DEVOTIONAL READING: Ephesians 4:1-6, 11-13

Christian Fellowship
Lesson for February 25, 1948

GEORGE WASHINGTON was a splendid example of Christian fellowship. If you will travel through the older portion of the United States, particularly in Virginia, you will come upon numerous instances of church pews marked as follows, "George Washington worshipped in this pew on blank date." Evidently, it was his custom to attend public worship in whatever community he spent the Lord's day.

Dr. Newton
Thus he entered into Christian fellowship, gaining a blessing and rendering a blessing.

The lesson passage for Sunday is found in Acts 2:37-47 and Ephesians 4:1-6, with several other passages which will be quoted before we finish the column for this week.

A HAPPY TIME IN CHURCH
READ Acts 2:41-47, and you will find a picture of a group of very happy people. Think of it, three thousand people professing faith in Jesus and receiving baptism in one day! But read on—they were not only happy at church, but they were happy because they were in the church. They continued steadfastly in the apostles' teachings and fellowship and breaking of bread and prayer.

They praised God and had favor with all the people. By their daily living they were convincing the world that fellowship in Christ is not only good on Sunday while we are at the meeting house, but good every day. The happy homes are the homes where Christian fellowship abounds, and it is equally true in every area of life.

AT CHURCH WITH FRIENDS
"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go unto the house of the Lord," Psalm 122:1.

That is poetry, you will agree, but it is also actual testimony not only of the Psalmist, but of countless—juniors—boys—and—girls throughout our land who eagerly await the sound of the church bells. Boys and girls delight to go to Sunday school and worship when the life of the church is pervaded with Christian fellowship. There they meet the finest boys and girls in the community.

BELONGING TO THE CHURCH
THE passage in Acts 2:37-47 tells us how certain people, after hearing the great sermon by Peter, asked how they might be saved. He told them:

"Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."

When we invite intermediate friends to attend Sunday school and worship services with us, and they come to know of the love of God, they, too, will want to be saved. It is then the high privilege of Christian boys and girls to lead their friends to accept Jesus Christ as Saviour, and come into the church.

In Ephesians 4:4-6, we read these words: "There is one body and one Spirit, just as you were called to the one hope that belongs to your call, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all, who is above all and through all and in all."

ALL ONE IN CHRIST
THE above passage from Ephesians teaches clearly that there is a brotherhood of man, real and abiding, when we accept the Fatherhood of God, through Jesus Christ. This is the meaning of the church. No amount of man-made creeds can save us. No amount of ritual and ceremony can save us. We are saved by grace through faith, and that is the gift of God. When we repent of our sins and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, we are saved, and not until then.

The one adequate retreat for the crying needs of this frightened world is the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. Just as thousands were saved on Pentecost and again on the Lord's Day when Peter preached in Solomon's porch, so today many may be saved where the Gospel is proclaimed in its simplicity and power.

We are one in Christ, of every race and every tongue. The fellowship of Christian faith transcends every barrier—racial, economic, geographic, political, religious. We have but to proclaim the universality of this good news—proclaim it in our words and proclaim it in our daily lives. The world waits victoriously for the encompassing fellowship that is in Christ and in Christ alone.

Farmers With Wings Require Landing Strips for Safety

Improved Fields Needed as Ranks Of Pilots Increase

By WALTER A. SHEAD, Washington Correspondent. With the nation's farmers literally taking to the air, not only for the thrill of flying their own airplanes, but also for commercial purposes, Civil Aeronautics administration is becoming concerned about the safety of these flying farmers, particularly in the matter of take-off and landing.

Available statistics indicate there are possibly 10,000 farmers who own and fly their own planes—planes all the way from small one-man light ships to heavier classifications such as the Douglas DC-3.

So, according to CAA, what the flying farmer and the potential farmer with wings needs is a landing field on his own farm. This is not a particularly difficult obstacle in the wide-open spaces and the grass pastures of the West, but in the Midwest and in the East and South proper air strips or landing fields pose some difficulties, particularly in the matter of location, surface of the field and hazards surrounding the field, such as wires, trees and homes of neighbors.

