FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE
by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: How can I put a maple finish on an unpainted wooden table?

ANSWER: First rub down the wood with fine sandpaper and steel wool until the surfaces are smooth and "satin"-like; then wipe off the dust with turpentine. If you wish to have an orange maple color, you can get this effect by the application of two coats of pure orange shellac. The first coat should be thinned half-and-half with denatured alcohol. For other shades, apply an oil stain, selecting the color that you prefer from a color-card at your local paint store. Apply the stain as directed on the label and finish with two coats of quick-drying varnish.

QUESTION: The mortar is powdering between the bricks of our chimney. How can I repair it?

ANSWER: Clean out the old mortar to a depth of half an inch or so, wet the grooves with water, then pack with a mixture of 1 part portland cement, 1 part hydrated lime and 5 parts of clean, coarse sand with just enough water to make a workable mixture.

BACKWARD GLANCES:-

40 YEARS AGO FROM 1908 CARRIZOZO NEWS

Last Sunday, while driving through the mountains not many miles from Capitan, on business of a wordly nature solely, we spied a little log school house on the side of a hill, surrounded by wagons and teams, and our ears were filled by the voices of men, women and children as the sound gently issued from door and window. Fond recollections—carried our thoughts back to other and better days; and the most natural thing in the world happened—we drove up to a tree, hitched our team and entered the school house.

There we saw an entire community, singing, praying and talking, each worshiper intently engaged in the work—praising the master. The congregation was small but made up in earnestness what it lacked in numbers; the people were simply attired, yet sincerity and seriousness abounded. There were no Morny Widow Hats, no peek-a-boo waists; no silk ties, no frock coats—just plain every day people assembled for the purpose of worshipping God in their own simple way, without ostentation, without display, without any frills or furbelows. They had no preacher they are poor—but song and prayer were not lacking and the enjoyment was distinctly visible in each face. They were close in nature and nature's laws are so near God's laws that the thought occurred: if the Lord likes any spot better than another in this old wicked world this is one of them and these people are among his chosen ones; and when the service was over we departed, memory would recall the sublime faith with which He was worshipped in that little log building and it produced, anew, a feeling of respect and reverence.

023 acres, more or less, according to the plat of survey filed at the State Land Office dated June 1, 1948.

No bid will be accepted on the above described lands for less than Eighty and No/100 ($80.00) Dollars per acre and the successful bidder will be required to pay at the time of the sale five per cent (5%) of the amount of his bid, the value of the improvements and the price offered will be payable in thirty years with interest on all deferred payments at the rate of four per cent (4%) per annum in advance, in accordance with the terms of the contract to be entered into by the successful bidder, form of which will be furnished on request.

All minerals on the said lands are reserved to the State of New Mexico, and the Commissioner reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

DATED at Santa Fe, New Mexico this 15th day of June, 1948.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman's 'Non-Political' Tour in West Breaks Precedents, Also Hits Snags; Senate Fights to Recover Aid Slash

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

ODDS ON SECURITY . . . Seeking to end what he termed a "desperate gamble" with the nation's security, Sen. Chas Gurney (Rep., S. D.) (left) opened senate debate on the measure to draft youths aged 19 through 25. Chairman of the senate armed services committee, Gurney here is discussing the draft bill with Senators Leverett Saltonstall (Rep., Mass.) and Richard B. Russell (Dem., Ga.).

NON-POLITICAL:

Truman's Tour

President Truman's "non-political" swing through the West could be described as non-political only in the sense that Mr. Truman, as a candidate for Democratic re-nomination, had jettisoned many of the rules of standard party politics.

It was a lone wolf fight he was waging—going over the heads of party leaders to talk directly to the people. And most of what he had to say to the people concerned the Republican congress and what he termed its inaction.

In Chicago, speaking before the Swedish Pioneer Centennial association, he hammered out a platform upon which he can be expected to base his chances for re-nomination.

Specifically, he lashed out at the idea that communism can be legislated out of existence.

From Chicago the President, with his entourage, headed for the heart of the farm belt, Omaha, Neb., and it was there that he was set sharply back on his heels.

He continued his lambasting of the Republican congress—this time concentrating on GOP farm policies—in a speech at the Ak-Sar-Bon coliseum in Omaha. Fanatically, in the coliseum which has a capacity of 10,000, fewer than 2,000 persons were present to hear Mr. Truman talk.

This phenomenon was variously interpreted. Some said the President's box office appeal had wilted. Others claimed the Nebraska Democratic machine had done a miserably inadequate job in promoting his appearance.

