VOLUME XVIII—(Carrizozo News, Vol. 38)

CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JUNE 2, 1944.

NUMBER 37

"We believe that history has drawn our issues. We are ready to get the twelve years of Franklin D. Roosevelt against the preceding twelve years of Republican 'normalcy,' when America retreated into futile isolation, when America sped into wild inflation and made the depression inevitable, when America sunk its navy and corruptly sold its navy's oil reserve."—Part of resolution adopted at Democratic National Committee meeting in Washington, January 22, 1944

L. S. DAN CONLEY

My candidacy for the office of Sheriff of Lincoln County, subject to the wishes of the Democratic voters on the 6th day of June is not considered merely as a political aspiration, but a bid for the opportunity to further serve my fellow men and my community in a useful capacity; not only as sheriff, which is essential; but also in the interest of our youth; some of whom have become delinquent in this war time. Every conscientious law enforcement officer has become alarmed at this delinquency which is becoming apparent. These youngsters represent our manhood of tomorrow; manhood of which, we as Americans, hope to be justly proud. If we expect to maintain our high standard of clean citizenry, we must give the welfare of our young earnest consideration and capable leadership. If we do not lend our interest toward this end and to the rehabilitation of our returning service men, sheriff's force ten times that of our present personnel will be inadequate to cope with the resulting situation. I consider these problems of sincere concern to the sheriff's office and should I be elected, I pledge energetic support and leadership if required, to any program serving the welfare of these groups.

While I will be most appreciative of your vote and support in the coming Primary Election, whether or not I may be your choice for the sheriff's office; be sure to exercise your American right and cast your Ballot on June 6th.

THEY WOULD DISFRANCHISE THE SERVICE MEN

Announcement having been made by the Republican high command that the Nation is in revolt against a Democratic administration, and that it will signify its displeasure by electing a Republican President and a Republican House of Representatives next November it might be assumed that to make their dream come true and emphasize that result they would work for the fullest possible vote.

Instead they have wrought unceasingly for the disfranchisement of the millions of men and women in the armed services by making it difficult, where they have been unable to make it impossible, for anybody in uniform, away from his normal residence, to get in his ballot. As a further evidence of the G. O. P.'s devotion to the cause for free suffrage the Attorney General of Indiana has promulgated a decision that "persons living in areas that have been ceded to the Government may be considered non-state residents insofar as voting is concerned and may not vote in state elections." The quotation is from the newspaper reports of the official's declaration.

In furtherance of the war necessities the Government has acquired munitions, etc., and to take care of the influx of a multitude of workers has provided housing about the mills for workers.

Presumably the courts will have to decide whether a civilian employee at a military reservation, a federal hospital, a Government park or other establishment ceded to the National Government thereby forfeits his title to the first privilege of an American citizen—the right to vote.

The District of Columbia is obviously the shining example of disenfranchisement and is probably the basis of the Hoosier Attorney General's surprising finding. The ground for Washington's deprivation is that Congress is the city's Government, and probably stems from the feeling when the seat of Government was selected that its population was mainly Federal personnel and that it should be kept aloof from political struggles. What that has to do with depriving a citizen of his vote because he lives in a house on Federal territory elsewhere, only an elephantine logician can explain.

That really ought not be difficult for folks who enthusiastically estimated Wendell Willkie's defeat in Wisconsin as a triumph for isolationism, and immediately became lyrical over Governor Dewey's views as to our country's cooperation in international peace plans. These were described as broad and deep. They are certainly broad enough to cover any possible position he might take when, and if, he becomes the Republican nominee and as deep that nobody can dredge profoundly enough to know just what measure of participation in world affairs he contemplates.

The great organ of isolation—the Chicago Tribune—denounced Dewey when he made his first timid approach to Willkie's position, but will undoubtedly be firmly for him—if he is the party's nominee.

Lt. C. W. Brandon of the Navy Air Corps from Dallas, Tex. spent two days here visiting his uncle, Mr. Claude Brasum. He was accompanied by his wife and sister, Miss Delores Norred.

Miss Margaret Myers was an El Paso visitor last week end.

Do He or Don't He?

Where Dewey stands on anything—is blank mystery. His is a candidacy without a candidate on a platform without a plank. The Republican Party might as well propose winning the war by armies without generals and soldiers without guns.—Philadelphia Record (Ind.)

They Don't Stop—And We Can't Either

Every time Lem Martin hears about another Jap battleship being sunk—or another Nazi city being blasted—Lem grits his teeth, and digs into his pocket for more War Bond money.

With one soldier over there doing better 'n' better at their ownin', Lem says grimly, "we can do the same at home."

It's easy to think that if the war is going well, we can afford to let down just a little instead of realizing that the bigger our offensive gets the more our boys are going to need equipment and munitions.

From where I sit, here's the way it is... it's up to everyone of us to put not only our spare money into War Bonds, but to figure out new ways of saving so that we'll have still more money to invest in Victory.

As Lem says: "We asked for plenty of action—and we're sure getting it. All over the world our men have got them Axis fellows on the run. Let's Back the Attack with War Bonds."

BANKS AND THE WAR

What is the American way of Banking?

It's the combined service of over 15,000 banks, some state-chartered, some federal chartered. It's the initiative and loyal effort of 280,000 men and women working under our free enterprise system, striving to provide the best possible service to their respective communities.

It's the progressive management of these 15,000 banks; spurred by competition, alert to community needs, eager to make fair earnings for stockholders. It's the absence of centralized control. It's the system that has made our country great and, with your support, will help make it greater.

