

RAMBLIN' AROUND

BY PAUL BAKER

Rev. H. T. Ray handed us a recipe this week that has a lot of good ingredients. It is a "Recipe for a New Year," by Louis Dickerson Arnold.

Clara and I drove to El Paso over the New Year week end to see the Christmas decorations. The Plaza was beautiful as usual, with a 40-ft. spruce tree, trimmed with lights that changed colors, while the music of carols came from a loudspeaker hidden in the branches.

The one I liked best was a jumbo-sized one entitled "Alone on the Desert." It showed three stranded cowboys beside their worn-out jalopy, which had blown two tires and its radiator.

The 1919 Model T took us to the Sun River fishing grounds OK, but on the way back it developed a sudden hunger for oil in the crank case. Before we knew it a con rod was playing an anvil chorus on the engine block.

An El Paso restaurant where we ate dinner New Year's day started off 1954 properly by serving the traditional black-eyed peas. In this connection, Hattie Lucy of Encinoso sends a clipping from her home town paper in Cross Plains, Texas.

WILL HARRISON'S Inside the Capital. Includes a small portrait of a man.

SANTA FE, Jan. 6 - Republican leaders are smarting about a couple of stories going around the state concerning their relations with elements of the other party.

The most widely repeated one, which apparently started in Albuquerque as a joke, but gained credibility as it was passed on, is that the Republicans are waiting for word from Democratic Sen. Chavez before picking their candidate for governor.

The other one, directly contrary to the first, attempts to show a friendly relationship between Republican Gov. Ed Mechem and John Simms, Albuquerque candidate for the Demo nomination for governor.

The canards don't jell because if you work with Chavez you certainly can't work with Simms. The Chavez people have been doing all they can to block him from the nomination.

Information on Old Age Assistance Eligibility

People 65 or over, who are in need of assistance because of their age and inability to support themselves, can apply to the Department of Public Welfare to determine whether they meet the eligibility requirements to receive this type of help.

The applications for assistance are made at the county office, with the exception of Los Alamos county. Applications from Los Alamos are made in the Santa Fe office. If, for any reason, it is impossible for a person to come to the county office, arrangements can be made to have a call made at the home.

In order to be eligible to receive Old Age Assistance a person must have: documentary proof that he or she is 65 years of age or older. In instances where a birth certificate is not available, there are baptismal certificates, marriage records, Bible records, discharges from the armed forces, dated news, paper clippings and many other substitutes may prove acceptable.

Upon application for Old Age Assistance (the county office will require considerable detailed information from the applicant in order to pass upon the application. The applicant must be able to give the county office full information as to present need. It is important for the worker to know why a person is applying for assistance, and how living expenses have been met up until time of filing the application. Such reasons might include termination of employment or relatives formerly bearing the burden of support finding themselves no longer able to do so.

Another matter which must be thoroughly explored by the gibitty is the question of property ownership. An interview with the county welfare office will provide final determination in most cases.

The standard budget for payment to persons on Old Age Assistance calls for a maximum payment of $60 a month to one person, and $35 a month to the spouse who is also over 65, with a maximum payment to two people of $80.

While this standard budget applies to all people receiving Old Age Assistance, the amounts received by individuals varies according to resources they might have—Social Security benefits, contributions by relatives or other sources of income are deductible from the monthly payment.

"Guide to the Colorful State of New Mexico" Again on Newsstands

University of New Mexico.—A 450-page book, "Guide to the Colorful State of New Mexico," a publication that has been out of print since 1949, is again on the newsstands and in the book-stores.

Published originally in 1940, the Guide was compiled by the workers of the writers' program of the WPA and has since been considered the authoritative source of information on the state. The new edition is being distributed by the University of New Mexico Press.

Besides the general information on such items as hunting and fishing spots, game laws, national parks, transportation facilities, national monuments, and recreational areas, the guide contains an invaluable calendar of events scheduled for each month of the year.

Part I of the Guide takes up full general discussions of the state's history, the land, the archaeology, Indians, agriculture, industry, commerce, labor, folklore, religion, education facilities, literature, music, architecture and New Mexican art.

