Dr. Varney To Head Extension Service

The long planned consolidation of the extension service, experiment station, and the school of agriculture of New Mexico A&M College will be accomplished July 1 and the three divisions be put under the direction of Dr. Harry Ross Varney, A&M President. Hugh M. Milton II announced.

At the present, Dr. Varney is associate dean of agriculture and associate director of extension and experimentation at the University of Vermont. He will succeed Director of Extension A. B. Fite, who retires July 1st after 35 years of extension and experiment station service; and Acting Director of Experiment Station Albert S. Curry, who will now become associate director. Dean Hugh M. Gardner will continue as dean of agricultural education.

G. L. Baykin, former county agent leader, has been associate director of extension.

In announcing the appointment of Varney, President Milton said, "This consolidation is the realization of a dream of Dr. Harry L. Kent when he was president of the college in the early 1920's."

By placing these three divisions, under one head the college will provide more efficient administration of Public Law 733, which practically fuses experimentation extension service; and education. By making this change we are keeping step with the more progressive agriculture schools of the nation.

GOD IN NATIONAL AFFAIRS

LESSON TEXT—Amos 5:1-15, 21-24.
MEMORY SELECTION—Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live.—Amos 5:14.

Social justice, though much spoken about in recent times, has been the concern of right thinking men ever since sin entered the world and started man's inhumanity toward man. In the prophet Amos, we find the eloquent and plain-spoken voice of one crying out against such conditions almost 800 years before Christ.

This lesson is one which is of utmost importance, because in our present-day struggle with social injustice we have come to assume that it is primarily a political or economic question.

The book of Amos and all other scripture rightly gets at "the focus of infection," which is sin. Sin in the heart leads to sinful actions, and these inevitably involve others, and thus bring about social problems.

I. God Is Great and Just (vv. 6-9). From the little village of Tekoa and out of the wilderness in which he had been a herdsman came Amos, the man of God, to hurl his prophecy of disaster upon the heads of the complacent people of Israel and to take up a lamentation over those in Israel living in luxury and prosperity.

It was true that the common people were being ground under the heel of cruel oppression, but who cared about the poor as long as they could be squeezed for taxes to support the luxurious comforts and pleasures of the rich? A prosperity which does not reach the homes of the poor is not a real prosperity at all. When in addition it encourages the "haves" to oppress the "have-nots," it becomes a grave danger, a real cause for lamentation.

Over against the social sin and sorrow of his day Amos placed the almighty and righteous God. The people were urged to seek him and his righteousness. Would they do it? The answer came quickly.

II. Men Are Small and Wicked (vv. 10-13).

Thank God that it is not true of all men, but those of Amos' day (and many are like them in our day) turned away in hatred of the one who dared to rebuke their wickedness.

Sin is always a horrible thing, but when men who have fallen into sin are responsive to correction and ready to repent and forsake their sin, there is hope. The thing which made Israel's state so serious in the sight of God and of his prophet was that they had only hatred for those who were bold enough to reprove them or to live among them according to God's standards (vv. 10, 13).

"They who will endure no criticism have slammed the door in the face of truth. When we get to the place where we cannot endure having our faults pointed out, we are on the way to moral collapse" (Douglass).

III. Men Should Hate Evil (vv. 14, 15).

God loves the sinner, even when he is in his sin. God wants to help him, and so pleads with him to hate the evil enough to forsake it, and love the good enough to turn to God in repentance.

God's Word condemns sin, but it also presents a remedy. In Christ we have the perfect, final, and complete answer to the sin question. Amos, speaking centuries before Christ, admonished Israel to repent and to turn away from the evil which they had cultivated with such assiduity, and to be equally zealous about doing good, in the hope that "it may be that the Lord God of hosts will be gracious" (v. 15).

How favored we are to be permitted not only to urge people to turn from evil to good, but to offer them the One who is the way, the truth, and the life.

Israel did not repent, but in folly depended on their religious ceremonies to satisfy an offended God. The prophet therefore declares that

IV. God Hates Hypocrisy (vv. 21-24).

God had no pleasure in their religious observances and rites, because they were presented with unrepentant hearts and by hands which were soiled by the oppression of their fellow man.

Mark it well, God has no delight in the attendance upon church services, beautiful though they may be; he does not listen to the sweet strains of sacred music, nor does he accept the rich "offerings" of those who live in unrepentant sin and who pay for magnificent church buildings and beautiful church services with money gotten by crooked dealings and social injustice.

God is righteous, and God's Word always cuts right through the hypocrisy of men. Let us heed the plea of Amos, that righteousness should run through our personal and national life "as a mighty stream," and then we shall be ready both as individuals and as a people to worship him aright.

W-N-U SERVICE

Mark Darrell, young American lumberman, was in boss of a lumber camp near St. Victor, Canada, that was his assistant. Mark had fallen in love with Madeleine, Madeleine Kiaros, the young widow who owned the timberland. She returned his affection, but tells him that she believes her husband is still alive, so that there is no hope of marriage. Her lawyer, Horace Broussac, also is a suitor. Broussac has made several cash offers to Mark to get out the land for $15,000. He tells Mark that he intends to marry Madeleine, to gain her property as well as herself. Mark visits the parish priest to try to learn the truth about Eric Kiaros. The priest tells him simply, "Madame Kiaros is not for you."