HERE is a cookie jar that may be made at home from odds and ends of wood stenciled with gay peasant figures and quaint lettering. But that is not all. This jar or box sits on an old-fashioned brightly painted corner shelf which may be cut out of thin wood and put together quickly with glue and brads.

Even if you do not have a jig saw or a coping saw to cut out the graceful curves of the shelf pieces, you may mark the design on a piece of plywood or other thin wood and have it cut at your nearest woodworking shop. As for the cookie box, it is all straight cuts.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared an actual size pattern for this corner shelf and cookie jar; also a stencil pattern with complete color guide for the lettering and peasant figures; all on one large sheet which will be mailed for 15 cents which includes cost of postage. ## Elephants and Some Fish Are Restless Creatures

In the animal world the elephant, by reason of its size and strength, might be expected to enjoy long and profound periods of slumber. Not so, however, for it seldom has more than two or three hours' rest at a time. It very seldom lies down, and spends the greater part of the day and night in restless shuffling and oscillations.

From observations made in captivity on miniature whales, dolphins and porpoises, it would appear as if these animals never slept at all. A porpoise kept in an aquarium continued to swim round and round its tank throughout the 24 hours. The specimens in question never once stopped in the course.

During winter or too frequent urination, you may feel that something is wrong. You may notice aching back, stiffness, or aching in the joints, getting up at night, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be sure to experience relief. Doan's Pills are the kidneys and help them to work and eliminate waste from the body. Doan's Pills are the only medicine that will cure the kidneys. Doan's Pills are the only medicine that will cure the kidneys. Doan's Pills are the only medicine that will cure the kidneys.

Talk about different angles; Julie Hayden, the actress, is doing a book, which she illustrates as well. It's about her dog. The theme: One day in its life... She studied its every move and emotion for a day and night. The title: "Every Dog Has Its Day"... The recent tribute to Eddie Cantor (by over 1,600 admirers) was the first sincere testimonial in a long spell on Broadway... It commemorated his 35th anniversary in show business. Flowers to the living... Joan Crawford and her husband, P. Terry, are doing a Hayworth-Welles. Wearing suits made from the same material.

Bigtown Vignette: On the George Washington bridge, the other Sunday afternoon, flocks of young girls in their colorful summer dresses were decorating the scene... Far below was a grey war-like freighter at anchor... The sailors on guard by the stern gun were like little toys. They were waving to the girls... They shouted and called back and forth but no one could hear what they were saying... The wind was blowing and the distance was too much... Then a sailor came on deck... He had a trumpet... And pointing to the distant span he played some beautiful horn music... He must have been a professional in civilian life... One of his renditions was: "Come to Me, My Melancholy Baby"... He looked like a little toy on the deck of the ship... His trumpet looked like a toy, too... His music came up through the air, thin and clear, like music from a toy horn... And down the Hudson you could see the bay and the open sea... Where the freighter would sail soon for the fighting... The trumpeter really "sent" the girls... There sure was a lot of youthful yearning on the breeze.

We Hadn't Heard It Before: About the fat whale and the skinny whale. The fat whale said: "My goodness, you're thin! What's wrong with you?"

Replied the skinny whale: "I've been having bad luck, been in bad waters and no food."
"Tell you what," said the fat whale, "why not swim to the English channel? The Allies are exploding a lot of Nazis into the air there."

So the skinny whale swam and swam, and six weeks later, skinnier than ever, swam back to his fat friend.

"Well," bluffed Fatso, "why didn't you do as I told you?"

"I did," said the skinny whale, "but when those Nazis came down into the water—they all had marks on their chests saying they were supermen—and I just couldn't swallow that baloney!"

Hitler was never either a house-painter or a paper-hanger. (He was a very poor artist who at one time used to put his paintings in an oven to "antique" them)... He has had a longer life than Napoleon (52) and Alexander the Great (32), but Caesar died at 53 and Genghis Khan, at 65... Although Adolf's father was named Schickelgruber, der rat who became der fuhrer was never called that... Hitler's father was a no'er-do-well, who died in the belief his son was a zero... The old man wed three times. At 27 he married a woman 41; at 43 he married a girl 25... At the end of World War I Adolf trimmed his von Hindenburg-type mustache to the ridiculous lip-patch he wears today.

Himmler is the only one to get away with imitating der fuhrer's mustache, and even that is an unreasonable whim... Robert Ley, creator of the German labor front, quaffs a pint of brandy before breakfast... Fritz von Papen became military attaché to Washington on the strength of his wife's money. He twice failed the entrance exams to the War academy, yet he wore the insignia of the General Staff... Von Ribbentrop got rid of Koesterer and von Hoesch (German ambassadors to France and England respectively) with shots in the arm which produced air embolus.

Goebbels attended six universities and entered Heidelberg on the strength of a scholarship from a Jewish professor named Gundolf... When Hitler spent his early days in a Viennese staphouse, the only man who befriended and helped him was a Jew named Neumann... Nazi street fighting tactics originated at the world premiere of "All Quiet on the Western Front," the most pacifistic of all German pictures. The Hitler gang objected to Remarque's theories.

Goering notes on aviation, regardless of his aversion to other things Russian (such as the Red army), and gobbies it by the spoonful... Mussolini never liked him because his outhead chin and affected swagger were too much like Finito's... When he has time for it, Goering goes hunting on his estate for animals that are delivered to his home regularly... Speaking of animals: His Brownshirt gorilla, in the early days, wore rings which held two sharp blades conveniently released by a spring.

