

Ramblin' Around Lincoln County

SUSAN ANN LOWE KEMP

The following interview with Mrs. Kemp was in the pleasant home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Pepper, in Capitán, Sunday, May 13, 1956.—P.B.)

My name is Susan Ann Lowe Kemp. I was born in Cameron, Texas, November 27, 1864, the third youngest in a family of nine children born to Isaac and Mary Barton Lowe.

I went to school in Texas and was married at Circleville, Texas in 1883. I was interested to read what Mrs. Nellie Brannum had to say about an experience they had with Black Jack Ketchum, because as a girl I was well acquainted with Tom Ketchum.

Tom was raised in Tom Greene county where he had come from San Saba. He was a good boy and he used to bring deer hides to our home that we would make gloves from.

Sam and Tom were in together when they came to New Mexico. Both of them got shot in the arm, but at different times. Sam died from his wound, but Tom let them amputate his arm and got well, only to be hung.

After our marriage my husband and I lived in Palm Dock, Texas, for several years and then at San Angelo. Then he sold his cattle and we moved to New Mexico in 1893. The coal camp at Coalara had just opened up.

A lot of Indians from the Mesquero reservation were helping lay the railroad tracks. We were living near the right of way and my son Phillip who was 8 years old had a two-year-old horse that he locked up every night in a room adjoining the house.

Another time Mr. Kemp arrested a man named Bradshaw and brought him to our house. Bradshaw was riding a race horse and he managed to get from the house to this horse and make his getaway.

Mr. Kemp was appointed deputy sheriff, a position he had for several years. He worked for Mrs. Cree at the VV Ranch for quite a while and he also ranched around Capitán.

One cattle affair had quite a bit of action and Mr. Kemp got shot through the arm. Some cattle thieves were said to be camped in a wagon bed nearby and two parties went out looking for them.

El Paso Engineer and Town Board Discuss Carrizozo's Sewerage System

Ashley G. Clasen, El Paso Engineer, met with the Carrizozo Town Board of Trustees last Thursday evening to discuss steps toward constructing Carrizozo's new sewerage disposal system.

Mr. Clasen said his engineering staff would be in Carrizozo within ten days to make a survey preliminary to drawing up specifications. When all data is prepared, the trustees hope to sell the bonds to the State of New Mexico.

Two sites for the sewage disposal plant are under consideration, both on the Truman A. Spencer Jr. ranch. One is west of Highway 390 and the other east of the highway, near the old gravel pit.

Mrs. J. P. Turner asked the board to appoint a recreation committee to represent all areas in the Carrizozo School district.

The Southern Pacific has agreed to loan and install a pump to put Bonito water into the reservoir south of town.

All trustees were present at the meeting, besides Mayor Wayne C. Withers and Town Clerk Johnson Stearns.

Lockers to Purchase No More Meat for Customers

At their meeting Tuesday night the Carrizozo town trustees took action on a complaint that the town's locker plant had purchased beef at wholesale prices for individuals.

The trustees directed that the name of the town or any of its employees is not to be used in the purchase of beef for individuals.

In a discussion of building ordinances and permits for same, it was brought out that the ordinance requires that a drawing of the proposed construction, size and type of structure, be submitted with each application for a permit; also that in the future the town will not hook up utilities on new construction until a building permit is taken out.

The trustees approved building permits to Earlina Tubbs ($2500) to set house on prepared foundation. Clarence E. Shaw ($2,500) to set house on prepared foundation.

Elizabeth J. Sproles ($300) to remodel house. Liquor licenses were approved for Luther King and Shorty Miller.

Mrs. Lorena Casey, director, welfare department, Lincoln County, asked approval of a tentative proposal to rent locker storage at $410 a year in which to store cheese and butter surplus commodities.

C. E. Degner told the trustees that he considered parking restrictions in Carrizozo were too severe.

The trustees were informed that a pump being loaned by had shot a man. It turned out that man they shot was Mr. Kemp. They thought he was one of the thieves returning to the wagon.