Cooperative Principle. First, as a matter of convenience and economy, CAA suggests that two or more farmers with adjoining farms extend the principle of the cooperative to the construction of landing strips—that is, wherever it is possible considering the lay of the land, two, three or four farmers with adjoining land select a site which would trespass upon the lands of all. This would mean that each farmer would give up less land and that the expense of construction and maintenance would be less upon the individual.

The flying farmer does not need an airport in the usual sense of the word. All he needs is a landing strip of sufficient length with a surface sufficiently smooth and solid to bear the weight of light planes.

So, in most cases, his greatest problem is one of drainage since sod land or pasture land with short grass crops such as alfalfa or other low growing grasses will provide sufficient solidity. Maintenance of this kind of a surface becomes a problem only if traffic is heavy and if many heavy planes consistently use the field.

Limited Space. Space for safe operation of the personal plane can be kept to a minimum in several ways. Simplest method, as pointed out, is to use pasture land, which might involve some danger to stock, but accomplishes the purpose of putting the land to dual use and gives the plane the best sod-covered field on the farm for landing.

Several safety factors should be taken into consideration in selecting the site. For instance, if the farmer is a considerate man his take-off path will not be directly over his neighbor's house. If he is a careful man, his approach and take-off paths will not be over such hazards as trees, hills or wires which will add danger to his flying.

Obstacles in the approach path usually cause the most trouble, particularly for beginner flyers, and what looks like an excellent location for a landing strip immediately may be condemned by an experienced flier. Another important factor is the prevailing wind. If a single strip is used it should be laid out as nearly as possible in that direction, and if two strips are prepared by flying farmer neighbors in cooperation they should be laid out so as to

Related Problems. Grading and drainage must be considered jointly for one affects the other. Grading should provide a surface sufficiently smooth for aircraft use and should direct the flow of surface water so that it is removed in the quickest possible time. If there is an excess of underground water from within the airport area, artificial drainage may be necessary.

Another thing which the CAA experts point out as a safety factor is grades of landing strips. A flying farmer may become adept after long experience in flying from a rolling or sloping field, but gaining this experience may be costly. In general, it is desirable that grades be so designed as to permit an unobstructed view from a point five feet above any location on the usable landing area.

While turf is the cheapest type of surface where wear-resistant grasses can be grown, it may be that use of the field is heavy enough to require a heavier base. Types of bases range from naturally well-graded granular soils to prepared sand-clay, clay-gravel, crushed rock, shell and macadam. Mowing is one of the important factors in maintaining a good turf surface and proper frequency in cutting height varies with the different types of grasses used and in different locations. Of course, the best source of this information, if the farmer is in doubt, is the local county agricultural agent. Also the advice of sod experts is available from CAA.

Types of Grasses. In this connection, CAA points out that in northern sections of the country a good turf grass is red fescue. In the Far West, the Fairway strain of crested wheat grass will flourish and the flying farmer should specialize in the low-growing variety. Throughout the South, Bermuda grass is desirable as far west as middle Texas. In the Southwest, Buffalo grass and mesquite will make good landing strips.

One thing which should be watched is erosion. It is not hard to up-end a plane if it strikes an erosion gully in a landing strip. A groundhog or gopher hole can cause expensive damage to aircraft and possible bodily injury to passengers.

Flying farmers use their planes more than the ordinary personal flyer. For instance, the executive secretary of Flying Farmers association says that in a survey in 24 States, the average flying farmer flew 247.2 hours in a year. The average private owner uses his plane for less than half that many hours a year.

Not Always Valiant Fighters, Some Leathernecks Are Ladies

Contrary to the general picture of the marine as a tough and intrepid fighter, the leatherneck also can be a lady. In fact, there were 23,000 lady leathernecks during World War II and of this number more than 2,000 still are active in the role of women volunteer reservists. It is recalled as the U. S. Marine Corps Women's Reserve of World War II, an important part of a famous fighting organization, observes the fifth anniversary of its founding on February 13, 1943.

In keeping with marine tradition, these women reservists are continuing to serve the corps and their country. Most of them have formed their own volunteer training units in major cities throughout the country. Already numbering 13, these units represent the more active members of the World War II women's reserve.

