Methodist Church

F. J. Johnston, Pastor

It has been frequently said, "that it pays to advertise" (This preacher is sincerely grateful to the Lincoln County News Outlook for the happy privilege of trying.) But I heard of one old preacher whose experience was to the contrary. At least, he said, that when he kept his sermon a deep secret until Sunday morning that he was able to slip up on the devil and hit him a body blow but that when he advertised it before hand, the devil always hatched up a counter attack or alibi and got it around to the people by late Saturday night. Hence, when the Sunday worship hour had arrived the people had their minds all made-up before the preacher had a chance to deliver his message. One might imagine that old preacher had served a term at Trinity.

I can think of no good reason why even the devil should have any thing against MOTHERS DAY. So let us all be at some church next Sunday. Bring your motor and sit by her during the service. Or if that is not possible be at church and wear a flower in her honor.

Baccalaureate Service

SOURCES OF NATIONAL CONFLICT

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 12:1-5, 12-15, 19, 20. MEMORY SELECTION—A man's pride shall bring him low; but he that is of a lowly spirit shall obtain honor.—Proverbs 29:23.

"He did evil, because he prepared not his heart to seek the Lord"—this is the divine epitome of the life of Rehoboam the king as given in I Chronicles 12:14.

The destiny of the people hinged on the choices of their ruler, so they went down into confusion and sin because of his bad leadership.

Here we have magnified anew the great importance of making right decisions for ourselves and for their influence on others.

Life is full of choices, and the decisions we make determine our destiny both in this life and in the life to come. Since the great issues of our life may hinge on the simplest of choices, it is obvious that we need guidance at every point and in every moment of life.

The picture before us is astonishingly up to date. People were crying for relief from tax burdens. One group of leaders counseled moderation; another group said in effect, tax them all you can and keep on spending. The king, who in a monarchy had the final decree in his power, replied to the plea of the people with sarcastic indifference to their need, and the ten tribes revolted.

I. A Friendly Request (vv. 1-5). Governments exist for the people, not the people for the government. Political leaders seem to forget this axiom and begin to rule as though they need not listen to the reasonable pleas of the people. Tax burdens rise, regimentation of the life of the nation takes place, and sooner or later the people rise to overthrow the government. It happened in Rome; it was back of the French Revolution; it brought an uprising of the serfs of Russia; it can and will happen elsewhere if men who rule do not listen to reason.

Rehoboam made at least one wise decision—to wait three days before speaking and to seek counsel. He needed this, for having been brought up in the palace of Solomon without proper training for his place as king, he was quite unable to make immediate answer to their request. Incidentally, we note that much of the folly of Rehoboam is chargeable to the neglect of his father to rear him properly. May that terrible thing never be said about you and me regarding our children.

II. An Arrogant Refusal (vv. 12-15). The picture of the two groups of advisers is a most graphic one and should afford the teacher an excellent opportunity to show young people especially, how important it is to heed the counsel of their elders. Even so, youth stands today at the fork of the road. Let us in all kindness, love, and tact seek to help them choose the right way.

Note the arrogance and pride of the young men and their king. They were not content to make a simple denial of the request. They did not have sense enough to temper the bitter disappointment of the people by an expression of regret. No, they had to use the foolish whip of caustic words and harsh judgments—what folly! Let us learn a needed lesson from their failure.

III. The Inevitable Revolt (vv. 19, 20). There is a limit to what men and women can bear—and end to their patience and their loyalty. People, long submissive, ultimately come to the point where they think, and when they do, dictatorial rulers tumble from their self-made thrones. Would that the people of the earth realized the power which they have and that they would use it for the glory of God.

Rehoboam felt the power of the people who revolted, others have followed him, for it is still true in the world that the rulers "do evil" because "they prepare not their hearts to seek the Lord."

Rehoboam, who had awaited the arrival of this crucial hour in anticipation of taking his place as the king of the ten tribes, was ready, and was at once chosen as the leader of those who withdrew from the rule of the house of David. Rehoboam's sin brought this about, but it was also in the counsels of God (v.15).

