CAPITAN NEWS

The ministers of the town met Monday night, and organized a Ministerial Alliance. All four ministers were present, and enjoyed an evening of fellowship. Rev. J. L. Hood was elected president of the group, and E. D. Hammons as elected secretary. Plans for cooperation on different worthy enterprises were discussed. Refreshments were served to the four ministers by the president. Present were: Rev. J. L. Hood, Methodist, Rev. L. H. Perot, Nazarene, E. D. Hammons, Church of Christ, and W. O. Mills, Baptist. The group plan to meet the first Monday night of each month.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Hall, was taken to Scott and White Hospital at Temple, Texas, Sunday, February 3, by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Hall, where she will undergo a major operation.

Dr. W. W. Wildman, has located at Capitan, and will establish a general practice. Dr. Wildman has leased the building just south of Hall's drug store, from Mr. Hall, who purchased it recently from Mrs. Ellen Keys. Dr. Wildman has had the building remodeled and will operate a clinic with X Ray and complete laboratory equipment. Dr. Wildman moved here from Westphalia, Mo., where he practiced for seven years. Mrs. Wildman and their two children, Kirk and Paul, have joined him. They plan to live in the living quarters until a suitable home can be found. Capitan is fortunate in having a clinic and Dr., as this has been one of the serious drawbacks to the town.

Mrs. Ellen Keys spent several days in El Paso, last week, visiting friends. She returned to Capitan Friday.

The young people of the First Baptist church enjoyed their weekly social at the home of the pastor last Tuesday night. The group enjoyed the games and refreshments were furnished by the losing team at the Sunday night service.

The newly organized Chamber of Commerce of Capitan is handicapped properly can be of great benefit to the town and surrounding country as well. We urge every public spirited citizen to ante up the small fee required to become a member and join, and help put Capitan on the map.

There will be a religious service, which will be non denominational on National Boy Scouts of America. Go to church Sunday. All Scouts are encouraged to attend some church at all times, but on this day it is required of them to attend some church. This is one of the highest organizations in the world in its records of citizen building, and should have the support of every person interested in the moral and spiritual welfare of our future leaders. The services will be at 8 o'clock p. m. Sunday at the High School Scout Master, E. D. Hammons, urges everyone interested to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Sears and son, Capt. Clifford Wimberly, went to Carlsbad this week and to visit Mr. Sears' brother, Mr. Burl Sears and family.

Mrs. Marshall Atkinson and Mrs. W. L. Smith of White Oaks were business visitors here Monday and were pleasant callers at the News office.

To Keep It In Balance

Think of your checking account as a scale. On one side is the service you receive: safety for your funds, convenience in paying bills, a complete record of money transactions, and cancelled checks that are valuable evidence of payments.

On the other side are the earnings our bank obtains by investing a part of the money you have on deposit. When this isn't enough to even up the scales, you pay a small amount to put them in balance. And that's the why and wherefore of service charges.

REPORT ON THE RUSSIANS.....

W. L. White

INSTALLMENT ONE

The Soviet vice-consul spoke creaky, schoolbook English. He was an agreeable young man, helping me fill out my visa application. His office was pleasant and airy, but I was uneasy. Maybe because the office of the consul, upstairs, had double doors. The kind when you open one door, you are left staring at still another closed door, about six Inches in front of your nose. If the knob of the first door is on your right, the knob of the second is on the left. So no one could possibly listen through both keyholes at once. I was uneasy because I had been with the Finnish army in the winter war of 1939-1940, which was bad news in connection with a Soviet visa. Of course, they know I had been in Finland, but I wanted them to know I knew they knew it.

The consul was an unsmiling, stocky little diplomat. It soon became clear that he was on a fishing trip for information. There is nothing sinister about this, for it is the avowed business of all diplomats, including our own, to report to their home governments on the state of the nation to which they are accredited.

There was no need to withhold anything from this consul, as his questions did not concern military matters but were all in the sphere of politics.

Just before I left the consul switched the conversation from politics to literature. I wished to go to the Soviet Union as assistant to Mr. Eric Johnston, but I was also connected with the Reader's Digest? Yes, I said, I was one of its editors. I bowed myself out the whisper-proof double doors and back to where Mr. Vavilov was waiting with the questionnaire. It began with a large blank space for a brief autobiography, into which I inserted the fact that I had been with the Finnish army in 1939, a fact that Mr. Vavilov, reading at my shoulder, seemed again not to notice.

I continued with other questions, obviously designed for White Russians, about political affiliations. I showed some dismay at all this, and Mr. Vavilov, smiling reassuringly, said there was no need, in my case, for detailed answers.

But at the end was a most curious question: I had hadly written "no" in its blank, but then I hesitated. Had I, they wanted to know, ever been associated with the armed forces of any government in opposition to the Soviet Union? I explained—this time clearly—that in 1939 I had been associated as a reporter with the armies of the Finnish Republic during its earlier war with Russia. So perhaps my answer should be yes?

Smiling broadly now, Mr. Vavilov shook his head.

"The proper answer there, Mr. White, as you have already written, is 'no.' Because in Finland in 1939, we understand that your opposition to the Soviet Union was purely verbal."

My visa came a week later. All this had come about as the result of an impulsive letter I had written a few weeks before. Reading that Joseph Stalin had issued a special invitation to visit Russia to Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, I had not down at my typewriter to tell Johnston I would like to go along.

Eric Johnston was to me a complete stranger, except that I had read a good deal of what he had written and liked most of it very much. He "believed in" this country; he had been an eloquent voice preaching optimism and courage for the postwar period; saying clearly that never again must we allow American business and industry to stagnate into a depression, but must continue to produce for peacetime needs and luxuries at almost wartime velocity; there would be free markets for everything if there were free jobs for all, and vice versa.