Modeled After Marines. History of the lady leathernecks, however, actually dates back to World War I, when the marine corps created its first women's reserve in 1918. Members of the unit, known as "marinettes," served in the capacity of messengers. Garbed in a uniform described as "even newer than the new look," the marinettes were restricted in numbers to 300 and in rank to sergeant and below. Known only as marines and desiring no nickname, the 23,000 women marines of the past war served in more than 200 different types of jobs at more than 80 marine bases and stations throughout the United States and Hawaii.

Wide Range of Duties. In replacing a male marine to fight, the lady leathernecks performed duties ranging from the gamut from quartermaster to shoemaker, from aviation helpers to plumbers and truck drivers.

Treated the same as their male counterparts, the women reservists underwent regular boot camp training, received the same pay and were allowed to advance in rank to as high as colonel.

On the fifth anniversary, although congressional action still is awaited on a bill to create active women reserve training units, the 13 volunteer training units have been formed during the past 10 months. Present duties of members are to assist in office detail connected with the men's citizen marine organization.

HOW TO OUTWIT WEEK-END BURGLARS

When you go visiting for a week end... there are steps to take before leaving. Often your departure will be after dark and you will need a flashlight to "check and double check." Better be sure your flashlight is powered with "Eveready" batteries... powerful, dependable, they outlast all other brands! NEVER LEAVE "TIP-OFFS." Cancel newspaper and milk deliveries. Just two days' accumulation is a hot "tip-off" to poovies. LOOK ALL WINDOWS AND DOORS. Take your "Eveready" flashlight to inspect basement windows (a favorite entrance for poovies), garage doors, the yard. If you're careful before you leave, you can be care-free while you're away.

EVEREADY BATTERIES OUTLAST ALL OTHER BRANDS!

Brighter light, longer life! That's what you want in a flashlight battery—and that's what you get with "Eveready" brand batteries. Laboratory tests prove it. And the best "laboratory" of all—your own flashlight—proves it! That's why "Eveready" batteries outlast all other brands—because they outlast all other brands!

The national trade-mark "Eveready" is the trademark of NATIONAL CARBON COMPANY, INC. 30 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y. Div. of Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation

THE 'NEW LOOK' THEN... Marinettes, the "glamorous gals" of 1918, wore the forerunners of the World War II marine women reserves. Three of them are shown here being instructed by the late Lillian Russell, famous singer and stage actress, who was an honorary sergeant of the corps.

Reverend A. Benedict.
George A. Tinsworth went to El Paso last week, ostensibly on business, but prolonged absence gave Dame Rumor something to talk about; and early this week it was whispered around town that he would not return alone. Whether the accusation was true or false, or who the party of the second part was, if an overt act had been committed, was not known for certain until the arrival of the Socorro Chieftain, and then our prominent merchant's double dealing was heralded to the world. The Chieftain contains the following notice of the affair:

"Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hilton in this city, Geo. A. Tinsworth, of Capitan and Mrs. Gussie I. Lane of Sparrows Point, Maryland, were united in marriage, Rev. M. Mattieson officiating. The bride has been a guest of Mrs. Hilton for about three months, and was quite well and very favorably known in the city. The groom is a prosperous merchant of Capitan, a member of the firm of Welch & Tinsworth. Mr. and Mrs. Tinsworth left on Wednesday night's train to spend some time in southern California before returning to their home in Capitan.

There was no show.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

We're for Dogs and People Both!
Like most home-loving communities, our town is mighty fond of dogs. So when Bing Parker's dog happened to bite the postman, it set off quite a debate.
Some folks allowed as how "there ought to be a law" requiring dogs to wear a muzzle. But cooler heads figured that a whole townful of well-behaved dogs shouldn't be penalized for the fault of one. So now Bing's dog sports the only nose piece.
From where I sit, there's a parallel in taverns selling beer. Most folks in our town like a moderate glass of beer from time to time... and want to enjoy it in a clean and law-abiding place. That's why they're all behind the Brewer's Program of "Self Regulation".
Under "Self Regulation" the growers keep a careful check on taverns, see that they live up to the letter of the law, and recommend action against any tavern that gets out of line. Works, too!

