

Complete Excavation
At Gran Quivira

Visitors to Gran Quivira National Monument during October totaled 564 persons, bringing the year's total to 6368, an increase of 20% over last year, according to Channing Howell, superintendent.

Excavation of the 'San Isidro' church yard was recently completed by National Park Service Archeologist Gordon Vivian. The church yard covers an area of over 4000 sq. yds., and adds noteworthy interest to the features of the area.

The monument is open to visitors all year and is located on State Highway 10, between Mountainair and Carrizozo.

After carrying a considerable portion of it around on his shoulders, the American taxpayer doesn't think it's such a small world after all.

Personnel Counseling Proving Success in New Mexico Industry

Carlsbad — Personnel counseling is proving a successful experiment in industrial human relations, New Mexico mining men were told, and results thus far indicate that the program might have even broader applications in the future.

Lewis F. Prensall, employee services administrator of the Chino Mines Division of Kennecott Copper Corp., Hurley, N. M., was one of the principal speakers at the recent technical session of the New Mexico Mining Association convention.

Kennecott's four-year experience with counseling, Prensall said, has resulted in improved job performance by many valuable employees and has brought about considerable savings in money as well.

Termining the program an "experiment," Prensall said "we are badly in need of better techniques for applying the growing knowledge of human relations to the actual business of production. Common sense, alone, will not provide the answers."

Sweeping Changes in Oldsmobile for 1957

Oldsmobile for 1957 has completed the most sweeping model change in the past 20 years, with distinctive styling innovations and mechanical improvements in every one of the 17 body styles in three series of cars. The body is completely new, creating a fashion-new exterior appearance with deeper bumpers and a redesigned grille. Mechanical and structural advances include a new wider and heavier chassis, new "pivot-point" front suspension of a design that resists dipping, improved rear suspension, a new 277-h.p. "Rocket" engine, known as the T400, duo to its high torque throughout the driving range, and new 14-inch wheels.

Outstanding styling note is the accent stripe, an Oldsmobile exclusive, that runs more than half the length of the car's side panels between narrow chrome moulding. This marks the first new style trend in exterior color application since Oldsmobile introduced two-tone color styling in the body in 1954. The accent stripe permits a new two-tone effect, with the car painted one color and the accent stripe in a contrasting color. However, the conventional two-tone styling is still available as an optional extra.

THE LINCOLN COUNTY WAR

Early in July, 1878, full scale violence erupted between two feuding factions in Lincoln, New Mexico.

The Lawyer McSwain faction, captained by William Bonney (alias Billy the Kid), was practically annihilated by Sheriff Peppin and his sixty heavily armed men during three days and nights of fighting.

Time changes many things, but beer and ale were the beverages of good fellowship in 1878, just as they are today. Enjoy them in moderation.

FOLKLORE CORNER

By TED RAYNOR

THE DYNAMITE CARTRIDGES

This story was related by an old-timer to H. L. Parks, rancher on Berenda Creek in the foothills of the Black Range in Sierra County. Parks said he could not vouch for the story's authenticity. It follows:

Some miners encamped in the Black Range in the early days received word that a party of hostile Indians were headed in their direction. One of the miners was a practical joker and he played a trick on the Apaches, who used the same caliber rifles as the white men, 50-70 Sharps and Springfield.

The miner had a reloading outfit for his rifle. He pulled the bullets from a number of cartridges, inserted dynamite caps in the powder in the cartridges and replaced the bullets. He then filled a belt with these cartridges and dropped them in a conspicuous place on the trail as the miners headed for safety in Silver City.

Later, some of the party of Indians were captured and were jailed in Silver City. One of the miners who had been in the party that fled the camp in the Black Range, went to the jail and asked the Indians if they had found the cartridges on the trail.

According to the old-timer, the Indians had found the cartridges and divided them pro rata among themselves. A short time later, one of the Indians saw a deer near the trail. By chance, he slipped one of the miner's cartridges into his rifle and fired at the deer.