He had opened his career as president of the National Chamber by calling at the White House a precedent-breaking step, an American business had not hitherto accorded the New Deal official recognition. He had even sat down across a conference table from John L. Lewis.

He has a theory, that before you denounce an opponent, you should first go over with him the points on which you agree; you will both be surprised, Johnston points out, at how many of these there are and often the fight can be fairly compromised.

In somewhat this frame of mind he was approaching the Soviet Union; I wanted to go there for the very obvious reason that Russia is clearly the biggest and most unpredictable factor with which America must deal in the next few decades.

A week after my impulsive letter I met Eric Johnston across his desk in Washington. Eric Johnston is handsome. At forty-seven he has all of his white even teeth, all of his wavy brown hair, and a clear, ruddy skin, and blue eyes. He has a longish, sensitive face and a Hollywood profile. Together, these make him unusually and conspicuously handsome. He might have made a successful career as an actor, were it not for his brain, which, considered as an organ, is uncommonly good. It starts with a phenomenal memory. He never forgets anything he thinks he will ever need. He is healthily competitive; he wants something like almost anything you have, or if possible, one just a little better. But he takes disappointments well. When I first met him he was being mentioned for the presidency; he had a small but definite chance. He watched it carefully, never overestimated or underestimated his beam. When it faltered, he pronounced it dead and instantly forgot it.

I was pleased when he told me that, because he wanted to feel free to write and say what he thought on our return, he was insisting to the Russians that we pay our expenses wherever possible. He was talking along merrily for that purpose, and suggested that I do likewise.

The other member of our party was Joyce O'Hara, Johnston's regular assistant in the Chamber of Commerce. He is a blue-eyed Irishman of fifty with regular features which, anywhere outside the radius of Johnston's dazzling profile, would be considered unremarkably handsome. Not too many years ago he exchanged a successful newspaper job for a career in the public relations division of the Chamber of Commerce in Washington.

Joyce and I were thrown together constantly from the beginning of the trip. The protocol of our entire voyage was that if the hotel or guesthouse boasted an Imperial Bridal Suite complete with sitting room, six baths, and breakfast nook, it would always be assigned to Johnston in solitary grandeur, in his capacity as President of the Chamber of Commerce, while Joyce and I would share twin beds in the second-best room. For a few days we watched each other shove and listened to each other snore with considerable reserve and some suspicion.

Slowly and after days of appraisal we got down to a solid basis of friendly jibes at each other's wealth spots, and he gave us good as he got. We ended up warm friends. We departed from Washington and our plane stopped for a meal in the Azores where we were met by staff officers of the American base and picked up sketchy information about these Portuguese islands.

Johnston fell victim to an infected sinus at Casablanca. We waited in considerable luxury in a spacious villa, once the property of Jean Mass who formerly owned a string of collaborationist newspapers. The Allied command were using it as an overnight hotel for high officers and distinguished guests, as we seem to be classified.

At Cairo an American nose and throat man peered into Johnston's ear and instantly forbade us to fly over the 10,000 foot pass between Iran and the Soviet Union, which meant a few days' delay. Anyway we would get a good look at ancient Cairo, which none of us had ever seen.

The next morning Eric, Joyce and I continue our trip, and that afternoon at Teheran we see our first Russians. Their planes with the big red stars on the field as we circle, and as we get out of our plane, the Russian Ambassador to Iran and a half dozen of his staff are there to welcome Johnston. They are very solemn and do not smile as they shake hands.

These solemn Russian diplomats are all in their thirties or early forties, and they wear curious, badly cut Soviet suits—comber in hue and of choddy materials. You could take an American mail-order suit, bolt it, press it lightly, and get the same effect.

Next morning Averell Harriman, American Ambassador to the Soviet Union, who has just arrived in Teheran, is taking us to Moscow in the official ambassadorial Liberator.

Most fascinating of all is a fact which I know but not until now could believe: that in Russia there are few connected paved highways. I see wagon trails from the villages out to the fields, and sometimes faint ones from town to town, but not one strip of clean, flowing concrete or black-top.

Also I'm trying, through this plexiglass window, to see the socialist revolution as it has affected the villages, but I can't. For all this might have been here in the middle ages. If new thatched-roof huts have been built since czarist days, from 5,000 feet I can't tell them from the ancient ones. Looking down on every village, the biggest building is still the white church, built in czarist days. In twenty-five years the Soviets have constructed nothing half so big, although here and there is what might be a school or an administrative hall.

The co-pilot comes back to say we will swing low over Stalingrad. Diving, we follow the bands of the city itself as it follows the river—or rather, as once did the city. For Stalingrad is gone, and there remain only redbrick walls like the mags of decayed molars staring up at us. Factories, with twisted machinery rusting under the tangle of roof gardens.

Finally, just out of Moscow, we see an electric power line running from horizon to horizon. It is the first thing I am sure was built since 1917. But even we see the first hard-curfaced road, and that black mud on the horizon is Moscow itself. Then its railway yards and the smoke from its factories. Tiers of workers' apartments surround each factory and are in turn surrounded by a crazy quilt of potato patches. A spacious outdoor theater is on the river banks. The roofs of the big buildings are mottled with brown and green camouflage paint.

As we let our wheels down and begin to feel for the runway, I see, running past, great rows of American-built C-47s stacked on the field in orderly rows with the big star of the Red Air Force painted on each.

A considerable crowd is waiting at the airframe. First, the welcoming committee; a row of column Slavs in the same boiled mail-order suits we saw at Teheran. But the minute Eric Johnston emerges, a battery of lenses—movie cameras and Soviet copies of Leicas and

W. Averell Harriman

Graincocks—close in on his profile. This over, we smilingly shake hands with the unsmiling Russians and work our way through to the American reporters. Practically all of Moscow's tiny foreign newspaper colony is there. They tell us the Russians have given us an unusually big official turnout—"better than Donald Nelson's."

