Capitan News Items

February 4th marked a regular biennial school board election for members of the Capitan Municipal School, District 28 with only a fair number of people casting votes which totaled about 120. Re-elected to the Board after serving a six-year term, was Joe Wigley. Newly elected to the Board are Mr. Dee Hickman, Jack Robinson and Leo Powell. The Board recently received bids to buy the bonds voted last Spring, from the State Treasurer's office at an interest rate of only 1 1/4 per cent and construction is planned immediately when materials and labor becomes available.

The annual meeting of the Capitan Chamber of Commerce will convene Wednesday evening 7:30 p. m. February 12 to elect officers for the ensuing year. The affair will be a dinner meeting at the High School with a chicken dinner served by the ladies of the community Church. Wives of members are cordially invited to attend this meeting which is to be a "ladies night"; members may attend singly if they so desire. Highlighting the meeting will be an address by Mr. L. P. Bloodworth of Ruidoso a most enthusiastic advocate of the beautification of the great White Mountain Area. The meeting will also mark the first anniversary of the Capitan Chamber of Commerce which has singularly been successful in obtaining many of its primary objectives during the first year. Chief among these is assured construction during 1947 of certain highway sections for southeastern Lincoln County. Highway committee reports and other matters will be presented along with several highly entertaining program numbers. All members are urged to attend to select officers to carry on the splendid work begun by the chamber this year.

The entire community was shocked Friday night by the untimely death of Dr. J. C. Archer, commanding officer of the United States Merchant Marine Hospital, Fort Stanton, New Mexico where he had been stationed for almost two years.

Plans were made to erect 100 of the latest type, "reflectorized" street markers to designate street and avenues in Capitan at a recent meeting of Capitan Chamber of Commerce directors. The markers will be constructed of material that will appear to actually shine at night when picked up by the lights of approaching cars.

Tom Utterback of the Upper Hondo Soil Conservation Office presented the Capitan High School with a showing of two splendid motion pictures on conservation practices entitled "Food and Soil" and "It Can Happen Here" to an enthusiastic student body Wednesday Feb. 5. Brief remarks by Mr. Utterback were also addressed to the students on the significance of conservation practices.

Woman's Club Notice

Carrizozo Woman's Club will meet on Friday Feb. 21st instead of February 14th as listed in the booklet.

Mrs. Ben S. Burns,
Press Reporter.

Mrs. Johnnie Burton and four children of Scotts Bluff, Nebraska arrived Wednesday for a week's visit with Mayor and Mrs. Frank English and family.

Special Meeting For Veterans

R. J. Mulkey, State Commander of the American Legion will be at the Legion Hall on Thursday February 13th. It would be well if all members of the Legion and any other Ex G. I. could attend this meeting as well as the other organizations. The State Commander does not make a visit here very often, and he should be given a good crowd when he can make this territory a visit. Each Legion member should invite a number of buddies that are not members to attend this meeting. There may be a number of questions that you would like to ask the Commander when he is here, and this will be a good time to find out the answers.

Veteran News

A VA ruling issued in Washington holds that President Truman's recent proclamation ending hostilities has no effect on most of the laws administered by the Veterans Administration. VA held that date of the official termination of the war, rather than the cessation of hostilities, is the determining factor in establishing the deadline for the educational and training benefits, rehabilitation of disabled, loan guarantee provisions and readjustment allowances payments. This date of the war's official termination will be set later by Congress.

However, the president's proclamation will have the following effect on other benefits:

In non-service-connected death and disability cases, rights dependent on war veteran status alone will be accorded only to those who served between Dec. 7, 1941, and the date of the president's proclamation, Dec. 31, 1946.

Cadets at the military and coast guard academies and midshipmen at the naval academy no longer have an active duty status and their service after Dec. 31, 1946, may not be credited for veterans' benefits.

War-time rates of compensation will continue to apply to service-connected disability and death cases for members of the armed forces until the official termination of the war. After that date they will be handled on a peacetime rate basis.

As of December 25, New Mexico veterans had made 2,064 G. I. loans since the inception of the program for a total of $8,757,583. Of this total number of loans 1,571 were home loans, 109 were farm loans and 396 were business loans. Records show that 50 New Mexico veterans have repaid their loans in full to the amount of $181,435. More than one-half of the loans repaid to date have been business loans.

Records compiled show that 5,310 New Mexico veterans are enrolled in colleges, universities or other schools. Of this total, 4,819 are enrolled under the G. I. Bill while 491 are disabled veterans enrolled under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

The "on-the-job" training program in New Mexico now has 2,594 veterans actively engaged preparing themselves for a future in business or the trade. Disabled veterans engaged in this program number 390 while the 3,204 are taking their training under the G. I. Bill.

