The Wolf

By JIM KJELGAARD McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

Ferguson swung a little faster down the trail he had made when he left the cabin that morning. He grinned whimsically. It took ten years' experience successfully to run a trap line...

He reached the cabin and stopped short. Sharp and clear in the new snow the imprints of his wife's snowshoes led straight away from the cabin, down the trail she took through the spruces...

After a moment Ferguson was shocked into sluggishness. Five months before, a week after he had brought Ann here, he came out of the forest toward the cabin late one night and heard her scream...

The two snowshoe trails intermingled.

down her cheek and her clothes half tipped from her back. With her was a renegade half-breed named Anatik.

Charging in with bull-like rage, Ferguson had beaten Anatik with his fists, knocked him down again and again, smashed his face to a pulp, and would have killed him if Ann hadn't interfered.

Then he dropped the beaver in the snow. Not stopping to remove his own snowshoes he ran into the cabin, snatched his deer rifle and, as fast as he could, ran down the plainly marked trail.

But even as he ran he looked carefully both at the trail ahead and at the tracks he followed. The two snowshoe trails intermingled, and earlier that morning a big timber wolf had also run down the trail.

The wolf, with characteristic cunning, had run at the side where traps were least likely to be.

Ferguson reached up with his left hand to brush his hat from his head. Without breaking stride, transferring his rifle from his right hand to his left, he slipped his arms out of his coat sleeves.

Just ahead, at the top of a little rise and to one side of the trail, a bushy spruce showed sharply green against the white background. Ferguson raced up the slope and stopped suddenly to swing his rifle around.

He stood with his legs braced, his chest heaving mightily as he strove to get his breath. Anatik lay stretched out at the foot of the evergreen, trying to shrink into the snow, his fear-filled eyes staring at Ferguson. Ferguson cocked his rifle, raised it and brought it down again.

"I reckon not," he said slowly. "I ought to blast you where you lie. But for her sake I'll let you live."

He read the signs etched plainly in the snow. Anatik, indeed, had not forgotten who had beaten him. He had known that Ferguson would follow the double trail, had planned that he would run to his death in so doing. There was a deep depression on the trail where he had stayed a long time in ambush. Then, seeking better concealment, he had crawled under the spruce. But the big timber wolf had also walked beneath the tree.

Ferguson smiled tenderly. A trap per, wanting to take that wolf, would plan to shoot or trap it on a ridge or in some thicket a wolf might cross. Only an inexperienced woman, seeing wolf tracks under the spruce, would expect it to be in the same place the next day.

Ferguson smiled again at seeing the heavy wolf traps clamped on each of Anatik's wrists.

Woman's World Boost Blouse Supply By Making New Ones from Old Dresses

By Etta Haley

NO WOMAN ever has enough blouses, the most economical item in the wardrobe. If you have a skirt with a choice of two, three or even four blouses, you can always be sure of going about well dressed without giving the impression that you are always wearing the same clothes or operating on a limited wardrobe.

Most blouses require two yards or less of material, and they may be made from all sorts of material. In fact, the sky is the limit as far as fabrics for blouses are concerned. Many a woman with outmoded dresses or evening gowns can put together several blouses and give the impression of a brand new wardrobe.

Taffeta evening gowns make particularly attractive blouses. Since taffeta blouses are now popular, those outmoded gowns should now be taken out, overhauled, cut and made into something as usable and pretty as a blouse to give you an alternate for that new spring suit.

Any style may be chosen for taffeta blouses are seen in draped and tailored styles. They are cool and feel well under a wool suit. They are dressy enough even when you remove the jacket to your suit.

Fitting is as important in a blouse as in a well-tailored suit. Take a look at some of the handsome, expensive blouses in the stores and you will see what I mean. Notice that there are at least four tucks at the waist of the blouse, two on each side in both back and in front. In some styles you will find even more tucks to give that "nipped" at the waist look, and prevent too much fullness under the skirt.

Details are important In Making Blouse

Another important detail which we are beginning to see more often in blouses is the deep dart right underneath the arm. This is used to get away from the flat-looking bust and to give more attractive, fitted lines to the garment. Even if the pattern which you happen to be using does not show these darts, fit them into the garment after the shoulder seams are sewed and you are ready to fit these side seams. Then baste them in, press, and try on. You will see how much they do for the figure.

Darts are used plentifully on the blouse, as are gathers. In making the blouse, gather at the shoulders first, using very tiny stitches so that the gathering will be even. If the blouse has a yoke and an action back, make sure that the blouse is gathered, as at the shoulders, and basted carefully in place before sewing.

Another detail which is important in the blouse is the shoulders. A tiny basting stitch is run around the upper part of the sleeve, and this is used for making the small gathers which enable you to ease in the sleeve when you are ready to stitch it into place on the blouse. Most of the fullness is allowed on the top of the shoulders and the back. Make sure that no gathers are allowed underneath the arm, as this will make the blouse uncomfortable to wear.

Many types of shoulder pads are now available which will also aid in making a crisp blouse.

Make a crisp blouse.

Black Wool Crepe

A smart black wool crepe dress with a matching hood is modeled by Martha Vickers, now appearing in Warner Brothers' "The Big Sleep." The hand-crocheted pajama is of black chenille.

giving good lines to the blouse. The more expensive pads seem to cup the shoulder rather than pad it, and they are not so weighty as the stuffed ones. They may be used in several blouses.

Another type of pad now being made is attached to a net vest. This is designed to be worn underneath the blouse, and of course, it eliminates sewing pads in each blouse.

Still another solution to the pad problem is to use the taffeta itself. The pads, which need not be stuffed, since the material is stiff, will also match the blouse perfectly.

If you are fond of cuffs on the blouse, taffeta makes beautiful pleated cuffs. The pleats should be placed evenly and pressed and basted in place before sewing. Pay particular attention to the line or print of the material. Piping may also be used if you are fortunate in finding some that matches or contrasts perfectly with the material you have on hand.

If you are making long sleeves on the blouse, you will want at least two darts at the elbow to allow for freedom of movement. Sometimes patterns will call for only one dart, but if it has been found best to make two small rather than one deep dart. The finished garment will also look much better.