Probably closer to the truth was the plain fact that the "non-political" label of the presidential trip had backfired seriously. He made a political speech and had expected to get a crowd of friendly Democrats to fill the hall for the occasion.

But the White House previously had told the Democratic organization in Omaha to lay off the political hoopla, and the organization acted in compliance with those instructions. Payoff came when nobody else showed up to fill the aching void which the Democrats created by staying away.

It was an unpleasant blow for the campaigning Mr. Truman and one that might produce grave political repercussions.

But the President was resilient. And in a more or less happy frame of mind he left Omaha on his train and rode away into the setting sun in search of happier hunting grounds.

AID SLASH: 'Less Recovery'?

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg was fighting mad at what the house of representatives had done to his political baby, the world recovery program, by slashing nearly a million dollars from the appropriations for the Europe-Asia aid bill.

On the Republican foreign policy leader from Michigan rested the administration's hope of reclaiming the appropriations cut in senate action on the measure.

Certainly, Vandenberg has a more than usual affinity for global aid program since it was he who labored to steer the Marshall plan to congressional approval last April. What the house had done was to approve a total foreign aid expansion of $5,980,710,228 to be spread out over a period of 15 months. The administration had asked $5,533,710,228 as the minimum fund needed for a 12-month period.

Secretary of State George Marshall, fighting hard against the cut, had asserted that the smaller appropriation would mean putting Europe on a relief dole, rather than helping it to its feet.

But Rep. John Taber (Rep., N. Y.), chairman of the house appropriations committee, went right ahead and swung the ax. He said the funds his committee proposed were all that could be spent with any degree of prudence.

Paul G. Hoffman, head of the European recovery program, said he "certainly hoped" congress would restore the cuts.

ERP was hardest hit in the fund cut. Whereas congress previously had authorized up to 4,245 billion dollars in 12 months for that 16-nation recovery project, the appropriations bill as passed by the house, knocked that figure down to 4 billion dollars for 15 months.

Other reductions: Assistance to Greece and Turkey was cut from 275 million to 200 million dollars and aid to China cut from 463 million to 400 million.

DRAFT: Debatable

In the waning days before adjournment of congress the senate had buckled down to the task of producing action on a limited revival of the military draft.

The house was waiting only for the senate to dispose of the question before its members waded into the tricky currents of a similar measure.

Legislators in both houses were treading gingerly about on the issue, throbbing with the knowledge that this is an election year and furthermore there are any number of American parents ready to offer material objections at the ballot box if their boys are called up for military service.

In the face of all this the senate, nevertheless, was trying to do some kind of a job. Its measure provided for the drafting of men 19 through 25 in sufficient numbers to bring the armed services up to their authorized strength. The bill would permit 18-year-olds to volunteer for a year's training, thus disposing of a universal military training act for the present.

Among the side issues that arose during the senate debate was the old bugaboo of civil rights. After an abortive two-hour filibuster by southern Democrats, the senate voted 37 to 35 to outlaw the poll tax as a requirement for voting in federal elections so far as members of the armed forces are concerned.

Actually, it was a minor issue, inasmuch as most of the seven southern poll tax states still have in effect wartime suspensions of the tax for members of the armed services.

Under the senate measure the draft would be authorized for five years, but the program is left flexible enough so congress each year could raise or lower both the regular and reserve forces to meet shifting world conditions.

Drafted men, after completing two years of service, would have to serve in the reserve for five years or, as a matter of choice, volunteer for an additional year in the regular services or two years in the national guard.

LATEST: In Bombers

Army air force is developing another new long range jet bomber which will use propellers driven by jet turbines. It is called the XB-53.

The experimental plane represents another effort by designers to overcome the high fuel consumption and resulting limited range of jet bombers but still retain the jet's high speed. Jet-driven propellers may provide a partial answer.

MINE TALKS:

More Snags

As usual John L. Lewis was mining the channels of possible agreement in the latest series of contract discussions between him and representatives of the soft coal mine operators.

The explosive the UMW chief planted this time was a demand that the operators first guarantee welfare aid for distressed miners before they can expect his union to sign a new contract.

Thus, the "Lewis situation" in the United States was being brought to the fore again.

Already the possessor of enough government injunctions to paper the den of his Springfield, Ill., home, Lewis received another one before he would consent to bargain with the operators on a new 1948-49 contract. (The old contract expires June 30.)

U. S. District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough issued the latest injunction ordering Lewis to bargain with the Southern Coal Producers association. The mine chief previously had refused to bargain with the association because the 14 member groups were being represented at the contract talks by just one man.