Bomber Raids Cost Nazis 8,000 Planes

More Than 3,560 of Them Were Lost in Battle.

LONDON.—American air attacks have cost Germany's defensive fighter force more than 8,000 planes since last November 1, according to up-to-date and reliable estimates. Something approaching 5,000 of the 8,000 were fighters which German factories would have turned out under an intensified production program had it not been for devastating United States raids. The remainder were shot down in aerial combat.

Since the turn of the year, American heavy bombers and their fighter escort, together with medium bombers and other fighters, have claimed a total of 3,560 German fighters destroyed in battle.

The significance of the Nazi losses was evident when set against the fact that the German air force's front line strength, bombers and fighters combined, probably ran around 7,000 planes at the start of the war.

In those days the Germans probably had 100 per cent replacements in reserve. Today, in the case of fighters, they probably must draw on their pipeline to the factories and on current output.

Experienced observers believe that destruction of the last three months already had created a dangerous "airlock" in the Nazi pipeline, and replacement will become increasingly difficult.

That was expected to be true especially when big land operations began and the Germans are faced by a day in and day out challenge to combat from their front lines back to their industrial areas.

A high source said recently that in effective resistance the German air force efficiency had gone down around 30 per cent, largely because of a conservation campaign keeping planes grounded unless conditions force them to give battle.

Estimates from other sources put the Luftwaffe strength now at around 300 fighters fewer than in November and probably 500 to 600 fewer than in January.

Nazi Steady Shelling Develops 'Anzio Amble'

ANZIO BEACHHEAD.—Like most battle areas, this beachhead develops certain little individual characteristics in the men who fight here.

One to the "Anzio amble." It's the way you walk through town after a few weeks of steady shelling, and consists of a snake-cornered shuffle which permits you to crowd closely to the most convenient wall between you and enemy guns.

Because of this habit, all pedestrian traffic goes down one side of every street, leaving the other absolutely untraveled.

Motor traffic through Nettuno enhances the wall-hugging tendency and the Anzio amble. The town has gotten a bad name because of the constant shelling and no amount of local chamber of commerce work can convince military drivers that it's a lovely spot to linger. They baton their feet feeds to the floor, hunch over the wheels and highball through town.

The pedestrian can only fatten against the wall and pray, and comes to dread the huge lumbering trucks almost as much as he does the possibility of a shell landing in his precinct.

Germans Get Warning; Too Nice to Prisoners

MADRID, SPAIN.—German newspapers have appealed to the German people to stop being nice to Allied prisoners and French and Italian workers in the Reich.

"Although we have many times recalled that it is forbidden to speak to war prisoners," said the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, "still the Germans do it. Again we must remind them it is forbidden. Moreover, French and Italian workers must be considered as prisoners."

"This call is particularly addressed to German women and young girls."

Formula for Triplets: Once in 7,563 Births

PALO ALTO, CALIF.—When triplets were born here recently, Health Officer Louis Olsen did some research and concluded that plural births occur approximately as the powers of 87.

On this basis one confinement in 87 brings twins; triplets, once in 7,569, the square of 87; quadruplets, once in 673,603, the cube of 87.

There were 7,586 births here between the two sets of triplets, only 17 off from Olsen's calculation on averages.

Speaking of Sports

By Bob McShane
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

STAFF Sergt. Joe Louis, heavy weight champion of the world, made a couple of surprising revelations recently when he named an all-opponent team for Stars and Stripes, servicemen's publication.

First surprise came when he named Max Baer as the toughest opponent he ever met. Second was his choice of Jim Braddock as possessor of the most potent right hand.

In explaining his selection of Baer as the toughest opponent, Joe said: "I pitched more strikes against Baer than I did against a half dozen ordinary opponents. Any other man would have lasted less than half a round, just on Schmelling did in our second fight."

Most ring followers figured that Schmelling had the most dangerous right, for Max flattened Joe in 12 rounds in New York in 1934. But Louis merely remarked: "If Schmelling's right carried the explosiveness Braddock's did, I never would have been able to answer the bell after the fifth round. Max landed his Sunday punches for 12 rounds before he could put me away."

That One Wallop

"Braddock hit me once in the first round, and had he been able to follow up his advantage, this little boy might never have been the champion of the world."

It was on June 23, 1937, that Louis knocked out Jim Braddock in the eighth round in Chicago for the world title.

Billy Conn was named five times in the mythical line-up. Conn, who came exceedingly close to unseating Joe at New York's Polo Grounds in 1941, figures to be the first challenger to get a crack at the championship following the war.

Louis picked Conn as the smartest of all his opponents, the fastest, the possessor of the most dangerous left and the fighter with the best offense and defense.

In Joe's book, Lee Ramey was his most courageous opponent; Arturo Godoy was the most troublesome; Bob Pastor the fastest retreater; and Johnny Paycheck his poorest opponent.

He considers the hardest punch he ever took was a right landed by Al Delaney in a 1934 bout. Joe admitted it nearly cracked his jaw. On the reverse side, Louis claims the hardest punch he ever landed was the one that knocked out Paulino Uscudum in the fourth round in New York.

Smartest Fighter

More than one individual pointed out that Conn's smartness wasn't in evidence the night he almost removed Joe's crown. Boxing records show that Conn got ahead of Louis in that fight.

He had piled up a comfortable lead in points. These records also show that the Irishman became cocky and tried to slug it out with the champion.

And that Conn was knocked out in the thirteenth round.