A big Russian in his middle thirties wanders toward me. "Is everything all right?" he wants to know. "I am Kirilov, in charge of protocol for the People's Commissariat of Foreign Trade." We did not then know that, representing this Commissariat, our official host, he was to be our constant companion. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Hog Influenza May Cause Serious Loss

Prevention Should Be Practiced in Hog Lot

Earthworms, usually found in large numbers around old straw stacks, often contain the lungworm which in turn is the carrier of hog influenza. With the arrival of cold damp weather, swine raisers can look for cases of hog flu.

Proper housing including draft-free ventilation and adequate bedding are necessary if hog flu is to be controlled or prevented. They should be kept from undue exposure. Hogs need dry, warm quarters free from drafts.

A healthy, well-housed and fed hog will not be in danger of contracting flu.

As the disease is contagious, any sick animals should be separated if part of the drove comes down with the flu. Special care and nursing should be given to the brood sows.

By proper housing, feeding and management, little trouble should be met with in the prevention of flu. It is taken for granted that the hog drove has been bred for constitutional vigor. A strong hog well managed will never prove a disease problem.

Chemical Effective As Weed Eradicator

The chemical 2, 4-D (chemically dichlorophenoxyacetic), has proven effective in killing dandelions, plantains, and many other weeds with little difficulty or expense by spraying.

Detail work is being conducted at Mississippi state agricultural experiment station by Prof. O. A. Leonard and F. H. Horner. Progress report indicates that the chemical acts as a plant hormone. When used in high concentrations, the plant dies under proper conditions.

Left, untreated bitterweed; right, bitterweed treated with 2, 4-D. This method of treatment has proven valuable in many ways.

The USDA reports that a solution of 2, 4-D containing as little as 1 1/2 ounces of the chemical in 10 gallons of water will be deadly to many species of broad-leaved plants including dandelion, plantain, pennywort, Japanese honeysuckle, annual morning-glory, daisy, chickweed, winter cress, ragweed, pigweed, burdock, wild mustard and annual cow thistle.

DDT in Paint

By W. J. DRYDEN

A wall paint blended with DDT under a new process has proved an effective "insect control" as long as 10 months after a single application. This paint, "Superior 303," contains 200 milligrams of DDT for each square foot of painted surface and has proven effective against 132 varieties of insects.

Tests have shown that seven seconds contact, on DDT paint, for flies first paralyzes and then kills the insects in 30 minutes. The paint is harmless to humans, and is especially effective in milk houses as well as other farm buildings.

Superphosphate Needed

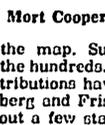

Five to six tons of animal manure reinforced with one-half bag of superphosphate per ton of manure produces as much increase in yield as does 10 to 12 tons per acre without the superphosphate.

The superphosphate can be scattered over the top of the load of manure before it goes to the field. Or it can be applied in the barn or sheds. When used in barns or sheds, it helps to keep down odors as well as reduce nitrogen loss.

IF YOU look over the list of all the leading ball players for the last 30 years, including baseball hall of fame at Cooperstown, you'll find that over 90 per cent of them came from cities and towns under 10,000.

Cobb, Speaker, Jackson, Mathewson, Alexander, Cy Young, Johnson, Grove, Sisler, Eddie Collins, Hornsby, Fox, Lajoie, Home Run Baker, Wagner, Bob Feller, the Cooper brothers, Keller, Dickey, the DiMaggios, Hartnett, the Deans, Carl Hubbell, and so on came to their fame from isolated and unknown spots on the map. Such instances run into the hundreds. New York's main contributions have been Gehrig, Greenberg and Frisch. Chicago has turned out a few stars, including Phil Cavaretta. Baltimore gave the game Babe Ruth. But New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and other crowded cities in proportion have lagged far behind.

Mort Cooper

In towns running from 1,000 to 10,000 population there is always room for a ball field. In these "Sweet Auburns, loveliest villages of the plains," there is space in which kids can hit, run, throw and slide. They can play the game up to the hilt. But in a city such as New York, you can see thousands trying to play on crowded streets as cars come through to drive them back to the sidewalks. Ever try to slide over cobblestones while eluding a fast-moving automobile?

Now Stars From Cities
Take a look at the now famous Cardinal roster, which embraces at least 20 stars. At least 83 per cent of these came along and up from places you never heard about. If these players had been born in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, etc., possibly two or three would have made the big leagues. That is the way the percentage runs. Gehrig and Frisch came along through Columbia and Fordham. But few street kids have a chance to get any college course and find a ball field where they can develop.

Baseball's hall of fame, now and in years to come, would be extremely thin if it had to look to the crowded, thoughtless larger cities for its talent. If there isn't enough within these cities, there is always space enough outside — and there are still buses running and there will soon be motor cars available.

Complaining about juvenile delinquency, youthful crime, is a waste of time. The responsibility belongs to older people who through sport and the full support of so many hard working organizations can change the entire picture in a few years.

What group of athletes keep in better physical condition—or worst physical condition, so far as professional sport is concerned? At a recent gabbing session we ran into a number of coaches, assistant coaches, trainers and assistant trainers who know their way around, who have been in charge of various sports for many years. It was their belief that professional football players and professional tournament golfers on the average were in better physical condition than any other group, and that professional baseball players trailed the list.

This statement will bring a loud and lusty squawk from many ball players, but it happens to carry more than a mere shade of truth. Anyway, the coaches and trainers who felt this way about it should know what they are talking about.