Part II, entitled A City, A Capital, and an Art Center, gives full treatment to Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Taos. Then follows a guide for 26 tours of the state calling for travel on most every Federal and state highway.

Albuquerque (Al-boo-kur-keh) is listed at an altitude of 4930 feet with an estimated 1953 population of 128,000.

Santa Fe—"La Villa Real de la Santa Fe de San Francisco"—is described as a city over which four flags, those of Spain, Mexico, the Confederacy, and the United States, have flown.

The Guide states that children on the streets of Santa Fe still chatter in Spanish and families still bear old conquistador names like Delgado, Otero, Ortiz and Serna.

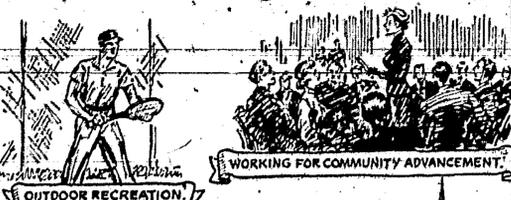

Taos (rhymes with house), according to the Guide, has three towns: the Spanish town, the Indian Pueblo, and the Indian farming center.

The 18 main tours outlined, together with the eight trips, take the curious traveler into every village and hamlet of the

If you want to know when the Indian dancers of every New Mexico tribe hold their dances—here's your book.

If you have ever wondered why New Mexicans have their own type of language, you can find that a bronco-peeler is a cowboy who tames wild horses.

Newcomers must read it because some day they might run onto a "hill-nutty" and not know who he is.

Answer: He's an eccentric miner or prospector.

The nation's sheep raisers are going to spend millions to sell their products. By 1956 or 1957, they expect to spend up to a million and a half yearly to promote consumption of wool products and of lamb. Under plans now being considered, the present advertising budget could be increased by ten times, in the opinion of the National Wool Growers Association.

Conquistadores' Spirit Rides Again in New "Coronado Series"

The spirit of the conquistadores rides again the southwestern desert sands with the publication of two more volumes in the Coronado Series by the University of New Mexico Press.

E. B. Mann, UNM Press director, has announced the release of Onate, Colonizer of New Mexico, two volumes of documents translated from material preserved in the famous Archives of the Indies in Spain.

The same two authors, Drs. George P. Hammond and Agapito Rey, brought out the first volume in the Coronado Series and have now collaborated on the latest printed works of the collection.

The Onate documents make an invaluable addition to the history of early New Mexico. Don Juan de Onate was named governor and captain general of New Mexico in 1595 and was entrusted with the mission to establish a Spanish colony in the region north of Mexico.

Onate recruited an army of soldiers and colonists and, after costly delays, arrived in New Mexico in 1598. His job was to explore the land, find its treasures and found new homes.

After first locating at San Juan de los Caballeros, he finally settled at Santa Fe for headquarters, a generation before the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock.

While missionaries were establishing churches and the colonists were building homes Onate's soldiers crushed revolts among the Acomas and Jumano with such severity that there was another serious uprising in the territory.

Two volumes in the huge Coronado Series are yet to be published. They are: New Spain after Coronado and New Mexico in the Latter Part of the Seventeenth Century, the second book by Dr. Francis V. Scholes, academic vice-president of the University of New Mexico.

Farm Bureau Favors Controlled Burning

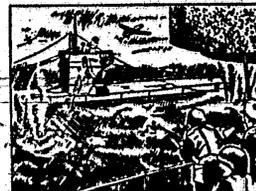

(At the recent State Farm Bureau, the State delegates went on record favoring controlled burning.)

Farm and Livestock Bureau endorses and recommends these principles be enacted into law.

It is a matter of record that as grazing is reduced and brush and unused forage is allowed to take over grazing lands, the hazards of fire and the cost of controlling fire increases on a parallel basis. This serious increase in fire hazard naturally is detrimental to grazing as well as game and recreation areas.

The New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau urge a program of—

A. Controlled burning of brush and scrub trees.

B. Increased grazing to prevent such conditions from happening.

Resolved, that the State Directors appoint a committee to study the problem of inspections on fruit and vegetables to see what can be done to provide this service to small producers.