CHAPTER VII

The lighthouse had just begun to flash its one-two, one-two of warning through the night when Mark made his way along the natural bridge, and down the steps toward Madeleine's cottage.

He kept a sharp lookout for Andre Galpeault, but the old man was evidently in the lighthouse. And, in the twilight, Mark was knocking at Madeleine's door.

She came out, she stood holding the sides of the door, looking at Mark, her breath coming and going quickly.

"Madeleine!"

He took her hands in his, and still she stood looking at him, unresisting, her gray eyes luminous.

"I've been to see Father Lacombe. I told him that I loved you. I thought it right to do so. I asked him what happened on the ice-floe, and he refused to answer me."

"He will not answer me," said the girl. "They know—but I am not permitted to know what happened to my husband. When I said that he was still alive you thought me crazy. Now you understand."

"But, if he is alive, where is he? Who knows?"

"Those four know—Andre, Hector Mackintosh, Alphonse Vitard, and Father Lacombe. But I must never know. My husband is alive somewhere, I know, and insane as the result of his exposure. He was never quite sane. He would drink until a kind of devil took possession of him, and then he would fight a dozen men at a time, and beat them. He was the most adored and hated man on the lower St. Lawrence."

"I know he is living, mad, somewhere, and they will not tell me."

"Madeleine, I love you!"

"Ah, what is the use of telling me that? Do you not see my fate? I married the seigneur when I was fifteen because I was forced into it—and also because he fascinated me. I was proud to be chosen wife of the seigneur. And there was never any other woman in his life. He had always loved me. And there was my father's little property. What could I do?"

"Now I know that he is alive, for father Lacombe has told me that I must remain a widow all my days—I, who was married half-an-hour before the feet sailed, and did not even know what marriage meant."

"Do you see, my friend? Do you see, my dear?" She laid her hand on Mark's face and stroked it gently.

"Then we must not see each other again?"

"We must try not to meet again."

"Then I shall give up my lease," said Mark.

She caught her breath sharply.

"Ah, but Horace Broussac? He believes in nothing. He laughs at Father Lacombe. He wants me to marry him in Quebec, come back, defy them all. I am afraid of him. I have thought and thought, and I think that I shall go away. I have a cousin who is a sempstress in Quebec. She will take me in. I cannot bear it any longer."

"We must try not to meet again!"

She was weeping, weeping desolately in Mark's arms, and he bent and kissed her tear-stained cheek. They stood looking at each other hopelessly.

"Can't you speak to Father Lacombe and find out whether your husband is really alive?" asked Mark.

She shook her head. "He would not answer me," she said.

"Why not?"

"Because it would violate the secrets of the confessional."

"You mean that those three men have told him the truth? If that is the case, old Andre knows."

"Yes, Andre knows, but he has never told me a word. There was a time when I used to plead with him. Now I have learned enough to keep silent."

"I'll make him talk," said Mark grimly.

"No," answered Madeleine. "There is nothing more to be said. Everything that could possibly be said has been said in the past five years. You must go, Mark, and we must try not to meet again."

"I'll give up the lease," said Mark once more.

For a moment he held her close to him, and their lips met. Then Mark turned away toward the bridge. But not before he had seen Andre Galpeault standing at the lighthouse entrance, a bitter sneer upon his bearded face.

Had he been a witness of that good-bye? Mark didn't care, for he realized that he was through. St. Victor had got him down, with its secrecy, its furtiveness, its hugging of its own mysteries to its breast.

But what about Broussac? Mark didn't mind the ignominy of having to go to Broussac and accept his offer. But he had promised to protect Madeleine against the lawyer. Now it seemed that he must abandon even this small dream. Yes, St. Victor had got him down, with its pertinacity, its dogged resolution.

It was fast growing dark as Mark made his way down the slope toward his shack in the little clearing. The one-two flash of the lighthouse was growing clearer. There came the resonant bellow of the foghorn, and, looking back, Mark saw that one of the white mists was creeping up the St. Lawrence. Even as he watched, it blotted out the lighthouse and the rocks, crept upward until the bridge disappeared, began to envelop him with its clammy arms.

Mark hit the trail, groping through the mists toward his cabin. On the morrow he would tell Nat that he had decided to relinquish his lease, write to his backers. At least there would be a small but substantial profit coming to them. That night he would be glad of the solitude of the shack. That night he would fight out his battle alone.

He was almost at the shack when suddenly he saw the bearded face of Andre Galpeault rise out of a clump of bushes. At the same instant he was conscious of a violent blow upon the back of the head. He swung about, with flailing fists, to see two other men, unknown to him, standing over him, with clubs in their hands.

As Mark struck, Andre hit him from behind. The mist-wrapped scene began to swim before Mark's eyes, and he felt his knees begin to buckle. Fighting desperately, he was borne down, and once more a stunning blow dropped upon his temple.

He fell, and everything went out in darkness; consciousness itself became extinct.

Mark Gives Up, and Awaits the End

Mark could not have been out for long. He came to, to find himself lying upon the floor of his cabin, his head aching dully from the blows he had received. He tried to move, and found that he was unable to do more than flex his fingers. For a while he lay still in sheer exhaustion; until a sudden flare of flame showed him that the bush around the cabin was on fire.