"This, of course, doesn't include all ball players," one trainer said. "But it includes too many of them. Most of them couldn't do half the job a pro football player has to face. Watch most of them hit a triple and you'll find them puffing at third base and that's less than 100 yards. They don't turn in enough road work to build up their legs. A pro baseball player should last far longer than a pro football player, considering the punishment the footballer has to take, but few of them do. Last season the New York Giants had Mel Hein, Herber and Ken Strong, each with nearly 20 years of football behind him. There have been many others such as Hutson with 10 or 12 years as already cashed in.

"For example I see where Detroit's Tigers this season have 43 exhibition games. This means a total of 197 contests from March to October, a long march that demands the best sort of physical shape. Many of them will be ready for this endurance test. But quite a lot won't be, unless they make a far harder effort to get in shape and keep in shape than so many have made in the past. Those fellows heading south early are the smart ones. This will be the toughest season any of them will have to tackle."

More Headaches for Farmer

Once more the farmer is being asked to break all food production records. To plow more acres, feed more livestock and harvest more crops than ever before. He is being asked to do this so that America may continue to feed and clothe the needy throughout the world, as well as our own folks at home.

To carry out this job the farmer must have tools of production. Most of those he owns have taken a terrific beating. They can't be tied together much longer with rusty fence wire.

In the teeth of this situation, the farmer ran into a strike in the steel industry—a strike which hit at the heart of food production.

When the steel plants shut down, manufacturers of farm machinery and equipment, farm trucks and tractors cannot get steel for their products.

This year the farmer won't receive as many of the replacements he desperately needs. He'll fight ahead with his old, broken machinery trying to crack another food production record, but the cards are stacked against him.

All this means more headaches for the farmer—loss of vital food production, and a bad dent in his pocketbook.

Facts Too Frequently Omitted

The steel strike was called by the United Steelworkers of America—CIO, which insists on a wage increase totaling $166,000,000. The U. S. Steel Corporation has offered a wage rise which if applied throughout the industry would amount to $135,000,000.

Steel workers are already among the highest paid wage-earners in America. Before the strike their average earnings were approximately $1.16 an hour, $9.26 a day and $46.32 a week—on a forty-hour week. The U. S. Steel offer would have given them about $1.31 an hour, $10.46 a day and $52.32 a week. But they refused it, and accused the steel industry of conspiring to ruin the union with an offered wage increase of $25 a month, the highest increase in the industry's history.

The strike is a direct violation of the contract between the union and the steel companies. The union wanted a long-term contract and got it. The union agreed not to strike during the life of the contract. Yet, the union struck January 21.

Fighting for a Way of Life

Farmers have a big stake in continuous steel production. They have an opportunity to say what they think about unchecked labor monopolies which bring to a stop the nation's recovery efforts, through excessive wage demands which could only add to inflation and cause soaring prices.

Not until enough of them protest unfair, dictatorial actions and urge proper safeguards against arrogant, heedless union leadership and one-sided labor laws will the country get back to sane, profitable production where everyone works toward a better standard of living.

Poor Radio Programs Irk Rural Listeners

FARM organizations here are up in arms against radio stations and the radio networks because they believe rural listeners are being discriminated against in allocation of time and the type of programs beamed to farm audiences.

Through four days of hearings before the Federal Communications Commission representatives of the National Grange, the National Farmers Union and the National Council of Farmer Co-operatives laid their grievances on the table in an effort to induce the FCC to demand more adequate farm programs broadcast at a time when farm and rural folks can listen.

The contention was (1) that the stations and networks are not allocating sufficient time to farm programs; (2) that programs now being broadcast are not of high caliber or interest to agriculture; (3) that time of broadcast makes it inconvenient or impossible for rural folks to listen; (4) that 21 million rural listeners are shut off at night from primary radio service and must be content with relatively inferior secondary service, and 10 million rural folks live outside the daytime service area of any standard broadcast station; and (5) due to new allocations many radio stations of land grant universities have been cut off the air by clear channel stations at times when farmers can listen.

The department of agriculture was represented at the hearing by John Baker, chief of the radio service of USDA, and M. L. Wilson, agriculture extension director. The farm leaders were outspoken in their disappointment at Baker's testimony in the belief he did not back them up, although they maintain Agriculture Secretary Anderson was interested in presenting a "strong case" in behalf of his department.

'Farm, Home Hour' Dropped

Farm leaders point to the loss of the National Farm and Home Hour. For many months this ran as a 60-minute, six days a week show during the noon hour in which the department of agriculture and farm organizations participated. They say that the show has now deteriorated into a five-minute Saturday presentation sponsored by a farm machinery manufacturer. Farm leaders contend that if the radio broadcasters were sympathetic to the more than 50 million rural listeners they would allocate more and better time and would program shows of special interest to farm audiences.

Many clear channel stations and the networks were represented at the hearing by their lawyers. While they presented no evidence, they did cross-examine the witnesses for the farm organizations, which included Russell Smith of the Farmers Union, C. Maurice Wieting of the Cooperatives, and Louis Wilson of the Grange.

Paul Porter, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, in an address before the National Association of Broadcasters last March, shortly after he assumed chairmanship of the commission, pointed out the "intolerable situation" in which rural listeners found themselves due to lack of good radio service. This statement indicated that he might do something about the allocation of new wave lengths.

However, the farmers maintain that nothing has been done to correct the situation and they have lost much of the time that was formerly allocated to farm programs. They maintain that farm and rural listeners have a special need for programs tailored to the interests of agriculture.

Mr. Porter, in his address before the broadcasters, pointed out the very facts testified to by the farm leaders, that 30.5 per cent of the area of continental United States inhabited by 10 million rural folk lies outside the daytime service area of any standard broadcast station, and that at night almost 87 per cent of the area populated by 21 million folks must rely on inferior service.