When the minor asked what happened, the Apache replied: "Ugh! Ugh! Bad cartridge. Kill gun. Kill pony. Damn near kill Injun."

The Indians were afraid to use any of their ammunition after the buck's shot at the deer. They had mixed the dynamite cartridges with the good ones and couldn't tell one from the other because the cartridges all looked alike.

ESCAPE FROM THE APACHES

The following story was told to H. L. Parks by John D. Thompson, an old-time cattlemen. The incident occurred in or about 1880.

In the early days, settlers, miners and cowboys organized a company of militia for protection against the Apaches. At the time of this incident the militia was encamped at Indian Springs which was adjacent to the ranch country known as White Rock, about 15 miles southwesterly from Lake Valley in Sierra County. Parks' father, B. F. Parks, was a lieutenant in the militia.

The militia had been camped at the site for several weeks but had seen no Indians. The Territory of New Mexico then was very short of funds and could not provide money to buy food for the militia. The company decided to disband. Thompson, who was known in later years as Colonel by his friends and neighbors, was a member of the militia. On the morning the company decided to disband, one of Thompson's saddle horses was missing. He stayed behind the search for his horse in the vicinity of White Rock.

Suddenly, a band of Apaches appeared on a hilltop and charged Thompson. He wheeled his horse and galloped towards an adobe house about a half mile distant. When Thompson saw the Indians were gaining on him rapidly, he reached back and pulled his rifle from the scabbard.

The Indians checked their speed, enabling Thompson to reach the adobe house several hundred yards ahead of them. He opened the door and led his horse inside. Thompson told Parks he had no idea his horse would go into the house, but the animal seemed to sense the danger and followed his rider.

The Apaches fired a few shots against the walls. They made no attempt to break in the door of the windowless, one-room house. Thompson did not know how long the Indians stayed around.

It was a well-known fact among the pioneers in those days that the Apaches never killed anyone after dark. Taking advantage of their superstition, Thompson remained in the house until well into the night before venturing out. He reached home safely.

GOOD WORK BY RANGER AVENT

The White Oaks Outlook of Sept. 14, 1903, reprinted the following dispatch by the Captain correspondent of the Santa Fe New Mexican. The dispatch, dated August 25, recounted the Lincoln County exploits of Lafayette Avent of the New Mexico Territorial Rangers. The account is taken from the collection of early-day newspapers of Mrs. R. E. Lemon of Carrizozo. It follows:

The criminal population of this (Lincoln) county received a shock this week from which they will not soon recover. One man dead, two in jail and two maimed is the record of the week as the result of the efforts of one man, Territorial Ranger Lafayette Avent.

Last Tuesday evening Ranger Avent discovered four men in the act of killing a cow belonging to the Angus VV outfit. He had previously found the cow tied down in a patch of weeds and had stationed himself in a position to keep the animal in sight and await developments. About sundown four men with a wagon drove up to a point near where the cow was tied and leaving their team, they approached the cow on foot.

Avent in the meantime had dropped into a gully and, under its cover approached to within a few yards of where the party was now engaged in skinning the cow. By this time it was growing dark and the ranger at once leaped out of the gully and commanded the astonished beef eaters to surrender. Only one of them was inclined to do this, however, and the others, or rather two of them, opened fire on the officer, who returned it with interest; owing to the darkness, and the fact that the high weeds hid the parties from view, none of the shots took effect. About 30 shots were exchanged, and in the melee, seeing that the ranger was alone, the whole party escaped.

Two of the party were arrested the following morning and taken before Justice Haley at Captain, where they waived examination and were bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $500 each. Two others of the party have not yet been caught, but as they are known to the officers it is quite certain that they soon will be.

Following close upon this encounter came the killing of Bob Rushing, an extremely dangerous criminal who had two days before broken jail at Lincoln, while in the act of burglarizing the store of Welch and Titsworth at Captain.

made the threat that he would rob this store and kill at least two men at Captain if he succeeded in getting out of jail. Therefore, when it was learned that he had escaped Ranger Avent was called upon to guard the store.

