Mrs. Robt. Pope Builds Culinary Masterpieces in Her Kitchen

By MRS. MARIE EVANS
I wonder if the people of Carrizozo realize how much potential talent they have within their midst?

Curious? Well, you should be, unless you have seen as this writer has, the fine work of art created by Mrs. Robert Pope in her warm, spicy kitchen.

What caused the delightful smell? H-m-m those delicious tempting, beautifully decorated cakes. All kinds, too, from a cute little lamb to a happy bride and groom.

When talking with Mrs. Pope one day last week I found to my delight that the lady of the culinary art would be most pleased to grace your table with her work of art.

Her frosting is not only good to eat, but it never becomes hard and dry. I know. I had Mrs. Pope bake one for me two weeks ago. I saved one piece and the frosting is still soft.

If you plan a party or have a wedding coming up soon and would like her assistance in the matter of greatest importance—the cake—then drop her a card.

Boy Scouts Mark 44th Anniversary

(An Editorial)

One of America's far-reaching organizations, the Boy Scouts of America, is marking its 44th birthday during Boy Scout Week, Feb. 7 to 13. On this notable milestone we find the Boy Scout movement at its peak of membership.

Today, 2,440,000 boys are enjoying the "game of Scouting" in its three distinct programs, Cub Scouting and Exploring, each appealing to boys of various age levels.

We seldom stop to think that this great work is made possible largely through the active sponsorship of the church, the school and other community institutions. But perhaps even more significant is the fact that some 860,000 adults share their time as voluntary leaders of the boyhood of America.

There is a devoted service. A large number have served many years.

Boy Scout Week this year has been dedicated to honoring the Cubmasters and the Explorer Advisors—the men who bring Scouting directly to the boys.

To them has been entrusted the care and guidance of our boys and young men. It is their influence upon the Scouts of today, with whom they work and play, that help mould these boys and young men into better citizens and better proponents of our way of life.

Mrs. Hattie Lacy spent the week-end in Bingham.

TIGERS TROUCE ALAMO HIGH

The Capitan High School Tigers took a 50-44 basketball game from the Alamogordo Tigers last Saturday night at Alamogordo High School gym. This was the second meeting of the two teams.

The first contest was won earlier in the season by Alamo by a score of 62 to 54. The Alamogordo B team won the first game of the night, 70-47, from the Capitan Bees.

The Capitan Tigers jumped to a quick 12-to-7 first quarter lead with Kenny Morris and Eddie Womack setting the scoring pace of the night by netting 15 and 14 points, respectively for Capitan. Dale Caton was high for the Alamo Tigers with 13. The first half ended with Capitan still holding the lead—20 to 16. The third quarter found Capitan holding a 35 to 28 comfortable lead. The fourth quarter saw the two teams setting a fast scoring pace as Alamogordo collected 16 and Capitan 15.

This game did not have any effect on the new district set-up of this year because there are now two conferences in the State and Alamogordo is in the A Conference and Capitan is in the B Conference.

STATE GAME DEPARTMENT

NEW LETTER

According to Roy Barker, director of fisheries for the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish, the five trout hatcheries during the last fiscal year produced 2,943,183 trout (137,665 pounds) for distribution to the public waters of New Mexico. The trout averaged 21.4 fish per pound or a little over 4 1/2 inches in length. The legal-size fish planted amounted to 555,054 trout (130,723 pounds) with an average length of 8 3/4 inches. The number is about the same as planted the previous year. Plans are in effect to increase the capacity of some of the hatcheries, so that a greater number of trout can be produced. Results of this program can be seen in the next few years.

FERTILIZING FISH IS NOT TALL YARN
 This claim may sound like another tall fishing yarn, but it isn't. Petrochemical weed controls and fertilizers can be made to promote bumper fish crops in farm ponds as effectively as they boost the production of ordinary farm crops on dry land.

In Alabama, unfertilized ponds support 40 to 200 pounds of fish per surface acre, but fertilized ones give cane-pole harvests of 400 to 600 pounds. Up north, too, fertilized ponds yield four to five times more fish, and the fish grow much faster than in natural streams and lakes.

Ordinary fertilizing with nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash starts a sort of Isaac Walton chain reaction. It steps up the growth of microscopic plant life upon which fish feed. In ponds stocked with the popular bass blue gill combination, it works out like this: On a rich, fertilized diet, blue gill fingerlings reach four ounces in a year or less. Having plenty of little blue gills to feed on, the bass grow to a nice one-pound trying pan-size in the same short time.