He tried to move his limbs again, and now discovered that he was tightly roped, so that all motion was practically impossible. His arms were fastened to his body at the wrists and elbows, his legs bound in a similar way, and he himself was bound to one of the corner uprights of the hut.

The glare was growing brighter. Torrents of smoke came pouring into the cabin. Through the entrance Mark could see a long line of fire running toward the bridge, and sweeping in a wide curve about him.

With that he realized his predicament. One day more, and his announced determination to give up the lease would have meant security. Broussac, for some reason driven to this desperate course, had had him tied in the cabin, which would shortly be ablaze.

The ropes with which he was tied would, of course, shrivel into ashes. There would be nothing to show that Mark had not been overcome by the smoke while he was asleep.

He began to struggle desperately in his bonds, without the least result. Try as he might, he could not move a limb. At last he gave up the fight and lay, panting, waiting for the end.

All the woods about the bridge seemed aflame. Dense torrents of smoke came pouring into the cabin, and rose above the tree-tops. The crackling of the running sap grew louder and spires of fire shot up and vanished in the curling smoke-wreaths.

Mark tried again. He put forth every effort of the muscles of his strong body. Once the ropes seemed to slip, but they grew tight again. And it was growing intolerably hot inside the cabin. The surge of smoke was stifling. Mark gasped as he tried to draw his breath.

They'd think he had been overcome by the smoke while he was asleep, and burned to a crisp, and nobody would know that he had already decided to relinquish his lease of the seigniory.

"But what about Madeleine?"

"If the seigneur was really alive, what about Broussac? Mark felt trapped. He was not fighting Father Lacombe, he was fighting all St. Victor, and he had always felt that from the beginning.

Again he fought furiously against his bonds, and again unsuccessfully. The hut was filled with smoke now. Mark drew in great, gasping lungfuls of it, and felt consciousness going out in death.

Nat Page, down at the mill, watched the cloud of smoke slowly thicken through the white mist that had crept in from the Gulf. That mist had blotted out everything. It had made St. Victor a phantom village, obliterating the houses, and the masts of the fishing-schooners that lay off the wharf. The very voices that called to one another from doorway to doorway seemed strange, since their owners were no longer distinguishable.

Alphonse Vitard, the mayor, was closeted with Hector Mackintosh, the landlord, in a back room of the hotel. There were two glasses and a bottle of spirits upon the table between them, and at first sight you might have thought the two men were drunk. It was only after another glance that it became evident that they were not drunk—only shaking with mortal fear.

There was a fumbling at the door, and Andre Galpeault, of the lighthouse, staggered in. His face was blanched a deathly white above his gray beard. He dropped into a chair, poured himself out a glass of raw spirits, and drained it.

"Eh, well?" asked Alphonse Vitard.

"We have done what we agreed to do. Have we not wives and families? Are not our own lives at stake? Why should we die and our families starve, because an outsider comes into St. Victor to spy?"

"I have sometimes wondered," said Hector Mackintosh, "whether that Monsieur Darrell was really a spy. It may be that he was honest. He certainly was a lumberman."

"What have we to do with that?" shouted Andre. "Who gave us our orders? Monsieur Broussac. Who threatened us with the loss of our lives, or at least, swore that we should never see St. Victor again, unless we did what he told us? Who showed us that cabled dispatch from France?"

Three Men Are Filled With Fear and Horror

"They stared at one another with white, quivering faces.

"Where is the American?" demanded Alphonse Vitard.

"Dead! Dead! A crisp in what is left of the blazing hut," answered Andre. "I tied him and left him there. Ma foi, it was our lives against his, I tell you."

"Hush, don't speak so loud," whispered Hector Mackintosh, glancing apprehensively at the door. "What of Father Lacombe?"

"He shall never know."

"Then we—we are damned," whispered Mackintosh.

"There are other priests to whom to make confession," mumbled Alphonse Vitard. "When one's own life is at stake, and the well-being of one's little ones, one has to fight. Bien, are we sinners because we chose that one man should die in place of all of us?"

"But the seigneur did not die," whispered Hector Mackintosh. "I tell you the whole thing should never have been covered up. We were fools."

"And Horace Broussac was a knave, to keep the money that was raised from the seigneur's lands. I pity Horace when the seigneur gets his hands on him."

"Where is he?" asked Andre. "Listen!" Alphonse Vitard gasped him by the shoulder. "Did you see Horace Broussac's yacht steal into the harbor just before the fog shut down? Do you think he is going to stay and face the seigneur? I tell you he is going to get that girl to sail away with him."

"Dieu, no!" shouted old Andre, springing to his feet.

Hector Mackintosh put out a brawny hand and forced him down into his chair again. "Don't be a fool, Andre," he said. "You will ruin everything. Horace is too clever for you and me."

"Aye, but the seigneur, the seigneur! God pity Horace Broussac as the seigneur gets his hands on him!"

Hydro-Electric on Farms Fills Needs

Serves as Substitute Central Power Service

Despite the progress made by power suppliers in "electrifying rural America," the task is so vast that thousands of farms will not be reached by electric lines for several years. A number of these farms are located far from existing or contemplated distribution lines.