It is always wise in making darts of this type to come to a sharp point. You can best guide your sewing if you will baste first. Always tie the threads on the inside—and do tie them firmly so that the dart does not come open later. It's much easier to sew them right the first time than to try to repair them later when they are sewed on the garment and you no longer have a flat working surface.

Home Sewing Hints

Just a word about patterns for those of you who do a lot of home sewing. If the tape measure around the bust reads 42, please buy a pattern in that size, not in a 38. The size of the individual is much better concealed in a correctly fitted garment, than one which is too small.

If the pattern must be altered, it is much easier to alter one that is too large simply by taking tucks in the pattern. If too small, the pattern must be slit, and this is much more difficult to do than taking in tucks.

Avoid over-sewing if you want the garment to look nice. Use the type of finished edge most suitable to your material and make this as neat as possible.

Good, table space, good light and a place for the ironing board are among the essentials needed for home sewing. If it is not possible to have a sewing room, have all these items conveniently on hand when you do sew.

Youngster's Embroidered Sunsuit

LET the youngsters soak up sun in gaily-embroidered sunsuits; each takes less than 1 yard of fabric! Appliqued boat and chicks.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If you are smart, you will place knit garments in drawers rather than hang them up. Hanging stretches them.

Accidental cuts in garments usually tear threads both ways and should be mended at once. Otherwise the cut will stretch and lose its shape making mending the more difficult.

Never set a vase or bowl of flowers in a draft. If you do, they will soon wilt.

Sitting on the edge of a bed causes the mattress to sag.

Never crowd the rinse tub. Clothes must move freely under water to get the soap out. Also lift each piece of clothing up and out of water when rinsing clothes. Otherwise dirt in the soiled water remains in the fabric.

A bird house with a hinged roof makes an attractive clothespin box when attached to a clothesline post.

Slip buttons over a wire hairpin and twist the ends together the minute buttons are removed from the garment. Drop them into your regular button box and they're ready when you need them.

A 1 yard remnant, plus scraps for appliques, makes each suit. Pattern 909 has transfer of 2 birds, pockets, pattern pieces for sizes 1, 2, 3 and 4.

Spring Fashion Notes

Gray is a most popular color for summer wear. Gray chambray trimmed with white eyelet is exceedingly popular.

Delightful settee eyelet is perfect for cool, short, street-length dresses. These can be dressy and sophisticated and need not look as though they were borrowed from a designer.

Scarf prints are worked into the bodice or scarf treatments in ingenious ways that bespeak a decided play of imagination. They are worn around the head like a little draped turban. Hoods are the plaything of designers who are creating scottish affairs to wear in connection with new spring dresses.

Make this season one full with

Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE present year may not be the golden age of sport as far as outstanding ability goes. I can see little chance that it will produce masterpieces even close to Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Tommy Hitchcock, Rogers Hornsby, Bill Tilden, Red Grange and Man o' War. Not to overlook Earl Sande.

But the year ahead will outclass the postwar period of the first world conflict when it comes to the matter of attendance and the actual amount of gold or its equivalent taken in at the turnstiles.

This 1946 season will make all other past years look like the tag end of a depression so far as crowds and cash are concerned. The recent basketball season fattened all past attendance records. We have had over 50,000 people clamoring to pay $20 a seat for a non-title fight, meaning Graziano and Servo.

California and Florida race tracks have left the past far behind in this same respect. Two Alabama football squads, made up from Alabama players, recently fought it out before 25,000 spectators in Birmingham. Racing at Jamaica has already taken long leaps beyond last year's earlier marks.

The super-brilliant stars who followed the last world war may be missing, but there are still enough good ones to keep the human mass rolling in the general direction of the next show, whatever game it might happen to be.

Only Warming Up

But these matters are only in the warm-up division. The real harvest from the golden crop is still on beyond us.

Baseball expects to shatter all past crowd records by a wide margin. The Yankees hope to play before something approximating two million at home. The Dodgers would be right alongside if there was only enough parking room for the human frame. The Giants won't be far away if their ball club holds up.

The 450 million dollar bet at New York tracks last season is likely to reach or pass 550 million dollars this year. We have seen crowded Derby and Frenches years before, but nothing to what this next May will offer in these two better than 100-thousand-dollar tests. The Yankee stadium hasn't the attendance space to equal the crowds that saw the two Tunney - Dempsey shows, but the Louis-Conn meeting will outdraw both financially in the way of extra carloads of cash. They are already talking about Graziano being involved in a million dollar gate and the rock-fisted entry hasn't even a title.

The United States Golf association is dead sure that the open at Canterbury, Cleveland, in June and the amateur at Baltusrol in September will run up far higher figures than either has ever drawn in the past. The crowds who want to see a contest have already far outgrown the limited spaces through spring and summer and fall.

On a recent tour of the southeast we were often asked how long the money would hold out. Apparently it is going to hold out for at least another year. No one can say yet in just what fighting shape either Louis or Conn will be, but the rush to contribute at least three million dollars is still under way with the contest coming late in June.

Apparently it isn't the entry list but the game that is drawing them out. As far as one can see neither the Derby nor the Frenches nor the Belmont has any Count Fleet or any Whirlaway or Alab running. No outstanding star has yet shown for these events, but this won't affect the size of the populace on hand.

Baseball comes nearer approaching the first golden age in playing class. For baseball still has the Cardinals, DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Bob Feller and many others with a high standard of excellence, including Newkammer and Wakefield of the Tigers.

Some one recently asked how large the crowds would be if Ruth, Dempsey, Jones, Tilden, Hornsby, were back in their prime. The answer is they couldn't be any larger for the simple reason there isn't any more room. Today they'll rush to see anything at any price. Apparently everything is worth $50—except $50.

Genius in Sports

What is this "know-how," this genius or instinct for superlative play in sport? Ty Cobb's father was a Georgia judge who had no particular interest in any game. Ty Cobb's children had no interest in baseball. Yet Bill Tilden once told me that young Ty Cobb might have been a tennis champion.