But Louis wasn't thinking of Conn's intelligence or his I.Q. He was probably referring to his unquestioned ability to avoid punches and to move quickly, landing punches through the smallest openings in his opponent's defense.

Most smaller fighters are smarter (in that fashion) than their beefier contemporaries. They know more about all the angles of boxing than the big fellows.

SPORTS SHORTS

Five million Americans play softball.

Flying Ebony in 1925 was the only "field horse" to win the Ken, tucky Derby.

Clark Griffith once had a chance to buy Grover Cleveland Alexander for $700 but turned him down, considering him too wild.

Detroit has not finished eighth in the American league in the last 48 years and Minneapolis has not finished eighth in the American association in the same period.

Battle Wagons

When Japan attacked at Pearl Harbor we had 17 battleships in service and 15 building. We were making preparations but the war did not wait. These 32 battle wagons cost American taxpayers three billion dollars for a two ocean navy. The war seemed far away then.

Now fifty million Americans have a personal stake in this war. It has been brought home to them. That's why everyone is increasing purchases of War Bonds.

NOTICE

Alturas, Calif., Sept. 6, 1940. To Whom It May Concern: I have been personally acquainted for many years with Mr. Harry A. Miller, who is now residing at Carrizozo, New Mexico.

Mr. Miller resided here, at Alturas several years ago and during his residence here he was employed by the Nevada-California-Oregon Railway Company that operated a railway system through this section of the county.

Mr. Miller was also Deputy County Clerk of Modoc County, California for several years and also served in the capacity of Judge of the Justice's Court of Alturas Township, Modoc County, California.

To my knowledge, Mr. Miller was always very attentive to his duties and performed them with efficiency and honesty. I always considered him a very capable man, and a man of industry and integrity.

It is my honest opinion that if he is elected Clerk of the county in which he is now residing in New Mexico, he will handle the office efficiently and with credit to the people of his county as well as to himself as I know him to be well qualified for the office of County Clerk, which office he is now seeking in the State of New Mexico.

A. K. Wylie,

Judge of the Superior Court of Modoc County, California.

To The Voters

In furtherance of this recommendation will say that my education comes from the school of experience, founded on six years in the study of Law and many other vacations — worked for Uncle Sam during the entire time of World War 1 and am now and have been ever since that war started working for the S. P. Railroad Co., considered in the first line of defense, and if elected, will continue to handle both services satisfactory to all until this unfortunate struggle is over.

Your support will be highly appreciated.

Address Servicemen's Correctly

"Address your mail correctly" was the plea of the Fleet Post Office, San Diego, today as Navy mail specialists worked tirelessly to find some clue as to the intended destination of hundreds of letters with incomplete addresses.

Mail to members of the armed services overseas has reached the staggering total of 25,000,000 pieces a week, the Navy said. Nearly 2,000,000 of these are insufficiently or incorrectly addressed.

Despite the burden on their staffs, Navy fleet postoffices make every effort to decipher these wrongly addressed letters and more than 97 percent of them eventually reach their destination.

Wrong addresses vary from those with incomplete information to fantastic examples such as the following, received by one Navy office:

"Man in the U. S. Naval Fleet Reserve With Seventh Day Adventist Wife; (Joined Navy in 1915) (Was a Methodist then) Washington, D. C."

Continued emphasis is being placed on the value of V-mail which saves sorely needed cargo space, assures air service greater speed in conscription and prevents the loss of letters.

The following are guides in addressing mail to Navy men:

- 1. Spell out the full name of the addressee. And give rank or rate and service number. 2. Do not use nicknames 3. Spell out the full name of the activity or ship to which the addressee is attached. 4. Use the Navy number furnished by the man. 5. Take extra care in writing so as to make address easily read. 6. Give complete return address. 7. Wrap parcels to stand rough war time treatment.

This will be a good year to pin candidates down and ask them just how they propose to change laws and administration of those laws. Washington, May 5—War Food Administrator Marvin Jones today made the following statement:
"Our food situation is good at this time. All along the line, farmers have produced above schedule. Remarkable job hog production has made possible the temporary removal of pork from rationing, and at the same time have plenty for armed forces and fighting allies. Farmers and livestock producers of America also made possible temporary removal from rationing in the last few weeks of all meat except beef steaks and roasts, all frozen fruits and vegetables, all dried fruits, most of the important vegetables, lard, shortening, and salad cooking oils, and point reduction in many other items—despite many hardships and shortages.
Today we have egg abundance, more than are needed at this time. Same is true of potatoes and early cabbage. Just now there is no serious shortage of food of any kind. Cattle are abundant, and as soon as movement into processing plants is sufficient, everyone should be able to get a good supply of beef. Milk is not as plentiful as many other important foods. However, consumption of fluid milk is at the highest level ever known in this country. Hard work, determination and ingenuity of American farmer makes all this possible.

It must be pointed out, however, that food supply is temporary and must be constantly replenished. As soon as produced, it commences to disappear and is used up. WFA is currently buying for War needs 25 to 35 million pounds of pork each week and 40 percent of major cuts of beef are being set aside for our armed forces. A great majority of food is consumed within a year from the time it is produced. Having plenty now does not necessarily mean having plenty later. Too many are prone to take food supply for granted. It will be even harder to meet our needs this year than last year. Spring plantings have been delayed by unseasonable weather and too much rain. There are not as many people on farms as before the war, and many young men have gone into the armed forces and to factories, attracted by higher pay and shorter hours. Farm machinery is wearing out. Demand for other needs has made it impossible to get all the farm machinery needed to replace men who have left the farm, and replacements of worn-out equipment.