Farmers need not have to do without electricity and the convenience, time and labor-saving appliances and production equipment it operates—if they have available a stream which will provide a head of water in sufficient volume to operate a hydro-electric unit. In most cases, a small dam is required and a pond, thus formed for power purposes, also may be used for watering stock, fire protection or recreation. Such units are capable of producing direct or alternating electric current at low cost and make use of water which might otherwise be wasted.

1 K.W. unit on a ranch in Montana.

The electrical capacity of units, such as that illustrated, varies from 1/4 to 10 kilowatts. For example: A typical unit will generate one kilowatt, with an eight-foot head of water, having a flow of 100 cubic feet of water per minute. As the head of water increases, the volume required decreases for the operation of a generator of given capacity. Thus, with a head of 25 feet, a hydro-electric unit will generate one kilowatt with a volume flow of only 68 cubic feet of water per minute. An eight-foot head is all that is needed for those generating from one-half to five kilowatts.

Fungicides Tested By Vegetable Mice

Scales of Easter lily bulbs are very subject to attack by a fungus causing scale rot, which accounts for their adoption by Drs. W. D. McClellan and N. W. Stuart, U.S.D.A. agricultural research division, in determining the effectiveness of various fungicides at the Beltsville station.

One fact that makes these "vegetable mice" particularly useful in testing work is that all the scales from one bulb are genetically the same, and for that reason the vulnerability to attack of the rot is uniform.

Some other advantages of this new method are that the scales can be used at any time of the year if properly handled, the effect of the disease attack on the scales can be read with ease because they are smooth and almost white, the chemical to be tested can be applied as dust and in a suspension or solution, the equipment is simple and takes little space.

Chick Glands Bigger When Fed Thioracil

Studies at Purdue experiment station have shown that a new drug, thioracil, when fed to chickens at a level of 0.2 per cent, resulted in marked changes in the thyroid gland and increased the rate of fattening. When the drug was fed to breeding hens, the thyroids of newly-hatched chicks were greatly enlarged. The hatchability of the eggs showed no change and the chicks appeared to be of normal vigor.

Edison Took Out First Radio Patent in America

Thomas Alva Edison took out the first American patent on radio. He was granted a patent on December 23, 1871, on a "means for transmitting signals electrically between distant points by induction without the use of wires."

Edison also invented the carbon microphone and the aerial. Moreover, Edison discovered the radio detector tube—though when he found it, he didn't know what to do with it. For years it was called the "Edison Effect Tube" and was exhibited as a sort of electrical novelty.

DEMONSTRATION BY BLIND MAN'S DOG THRILLS BIG CROWD

Special Obedience Training Basis of Ken's Proficiency, Owner States

Of the many services the dog performs for man, nobler is that of acting as eyes for those who have had the misfortune to lose their sight, states the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City.

One of the most amazing demonstrations of the work of dogs that lead the blind was given in New York City during the recent National Dog Week by Nicholas B. Eckerlin, blind grocer of New Rochelle, N. Y., and his dog Ken. While an enormous audience in Rockefeller Plaza watched admiringly, Ken escorted his blind owner up and down flights of steps, warned him of obstacles, retrieved articles dropped by Mr. Eckerlin, and even protected his master against a make-believe hold-up man.

The people who witnessed this touching evidence of canine intelligence and devotion marveled at the training methods which produce such competent and dependable guides as Ken. Few of those present realized that the groundwork of Ken's schooling was simple basic obedience training similar to that practiced by thousands of dog-owners throughout the country.

All dogs that lead the blind, gun dogs, shepherd dogs, and dogs that serve with the military forces, have obedience training as the basis of their schooling, states the Center. It is possible for any dog-owner with a bit of patience and persistence to have an equally well-trained dog, one that will be a better pet and companion and a real source of pride.

For a free list of suggested reading on dog obedience training drop a note or postcard to the Gaines Dog Research Center, 250 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Persons with little or no dog experience are inclined to throw up their hands and exclaim, "Oh, but I wouldn't have the patience to train a dog!" Patience is necessary, but not the great degree of patience that most people imagine. Fifteen minutes a day of persistence and gentle schooling will show definite results in a comparatively short time. There is no magic formula involved. The great factor which works in favor of the trainer is the dog's anxiety to be petted and praised. This is the practically universal canine characteristic which professional dog folk speak of as "the will to please." Therefore, they praise and reward the dog when he does the right thing, and scold or punish when he does wrong. It is this "will to please" trait which makes the dog the easiest animal in the world to teach and makes it possible for anyone so minded to make of his dog a canine "lady or gentleman."

Sugar Stamp Yields June 1

Housewives and industrial users will be permitted to buy sugar in advance of the customary rationing date to enable supplies to move while railroad transportation is available, the Sugar Rationing Administration, USDA, announced. With Cuban receipts now at seasonal peak, and with boxcars now available which will shortly be needed to move an estimated billion-bushel wheat crop, the Department of Agriculture feels that speeding up sugar distribution now is imperative in order to relieve transportation burden later in season. This action does not increase rations, but merely advances dates when purchases may be made.

To enable more sugar to be moved now, three changes were announced in rationing program:

1. A second 10 pound stamp for consumers (No. 12) will be valid June 1 instead of July 1, but must still last until October 31.
2. Date of application for third quarter allotments to both percentage and provisional allowance industrial users will be advanced from June the 10 to

June 1.

