Methodist Church

F. J. Johnston, Pastor

We still have a few good seats for men left in our church. I will be glad to arrange a place for any of my red-blooded neighbors if they can get up in time and make it over to the church Sunday morning.

In talking to my congregation last Sunday on "God's Business" I said in part; that the Carrizozo constituency was an integral part of God's trade territory; that the pastors and churches were the local set up for the retailing of the gospel; that the church-houses were the community business places in things pertaining to religion; and that the lay members were the clerks or sales staff.

That our church as such would be open for business every Sunday and would be accessible or available any day upon appointment. We have one thing that we are sure everybody needs. That is, to know God which Jesus says is life eternal. Please come and get it while you are able.

Sermon Topic next Sunday "What is God Jealous About?" The hour is the most convenient we can imagine. 11 a. m. Please Come.

Teachers Association Meets

The Carrizozo Teacher's Association met on January 28 at 7:00 p. m. in the Home Economics Department for a social.

CORONA NEWS

Another new organization in Corona is the American Legion Auxiliary. Mrs. W. A. Mays is president. The members of this organization meet the first Wednesday of each month.

Mr. E. L. Jarnigan has returned from Kansas City where he took some livestock. He reported bad weather in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. There were lots of huge snowdrifts along the way.

Corona boys were the winners in the ball game Friday afternoon between Hondo and Corona. Corona boys played ball at Stanley Saturday night. The score was 40 to 20 in favor of Stanley. It was a good game and both teams showed good sportsmanship.

Mrs. Kelly Franks and Miss Donnie Franks have gone on an indefinite visit to Texas.

Dr. L. H. Barry has returned from California. He was in the Bakerafield train wreck. The Pullman in which he was riding turned over. Except for being trampled and bruised the Doctor came out alright. He has improved and is feeling lots better.

The Sunday School Workers' Conference held at Corona Baptist Church January 21 was well attended. Bad roads kept some people away. There were several inspiring messages and discussions besides the Teachers Departmental Conferences held in the morning. The Junior Choir, under the direction of Mrs. L. Parker, sang for the audience just before noon.

A fine dinner was served at the noon hour. Several special meetings were held in the afternoon. Corona Baptist Church is a member of the Estancia Valley Association. Other Churches in this association are Mountainair, Vaughn, Moriarty, West Mecca and Estancia. Nearly all churches were represented at this conference.

THE general attitude toward umpires is, in our opinion, one of the greatest crimes in sport. Ball players in large numbers have been convicted in the past of selling and throwing games. Players and managers have been indicted on other counts, outside of baseball. But no umpire that I can recall has ever been connected with a scandal of any sort. They have been the backbone of baseball—the foundation of base Grantland Rice ball.

What has been their reward? The age old cry of "Kill the umpire." They have been hated and assaulted and scorned by the mob. They have been stoned at, cursed, insulted by players and managers who in the main were using these umpires as alibis for their own mistakes—for their defeats.

I can go back a long way in umpires—Tim Hurst, Silk O'Loughlin, Tommy Connelly, Billy Evans, Bill Klem (and what a guy), Cy Wright, Hank O'Day, Bill Dineen, Lord Byron, Arlie Latham, Charlie Moran, on and on and on.

A great bunch. Dead honest. Dead game, these Big Boys in Blue. You couldn't buy one of them at any price. You couldn't scare 'em.

No one can bluff any of them. Once in a while they may get to be overly tough, overly officious. But after all they are supposed to run the game—and when they don't the game will be a farce. A complete joke.

Honest and Tough

I've known umpires for over 40 years. Among the top ones, I've never known anyone who wasn't honest and fearless—and tough when he had to be. Honest, fearless and tough. For the umpire knows how the managers and the ball players use him in an attempt to cover up their mistakes.

Umpires make many mistakes. But Ty Cobb only batted .367 and Babe Ruth wasn't even close to this mark. That means mistakes for the ball player over two-thirds of the time. Who is perfect or close to being perfect if the world's most imperfect period of time?

What is the umpire's reward for the job he turns in? An outcast, as a general rule. Sure the hours are good, as Tim Hurst once said, but no better than the hours a ball player or a manager knows.

Not only a social outcast, but also the subject of vile abuse from managers and players—and from the crowd if the umpire doesn't happen to call the play in favor of the home club.

What can the crowd in the stands see? The angles on strikes—plays at the bases—nothing at all. They don't know that slight angles can make a difference of many feet. These crowds haven't the slightest idea of what actually happened. They can miss a strike or a ball by over a foot. So can any manager sitting on the bench. He is all out of line. He is only guessing his own way where on a general average he is completely wrong.