True to his promise, Rushing made his appearance at the store about 12 o'clock last night (Thursday). He at once entered the building through a window in the rear, and proceeded to help himself to such articles of merchandise as suited his taste. While thus engaged, Ranger Avent called upon him to surrender, which summons was promptly met with a pistol shot. This was answered by a load of buckshot from a gun in the hands of the officer, which put an end to the earthy career of another desperate criminal. After receiving the death wound, the robber fired the remaining charges from his pistol, a .32-caliber double action gun.

At the inquest held this morning the coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the deceased had met his death at the hands of an officer in the discharge of his duty.

Ranger Avent in each of these encounters has demonstrated the cool judgment and undoubted valor so essential to an officer. Lincoln County may well feel proud of such an officer.

Father Knows
A father, buying a doll for his little girl's birthday, was told by the saleslady: "Here's a lovely doll—you lay her down and she closes her eyes, just like a real little girl."

Said the sadly experienced father: "I guess, lady, you've never had a real little girl."

State Water Problems Discussed at Meeting

State College — It will take more than a few good rains to erase the water problems of New Mexico and the Southwest.

But scientific attacks on water problems hold promise of reducing—if not eliminating—a good many of them.

Those seemed to be the conclusions of experts presenting papers at New Mexico's first water conference which concluded recently at New Mexico A&M College.

Chemistry's contribution, the experts indicated, may come from two directions. One is a chemical coating for reservoirs to reduce evaporation. The other is chemical purification of sewage water for re-use by industry and—if water shortage becomes severe enough—for domestic re-use.

The latter proposal caused a ripple of excitement at the conference, especially when John Clark, associated professor of civil engineering at New Mexico A&M, tipped a beaker of purified sewage water to his lips and consumed the contents.

"This water is more pure than that from your household faucets," Clark remarked. "But there is a psychological barrier to using reclaimed sewage water domestically. This can be changed with time, but for the present, we should concentrate our efforts on reclaiming sewage effluent for use by industry."

Clark discounted proposals to pipe Missouri River water to New Mexico, or de-salted sea water from the Gulf of Mexico. Under either system New Mexico would have to lift water 4,000 feet and 400 miles. Cost of Missouri River water delivered to Elephant Butte reservoir would be $149 an acre-foot. Delivered to the farm, the price would be $306.

De-salted Water Expensive
De-salting Gulf of Mexico water would price water from $162 an acre-foot to $350 under several different methods now available, Clark said.

Steve Reynolds, state engineer, told the water conference New Mexico is not yet fully utilizing water available to it. Progress is being made in this direction, he pointed out, through such projects as channelization of the Rio Grande and Pecos rivers. Upper Colorado project development will boost water supplies for New Mexico, as would the proposed San Juan-Chama diversion, he added.

Reynolds also declared there is little reliable evidence that making increased precipitation. But, he added, "further research is indicated."

He estimated, evaporation losses from New Mexico reservoirs at 440,000 acre feet a year.

Differences of opinion on Rio Grande water and the proposed San Juan-Chama diversion developed after an address by Harold E. Elmendorf, chairman of a USDA field advisory committee on the Upper Colorado.

Elmendorf said Rio Grande problems center around a double-pronged cause—rapidly increasing use of water for irrigation and municipal-industrial purposes. But, Elmendorf said, answers to Rio Grande problems probably cannot be found in re-negotiation of the three-state

"Dream car" design for driving today is offered by Mercury in its completely new line for 1957. Representing one of the most extensive model changes in history, the 1957 Mercury has a unique styling theme highlighted by graceful, sculptured side projectiles topping low rear fenders and terminating in massive V-angle tail-lights. Entirely new, bigger bodies designed especially for Mercury are wider and longer and roomier, giving more passenger comfort. Overall height has been reduced four inches, yet head room has been increased two inches. A softer ride, better handling and roadability result from newly engineered chassis features, which include the industry's first air-cushion rear suspension on many models. A choice of a 255 hp. or 290 hp. V-8 engine is offered in Mercury's 15 new models in Monterey, Montclair and station wagon series. Pictured is the Mercury Montclair four-door sedan.