3. The 30 day limitation will be removed for industrial users to enable them to purchase their entire allotment as soon as it is granted.

These steps will enable housewives and industrial users to obtain requirements for canning and other needs while supplies and shipping facilities are available. The Department wishes to make certain that all users have their supply of rationed sugar on hand to can this year's fruit crop as it ripens.

This applies with equal force home canner and industrial to canners. No stamps specially designated "home canning sugar stamps" will be issued this year but allowance of 35 pounds available for home use this year is designed to include sugar for canning.

Is That MILK Really Skimmed?

The tiny globules of butterfat and cream are literally liquid gold. The dairy industry in 1945 produced $3,632,146,000—or about 15% of the national farm income. Butterfat plays a big part in creating that wealth. That's why the milk you feed your hogs should be separated carefully. The butterfat is much too valuable to you to pour it into hog troughs along with the skim milk.

In more than three centuries, the American dairy industry has come a long way. But there's still a lot of hand-skimming—just the same way the Pilgrim Fathers skimmed their milk. That hand-skimming costs producers plenty, averaging 22% lost butterfat. Surveys show water-diluter separators lose an average of 18% of the butterfat, produce lower grading cream.

But mechanical separators, correctly adjusted and operated, will save all but a very small percentage of the butterfat. Moreover, tests have shown that producers who use mechanical separators market up to 71% of first-grade cream, while only about 40% of the hand- or water-separated cream marketed is first grade.

Thus, with even only three cows, a mechanical separator can pay for itself in as little as six months and begin earning a profit. The five minutes a day it takes to wash and sterilize a separator pays out well in dollars and cents.

Of course, there's a lot more to milk and cream quality than the method of separation used. It begins with healthy cows. Cleanliness every step of the way, quick cooling and frequent marketing—all count heavily. Nearly all state agricultural colleges offer detailed bulletins of improvement of the market value of milk and cream. They are profitable reading.

Improved quality in the cream that we process

Swift & Company cooperates with U. S. Department of Agriculture Dairy Industry long term program; works with state departments of agriculture, college extension services, boards of health, 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers, American Butter Institute and other organizations interested in improving the quality of milk and cream. In 1940 we staged hundreds of producers' meetings for this purpose. This effort is being expanded this year.

Sixty-three thousand individual people (shareholders) who have pooled their savings to create and operate this business. Early Cut Hay is Better Feed

As Reported by Mark A. Shipley
University of Nevada

Steers wintered on meadow hay cut early in the season gained 151 pounds per head while a similar lot of steers fed late-cut hay lost 2 pounds per head. This interesting information is revealed in a report of an experiment conducted by the University of Nevada.

The two lots of steers averaged 535 pounds at the start of the feeding experiment in November. They were weighed again at the end of 100 days with the above result.

The hay classed as early cut was put up on July 10, and that classed as late cut was harvested on September 10.

After the 100-day period, all the steers were shipped back to the summer range which they had been on the previous summer. They were marketed in September. By that time, the lot fed the early-cut hay weighed 90 pounds more than those fed late-cut hay, according to the Nevada report. At 15 cents a pound, the extra gain was worth $10.35 more per steer.

The Not-So-"Good Old Days"

In the "good old days" maybe your grandfather butchered three or four steers. The beef that he didn't need for his own use he could peddle without much trouble.

Today his grandson—perhaps it's you—may produce 30 or 300, or possibly 3,000 steers a year. It would be out of the question for you to butcher them yourself, and an utter impossibility to peddle from door to door all the beef you'd have. So you send your steers to market. There they are purchased by meat packers with facilities to handle thousands of head a day. There they are converted into meat. There's a minimum of waste. By-products are turned into useful products. And the meat is distributed to markets near and far, each weight and grade going wherever it will sell best.

Without the services of nationwide meat packers, such as Swift & Company, there would be no efficient, economical way to bridge the more than 1,000-mile average gap between producers and consumers. Without these services, livestock would have to be shipped long distances, cost of dressed meat would be higher, and consumers could not afford to buy as much meat, nor would they be as well fed.

Retire That Rooster

You'll get eggs that grade higher if you get rid of the roosters in your flock at the end of the breeding season. Infertile eggs keep better in hot weather. If non-producing hens are culled out at the same time, you'll save considerably on feed costs.

With more and more eggs being purchased on a graded basis, quality and cleanliness mean increased income to producers. The way to get uniform high-quality eggs is to keep your flock confined to the hen-house and yard, use dry litter, feed a balanced ration, gather eggs several times a day, keep them clean and cool, market them frequently.

Garden 'Greens' Can Be Continuous

Plenty of leafy vegetables, raw and cooked, are necessary in the diet of both children and grownups in order to promote vigor and well-being. In a home garden they can be continuous for many months if various kinds are grown. Leaf lettuce is one of the first green things to appear. The young leaves can be picked for the table when only a couple of inches in length while the smaller inner leaves are left to grow. The same is true of spinach; the tender new leaves are as good raw as cooked when chopped and served with oil and vinegar dressing. Or, treat them the same as "wilted lettuce" by pouring over them a mixture of hot bacon fat, vinegar, and bits of cooked bacon. To vary the flavor of these greens, add a small amount of peppercorn. The frilled curly foliage of this upland cross is as easy to grow as lettuce.

