MONEY AND BANKING In Everyday Living

IN SAVING AT THE BANK—as in manufacturing certain products—the "by-products," or extras, obtained in the course of pursuing the main objective are mighty important. Not least among them: The convenience of being able to attend to so many other money matters under the same roof. That's one good reason why more Americans have more savings dollars in banks than anywhere else.

Losses were not infrequent; were sometimes great. We read these facts not long ago, and immediately thought: "How different things are today! People bring valuables to our bank—and have them protected in individual safe deposit boxes, inside a steel-and-concrete vault with a time-locked door!" Are you availing yourself of this modern-day, complete protection? The cost is mere pennies a week.

The Greeks Had A Word in ancient times, for their version of a bank vault: Ophiostomus. This was a section of a temple set aside for the "safe-keeping" of citizens' treasures. Important documents, jewelry, and other such possessions were brought there—and protected only by the prevalence of superstition. Everyone finds a chat with friendly folks pleasant. We always enjoy talking with our depositors; and they find the time spent can be profitable as well. Come in—tell us about your money problems. We'll listen carefully and do everything we can to help. A talk with us may prove invaluable to you.

'Fastest Man' Featured In N. M. Magazine

Lt.-Col. John P. Stapp, "Fastest Man on Earth," has been "grounded." After 12 years of pioneering to find out how much shock a human being can stand when stopped quickly from excessive speeds, the Air Force now considers him too valuable to risk in further "guts" experiments.

Col. Stapp, chief of the Aero-Medical Laboratory at Holloman Air Development Center, is famous for his supersonic runs on rocket-propelled sleds. He worked his speed up to 632 miles an hour—faster than the flight of a .45 caliber bullet—and stopped in less time than it would take to pronounce his name.

How Col. Stapp's experiments have contributed to safer flying for jet pilots, and even safer driving of automobiles on the highway, is told in an article by Steve Lowell in New Mexico Magazine for December.

In the same issue, Dudley Gordon continues with the story of Charles F. Lummi, author and historian, who became an ardent crusader for better understanding of the Southwest and its peoples. Lummi's devotion to the area resulted from a chance acquaintance he made with Amado Chavez, rancher and educator, on a visit to Santa Fe.

HOLIDAY GUESTS

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Drake of Roswell were Thanksgiving Day guests at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Price Miller and family of Ancho; also Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dale and sons of Organ, N. M.

Gleason Dale, their eldest son, is a petty officer third class, serving aboard the USS Waap, now stationed in San Diego, Calif.

Also enjoying the festive day at the Miller home were Mrs. John Dale and children Ted and Sue, who drove up from Alamogordo.

Bulk of Cattle Have Moved to Market

The New Mexico Experimental Range Cattle Market Report for November 21 states:

Good to choice steer calves reported at $18 to $19.50 with lower grades moving for as low as $14 to $16. Good to choice heifer calves $15 to $17 with lower quality being reflected in lower prices. The bulk of the good to choice yearling steers reported at $16 to $17.50, with the lower grades moving at lower prices. The bulk of cows reported at $6.50 to $8.50. The market in general appears to be about steady considering the holiday week. There seems to be a little stronger demand for top quality calves, top light yearling steers and good stocker cows. Reports indicate that it is pretty much of a "cleanup" operation now, with the bulk of the cattle already sold and moved out.

Several small lots of steer and heifer calves totaling about 75 head from the Corona area, hauled about 30 miles and weighed with 3½ shrink, sold to go to Kansas and Oklahoma, at heifers $13; steers $15.

Note on the Fountain Case

The White Oaks Outlook, a weekly newspaper, reprinted the following Kingston correspondence to the Denver News in its issue of November 30, 1905:

Credible information has just been received that Col. Albert J. Fountain, a former resident of Las Cruces, N. M., who, with his son, was supposed to have been assassinated or captured by bandits nine years ago in the White Sands country northeast of Las Cruces, is alive and held captive in the mountains of the State of Sonora, Mexico.

Col. Fountain was waylaid, killed or captured nine years ago while returning home from a term of the District Court in Lincoln County, where, as district attorney, he had been active in securing many indictments against cattle thieves of eastern New Mexico. Whether the Colonel and his son were positively killed or taken and held in captivity, no one ever knew. One thing is certain, he vanished and no trace of the man or boy alive or dead has ever been found up to the present time. The story of Charles Clump, recently from Mexico, however, indicated that Fountain is yet living.

Clump, a prospector and guide in Mexico, claims to have met and talked with Col. Fountain and his son, Henry, in one of the most inaccessible portions of the Sonora mountains, Mexico. He claims that he and the two Fountains started for the American border and traveled for three days and nights in a desperate attempt to escape.