"This is an intolerable situation for a country with our great resources and technical capacity. The condition is particularly aggravated when you consider that the millions who have no service or only inferior service are precisely those isolated rural families which must rely on radio for their contact with the outside world," Mr. Porter said.

It's Up to Stations, Networks

The FCC has regulatory power over the radio stations and networks, not only over power and wave length, but over the type of broadcasts presented, hence the petition of the farm organizations before this commission. It would appear to your Home Town Reporter that with an audience of millions of rural listeners the radio industry would police itself with regard to the proper timing and presentation of interesting agricultural programs. No doubt they have a side in the matter.

TRY BICYCLE POLO FOR EXCITEMENT . . . Co-eds of the University of Miami have a crackerjack bicycle polo team, with glamour and skill combined. In above photograph, practically the entire membership of both teams are pursuing Nanette Verhoeck, as she dribbles the ball towards the Zeta goal. Note her technique of coasting with one foot on a pedal while the other is used to kick the ball along.

STRIKES ALSO HIT JAPAN . . . While the United States is blanketed with strikes in many industries, natives of Japan decided to follow suit. Shown above is strike held by thousands of municipal workers in which they emphasized their demands for at least three times their present wage and for better living conditions. They stormed the Tokyo city hall, where they are shown making their demands. Strikers claim that the inflation has made it impossible for them to live on present wage scales.

WHAT RUSSIA WANTS . . . Among the major problems that will cause headaches for the United Nations assembly is the easing of Russo-Turkish relations. The map above shows what Russia wants from Turkey. It also shows what the situation is in Iran. Many observers of international chess-playing believe that Russia's biggest want at the moment is freedom of the Dardanelles and access to warm water outlets. Russia has wanted such outlets for centuries and believes that she is now, as a member of UNO, entitled to have these demands met in full.

NOT ALL TEEN-AGERS ARE DELINQUENT . . . A welcome change from recent publicity given to teen-age delinquents, is the story of the eleven members of the "Asteria Trojans," New York football team, who were sworn into the navy in a body. The 17-year-olds are pictured at New York City navy recruiting office, as they took the oath, administered by Gen. W. T. Vreeman. The boys will be sent to school in Norfolk, Va.

MUNITIONS TO JAPAN WASHINGTON.—The Pearl Harbor investigating committee has now spent nearly three months digging into military, naval, political reasons why we were caught asleep on December 7, 1941. While this is important, all the facts show that Japan would have attacked anyway; if not at Pearl Harbor, at some other place, and if not on December 7, at some other time.

Meanwhile, we have seized various documents from the Japs, showing that this war was carefully built up over a period of years and that certain American munitions makers were either unsuspecting or deliberate Jap co-partners.

If we are to prevent war in the future—and that presumably is one motive of the Pearl Harbor committee—the manner in which American business aided the Japs to prepare for Pearl Harbor is important. We must build up machinery so this doesn't happen again.

MUNITIONS LOBBIES One thing the Pearl Harbor committee might well investigate is the way lobbies developed in Washington to put pressure on the government to sell war goods to Japan. These lobbies, representing oil, gasoline, scrap iron, airplanes, machine tools, made a lot of headway with the army and navy, sometimes with the state department.

One man they never affected was Harold Ickes. As secretary of the interior he controls the export of helium gas, and at exactly the same month the above report was written, the Germans were trying to buy helium from the U. S. A. for their zeppelins.

The army, the navy and Secretary of State Hull gave their okay. But Ickes said no—unless American inspectors were stationed in Germany to see how the helium was used. Finally the question came up in cabinet meeting. Secretary Hull gave a long speech telling why it was perfectly safe to sell helium to Germany without inspection. As the vote went round the table, every cabinet member voted against Ickes.

But Ickes still said no. Under the law, the secretary of the interior has absolute control over the export of helium. No one can overrule him. So finally FDR turned to Ickes and said:

"Well, Harold, you're the boss. You win."

VETERANS' PROBLEMS

Lt. Col. R. P. Bronson, chief of the contact and service branch of the Veterans' administration, blinked when he was handed a telegram from a distressed veteran the other day. It read:

"Assistance needed stop brother murdered here December 28 stop reply by wire."

Colonel Bronson instructed an aide to phone the veteran's home city and see that he was given immediate help. Then he continued to leaf through the daily file of pleas that come to his desk.

"It's all in a day's work," he said. "But I'll admit that one had me stamped for a while."

Wide and varied are the SOS appeals the Veterans' administration receives from men wearing the discharge insignia. They range from vets wanting to get traffic tickets "fixed" to those who want to adopt children, purchase new automobiles or get liquor licenses. "We're the 'Little Mother' agency of the government," said the colonel, a two-lyted overseas veteran with a sense of humor and four battle stars on his campaign ribbons. "We do our best, but of course we can't please everybody. It would make it a lot easier on us if some of our correspondents realized that their off-the-track problems hinder the handling of thousands of legitimate requests from men seeking benefits under the G. I. Bill of Rights and so on. When they ask us to find them wives, that sort of stamps us."

The love interest is uppermost in unusual V. A. mail. However, a Maryland vet recently wanted help in getting his water main connected.

A West Virginian posed the following $64 question:

"Do you know of or can you find out about some government agency which can assist me in finding a wife? I am a veteran of two years and nine months' service—age 39—and so far, for some unknown reason, I am unsuccessful in finding a bride. Hope to receive a favorable reply very soon."

CAPITAL CHAFF

Members of congress were not pleased by General Eisenhower's quick departure from the Library of Congress auditorium after he addressed them on demobilization. Admiral Nimitz had aides on hand to answer questions after he spoke, but Eisenhower ducked out right after reading his speech, leaving no one from the army to answer questions. . . . Al Marano, secretary to Congresswoman Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut, has a new daughter. Her name—Clare.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging headache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disease are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a record of safety and effectiveness. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Dress With a Contrasting Top Offers Endless Possibilities

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOT only has the dress with a contrast top held high fashion rank right through the fall and winter, but it now registers as a major theme on the new spring style program.