A vital part of an aggressive ball team, including manager and player, always concerns attacking and riding the umpire. This is supposed to mean a fighting, hustling team. Why was it, then, that Walter Johnson never protested an umpire's decision? Why was it that you rarely saw Joe McCarthy or Billy Southworth, certainly two of the best, stemming from the dugout in some protest? These two let the umpires run the game.

Riding the Umpire

John McGraw, a great manager, came up in a different era. McGraw always faced two opponents—the other team and the umpire. You couldn't give McGraw enough opponents, including hostile stands. All Mac wanted was a fight with anybody.

But the game has changed in later years. And now we have too many managers and ball players trying to copy McGraw. They are using umpires for their mistakes—as alibis. The point I'd like to make is this—here we have a group who should belong at the top of sport. And yet their regard is abused from the crowd—abuse from the ball players—abuse from the managers. About 95 per cent abuse. In the main these umpires are picked from the best of the ball players. From the smartest and the most courageous. The wonder is that any sane citizen would ever want to be an umpire.

The Middleweights

The middleweights, always among the best in the ring, still dominate all divisions by a wide margin. The middleweights weigh in as well as fight.

Some weeks ago we figured five top middleweights, naming the show. They were Mike, Champion, Calumet, Latham, Corbin and Adams. The verdict was that at the Corbin and Adams fight to be announced, but the Corbin-Adams party was too close to be decisive.

Concrete Floors Increase Profits

Faster Gains and Feed Savings Prove Results

By W. J. DEYDEN

Faster gains and the saving of feed are the aims of every hog raiser. Among the most essential farm improvements that may bring these results are concrete feeding floors. Such floors help produce more pork and save feed from being lost in the mud.

Each hog should have 10 square feet of floor space. To build 100 square feet of floor, 4 inches thick, it will take 7 1/2 sacks of portland cement, 1/2 cubic yard of sand and 1 cubic yard of gravel or crushed rock.

If the area to be paved is poorly drained, it is best to place the concrete slab on a well-tamped fill of about six inches. If the concrete is to be driven over, it should be six inches thick.

New concrete should be properly cured by covering with earth or straw as soon as it has hardened enough not to be marred, and then kept moist for at least five days by frequent sprinkling.

KNOW YOUR BREED Morocco Spotted Horse

By W. J. DEYDEN

The Morocco horse originated in the crossbreeding of the Morocco Barb and the English Hackney and the French coach horse.

The conformation of the Morocco Barb is somewhat similar to the Arabian horse.

In size the Morocco varies from 1,050 to 1,400 pounds. It is a general purpose horse, bred for work as well as pleasure. The working team is fast and steady, and has considerable stamina. They have the power to reproduce themselves true to type and color even when used with other colors and breeds.

To be registered they must stand 14 1/2 hands high. Type must be clean and neat with simple legs to be suitable for either saddle or harness.

Telling Sheep Age By Tooth Diagrams

The age of sheep up to four years can be determined easily by examining the teeth. The mouths of sheep are equipped with a full set of 24 molar teeth on both upper and lower jaws. In addition to these eight incisor teeth are provided along the front of the lower jaw.

The chart designed by University of Alberta should prove an accurate guide in determining or estimating the age of sheep.

Alfalfa Seed Yield Increased With DDT

Alfalfa seed plots at the Utah station, dusted with DDT to control lygus bugs produced 400 pounds of seed per acre. Seeds not dusted produced less than 100 pounds.

Until DDT became available, no insecticide had been found that would control these insects at a cost that was economically feasible. The tests proved that DDT is a profitable means of increasing seed production by control of lygus bugs.

Man About Town

Memoes at a Midnighter: Inlanders hear next year's flying time from N. Y. to Miami will be 200 minutes.

Many of the show gals are worried silly that their names will be dragged into the Alvin Paris football bribe scandal because they were Paris' dates. Paris hasn't had so much publicity since French postcards. . . . John Murray Anderson's chums hear he is experimenting with the Russian "youth" serum. He is in his 60's. . . . Bing will make close to a million dollars out of his platters this year, not including his many other chores. . . . Rodgers & Hammerstein are taking no risks with their gold mine, "Annie Get Your Gun." They are paying Mary Jane Walsh the highest wage yet for an understudy—just to stand by in the wings. $750 per week. . . . Top loss to Moss Hart (whose apt. was burgled) was the gold cigarette case signed by the cast of "Winged Victory."

Broadway Ballad: (By Don Wahn): I do not blame the young for being sick. . . . Of giving alms to beggars of the past. . . . Why should they turn to watch a shabby trick? . . . Why should they care if terror joined the cast? . . . We had our roses, redolent of spring. . . . We had our nights of revelry and mirth. . . . We had the softest, loveliest songs to sing. . . . We had the shining rapture of the earth. . . . Yes, it is gone and shortly we will go. . . . The golden yule, the roses and the wine. . . . And never fade will and the nights glow with all the misty magic that was mine. . . . And when they had that love and beauty die. . . . I hope they leave—more gracefully than I.