George A. Tinsworth went to El Paso last week, ostensibly on business but prolonged absence gave Dame Rumor something to talk about; and early this week it was whispered around town that he would not return alone. Whether the accusation was true or false, or who the party of the second part was, if an overt act had been committed, was not known for certain until the arrival of the Socorro Chieftain, and then our prominent merchant's double dealing was heralded to the world. The Chieftain contains the following notice of the affair:

"Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hilton in this city, Geo. A. Tinsworth, of Capitan and Mrs. Gussie I. Lane of Sparrows Point, Maryland, were united in marriage, Rev. M. Mattieson officiating. The bride has been a guest of Mrs. Hilton for about three months, and was quite well and very favorably known in the city. The groom is a prosperous merchant of Capitan, a member of the firm of Welch & Tinsworth. Mr. and Mrs. Tinsworth left on Wednesday night's train to spend some time in southern California before returning to their home in Capitan.

There was no show.

George A. Whether the accusation was true or false, or who the party of the second part was, if an overt act had been committed, was not known for certain until the arrival of the Socorro Chieftain, and then our prominent merchant's double dealing was heralded to the world. The Chieftain contains the following notice of the affair:

"Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hilton in this city, Geo. A. Titsworth, of Capitan and Mrs. Gussie I. Lane of Sparrows Point, Maryland, were united in marriage, Rev. M. Mattieson officiating. The bride was born a guest of Mrs. Hilton for about three months, and was quite well and very favorably known in the city. The groom is a prosperous merchant of Capitan, a member of the firm of Welch & Titsworth. Mr. and Mrs. Titsworth left on Wednesday night's train to spend some time in southern California before returning to their home in Capitan.

There was no show.

Like most home-loving communities, our town is mighty fond of dogs. So when Bing Parker's dog happened to bite the postman, it set off quite a debate.
Some folks allowed as how "there ought to be a law" requiring dogs to wear a muzzle. But cooler heads figured that a whole townful of well-behaved dogs shouldn't be penalized for the fault of one. So now Bing's dog sports the only nose piece.
From where I sit, there's a parallel in taverns selling beer. Most folks in our town like a moderate glass of beer from time to time... and want to enjoy it in a clean and law-abiding place. That's why they're all behind the Brewers' Program of "Self Regulation".
Under "Self Regulation" the brewers keep a careful check on taverns, see that they live up to the letter of the law, and recommend action against any tavern that gets out of line. Works, too!

Twice-Told White House Tale Retold

John Adams Hung Clothes On Limb, Swam in Potomac

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—At a recent press and radio conference, one of the reporters ribbed the President about the balcony he was building on the White House, which the Washington fine arts commission objects to as destroying the architectural beauty of the building.

Someone suggested he might conduct a "back porch" political campaign from it. Mr. Truman came right back with the remark that it was a front porch. That, in a sense, is correct, for the southern facade of the White House originally was intended as the front of the building.

Of late, the President has been given to historical anecdotes—he's was fond of slipping down to its banks for a swim as natural in the early morning hours.

There was, in those days, said Mr. Truman, a certain female journalist who had been unable to get an interview with the President. So she slipped down to the canal bank at dawn, waited until he was immersed, then sat on his clothes and stayed there until he answered her questions, decently draped in the waters.

I repeated the story on the air as Mr. Truman told it, and in the next day's mail received a letter from Mr. Daniel J. Kelly Jr., of South Bend, Ind., who is a collector of early historical newspapers.

Wrote Mr. Kelly: "I enjoyed your reference in a recent broadcast to the newspaper woman who sat on President Adams' clothes until he agreed to give her an interview.

"The President Adams was John Quincy Adams, and the woman newspaper reporter was Anne Royall. However, the story does not conform to the facts, and you might mention this to President Truman the next time the story is brought up.

"John Quincy Adams was an ardent and accomplished swimmer and he enjoyed a daily plunge into the Potomac even while President. He was also an ardent diarist, and his diary contains many a mention of his dips in the river.

"Anne Royall was Adams' Washington contemporary—a vicious writer and a malevolent journalist. In 1823 she was convicted of being a 'common scold.' Her first contact with Adams was in 1824 when she called at the White House to demand a pension as a Revolutionary war widow. Adams mentioned her in a very uncomplimentary manner in his diary.