Despite greatly increased food production and imports of all food transportation facilities, permitted there is still not enough feed for the number of livestock we have. Livestock and poultry numbers must be adjusted to available feed supplies. This will necessitate marketing through the year a greater number of cattle, hogs, and poultry, and culling dairy herds, and getting rid of old and less productive cows, leaving more feed for better producers. Balancing of livestock and feed supplies will be the real interest of livestock producers themselves. They are the only ones who can accomplish it.

Mummy must've forgot to OIL IT

American mechanical genius shows itself at an early age. Youngsters are hardly out of their diapers before they know that today's world moves on a film of oil.

A few years more, and they have learned that the life of any mechanical device depends, in large part, on the quality of the lubricant. But even grown-up car owners are sometimes late in finding out a simple clue to choosing a quality motor oil.

It is contained in this plain, straightforward statement: If you want our best oil, remember we specify that Phillips 66 Motor Oil is our finest quality...the highest grade and greatest value...among all the oils we offer to average motorists.

Regular oil change has never before been so important, now that you must "Care For Your Car For Your Country." Authorities state that, with today's reduced driving, every two months is the safest change period. So get rid of winter-worn, contaminated lubricant... get quality, by asking for Phillips 66 Motor Oil.

State Cattlemen to Meet
ALBUQUERQUE JUNE 29th

Albuquerque, May 11 The second quarterly Executive Board meeting of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association will be held at Albuquerque on June 29th with a brief preliminary meeting the evening of June 28th, E. G. Hayward, Cimarron, President announced today.

Although this meeting will be a strictly business meeting on problems directly concerning the cattle industry of the state, it is expected that some 200 members of the Association representing all parts of the state will be in attendance, Hayward said. The Executive Committee consists of 98 members. All cattlemen in the state are welcome to attend and take part in the meeting.

Commenting upon the recent action of the OPA in releasing ration free, all meats with the exception of beef steaks and roasts, Hayward said that the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association has advocated non-rationing of meat for nearly a year and it is of course gratifying to note a step taken in that direction.

PRESIDENT'S HEALTH

When congressional leaders called at the White House for the first legislative conference following the President's return from South Carolina, he looked fit as a fiddle. However, Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley popped the question that has had the capital worried because of those wild rumors about the Commander-in-Chief's health.

"How do you feel?" asked the Kentuckian.

"Great," replied Roosevelt. He added that he had got in 12 hours of sleep a night and plenty of sunshine.

He was brown as a berry and buoyant as ever. However, congressional leaders noted that his face was a little thinner. Admiral Ross T. McIntire, the President's physician, accepts responsibility for this. Roosevelt has knocked off 10 pounds under McIntire's orders. He is still five pounds overweight according to his physician's standards, but McIntire figures that this can be corrected by proper dieting.

NAZI CHANNEL DEFENSES

Of all the variegated defenses Hitler has conceived to block the Second Front - from rocket-guns to flame on the Channel - the one which the Allies are worried most about is the plain, relatively old-fashioned machine-gun nest.

The Nazis have developed a new type of machine-gun nest, tried it out at Cassino, and it was one reason for our failure to advance.

This pillbox is of very heavy concrete, quite small, extends only a foot or so above the ground and is extremely difficult to see from the air. The pillbox usually houses two machine guns, hitched together so that one man can fire both.

One Nazi in each pillbox so that if he is hit only the man is lost. But it takes almost a direct bomb hit to knock him out, so air pounding of them from overhead is not too effective. These pillboxes, buried in the mountains at Cassino, were terrifically effective, and more of them are reported lying in wait behind the shore along the coast of western Europe.

DISCHARGE BUTTONS

With more than a million men now honorably discharged from the army for wounds, health or age, the question of honorable discharge buttons becomes more and more important.

It took the army some time to design a discharge button, but now that it is designed, men and officers have a hard time getting it - unbroken. The buttons are made of plastic and when mailed to veterans, usually arrive in broken pieces.

One discharged air force captain got his discharge button all right in an envelope from Maj. Jesse C. Hicks, assistant quartermaster, Hill Field, Ogden, Utah. But there was no packing around it and it was in several pieces. When he wrote back for a new button, Major Hicks replied:

"There are no provisions for replacing broken buttons. Therefore, we are unable to comply with your request."

Note - Some of the boys think that with all the gold we have buried at Fort Knox, we could spare some for these discharged.

STATE DEPARTMENT HARANGUE

Dignified, delightful British Ambassador Lord Halifax called on Undersecretary of State Stettinius some time ago on a secret matter. While they were closeted together, Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle, diminutive and precocious, joined them.

Soon, high-pitched scolding voices came from Stettinius' office. Gallers in his anteroom could not help overhearing the harangue as it reverberated every through the heavy mahogany doors of the state department.

Finally, Lord Halifax was ushered out. Later Stettinius came out, followed by Berle, who looked a bit agitated.

"Was I too tough with him?" asked Berle.

"No," said Stettinius, "you were just right."

"I felt," said Berle, with the air of a parent who has just delivered a good spanking, "that it simply had to be done."