Is it not a comforting thought to recall that back of the confusion which men have created in their efforts to rule the world, God stands in the shadows watching, waiting and waiting for that day when the Prince of Peace, his Son and our Savior, is to come as King of kings and Lord of lords to reign forever and ever. Blessed day! May it come quickly!

W.N.U. SERVICE

Mark Darrell, young American lumberman, is boss of a lumber camp near St. Victor, Canada. Nat Page is his assistant. Madame Madeleine Kinross, the young widow who owns the timberland, is trying to persuade Mark to cancel the lease. Her lawyer, Horace Broussac, has offered Mark $4,000, but Mark refuses to give up a good thing. At a critical point in lumbering operations, the French-Canadian workmen strike for double wages. Mark pays them off. A log jam threatens to ruin his hopes, but with the aid of the foreman, Larousse, Mark saves the timber. By a clever stratagem, Mark gets his men to offer to return to work. He suspects Broussac was the fomenter of his labor troubles.

CHAPTER V

"Tell them they made a mistake," he said. "I'm not going to reward them for making a mistake. Next fall, when the work begins in earnest, I may consider a fifty cents raise. If they come back now, they come back at two dollars."

Louis interpreted rapidly. "If they want to come back," Mark continued, "tell them they can move back into their cabins as soon as possible, and get that load of lumber put through the mill."

But the men understood. Grins of gratitude had supplanted the looks of shame and sullenness. Louis marshalled his men to form them in column and march them away again—Louis had once been a corporal in France.

Nat said, as he watched the departing crowd, "I didn't think you'd put that across, Mark."

"I had a hunch that money was going to talk, even with Broussac here," said Mark. "I guess he'll be in the job soon."

"Would you sell if he made you a real offer?"

Mark shook his head. "I'm here to stay," he answered. And then he knew that he was thinking of Madeleine Kinross.

Broussac didn't delay. He came next morning, driving up in a rig with a spirited horse. In the mill the dynamos were revolving, the barkers whirring, the chain drag traveling up the flume, carrying its load of logs. Pilemen, standing on the rafts, were spearing the logs and attaching them to the mechanism that started them on their journey millward.

Broussac got out of his rig and came forward, hand outstretched. Mark hesitated an instant, and then took it again. The lawyer entered the office and dropped into a chair. He looked at Mark with a cynical smile upon his lips.

"You appear to have won, Mr. Darrell," he said.

"My understanding was that there would be no opposition from you," said Mark.

"Violence," corrected Broussac. "I guaranteed that St. Victor should treat you with the consideration due to you. I should make it plain to you that it is not my own opposition you had to encounter, but that of the whole town, which is loyal to the wife of its late seigneur."

Mark, sitting silent, looked into the keen, intelligent face of the lawyer. Broussac had come to make some offer, of course. But why? What was the element behind his opposition that Mark didn't understand?

"I want to ask you a question," said Broussac. "Just why do you attach so much value to your leasehold rights, if adequate compensation for them were allowed you?"

"I might ask you," Mark returned, "why you attach so much importance to getting me out of St. Victor. But I am not going to ask you that question. I prefer to answer yours. I have undertaken a job, and I have a liking for staying on it, Monsieur Broussac."

"Ah," said Broussac. "I thought you Americans regarded everything from the monetary point of view. But let me make my own position clearer. I was raised, a poor boy, in the slums of Quebec. All my life I have sought position, wealth, ease, a settled place in the world. I have gained these, for I am going to marry Madeleine Kinross."

Mark Refuses a Tempting Offer

Mark felt something like a stab at his heart as he looked into the lawyer's face. He had guessed it, but that didn't make it any the easier to take.