The harder a well-managed, fertilized pond is fished, the better. The more big ones caught, the faster the babies grow. A pleasing by-product is that fertilized algae or fish food discourage weeds in the bottom of the pond by cutting off their sunlight.

In small ponds without heavy water currents, fertilizer can be scattered from the banks; in larger ones, from boats. One hundred-pound doses, of something around 8-8-8, once a month, is one typical but variable prescription. Professional advice from the State Conservation Service should always be sought on specific fertilizing requirements or petrochemical applications. Pioneer work in this field was done by H. S. Swingle, fish culturist of the Alabama experiment station.

Demands for nitrogen to feed fish and petrochemicals to control pond weeds probably will never tax oil resources, but oil men are pleased with the success of this figurative pouring of oil on troubled fishing waters. — From the Petroleum News.

FISHING CONDITIONS NOT EXCEPTIONAL IN 1953

In an article written for Sport Fishing Institute Bulletin, Fred Thompson, assistant state game warden of the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish, stated: "Fishing conditions in New Mexico during the 1953 season have not been exceptional due to the continued drought. The drought has caused the draining of some reservoirs which have supported some important fisheries. Those that it has not drained have also been affected, and the usual catches have been lessened. Eagle Nest Lake, the most important trout lake, has been drawn down to such an extent during the winter months that trout fishing has amounted to a put-and-take proposition."

CATFISH PLANTED NEAR TOME

Roy Barker, Director of Fisheries for the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish, announced that 15,000 catfish had been planted in the Tome Inter-train drain. These fish are from two to five inch and are of the channel catfish species.

CHUKARS ARE FADING WELL

Wild chukar partridges numbering 293 birds recently arrived from Turkey by air freight, according to the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish. The birds have been impounded at the game farm near Carlsbad for a quieting period and will later be planted in sections of the state that are similar to their own native habitat.

There have been releases of the Turkish chukar in New Mexico since 1951. The chukars were trapped in the wild under the direction of Dr. Gardner Bump of the U. S. Wildlife Service and flown from Turkey to New Mexico. The only stop between trapping and release back to the wild was for the quarantine period in New York State.

An antelope-trapping crew under the direction of "Pecos" Finley have trapped and released a number of antelope recently and are now in the process of trapping antelope to be released northwest of Albuquerque.

Lessons from the Bible
THE STORY OF JACOB

By REV. J. M. KERR
 Pastor First Baptist Church
 Capitán

All this is a rather lengthy introduction to an examination of Jacob the man who conquered self. But it is more than an introduction, it is the foundation of a new experience in life. It is the New Testament explanation of an Old Testament experience: It is the way we may live.

Jacob was born a twin. In that respect he may be unlike you, but it was around this twin brother of his that the drama of Jacob's life revolved. For instance, very early in life he gained an advantage over Esau through his purchase of Esau's birthright. This was not altogether because Jacob took advantage of his brother's misfortune, but because of Esau's deficient character and materialistic principles. While this is true, it was not necessary for Jacob to employ any unworthy methods to obtain the birthright, for it was something which had already been granted him by God, even though Esau was the elder, for at their birth this prophecy was made concerning these twins: "And the Lord said unto her (Rebekah) two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and older shall serve the younger." This meant Jacob's ascendancy over Esau. That which was given by Divine right did not need to be achieved by human scheming.

Perhaps you can estimate yourself in Jacob. The Christian is a child of God. This is so in a very different sense. As such a child, he is a member of the Divine family and a Heavenly Kingdom. This means he has certain rights and privileges. They are God's and are found in the promises of the Bible. As such a child, with such promises, the Christian has access to all the things he needs for life. The danger is that he may substitute a false kind of works for the right kind of faith. He may try to achieve those blessings by something like Jacob did when that which he seeks is his divine grant.

Many times people make bargains with God to obtain God's favor. They try to buy their blessings when they have them already in the principle of faith. A common instance of this kind is the thought many people have when they go to church. This is supposed by them to be some virtue exchanged for God's blessing. If they go to church on Sunday, or perhaps Easter, God will bless them through the week.

But going to church is not a religious bargain you make with God. Going to church is something which is primarily done for God and not for us. In the right sense worship is an act of reverence to God. We pay our vows. We go to commune with God. We go to honor Him. If we go because we think it will influence God to bless us, then we have missed its meaning altogether. Here is the way the psalmist put it: "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that I will seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in His temple."

Some of the girls are also working on leather, while others are learning to crochet. They plan to do some textile painting, figurine painting and a variety of handwork before the year is up.