The idea of a two-piece costume that tops a skirt with a contrast blouse or bodice offers endless possibilities in way of versatile interpretation. It is ever so practical too in that it is easier to get a few yards of this material or that, in these days of limited yardage distribution, than it is to buy a whole dress length in a single fabric. Then too, there's thrift in the dress made up of a skirt with interchangeable tops.

The field of the contrast top is of such wide scope it enters into every phase of fashion from formal gowns, dressy afternoon types, simple daytime dresses to play clothes, and this year in early showings the suit that tops a dark or light skirt with a bright jacket is displayed as a fashion-irst for spring. If you like something different in way of a suit, choose a smart model that tops a black or navy skirt with a jacket tailored in soft pink or ice-blue wool. The suit that teams a dark brown skirt with a jacket in a vivid copper-colored wool would be a perfect selection for spring.

The contrast idea is most happily carried out in the costumes pictured. The striped-top rayon dress centered in the illustration is ever so wearable and good looking for daytime occasions. Black with chartreuse is the color combination. The whole effect is co-ordinated with the use of black front facings, cuffs and belt. Girls who can sew are enthusiastic over the dressy blouses they make of crisp taffeta in bright or pastel plaids and stripes. These have a ruffle plenum with the ruffle repeated in the sleeves.

To the left is a one-piece dress-up version of the college girl's sweater and skirt that gives the impression of a two-piece. The sweater top of rayon-and-wool boucle on a lovely pastel is joined to the black rayon skirt with a wide belt effect that sparkles with nailheads. A choice color range is offered in this dress such as ice blue or soft blush pink. It comes in a tea-rose and turquoise also, with black skirt or in two shades of fuchsia with black. In buying pretty dresses like these, or the materials to make them, it is well to cultivate the habit of checking up informative labels for facts about color-fastness, shrinkage and dependable wearing qualities. You will find lasting satisfaction in fabrics that are guaranteed.

Clever fingers can easily fashion a wool remnant in color or in black into a smart wrist-length jumper-style jacket such as the model shown to the right. Designed to be worn over a dark sweater or blouse, this jumper-jacket which is a new-this-season item, will prove a friend indeed when there is chill in the air on a cool spring day. Sleek shoulder seams supplemented with inverted waistline tucks effect a smart fit. For the color note three "licorice twist" buttons are used, giving a finished professional look to the jacket. Note that this lady studs the same buttons on her bracelet handbag as a closing detail that conceals the hook and eye. These handsome button originals also come in gold or silver. They make elegant earrings, and three coked across a black velvet ribbon choker complete a most flattering jewelry-like ensemble.

Color contrast is seen all through the new print dresses and suits. Black band and border trimmings on color-bright prints are played up in endless way in the new showings. Destined to be one of the big success fashions for spring and summer is the perfectly charming two-piece (it also comes in one-piece versions) dress has a black jersey or crepe bodice-like top, the skirt being styled dirndl fashion of a gorgeous print.

Bejeweled Black

Your returning hero will like the way you look in this quality-kind black rayon crepe dress, sparkling with jeweled accents. There is something about romantic black that always creates an aura of elegance and charm. Note the nicely fitted sleeves and the modishly draped skirt. A dress of this type is the mainstay of one's wardrobe the entire year round. The distinguishing quality of this good-looking black dress that goes everywhere with aplomb is that it maintains the slim figure-flattering silhouette.

Pleats, Flares, Bows Give Accent to Hips

Hips are in fashion! We will have to reorganize our former ideas about slenderizing hips, for definitely a new angle in this season's silhouette is the accenting of hips. This is done in ingenious and varied ways. Dresses are coming in with fullness at each side achieved with pleats, flares, shirtings, inset panels with pleats in tiers, and so on. Then too, designers are doing clever things with pockets, bows, tunics and even panniers are seen on afternoon dresses and evening formals. Sometimes a little crinoline is used to accent hips. However, in most instances the fullness and pleats are introduced so skillfully as to preserve a slender look. In the smart form-fitting princess gowns a single huge bow at one hip gives a smart look. It is obvious that hips are inevitable with the smaller waistlines, and the new silhouettes are charmingly picturesque.

Designers' Skill Focuses

On Sleeves in Spring Wear
Virtually every model in the new spring collection dramatizes the sleeves of suits, jackets, dresses and coats. All the skill, imagination, whimsy, tricks of cut and fine seaming, buttons, beads, sequins, embroidery, tucks, ruffles, color slashings and insets, goes into the sleeves. What is left makes the slimmest of skirts and the snuggest of bodices and jackets, thus focusing attention on the sleeves.
Some are shining with buttons that hold decorative flaps, others have caps of plain material over the shoulder to accent the long beaded and embroidered sleeves.

Poor Radio Programs Irk Rural Listeners

FARM organizations here are up in arms against radio stations and the radio networks because they believe rural listeners are being discriminated against in allocation of time and the type of programs beamed to farm audiences.

Through four days of hearings before the Federal Communications commission representatives of the National Grange, the National Farmers Union and the National Council of Farmer Co-operatives laid their grievances on the table in an effort to induce the FCC to demand more adequate farm programs broadcast at a time when farm and rural folks can listen.

The contention was (1) that the stations and networks are not allocating sufficient time to farm programs; (2) that programs now being broadcast are not of high caliber or interest to agriculture; (3) that time of broadcast makes it inconvenient or impossible for rural folks to listen; (4) that 21 million rural listeners are shut off at night from primary radio service and must be content with relatively inferior secondary service, and 10 million rural folks live outside the daytime service area of any standard broadcast station; and (5) due to new allocations many radio stations of land grant universities have been cut off the air by clear channel stations at times when farmers can listen.