For long season greens Swiss chard is a winner. No leafy vegetable stands hot weather better. The outer leaves should be kept picked, the inner ones left to continue growing, and the result will be tender, brittle stalks and leaves for a long time.

Of the numerous root tops used as greens, beet, mustard, and turnip are increasingly popular. Like all vegetables they are best when young. Mustard and turnip particularly should be used for greens only in the early stages. The tops of mustard and turnip combined are appetizing—a favorite of grandmother's day.

By sowing seed of kale in spring or summer in the North and August to October in the South, fresh greens can be picked from the garden even after the coming of frost and light snow. In fact, some frost improves the texture and flavor of kale, making it a real treat for late autumn and winter meals. Dwarf Curled Kale is one of the best varieties for home gardens.

Essay On Editors

A little boy in town was given the atom by his father to write an essay on editors, and here is the result: "I don't know how newspapers come to be in the world. I don't think God does, for He hasn't got nothing to say about them in The Bible. I think the editor is one of the missing links you read of, and stayed in the bushes after the flood; and then he came out and wrote the things up and has been here ever since. I don't think he ever dies. I never saw a dead one and never heard of one getting locked.

Our paper is a mighty good one; but the editor goes without underclothes all winter and don't wear socks and paw ain't paid his subscription since the paper started. I sat paw if that was why the editor had to suck the juice out of snow balls in winter and go to bed when he had a shirt washed in summer. And then paw took me out in the woodshed and he lick me awful hard.

If the editor makes a mistake folks say he ought to be hung; if a doctor makes any mistakes, he buries them and people das sent say nothing because doctors can read and write latin. When the editor makes a mistake there is law suits, and swearing and a big fuss; but if a doctor makes a one there is a funeral, cut flowers perfect silence. A doctor can use a word a yard long without him or anybody knowing what it means; but if the editor uses one he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges for the visit; but if the editor goes he gets a charge of buckshot. When the doctor gets drunk its a case of being overcome by the heat and if he dies its from heart trouble; when the editor gets drunk its a case of too much booze and if he dies its the jim pants.

Any old collage can make a doctor; a editor has to be born. Editors note: The above was taken from a 1907 Capitan News.

About Bank Auto Loans
People ask, "Why is it to my advantage to finance my car with an Auto Loan?" Here is how car plan works; don't you agree it's the best way?
You pick your car, find out the trade-in allowance you get from your dealer and the amount of cash you will need for the balance. Then simply add the cost of having your present car insurance policy changed to cover your new car (or getting new insurance) and arrange a low cost loan with us for the total amount.
To see if you will save money (and we believe you will) compare the cost of other financing plans with similar transaction here. And remember that with a Bank Auto Loan it is a local transaction all the way through. Figure it out for yourself—then decide.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh
Broccoli in Dress Clothes
It was Bill Webster's idea—a local Cooperative Packaging Association. The farmers just bring their produce to a converted ice plant, put it on a belt, and it comes out neatly wrapped in cellophane.
Naturally, it looks a whole lot better and more appetizing in the stores. And the farmers share in the expense and management of the Association, which is paying off in better business.
Because how you show your product is as important as its quality. This is a popular beverage like beer.
It's not only important that it's pure and wholesome—but it should be sold in surroundings that are clean, attractive, law-abiding.
That's why the brewers have their Self-Regulation program. When a tavern isn't a credit to the community, the brewers go right to the owner and ask him to clean up his place. From where I sit, that's right in line with the modern trend of better service to consumers.

Naval Reserve Compete For Academy Appointment
Men of the Naval Air Reserve program will be chosen to attend the U. S. Naval Academy. Rear Admiral E. G. Ewen, Chief of Naval Air Reserve Training at his headquarters at Glenview, Naval Air Station, Illinois, has announced.
Each year, competitive examinations are given to 100 men of the regular Navy, and the same number to those serving in the reserve. Although appointments are given on a competitive basis requiring that candidates compete for the appointments, in recent years there have been appointments available for all who made a passing mark in the mental examinations. The element of competition for the appointments is based mainly on the subjects taken in competition for the appointments is based mainly on the subjects taken in the substantiating examinations.

Requirements for consideration of reserve personnel are that they must be enrolled in the reserve program prior to July 1, 1947, and must have attended a minimum of 27 drills during the period that date to April, 1948. Young men who are interested in an appointment to the Naval Academy through the Reserve are urged to enroll in the program immediately to secure adequate time in which to request consideration.

GI Insurance
Veterans who have allowed their GI term insurance to lapse have only until August 1 of this year to reinstate their policies without a physical examination. Edward Kinsall, Contact Representative for the Veterans Administration in Roswell announced this week.
Veterans are urged to reinstate their lapsed policies now, and need only pay two monthly premiums and sign a statement that they are in good health now as at the time of lapse, Mr. Kinsall said. Those who did not have GI insurance while in service can now apply for a policy, and can now choose any one of the seven plans.
On February 21 the President signed a bill extending the reinstatement date from February 1 to August 1, thereby enabling some 10 million veterans to reinstate their lapsed term policies.