Mr. C. H. Cass of Mountain Park spent last Saturday here visiting friends.

Carrizozo Girl Scouts Organize

Girl Scouting started off with a "Bang" in Carrizozo. Under the sponsorship of the American Legion Auxiliary and through the endeavors of the parents of girls who are of Scout age, and with the help of Mrs. Helen Grimes, regional Field Scout Executive, a troop of 24 Girl Scouts and 9 Brownie Scouts is now officially active.

Led by leaders, Mrs. Mabel Shultz, Mrs. Mabel Vigil, Mrs. Bessie Hodgins and Mrs. Joe G. West, Jr., the 24 Girl Scouts are: Peggy June Gray, Beverly Key, Marion Lincoln, Dorothy Moore, Betty Moore, Alma Baker, Elaine Shultz, Carolyn Dabney, Joy Jump, Barbara Smith, Mary Ann Nalda, Ann Gallacher, Verna R. Petty, Emily Johnson, Marlene Longly, Ruth Battersby, Wade Garrison, Adeline Medina, Susie Romero, Barbara Mixon, Susie Vega, Nellie Chavez, Nora Chavez, Helen Stalcup.

Troop leaders for the Brownie Scouts are Mrs. Edna Gallacher, Mrs. Bob Shaffer and Miss Mary Vidaurri. The Brownies are: Mary Jump, Glenda Sue King, Margaret Duncan, Dorothy Withers, Jo Evelyn Yandell, Carol Romero, Manuelita Aguilier, Charlene Morgan, Geneva Lucero.

Field Executive, Miss Grimes, visited the Carrizozo Troop for three days, during which time she held meetings and lectures for leaders, set up an Official Scout Board, and held a parent session.

The Scout Board is as follows: Mrs. Vernon Petty, Pres., Mrs. Mary Johnson, Secy., Registrar, Mrs. Janie Key, Treasurer, Mrs. Eva Karin, Organization and Program, Mrs. Joe Morgan, Training and Publicity.

Present at the Parent session were Mesdames Patterson, Kelley Mixon, Battersby, Johnson, Shultz, Romero, West, Jr., Morgan, Chavez, Jump, Gallacher, Shaffer, Petty, Moore, Key, Karin, Miss Mary Vidaurri. These women will help the troop acting as councilors.

A wide and varied program is being offered this year, emphasis being placed on a construction program through the summer. The Girl Scouts may look forward to hikes, trips and outdoor camping.

The Girl Scout Association passes this information on to all interested persons. Any girl of Scout or Brownie age is urged to join these new Troops. Girl Scouting is not only instructive its fun!

The Girl Scouts also wish at this time to thank the Business Men of Carrizozo and any others who donated to their successful fund drive.

Mrs. Joe Morgan,
Publicity Chairman.

Serving With U. S. Navy

William Henry Steaga, chief electricians mate, son of Mr. W. E. Wright of Ruidoso, N. M., is serving aboard the flagship USS Ponco.

Steaga entered Naval service May 14, 1937, and received his recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Diego, Calif.

Tom B. Zumwalt has returned from the University of New Mexico at Albuquerque, for an indefinite visit with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Zumwalt.

Internal Revenue Collectors to be Here

The Internal Revenue Service will have two deputy collectors in Carrizozo at the Courthouse on February 19, to assist taxpayers in filing their 1946 income tax returns. All persons who have had gross income of $500 or more are required to file returns. Persons who have worked for wages and have had tax withheld should file regardless of the amount of income. The original withholding receipts from employers should be secured before the return is filed.

Nations Largest Birthday Celebration

The Boy Scouts of America, now numbering 1,980,000, will observe the 37th anniversary of the organization during Boy Scout Week, opening Friday, Feb. 7 and closing Thursday, Feb. 13.

It is the nations largest birthday celebration among young citizens and will be observed in every city, town, village and hamlet.

The theme of the observance is "Scouts of the World Building for Tomorrow."

A special effort is being made during February to obtain Scout Uniforms and accessories no longer needed by former Scouts here in America. During the first year of this effort more than 400 cases or twenty tons of scout uniforms and equipment were contributed to Scouts in 19 lands.

The observance of Boy Scout Week throughout the nation does not follow a fixed pattern. Boy Scouts, their younger brothers, the Cub Scouts, and the young men in Senior Scouting determine their own methods of playing hosts to their parents and friends, and will demonstrate some of the many useful skills they acquire through Scouting.

Methodist Church

F. J. Johnston, Pastor

Because the Baptist and Methodist women's societies of these two churches held their regular fifth Wednesday union meeting and enjoyed such a fine fellowship I am led to write on a special phase of our common faith. That is the universality of our church music and hymn singing. This is evidenced in the hymn books of most any church we consider.