"You see, Mr. Darrell," Broussac went on, "we want the rights back, rights that were leased to you under rather desperate financial circumstances. At first, when you refused my offer, I thought you were bluffing, in the American way. But I no longer think you were bluffing. I think you are an obstinate young man. Mr. Darrell, I want you to leave St. Victor. And I have come to make you another offer. Fifteen thousand dollars, plus the proceeds from the sale of that lumber."

Mark shook his head. "Frankly, no," he answered. "My backers have authorized me to go ahead. They would not understand any such arrangement, and they would withdraw their support from me. No, Monsieur Broussac, I am not prepared to accept your offer—nor any other."

stared, then nodded his head gravely, rose, and went back to his rig. In another minute he was driving furiously back toward St. Victor.

Mark left Nat to take charge of the operations. He packed a blanket and a little food, and started out alone to look over his limits, with the intention of spending a night or two in the open.

Mark wondered whether Broussac's explanation of his motives was actually true. And then he discovered that he wasn't thinking about that. He was thinking about Broussac's declared intention of marrying Madeleine Kinross, his enemy, who had nevertheless saved his lumber for him.

Barely sixteen when she married Kinross, half-an-hour before the seigneur sailed to his death aboard his sealing-schooner!

Mark remembered the white face she had turned upon him when he staggered ashore, after Louis had pulled him out of the foaming water. "I'm glad! I'm glad!" she had cried.

Then Mark had known he loved her. But unconsciously he had known it from the first night, when he saw her big, gray eyes fixed upon his in anger.

Mark hadn't thought much about love for three or four years. Of course, he had gone through his experiences, but the woods had become an absorbing passion with him, the desire to tame the wilds, as a horseman tames some wild steed. All his suppressed instincts had come flooding back when she cried, "I'm glad! I'm glad!"

The woods had become an absorbing passion with him.

At nightfall, in the warm spring evening, Mark laid down his blanket under a big spruce and curled up in it. In a few minutes he was asleep, not dreaming even of Madeleine Kinross.

He awoke at dawn, stretched himself, and realized how good life was, and how petty were the things that had been troubling him.

He built a fire, cooked a few strips of bacon, made tea and ate the stale bread that he had brought with him. Afterward he ascended a slope above him to get his bearings.

The river ran on his right, foaming down to the flume. On his left, to his surprise, he saw the natural bridge that connected the seigniory with the all-but-island on which stood the lighthouse. And beyond this, through a dense growth of trees, Mark could see the slender shaft of the lighthouse, on its base of rocks.

Madeleine Tells Cousin Broussac to Get Out

Suddenly again the remembrance of Madeleine Kinross flooded him with tenderness. The idea came to Mark to go and see the girl, and try to make his peace with her. There was no doubt that she was influenced by Broussac. And his own tenure of the seigniory lands would be but for four or five years, during which she would be getting stumps money from him. There wasn't any reason for the opposition she had shown him.

If he could make his peace with her, that would mean the end of the fight with Broussac.

That was the nature of Mark's reasoning. Actually, well, he knew he just wanted to see the girl again. He made his way along the trail toward the rock bridge and down the roughly terraced steps toward the lighthouse and Madeleine's cottage.

Then a roughly dressed figure emerged from the scrub and stood confronting him, an ancient pistol in its hand. It was Andre Galpeault, the lighthouse-keeper, his face convulsed with fury.

"You do not come here! You go back! Nobody wants you here!" the old man shouted.

"Suppose you tell me what's the matter," Mark suggested.

"You go, you spy, you Quebec detective. The seigneur is dead. He died in the fog, when the piece of ice broke away and he was left on it. I protect the lady of the seigneur!"

He leveled the old pistol at Mark's heart. Mark saw his finger trembling upon the trigger, and leaped. There followed the roar of the discharge, and the heavy ball whirled over Mark's shoulder. Mark tore the weapon from the old man's hands and sent it crashing into the scrub.

"You are an old fool, Andre," he said. "If you had killed me, you'd have swung by the neck in Quebec jail."