"According to Adams' diary . . . She continues to make herself noxious to many persons; tolerated by some and feared by others, by her deportment and her books; treating all with a familiarity which often passes for impudence, insulting those who treat her with incivility, and then lampooning them in her books. Stripped of all her sex's delicacy, but unable to forfeit its privilege of gentle treatment to others, she goes about like a virago in enchanted armour, and redeems herself from the notoriety of her eccentricities and the forced currency they give her publications . . ."

"Although Adams chronicled all unusual incidents while swimming, and had referred to Mrs. Royall in his diary, he makes no mention of the supposed meeting of this woman while swimming.

"While Adams lived in the White House, Mrs. Royall was a resident of Washington, but travelled about most of the time. She was known as an author at that time, but not as a newspaper woman. Her journalistic career began two years after Adams retired as President. In 1831 she established a newspaper aptly named 'Paul Pry,' and later she founded another small newspaper, the 'Huntress.' It does not seem possible that Anne Royall could have interviewed President Adams, at least in her capacity as a journalist.

"Adams was mentioned in 'Paul Pry' just once, on July 23, 1832. There are references to him in the August 1, 1844; August 29, 1842; December 16, 1844; February 6, 1847, and the March 4, 1848, issues of the 'Huntress.' Mrs. Royall also mentioned Adams in her 'Sketches,' p. 164, and in her 'Black Book,' p. 124. But nowhere did the woman who was supposed to have been involved in the Potomac shore incident ever refer to any interview with John Quincy Adams.

"The supposed incident still makes a good story, and especially, I suppose, when newspaper men are interviewing the President, and when news is somewhat dull. However, I cannot believe that any of the known facts can justify the truth of this old story."

But, I insist, it's a good story and, for one, will not disillusion any President as to its authenticity.

The Tithe That Binds

Coming away from a debate on taxes I couldn't help feeling that the discussion, scholarly as it had appeared at points, and ringing with altruism at others, had offered a political potion, only slightly flavored with any essence of economics. How willing is congress to depart from the past, if such a departure affects political futures?

Pondering this, I came upon a dispatch in the London Daily Herald from Romney Marsh, Kent. It recounted how, in the lamp-lit sitting room of a six-century-old farm, a 72-year-old farmer, Archibald Edwin Waddell, complained to a reporter that he was about to be thrown into bankruptcy because he refused to pay 75 pounds and 3 shillings—some $300—in "tithes."

"I shall probably die mauling," Waddell said, "against this wicked, anti-social system."

For previous refusals to pay tithes, there had been four seizures from his farm: bullocks, sheep, pigs, farm implements, furniture, his clothing and his cart-horse.

"My father," the old man concluded, "who farmed for 70 years on Kent, paid 1,400 pounds in tithes, and two of my brothers were forced to emigrate. I am fighting against a cope that has lightened around my neck, and around the necks of so many others who love the soil."

Few people realize that tithing, payment of one-tenth of the product of the land, a custom which comes down from feudal days when it was collected by the parish priests, and later the Church of England, is no modern, and that its effects will be felt until the year 1966.

Originally the tithe was paid in produce, but in 1836 it became a fixed rent still paid to the church. In 1836, the law was changed to make the tithe payable into what was called "Queen Anne's Bounty," a fund used for general church purposes.

In 1836 tithing itself was abolished but the law provided that over a period of 60 years a sum should be paid yearly until the amount considered the tithe redemption fund to be the capital of the tithe on a given piece of property, had been reached.

That is what Farmer Waddell objects to. But he'll pay or get out, and he will never live to see the day when he doesn't have to support the church against his will.

Romania chose to change its royal purple to pure red when it bounced King Michael. But how nice, nobody can tell him he can't have "the woman I love."

A dentist now reports that he has successfully transplanted wisdom teeth in cavities left by missing molars. But did he transplant the wisdom?

JOURNEY TO THE MOON

Get Your Rockets Tuned Up

Science has advanced to the point where, when you talk about taking a trip to the moon, people no longer look sorrowfully upon you as one who has been affected by the faded light from that lunar orb.

An actual journey to the moon may become a reality sooner than one would have expected five years ago. Right now, in several parts of the world, there are small groups of earnest experts who are quite serious about the prospects of travel between the planets.

One of these organizations is the British Interplanetary Society, a group of about 400 members nearly one-third of whom are rocket and space-related scientists. Another third is made up of mechanical and electrical engineers, radio and radar technicians.