Old man DiMaggio never had the slightest idea of what baseball meant. Yet he produced Joe, Dom and Vince DiMaggio.

SUBSIDY PAYMENT MUST BE PAID BY TAXPAYERS

THOSE OF US who are not on the receiving end, and most of us are in that class, may feel the payment of subsidies by the federal government does not concern us. But each individual of us is concerned. We do the paying.

The subsidy payments anyone may receive comes out of our pockets. The taxes, direct and indirect, that we pay is the government's only source of revenue. For each million dollars in subsidies paid by the federal government, there must be a million dollars in taxes collected from us regardless of who receives the subsidy payments.

An effort was made to pay the producers of lumber a subsidy, both to make meeting the cost of production possible, and to hold the price of lumber for the consumer down to the OPA ceiling.

With such a subsidy in effect Jones finds it possible to build that new home he wants. He can get the lumber, and he can get it at that reasonable OPA ceiling-price.

A neighbor, Brown, lives in a rented house. He, too, would like to build, but cannot finance such a project. Brown, both directly and indirectly, pays taxes to the federal government. Some portion of the taxes collected from him is used to pay the subsidy on the lumber used in the Jones home. Brown may feel that he has no interest in the subject of government paid subsidies, but he has. It is through such a system that he pays a part of the construction cost of the Jones home.

Both the lumber mill owner and Jones would be on the receiving end of a subsidy on lumber. To the mill owner it would make no difference whether his cost of production came from a government subsidy, or from an increased price to Jones for the lumber he needs. To Jones a subsidy meant not only the opportunity to secure the desired lumber, but to secure it at a lower price. Jones profited, the mill owner did not lose, but how about Brown? If he stops to think about his place in the subsidy racket, he will not approve.

In the operation of the various subsidies congress, or the executive department, have foisted upon us, most of us are Browns. We pay but do not receive. Wonder if President Truman thought of that when he urged a subsidy on lumber, or possibly he wanted to build a house. A majority of the members of the house of representatives were Browns.

INFLATION COSTS HAVE MOUNTED STEADILY

THE INTRICACIES of economics and the higher mathematics needed to follow economic trends, are beyond my depth. I can, however, read and understand such facts as those presented by O. J. Arnold, president of Northwestern National Life Insurance company at Minneapolis. From that statement I get the information that during the five years, 1940 to 1945, the inflationary price we have paid for commodities has cost American families, as an average, $2,630. To that will be added for 1946 another $430.

The basis of the inflation that has been so expensive is too much circulating currency and credit. The cause for such a condition is largely the 60,300 million dollars of federal borrowings from the banks. The banks turned much of that credit into circulating currency, and from it we have inflation. From that inflation we have labor troubles, higher wages, again higher prices and more inflation. It is all a vicious circle which the government is supposed to control, but has not entirely succeeded.

THE FARMER would prefer to receive all of the price of his product directly rather than have a portion of it come to him indirectly in the form of a subsidy. In either case, the consumer pays, but the subsidy is covered up, and all consumers do not realize they are paying it. All subsidies must come from the pockets of the taxpayers, and we are all taxpayers. Political honesty would permit the direct price raise, and cut out the subsidies. The farmer would prefer it that way.

NO MATTER WHAT it may be called, the English-speaking people do stick together. Blood is thicker than water, though we may fight among ourselves.

SOME YEARS AGO, A wealthy citizen of Omaha, whose hobby had been raising orchids, offered his collection to the city. He did not combine with that a fund for maintaining the collection. The city fathers considered the cost of upkeep and said "no." We need some of that same careful consideration of upkeep at Washington. It is easy to establish new bureaus, but expensive to keep them going.

INDEPENDENCE does not now so strongly appeal to the Filipinos.

More For Your Money
 A dollar is always a dollar, but... everyone knows it doesn't always buy the same amount of what you happen to want at any given time. Sometimes it buys more, sometimes less. When the supply of things outweighs the supply of money, your dollar goes a long way; when things are scarce and money plentiful, the buying power of your dollar shrinks. Because this is a law of economics that is constantly at work, almost anyone can turn it to his advantage. How? Simply by laying away as many dollars as possible when prices are high and buying when dollars will buy the most. Yes, it can be as simple as that. The trick is to make up your mind to follow that program and then STICK to it. Many people who do, accumulate their money in an account at our bank.

Adjournment of Congress Will Give Breathing Spell

WITH the Easter recess out of the way, as things are shaping up now, congress may adjourn about August 1 to give its members a chance to build their political fences for the November elections.

It may be a good thing, for with congress in recess until after the first of the year, the nation can get down to work for real production without the disturbing influences of proposed legislation in the immediate offing.

Furthermore, everything congress has tackled this year has been approached from the political angle. The members have been loath to take a stand on any controversial subject which might change a vote one way or another.

Between now and August 1 important things may be expected to happen. President Truman's popularity, at bottom as he finished his first year in office, will be on the upgrade from now on.

Little Drastic Legislation

Congress will extend the draft with curtailments on age limits, no fathers, increased pay and shorter service; the veterans housing bill may become law, with some subsidy included, and price ceilings on new homes, probably not on existing homes.

Another fair employment practices bill, beaten in the senate by a southern filibuster, likely will come up in the house but will not get far.

The power lobby has effectively bottled up the various regional authority bills for the Missouri valley, the Columbia river valley and others, and in all probability there will be no vote on any of these measures this year.

Will Approve British Loan

Our guess is that the British loan will be given congressional approval after some of the opposition congressmen get their spleen on the question out of their systems.

And there's another important measure, one which the President has several times pointed to, and that's the matter of Presidential succession. President Truman is planning a trip to the Philippines on July 4.

There is a rash of labor reform bills and some in mid term find some chance of passage. But most assuredly there will be no drastic anti-labor legislation before the elections in November.