The Broadway Lights: J. Durants, X. Cugat and the dice tables were the reason the new Flamingo (Las Vegas) attracted 20,000 patrons in the first three days. . . . Midtown hotels had their worst week in five years. One had 370 empty rooms, another 320 and another 300. . . . Buddy Kaye made so much coin out of the ditty, "Till the End of Time," that he is among the producers of the new Jerome Robbins show, "Look, Ma, I'm Dancing." . . . A short titled "The Last Bomb" comes across with atomic impact, particularly one episode wherein the camera slowly moves through the rows of graves at Iwo Jima. After viewing that, you'll cherish every moment of peace like it was the last minute of your life.

Broadway Story: The most valuable song copyright in the world is "White Christmas." . . . It was published in 1942 and sold over one million copies during its first four months. . . . On some days it sold over 50,000 copies. . . . Each year (since) it was purchased by 250,000 people. . . . The recordings totaled five million records—two million of which were Bing's version up to this year. . . . Decca says this year it out-sold any of the previous seasons—over 500,000 platters. . . . But this is why it is the most valuable copyright. . . . A copyright lasts 55 years. . . . It has over 50 years to go—and selling at the rate it is going—you can imagine how much richer the tax department will get.

The Story Tellers: The latest edition of Who's Who reveals that the American general who has won the most decorations (40) is Brig. Gen. Edgar K. Hume. This is the first time we ever came across his name. . . . Jeff Keate's cartoon chuckler has been widely reprinted in the digests. A child specialist is giving advice to a mother: "You'll have to handle this child carefully; remember you're dealing with a sensitive, high-strung little thinker." . . . The Minnesota state prison's newspaper (edited by a convict) ran this editorially: "Those caught stealing items from the papers will be dropped from our list of contributors. Stealing from another's writings is one of the lowest bits of thievery!"

Washington newsmen enjoy spinning this one: A group of them once accompanied FDR to a show. They thanked a secret service man for providing them with excellent seats. "Don't mention it," the secret service retorted. "Just notice the seating arrangement. You'll discover no one can take a shot at the President without hitting one or two reporters first!"

Quotation Marksmanship: T. Parker: Democracy means not "I am as good as you are," but "You are as good as I am." . . . Manufos: Growing old is a bad habit which a busy man has no time to form. . . . E. Brandeis: Sometimes you pay compliments and sometimes you pay for them. . . . P. Davis: And so they were divorced and loved happily ever after. . . . Ed Wynn: It was so cold my blankets fought to get on the bottom. . . . M. Kornfeld: What can you expect of a day that begins getting up in the morn.

Use a two-inch paint brush for dusting grooves and corners in furniture.

Blip off silk covers over the bottom of hanging plant pots to prevent water from dripping out.

Remove saucer odor from a knife by drawing the blade through a raw carrot two or three times.

If your small throw rugs wrinkle up under the cleaning, try using the vacuum crosswise instead of lengthwise.

If a porcelain teakettle or coffee pot becomes stained, rub the stained portion with a cloth dipped in baking soda until discoloration is removed. Then wash thoroughly.

Cattle Growers Association Meeting Held

A meeting to establish a livestock quarantine in Mexico to prevent spread of Hoof and Mouth disease into the northern sections of that country was held at Tucson, according to George A. Godfrey, Animas, President, New Mexico Cattle Growers Association.

Attending the meeting were representative livestock sanitary officials and state livestock leaders from Arizona, Texas, and New Mexico, and the five northern states of the Republic of Mexico.

Discussed at the meeting were methods of establishing a strict quarantine within the Republic of Mexico through joint cooperation between livestock sanitary officials of the Mexican and American bureaus of animal industry.

American livestock spokesmen placed special emphasis on the fact that even though a strict and effective quarantine measure is established within the boundaries of Mexico, it will be impossible to lift the Mexican-American quarantine which is now in effect, Godfrey said.

The Mexican delegates gave every indication that they would do everything within their power to control and eradicate the disease and especially prevent spread of the disease into the northern tiers of Mexico, Godfrey commented.

Tariff on Farm Products Will Prove Injurious

THE department of agriculture has announced that farm income in cash receipts for 1946 will top the 21.6 billion dollar mark, which is some 14 per cent above the record of 1945.