Carpet Imports Increase

Carpet makers are becoming increasingly worried over the amount of imports flowing in from abroad. For the first nine months of 1953, imports nearly doubled those of the same period of last year.

The group of fishermen stopped in at a "backwoods" farm house to see if they could buy lunch.

"Reckon so," said the farmer's wife. "Effen you likes pork chops—that's all I got."

The hungry men fell to with a will and ate up the pork chops. Afterwards they complimented their hostess on the quality of the meat.

"Well, I should have so," she replied, "that's none of your, butchered meat. That hog died a natural death."

CAT IN THE OVEN
 Billy Whitecloud, a four-year-old Albuquerque boy, can't figure out why his mother raised such a fuss because he tried to "warm up" the family cat by showing him into the kitchen oven to join the roasting turkey. The boy was left in the house Christmas day with "Tide" the cat while the rest of the Phillip Whitecloud family was out in the yard admiring a new bike which belonged to older brother Timmy. When the parents entered the house they found the oven rattling. Startled, Whitecloud opened the door and a week-kneed cat staggered out with tongue hanging—but feeling o. k. nonetheless. "The cat was cold," Billy explained.

One of the Game Department officials stated that certainly this is an indication that Billy has big game of New Mexico at heart, and about 1974, after training and concentrating his efforts on the proper management of "wildlife," it looks as though he might have a great future in the management and care of game.

CIVET CAT ROASTED

which had leaped into a transformer of a Central Valley Electric Coop was published in the "Southeast REA News" and was identified as a civet cat.

Just for the sake of the record, few animals that are so little known have acquired so many names. Modern Mexicans frequently have used the Aztec title "caomxtle" although in Baja, Calif., "babisuri" is preferred. "Civet cat," a term often used in the Southwest, should be discarded. Our ring-tailed civet of the old world, "Bassaris" is better, because it comes from the Greek word for "little fox." The scientific title that we use today—"Bassariscus astutus" means "clever little fox." Other common names arise from the bleared, tall-noon cat, hantailed cat and ringtail. To the last "cat" is also frequently added, although the animal is not at all closely related to our "tabby" originally from Europe and Africa.

Ringtails eat a great deal of meat but they also like fruits and vegetables and love sweets. Ringtails climb easily and hunt in the trees as well as on the ground. They enjoy lizards and any small rodents available such as mice, woodrats, chipmunks, ground squirrels, and perhaps even a pocket gopher surprised while cutting down forage.

"The ringtail caught in short-circuiting the transformer at the substation must have been looking for nuts or fruit in this strange looking mechanism of the modern world," stated a Game Department official.

BEAVER FUR SALE DATE SET

William S. Huey announced today a fur sale of beaver pelts will be held at the warehouse of the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish on Jan. 29. Huey stated that the furs may be inspected on the 27th and 28th, and that 300 beaver pelts will be available for public bidding. Representatives of fur ho ses will be present and Huey emphasized that anyone may submit a bid on the pelts.

BILL SEEKS UNAPPROPRIATED WILDLIFE FUNDS

A bill which would make use of the $13,467,468 unappropriated balance of the "Federal Aid Wildlife Restoration Fund" was introduced in Congress late in the last session by Congressman Homer D. Angell of Oregon. This bill, HR 6438, pertains to the unexpended balance of the earmarked money that accumulated in the treasury during the war when for several years Congress failed to appropriate the full amount available under the Pittman-Robertson Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act of 1937, the Wildlife Management Institute reports.

It would authorize an appropriation of 30 per cent of the total sum each year for five years, to be allocated among the states and territories according to the regular Pittman-Robertson formula—half to be divided on the basis of land area, half on the basis of the number of hunting licenses actually sold. No matching funds would be required of the states and the money would be spent under the direction of the state game departments providing their projects meet the approval of the Secretary of the Interior as under the regular Pittman-Robertson program.