Rio Grande compact. "It is a pretty equitable compact, based on what was known at the time it was negotiated," he said.

Opposition to the proposed San Juan-Chama diversion came from speakers on a subsequent panel. A Mesilla Valley spokesman said costs to his area would be too high for a fluctuating, uncertain supply. A speaker representing a Farmington area's outlook said San Juan basin needs and plans claim most of the available water.

Little Dryland Planted To Winter Wheat

The November crop report of the Santa Fe Railroad, states that rain, the first of consequence in New Mexico in several months, was the outstanding feature of October weather. Wet weather delayed cotton picking in the southern part of the state, and cotton and late hay in these areas.

The moisture will be of some benefit to winter wheat and other fall planted grains in the east central section of the state where they have been planted; however, due to dry fall weather most of the dryland winter wheat acreage has not been planted. Combining of a very small sorghum crop continued as the fields matured.

Harvesting of potatoes continues in the Estancia Valley with sugar beet digging underway. Good yields are reported for both crops.

New Mexico Fleeces Do Well at Shows

New Mexico wool growers hit the jackpot with their fleeces exhibited at the Pacific International Livestock Exposition, Portland, Ore., and the American Royal Livestock Show at Kansas City, Mo., according to Ivan Watson, extension animal husbandman at New Mexico A&M College. Both shows were held the latter part of October.

In the Portland Show, J. R. Skeen, Pecos, won the grand champion ribbon with his first-place fleece in the fine wool combing class. A fleece exhibited by J. B. Coats, Roswell, took second place in the fine wool combing class. An entry by J. P. White, Roswell, took second place in the 1/2 blood combing class.

In the American Royal, Watson and Callaway, Roswell, took the grand champion ribbon with their champion 1/2 blood fleece in the territorial division. J. P. McKnight of Pecos, won the reserve grand champion ribbon with a 1/2 blood fleece in the commercial division. Frank McWilliams, Carlsbad, exhibited the first-place fleece, and A. D. Jones, Estate, Tatum, the second-place fleece of the fine wool class of the territorial division. Glen Hise, Yeso, showed the second-place fleece in the 1/2 blood class of the territorial division. And New Mexico A&M College won a first in the breed class with a registered Rambouillet fleece.

Fleeces exhibited by New Mexico wool growers at other wool shows in 1956 have also topped their share of ribbons. For example, a fleece entered in the Western Livestock Show in Denver this year by Floyd W. Lee of San Mateo, took the reserve grand champion award. This was the second consecutive year that Mr. Lee had shown the

Demand Increasing for New Mexico Hay

Continued drought, the approach of winter, and the emergency feed program have stepped up the demand for hay in New Mexico. John O. Kiling, extension economist at New Mexico A&M College, says. Prices are firm to higher than even a week ago, and farmers in most producing areas find truckers coming to their barns, eager to bid on any surplus hay they have to sell.

Don Chappell, Dona Ana County extension agent, reports very little hay is moving in his area. Most of it is being stored, and what alfalfa hay is moving, is selling at $32 to $35 per ton in the field.

Al W. Woodburn, Chaves County extension agent, states that the last cutting of alfalfa hay in the Pecos Valley (Grades 1 and 2) is selling in the field at $40 to $45 per ton.

Ranchers in drought areas are receiving some help by reduced freight rates on hay, Kiling stated. Effective October 13, railroads in the western traffic association reduced their rates on hay by 50 per cent from all states west of the Mississippi and parts of Illinois and Michigan to all the drought-area states having hay agreements. These reduced rates will continue through March 31.

Reserve grand champion fleece at the Denver Show.