Another time Mr. Kemp arrested a man named Bradshaw and brought him to our house. Bradshaw was riding a race horse and he managed to get from the house to this horse and make his getaway.

the Southern Pacific to put Bonito Water into the town's reservoir was on route from San Francisco.

The trustees voted to ask the State Comptroller for permission to transfer $3000 from the water improvement fund to be used for installation of new water meters.

Utilities Manager H. G. Welk was instructed to make street repairs where needed.

The council meeting was a lengthy one and did not end until around 11 o'clock.

ADD BEAR STORY

Hiram F. Selabery roped the brown bear that took refuge last week in a live at the Dugger water tank. He lassoed the bear around the neck and through the mouth, then led him up.

After roping the bear in Tortilla Canyon, Mr. Selabery remarked ruefully, "I shot a bear last fall that weighed over 400 pounds, but because it was out of season, I had to catch this one with my bare hands."

FIRE PREVENTION AIDS FOR FOREST LANDS

Ways and means of fire prevention in the Lincoln National Forest were discussed at a meeting Monday night in Cloudcroft.

Representatives of Farm Bureau, area chambers of commerce, Forest Service and the logging industry made varying suggestions on reducing the hazard of fire.

The Forest Service said a communications system, two light pressure pumps and a bulldozer, costing around $65,000, would be a great help in fighting any future fire.

Ernest McDahiel, of Glencoe represented the Lincoln County Farm & Livestock Bureau at the meeting.

His selection to the state post was at a meeting of State Republican leaders in Albuquerque last Saturday.

Highway to Nogal To Be Improved

An overload of work in the State Highway Commission's right-of-way department has delayed start of improvement of Highway 37 from 380 into Nogal.

This was the information telephoned to Repr. S. M. Ortiz Monday by Ira Miller, assistant chief highway engineer.

Mr. Ortiz had placed a call to find out what was causing delay in starting the work, scheduled for this year.

Mr. Miller said the easement maps were now being processed and should be in the hands of the Lincoln County Commissioners within a month.

When the easements for the road are secured and returned to the Highway Department, Mr. Miller said, the stretch of road will be fenced and graded.

After the gravel has compacted, it is understood the road into Nogal will be surfaced.

The commissioners voted to make the needed improvements; also to reflag and repair the old highway bridge across the Bonito a quarter of a mile west of the Shreengost ranch.

Johnson Stearns and Ralph Petty asked the commissioners about the status of the Nogal road improvement project. The commissioners said they had no recent word from the Highway Department regarding the work.

COMMENT BY THE COUNTY AGENT

By RALPH DUNLAP

In my visits in Lincoln County I have noticed several things that might be a problem to others in this area. In Bert Pfingston's orchard we found a few of the two-spotted mite. This mite over-winters in the litter on the ground. This mite is almost transparent and so small that it can hardly be seen without a magnifying glass.

It can be controlled by any good miticide, such as aramite or malathion. In the Bonnell, Pavey and Pfingston orchards powdery mildew was noted. It will cause the leaves to become mis-shapen and turn brown. With the coming of hot, dry weather, the mildew will slow down. Sulphur in the first two cover sprays will help control powdery mildew.

Also, a new chemical, Karathane, is showing promise as a control of powdery mildew, and to some extent, will also control mites.

I visited the Bart Pavey orchard with W. J. Wiltbank, extension horticulturist. He has budded some shorter season pecans on their pecan tree, hoping to get a pecan that will mature at this altitude. He used Barton and Texan buds for the work. Several of the buds put on in April are starting to grow. He said that hardy English walnuts can successfully be budded on the native black walnut.

Grasshoppers have started hatching in some parts of the county that received enough rain to wet the eggs. Ranchers anticipating grasshoppers should be especially watchful during June, as that is when the hoppers will hatch.

CIRINA ALDAZ

Cirina Aldaz, a Junior, of Capitán High School was honored when chosen as delegate to attend Girls State at the University in Albuquerque. Miss Aldaz is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Y. T. Aldaz of Lincoln. Her alternate is Virginia Trujillo.