The State Game Commission decided to hold bimonthly meetings during the year 1954. The first meeting is scheduled for February 1. The purpose of this meeting is to set seasons and bag limits for the coming year—April 1 to March 31, 1955.

FISHERIES OFFICIAL ASKS HELP IN CARP CONTROL

Don't throw that carp back in the water—eat it, use it for fertilizer, or throw it away—but don't let it get back into the lake or stream.

That's the plea made to New Mexico fishermen these days by Roy Barker, Director of Fisheries of the Department of Game and Fish. Because the carp is not generally favored as a table fish, records are kept on fish which

LESSONS FROM THE BIBLE

THE STORY OF JACOB

By REV. J. M. KERR
 Pastor First Baptist Church
 Carrizozo

Any person's greatest problem is himself. It is not his circumstances, disability, or his enemies. It lies within. Hence the victory over self is the most important victory in life. He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city. The victory over self reaches its most complete realization in the Christian who can say with the Apostle Paul: "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I but Christ liveth in me; and that life I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

The story of the birth, life and death of Jacob deals with the victory over self probably as no other story of the Bible does. Such a story is all the more valuable because it is a story of real life and not some artificial moral teaching. The man Jacob became, was the result of coming to grips with life. His character was forged in the anvil of experience. He is not some synthetic religious person one reads about in books, but never sees on the street. Jacob lived, breathed, fought and struggled in the flesh. It is possible to meet yourself in a man as Jacob, and through this meeting to find the way to the most important victory over life—the victory of self.

One meets many theories concerning this victory of self. We are told to express self as some lovely thing of life. This is not the Bible way, for its teaching is based on the fact that naturally we are born on the "bias." The kernel of its idea of life is that man's nature is inherently wrong. This is proved by self-expression. Let any man express civilization, decency, culture and convention and it will be his normal and natural feeling without the restraint of evil. Law restrains us from acting, and culture constrains us to act because of its habit of rooting around on the bottom of streams causes silt to settle on the egg beds, reducing the hatch of other fish species, the carp has developed a reputation of one of New Mexico's most unpopular fish.

In this country the carp has developed into a No. 1 headache for fish management biologists. The carp is difficult to poison without eradicating desirable species and wholesale trapping of them seems to be the only practical way of controlling them.

according to our normal selves. Wherever these are missing or ignored, man exhibits an abhorrent and an evil self. Evil is born in us and when we express ourselves, we express what we are. This is why the world is a place of violence, unrest and evil. "From whence come wars and fighting among you? Come they not hence, even of your lust that war in your members? Ye lust and have not; ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain; ye fight and war." (James 4: 1, 2.)

A long time ago, a great philosopher said: "The souls of emperor and cobbler are cast in the same molds. The same reason that makes us wrangle with a neighbor causes a war between princes." War is just a quarrel on national or international dimensions. All these things spring from the same source—human nature.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said: "For years we have listened to some quack theorists and pseudo psychologists who have preached that discipline and control were bad for children; that they should be left uninhibited to work out their own life patterns, their own self-discipline. But you do not acquire self-discipline if you do not know what discipline is. Neither can life's problems be worked out without experience, which can be secured only through hard knocks, or by guidance from the experience of others."

Now, we are reaping the harvest. This is the result of the evil notion of self-expression. We have been sowing the wind and now we are reaping the whirlwind. We have not begun to feel the full fury of the blast, for ere the last restraints of World War II are lifted, we shall undoubtedly come upon unprecedented days of evil."

PAYLESS CAMPAIGN DISCOURAGING SOME

Prospects of going from March 1 to Jan. 1 without a job is discouraging some state job holders who would like to get in the race. The governor has ruled that workers in his jurisdiction must resign March 1 if they are primary candidates with opposition, but may stay on until the May 4 primary election if unopposed. It is likely to be pretty much the same in the Democratic departments. Employees still talking about running are Chris Sanchez of the Secretary of State's office for Secretary of State; Louis Lopez of the Auditor's office for that job; Jim Hannah of the land office for Auditor; Tony Mignardot of the Bureau of Revenue for Corporation Commissioner, and, of course, all those Republican jobholders running for office.