John G. Whitter, a Quaker, wrote "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind." E. S. Ufford, a Baptist, wrote "Throw Out The Life Line". John Kebbie of the church of England wrote, "Sun of My Soul Thou Saviour Dear" John Henry Newman, a Roman Catholic, wrote "Lead Kindly Light" Daniel Marsh, a Presbyterian, wrote "Hark the Voice of Jesus Calling." Frank Mason North, a Methodist, wrote "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life." Martin Luther, a Lutheran, wrote "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." Washington Gladden, a Congregationalist wrote "O Master Let Me Walk With Thee".

Sunday after Sunday in our public worship and our Sunday Schools both the music and the singing of such hymns as these and others coming from a great range of authors represents the finest unity of spirit of all the churches. This preachers prayer: "O For A Thousand Tongues (In Carrizozo) To Sing My Great Redeemer's Praise." And let us not drag it, please. Thank you again. Come to Church next Sunday. Topic: "Live Wires".

I. O. O. F., Rebekah Lodge Notes

Tomorrow night at 7:30 p. m. at the Oddfellow hall there is to be a social for the Oddfellows, Rebekahs and families.

Carrizozo, I. O. O. F. lodge has received an invitation from the Roswell lodge to do some degree work Thursday Feb. 13. Mr. John E. Wright will be in charge.

The following Rebekahs visited the Alamogordo Lodge last Tuesday evening: Bessie Hodgins, Georgie Karkey, Rachel West, Mamie Griesen, Ruby Elkins, Bette Elkins, Mrs. R. C. Withers, Annie Withers, Julia Sherrill, Mary Lou Welch, Earlena Tubbs, Edna Carl, Lucille Patterson, Jean Norris Hobbs, Nina Norris, Alma Lane, Margaret Lane, Jewel Aguayo, Jessie Pearl Longly, Willa Mae West and Lorena Evans.

Spotlight

BY GRANTLAND RICE

THE question has come up concerning the comparative value, merit and skill required in playing shortstop or second base. We put the problem up to Frankie Frisch, one of the greatest second basemen and one of the best all-around ball players in the annals of the game, also one of the smartest.

"Why is it," we asked the slightly graying Flash from Ebbets Field, the Giants and the Cardinals on the playing side, "that there are so many star second basemen and so few outstanding shortstops?"

"Just how do you figure that out?" Frisch asked. "Look over the list," we suggested. "At second we have Nap Lajoie, Eddie Collins, Rogers Hornsby, Frank Frisch, Charlie Gehringer, Johnny Evers—to mention only a few. There are still arguments as to which one of these is the greatest. But when you come to shortstops you reach out for a fellow named Honus Wagner—and you stop. Travis Jackson, Marty Marion, Beauty Bancroft, a few more—but not outstanding. Only Wagner."

"There are two answers to that," Frisch replied. "In the first place, Wagner was Wagner. A great shortstop—the greatest. He led his league seven years at bat. He could steal 50 or 60 bases a year. He could do everything. You may remember that John McGraw, before his death, ranked Wagner as the greatest ball player of all time. Over Cobb and Ruth. So does Ed Barrow. These two are not palookas. But I'll have to admit that outside of Wagner, while there have been fine shortstops, the game hasn't shown many great ones."

More Speed, Skill Needed

"One reason for this is that shortstop is a tougher job than second base is. You have to cover more ground. You need more speed and a better arm. You may have to throw from short left, on the grass, to first base—a longer throw than the third baseman has to make. But just why it is that no shortstop, outside of Wagner, could hit to match Lajoie, Collins, Gehringer, Hornsby and others, I couldn't tell you. There haven't been many hard-hitting shortstops who could hand you .340 or .350. Maybe they were too busy trying to cover all that ground."

"What about third base?" I asked Frisch. "Not as tough as short, not as tough as second. Less ground to cover."

Frisch couldn't go back quite far enough to cover all the great third basemen: Art Devlin of the Giants, Jimmy Collins of Boston, Bill Bradley of Cleveland and Buck Weaver of the White Sox—four of the great-

"What's the matter with Pie Traynor?" he asked. "Pie belongs with any third baseman." This is true. But there have been more good third basemen, for all-around value, than great shortstops. The same applies to first base. You can get arguments today over Jim Chase, George Sisler, Lou Gehrig, Frank Chance, Bill Terry and one or two others.

Must Be Heavy Hitter

"A first baseman has to hit," Frisch said. "Maybe Chase was the greatest fielding first baseman. But he couldn't hit with Sisler, Gehrig or Terry. A first baseman should be a power on attack. Of course, it helps when he also can field his job. Stuffy McInnis wasn't bad. He could cover that bag and still hit over .300. Stuffy was a great first baseman. And Glen Wright was a great shortstop," Frisch added.