NEWS REVIEW

South Threatens Split; Self Rationing Proposed

President Truman, who seems to run to 10-point programs, tossed another one to congress—concerning the preservation and protection of civil rights—and then stood aside to await the explosion.

It came quickly. Southern Democrats, hopping mad over at least four of the 10 controversial points, began to talk seriously of calling a Dixie convention to split away from Mr. Truman on the civil rights issue.

Focus of the current disunity was a bill, up for approval by the senate labor committee, to create a national commission against job discrimination on grounds of race, creed or color.

Sen. Allen J. Ellender (Dem., La.) predicted that if the bill were approved in its present form the party would erupt into open warfare. Both foes and backers of the measure agreed that it would be a close thing.

The four proposals that most inflamed the southerners were the ones calling for (1) a federal anti-lynching law, (2) a permanent fair employment practice commission, (3) an end to Jim Crow rules in transportation and (4) outlawing of state poll taxes.

Remainder of the points advocated by the President were: A permanent commission on civil rights, a joint congressional committee on civil rights, a civil rights division in the justice department; tightening of civil rights statutes; home rule for the District of Columbia; statehood for Alaska and Hawaii; equalization of naturalization opportunities, and settlement of evacuation claims of Japanese-Americans.

Because 1948 is an election year, and a presidential election year at that, the program, which otherwise might be ignored, was certain to get hot partisan debate.

In answer to Mr. Truman's firm statement that "something must be done" about the civil rights issue, southern Democrats replied that they were thinking of calling an all-southern convention to pick its own presidential candidate.

Some thought that too drastic a step, but at Jackson, Miss., Walter Sillers, speaker of the Mississippi house of representatives, said he flatly favored such a course in order to withhold at least part of the South's electoral votes from Mr. Truman.

SELF RATIONING: Second Best

Manifestly stymied in its efforts to get congress to pass rationing and price control legislation, the administration tried a new approach in the form of an appeal for nationwide self-rationing.

Greater public support of an intensified drive for voluntary food conservation would have to be developed if living costs are to be curbed, the administration decided.

As an initial step representatives of 18 consumer, producer and distributor groups met with Clinton Anderson, secretary of agriculture, to map details of the nationwide program.

Charles F. Brannan, assistant secretary of agriculture, heads the new food saving setup. Originally started by the citizens' food committee last fall, it has been carried on until now under the direct leadership of the cabinet food committee.

Major emphasis, it was understood, would be placed on meat as the pivotal item in the cost of living merry-go-round; however, other foods also would be covered in the voluntary program. Based on specific recommendations of the food industry and public representatives, it is theoretically designed to meet the twin problem of scarce food supplies and high prices.

Biggest talking point the administration had in its attempts to solicit public support was the department of agriculture's somber prediction that the nation is heading for a serious meat shortage in the spring. And by way of emphasis Brannan added that meat rationing "by price" already is in effect because many people cannot afford to buy.

FOR SALE: Some Eggs

U. S. government has hung out a "for sale" sign on 40.8 million dozen eggs that it bought last spring to support domestic prices.

There is one stipulation, however. Only foreign users will be allowed to buy them.

For the comfort of U. S. housewives the agriculture department was swift to point out that these eggs are not the kind that can be used readily for home consumption. They were shelled, dumped into huge containers and frozen before the government bought them in the first place.

Agriculture department decided to sell the eggs to foreign buyers when it was unable to sell them to bakers and confectioners in this country because egg production has been going up and egg prices down.

But actual travel in space is still a secondary consideration. After man has succeeded in shaking off earth's gravity pull with his rockets, the first thing he will do is to shoot a load of scientific instruments into space.

The visionary scientist sees himself sending instruments to the moon or to Mars. Or arranging it so that part of his rocket would become a satellite to one of the planets. Thus, through a development of television, he might see such things as the secrets of the dark side of the moon.

A wealth of research—literally set of this world—would be opened up long before an attempt could be made to begin human interplanetary travel.

Mail-Order Justice

In early days in Arizona when frontier justice was the rule, a two-armed judge ruled his court with an iron hand and a pair of six-shooters. The only book in the whole town was a first edition of a mail-order catalog.