Old Andre's face was convulsed with terror. "Ah, mon Dieu!" he muttered. "The seigneur is dead, and you—you come here to—to—"

Mark passed on, leaving the old man muttering by the roadside. The cause of his hostility was utterly meaningless to him, but it made it the more imperative to try to come to an understanding with Madeleine Kinross.

Broussac's smart rig was standing at the door of her cottage. Broussac and Madeleine were standing in the doorway. They were so absorbed in conversation that neither was aware of Mark's approach.

"You married Kinross in order to save your father's little property," came Broussac's taunting voice. "Now you can marry me, to save the seigniory."

"I tell you no, no, no!" cried the girl. "A thousand times no, never! I trusted you as my guardian, because you were related to the seigneur, and now you come to me like this..."

Broussac's hands shot forth and caught the girl's wrists. "You're all wrong, Madeleine," he said in a taunting voice. "You're going to marry me this summer!"

The crunch of Mark's feet upon the gravel before the door startled them. Broussac let Madeleine's hands fall, and swung about. For a moment his face was devilish in its sneer of hate and malice.

"I'm sorry to interfere," said Mark. "I called to see Madame Kinross."

"It might occur to you that Madame Kinross and I have some important business to discuss," sneered Broussac.

"No!" cried the girl. "I have nothing more to discuss with you, Cousin Horace. I ask you to go!"

"Then I guess I'm not interfering as much as I thought I might be," said Mark.

Broussac whirled upon him. "You have done nothing but interfere," he shouted. "You are not wanted in St. Victor. I have offered you a good sum of money to rescind the contract. I shall not go any higher. Now you are interfering in a wholly private matter concerning Madame Kinross and myself. You will go! You will go at once!"

shouted the lawyer.

"Of course I'd go," said Mark, "only I've got an idea that Madame Kinross doesn't want you."

"And that is true!" cried the girl. "I am through, Cousin Horace. You can do anything you please. I only ask that you will go."

"Then you see it is you who will go," Mark addressed the lawyer.

"And at once, please!"

Broussac lost all control of himself. He shook his fist in Mark's face. "You order me away!" he shouted. "You interfere! You will regret that you ever set foot in St. Victor! You will be fortunate if you escape from it alive."

Why Madeleine Believes Her Husband Still Lives

"Meanwhile—" said Mark, indicating his decision with a very vigorous gesture of his fists.

Broussac leaped into his rig and slapped the reins across the back of the horse, which started off up the hill.

Mark watched the lawyer drive away, turned back toward Madeleine Kinross, who was staring at him with frightened eyes. "I'm sorry," he said grimly, "but I seem to have come at an appropriate time."

"He made love to me. He wanted me to be his wife. And I had trusted him."

"I've got to admit," said Mark, "I can't altogether blame him for that."

"You don't understand. This summer, he threatened me that I should lose everything I have."

"You're twenty-one, aren't you?" asked Mark.

"Last winter."

"Then, if he was your guardian, it was his duty to give you an accounting for your property. Didn't he give you one?"

"He gave me nothing. Everything is involved. You see, the seigneur had lost a great sum of money speculating on the Quebec market. Ever since his death, Horace Broussac has been trying to regain what my husband lost. You see, he is not dead!"

Mark looked at her in silence. "If he had died I should have felt it here—here! He is not dead. He was rescued from that ice-floe, he became insane, and he is being cared for somewhere."

Mark was still silent.

"There were three of them with him on his schooner, Alphonse Vitar, Hector Mackintosh, and Andre Galpeault."

Every Line is a look at Tomorrow

When viewed from this angle, the Buick will be spotted at extra cost as soon as available.

YOU spot it on the highway every time a Buick comes along:

Here you meet the future face-to-face.

Here you see the clean, rich, uncluttered design that marks the swing away from what was to what is going to be.

Here's the sweep and flow of fender line that's called for by a streamlined age — here's the solid, steady look that spells roadability — the broad beam that means room — the massive bonnet that tells of Fireball power aplenty.