The J. F. Sutherland, Estate, Roswell, exhibited the reserve grand prize fleece at the National Wool Show in Ogden, U., in August, and J. B. Coats of Roswell had the grand champion fleece in the New Mexico Wool Show in Albuquerque, in February.

Under the policy adopted by the New Mexico Wool Show Committee, a fleece which wins grand championship or reserve grand championship in any show is not eligible to compete in another show, Watson said.

BROTHERS ATTENDING UNM: Glenn and Carl Thornton, sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Thornton of Carrizozo, are getting together on their studies now that both are attending the University of New Mexico. Glenn (center) is going into his final year of college life and is majoring in mathematics.

He is a member of Khatall, senior men's honorary organization, the student court and on the council of Mesa Vista dormitory. Carl (right) and John Sandoval (left) are both freshmen this year and are majoring in engineering. All three boys are graduates of Carrizozo High School.

Molasses Source Of Economical Feed

Molasses is frequently one of the most economical sources of nutrients for livestock. This palatable product may be fed on the roughage and/or placed in the grain mixture. Some ranchers use molasses in many ways.

Ranchers having larger than usual amounts of low quality hay should seriously consider sprinkling molasses on such roughage to get better cleanup. This practice will also increase the nutrient intake of animals fed roughage of inferior quality. When used in this manner, molasses is often diluted with 1 to 2 parts of hot water to facilitate sprinkling. Molasses is frequently included in the grain mixture to increase palatability, extend the supply of grains, and keep self-feed mixture from blowing away. Unless mixed daily, limit the amount of molasses in the grain to a maximum of 10 percent of the concentrate mixture. Molasses is equal to corn and cob meal in feeding value when limited to 10 percent of the grain mixture, but is worth considerably less when used in larger amounts. One gallon of molasses weighs approximately 11.7 pounds.

Whether molasses is fed on the roughage, in the grain, or both, limit the total intake of liquid molasses to 4 lbs. or less per head daily for best results. Larger quantities may reduce the digestibility of other nutrients in the ration.

Prices Decline on Lower Quality Calves

Choice Steer Calves reported at $17.50 to $19.50, with lower quality reflected in lower prices. Good to Choice Heifer Calves reported at $15.50 to $17.50, with lower grades at $13 to $15. Good to choice steer yearlings moving at $16 to $17.50, with a steady to stronger undertone in the market. Good to choice heifer yearlings $15 to $16. The cow market steady to stronger with the bulk moving at $7 to $8.50.

Calves—102 steer and heifer calves from the Albuquerque area, 3% shrink at the ranch, 263 pounds, sold for $17 straight across.

Yearlings—60 heifer yearlings a short time on feed in Clovis, 4% pencil shrink, 670 pounds, sold to Iowa buyer at $15. 2 carloads steer yearlings from the Socorro Area, one load 3% shrink at ranch, the other overnight stand, about 550 pounds, to Illinois buyer at $17.50.

Cows and Pairs—46 pairs (cow and calves) from Harding County, a good quality, but droughty, sold to Kansas buyer at $100 per pair.

Fertilizers Are Corrosive
Most fertilizers are corrosive, and when left in the hopper of a spreader or drill overnight, will cement or "freeze" the feeding mechanism. This may cause breakage of parts when the machine is started again, agricultural engineers point out.

Young Apple Trees May Be Short in Spring

Red Delicious, Golden Delicious, Jonathan, Rome, and Winesap make up New Mexico's "Big Five" apple varieties. Growers are using these varieties in greater numbers each year to replace old orchards or establish new ones. Emphasis is being placed on the earlier and more intensive coloring bud sports.

The same varieties are being planted in the fruit-producing areas of Oregon and Washington and are in greater demand in these areas for fall planting in 1957. Westerners are replanting thousands of acres which were winter-killed in 1955.