Despite this record income . . . despite a record income for the past five years . . . despite the fact that the government is obligated to keep up farm price supports on principal commodities running through 1948 and 1949 . . . despite the fact that this peak cash farm income is being split among one-fifth less farmers . . . that farm debts are down a third and that they owe only 8 billion dollars on a farm plant worth 90 billions . . . it appears farmers are pessimistic.

Whether this pessimism in the rural communities is the result of current conditions, or whether it is a chronic condition and more or less traditional with farmers everywhere, is the poser which led Sec. of Agriculture Clinton Anderson to warn farmers against a more or less widespread belief that "a depression is coming."

"In my conversations with people, in my reading of newspapers and magazines and in the comments I've heard over the radio I've been impressed with the prevalence of the belief that a depression is coming . . . and I hope the refrain does not become a chorus. We can't afford to substitute resignation for determination. The fact that adjustments from abnormal wartime conditions are inevitable doesn't mean that depression is likewise inevitable."

Protection for Cotton

This expressed pessimism despite the tremendously bright outlook for American agriculture may be the cause of the recent resolution of the Association of Southern Commissioners of Agriculture calling for tariff protection for American farm products. Of course, the southern commissioners are concerned principally with cotton, and they have learned bitterly that they cannot eat their cake and have it too . . . they have come near forcing themselves out of business with soaring prices . . . prices so high that no one but the government could buy cotton.

But from consulting all the agricultural experts here in Washington from the American Farm Bureau federation on down the line, your Home Town Reporter is able to report that insofar as farm leaders here are concerned, the southern commissioners are conjuring up a picture of the world and the future of American agriculture that simply does not exist.

Every country on the globe is crying for the products of American farms . . . fats, food, feed and fiber. The bugaboo of surpluses which would force prices downward still remains a bugaboo if there is a foreign market to consume these surpluses.

Just as surely as volume of production is the key to prosperity in industry, volume is also the key to continued farm prosperity and riches. No economist can envisage the time in any immediate future when world agricultural surpluses can compete with the produce of American farmers.

And immediately . . . that is within the next few months . . . American farmers are going to be asked to stand up and be counted. Do you want a tariff wall to keep out foreign farm surpluses . . . surpluses which are non-existent?

Back to Smoot-Hawley?

That question is in the cards . . . the question of abandonment of reciprocal trade agreements for a return to the tariffs of the Smoot-Hawley bill for agricultural products . . . for that question will be one of the most important and most immediate to come before this congress. Already plans are being made and lines drawn for this traditional fight between the two parties.

Will the American farmer back a program of foreign economic policy intended to promote and continue more profitable trade relations as between all or favored countries, or will they erect a trade barrier with tariff walls?

The question is most important to farmers and small business men in rural communities.

One road leads to continued full production and the disposal of surplus goods abroad for the things we need for use and for stockpiling. The other road leads to curtailment of production and a curtailed trade with foreign nations . . . a restriction of the program which has permitted our agricultural . . . Secretary Anderson says, "to extend its allegiance to the stock and suffering in a hungry world, has prevailed upon the domestic and new world to bring down the strengthened into the family of nations and toward the goal of peace."

QUICK MAIL SERVICE BY HELICOPTER . . . Helicopter mail service on an experimental basis is started in Brooklyn as the postoffice department supervises the landing of this helicopter mail service plane called "Hat" in an empty lot. The helicopter came from LaGuardia field, shortcutting the usual mail routes and shearing many hours from previous mail delivery times. Future plans of the postoffice department call for extensive development and use of helicopter mail service.

REBUILDING GOETHE'S BIRTHPLACE . . . Bombs are no respecters of persons any more than they are of people, and one of the historic victims of the Allied bombs was the birthplace of Johann Wolfgang Goethe, Germany's foremost poet and philosopher. At Frankfurt on the Main, Frank shows the damage before the bomb fell, and the present condition of Goethe's birthplace as work is being started to rebuild this historical landmark.

YOUNGEST PRODIGY . . . Dora Webster, 6, Fredericksburg, Va., recently gave an amazing performance of Mozart's Concerto in A Major in Washington. There is nothing "prime donna" about her. She regards her guitar as the piano in about the same manner as the world's preeminent pianists. She skips rope, plays with dolls and makes errors in arithmetic—and gets her face dirty—a normal girl in every way.

NEW SECRETARY OF STATE . . . Following the resignation of James F. Byrnes, 67, as secretary of state, President Truman nominated General of the Army George C. Marshall, 67, as his successor. General Marshall was born in Uniontown, Pa., and was graduated from Virginia Military Institute, where he was later as a football coach. General Marshall became chief of staff September 1, 1946.

PACIFIC ON RAFT . . . The Norwegian scientist who plans to drift 4,000 miles on a balsa raft from Peru to Polynesia to prove theory that the natives of Polynesia islands came there 1,000 years ago from Peru. They may be gone four months.