Here's grace, here's ability, here's sturdy dependability — all wrapped up in one handsome package that's not merely up-to-the-times but ahead of it.

Here are the good looks that bespeak good works; you hardly have to be told of precisions carried to ten-thousandths of an inch, of materials searched out from the finest to be found.

Any wonder that such a creation is America's most wanted automobile? Any wonder people pass up cars that may be easier to get to wait for a car that's going to stay fresh and new and modern-looking?

The simple fact is that you're buying in the future, when you buy any good car today.

Why not settle on the one that most obviously foretells what the future will be — that has the most in it of what is to come?

Buick dealers' showrooms are kept pretty bare of display models by the eagerness of Buick buyers to "take over" the first minute they can.

But you'll be greeted in every one of them with courtesy and sincere interest in getting your Buick at the first minute possible.

Drop in — talk it over — and insure yourself a happy future by placing your order now. We'll take it, with or without a car to trade.

Talk . . . Talk . . . Talk
Every day, words flow in an endless stream from the mouths of all of us. Occasionally, someone chooses a few significant phrases that put a final period to all talk that has gone before. One day, in another city, a stranger in a barbershop was sounding off. "The trouble with my bank is . . ." and he stated a tirade about a service charge on his checking account, and a blast against banks in general. When he had finished, a voice from a lathered face in the next chair came to life. "Glad to know how you feel about that; come over to the bank some day and I'll be glad to straighten it out."
So, if you have a question about any banking service, instead of just complaining to the world at large, talk to your banker who can and will do something about it.

From where I sit . . . by Joe Marsh
One Story I Hated to Print
I was kind of unhappy to print that story about Cappy Smith—where he hauled his neighbor into court for planting a windbreak too close to his orchard.
Because that sort of thing is rare in Our Town. Most of the farmers who plant windbreaks are considerate of their neighbors. By mutual agreement, they plant them at a safe, convenient distance, and we never had to have a law.
From where I sit, it's a little like the brewers' program of self-taxation. The brewers ask the folks who retail beer to keep their taverns clean and law-abiding. The big majority of them are good neighbors, and the brewers ask the licensing authorities to take action against those who aren't.
That's how anything should be handled that affects the good of all. I hope Cappy and his neighbor settle their differences through tolerance and courteous consideration of each other's rights. It's a lot better than a court fight.

Veteran News
Veterans attending colleges in Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming who plan to remain in school during the summer will receive subsistence checks without interruption if they comply with a new but simple procedure adopted by the Branch 13 office of the Veterans Administration.
Harold J. Cole, branch office director of vocational rehabilitation and education training, announced today that training offices at the various institutions have been instructed to secure signed VA forms from all veterans studying under the GI Bill who intend to continue their studies during the summer.

This procedure, Cole explained, will insure delivery of subsistence checks without interruption. Veterans who fail to signify their intention of remaining in school for the summer term probably will experience a month's delay in receiving June subsistence checks.
Any of the seven National Service Life Insurance plans now may be issued initially both to persons in the armed forces and to veterans who had active service between Oct. 8, 1940, and Sept. 2, 1945, inclusive. Moreover, a term policy now may be converted to a permanent plan at any time within the term period, except that conversion to an endowment policy cannot be made while the insured is totally disabled. Formerly, applications for new or additional NSLI were restricted to term insurance, which could not be converted until the first anniversary of its effective date. Under present regulations World War II veterans have until August 1, 1947, to reinstate lapsed NSLI term insurance by remitting two monthly premium payments and a signed statement that their health is as good as when their policy lapsed.

THERE'S MUSIC IN THE AIR . . . Typical of the many musical events which will be staged throughout the country during National Music Week was this outdoor concert presented under auspices of the Choral and Instrument Music Association of Chicago.

HIGH NOTE

Annual Observance Stimulates Interest in Musical Activities

WNU Features.