Having Frisch finally loosened up, we put on the pressure. "If you had to win one big game, a game you had to win, who would you pick to pitch it? Carl Hubbell or Dizzy Dean?"

Frisch lost no time in answering this one. "What difference would it make? Both would pitch shut-outs if the blue chips were down. I mean at their peak. Just give me a shut-out and I'll promise that I won't lose, even if I have to take a lie. You know one of the great things about Hubbell? He never gave you a pitch that you had hit before. If you got the same hit off Dean, Dix would come back with the same pitch and probably strike you out. Of course, Hubbell had a longer and therefore a greater career. He was one of the greats of all time. But in 1934 and 1935, before he hurt his arm, there never was a greater pitcher than Dizzy Dean. Just give me either one."

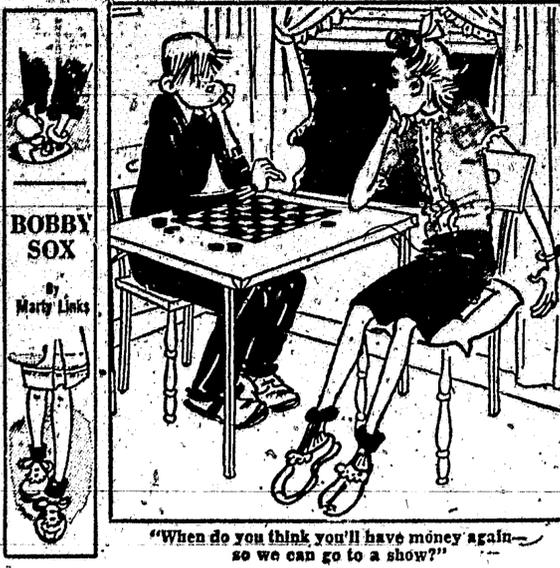

A Better Racing Year

For the first time in a good many years, I think it would be safe to say that this year there will be bigger and better racing, and in saying that not to be thinking of mutual play and the breaking of financial records. It seems probable to me that the handle will be down again this year, that the wild spending days are over for some time to come. I am thinking of better horses and jockeys, sounder track management, and a more sporting attitude.

Woman's World Careful Dress Fitting Required To Minimize All Figure Faults

By Etta Haley

Next time you are shopping or riding in a public conveyance, look about you. Yes, do it critically, too. One thing I can guarantee you is that very few people will look perfect as far as their figures are concerned.

Now look again and try to find the most attractive woman around you and look at her critically. At first glance she may look perfect, which is as it should be, but on careful inspection you may notice that one shoulder is a little higher than the other or that her proportions aren't quite as perfect as they first appeared. However, you say, she does look nice.

Well, that's the way we all should like to measure up when inspected either by others or ourselves. And it can be done, as you have seen for yourself, if we dress so as to point up our good points and minimize those about which we are not so proud.

Fortunately there are many tricks that can be applied to clothing and many disguises to be employed which will do just that for us. We play up our eyes and features if they are good, then carefully add more padding to one shoulder, lift or lower the waistline, nip it in or make it one inch more loose, and hide our figure faults very successfully.

Whether you do your own fitting or have someone do it for you is not the question. It is simply a matter of doing it. When we first buy or make a dress, we may be so taken with the pattern or color of the fabric is to look to the underarm seam. If the garment is too loose and hangs in a baggy fashion, pin wider seams in the dress, and baste and stitch them. But wait, just a moment, you're not quite finished yet. Seams should be equal on both sides, or the garment will feel off balance and eventually acquire that look.

If you have taken the garment in a great deal, it's best to trim the seams down. Do your pinning and fitting on the right side of the garment first, then transfer the pins and turn to the wrong side after you are certain the garment is fitted properly.

On the other hand, your dress may fit too tightly to feel really comfortable. Then let out as much material as possible from the seams to relieve the strain.

If you are adding a piece of material, it must taper off down to the waist so the garment will hang properly. If you do not need much at the waist, taper the piece of material off to nothing, but do taper it.

Contrasting colored material often is used to give extra room at the sides of the garment, and will be effective if you have to extend it below the waist to allow more room at the hips. Be sure bands of contrasting material are well balanced in size.

The hipline is pinned in much the same fashion as above the waist if it is too loose. Do not make the dress too tight, and here again see that both sides are even.

In making a garment more roomy at the hips, let out all seams to give yourself as much material as possible. If this does not give you enough room, have a trimming band running on either side.

In some dresses, it is possible to remake the skirt so as to give you more room. This can be done when the skirt is pleated, and you can cut down the number of pleats and make a simple straight skirt out of it.