Squeeze Relief May Be In Sight

A hopeful note from the annual agricultural conference in Washington came recently.

The economists at the conference concluded that there may be further moderate drops in farm production costs next year in addition to 1953's slight reductions.

Also, prices farmers receive for their products are not likely to fall much below the present levels, except for normal seasonal variations.

Price falls in farm products and income this year came about largely because of bounteous harvests and reductions of foreign demand for our agricultural products.

Total crop output next year may be reduced somewhat by acreage restrictions for wheat, corn, and cotton. Supplies are again likely to be larger if weather is favorable.

Domestic demand, high through 1953, is expected to continue strong in 1954, and price sup-

Irrigation Meetings Set For This Week

Efficient use of irrigation water will be discussed this week in several meetings to be held in various parts of New Mexico.

The meetings, jointly sponsored by the Extension Service, the Soil Conservation Service, of New Mexico A & M College, the Rural Electrification Administration, and other organizations, will feature information on water supply prospects, proper utilization of available water, application of water to specific crops, pumping, and use of fertilizer.

The first in the series of meetings will be held at Espanola, Jan. 4. Other meetings will be held at Moriarity, Jan. 5; Clovis, Jan. 6; Tularosa, Jan. 7; Socorro, Jan. 8; and Deming on Jan. 9.

Ivan D. Wood, extension-SCS irrigation specialist, Denver; L. C. Brown, extension soil conservationist, and Gordon Huff, extension agronomist, State College, local county extension agents, and REA officials will conduct the meetings.

Farmers and others interested in attending these meetings should consult their county agent for the time and place.

Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Nunez left for Albuquerque where Mr. Nunez will attend school for one week.

parts will cushion the effects of large carry-over supplies. These factors mean probable stabilization of farm prices around present levels.

The general level of prices paid by farmers ran about three per cent below the 1952 level in the first nine months of 1953, most of the decline coming in lower prices for feed and feeder livestock. These items probably will not change much from their present reduced levels.

More relief from the present squeeze will be felt by farmers in New Mexico who use foods, since prices of these foods are expected to be somewhat lower. Also, prices of meat animals for finishing will be down which will bring relief for the feeder. However, for the cash crop grower and the grass animal producer, which are those primarily found in New Mexico, little relief is expected in 1954.

The price-cost squeeze for this group is expected to remain close to what it was in 1953. One exception might be more favorable grass-growing conditions on the range which would reduce substantially the costs of feed.

Use of a small area of bright color in planning a color scheme for the exterior of a home is advised by professional color designers. This eye-catching color, called "accent color," contrasts to colors selected for roof, sidewalks, and trim. For the house sketched above, accent color, printed in heavy black, was used on the door and on the trim of the narrow horizontal panel of windows. The roof color remains the basic exterior color. It is chosen from the great variety of solid and blended colors available in asphalt shingles, the weather- and fire-resistant roofing material used to protect most homes today. Colors for walls and trim harmonize with the roof.

Explorer Scout Wins Silver Award

In a ceremony held at Carrizozo Troop 53's scout hut on Jan. 5, 1954, Explorer Scout Scott Lewis received the Silver Award. This badge is the highest award in Explorer Scouting and is only obtained after much hard work in the fields of emergency service, outdoors, physical fitness, and vocations.

The award corresponds to the Eagle Award of the Boy Scouts. Silver Awards had previously been awarded to Explorers Billy Hicks and Skipper Harkey, who also hold the Eagle Awards.

February 7-13 is Boy Scout Week and Troop 53 of Carrizozo is planning a public ceremony to honor Scouting's birthday anniversary. Troop 53 is shooting at a nationally set-up goal of 40% of all Scouts being First Class or better by Feb. 7.

In the near future, Explorer Hicks will become Junior Assistant Scoutmaster of the Troop. Recently, Jessie Novell was elevated to the office of Senior Patrol Leader in the Troop. Donald Hobbs, Orlando Lucero, Bob Guthrie, Larry Halpin, Bill Halpin and Jan Lewis have joined the Troop.