WIDE G.I. . . . Isabel Mary Bowers, 18, Reading, England, who came to the U. S. with Japanese approval to work on aircraft fuel tanks, is in Washington, D.C. They feel that Isabel was 18.

SHIFT OF COMMANDERS WASHINGTON—Inside fact about the shift of U. S. commanders in Germany is that the stage was set for the change shortly after Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay visited the National Association of Manufacturers in New York.

Shortly before that, the senate war investigating committee's chief counsel, George Meader, had come back from Germany with a preliminary report highly critical of what went on in the U. S. occupation zone.

General Clay, then in the United States, was upset by this report and talked to Secretary of State Byrnes about resigning. He felt that Gen. Joseph McNarney, top commander of U. S. troops in Germany, was the man really responsible, although he, Clay, as head of the military government for Germany, got the blame.

On top of the unfavorable Meader report, General Clay addressed a meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers and afterwards sat down at an off-the-record meeting of NAM leaders including some of the top moguls of American industry. Their solution for the future of Germany was simple. They told Clay that they should be permitted to get in touch with their opposite numbers in German industry—the big industrialists who helped build up Hitler's war machine.

If allowed to do business with the German cartels, the U. S. industrialists told Clay, they would have Germany back on its feet in no time.

This shocked General Clay. He said he would retire from the army immediately if any such deal was carried out. He warned that the German people did not believe in or understand free enterprise and that Germany could only continue under strong government controls.

CAPITAL CHAFF

The RFC apparently thinks that the Germans are a better risk than veterans' housing. It will advance about $ billion dollars to rebuild Germany during the next three years, but was afraid of losing money on Wilson Wyatt's prefabricated housing for veterans. . . . Wyatt, ex-mayor of Louisville, passed out golden keys to the city of Louisville to Wyatt's invited to a farewell party. . . . No wonder John L. Lewis is hard luck for labor. He's the "13th" vice president of the A. F. of L.

AIRLINE DYNAMITE

The dynamite now exploding inside Trans World Airlines between Jack Frye, its president, and Howard Hughes, its chief stockholder, has caused members of the civil aeronautics board to begin some careful probing of the aviation industry. Their probe indicates that things aren't going anywhere nearly as well as the airline ballyhoo indicates.

Among other things, six companies operated in the red during the first nine months of 1946—TWA, Colonial, Chicago and Southern, Northeastern, Pennsylvania-Central and Western.

Furthermore, the airlines have over-ordered new planes to such an extent that they will never be able to use more than a fraction of the planes supposed to be delivered.

For instance, the present fleet of civil planes has a capacity of 15 billion seat miles annually. However, when the planes now on order are delivered, capacity will be 41 billion passenger seat miles.

This is in contrast to the fact that the planes now on hand are 100 per cent in excess of the passengers now carried. Result is many unpublicized cancellations. One of the most disquieting situations is the fact that TWA has placed large orders with Lockheed, and heavy cancellations would deal Lockheed a tough blow.

PACIFIC MERRY-GO-ROUND

Best way to gain popularity in the Far East today is to take along a supply of Keweenaw diamonds. Congressional travelers returned from China and the Pacific islands report that these were the most welcome gifts they could make to native dignitaries. . . . First general election in history of the Trust Islands group in the Pacific was held in January. Island chieftains and officials for the entire group were chosen. Hereafter these offices have been hereditary. . . . Among the voters were many who have lived under Spanish, German and Japanese control. This was their first election.

SCHOOLS NEED TYPEWRITERS

Schools and colleges may come ahead of veterans in getting surplus war property for educational uses, according to a plan now under consideration at the White House. At present veterans get first crack at typewriters, adding machines and all other types of equipment—and when the vets are through there isn't much left for the states, schools and colleges. This problem recently was placed before the President by Gen. Joseph Meader of West Virginia.

MURDER IN PLAIN SIGHT by GERALD BROWN

Miss Bigelow, private detective, is standing in the window at the Bigelow mansion. He notes that Miss Adelaide Bigelow is afraid of something more than death. In a conversation with Miss Bigelow he learns that she is sorry now that she gave her consent to her niece, Veronica's marriage with handsome Curt Vallincourt, as the husband discovered that he is a fortune hunter and rake. He will control the entire family fortune of thirty million dollars. There are several cross currents in the family, she tells McCale. While they are talking and looking out the window, they hear a shot and see two women hurrying away. The one in green runs toward the park.