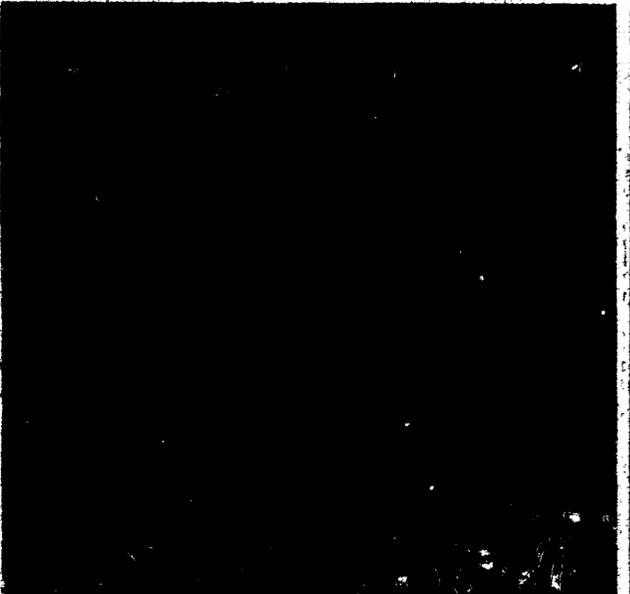

In the meantime there are rumors around Washington that Sec. Clinton Anderson will resign his job as head of USDA.

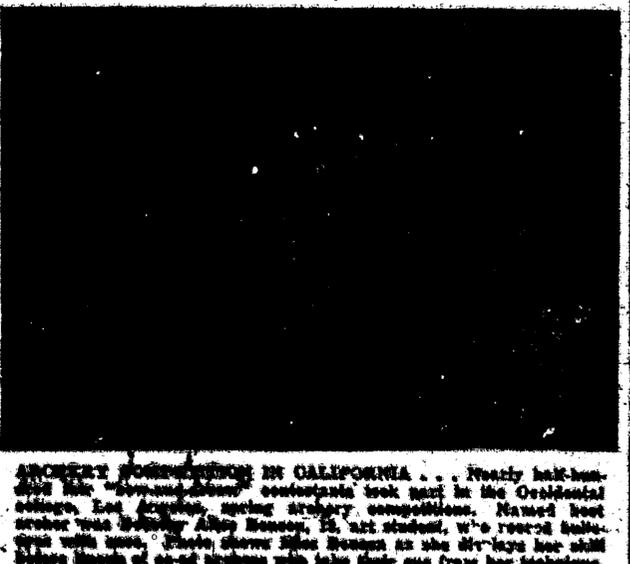

SOMETHING NEW IN POLITICS . . . S/S Carl E. Mau, extreme right, is shown with members of his entourage in Martins Hook, Pa., as they prepare to break puppet headquarters and start a cavalcade through various Pennsylvania cities to present Mau's G.I.-for-Governor case to the Republican electorate of the state.

GRASS ROOTS LOBBYISTS URGE OPA EXTENSION . . . Members of a delegation of self-styled "grass roots lobbyists" representing every state in the Union and bearing placards with slogans urging the extension of the OPA while it was being debated in congress, photographed against the background of the great dome of the capitol building, before marching on the hill to better help their representatives.

BASEBALL SEASON STARTED . . . President Truman throws out the ball as the 1946 baseball season opens at Griffith stadium, Washington, where the Senators clashed with the Boston Red Sox.

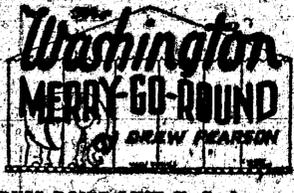

U. S.'s FIRST SAINT . . . This statue of Mother Gabriel, the first American woman to be named for sainthood by the Roman Catholic Church, will be placed in a niche in St. Peter's Basilica, upon day of consecration.

POWER AND NYLON LOBBIES . . . Many congressmen will vote against dynamic Speaker Sam Rayburn in a secret committee session, but don't have the nerve to stand up and oppose him on the floor of the house.

FLAME BY OUTH . . . For this first time in Russian history, a plane with the pilot in cockpit was successfully landed by parachute.

RUSS DON'T LIKE U. S. A. WASHINGTON. — Inside reason why the Russians are pulling wires to have the capital of the United Nations moved back to sleepy Geneva is that American public opinion has been too powerful a champion of the smaller nations.

The Russians also can't count on the Latin Americans. In the old days, Pan-American diplomats loved lolling in Paris most of the time and turning up in Geneva a few days of the week.

The Russians, who originally favored an American city as the U. N. capital, now consider this a serious mistake. They dislike the fact that American newspapers publish columns and columns of front-page news on every move made by the Russians.

In Europe, they also believe, no photographer or newspaper would have the energy to trail Ambassador Gromyko on his famous and circuitous trip around New York City when he almost stopped in at the Security Council meeting, but didn't.

NO ARMY RACE PREJUDICE A Negro, former master sergeant in the army, Marion F. Green, testified before General Doolittle's "caste system" board the other day, that there was little evidence of racial prejudices and discrimination in the army.

REPORT ON THE RUSSIANS.....

INSTALLMENT THIRTEEN

I told him what I was doing here and that this was Omak.

They told me they'd been assigned as technical advisers on a big war construction project. "A mine up north," said Tex. "And now we're going out."

Ed said, "At this little burg, they set up a whole Intourist Hotel to take care of us. Brought in wine, cheese, cigarettes, candy, noodles, and dried eggs. For the rest, we were supposed to scavenge off the country. They sent in a cook and an assistant cook, a bookkeeper—in all about ten people taking care of us."

"We really didn't get to know many Russians," said Ed. "Except for the different with the girls. They have some fine girls and nobody seems to mind if you take them out. They might have been assigned to us. Or anyway had to tell the NKVD whatever we said."

"We know they gave the hotel employee a lecture," said Tex. "Said

live out your sentence," said Tex. "they turn you loose, but your passport has a red line through it. That means you can never get a house or a good job—you've got to keep moving."

"Or you may not get sentenced," said Ed. "Just arrested and investigated. If things don't look quite right, then you get a passport with letters in front of the numbers. This means that you are under some suspicion, and you can never hold a key job."

"You see a mining engineer gets about 1,800 roubles a month," said Ed. "They get one room for which they pay about 30 roubles. All they can buy on their ration cards amounts to 400 or 500 roubles a month. Then they must go to the free market for enough butter, eggs, meat, or fish."