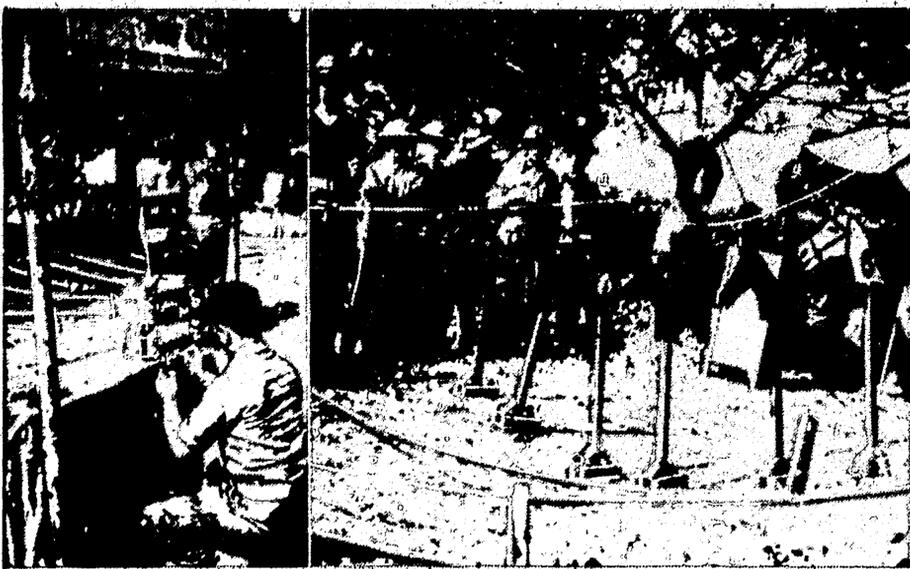

What it was all about was not divulged, but Berle has been carrying on long discussions and arguments with the British regarding the future air routes of the world.

JEEP INVESTIGATION

Government bureaucrats were taken for a sleigh ride behind closed doors when they attempted to justify budget requests for "investigating" jeeps, during hearings on the supplemental national defense bill.

Engineering experts of the department of agriculture sprang the jeep scheme, claiming that they needed 215,000 to determine the value of the jeep for farm work "as a substitute for tractor power." It was noted that the current tractor shortage might get worse after the war.

Lumber Jacks Do Their Bit in Biggest Log Roll

Jean Mullins, 15, lives in one of the many logging camps near Allagash, Maine, which recently contributed a total of 10,000,000 feet of lumber to the largest drive in the East since 1940. The drive was aimed to tie in with the European invasion, since every foot of this wood will go to the war effort. Jean is shown at left rolling a log with her peavoy from the pile into the St. John river. Right: Here "Jacks" with their pike poles and peavoy clamber over the floating logs, separating and guiding them through the boom.

Artificially Bred Stock Often Better

Plan to Restore European Herds

Postwar Europe's barnyard babies may never get to see their fathers.

Test-tube, livestock breeding may, in fact, solve the problem of quickly rebuilding depleted herds and flocks in the war-devastated regions, according to a report issued this week by the American Foundation for Animal Health. This method of livestock breeding which was first developed on a broad scale in Russia, has already been used extensively in this country. To Europe it offers the advantage of avoiding the delays and transportation difficulties which would be involved in shipping breeding animals from this country to the reclaimed battle areas. Instead, male germ cells of various species of farm animals could be collected in this country, flown by fast planes to Europe, and used to fertilize cows, mares, and ewes of the devastated countries.

Experiments by American veterinarians have shown that male germ cells for breeding purposes can be kept active and potent for as long as 120 hours in transit, at a temperature of 40 degrees. For such shipment, the semen is diluted with egg yolk and mineral salts. In this form enough for breeding thousands of farm animals could be flown to Europe in a single plane.

Already Widely Used.

This practice of artificial insemination is already widely used in the United States. In many areas, groups of dairy farmers have banded together and formed cooperative organizations acquiring the use of high quality bulls and the services of trained veterinarians, the latter supervising the breeding animals and doing the inseminating. In this way, hundreds of herds in an area are able to utilize a proven sire of a type which would be beyond the financial reach of the average farmer.

Carefully kept records of various artificial breeding associations show that this "test tube" method may be actually more efficient than natural methods, producing a higher percentage of conceptions. Also, it has been shown that cows of the test-tube herd become better milk producers than their mothers.

Just how practical this application may be to postwar Europe's needs is indicated by the fact that a cow in Argentina was recently bred to a bull in Maryland, by the test-tube method.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes to Puerto Rico on an assignment for her father's paper. Also on the island are Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, and a U. S. Army intelligence officer, Miguel Valera, a Puerto Rican educated in the United States who is a secret U. S. agent. Richard Taussig, an engineer whose identity as a German agent is about to be proved, and Russell Porter, a young American engineer, and his wife, Sue, who has mysteriously given Mr. Taussig some valuable plans, Sue appeals to Anne for help. Anne goes with Taussig to a remote villa. Outside Pete and Valera are waiting.

CHAPTER XVIII

The palms of Anne's hands were solidly moist. "Where are we going?"

"I am going to Brazil," Mr. Taussig replied. "Here is some paper. Please don't try to be either funny or resourceful. It's quite useless, I assure you."

Anne sat without moving for an instant. What was the use? Then she thought quickly. It would be quite easy to leave some kind of a story. She picked up the pen.

"Dear Pete," Mr. Taussig said. "I believe that is what you call him—I have decided to go away with Richard Taussig."

Anne looked at him steadily. "Couldn't you spare me that humiliation, Mr. Taussig? He won't believe it, I assure you. I must have told him already that I think you're unbelievably repulsive."

Mr. Taussig's face hardened into the mottled oyster-gray. "Continue. I know it will be a shock after everything I have said, but that's the way it is. I want you to tell Mother and . . . Dad or Father, whichever you say . . ."

She wrote "Father." Pete would know she'd never say that.