CHAPTER VIII

She stopped running when she reached it. For a moment, he thought he saw someone else, someone in a gray raincoat walking steadily away into the fog. He could not tell whether it was a man or a woman, for the gray of the coat dissolved the figure into a mere blur. It only struck him as odd that the figure did not turn or falter or come nearer. It just walked—sedately was the only word—away. There was something terrible in the unruffled walk, because directly across from it and below where they peered out, something quite awful staggered, one hand to its chest, the other groping out blindly. It was a man, tall, wide, a dark shadow of agony, seeking to climb the Bigelow stairs.

The doorbell peated sharply, a ring of sheer despair. Miss Bigelow and McCale, in a single movement, ran out of the drawing room. McCale reached the stairs first, tumbling down them two, three at a time. The bell was ringing now, steadily, a shriek, as though someone leaned heavily against it.

The butler, King, came out of the back hall, a sour look on his face. But McCale was already wrenching open the door. A light went up in the hall as the startled manservant pushed a button. For a moment, no one seemed to be there. The door gaped wide and black. Then, from around its edge, a bulky object slid, slumped to its knees, lunged inward, then out flat.

Curt Vallincourt turned his exquisite head once, opened his agonized eyes once, mouthed a word before he died.

"Veronica," he muttered thickly before his heart bubbled up into his throat.

It was then that Adelaide Bigelow dropped down beside him, cradling his head in her lap. Her tired old hands smoothed dark silky curls out of his eyes.

"A doctor," Miss Bigelow gasped. "The police," McCale said curtly. "But he may be dying—a doctor."

"I'm sorry," he looked deep into her eyes, "but he is dead."

He closed the door on the night, shutting it out with the incredible thoughts which seethed through his mind. He barked an order to the butler, necessary action taking over his brain and body for the next few minutes.

"Leave the body just as it is," he cautioned, adding, "a police requisition" for he saw a look of dismay on Miss Bigelow's face.

She was still sitting numb and stricken, on the carpet beside the body.

The butler had his hands pressed tightly against his diaphragm, while perspiration, a prelude to certain nausea, stood out on his forehead.

"Get yourself some brandy, man," McCale spoke briskly. "And get the police department on the telephone. Wait a minute. Call Devonshire 1212—line 103—and ask for Donley, chief of homicide."

The old man moved slowly. "Perhaps if you can, sir," he began. "No. Better you."

McCale grasped Miss Bigelow's elbow in a reassuring grip. "We have less than six minutes at the most," he said, "before the department, or at least a squad car, will be here. Where can we have a minute to talk? Alone."

"The library," she said, her voice stronger.

McCale Slips Out Ahead of the Police

"I want your help," he began, and rushed on, for he lived in the world as it is and knew that there were things he might do if she could remain a little while outside the police orbit. "I'm going to be out of here before the police arrive."

"Oh—but please—"

He held up his hand. "You must understand this. There may be some way I can lessen the publicity this case is bound to stir up. Don't think I mean to obstruct justice, but you must understand that once the police come into this, you will have no peace. Your privacy, your home, your very lives will be ripped wide open."

"I understand," Her face was bleak.

He went on rapidly. "If I am here when the police arrive, I will be tied up for hours maybe with the preliminary investigation. If I am not, I can perhaps discover something before they do. I know Donley, Chief of Detectives. I can talk to him tomorrow. What I must do is get a head start. I want, for instance, to search Vallincourt's room. Where does he sleep?"

"413 Fenroad—but what shall I tell the police?"

"Tell them I left—that you do not know why."

He glanced at his wristwatch. Two minutes to go.

"Now, Miss Bigelow, I must ask you to tell me quickly what you saw from the window upstairs just before the shot."

She closed her eyes and let a shuddering breath escape her lips. Her hands clasped and unclasped nervously. He thought she might faint. She opened her eyes suddenly, tense, staggered, but determined.

"At first there was only Curt coming up the steps from the path that cuts across from Charles Street. The old voice was pained and hushed. 'I knew it was Ke from away off. He always swaggered, sort of, and never wore a hat. There was also a woman—coming along the outer walk that comes over the hill from Park Street.'"

"A woman in green?"

"Yes, in green." She looked frightened. "There was someone else in a gray coat and hat coming along Beacon Street toward the house. I couldn't see very well. The person was almost directly under the window and I was concentrating on—on Curt."

A tall wide man seeking to climb the Bigelow stairs.

"On this side of the street?"

"Yes."

Whoever it was had crossed the street, then, for the figure had been on the opposite side when McCale looked. That someone must have been almost at the door when the shot was fired? The murderer?

"Man or woman?" he snapped. "I—I couldn't tell. I was watching Curt, I told you."

"But the hat. You said the figure had on a gray raincoat and a gray hat. Surely you could recognize the sex from the hat?"

"I'm sorry—I was watching Curt."

"Yes. Go on."