Due to increased membership, Troop 53 now has Scout Patrols and one Explorer. Lately, the Bear Patrol has been organized with Harry Rickerson as patrol Leader and Henry Grannis Assistant Patrol Leader.

Any boys of 11 years and up who would like to join the Troop can report on any Tuesday at 7:30 at the Scout Hut in the basement of the Masonic Temple.

RAYLESS CAMPAIGN DISCOURAGING SOME

Prospects of going from March 1 to Jan 1 without a job is discouraging some state job holders who would like to get in the race. The governor has ruled that workers in his jurisdiction must resign March 1 if they are primary candidates with opposition, but may stay on until the May 4 primary election if unopposed. It is likely to be pretty much the same in the Democratic departments. Employees still talking about running are Chris Sanchez of the Secretary of State's office for Secretary of State, Louis Lopez of the Auditor's office for that job, Jim Hannah of the land office for Auditor, Tony Mignardot of the Bureau of Revenue for Corporation Commissioner, and, of course, all those Republican jobholders running for

Squeeze Relief May Be In Sight

A hopeful note from the annual agricultural conference in Washington came recently.

The economists at the conference concluded that there may be further moderate drops in farm production costs next year in addition to 1953's slight reductions.

Also, prices farmers receive for their products are not likely to fall much below the present levels, except for normal seasonal variations.

Price falls in farm products and income this year came about largely because of bounteous harvests and reductions of foreign demand for our agricultural products.

Total crop output next year may be reduced somewhat by acreage restrictions for wheat, corn, and cotton. Supplies are again likely to be larger if weather is favorable.

Domestic demand, high through 1953, is expected to continue strong in 1954, and price sup-

Irrigation Meetings Set For This Week

Efficient use of irrigation water will be discussed this week in several meetings to be held in various parts of New Mexico.

The meetings, jointly sponsored by the Extension Service of the Soil Conservation Service, of New Mexico A & M College, the Rural Electrification Administration, and other organizations, will feature information on water supply prospects, proper utilization of available water, application of water to specific crops, pumping, and use of fertilizer.

The first in the series of meetings will be held at Espanola, Jan. 4. Other meetings will be held at Moriarty, Jan. 5; Clovis, Jan. 6; Tularosa, Jan. 7; Socorro, Jan. 8; and Deming on Jan. 9.

Ivan D. Wood, extension-SCS irrigation specialist, Denver; L. C. Brown, extension soil conservationist, and Gordon Huff, extension agronomist, State College, local county extension agents, and REA officials will conduct the meetings.

Farmers and others interested in attending these meetings should consult their county agent for the time and place.

ports will cushion the effects of large carry over supplies. These factors mean probable stabilization of farm prices around present levels.

The general level of prices paid by farmers ran about three per cent below the 1952 level in the first nine months of 1953, most of the decline coming in lower prices for feed and feeder livestock. These items probably will not change much from their present reduced levels.

More relief from the price-cost squeeze will be felt by farmers in New Mexico who use foods, since prices of these foods are expected to be somewhat lower. Also, prices of meat animals for finishing will be down which will bring relief for the feeder. However, for the cash crop grower and the grass animal producer, which are those primarily found in New Mexico, little relief is expected in 1954. The price-cost squeeze for this group is expected to remain close to what it was in 1953. One exception might be more favorable—grass-growing conditions on the range which would reduce substantially the costs of feed.

Accent Color Catches Eye

Use of a small area of bright color in planning a color scheme for the exterior of a house is advised by professional color designers. This eye-catching color, called "accent color," contrasts to colors selected for roof, siding, and trim. For the house sketched above, accent color, printed in heavy black, was used on the door and on the trim of the narrow horizontal panel of windows. The roof color remains the basic exterior color. It is chosen from the great variety of solid and blended colors available in asphalt shingles, the weather- and fire-resistant roofing material used to protect most homes today. Colors for walls and trim harmonize with the roof.

Limited experiments with the addition of trace minerals to cattle rations failed to show any increase in the rate of gain. However, cattle fed trace minerals recovered more quickly from the effects of parasite infestations after treatment.