Visit or write Mr. Kinsall at his office, Room 208, City Hall, Roswell. Mr. Kinsall also visits Carrizozo each 2nd and 4th Thursday of every month. When writing about their insurance, veterans should include their full name, latest complete address, insurance certificate number, if known, or service serial number, date of birth, and address at time of discharge from service.

Chevrolet Truck Contest
A nationwide search to find the oldest Chevrolet truck still in active service in the United States was announced by J. W. Burke, manager, commercial and truck department, Chevrolet Motor Division, General Motors Corporation. Owner of the oldest vehicle will be presented with a new truck from the "Advance Design" line of trucks which will be introduced by Chevrolet in the near future.

"We expect old truck entries from every section of the country," said Burke, "and may find the vehicle in farm service or doing a hauling job on a city street. Owners are urged to enter their oldest trucks as it may be the winning vehicle."
Rules of the contest provide that the truck must carry 1947 license plates, and be driven to a Chevrolet dealership for official registration. Age of the trucks will be determined by the serial number of the vehicle. The search will begin May 10 and conclude June 15.

SCENIC WONDERLAND... Typical of the rugged and awe-inspiring beauty of the four national parks in the Rockies is this scene in Rocky Mountain National park in Colorado.

THE MAJESTIC ROCKIES

Chain of Parks Incorporates Spectacular Mountain Scenery

WNU Features.

Towering peaks, deep, forest-clad canyons and lake-studded gorges combine to provide a spectacular and awe-inspiring wonderland in the Rocky mountains. Here, where the majesty of the mountains reaches its supreme heights, congress has established a chain of national parks, beginning with Yellowstone in 1872. These parks exemplify the many forms and faces of the Rockies, with each possessing a distinctive character of its own.

Three of the parks—Glacier, Yellowstone and Rocky Mountain—bestride the Continental Divide so that the waters from their snowfields, lakes and streams drain into both the Atlantic and the Pacific. The fourth, Grand Teton, embracing the highest portion of the Teton, drains into Snake river, a major tributary of the Columbia.

National Parks
Second
In a Series

GLACIER PARK, lying up against the Canadian border, and forming a part of Waterton-Glacier International Peace park, contains nearly a million acres of land and water. Although there are still some 50 glaciers, many of which the summer visitor can reach without great difficulty, it is the work of much greater glaciers of thousands of years ago which carved the many valleys of the park that are chiefly responsible for its name. In the valleys and basins so formed lie more than 200 lakes; these, reflecting the sheer peaks which rise from 3,000 to 5,000 feet above them, provide much of the spectacular beauty of the park that makes it one of the most photographed in the whole park system.

A highway crosses the park, by way of Logan pass on the Continental Divide, and short spur roads extend to several of the finest of the lakes. However, Glacier is primarily and most enjoyably a horse-back park. The National Park service calls it the foremost trail park as it contains about 1,000 miles of trails. The trails, rangers insist, provide the best means of really getting acquainted with the park. Glacier also stands next to Yellowstone in quantity and variety of big game, of which the mountain goat is probably the most famous species.

GRAND TETON, only a few miles south of Yellowstone, and flanked on the north and east by Jackson Hole National monument, is extraordinary both because of the jagged, rugged grandeur of its mountains and because of the fact that these rise abruptly from what geologists call the fault block trough of Jackson Hole. In other words, on their eastern side they have no foothills.

The tip of Grand Teton, with an elevation of 13,766 feet, is more than 7,000 feet above Jackson Hole and the lovely series of lakes—Jenny, String, Leigh, Jackson and others—that nestle against the base of the range. These mountains, too, owe much of their sculpture to glaciers, of which a few remain in the higher basins.

Packed within the 150-square mile area of alpine park are 22 peaks of more than 10,000-foot elevation as well as numerous lakes, glaciers, snowfields and extensive forests.

No highway crosses the range except at Teton Pass, where the Teton range joins the Snake river range. Only foot and bridle trails penetrate the backcountry. Much of the area, particularly the upper Teton country, is virgin mountain forest.

Wildlife Refuge in Everglades Planned

Development of a new national park in Florida's tropical Everglades region is being expedited by the National Park service and the State of Florida. The Everglades, known as the last stand of the American crocodile, the roseate spoonbill and other valuable wildlife species, will be preserved in its primitive state as a wildlife refuge. Thousands of islands, within the region, covered with dense vegetation ranging from giant cypress trees to royal palms. Indians still hunt for fox, bear, panther, deer and raccoon in this area. Crocodiles, alligators and numerous varieties of fish inhabit the waters. All this wildlife, however, is dominated by birds—gannets, curlews, ducks, herons, the "long white" egret, the sand crane and the bald eagle.

MOUNTAIN PINNACLE... Jagged peaks and spectacular glaciers lure vacationers to Glacier National park in Montana. This imposing peak is Going-to-the-Sun mountain as seen from St. Mary lake.

Keep in Season
By Adapting Menus
To Cool Foods

Eggs and tomatoes make a pretty salad platter for evening suppers that must meet the hot weather problem. Both may be prepared in the cool hours of the morning.

No homemaker has to wait for the family's appetite to lag before she starts changing the menus to suit their needs. In fact, the process is less painful if she realizes that with the first of the warm weather, the family is apt to feel languid and lazy, and not much inclined to eat.

Change immediately and you won't have a lot of leftovers.