From unrehearsed hymn sings in small rural communities to elaborate musical festivals in larger cities, music will fill the air during the week of May 4 to 11 as more than 2,500 communities throughout the country join in observance of National Music Week.

Intended to stimulate greater year-round interest in music and music education, National Music Week has been observed since 1924. In previous years, various communities had sponsored their own programs at unspecified times.

Although the keynote for Music Week is set by a central Music Week committee, with headquarters in New York, actual programs are entirely in the hands of local committees and individual workers. The central committee, however, is available for guidance and information.

Stimulate Interest.

The only idea actively promoted by the central committee is that the week be utilized for activity calculated to benefit year-round growth in musical interest. They believe that a period in which people are made more conscious of the value of music to the individual and to the community should serve as a time of enjoyment through making and hearing music, and as a stimulus to musical projects for young and old.

Many projects designed to aid veterans will be promoted as features of the 1947 observance. In some cities these will take the form of scholarships and educational opportunities generally; in others musical equipment for servicemen's centers and hospitals; in still others concert appearances for the especially talented. Local Music Week committees also will provide musical programs for patients in veterans' hospitals.

Another interest which will gain through the Music Week observance is "living war memorials" (notably buildings with acoustics for musical performances). In the larger cities such memorials are more likely to take the form of concert halls and auditoriums, and in the smaller places band shells and bandstands for outdoor use.

Churches Cooperate.

For many years churches have marked the opening Sunday of Music Week with sermons on music and religion, and with special programs by organists and choirs. Increasingly there is a trend toward inter-church and inter-denominational services. The closing Sunday, which coincides with Mothers' Day, is frequently the occasion of musical events in honor of mothers.

To indicate the wide extent and variety of local observances, the Music Week committee cites a few examples culled from the 1946 records.

In one of the most elaborate observances, Los Angeles, Calif., staged a week-long series of programs under municipal auspices. Leading event was a music festival at Hollywood Bowl featuring a youth chorus of 700 voices. A school music festival entitled "America Sings," the premiere concert by a civic orchestra, concerts by the police, county and selected high school bands, and a program by a combined women's chorus were other highlights.

Baltimore, Md., also gave a prominent part to youth in its observance. A "Children's Prayer for Peace" program was marked by participation of youngsters from the Chinese, Jewish, Negro, French, Norwegian, Russian and other colonies.

Stage 274 Programs.

Under cooperative auspices of the local Business and Professional Women's clubs and the playground and recreation commission, Alton, Ill., observed Music Week with a total of 274 programs.

A campaign for promotion of greater interest in and attendance at its local symphony orchestra concert was conducted in Springfield, Ohio, during the week.

Despite the achievements in the larger centers, however, it is in the smaller communities that the main strength of the Music Week movement lies. There are between 2,000 and 3,000 communities of less than 5,000 population that almost yearly mark the occasion in some worthwhile way.

Because of its median size and long history as a participant, Paris, Tex., is cited as an example of the smaller towns which stage unusual and effective programs.

The 1946 observance there began with an inter-denominational hymn festival led by joint choirs of several churches. Excerpts from an operetta by a school choral club provided the entertainment for the Parent-Teachers association meeting. The high school band gave a demonstration for Rotary club, and the public library included in its special display of books on music a scrapbook history of the local Music Study club. Posters submitted in a contest for upper grade children were hung in store windows and awards to the members were memberships in the Civic Music association.

Texas Paradise Stays Crimeless For Four Years

SARITA, TEX.—Surrounded by a sparsely-populated area, Sarita is gaining recognition as the crimeless section of Texas.

That distinction results from the fact that not a single crime has been recorded in the last four years. District court sessions consist merely of selection of jurors, who never are used.

"Nothing much has happened in the 23 years I've been here," insists District Clerk Nettie P. Woods. "We didn't have a divorce last year and I don't think we'll have one this year," she adds. No case of juvenile delinquency ever has been recorded in the county.

"I guess snakes give us more trouble than anything," the clerk says.