Now for a note on Russian suspicion of foreigners. Russia does not yet trust the outside world. Diplomats are just as closely imprisoned in Moscow as are correspondents. At the time of our visit, the current British ambassador had been unable to secure permission to travel outside the capital. One of the Allied countries which has in power a left-wing government adorned its diplomatic staff in Moscow with a special labor attaché, and appointed to this post an important union official. He came to extend the hand of fellowship from the toilers of the West to the Soviet workers in Russia. The Soviets gave him countless banquets but let him see nothing. This lack of freedom has so warped his viewpoint that he now insists that the Soviet system of unions is only a scheme to get the last ounce of work out of labor.

After the Revolution, Lenin invited foreign concessionaires to help get Russian industry back on its feet. Later they were thrown out. Stalin invited foreign engineers to build the great factories and dam rivers, but later put some on trial for espionage.

Of course, Bolshevik hostility aroused bitter counter-hostility. A cordon sanitaire was built around Russia. France supported Poland in a war against the Bolsheviks in 1921, and Russia was for over a decade excluded from the League and denied diplomatic recognition. So their suspicion of foreigners came to have some basis in fact.

This warped view of the world held by the Kremlin is slowly yielding to reality. After Lenin's death, Stalin won power and supported the thesis—gloriously at first—that socialism in one country was possible and Russia could dare to devote her energies to building up her own economic structure. World revolution, he explained, was desirable, and he pledged himself to bend all efforts to bring it about. But for the immediate future, it was not indispensable to the Russian Bolsheviks.

In recent years there has been a further change. For publication the Kremlin has announced that world revolution is neither necessary nor desirable from the standpoint of the Soviet Union. And the ablest foreign observers in Moscow agree that these protestations are sincere. They point out that Russia has been terribly weakened by war and needs desperately a few decades of peace. They say she now realizes that Europe does not want to be "liberated" from capitalist democracy, and that this could be accomplished only by a further bloody struggle involving sacrifices which the Russians are both unwilling and unable to make. Russia wants, they insist, only a stable and friendly Europe.

Novosibirsk, Siberia's capital, lies in the center of this chill roof of the world, about midway between Berlin and Tokyo.

The feeling of this big, sprawling boom-town was like that of the West where the robust town-builders are proud of their city. West of the Urals, Bolshevik civilization has taken over the ancient towns and palaces and their new structures rise on the ruins of things they destroyed. Here in Siberia, they have chopped and blasted and dug their cities out of a virgin continent. And they have something to be proud of. Novosibirsk has almost a million people.

We are whisked across the town to our quarters. Tiny potato patches are along the highway shoulders and back in forest clearings. Big hand-some girls, often barefoot, walk erect down the road with scarves around their hair and farm tools over their shoulders.

The patches have been assigned to workers in the city. Some factories maintain business to take the workers out on week-ends to hoe the patches. But most trudge wet from town, as we see them doing now.

Presently we ride along the banks of a river as wide as the Ohio at its mouth, but as yellow as the Missouri. We are told that it is the Ob, of which some of us have ever heard, and that it is the fourth longest river in the world.

We come to the dacha—a Russian word meaning country residence for someone who normally lives in the city. It gleams new and white against the great trees which surround it and overlooks the Ob. The house would be indistinguishable from the great estates of the wealthy New York families along the Hudson. It has an equally large staff of servants. The rooms are as large, as clean and as luxurious.

Whenever the convenience of a high Communist is involved, these people can be as clean and tidy as the Dutch or the Swedes. So it is in this dacha.

Below the dacha a private bathing pier extends out into the Ob. Down the hill we see a well-kept tennis court, with floodlights for night games. To the right is a volley-ball court. We have a volley-ball game—Russians versus Americans.

There is considerable shouting. On the Russian side only one man does any shouting; the others play in grim Slavic silence. He is an under-sized man in his forties, with wide cheekbones and a shock of curly hair—quick as a fox terrier—who keeps up a running fire of command and encouragement to the Russian team.

He is strikingly un-Russian. Some odd combination of chromosomes has produced out here on the steppes a quick-minded, tough little Irishman—complete with waxy hair and jutting jaw. He even talks out of the corner of his mouth.

His name is Michael Kalugin, and although he turned out to hold no local office, it was easy to see how he had acquired the habit of command. He was Secretary of the Communist Party for Siberia.

Novosibirsk has a shopping district about the size of Wichita. There is a beautiful new theater, for the Ballet, but Moscow artists also occasionally perform there. Near by, a smaller theater is devoted to operettas, and plays are given at a third.

The post office is the usual Soviet shabbiness. The building is pretentious but the interior is worn through. In the halls, tiles are chipped and missing.

The railway station is from the outside, an impressive modern building. The architecture is dramatic—high ceilings with sweeping vistas, but the materials are second-rate. It is show-worn already, but the effect is beautiful.

The crowd is fascinating. One great hall is roped off for women with babies and small children. There are no seats. Their mothers sit on the clean-swept terrazzo floor. There are polished wood benches in the spacious main waiting room—only this is reserved for wounded soldiers who sprawl on every inch of the space, their crutches leaning on the benches beside them or lying on the floor.

There must be between 500 and 1,000 of these weary men, most of them with an arm or leg missing. This is a normal hour of a normal day in Novosibirsk station.

In the main hall they even have Indians—copper-yellow faces with high cheekbones and straight, black Mongolian hair. These, of course, are from Kazakhstan down on the Chinese border. But I see no racial difference between Uzbeks or Kazaks and our Oozes or Nevajos, except that these Soviet Indians are not so well-dressed as ours. Like ours, they were fighting nomad Mongolian tribes until the Russians tamed them.

At the dacha a Red Army band is tuning its instruments down by

New Columbia Sheep—Made-to-Order Breed

Developed for Dual-Purpose Requirements

The need for a breed of sheep that would produce both wool and meat efficiently, resulted in work being undertaken by the USDA about 1912 to find such a breed.