There are many things you can learn to do with a sewing machine if you will take the time to find out how it's done.

The beginner must, first of all, learn how to sew straight, and this is best done by watching the stitching and seeing that the same distance is kept from the edge to the stitching, rather than looking to the other side of the garment. Chalked lines also may be used as a guide.

Gathering, ruffling and even pleating may be done with a sewing machine attachment. Even buttonholes, the bane of many a woman's existence, are made easy with an attachment.

Shirring and quilting also can be made by hand or machine to add more decorative features to your home sewing. This takes only a little time to do, but is very effective.

You'll find that contrasting colored threads for many of the decorative stitches made either by hand or machine will help immeasurably in making your garments more attractive. Select these when you pick out your fabrics.

Bird clips are very popular for wearing on plain dresses or suits, but choose them with care and consideration.

Twisted threads of gold; another feature in new jewelry, are destined to be another feature of importance. They will be found on all sorts of jewelry to lend an air of distinction.

Brown patent leather shoes highlight the beige, wool street or afternoon dress while low heeled sling strap pumps are nice with tailored suits.

For shorter evening wear you will want to be as careful of your shoes as of your gown. And for street clothes, shoes are of the utmost importance.

This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Wonderful

No Cooking. So Easy. Saves Dollars. To get the most surprising relief from coughs due to colds, you can easily prepare a medicine, right in your own kitchen. It's very easy—a child could do it—needs no cooking, and tastes so good that children take it willingly. But you'll say it's hard to beat for quick results.

First, mix a syrup by stirring 3 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup. Get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex Tissue any drugstore, and pour it into a pint bottle. Fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of really splendid cough syrup—about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and lasts a long time.

And it gives quick relief. It acts in three ways—loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membrane, and helps clear the air passages. Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for quick action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Food Prices Drop

Reports in various newspapers indicate reductions in the prices of food stuffs. According to the Farmington Times Hustler, fruit juices are now 40 per cent under former prices, lard is being offered for 35 cents a pound, butter at 79 cents a pound, and eggs are down to 45 cents a dozen. Government reports that 1947 will see a growing supply of fresh beef and pork, with declining prices to be expected. Similar reports come from other cities.

Federal Tax Cuts

President Truman's proclamation terminating hostilities made automatic reductions of the Nation's 1947 tax bill by approximately 700 million dollars. Excise levies, including those on liquor, jewelry, furs, luggage, and many consumer items, will be cut back effective July first. The tax on liquor will drop from nine to six dollars a proof gallon. The reductions were made mandatory in the 1948 War Time Revenue Act, which the Congress stipulated the high war-imposed excise should be trimmed to specific levels six months after the termination of hostilities. These special excise levies now are yielding 1.4 Billion dollars annually. The saving in the last half of 1947 will, therefore, be about 700 million dollars.

Veteran Bills in Congress

According to newspaper reports 18 of 157 bills received by the House are veteran benefit bills. They cover 18 programs that might total 20 or 30 billion dollars in new outlays. Representative Pate of Georgia has introduced a bonus bill providing for four dollars a day for service at home and five dollars a day for service overseas. Representative Landis has in mind a bonus bill for one dollar for duty at home and $1.50 for overseas service, the cost of which would amount to four billion dollars, as compared with 12 to 15 billion that would be required under the bill introduced by Rep. Edith Nourse Rodgers of Massachusetts.

Gross Public Debt

The gross public debt, direct and guaranteed, on October 31, 1946 was $263,917,666,708. The per capita gross public debt, exclusive of guaranteed obligations, on October 31, 1946 was $1863 or $4744 per employed worker.

Murder in Plain Sight

by GERALD BROWN

Duke McCale, private detective, is guarding the wedding presents at the Bigelow mansion. While he is talking with wealthy Miss Adelaide Bigelow, they hear a shot. A moment later, Curt Vallancourt, the bridegroom-to-be, dies in the front hallway. McCale slips away before the police arrive, and hurries to Vallancourt's apartment to search it for clues. There he meets Shari Lynn, a singer, and former wife of Vallancourt. She apparently knows of the shooter, and betrays herself under McCale's clever questioning. He notes that she wears a green dress, as did the woman he saw running away from the scene. Shari admits that she was nearby when Vallancourt was shot.

CHAPTER IX

"He was a long way ahead of me. There was another dame coming up over the Hill road that meets the path he was on at the gate by the Bigelow house."

"You're sure of that, Miss Lynn? Remember, you may be making a dangerous accusation."

Rage flared up in her. She jumped up.

"Dangerous accusation," she screamed. "I should say it was. She killed him—that little blue-blood. Killed him. I tell you I saw her. He's dead. Dead!"

