sort of lawyer. You have to know how to manage a sugar Central, these days of government regulation. I don't practice."

"Politics?"

"Politics is in Latin blood," Miguel answered. "Red corporals, white corporals and politics. It means everything down here."

"What about your father? Has he been in political office?"

"No. My father isn't a United States citizen. After the American occupation we were given the choice of accepting citizenship or remaining Spanish. My father chose to retain his own citizenship. A good many people did. What do you call them—dichards, isn't it?"

"Are they the ones who don't like the United States?" Pete asked.

Valera hesitated.

"Would they like to see Spain back?"

Miguel Valera shrugged. "I suppose there's the dream of seeing the scorpion and gold of Spain flying from El Morro. It's natural enough for the people who are predominantly Spanish. If the United States were conquered, you would just wait the chance to kick your conquerors out."

"And what about the Nationalists?" Pete asked.

Miguel shook his head. "The cacique, or leader of the party in power, has said Nationalism is not an issue at the present. I don't think there's any important organized Nationalist opinion here now. The Falangists and the Nationalists are the two extremes—in between you have the moderates.—But I didn't mean to give you a lecture on insular politics."

"One thing before you get off it," Pete said. "Where do you stand in all this?"

"Me?" Miguel Valera laughed. "You'd be surprised," he said. "But as I started to say, this isn't what I wanted to talk to you about. It was Miss Heywood."

New Fungicide Is Successful in Tests

Organic Compound Also Used to Immunize Seed

Plant fungi may soon be controlled effectively by an organic fungicide, and the billion dollar annual loss to agriculture appreciably reduced, says the American Chemical Society. Two research chemists, W. P. Ter Horst and E. L. Felix, have applied a long known compound to a new use, and they report marked success in their experiments.

The chemical, now called only by its scientific name, 2,3-dichloro-1, 4-naphthoquinone, may be employed either to treat seeds or to spray foliage. Studies made during the last five years show the compound is capable of controlling 22 important and widely divergent fungi. It is hoped that the new fungicide will supplement or replace compounds of sulphur, copper and mercury whose present scarcity and known limitations render them ineffectual in battling fungus enemies.

Immunizes Peas, Beans.

The fungus-killing power of the chemical was determined first on a test fungus on peas in a greenhouse. Maximum control of the fungus under the most favorable conditions for disease development was obtained at a dosage of 0.50 to 1.13 ounces per bushel of seed. Practical control was obtained at 0.20 ounce per bushel, equal to one thirty-second per cent by seed weight.

"The material has given good results also on lima beans at 0.20 ounce per bushel and on corn at 0.25 ounce per bushel," the report continues. "It has given fair control of the fungi causing cotton damping-off."

"The fungus causing anthracnose of the cotton plant attacks and weakens the fibers in the boll in the field. These fibers are lost largely at ginning. The new fungicide appreciably reduced this infection at a dosage of 0.5 ounce of active material per bushel of cottonseed applied just before planting. Anthracnose control with the chemical is most striking in the percentage of healthy plants obtained."

Harmless to Foliage.

"The material appears to be non-injurious to foliage and offers considerable promise as a plant spray against leaf diseases. It is not compatible with nitrogen-fixing bacteria."

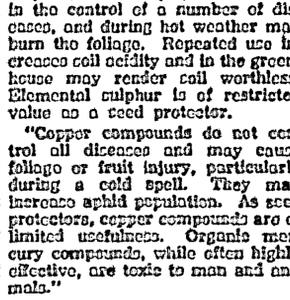

The chemical is not a new material, the report explains. Its preparation was recorded in 1877 and described the following year.

"In agriculture, sulphur, copper, and organic mercury compounds are extensively used to control pathogenic fungi. While effective in many instances, they have disadvantages. Sulphur, for example, is ineffective in the control of a number of diseases, and during hot weather may burn the foliage. Repeated use increases soil acidity and in the greenhouse may render soil worthless. Elemental sulphur is of restricted value as a seed protector."

"Copper compounds do not control all diseases and may cause foliage or fruit injury, particularly during a cold spell. They may increase aphid population. As seed protectors, copper compounds are of limited usefulness. Organic mercury compounds, while often highly effective, are toxic to man and animals."

Farmers Richer Now

TELEFACT

Higher prices and larger volume of sales have put more money into farmers' pockets. Income for last year amounts to more than $12,000,000,000.

Keeping Eggs Clean

Frequent collection of eggs from nests well supplied with suitable litter will greatly reduce need for cleaning. The condition of the floor litter, the use of wired roosts and non-crowded quarters will also help keep eggs clean. These things take little time to provide and save much work in preparing eggs for market.

Farm Notes

Wartime developments in insect control will be highly useful after the war, especially in food production and sanitation, entomologists say.

Call pullets should be sold for meat as soon as possible to get them off the feed market, and into food products. Leghorn pullets that do not lay by the age of 7½ months are culls.

They're Calling Home

It could only happen in the United States. And it does happen every night—thousands of boys in camp talking to home by Long Distance.

The voice with a smile at the switchboard. the thoughtful people who leave Long Distance circuits free for his use in the evening... the pleasure of the home folks when the call gets through—these are some of the things that make this a good country to live in.