INSIDE THE CAPITAL

his régime as second floor governor at the time, was pulling the delicate strings of the campaign designed to get Garcia in, Casados out, and also guard against the possibility of Bob Johnston slipping in. A little dough was passed out to Pickett and some of the others in the race with the idea of keeping the weak ones strong enough to hold back the feared ones.

And it almost worked. Garcia, the statehouse candidate, got more votes than any other except Pickett, that is, who won by 900 margin. Casados was third and the feared Johnston, fourth. . . . People who think New Mexico should have a runoff primary in the event any candidate fails to get a majority point to the Pickett as one of the cases in question. He got the 1948 nomination with 22 per cent of the primary vote.

ALBUQUERQUE A MANDICAP

Foes of John Simms of Albuquerque for the Demo nomination for governor are beating him over the head with an Albuquerque club. They contend two senators from the big windy town on the Rio Grande are enough; that the governor should come from another section of the state. Senator Chavez has joined the anti-Albuquerque crowd indirectly by expressing favor for an eastside candidate. The argument is having some effect and not all on Simms' Every time they hit Simms' Albuquerque address they also hit Sen. Clint Anderson of Albuquerque who is up for re-election this year. Latest attack on Albuquerque candidates for governor was in the Santa Fe New Mexican operated by Anderson's close friend, Bob McKinney.

Color Modernizes Boxy Old House

Intelligent remodeling with color can make an awkwardly high old house appear lower and better proportioned.

Improvement in appearance is accomplished by taking advantage of the ways in which color can be used to create visual illusions. Dark colors, in general, will make a house seem smaller than it actually is.

The color of the roof is of primary importance. A dark asphalt shingle roof will minimize the height of a dwelling. This is especially true when there is a brightly colored door, or other area of light color near ground level, to attract the eye.

Remodeling with color is economical because building materials cost about the same regardless of the color selected and because color is built into many modern materials at the factory, obviating the need for painting later. For instance, asphalt shingles, which are widely used for reroofing, are available in pastel and conventional colors covering the entire spectrum.

Emphasis on horizontal lines also will make a house seem lower and broader. This can be done by appropriate selection of siding material and by proper arrangement of window boxes and other decorative accessories.

If a house has window shutters, height can be de-emphasized by painting first-floor shutters in a color that contrasts to the side walls and painting second-floor shutters to match the body color of the house. This draws the viewer's eye to the lower level.

Here's a color scheme, suggested by Beatrice West, color consultant, that does wonders for an old boxy house. The roof (1) is of black asphalt shingles. A dark color, chosen from the great variety of hues in which this widely used material is available, minimizes unagaily height. Sidelings (2) are gray; trim (3) is white; shutters (4) are charcoal, and the door (5) is carnation red.

Praise for Ft. Stanton Hospital Operation in New Mexico Magazine

SANTA FE, Feb. 3— Ft. Stanton Hospital, although operated for only a few months by the state, is already achieving quite a reputation in its methods and cost of operation, according to an article in New Mexico Magazine for February.

Writing under the title "Here's Health," George Fitzpatrick, editor of the state magazine, reports that since the state took over and began providing hospitalization for Navajo patients, "not a single Navajo has walked away from the hospital as has been the case at other contract hospitals."

The article quotes the medical superintendent, Dr. James Bartfield, as saying that when he first went to the hospital "I was warned that the nurses must take the street clothes away from the Navajos and lock them up; otherwise they would walk away."

Dr. Bartfield decided to try it the other way, allowing the Navajos to keep their clothing or other personal articles at their bedside. "They were much happier," the doctor reported.

The article reports that "Fort Stanton has a friendly atmosphere, and this apparently is reflected in the attitude of the patients."

The hospital accepted a contract from the Indian Service to care for Navajos at a cost of $14 per patient per day. This cost has already been reduced to $12.25 a day, and Welfare Department officials expect the cost to continue downward to about $10.50 a day. There is room for 250 patients at Fort Stanton, and it is expected to reach capacity operation this year. A school cancer ward is now being remodelled to handle cases for which the Department of Public Welfare is paying for treatment at private hospitals.

RED CROSS WATER SAFETY 40 YEARS OLD

Only forty years have passed since February 1, 1914, when the first Red Cross Water Safety covers were introduced in the world by the "unlucky whale," the late Commodore Wilbert E. Longfellow (an unusual name). And, though styles in bathing attire have changed substantially in that time, the principles of water safety which the Red Cross has instilled in 2,500,000 persons have remained constant. Waterproofing America has paid big dividends since 1914. The drowning rate per 100,000 population has been cut in half. Water Safety is one of the many Red Cross services you support by your contributions to the annual Red Cross Campaign in March.