The judge kept the book on his desk and consulted it when passing sentence. One morning he opened the book at random, glanced at the open page, pointed a bony finger at the prisoner and snarled: "I fine you $3.49."

The prisoner started to protest. "Shut up," whispered his lawyer. "You're the luckiest coot in town. Suppose he had turned to the page of 'pianos' instead of baby dresses?"

Fruit Puddings Are Mouth-Watering!
(See recipe below.)

Fruit Puddings

Dessert lovers everywhere enjoy deep-dish, fruit puddings with their crisp crusts, their mouth-watering fragrance. The grand thing about them is that you may have them at any time during the year, but especially during the months when fresh fruit is not so readily available.

First of all, there are canned cherries, plump, red and juicy. But don't stop there, for you may like to use apples or figs, pears and apricots, and even some of the citrus fruits. All of them are happy inspiration for meals that you want to be filling and hearty.

Another thing you'll like about these desserts is that they are simplicity itself to prepare. Use them often for economy's sake on days when you use the oven for the rest of the meal.

*Special Cherry Cobbler (Serves 6)

- 1 No. 2 can tart, pitted red cherries
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/4 to 1/2 cup milk
- 1 cup prepared biscuit mix
- 1 cup shredded American cheese

Drain the cherries and heat the juice to boiling. Blend sugar and cornstarch in enough water to make a thin paste. Gradually add this to the hot cherry juice and cook until thick and clear. Add the cherries. Place in a shallow baking dish. Add the milk to the biscuit mix and blend well. Roll out into an oblong piece, 1/2 inch thick. Sprinkle with shredded slices of cheese and roll up like a jelly roll. Cut into 1/2 inch slices and place them around the edge of the cherry mixture. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 12 to 15 minutes or until the biscuit pinwheels are done.

Peach Honey Cobblers (Serves 6)

- 1/2 cup strained honey
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 teaspoons butter, melted
- 1 No. 2 1/2 can sliced peaches, drained

Combine honey, cinnamon and butter. Add peaches. Place in individual custard cups. Use the following as a crust:

- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 3/4 cup milk

Sift dry ingredients together; cut in shortening until it resembles coarse meal. Add milk, stirring until mixture is damp.

Drop dough onto prepared fruit; spread evenly to the edge. Bake in a hot oven until crust is nicely browned. Serve warm with cream or hard sauce.

In place of peaches, apricot halves or plums may be used.

Apple Pudding (Serves 6)

- 2 cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3/4 cup shortening

LYNN SAYS:

Poultry that is left over can be glamorized in salads, served as pot pie with biscuit or mashed potato crust, or creamed on toast. Scallop with macaroni, noodles or rice.

Cooked vegetables may go into salads or soups; or cream them and serve in toast cups or croissants. Use with meat, poultry or fish in one of the "leftovers" suggested for them.

There's No Limit to Work Day For Mayor of Many Interests

WNU Features.

WOOD RIVER, ILL. — The mayor of Wood River (population 8,197) is a man of two titles, five jobs, unbounded enthusiasm and a complete disregard for the limits of a 24-hour day.

As mayor of the bustling Midwestern town, 35-year-old Lavier D. Humphrey puts on his "executive hat" and, like mayors the country over, deliberates highway improvements, tax rates, police affairs and garbage disposal.

Then he switches to dungarees and an oil worker's safety helmet for his eight hour, a day job as operator in Shell Oil company's refinery in neighboring Roxana. Starting with the company as a laborer in 1933, Humphrey has worked up to his present job as an operator in the lubricating oil plant.

Donning a worn but serviceable baseball cap—symbolic of his intense interest in youth of the town—Humphrey turns to his third major interest, that of providing suitable recreation facilities for Wood River youngsters. He has established supervised playgrounds for youngsters of all ages and currently is sponsoring the conversion of a 15-acre corn field into a ball park and recreation center.

The mayor's fourth activity—the one of which he secretly is most proud—is his famed Junior G-Man club, first of its kind in the country. Humphrey and Police Chief Frank Starkey formed the club after youngsters caused $500 damage to municipal property during Halloween night festivities in 1944. Club members cooperate actively with police; they report parking violations, speeders, red light crashers; they unmasked a peeping tom always one look ahead of police, and they aided in detecting a gang of vandals who were breaking into the local high school. Since the club was organized, Halloween damage has dropped to less than $25.