They eventually were overtaken by outlaws and a fight ensued. One of the outlaws and two bloodhounds were shot by Clump in defending the fleeing party. During the combat a bullet struck Clump in the leg, which put him out of the fight. He struggled backward and fell into a ravine covered with bushes, where he remained unconscious for a long time. He finally revived and dragged himself to the bank of the gulch, only to find himself alone. Whether Col. Fountain and his son perished or were recaptured and returned to their prison in the fastness of the mountains, Clump says, is a matter of conjecture.

Flight From The Apaches

Early one afternoon in or about 1888 the mine superintendent at Lake Valley received a report by telegram that Apache raiders were headed for that area. He told B. F. Parks, who was working in the Lake Valley mines, to take a team of company mules and move his family to town until the Indian threat had passed.

H. L. Parks, who ranches on Berenda Creek in the foothills of the Black Range, where his father homesteaded in 1882, recalls the story as he heard it from his parents. He was about

Acetone Removes Ball Point Pen Stains

Ball-point pens are very popular with writers, but not with homemakers. Stains from these ball-point pens present a problem to the homemakers.

These stains can be removed. Acetone from your local drug store will rid fabrics of these stains. However, a word of caution—acetone will dissolve acetate, arnel or dynel fabrics.

If acetone is not available, a simple home remedy will remove the marks made on fabrics by ball-point pens. Rub ordinary white vaseline into the stain and sprinkle with heavy-duty detergent, using just enough water to melt the detergent. Let set for a few minutes, then wash with warm water in the usual fashion.

Naturally, this only applies to washable fabrics. Synthetics such as dynel, arnel, or acetate fabrics can safely be treated this way.

The vaseline loosens the stain, yet keeps it from spreading, and then the detergent washes away both the ink and the grease.

Although plain washing will get some types of ball-point inks, the above home method has been found effective on all types, both washable and permanent.

four years old at that time:

Dad got to the house about 4 o'clock that afternoon. As soon as my mother saw him driving into the ranch yard, she knew what it meant. We were moving to Lake Valley again to escape a possible Apache raid on the ranch.

My parents had to pack up clothing and household goods and load them on the wagon. They had to catch the chickens and put them in coops. It probably was about 10 o'clock that night when we got loaded and ready to go. My parents, my younger sisters and I rode out of the yard towards Lake Valley, six miles away, in the pitch dark. The mules seemed unaccustomed to the road and wouldn't stay on it. After much difficulty in getting off the road and back on it, we arrived in Lake Valley. We stayed in one of the vacant company mining houses.

Due to the haste in packing the wagon, some of the bedding and clothing and parts of the cookstove fell off along the way. Dad came back the next day and found the missing articles. That was about the last time we moved into Lake Valley.

Just Like Old Kentucky Whisky

Two old Kentuckians who had come to Arizona to live hadn't been back on a visit for a number of years. Finally, one got in a position to make a trip to his home town. The other was not so fortunate — he lacked the money to go—but he went to the train with his friend in Duncan, Ariz.

"Bring me back a bottle of that good old Kentucky," he told his friend.

The other with all good intentions promised his friend faithfully that he would bring back the whisky. But he never thought of it again until he got back to Lordsburg, where he had to change trains for Duncan.

Still, he couldn't disappoint his friend, so he went into the first saloon in Lordsburg and bought a bottle of ordinary barrel whisky. When he got off the train at Duncan, his friend was there to meet him. After greetings, the one who had stayed behind, asked:

"Did you get it?"

"I sure did," replied the other. They walked over to a livery stable and around behind a stack of baled hay. There, the friend who had stayed in Duncan, pulled the cork, and said, "Let's sample it." He took one big swig, smacked his lips, and said, "You know, I can just taste that old Kentucky in there."

Los Alamos county, which has developed into one of the important Demo strongholds in the state, gave Simms a 1200 margin but supported Ike by 200. Los Alamos was fourth in supporting Simms.

PICKETT LOOMS FOR NEXT RACE

There is a lot of talk around the capital about the Demo ticket of 1953, particularly the governor's place. Talked about are Seaborn Collins of Las Cruces, the former national commander of the American Legion; State Sen. Gene Lusk of Carlsbad; Land Commissioner Johnny Walker; John Simms, and of course Seven Foot Pickett, the corporation commissioner, who could run and lose and still have 2 years to go on his commission post.

Simms and Walker, however, are presently eyeing the Senate, each with a hope of getting a crack at Sen. Dennis Chavez. Of the remaining ones Pickett looks the best on the record of vote pulling power.

SHERIFF ASKS EXTRADITION OF DONALD ALLEN JENSEN

Sheriff W. G. Bradley said Wednesday he was expecting to hear favorably on the requested extradition of Donald Allen Jensen, wanted in Lincoln County for parole violation. Jensen was reported to Lincoln County as having been picked up in Las Vegas, Nev., with a gun on his person.

Jensen was released from Federal prison in April after serving 2 1/2 years for violation of the Dyer act. Jensen was convicted of auto committing robbery with an armed weapon at the time he stole the car in 1933 and following his release from the Federal prison in El Reno, Okla., Lincoln County put him on probation.