Births, deaths and marriages are the only newsworthy events in the county, in her opinion. There is no state old age assistance, no formal charity and during the depression of the 30s there was no WPA.

No 'Close Shaves'

TULSA, OKLA.—Customers cannot get a shave in the "Big 9" barber shop. The shop, despite its name, is so narrow that its chairs cannot be laid back for customers to recline, so its barber concentrates on cutting hair.

Horse on You

COVINGTON, KY.—Cow punching has been added to duties of Campbell county police. In a single week police were called upon to corral 20 stray steers which wandered from their pasture, to capture a rampaging bull and to take charge of two wandering cows.

Vigilantes Now Seek Dummy Nags

WASECA, MINN.—Times have changed since the Waseca County Horse Thief Detectives association was organized to rid the county of horse thieves in the late 1890s.

Now the society, preparing for its annual meeting, had to seek a dummy horse, the kind that harness makers use. The horse was required to instruct new members in how to put on a saddle and other such techniques. Old-timers feel every member should know at least that much.

A group of "deputies" was formed as a posse to capture prospective talent for entertainment.

The organization, which ranks as one of the oldest in the state, has not been active in apprehending horse thieves for decades, but it remains active by meeting annually to allow members to recall thrilling escapades of the past.

Meat Makes Fine Main Dish Salads (See Recipes Below)

Spring Salads

"Most women know how easy it is to whip together a salad," said my next door neighbor. "Why don't they think of using a meat or fish salad to make spring lunches easy?" Naturally I agreed with her wholeheartedly, and promised to remind my readers of this thought now that the weather is becoming warmer. What is better when you've been hanging out clothes or gardening, than coming in to lunch on a crisp, chilled salad? You know you can slip the salad together before you start the morning's work and place in the refrigerator until luncheon.

Protein is an important requirement of our body, whether we are young or old. Thus, it's wise to plan a main dish salad that makes use of one of the good protein foods such as eggs, fish, cheese or meat. But make it crisp and crunchy, too, using vitamin and mineral-laden greens right from the garden.

Veal Salad

- (Serves 6)
- 2 cups cooked macaroni
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 8 sweet pickles, chopped
- 6 sliced radishes
- 1/2 cup cucumber, sliced
- 3 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 2 1/2 cups sliced, cooked veal

Mix salad ingredients. Toss together with just enough mayonnaise to moisten all ingredients thoroughly. Serve cold on crisp greens. (Note: If desired, roast leftover or stewed veal may be used.)

Potato Salad

- (Serves 6)
- 6 new potatoes, sliced
- 6 slices uncooked bacon, sliced
- 1 small onion, minced
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Dash of pepper
- 1/4 cup sour cream

Boil potatoes in their skins until tender. Peel and slice. Fry bacon until crisp; remove and brown onion in fat. Add vinegar, salt, pepper and sour cream. Add potatoes and bacon. Serve hot or cold, garnished with sliced tomatoes and weiners prepared thus:

Broiled Weiners.

- 6 frankfurters
- 6 slices bacon
- 3/4 pound American cheese
- Mustard

Slit frankfurters, spread inside with mustard and insert strips of cheese. Wrap a strip of bacon around each frankfurter and place under broiler. Heat to brown and crisp the bacon and melt the cheese.

'Hearty Salad Bowl'

- (Serves 6)
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 head of lettuce
- 1/4 bunch watercress
- 1 cup French dressing
- 1 cup celery, cut in strips
- 1 cup cooked ham or tongue, sliced
- 1 cup cooked chicken, sliced
- 1 cup Swiss cheese, sliced
- 1 cup cooked or canned pears
- 1 hard-boiled egg, chopped

LYNN SAYS:

Use Leftovers Well If You Would Budget
If you have plain cooked macaroni, this can be combined with a number of leftover vegetables, hard-boiled eggs and used with mayonnaise as a main dish salad.
A simple entree to stretch leftover chicken is to combine it with bright peas, green pepper and pimiento in a white sauce. Serve this piping hot over tenderly cooked golden egg noodles.