One of the smartest things any woman can do is to be generous with salads in the menu. No, I don't mean the usual variety, but something entirely different from what you've been having the past few months. Use new, fresh greens, try exciting and refreshing fruit and vegetable combinations and see how quickly the family takes to them.

If necessary, make salads the main dish of the meals whenever possible, but when doing so, have them hearty enough to furnish the required number of calories to carry on daily activities. This is easy to do with cold meats, cheese and eggs.

A nice salad to serve because it's so refreshing is this one which has a generous amount of cottage cheese to furnish valuable proteins for tissue and body building. The citrus fruit makes it doubly refreshing on sweltering days:

Fruit Salad Bowl.

- (Serves 6)
- 1/2 can cranberry sauce, jellied
- 1 pint cottage cheese
- 1 small green pepper
- 1 grated carrot
- 1 teaspoon salt

- 1/2 teaspoon celery seed
- 2 grapefruit, sectioned
- 3 oranges, sectioned
- 1 head of lettuce
- Mayonnaise

Cut slices of cranberry sauce into cubes. Combine cottage cheese, green pepper slices, grated carrot, salt and celery seed. Fold in cubes of jellied cranberry sauce, saving a few cubes for garnish.

Arrange lettuce leaves in salad bowl. Pile cottage cheese mixture into center of bowl and surround with alternate pieces of grapefruit and orange. Serve with mayonnaise.

A salad that is a riot of red, white and yellow colors nestling in the green of lettuce leaves combines tomatoes with eggs. It can be served as the main dish at luncheon or Sunday night supper.

Stuffed Tomato-Egg Salad.

- (Serves 4)
- 4 firm, well-shaped tomatoes
- Salad greens
- 4 hard-cooked eggs
- 1/4 cup diced celery
- 2 tablespoons salad dressing
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon or more lemon juice
- Salt and pepper
- Fried dried beef or crisp, diced bacon

Remove skins and core from well-chilled tomatoes. Cut in 5 or six sections and press open gently to make a flower. Sprinkle inside with salt and pepper. Place on salad greens. Meanwhile chop eggs, not too fine. Add celery, salad dressing, Worcestershire sauce and lemon juice. Season well to taste. Spoon into center of tomato. Top with additional dressing, then with dried beef.

Variation: Instead of egg filling, stuff egg, cut in half crosswise and place in tomato flower. Garnish with dried beef and salad dressing.

LYNN SAYS: Vary Your Salads

With Dressings
Either fruit or vegetable salad tastes better if cottage cheese is beaten until light and fluffy and then folded into mayonnaise or French dressing.
Sour cream makes mayonnaise and cooked dressing fluffy as well as giving it pep. Add lemon juice or vinegar if more spiciness is desired.

If you are short of refrigerator space and still like molded salads, use a cornstarch for thickening, and you will have just exactly the salad you want.

Tomato Salad.

- (Serves 6)
- 4 tablespoons cream corn starch
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 2 cups tomato juice

Combine cream cornstarch, salt and vinegar. Gradually add tomato juice. Heat to boiling point and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly.

Pour into individual molds which have been rinsed in cold water. Serve on lettuce and top with dressing made by folding in cold, freshly cooked peas into cold mayonnaise or salad dressing.

Variations: Add sliced stuffed olives, grated onion, diced turkey or chicken, drained peas or shrimp, as desired. Cocktail juice may replace tomato juice.

There's nothing fancy about this next salad recipe, as the name implies, but it's truly delicious. Serve it with cold, thinly sliced ham, cake and beverage and you have a good, nourishing hot weather menu:

Farmer's Chop Suey.

- (Serves 6)
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 cup diced cucumbers
- 1 cup sliced radishes
- 4 fresh tomatoes, cut in wedges
- 1 cup chopped green pepper
- 1 cup shredded cabbage
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Prepare vegetables as directed above and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Prepare dressing as follows:

- Sour Cream Dressing.
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 cup thick sour cream
- 1 cup cottage cheese

Add vinegar and seasonings to sour cream which has been mixed with the cottage cheese. Pour over greens and vegetables and stir or toss with fork. Sprinkle with paprika.

Variation: If you want to serve a dairy supper, use the Farmer's Chop Suey as the main dish and serve with deviled eggs. The eggs may be prepared with deviled ham, if desired.

Calavo-Grapefruit Salad.

- (Serves 4)
- 2 large calavos
- 1 grapefruit
- Small head lettuce

A favorite springtime salad for any occasion is a calavo half shell filled with tart citrus fruit. Cut the calavo into halves lengthwise and remove seed. Scoop out some of the flesh but leave enough to hold the shell intact. Cut the portion removed into dice and combine with diced grapefruit. Arrange the calavo shells on crisp lettuce and fill with the calavo-grapefruit mixture. Sprinkle with finely chopped fresh mint. Serve with a lemon-honey dressing.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

For a different type of dressing that is crisp as well as delicious, mix 1/4 cup of finely diced cucumber, 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper, 1 teaspoon vinegar and 1/4 teaspoon salt with 1/2 cup mayonnaise. Crisp pieces of bacon added to French or oil dressings add appetite appeal to simple potato or vegetable salads.
Mayonnaise may be blended with sour cream or cream cheese and flavored with fruit juice for fruits and berries.