"I just can't remember what happened then. Curt and the woman in green almost met at the gate, but he was a little ahead. I thought he turned his head to look at her. I'm not sure. Then—I'm sorry. It's all confused. There was just the shot. I closed my eyes, I think. Then you were behind me and I did notice someone—the woman in green, I believe, running off into the fog."

Then she went to an old, battered desk that stood in a corner of the room. Pressing a spring that opened a secret drawer, she took out a small envelope from which she shook a piece of paper.

Shari Lynn Tells Her Story

"You'd better have this," She spoke almost furtively, and added, "If the house is searched, they'd be bound to find it."

He took it over to the light and saw it was the merest corner of the edge of a letter.

"When you control the death your promise to me, lover, will be ours."

"This, then," he said, straightening up, "is what really sent you to me."

"Yes," she murmured. "I found it in the drawing room grate. It was, surely, a note to Curt. He must have tried to burn it in this house. You see how it proved almost all my suspicions?"

as if prompted to explain away his disillusion in her. A long moment passed. She turned to the fire. He went out.

There was no one in the hall. The body of Curt Vallincourt lay long and dark and lifeless, half in, half out of the light thrown by the scones on each side of a console table.

McCale stopped by the still form, avoiding a puddle of congealing blood. He knelt and noticed that Curt had been shot a little above the heart, at close range, as if someone had walked up to him and let him have it. It was a miracle he had managed to get up the steps to the door. A less virile person would have dropped dead in his tracks.

He frisked the body until he came upon a key ring that held a number of keys. Satisfied that one of these must be the key to the dead man's apartment, he rearranged the clothing, walked to the door, eased it open and slipped out.

He was hardly across the street onto the paths of the Common when the sirens started wailing and tearing up Beacon Hill.

At Park Square, McCale hopped into a cruising cab which put him down at 413 Fenroad in six minutes flat, despite the increasing drizzle and the traffic congestion of that time of day.

Four-thirteen was a big hunk of concrete and stainless steel. He stopped before Vallincourt's apartment and listened carefully, his ear to the door.

After he'd entered, he stood completely still, testing the silence that hung heavily about him. A wide doorway at his right gave entrance to a large living room. He stepped toward it, soundlessly.

The quiet of the place was disturbing. It was the intense, pregnant quiet of a room so recently occupied that the atmosphere of that occupancy still hung in the air. There were two doorways in back and a little to the left of him as he stood motionless in the center of the carpet. Not a board creaked or a pin dropped, but the hair on the back of his head stood up warily. Moisture beaded his palms. He swiveled slowly, expecting—anything.

A woman stood in the first doorway. Tall, dark, voluptuous, she lounged, white-faced, breathless, in a peculiarly familiar attitude.

Hooded, discontented eyes looked steadily at him. Her face was so white she seemed all lipstick in the glare of so many lights. If she had had a cigarette in that mouth—Memory tugged at McCale and he knew it was Shari Lynn. She wore a dark green wool dress.

"Who are you?" he said huskily. She moved slowly toward him, eyes wary. For a moment he ignored her.

"You were a fool to come directly here," he said then.

Apprehension widened her eyes for a moment, bringing out unsuspected lines in her face. She sat down unsteadily on a chair and ran nervous fingers through dark dyed hair.

She searched, McCale thought. He perched perilously on the arm of the Empire sofa, shaking out a cigarette from a pack directly into his mouth in one motion. He spoke over the flame of his lighter.

"Curt Vallincourt has just been shot."

Watching her closely he was certain that it wasn't news to her—that she already knew.

"Who are you—a dick? I didn't kill him."

"You were there."

She was guarded now. Her eyes narrowed and she clutched the glass with shaking fingers. "You've got to prove that, copper."

"I'm not the police."

"Then who are you? What are you doing here? What is this, a shakedown?"

He shook his head. "I'm a private dick. I am, however, investigating Curt Vallincourt's murder."

Curt's Apartment Yields No Clues

Curiously, she seemed relieved. He soon found out why. A crafty look slid into her eyes. She almost smiled.

"Listen, then. I'm not saying I don't know Curt has been killed. I'll even admit maybe I was near enough to have seen it done. I might give you information as to who did it, mister."

"I'm listening. But make it quick. I want to frisk the place before the cops crawl all over it."

She understood the necessity for speed and went on hurriedly. "I was up here having a couple of drinks with Curt before he went to the wedding rehearsal. I decided to wait until he got back. He was gone a long time—too long. I grabbed a cab, and got out at the music shop near Park Square. I was paying off the taxi when I saw Curt cutting across the path to Beacon street."

"You followed him?"

She hesitated a moment, a look of doubt coming over her face, as if she were not sure of saying the right thing. The peace made a leap of difference in McCale's value.