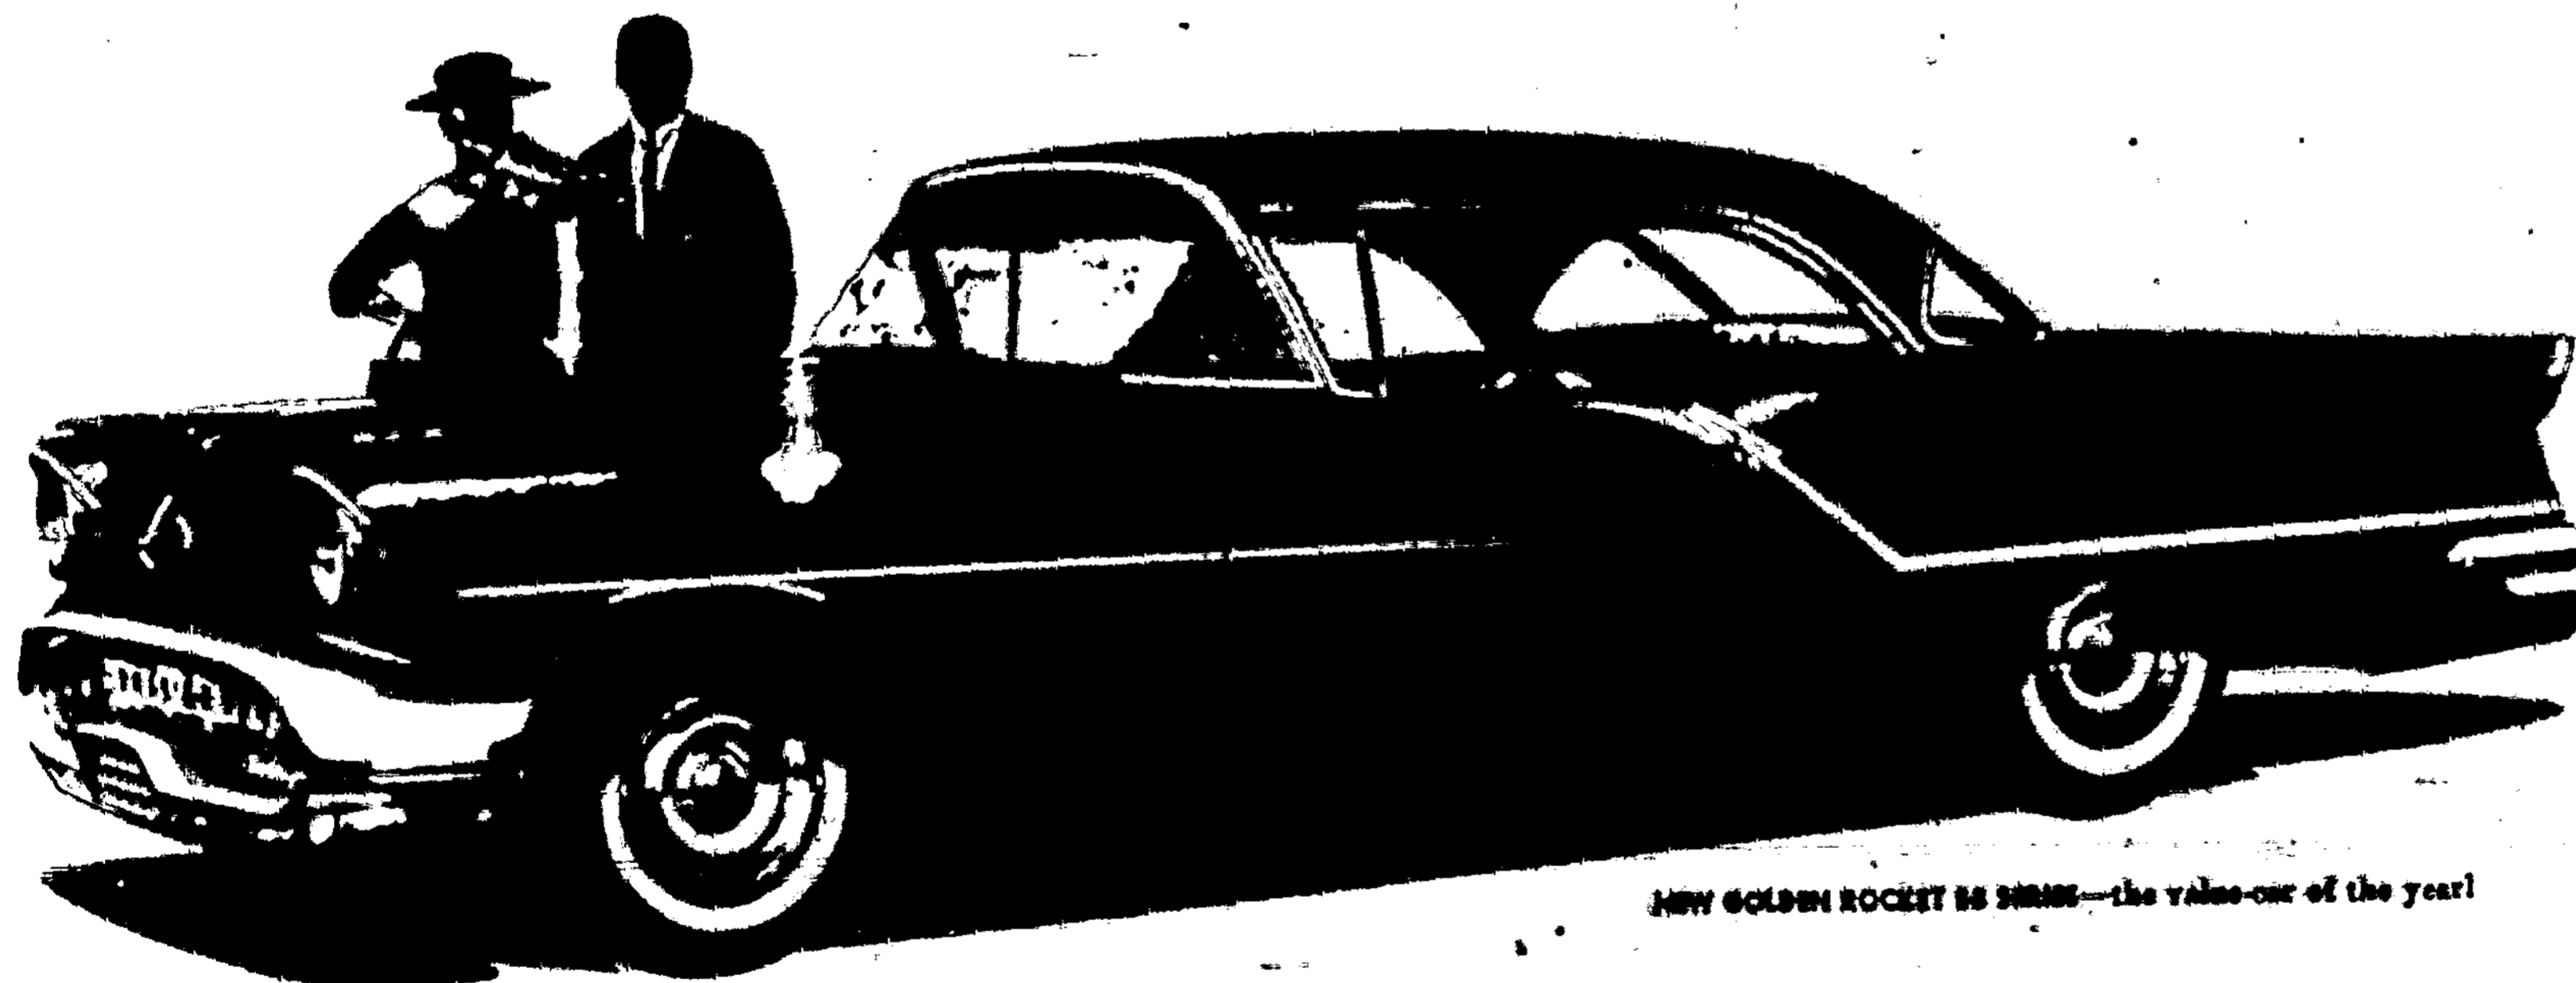

Demand is exceptionally heavy and supply may not be adequate. Fruit growers who contemplate planting any of the "Big Five" this fall or next spring, should contact their nursery without delay. Postponing the order could mean disappointment.