The result of years of extensive work was the introduction of the Columbia sheep, which combined the most desirable characteristics of the Lincoln and Rambouillet. The breed was more than a quarter of a century in being developed.

The breed has been developed to such a point that it has its own registry organization, the Columbia Sheep Breeders' association. It is primarily a range sheep but is being used to a moderate extent in farming areas.

Columbia sheep are free from wool-blindness and skinfolds. The body is long, but is symmetrically proportioned with a good balance between width and depth. In 12

New Corn Ear Worm Control Recommended

A new contact insecticide has recently been developed for the control of corn ear worm on sweet corn and hybrid seed corn, as a substitute for pyrethrum.

The spray is a liquid solution of styrena dibromide in a mineral oil and is applied to the corn silks as soon as their ends appear brown. It is necessary to treat more than once as all ears do not show brown at the same time. The spray is applied with a hand applicator which measures a 20 drop dosage from a half pint container.

Feather Fabric Will Add to Farm Income

America's poultry industry can produce 26 million men's suits annually. A new feather fabric that looks like wool but is warmer, softer and lighter, has been developed by USDA specialists.

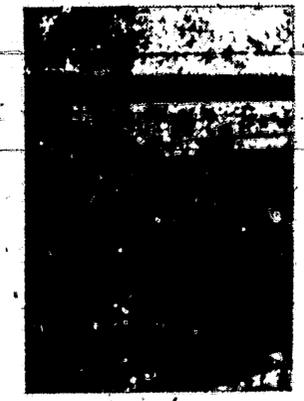

Feather protein is converted into fiber by treating the feathers with a reducing agent and a special type of wetting agent, or detergent, in water solution, then forcing the resulting spinning solution, or "dope," through the tiny holes of a spinnerette into an acid-and-salt solution that sets the streams of dope into fibers. The fibers are then stretched and dried and treated to remove the detergent so that the regenerated protein is left in true fiber form.

It is not expected that feather fabrics, due to small volume available, will ever prove a serious economic threat to cotton or wool, nevertheless feathers do offer additional revenue for the poultryman, and will compete more with higher priced fabrics.

Cultivation Increases Bermuda Grass Yields

Oklahoma experiments have proved that diking the grass seed of bermuda lightly every other year will cause an increase in yield of about 25 per cent. The tests were made on a thin or poor stand of grass.

It was found that bermuda would respond to heavier diking than the common native grass. Tillage seemed to prevent the grasses from regrowing in the center of the clumps.

Lack of highways and motor transportation prove handicap to Russian development.

we were foreigners, and anything we did they must report. Very suspicious.

"At their mines they sure do things different from what we do. Instead of having big construction firms, they call them trusts—and most of them are branches of one big central trust."

"Any ten-year-old American child with a Meccano set," said Ed, "will start at the bottom and build up. But these Russians always start at the top, build the roof first and then raise it."

"And work like hell, so they can throw up some kind of framework that they can hang a red flag on the tip of and make speeches," said Tex.

"They've got no respect for materials. They have no conception of how much work has gone into making them. They unload valuable pipe from a flat car by just rolling it down an embankment—smashing hell out of it. And fire brick for smelters the same way. The way they'd heave it off, about 25 per cent would be damaged."

"When we'd try to stop it," said Ed, "they explained they had a law in Russia because of the freight-car shortage, that they had to be unloaded within two hours after arrival. No one seemed to see it would take more cars to bring more material."

"We were only consultants," said Tex, "and if they got tired of us hollering, they'd get around it by not supplying us transportation out to the job. They'd say our chauffeur couldn't be found. Which was nonsense, because he was picked by the NKVD, and if he took a five-day vacation, he'd be shot."

"They don't understand mechanical stuff. They put things up out of plumb and then blame this trouble on poor American design. So they take it down and start all over. Once we saw them assembling a complicated steel frame out in a field, instead of on its foundation. They said they wanted to be sure it would fit."

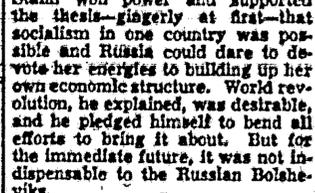

"I think their system," said Ed, "doesn't give them the personal ambition, the incentive that ours does. And it's so complex—they have to talk to so many people before anything gets done. They could never be a competitive threat to America. We can always build in a year and a half anything it takes them ten to do."

"You see," said Tex, "in Russia they don't have our penitentiary system. They herd prisoners into labor gangs, and the NKVD, which has charge of them, has developed a fine engineering staff. They bid on construction jobs, supplying both the engineers and prison labor. Often the engineers are also prisoners."

"Prisoners get the roughest deal," said Ed. "They have NKVD spies in the markets and hanging around the store counters, waiting for someone to pop off. They usually get ten years chopping wood with no accommodations, and 500 grams of bread a day. If you are lousy and can't chop, they'll give you more."

"If you start getting lousy and

RUSS DON'T LIKE U. S. A. WASHINGTON. — Inside reason why the Russians are pulling wires to have the capital of the United Nations moved back to sleepy Geneva is that American public opinion has been too powerful a champion of the smaller nations.

The Russians also can't count on the Latin Americans. In the old days, Pan-American diplomats loved lolling in Paris most of the time and turning up in Geneva a few days of the week. Today, however, Paris is one of the most uncomfortable places in the world.

The Russians, who originally favored an American city as the U. N. capital, now consider this a serious mistake. They dislike the fact that American newspapers publish columns and columns of front-page news on every move made by the Russians and they figure that American newsmen at Geneva would sit drowsily in the Swiss cafes drinking beer, or spend week-ends in the Swiss Alps.

In Europe, they also believe, no photographer or newspaper would have the energy to trail Ambassador Gromyko on his famous and circuitous trip around New York City when he almost stopped in at the Security Council meeting, but didn't.

If the Iranian question had been discussed at Geneva, instead of New York, the Russians figure, it never would have attracted so much attention and the Soviet would have come off with a complete victory.

NO ARMY RACE PREJUDICE

A Negro, former master sergeant in the army, Marion E. Green, testified before General Doolittle's "caste system" board the other day, that there was little evidence of racial prejudices and discrimination in the army.