He crossed to her quickly, shaking her by the shoulders.

"Take it easy. You're in a spot yourself. Whoever it was that met Vallancourt at that gate had on a green suit or dress."

Angrily she brushed his hands from her arms, faced him.

"I know that. She had on a green suit. I saw it. But I was a long way off, I tell you. You're not getting me for this just because I'm wearing this green thing. I wouldn't have killed Curt. God, I loved him. I loved him."

Her body sagged away from him. Her voice was low and harsh, was a cry of despair, as though her throat were all burned out.

McCale left Shari Lynn slumped on the couch. He knew it was useless to talk to her anymore. She wouldn't be of any help.

He went quickly through an ornate bedroom which had a fabulous connecting bath of chromium and glass. There were two closets of expensive linen and haberdashery. He had never seen so many shirts, ties, shoes, socks, and collars outside a department store. And he went through everything.

But there wasn't a single thing to give him a lead, to use as evidence—not a letter, a receipt, a bill—not even a stray address. The murdered man had played it pretty smart and close to the ground. Disgruntled, he went back into the living room and out the front door.

It was nine-fifteen when the buzzer in McCale's outer office announced a late caller. McCale laughed. "How are you, Bart?"

Donlevy Trades Some Knowledge

"Ready to take you over the hurdles for sneaking out on me this afternoon," Donlevy's smile belied his growl.

McCale smiled back at him steadily. He liked the man. He had the look of careful grooming not often associated with the police. You would place him at about forty; a large man, bulking powerful and tall against the heavy door. He was of the new school of officers so widely heralded but often ridiculed—college bred, scientifically trained and carefully chosen.

"I'm not really sore," he began. "I only wondered why you took a powder when you and Adelaide Bigelow were practically the only eye witnesses to this ghastly business. It dawned on me very soon when I found no keys on the corpse that you'd gone to Vallancourt's apartment to steal a march on me. Was that nice?" He raised an eyebrow facetiously.

"Not nice, but necessary from my point of view. I've got second look before—after your squad has fine-toothed a place—and there's never been a hairpin left for us fellows."

"What exactly did you find from being first this time?"

"Nary a clue. The place was as clean as a bone. Beyond getting a good idea of what the lad who lived there was like, there wasn't a false whisker for my trouble."

"The setup he had was quite revealing, wasn't it? Pure Hollywood—half De Mille, half Dorothy Draper. Very suggestive. Is that all you have found?"

"I found a woman."

McCale never felt it accomplished anything to hold out on Donlevy. It only promoted misunderstanding and ill feeling. It was much better to get the evidence first. That was all.

He watched the quick interest flash across Donlevy's eyes before he controlled it, before he said casually, "I would call that a clue, Duke."

"Well?" he questioned.

levy in a manner that insured the detective of every detail.

"You think then?" the lieutenant queried when at last McCale was silent. "That there was an old affair between them? Something in your telling it makes me feel you are convinced that it was not too recent—something flaring up again, after a long time."

McCale nodded. He closed his eyes a moment, then opened one, as if the other still shimmered an inner thought. "I'm sure of it," he said. "I'm sure you'll find that they may even have been man and wife at one time—that they have never been out of touch with each other for long."

Donlevy digested this. "Then?"

"Oh sure, Lynn was back there after any letters of hers that Vallancourt may have kept. I don't think there were any there, however. There wasn't even a stray phone number chalked on the bathroom wall, if you get what I mean."

"Quite. It was exactly as if the place had been cleaned of everything by the boy himself. Kind of disappointing, what? Because from everything we know, it doesn't seem as though that kind of gent would ever destroy a compromising missive of any kind whatever."

"You were a fool to come directly here."

"True. There is the possibility of a safe deposit box at some bank."

"That's been checked. He had a small balance at a downtown bank, but no box of any kind."

McCale hunched himself over his glass for a minute, musing.

"It becomes very confusing, then. For he must have got rid of everything last night or today. Before"—he stared unblinkingly at the rim of his glass—"just before he went to his death."

A long minute went by, while the fire crackled merrily in the grate—while each one of the three thought his own thoughts about this confecture. It was Donlevy who finally shrugged it away with a sour look.

Duke McCale paused in front of the big man, Donlevy. The gray-haired police inspector looked up at him and said, "I suppose in return for your information you want to be brought up to date."

"That's only fair," McCale smiled.

Donlevy had never once let him down in a matter of this kind, though he covered it always with an air of assumed ill grace.