Humphrey admits, however, that his fifth job is the hardest: The coordination of all his activities within the limits of a 24-hour day. Under a Shell policy encouraging employees to participate in civic activities, Humphrey often finds himself wearing the mantle of each of his jobs at once.

Between sandwich bites during lunch hour in the refinery, he may hear a citizen's complaint that his neighbor's children get up too early, study a report on speeders from a trusted G-Man lieutenant, review the latest set of ball park plans and even go over his own refinery reports.

Enthusiasm is this young Midwesterner's main trait—a contagious enthusiasm of rolled up sleeves, hard work and the deep satisfaction that comes from accomplishment.

Country Doctor Prescribes for Self—It's School

HARRISBURG, PA.—The country doctor in Pennsylvania has returned to school to learn the latest progress in the medical field. This new venture in medical education, never attempted previously anywhere in the world, has been hailed as a "pattern for other states."

Sponsored by Pennsylvania Medical society, the project has been accorded an enthusiastic reception by some 840 physicians of small towns and rural areas.

"Students" attend one eight-hour class a week in the nearest of six centrally located instruction centers. Teaching centers at present are in Allentown, Harrisburg, Johnstown, Oil City, Wilkes-Barre and Williamsport. The course extends for 10 weeks.

Instructors are medical experts from leading training institutions of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. They lecture morning, afternoon and evening on the latest know-how in medicine. Practical phases of diagnosis and treatment are covered. Instructors explaining the best techniques known to the medical profession.

Of the 840 doctors who took the opening course 590 were general practitioners, most of them from small communities and rural areas. Sixty-two were specialists in internal medicine, 61 were surgeons, 32 were obstetricians and gynecologists and 25 were neuro-psychiatrists.

"This program has proved that the general practitioner, especially the typical country doctor, seeks to keep himself abreast of the latest progress in medicine," Dr. Charles W. Smith, chairman of the medical society's graduate education committee, said in commenting on success of the venture.

Farmers Strengthen Neighborly Tradition

EL PASO, ILL. — Strengthening a tradition of neighborliness between El Paso villagers and Woodford county farmers originally launched 33 years ago, 50 farmers aided in cleaning streets and yards of debris left in the village by a storm.

With tractors, axes and saws, the farmers cleaned up parts of fallen trees, brush and twigs, hauling the debris to a dump for burning. Then

His Honor

Like mayors the country over, Lavier D. Humphrey finds many responsibilities attached to the job of being chief executive of the bustling little city of Wood River, Ill. The routine of handling civic affairs, however, is relaxed when he is called upon frequently to serve as peacemaker in settling neighborly squabbles.

Works, Too

Losing his official dignity, Humphrey is known as "Humpty" at the Shell refinery, where he works in a section of the lubricating oil plant. Most of his working day is spent in front of a complicated control board bristling with dials, knobs and recording instruments which keep tab on the plant's operations.

At Play

One of his honor's favorite relaxations is to listen to his wife play the piano—not the last new buying item, but the old ones, Viennese, Walter, Victor Herbert, Sigmund Romberg, Son Don, 13, and a daughter, Lenice, 11, also join the family group for frequent evenings of music.

Human, After All

Back in high school, Humphrey set a record for the mile which lasted until 1947. He has been a fast-moving man of action ever since. Rugged as he is, however, he occasionally tires from the strain of the refinery and city hall. When the heat does catch up with him, it's usually in his living room chair.

No Problem for Him

BURLINGTON, VT. — Stricken with laryngitis, Prof. Robert S. Long of University of Vermont thought of canceling his class. Then he had a better idea. He whispered his lecture into a recording machine which he carried to the classroom and turned on full blast.

Methodist Church Rev. Howard S. Pitts, Pastor

Sunday's sermon will raise some serious questions in connection with "Why Join the Church?" Many have taken membership with hypocrisy, intolerance, and narrow-mindedness. Still others have shrugged their shoulders with the comment,

"I can be just as good without going to church, so why waste time?" They may be half right, but the attitude is too simple to be honest. You are invited to join us Sunday as we seek to look at the matter squarely.