"Colored soldiers found some resentment against them when they first joined the army, but this was quickly ironed-out after a few months of training. In February, 1941, we had some fights and riots while I was stationed at Camp Livingston, Louisiana. However, by the time we finished training, everybody was getting along fine. I encountered no racial bias whatever overseas."

"The ex-G.I. also suggested that saluting of officers be optional when enlisted men are off duty and off the post, to which Lt. Gen. Troy Middleton, now an executive of Louisiana State university, countered: "Wouldn't optional saluting such as you propose tend to tear down discipline?"

"Not necessarily, general," replied Green. "If a man does something to merit respect, he will get that respect whether he is a civilian or an army officer."

POWER AND NYLON LOBBIES

Many congressmen will vote against dynamic Speaker Sam Rayburn in a secret committee session, but don't have the nerve to stand up and oppose him on the floor of the house.

Sam Rayburn really has fire in his eye when he talks about the power lobby. And today that lobby ranks with the real estate bubblesters as one of the most potent on Capitol Hill, has even gone to the extent of dangling nylon before the wives of congressmen in order to win votes against the government's southwest power authority in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and southern Missouri.

The question at issue is whether the government can construct its own electric lines to distribute electric power from the Denison dam on the Texas-Oklahoma border and the Norfolk, Ark. dam. Without such power lines, the government merely generates the power but can't sell it. The power lobby wants to prevent this sale.

So far, the power lobby's technique has been successful with the appropriations subcommittee, which kicked the construction of the distributing lines. Cong. Ben Jones of Iowa, Henry Dyerback of Idaho, Robert Jones of Ohio, and W. F. Norrell of Arkansas were the gentlemen reported to have fallen for the wiles of the lobby. However, when the bill comes out on the floor of congress, Sam Rayburn, together with the dean of congress, Adolph Sabath of Illinois, plans to stage a real battle.

DOAN'S PILLS

REPORT ON THE RUSSIANS.....

INSTALLMENT THIRTEEN

I told him what I was doing here and that this was Omsk.

They told me they'd been assigned as technical advisers on a big war construction project. "A mine up north," said Tex. "And now we're going out."

Ed said, "At this little burg, they set up a whole Intourist Hotel to take care of us. Brought in wine, cheese, cigarettes, candy, noodles, and dried eggs. For the rest, we were supposed to scavenge off the country. They sent in a cook and an assistant cook, a bookkeeper—in all about ten people taking care of us."

"We really didn't get to know many Russians," said Ed. "Except for the girls. They have some fine girls and nobody seems to mind if you take them out. They might have been assigned to us. Or anyway had to tell the NKVD whatever we said."

"We know they gave the hotel employee a lecture," said Tex. "Said

live out your sentence," said Tex. "they turn you loose, but your passport has a red line through it. That means you can never get a house or a good job—you've got to keep moving."

"Or you may not get sentenced," said Ed, "just arrested and investigated. If things don't look quite right, then you get a passport with letters in front of the numbers. This means that you are under some suspicion, and you can never hold a key job."

"You see a mining engineer gets about 1,800 roubles a month," said Ed. "They get one room for which they pay about 30 roubles. All they can buy on their ration cards amounts to 400 or 500 roubles a month. Then they must go to the free market for enough butter, eggs, meat, or fish."

Now for a note on Russian suspicion of foreigners. Russia does not yet trust the outside world. Diplomats are just as closely imprisoned in Moscow as are correspondents. At the time of our visit, the current British ambassador had been unable to secure permission to travel outside the capital. One of the Allied countries which has in power a left-wing government adorned its diplomatic staff in Moscow with a special labor attaché, and appointed to this post an important union official. He came to extend the hand of fellowship from the toilers of the West to their fellow workers in Russia. The Soviets gave him countless banquets but let him see nothing. This lack of freedom has so warped his viewpoint that he now insists that the Soviet system of unions is only a scheme to get the last ounce of work out of labor.

After the Revolution, Lenin invited foreign concessionaires to help get Russian industry back on its feet. Later they were thrown out. Stalin invited foreign engineers to build the great factories and dam rivers, but later put some on trial for espionage.

Of course, Bolshevik hostility aroused bitter counter-hostility. A cordon sanitaire was built around Russia. France supported Poland in a war against the Bolsheviks in 1921, and Russia was for over a decade excluded from the League and denied diplomatic recognition. So their suspicion of foreigners came to have some basis in fact.

This warped view of the world held by the Kremlin is slowly yielding to reality. After Lenin's death, Stalin won power and supported the thesis—gingerly at first—that socialism in one country was possible and Russia could dare to devote her energies to building up her own economic structure. World revolution, he explained, was desirable, and he pledged himself to bend all efforts to bring it about. But for the immediate future, it was not indispensable to the Russian Bolsheviks.

In recent years there has been a further change. For publication the Kremlin has announced that world revolution is neither necessary nor desirable from the standpoint of the Soviet Union. And the ablest foreign observers in Moscow agree that these protestations are sincere. They point out that Russia has been terribly weakened by war and needs desperately a few decades of peace. They say she now realizes that Europe does not want to be "liberated" from capitalist democracy, and that this could be accomplished only by a further bloody struggle involving sacrifices which the Russians are both unwilling and unable to make. Russia wants, they insist, only a stable and friendly Europe.

Novosibirsk, Siberia's capital, lies in the center of this chill roof of the world, about midway between Berlin and Tokyo. The feeling of this big, sprawling boom-town was like that of the West where the robust town-builders are proud of their city. West of the Urals, Bolshevik civilization has taken over the ancient towns and palaces and their new structures rise on the ruins of things they destroyed. Here in Siberia, they have chopped and blasted and dug their cities out of a virgin continent. And they have something to be proud of. Novosibirsk has almost a million people.