"Tell them they are not to try to find me, because they couldn't. I'm sick of the kind of sheltered life I've always had and this is a chance I'll never get again. We're flying to Costa Rica. I'll write to you some time. Lots . . . or do you say leads . . . of love."

"I . . . might as well say leads, I guess," she said. She tried to keep her hand on the pen from shaking. All she ever said really was "You're" or "All the best, angel." It seemed funny, writing to him. Everything inside her had gone a little numb, all of a sudden.

She pulled herself sharply together. "Where am I going?" she asked. "You are going half-way to Sao Paulo, with me, in the plane out there."

"Not all the way?"

Mr. Taussig shook his head. "Furthermore, it is a non-stop flight, if you're interested."

She looked at him calmly. "You mean, I'm getting out half-way there."

Mr. Taussig's mouth tightened to a thin line.

"Take this envelope up, put the letter in it and seal it. I don't want my own fingerprints on it. Thank you. Now take another piece of paper and write to Mrs. Porter."

"Dear Mrs. Porter—Don't be shocked, darling, but I'm going away with Mr. Taussig. I decided this morning. I'm sorry about Russell's plans. I shouldn't have taken them. I put them . . ."

He stopped. "Write wherever you did put them."

Anne wrote quickly: ". . . Inside the skirt of my blue jersey dinner dress in the closet."

"Sign it, Miss Heywood."

She wrote, "Love—Anne."

Taussig motioned to her to push the letter over to him. He bent over, reading it slowly. His hands shook a little suddenly, his face was distorted and horrible. She shrank back instinctively. His hand moved toward the gun on the table, and stopped. He got up slowly.

"Miss Heywood," he said, his voice cold and deadly soft. "You are lying. These plans are not in your room. Nor do you have a blue jersey dinner dress in your closet." Her voice was so steady and cool that she hardly recognized it.

roared full speed; the propellers were a glancing whirring light.

"So that's the game?" Pete said. "Not on your life, Valera! I've got Taussig's charts and I'm getting him."

Pete tore loose, leaped to the gallery rail and over. Anne moved slowly forward, all the strength gone out of her. Miguel caught her in his arms and held her for a moment. He kept his arm around her, steadying her, as they went to the gallery. The great motors of the black and yellow plane roared. Diego Gongaro was climbing in. Mr. Taussig, running doggedly and with surprising pace, was fifty yards off, far ahead of Pete Wilcox.

Miguel's arm tightened around her waist. He was watching silently, his lips compressed and his face grave.

Then suddenly she felt the violent forward lurch of his body. Her eyes flashed open. The field was alive with soldiers, coming from everywhere, it seemed to her . . . and Pete Wilcox was running down it again. And the plane . . . Something had happened. It was rising what little altitude it had, careening heavily, swaying back and forth. Anne felt her heart had stopped beating altogether. It leveled off, dangerously close to the hillside, the roar of the motors dying out. Anne closed her eyes as it nosed up for one last time, and crashed down, buried almost out of sight in the banana and orange and coffee trees on the slope.

"Let them go, Wilcox! Let them go, I tell you!"

Miguel had not moved or said a word. He was bent forward rigidly, waiting. Suddenly he relaxed. She looked at him.

"Miguel!"

He turned to her, his face haggard and tired.

"It wasn't supposed to happen that way, Anne," he said gently. "It wasn't supposed to get off the ground at all."

Anne started unslipping Sue's frilly blue dress as soon as she closed the door of her room in the Granada and got one of her own out of the closet. She came back into the room and looked around. It seemed ages since she and Sue and Mr. Taussig had been there. A note was propped up in the middle of the bed. She picked it up.

"Anne—I've decided to try to save the pieces like you said. Call me as soon as you can—Love, Sue."

She went to the telephone. Senora Porter had gone to the Airport to meet Senor Porter.

She was combing her hair when the phone rang. "Captain Wilcox is here, miss," the operator said. "Thanks. Tell him I'll be down."

She crossed the terrace. Pete was standing against the marble balustrade, looking out over the ocean. When he turned she had the impression that he was sorting his face out so she wouldn't see what was really in it.

she hadn't shelled out the well-known plans."

"Then that's that," Anne said. He grinned at her again. "That's that," he said not very steadily.

He stood looking at the ashtray tip of his cigarette a moment, his face sober and intent.

"And there's one other thing I'd like to say, Annie. I was all wet about Valera. I'd heard they might send somebody down like that, but I didn't get hep to it until he turned, all the papers over to me up at the coffee snca.—I'd just like to say I'm sorry. He's a swell guy."

He tossed his cigarette over the balustrade into the sea.

"So I take it all back, Annie. I hope you'll be awfully happy. Because you're a swell guy too."

"Oh, don't, Pete," she said. "You'll break my heart."

"I wish I could," he said. "So long, I suppose—"

He stopped. Miguel Valera was coming through the arcade. He came on over. "Am I—"

"I was just going," Pete said. "You did a swell job, Valera."

He held out his hand. Miguel grasped it. Neither of them spoke for an instant.

"Good luck," Pete said. "I hope you'll keep her out of trouble. So long. So long, Annie."

Don Alvaro Valera's party for his son's home-coming had been scheduled for Sunday.

"He sees no reason for postponing it," Miguel told Anne. They were lurching at the Mallorquina. "It's a brave face to the world, I suppose. I'm reporting for duty next week, by the way."

He looked at her anxiously. "My father wants to talk to you, Anne."

"Have you told him?"

He nodded. "He thinks you're splendid."