Suspicion Settles On Veronica

"Here it is, then, for what it's worth," he said. "There was, in the Bigelow house at the time of the murder, besides Adelaide Bigelow and yourself, the cook, an upstairs maid, and the butler, King. The cook was preparing dinner. The maid, Kitty Shane, was hanging around the kitchen. They're out, obviously. No motive, no opportunity. King was fixing a tray of hors d'oeuvres for the usual cocktail hour. He's out for the same reason. None of them saw or heard a thing until the prolonged ringing of the bell."

"About five minutes after the ringing bell, I arrived. It was then about twenty minutes since Vallancourt had been shot. Shortly after that, the family began to wander in and I questioned them in the order of their appearance. Sybil and Stephen, her son, came in together. She said she had walked from the church across the Gardens, stopping at Snackley's drugstore for cigarettes. She had chatted a few minutes with the clerk, whom she knew. She met Stephen as she came out of the store. He had been wandering along Charles street, just killing time, he said. Likes to walk in the rain—that sort of thing."

"There's a jangled lad for you," McCale wagged a finger. "Neurotic. Worried about his wife. Was probably out hunting her up, wherever she was."

"Sybil is no calmer, strong pioneer woman either. Collapsed like a balloon at the news. You'd think Val-lancourt was her own child to hear her rave."

"To get on with it, the Garboish Karen is quite another ticket. As masklike and cold as the Snow Queen. Concerned, but unruffled, if you know what I mean. She turned a shade whiter, if that's possible, but I got the distinct impression she'd only walk around the corpse and go on her way. A bit too controlled."

"Victoria was next. She blew in with a book under her arm. Had been browsing around the Public Library—walked home."

McCale pursed his lips. "I imagine she screamed once, made an inappropriate remark and had a long hooker of whisky on it."

"You are very adroit."

"You are very adroit."

"I've an unusual mind, I guess," said McCale facetiously. "What crack did she make?"

"She looked down at the corpse in a kind of mixture of fright and sheer excitement and said, 'Then someone did have the nerve!'"

McCale whistled.

Donlevy turned a page. "Christopher Storm—the guy that didn't get the girl—or almost didn't, what? He probably will now. He swears that he was walking back and forth along the lower Common path, hoping to intercept Veronica on her way home if she should come that way. She didn't show, so he came on up to the house. There's a funny thing, Duke, them all breaking up in onesies after the wedding rehearsal. Oh, well. We come now to Veronica, the bride."

"Veronica drove up in a cab—the last to arrive. She was strangely excited, I thought. She'd been doing some last minute shopping, saw it was getting late and got a cab at the corner of Boylston and Tremont."

"He hesitated. . . she said." He let his last two words hang in the air.

A devastating conversational abyss yawned, for McCale made no reply. Minutes ticked away. When he did speak, it was quietly.

"She is the obvious suspect, of course, Bart. The accusation of Shari Lynn; the fact that both Miss Bigelow and I saw a girl in green running away from the scene directly after the murder. Too bad she should have picked the corner of Boylston and Tremont street to get her cab. There are very few shops there and, as you have noted, the path running from the gate opposite the Bigelow house, over the hill by the cannon, ends at that precise point."

"Hardly coincidence."

McCale shrugged. "What about the weapon?"

"She must have thrown it away."

"Then the area in which to search for it is small. A woman cannot throw too far."

"I know that." A thwarted look came over Donlevy's craggy face.

"We've had a special squad hunting it for three hours. So far, not a sign of it. We've actually used floodlights and turned up every fallen leaf, emptied every ash barrel in the park, with no luck."

Where Is the Murder Gun?

"That, then, for the moment, is that."

Funny, but McCale's mind seemed relieved.

The case was dropped momentarily while they talked of pleasant things. It was nearly twelve when Donlevy stood up to go.

"I rather thought," he said at the door, "that you were retained by the old lady Bigelow to get at the truth. Now, I'm sure you're hired to protect the girl." He tried to put it over with a slow smile.

"Nothing of the sort has been suggested to me, Keen assure you." McCale returned his smile sardonically. "That's the truth."

"Okay. I have my duty to do, you know."

"I'll find the weapon first."

"Oh, sure, sure. We'll find it."

The echo of Bart's Donlevy's footsteps had hardly died on the stairs when McCale, standing before the dying fire, spoke.

"I held out on the torn bit of letter."

"So I see, chief. You don't think the girl in green was the Veronica dame, then?"

"Maybe."

There was a silence for a minute, then Rocky said, "They have not found the rod."

"No." McCale's eyes lighted up as he looked quizzically at his friend and employee. He smiled as though he knew what Rocky was thinking.

"Didn't you say the gal who ran away stopped a minute to look back when she got to the cannon on the hill?"

"Yes."

"Well, chief," he jumped up, "you've been waiting to see if I'd think of it. Of course I have. After all, I've heard you tell it three times. That gun ought to be in the belly of that cannon."