However, Lewis bowed to the injunction and agreed to talk.

In the course of this talk one of the first things he did was to call the mine operators "fat cats" and then wave an arrogant club at them with these words:

"We assume that you would deplore any impairment of your abnormal income after July 1. Such an assumption would seem to be a logical predicate for the making of a new wage agreement before that date."

Briefly, it looked as though Lewis was determined to strike again. Deprived of one snag, he immediately grasped another. As a result the first round of contract talks was fruitless.

Transition

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in the manner of all old warriors, probably will remain a soldier at heart till the end of his days, despite the fact that he has discarded his military trappings for the cap and gown of an educator. He has settled down as president of Columbia university, and that's the only kind of president he wants to be, he says.

GERMANY:

New Plan

Pivotal point of a healthy and prosperous Europe, Germany long has been under scrutiny by the Allied powers who have been searching for a way to return it to the world family of nations without starting another squabble.

Zonal partition of Germany perhaps has been the biggest hindrance to the formulation of such a plan, and Russia consistently has objected to re-establishing an autonomous German government.

Now, however, a new plan was afoot. The U. S. and five other friendly powers—Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and The Netherlands—revealed a scheme for self-government in western Germany.

At the same time notice was served on Russia that occupation troops will remain there "until the peace of Europe is secured."

The plan calls for international control of the Ruhr and for steps toward convening a German constituent assembly in the three western zones "to prepare a constitution for approval of the participating states."

That was the skeleton of a program which might put Germany back on its feet.

Reaction in the U. S. was favorable. The state department hailed it as a major step toward recovery in Europe, and it also was regarded as a body blow to Russia in the cold war.

But, although the plan asserted with some vehemence that "Germany must not again be permitted to become an aggressive power," there was some worry as to whether France would approve it.

Does the decision to go ahead with the political rehabilitation of western Germany to the exclusion of Russia's eastern zone mean that the defeated nation is finally and irrevocably split?

U. S. officials don't think so. The theory is that although it was Russia herself which forced the western powers to act without Russia, the new program does not preclude the participation of the rest of Germany in the new self-governing federation if and when the people of the Soviet zone want it.

MONKEY SHINES . . . Three pickets, emulating the three fabulous monkeys who "see no evil, hear no evil and speak no evil," are shown in front of the Republican national headquarters in Washington as they protested against the Mundt-Nixon anti-Communist bill. Whether they meant to apply the three monkeys symbolism to the anti-Red bill or to their own sentiments is not clear. Also, they aren't lined up in the correct "see, hear, speak" order. Still, it wasn't a bad stunt as stunts go these days.

TO PLUMB THE UNIVERSE . . . With appropriately impressive ceremonies the world's largest mirror telescope received its dedication in the Palomar mountains, Calif., observatory. It was christened the Hale telescope in honor of the late Dr. George Ellery Hale, pioneering chairman of California Institute of Technology's observatory council, who first envisioned the project 29 years ago. The 200-inch mirror can be seen at the upper right.

LOW LEVEL AIR MAIL . . . Ever since the days of the pony express legions Americans have been looking for new ways to deliver mail. Here is one way. The 114-foot blimp "Wonder Ship" set a precedent by making a low level delivery of a mail pouch with contributions to the Greater New York fund. The mail was delivered at the airplane base at 33rd street and East River in New York. The whole thing only took 15 minutes to prove what can be done when a press agent sets his mind to it.

PRISONERS OF WAR—AN OLD STORY . . . Despite talk of a truce and abortive peace negotiations, the war in Palestine continues the million deaths, producing deaths, destruction and prisoners as all wars do. These two members of the Jewish Brigade were captured by the Arabs after the battle of Arab Marjeh. Strategic Jewish settlement outside Jerusalem. Arab reports say these were the only two prisoners taken.

4-H CANNING PROGRAM SAVES MONEY BALANCES DIET

In line with the saying, "A penny saved is a penny earned" Lincoln county 4-H Club girls are earning dollars by canning fruits and vegetables and meats produced on their farms.

Many of the girls are taking part in the 1948 National 4-H Canning Achievement program. This activity encourages club girls to produce a more varied, well-balanced diet and reduce cash expenditures for food by the use of a family food preservation plan. They also learn to recognize the importance of fruits and vegetables in the diet and to increase their use during the winter months.

County Extension Agent, Carl P. Kadeliff will furnish more complete information on the program for which Kerr Glass is again providing awards.

Awards this year are gold-filled medals of honor for county, National 4-H Club Congress trips for the state, and $200.00 college scholarships for six national winners.