The department of agriculture was represented at the hearing by John Baker, chief of the radio service of USDA, and M. L. Wilson, agriculture extension director. The farm leaders were outspoken in their disappointment at Baker's testimony in the belief he did not back them up, although they maintain Agriculture Secretary Anderson was interested in presenting a "strong case" in behalf of his department.

'Farm, Home Hour' Dropped

Farm leaders point to the loss of the National Farm and Home Hour. For many months it has run as a 30-minute, six-days-a-week show during the noon hour in which the department of agriculture and farm organizations participated. They say that the show has now deteriorated into a five-minute Saturday pre-emption sponsored by a farm machinery manufacturer. Farm leaders contend that if the radio broadcasters were sympathetic to the more than 50 million rural listeners they would allocate more and better time and would program shows of special interest to farm audiences.

Many clear channel stations and the networks were represented at the hearing by their lawyers. While they presented no evidence, they did cross-examine the witnesses for the farm organizations, which included Russell Smith of the Farmers Union, C. Maurice Witing of the Co-operatives, and Louis Wilson of the Grange.

Paul Porter, chairman of the Federal Communications commission, in an address before the National Association of Broadcasters last March, shortly after he assumed chairmanship of the commission, pointed out the "intolerable situation" in which rural listeners found themselves due to lack of good radio service. This statement indicated that he might do something about the allocation of now wave lengths.

Special Programs Needed

However, the farmers maintain that nothing has been done to correct the situation and they have lost much of the time that was formerly allocated to farm programs. They maintain that farm and rural listeners have a special need for programs tailored to the interests of agriculture.

Mr. Porter, in his address before the broadcasters, pointed out the very fact testified to by the farm leaders, that 83.5 per cent of the area of continental United States inhabited by 10 million rural folk lies outside the daytime service area of any standard broadcast station, and that at night almost 67 per cent of the area populated by 31 million folks must rely on inferior service.

"This is an intolerable situation for a country with our great resources and technical capacity. The condition is particularly aggravated when you consider that the millions who have no service or only inferior service are precisely those isolated rural families which must rely on radio for their contact with the outside world," Mr. Porter said.

It's Up to Stations, Networks

The FCC has regulatory power over the radio stations and networks, not only over power and wave length, but over the type of broadcast presented, hence the petition of the farm organizations before this commission. It would appear to your Home Town Reporter that with an audience of millions of rural listeners the radio industry would police itself with regard to the proper timing and presentation of interesting agricultural programs. No doubt they have a side in the matter.

STRIKES ALSO HIT JAPAN . . . While the United States is blanketed with strikes in many industries, natives of Japan decided to follow suit. Shown above is strike held by thousands of municipal workers in which they emphasized their demands for at least three times their present wage and for better living conditions. They stormed the Tokyo city hall, where they are shown making their demands. Strikers claim that the inflation has made it impossible for them to live on present wage scales.

WHAT RUSSIA WANTS . . . Among the major problems that will cause headaches for the United Nations assembly is the easing of Russo-Turkish relations. The map above shows what Russia wants from Turkey. It also shows what the situation is in Iran. Many observers of international chess-playing believe that Russia's biggest want at the moment is freedom of the Dardanelles and access to warm water outlets. Russia has wanted such outlets for centuries and believes that she is now, as a member of UNO, entitled to have these demands met in full.

MUNITIONS TO JAPAN WASHINGTON.—The Pearl Harbor investigating committee has now spent nearly three months digging into military - naval - political reasons why we were caught asleep on December 7, 1941. While this is important, all the facts show that Japan would have attacked anyway; if not at Pearl Harbor, at some other place, and if not on December 7, at some other time.

Meanwhile, we have seized various documents from the Japs, showing that this war was carefully built up over a period of years and that certain American munitions makers were either unsuspecting or deliberate Jap co-partners.

If we are to prevent war in the future—and that presumably is one motive of the Pearl Harbor committee—the manner in which American business aided the Japs to prepare for Pearl Harbor is important. We must build up machinery so this doesn't happen again.

MUNITIONS LOBBIES One thing the Pearl Harbor committee might well investigate is the way lobbies developed in Washington to put pressure on the government to sell war goods to Japan. These lobbies, representing oil, gasoline, scrap iron, airplanes, machine tools, made a lot of headway with the army and navy, sometimes with the state department.

One man they never affected was Harold Ickes. As secretary of the interior he controls the export of helium gas, and at exactly the same month the above report was written, the Germans were trying to buy helium from the U. S. A. for their zeppelins.

The army, the navy and Secretary of State Hull gave their okay. But Ickes said no—unless American inspectors were stationed in Germany to see how the helium was used. Finally the question came up in cabinet meeting. Secretary Hull gave a long speech telling why it was perfectly safe to sell helium to Germany without inspection. As the vote went round the table, every cabinet member voted against Ickes.

But Ickes still said no. Under the law, the secretary of the interior has absolute control over the export of helium. No one can overrule him. So finally FDR turned to Ickes and said:

"Well, Harold, you're the boss. You win."

VETERANS' PROBLEMS Lt. Col. R. P. Bronson, chief of the contact and service branch of the Veterans' administration, blinked when he was handed a telegram from a distressed veteran the other day. It read:

"Assistance needed stop brother murdered here December 23 stop reply by wire."

Colonel Bronson instructed an aide to phone the veteran's home city and see that he was given immediate help. Then he continued to leaf through the daily file of pleas that come to his desk.

"It's all in a day's work," he said. "But I'll admit that one had me stumped for a while." Wide and varied are the SOS appeals the Veterans' administration receives from men wearing the discharge insignia. They range from vote wanting to get traffic tickets "fixed" to those who want to adopt children, purchase new automobiles or get liquor licenses.