MOUNTING PRICES ARE RESULT OF CUMULATIVE WAGE BOOSTS DOLLARS ARE WORTH only what they will buy. Ever-cheaper dollars do not make for a higher standard of living. Labor and management are playing at cross purposes, and the American people are paying the penalty.

Enforcement of ceiling prices was practical only so long as ceilings covered cost of production, which means wages, as well as covering prices of what was produced. It was not a question as to how the wages were secured, whether as an increase per hour, or by shortening the hours and increasing the high-priced overtime.

Wages are a major part of production cost. When they are pushed upward without a proportionate increase in volume of production, prices of commodities must go up, or industry stops. Capital and management refuse to operate at a loss. Capital will continue to meet the wage and hour demands of labor so long as those ever-increasing demands may be offset by higher prices for commodities. That means inflation spelled in capital letters. That is what we have today.

We are facing an ever-increasing amount of such inflation, for which we, the American people, are paying, and which will break us as a nation, and as individuals.

BUYERS' STRIKE ONLY WAY There is one way by which we, the American people, could stop that deadly process. We could quit buying. We faced much the same situation following the close of World War I. In 1921 the people went on a buyers' strike. High-priced merchandise could not be sold. People would not buy. When sales stopped, industry stopped producing. Workers lost their high-priced jobs. A short-lived depression followed.

That was bitter medicine, but it effected a cure. It brought us back to a somewhere near normal condition. With less wages, paid in dollars that would buy more, industry could produce at a price the people could pay, and the standard of living was not affected. The wild and senseless race between wages and prices had been stopped.

For the farmer, who had speculated in high-priced land on the basis of the soaring prices of farm products, it meant disaster. The lower prices would not pay off the mortgage on the high-priced acres he had purchased. During World War II the farmer did not speculate in land as he did in World War I. A buyers' strike will affect him by reducing his take from his farm products, but he does not have the mortgage to worry about. In the end he will profit, as will all America, from lower prices on the things he buys. In the meantime the farm will provide the necessities of living.

Rather than have the race of wages and prices continue to a point of runaway inflation, we had better choose, as the lesser of two evils, a temporary depression. We can produce that by a buyers' strike.

CONSUMER PAYS AND PAYS MORE THAN A YEAR AGO I ordered a new automobile. It has not been delivered, and I do not know when it will be. If it were delivered today the price I would pay is just $300 more than the price at the date of my order. That difference is increased wages. It not only is the increase in wages to the men on the assembly lines in automobile plants, but also includes thousands who have only an indirect part in the building of that car. Among these are the men who mine the iron ore, those who transport it, by rail and boat, to the mills and those who transform the ore into the iron ingots and steel plate. Then those who mine and transport the coal and limestone needed in the manufacture of steel indirectly help to raise the price of automobiles. Out of that $300 is paid an increased wage to those who transport the steel and other materials to the car building plants, to those who transport the completed cars from the plant to the agency with which I placed my order, and to the employees of that agency. All of these, and more, take a bite or nibble out of the $300 that I, the consumer, must pay. Little or none of it remains with the concerns that directly or indirectly produced the car. What is true of automobiles is also true of other things. Wages go up and prices go up. It is you and I and the other fellow, the consumer, who pay the wages.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Lem's Dogs vs
Thad's Chickens

Running a newspaper, you get to know a lot about human nature.

That I Philgo was in the office they all turned up. Wanted me to run on item on how Lem Martin's dog had eaten his chickens again, and ought to be put away by law.

I told him "Lem was in on Saturday, and you shouldn't be allowed to keep those chickens so close to his home—and in a residential zone, at that."

Thad came up right pronto then. And that very evening I saw him making his peace with Lem at Andy Botkin's Garden Tavern—over a friendly glass of beer.

From where I sit, anyone can find something in his neighbor to complain about. (Some folks may even disagree with Thad's right to enjoy that glass of beer with Lem!) But where would we be if everybody tried to have a law passed against everything they disagreed with? We wouldn't have many neighbors left!

On the Grassed Side of the Fence

A Bank is only as prosperous as its customers; its customers only as prosperous as the manner in which they utilize their resources. To our Ranchmen Customers, we are on the grassed side of the fence, on the productive side. Over here there is a heavy, vigorous growth of grass made possible by proper grazing management. In the good seasons, we graze more livestock than during poor seasons; we adjust our stocking according to the amount of grass available. We always leave sufficient grass on the ground to carry our stock over at least one season of drought, thus assuring us this cheap feed and protecting the density, vigor and vitality of the grass. In this way we are enabled to market our grass as pounds of meat and wool at a neat profit every year.

We trust that we are not on opposite sides of the fence. Your bank is staying on the Productive side.