FOLKLORE CORNER

By TED RAYNOR

Sam, now Jon Carberry's top horse, is shown getting his first meal as a colt after a mountain lion killed his mother and orphaned him. The colt was raised by this old Hereford cow and became the best cowhorse Carberry has owned.

WHY SAM IS A GOOD COWHORSE

Jon Carberry gave us a little of the colt history of his top horse, Sam, the other day. Sam, the horse who lies flat on his back while being shod, had got up and was trotting briskly around the corral trying out his new shoes while we sat on the gate.

"About seven years ago," Carberry said, "the colt showed up at headquarters alone and hungry. He was less than a month old then. I was worried and I rode out to the pasture where the colt and his mother had been. As I rode beneath a ledge, I came upon the body of the mare. She had been killed by a mountain lion. Don't ask me how the colt got away. I don't know."

"The colt was too young for anything but milk. It just happened that I had a Hereford cow who had lost a very young calf. I was keeping the cow in a corral and milking her. Out of curiosity I turned the colt into the corral that night at milking time. The colt wobbled up and squinted his mouth open, and I squirted a stream of milk down his throat. He kept his mouth open and I kept a stream of milk going into it. After I had finished milking in that fashion—and it took quite a while—the old cow nuzzled the colt. Seemed like there was a sort of sympathy between the cow who had lost her calf and the orphan colt.

"After a few days of feeding the colt by the 'milk-stream' method, Sam caught on and took his own meals. Never saw a colt grow like Sam did. And raising him on Hereford milk seemed to give him a way with cattle that I'd never seen in a horse of mine before. Training him for a cowhorse was the easiest job I ever had. Being a cowhorse came naturally to him.

"It's been seven years, but that old cow and Sam still recognize each other out on the range. If she had to be corralled out in a pasture, she'll just jog alongside of Sam up to the gate and go in.

"I guess that's the big incident in Sam's colt days. He was raised by a cow and just naturally made the best kind of cowhorse."

DROUTH LETTER

ly, than anyone else. His range, semi-arid range lands are good for only one thing—livestock. The dry mild weather is the healthiest country in the United States for livestock. The strong grasses from a soil rich in everything except water produce hard flesh and well-developed frames that feeders prize. To the easterner, dealing in acres instead of sections, the rancher looks like a land baron, but remember 8-17 cows are all a cattle rancher can run per section and the land is good for nothing else. With taxes, high wages, lack of experienced labor, high-priced equipment, well-drilling, fencing, etc., the once huge ranches are breaking up. Not everyone, except a few fortunates can find oil under his desolate acres, and while the oil men—cattle barons, are no myth, the saying that you need an oil well for every cow is becoming more true all the time. And merely because there has not been enough

Ask any cow-man what his major trouble is in a bad time and 9 times out of 10 it will be the weather; not the market or low prices and high wages, or cost of living, but the weather. The latter are secondary. However, when the weather is right (which it is enough to have kept him in business a long time) the world is right, because he can get by and may be send his sons and daughters to college.

Grazing Control Improves Range

Grass constantly eaten down and trampled by livestock has little chance of attaining a healthy growth and the bare soil soon becomes subject to wind erosion. An experimental grazing control plot on the Soil Conservation Service demonstration area at Trinitas is shown at right of fence. Livestock have been allowed to graze at regulated intervals and the grass has made a good recovery. Uncontrolled grazing on the land at left of the fence has left it bare and subject to erosion.