We are whisked across the town to our quarters. Tiny potato patches are along the highway shoulders and back in forest clearings. Big handsome girls, often barefoot, walk erect down the road with scarves around their hair and farm tools over their shoulders. The patches have been assigned to workers in the city. Some factories maintain buses to take the workers out on week-ends to hoe the patches. But most trudge out from town, as we see them doing now. Presently we ride along the banks of a river as wide as the Ohio at its mouth, but as yellow as the Missouri. We are told that it is the Ob, of which some of us have ever heard, and that it is the fourth longest river in the world. We come to the gacha—a Russian word meaning tountry residence for someone who normally lives in the city. It gleams new and white against the great trees which surround it and overlooks the Ob. The house would be indistinguishable from the great estates of the wealthy New York families along the Hudson. It has an equally large staff of servants. The rooms are as large, as clean and as luxurious.

Whenever the convenience of a high Communist is involved, these people can be as clean and tidy as the Dutch or the Swedes. So it is in this dacha.

Below the dacha a private bathing pier extends out into the Ob. Down the hill we see a well-kept tennis court, with flood lights for night games. To the right is a volley-ball court. We have a volley-ball game—Russians versus Americans.

There is considerable shouting. On the Russian side only one man does any shouting; the others play in grim Slavic silence. He is an under-sized man in his forties, with wide cheekbones and a shock of curly hair—quick as a fox terrier—who keeps up a running fire of command and encouragement to the Russian team.

He is strikingly un-Russian. Some odd combination of chromosomes has produced out here on the steppes a quick-minded, tough little Irishman—complete with wiry hair and jutting jaw. He even talks out of the corner of his mouth.

His name was Michael Kalugin, and although he turned out to hold no local office, it was easy to see how he had acquired the habit of command. He was Secretary of the Communist Party for Siberia.

Novosibirsk has a shopping district about the size of Wichita. There is a beautiful new theater, for the ballet, but Moscow artists also occasionally perform there. Near by, a smaller theater is devoted to operettas, and plays are given at a third.

The post office is the usual Soviet shabbiness. The building is pretentious but the linoleum is worn through. In the halls, tiles are chipped and missing.

The railway station is from the outside, an impressive modern building. The architecture is dramatic—high ceilings with sweeping vistas, but the materials are second-rate. It is showywork already, but the effect is beautiful.

The crowd is fascinating. One great hall is roped off for women with babies and small children. There are no seats. Their mothers sit on the clean-swept terrace floor. There are polished wood benches in the spacious main waiting room—only this is reserved for wounded soldiers who sprawl on every inch of the space, their crutches leaning on the benches beside them or lying on the floor.

There must be between 500 and 1,000 of these weary men, most of them with an arm or leg missing. This is a normal hour of a normal day in Novosibirsk station.

In the main hall they even have Indians—copper-yellow faces with high cheekbones and straight, black Mongolian hair. These, of course, are from Kazakhstan down on the Chinese border. But I see no racial difference between Uzbeks or Kazaks and our Osages or Navajos, except that these Soviet Indians are not so well-dressed as ours. Like ours, they were fighting nomad Mongolian tribes until the Russians tamed them.

At the dacha a Red Army band is tuning its instruments down by Omsk, one of the industrial centers visited by Johnston and White. The water front. As it strikes up a military march a second band appears, in even smarter uniforms, and begins tuning up.

As we go in to dinner, a gleaming white river steamer ties up at the wharf. We are told that after dinner we will go for a ride on the Ob. Mike Kalugin ushered us down the river bank and aboard the steamer.

Mike waved us expansively to a row of deck chairs just forward of the bridge. The better of the two bands, lined up on the bow facing us, struck up as the boat moved out into the current. The band was magnificent. It was the official band of the Red Army.

New Columbia Sheep—Made-to-Order Breed

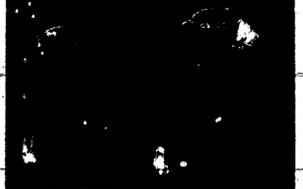

Developed for Dual-Purpose Requirements

The need for a breed of sheep that would produce both wool and meat efficiently resulted in work being undertaken by the USDA about 1912 to find such a breed.

The result of years of extensive work was the introduction of the Columbia sheep, which combined the most desirable characteristics of the Lincoln and Rambouillet. The breed was more than a quarter of a century in being developed.

The breed has been developed to such a point that it has its own registry organization, the Columbia Sheep Breeders' association. It is primarily a range sheep but is being used to a moderate extent in farming areas.

Columbia sheep are free from wool-blindness and skinfolds. The body is long, but is symmetrically proportioned with a good balance between width and depth. In 12 months a typical Columbia ewe grows a fleece weighing about 12 pounds, which contains approximately 50 per cent clean wool about 3 1/2 inches long.

New Corn Ear Worm Control Recommended

A new contact insecticide has recently been developed for the control of corn ear worm on sweet corn and hybrid seed corn, as a substitute for pyrethrum.

The spray is a liquid solution of styrena dibromide in a mineral oil and is applied to the corn silks as soon as their ends appear brown. It is necessary to treat more than once as all ears do not show brown at the same time. The spray is applied with a hand applicator which measures a 20 drop dosage from a half pint container.

Feather Fabric Will Add to Farm Income

The washed, stretched and dried fibers are wound on spools.

America's poultry industry can produce 26 million men's suits annually. A new feather fabric that looks like wool but is warmer, softer and lighter, has been developed by USDA specialists.

Feather protein is converted into fiber by treating the feathers with a reducing agent and a special type of wetting agent, or detergent, in water solution, then forcing the resulting spinning solution, or "dope," through the tiny holes of a spinnerette into an acid-and-salt solution that sets the streams of dope into fibers. The fibers are then stretched and dried and treated to remove the detergent so that the regenerated protein is left in true fiber form.

It is not expected that feather fabrics, due to small volume available, will ever prove a serious economic threat to cotton or wool, nevertheless feathers do offer additional revenue to the poultryman, and will compete more with higher priced fabrics.

Cultivation Increases Bermuda Grass Yields

Oklahoma experiments have proved that disking the grass sod of bermuda lightly every other year will cause an increase in yield of about 25 per cent. The tests were made on a thin or poor stand of grass.

It was found that bermuda would respond to heavier disking than the common native grass. Tillage seemed to prevent the grasses from dying in the center of the clumps.