Rub salad bowl with peeled clove of garlic. Shred greens in the bowl and toss in with 1/2 cup of dressing. Add remaining ingredients and remaining dressing. Toss well and serve garnished with the chopped hard cooked egg.

Jellied Fish Salad

- (Serves 6 to 8)
- 1 1/2 cups grated tuna fish or flaked salmon
- 2 shelled hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 1/2 cup chopped, stuffed olives
- 2 tablespoons capers
- 1 tablespoon chopped chives or minced onion
- 1 tablespoon plain gelatin
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 1 1/2 cups mayonnaise
- Lettuce or greens
- Tomatoes, sliced or quartered
- Avocado slices, marinated in lemon juice

Combine tuna fish, eggs, olives, capers and chives. Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes, then dissolve over hot water. Add dissolved gelatin to mayonnaise, stirring constantly. Add to fish mixture and mix together thoroughly. Turn into a mold and chill until firm. Unmold on bed of greens and garnish with tomato and avocado slices. Serve with additional dressing, if desired.

Green pepper and eggs go together like bread and butter. You can chop hard-cooked eggs together with minced green pepper and use as the basis of a salad sandwich, or if you want to fuss a bit more you can make a pretty-pretty salad this way, when you invite your next door neighbor over for a spot of lunch. Prepare this salad in advance and it will slice more readily.

Stuffed Green Pepper and Egg Salad

- (Serves 6 to 8)
- 3 medium-sized green peppers
- 1/2 pound cream cheese
- 3 shelled, hard-cooked eggs
- 1 sweet pickle
- 1/2 cup chopped stuffed olives
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- Lettuce
- French dressing

Wash peppers, cut off tops and remove the seeds. Meanwhile cream the cheese until it is smooth. Put eggs, pickle and olives through a food chopper and add to cheese with mayonnaise and combine to make a thick paste. Pack this mixture into the peppers and chill for several hours. Slice peppers crosswise, 1/4 inch thick, and arrange several slices on lettuce. Serve with french dressing, if desired.

Use leftover vegetable juices in place of water in meat and vegetable dishes to utilize them.

When serving leftover ham creamed, add a novel note to the dish by using Chinese vegetables with it. This adds delicious variety to the meal.

If you have leftover weiners from the night before, slice them and add them to a sauce and serve over a nest of spaghetti. This nourishing dish is something the youngsters will like.

THE TELEPHONE STRIKE

Our Position and the Public Interest

We didn't want a telephone strike and we regret its continuance, with the inconveniences the public is suffering.

But we have a responsibility to you, the public, to provide the best service we can at the lowest rates consistent with fair treatment of employees and the investors who have put their savings in our business.

Consequently it was our responsibility to say to the Union— "Your demands are beyond all reason— complying with them would make necessary prohibitive rates for telephone service. This would be bad not only for telephone users and investors, but in the long run for telephone employees as well."

We want telephone wages to be fair, and all of our comparative studies have indicated that they are fair— actually on the high side in the communities we serve.

The Union does not agree that present wages are good. We are unable to get together, and so the Company suggests, and has suggested before the strike, that the wage issues be submitted to Arbitration by a board of impartial citizens residing in the states in which the Company operates.

ARBITRATION OF THE WAGE ISSUES WOULD BE FAIR TO ALL

When all interested parties are considered, and the public has a very definite interest in the dispute, it certainly seems that an offer of Arbitration is a fair offer.

Arbitration is simply a means of letting an impartial person or group of persons settle a dispute after reviewing the facts and giving full consideration to both sides. The arbitrator acts as a judge or umpire.

Agreement on Arbitration and going back to work while the board is deliberating, would mean that everyone would be benefited. The public would get service, employees would get back on the pay roll, and the Company could proceed with its large construction program to give its customers the kind of service they want.

Your continuing friendly understanding and cooperation during this unhappy situation are greatly appreciated.