She hesitated for a moment. "Miguel," she said. "There's one thing I must ask you. Who is the girl I asked you about before?"

He looked at her for a long time before he spoke. "She is . . . nobody, Anne."

"That's . . . not true," Anne said. "She's somebody. She followed me around, and she wrote me a note."

He looked down at his glass. Then he pushed his chair back and leaned forward.

"Look, my dear," he said. "She is largely responsible for both you and Wilcox not getting killed yesterday. She is . . . a friend of my uncle Diego Gongaro. She has been listening to their talk . . ."

Army Dogs Show Value at Front

In New Britain They Lead Patrols to 200 Japs; Beat Jungle Peril.

SAN CARLOS, CALIF. — Eight dogs trained at army remount centers several months ago as an experiment led patrols that accounted for 200 Japanese, the army has just disclosed.

Not a dog, soldier or marine was lost in actions involving the first contingent of dogs, and man-dog teams proved more than a match for Japanese jungle treachery.

The record of the dogs was brought to Col. F. W. Koester, in charge of the war dog center here, by six of the first American soldiers to use dogs in combat.

The dogs proved extremely valuable in smelling out Japanese lurking in deep jungles and as messengers, they said.

Share Foxholes With Men.

The soldiers and dogs, sharing the same foxholes, eating the same rations and sharing precious drinking water, usually worked in pairs in advance of other troops.

Sergeant Arthur N. Tyler of Livingston Manor, N. Y., half of the team of "Duke" can do and Tyler, too, told how he and his dog Duke, a German shepherd, led a reconnoitering patrol south of Capo Gloucester, New Britain.

"Duke alerted at three Japs ahead, eating in the middle of a trail," he said. "We surprised the Japs and took care of them. Another time Duke and I were within 10 yards of Japanese and they didn't know it."

"About January 10 at Capo Gloucester, Duke and I were with a patrol getting information on Jap activity. We roached a river bank and saw tracks. Duke alerted and I spotted a large number of Japs."

"They were only 60 feet away from us in the jungle and too large a group for us to tackle. Our patrol back-tracked and got away despite attempts to ambush us."

Dog Carries Message.

Sergeant Menzo Brown of Middle town, N. Y., told with pride of the time he and Sandy, another shepherd, were with a marine assault company pushing toward the Capo Gloucester air strip on December 23.

"We were advancing on the beach when Japanese pillboxes began to fire, holding up the advance," he said. "Heavy rain put the gullies out of order, so I dispatched Sandy alone to take a message giving the location of the pillboxes to our artillery."

"I told him to find Sergeant Guy Sheldon of Montpelier, Vt. Sandy streaked through heavy enemy fire with the message pouch around his neck, splashed through stream and tall kumal grass and jumped in on top of Sheldon in his foxhole."

Sergeant Sheldon interrupted: "I didn't even know Sandy was coming until he landed on me, panting and dripping."

Sergeant Sheldon took the message from Sandy's pouch and gave the location of the Japanese pillboxes to the battalion commander, who ordered artillery fire concentrated on them. Then the Americans moved forward.

Lieut. Robert Johnson of Malden, Mass., was another member of the group returning to the war dog center.

Nude Bathing Is Banned In Converted Paradise

MAJURO ATOLL, MARSHALL ISLANDS.—United States forces have transformed this once placid, tropical paradise into a well defended American city, complete with road and water systems, communications, electric lights, stores, gasoline stations and newspapers.

In fact, it has become so civilized that orders have been issued prohibiting nude bathing.

A "general store," operated by the navy, does a land office business. A library issues books. Three daily newspapers "hit the street" every morning, with marine, Seabee and navy units each publishing their own papers. About 25 canteen halls and two cafeterias are serving hot food.

Norse Fighter Squadron Claims Lead in Britain

MONTREAL. — One of the Norwegian fighter squadrons stationed in Britain was top scorer among all Allied fighter squadrons there last year, a Norwegian press release said here recently, quoting the London Norwegian newspaper Norsk Tidende.

That squadron, the release added, not only had the highest number of enemy planes shot down—163 and 30 probable—but also had the smallest number of losses and the least number of crashes.

Traveling Housekeeper Sets Things to Right

PHILADELPHIA. — A trolley car crashed into two cases of milk bottles that fell from a truck. The street was covered with broken glass. Traffic stopped. Housewives came out to have a look. Mrs. Jennie Klasky, a passenger, left the trolley, walked into a house, came out with a broom, swept up the glass, glared at the other women and stepped back on the car. Traffic proceeded.

Primary Vote Information at Army Posts

The War Department announced recently it had made available at all military installations information to facilitate voting in 11 State primaries by Army personnel whose voting residences are in those States.

According to the Washington Post, the War Department instructed organization commanders to call the primaries to the attention of men from the States concerned in time to permit them to complete the balloting process and it issued this specific warning:

"No commissioned, warrant or non-commissioned officer shall attempt to influence any member of the armed forces to vote or not to vote for a particular candidate."

According to the War Department circular, dated March 23, primaries will be held during June and the first half of July in Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, and Washington. All except New Mexico, where voters must appear in person, will make available State absentee ballots covering Federal, State and local offices, the Army said.

The circular also told soldiers that Maine, North Dakota and Oklahoma were holding or may hold legislative sessions which might result in changes in present requirements — requirements described in the circular. In addition to giving soldiers detailed information concerning the requirements for voting in each of the 11 States, the War Department, according to the Washington Post, made available postage-free cards with which soldiers may apply for ballots, adding that they must be "used as indicated in special instructions for each State."
