Learn The Lesson Of Arbor Day

By DOROTHY GUCK

Many states are celebrating the 80th anniversary of Arbor Day this week. Most other holidays repose upon the past while Arbor Day proposes for the future. Whether we plant for beauty or for utility, we are creating a symbol of our faith in the future, a tangible contribution to the wealth of our communities and our nation of tomorrow.

Arbor Day began in Nebraska City, Neb., at the instigation of J. Sterling Morton to dramatize the need for planting trees, and implant the meaning of conservation in the minds of citizens. Morton began his tree planting crusade in 1854 in a barren quarter section Nebraska homestead. For 18 years he worked to convert the skeptics to the many advantages of tree growing. The first celebration in that state resulted in the enthusiastic planting of almost a million trees.

Less than two decades after the first observance, nearly every state in the nation was observing Arbor Day, along with Canada, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. In many sections, the planting is carried on by the schools and the many youth organizations such as 4-H, FFA and the Scouts. In others, the impetus comes from women's clubs, industries or other adult civic organizations.

New Mexico usually observes Arbor Day the second Friday in March by proclamation of the governor. The first celebration was held in 1890.

One out of every six acres of our wood producing land is depleted, but planting is an expensive procedure. To reseed the 460,000 burned over acres of Oregon's Tillamook area will cost about $10,000,000, and the young trees will not be ready for harvest for several decades.

Arbor Day reforestation proves the wise foresight of a great nation. Yet with a seemingly inconsistent disregard for the future, we lose an average 21,622,000 acres of timber a year through fire. Ninety per cent of the forest fires are man caused.

With a high price on every item we use, your forests remain a free commodity at your disposal. You can enjoy a million dollar view for nothing, a garden show of wild flowers and overgreens, a choir of harmonious bird songs, free camping, picnicking, hiking, fishing, hunting and motoring. All the forests ask is courteous appreciation of their values, by leaving clean camps and employing every caution in the use of fire.

Your permanent fishing streams, wealth of wildlife, and enchanting beauty that lure the tourist dollars into the state, can be destroyed by the careless smoker. I heard a person say the other day, "New springs and running water have appeared in a burned over area. Burning must be good for the land." Certainly water will run freely from the surface of a denuded land, there is nothing to hold it in the soil. But wait a few years, you'll see the source of the running water go dry and deeply eroded gullies mark the land that once was held by the roots of trees and grass.

Our forests are the treasures of our state. Each year New Mexico is visited by more tourists in search of just her kind of beauty. If we had always realized the value of our forest resources, there never would have been a need for Arbor Day. As the nation plants a tree this week, let's heed the lesson of conservation for the future, by nurturing the new growth and protecting the old.

Hogs sometimes get a disease called swine rheumatoid. This disease can lead to confusion on the farmer's part, because it has clinical symptoms somewhat similar to typhoid. It seriously stunts the growth of its victims.

Letter To Editor

Editor, News-Outlook:

On April 20 of this year, my wife and I went up to White Oaks sightseeing, as we understood from several sources that it was a ghost town. While there we drove over to the old school house to look around and take a few snapshots. Since the door was unlocked and the scrawled "no trespassing" sign had incorrect spelling, we assumed the notice to be the work of a prankster, and entered the building. I had taken about five snapshots when a woman we later found to be Mrs. Herbert Fulmer came in the door and asked us if we had read the sign. We said yes, and explained why we had entered. She told us that several things had been stolen from the school, so they had put the sign on the door. They, of course, being the "Ladies Aid of White Oaks." After chatting a few moments, I suggested that she install a padlock on the door as the only sure means to keep people out of the building. We left, assuming the incident to be of no consequence.

This was not the case, however. I received a phone call from the sheriff of Lincoln County informing me that I was to appear in Carrizozo on Saturday, May 3, to answer charges preferred by the "Ladies Aid of White Oaks." The charge was not stated at that time. On arriving at the Lincoln County sheriff's office, I inquired as to what charge had been filed against me. The clerk there didn't know, and said I would have to wait for the sheriff to arrive to find out. Apparently the charge against me wasn't very clear up to that time, as it took the sheriff about 10 minutes of looking through his books to come up with something. He found several citations which he said I could be guilty of, with penalties ranging from a maximum of $100 fine and 30 days in jail to one with a maximum penalty of three years in prison. He also said he could prove me guilty of any of these charges if I wanted to fight the case. I was finally charged with "illegal entry," and of course found guilty. The fine was $10 plus costs, which amounted to almost $17. This was in addition to the loss of a full day's pay at my job, at which I work six days a week. All during these proceedings the women were talking to each other about the problem of visitors to White Oaks trespassing on habited premises, and I gathered that the prosecution of these visitors was a fairly common thing. I interjected into their conversation the fact that there was really no warning to visitors that there were occupants in some of the houses there, and suggested that a large sign be erected to warn people against entering the buildings. They didn't seem to be in favor of my suggestion. One woman in particular had a large chip on her shoulder, and said, "If we put a sign up, the visitors will think they are wanted."

I believe I have given you the picture. My complaint is against the people of White Oaks, and the sheriff of Lincoln County, who are so small that they must split hairs to make trouble for persons who mean no offense and have committed no real crime. Maybe, though, my case was to be an object lesson. Certainly the tracing of my license number through Santa Fe took some little time and effort, and the time wouldn't have been taken unless they had intended to convict me. But who was the object lesson for? Me? I certainly wouldn't have gone back to White Oaks after having been warned. If the lesson wasn't for me, who then was it for? Is that all the women of White Oaks have to do? Can't the sheriff of Lincoln County separate the ridiculous charges from the legitimate complaints, or are the coming elections influencing his good judgment? Does Lincoln County need the money that badly? I hope not!

Well, this whole affair has been aired now, and I fully expect you to discard this missive without giving it a second thought. For this reason, I challenge you to give my views a hearing in your editorial columns. My treatment was anything but fair, and will make no friends for anyone, including the authorities of Lincoln County. This case doesn't seem to be an isolated example, and I fully intend to inform the citizens of Alamogordo what kind of justice they are to expect in your part of the state.

Thank you very much for your consideration. I remain,

Sincerely yours,
HERBERT J. SHEAR, JR.,

Old Tunstall-McSween Store Open To Public

The old Tunstall-McSween store at Lincoln is now open to the public each day of the week, according to Mrs. Jeff Doeray, who is in charge.

Exhibited on the shelves of the famed old store, once the center of commercial activity, are many items of the stock and equipment from these bygone days.

Many visitors have inspected the store since it was opened to the public several weeks ago. A number of the items, although now outmoded, were once of paramount importance to the buying public of those years.

Fishing conditions over the state are reported from "poor" to "good." With the season just started and few waters open, anglers are forced to confine their efforts to the Rio Grande, Elephant Butte, Caballo, Conchas Dam, the lower Pecos and the several special lakes recently opened.

The best "one that got away" story comes from District Warden Tommy Rogers on the lower Pecos. Rogers reported a Carlsbad fisherman hooked into a billfold but it slipped off the hook before he could land it.