"We're the 'Little Mother' agency of the government," said the colonel, a two-fisted overseas veteran with a sense of humor and four battle stars on his campaign ribbons. "We do our best, but of course we can't please everybody. It would make it a lot easier on us if some of our correspondents realized that their off-the-track problems hinder the handling of thousands of legitimate requests from men seeking benefits under the G.I. Bill of Rights and so on. When they ask us to find them wives, that sort of stumps us."

The love interest is uppermost in unusual V.A. mail. However, a Maryland vet recently wanted help in getting his water main connected.

A West Virginian posed the following $64 question: "Do you know of or can you find out about some government agency which can assist me in finding a wife? I am a veteran of two years and nine months service—age 33—and so far, for some unknown reason, I am unsuccessful in finding a bride. Hope to receive a favorable reply very soon."

Dress With a Contrasting Top Offers Endless Possibilities

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOT only has the dress with a contrast top held high fashion rank right through the fall and winter, but it now registers as a major theme on the new spring style program.

The idea of a two-piece costume that tops a skirt with a contrast blouse or bodice offers endless possibilities in way of versatile interpretation. It is over so practical too in that it is easier to get a few yards of this material or that, in these days of limited yardage distribution, than it is to buy a whole dress length in a single fabric. Then too, there's thrift in the dress made up of a skirt with interchangeable tops.

The field of the contrast top is of such wide scope it enters into every phase of fashion from formal gowns, dressy afternoon types, simple daytime dresses to play clothes, and this year in early showings the suit that tops a dark or light skirt with a bright jacket is displayed as a fashion-artist for spring. If you like something different in way of a suit, choose a smart model that tops a black or navy skirt with a jacket tailored in soft pink or ice-blue wool. The suit that teams a dark brown skirt with a jacket in a vivid copper-colored wool would be a perfect collection for spring.

The contrast idea is most happily carried out in the costumes pictured. The striped-top rayon dress centered in the illustration is over so wearable and good looking for daytime occasions. Black with charcoal to the color combination. The whole effect is co-ordinated with the use of black front facings, cuffs and belt. Girls who can sew are enthusiastic over the dressy blouses they make of crisp taffeta in bright or pastel plaids and stripes. These have a ruffle plenum with the ruffle repeated in the sleeves.

To the left is a one-piece dress-up version of the college girl's sweater and skirt that gives the impression of a two-piece. The sweater top of rayon-and-wool boucle on a lovely pastel is joined to the black rayon skirt with a wide belt effect that sparkles with nailheads. A choice color range is offered in this dress such as ice blue or soft blush pink. It comes in a tea-rose and turquoise also, with black skirt or in two shades of fuchsia with black. In buying pretty dresses like these, or the materials to make them, it is well to cultivate the habit of checking up informative labels for facts about color-fastness, shrinkage and dependable wearing qualities. You will find lasting satisfaction in fabrics that are guaranteed.

Clover fingers can easily fashion a wool remnant in color or in black into a smart wrist-length jumper-style jacket such as the model shown to the right. Designed to be worn over a dark sweater or blouse, this jumper-jacket which is a new-thing-ness item, will prove a friend indeed when there is chill in the air on a cool spring day. Sleek shoulder seams supplemented with inverted waistline tucks effect a smart fit. For the color note three "licorice twist" buttons are used, giving a finished professional look to the jacket. Note that this lady studs the same buttons on her bracelet handbag on a closing detail that coordinates the look and eye. These handsome button originals also come in gold or silver. They make elegant earrings, and three cowed across a black velvet ribbon choker complete a most flattering jewelry-like ensemble.

Color contrast to seen all through the new print dresses and suits. Black band and border trimmings on color-bright prints are played up in endless way in the new showings. Destined to be one of the big success fashions for spring and summer is the perfectly charming two-piece (it also comes in one-piece versions) dress has a black jersey or crepe bodice-like top, the skirt being styled dirndl fashion of a gorgeous print.

Bejeweled Black

Your returning hero will like the way you look in this quality-kind black rayon crepe dress, sparkling with jeweled accents. There is something about romantic black that always creates an aura of elegance and charm. Note the nicely fitted sleeves and the modestly draped skirt. A dress of this type is the mainstay of one's wardrobe the entire year round. The distinguishing quality of this good-looking black dress is that it maintains the slim, flattering silhouette.

Pleats, Flares, Bows Give Accent to Hips

Hips are in fashion! We will have to reorganize our former ideas about slenderizing hips, for definitely a new angle in this season's silhouettes is the accenting of hips. This is done in ingenious and varied ways. Dresses are coming in with fullness at each gigo achieved with pleats, flares, shirrings, inset panels with pleats in tiers, and so on. Then too, designers are doing clever things with pockets, bows, tunic and even panniers are seen on afternoon dresses and evening formal. Sometimes a little crinoline is used to accent hips. However, in most instances the fullness and pleats are introduced so skillfully as to preserve a slender look. In the smart form-fitting princess gowns a single huge bow at one hip gives a smart look. It is obvious that hips are inevitable with the smaller waistlines, and the new silhouettes are charmingly picturesque.

Designers' Skill Focuses On Sleeves in Spring Wear

Virtually every model in the new spring collection dramatizes the sleeves of suits, jackets, dresses and coats. All the skill, imagination, whimsy, tricks of cut and fine sewing, buttons, beads, sequins, embroidery, tucks, ruffles, color slashings and insets, goes into the sleeves. What is left makes the slimmest of skirts and the snuggest of bodices as jackets, thus focusing attention on the sleeves. Some are shining with buttons that hold decorative flaps, others have tucks of plain material over the shoulder to accent the long beaded and embroidered sleeves.