PEOPLE WANT ABOLISHMENT OF USELESS FEDERAL JOBS

IT WAS AN ACCIDENTAL gathering of a small group, all fellow townsmen. The conversation, as usual, turned to politics, the state of the nation and what could be expected from Republican control of the legislative branch of the government.

"What congress should do first is out government expenses," said a merchant. "Fire a million or more bureaucrats, and give us a chance to get going again."

"Right you are, up to a point," said a local politician. "We should turn the bureaucrats out, but not abolish the jobs. We will need those jobs as rewards for party workers if we are to build and maintain an effective political organization. We cannot expect party workers to give their time and effort without some sort of compensation, and that means jobs for those who want jobs, or for their relatives and friends. With more than 200,000 federal jobs in this state filed by Republicans, we could reward practically all the party workers, and have a party organization that would insure our continued success. Yes, turn the bureaucrats out, but do not abolish the jobs. Fill them with men and women who have demonstrated their party loyalty."

It is of such ideas that political machines, either Republican or Democratic, are made. The uproar on the part of that small group of local townpeople at the bald statement of a local politician was evidence that such methods are not approved by the majority of American citizens. They were, aside from the politician, a unit for abolishing every needless job as well as firing the bureaucrats. There was no sentiment for keeping the jobs as a pay-off for party workers.

The Republican party has men capable of real leadership and statesmanship. It also has a full share of "peanuts." If the "peanuts" are a majority and dominate party policies, rather than providing the statesmanship that will get us out of the muddle we are in, the party will lose the opportunity the voters have given it.

It is statesmanship, not partisan politics, not the paying of political debts, that the majority of the American people, who voted the Republican party into power, are demanding in payment for their votes. That little impromptu town session represented a fair cross-section of the nation, as much as would a Gallup poll.

DO NOT COUNT too much on that 20 per cent income tax reduction we have been hearing about, or the maximum economy in government we must have if such a reduction is to be made. There will be more creeks to be made into navigable streams, more dams to be built, more power sites to be developed and more postoffices to be built, despite the fact we have gotten along without them in the past. The pork barrel will continue to operate as of old. Political debts will be paid, at least to some extent. That is the way of politics.

WORLD-SHAKING TRIFLES

SEEMINGLY SMALL incidents can, at times, change the course of national and world events. One such occurred at the Democratic convention in Baltimore in 1912. William Jennings Bryan was a Nebraska delegate to that convention. The delegation was instructed to vote for Clark for the presidential nomination. The Tammany delegation from New York wanted to name the temporary chairman of the convention, the man who would preside for the opening session until the convention was organized, Bryan, who disliked Tammany and all its works, objected. He made an impassioned plea for the repudiation of what he considered to be the forces of political evil. With the assistance of "Gum Shoe Bill" Stone, Clark's manager, Tammany won. Despite their instructions, Bryan and the Nebraska delegation climbed off the Clark bandwagon and onto Wilson's.

Bryan's action made Wilson's nomination possible. If Clark had become President—and the Democratic nominee was slated to win—he might not have led us into World War I. Without our participation in that conflict, the history of the world would have been changed. Bryan, a pacifist, was, possibly, responsible for our participation in that war.

On the Grassed Side of the Fence

A Bank is only as prosperous as its customers; its customers only as prosperous as the manner in which they utilize their resources. To our Ranchmen Customers, we are on the grassed side of the fence, on the productive side. Over here there is a heavy, vigorous growth of grass made possible by proper grazing management. In the good seasons, we graze more livestock than during poor seasons; we adjust our stocking according to the amount of grass available. We always leave sufficient grass on the ground to carry our stock over at least one season of drought, thus assuring us this cheap feed and protecting the density, vigor and vitality of the grass. In this way we are enabled to market our grass as pounds of meat and wool at a neat profit every year.

We trust that we are not on opposite sides of the fence. Your bank is staying on the Productive side.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Sam Hackney Reports on the U.S.A.

Sam Hackney and the others returned from a trailer trip around the country. They're tired, and glad to be home, but mighty impressed with what they saw.

As Sam reports—every section has something different; a different way of talking; different tastes in food and drink; different laws and customs. But bigger than all these differences is the American spirit of tolerance that lets us live together in united peace.

"Of course," says Sam, "you run into intolerance from time to time. Individuals who criticize another's right to speak his mind; enjoy a glass of beer or work at any trade he chooses. But these are the exceptions—and we're even tolerant of them!"

From where I sit, more of us ought to make a trip like the Hackneys—to realize firsthand how America is bigger than its many differences... how tolerance of those differences is the very thing that makes us strong.

Joe Marsh