FEARFUL PROBLEM FACES GOVERNOR

SANTA FE, June 6—The most difficult situation to confront a governor of New Mexico in decades is going to be climaxed Monday when Gov. John Simms must choose between the damaging course of admission of errors in his year-and-a-half in office or risk defeat by standing by the unpopular acts of his administration.

It will be the state convention in Santa Fe that ratifies the course to be taken but the choice will be the governor's. Even with all the trouble the governor has accumulated he is the Democratic nominee and it is highly unlikely that the party convention would fall to comply with his wishes on a party program and party officers.

NORTHERN GROUPS DEMAND RETREAT

With the convention only a few days ahead northern New Mexico Democratic groups were demanding repeal of the welfare property lien, relative responsibility and open record laws of the special session of the legislature.

Organized labor was openly threatening further opposition to the administration in the November voting over the workmen's compensation issue and other grievances real or imagined; And unorganized Democrats, apparently in large numbers according to the May 8 primary vote, were grumbling about the big truck law and the loss leader ban of the last legislature.

GOOD LAWS MAYBE BUT UNPOPULAR

A pretty good argument can be made in support of all these fighting subjects. Some of those who understand the government best insist that all are good laws, but there is no denying that they are unpopular.

They are all Simms' creatures and he must either forsake them with the risk of losing many of those who have stood with him, or defend his record with the equal risk of losing a large segment of party support.

The situation is made doubly difficult by the circumstance in which a large number of the Democratic candidates for the legislature were nominated on promises to throw out the unpopular laws.

It. Gov. Joe Montoya, who has become a figure of political stature, and whose vote was the one vote margin by which the senate defeated the inflammatory measure which would have denied jury trials for those with workmen's compensation claims, openly campaigned against the administration record. Other state candidates have been privately advocating repeal of the administration position.

It would be difficult to plot a satisfactory middle course between the two sides in the party.

SENATOR CHAVEZ No. 2 PROBLEM

Corporation Commissioner Enggram Pickett was perhaps the No. 3 influence in the surprisingly close race he gave Simms in the primary. The first was probably the legislator record, and No. 2 probably the Senator Dennis Chavez faction of the party.

The senator is also the No. 2 problem of the governor and the convention. Less than a month after the Chavez people were widely blamed for the Simms trouble in the primary and less than a fortnight after the governor clashed publicly with the senator over the welfare situation, northern Democratic organizations were instructing county committeemen to vote for Chavez for national committeeman.

The governor will have control of the selection and here again it is painful—either bow to his suspected foe or risk his dangerous opposition in November.

Chavez will be greatly strengthened in placing New Mexico people of his choice in federal jobs if he held the national committee post, possibly giving him a patronage army greater than that of the governor.

To turn Chavez loose on such an operation would amount to Simms practically surrendering his suspected hope of beating Chavez for the Senate in 1958.

INDICES INDICATE NEIL STAND FIRM

There have been some rather well based reports that Simms is trying to make peace with Chavez, but beyond that the indications so far point to the 39-year-old governor standing his ground on his record.

That was indicated in Albuquerque, which he lost by 2500 in the primary, where he made (Continued on Back Page)

Future Homemakers to Meet in Chicago

Washington, D. C.—About the first of July, more than 2,000 teenagers in the U. S. and Territories will be packing their suitcases.

But their thoughts won't be of a Fourth of July vacation complete with sunburn and firecrackers. Instead, homemaking—making homes now and in the future where "living will be the expression of everything good and fair"—will be uppermost in their minds.

Monday, July 2, will find these teenage boys and girls registering at the five-day 1956 National Convention of the Future Homemakers of America at the Conrad Hilton Hotel in Chicago.

These youthful convention-goers, members of FHA which is the national organization of pupils studying homemaking in junior and senior high schools, will represent a total national membership of 427,165 in 9,457 chapters in the U. CASUALTIES HEAVY AMONG LEGISLATORS

SANTA FE, May 29.—The devastation of the May political bomb was the heaviest in the legislature.

Eleven of 32 senators were either beaten for renomination or backed off without trying for another term.

Thirty two of 55 house members went down the drain by defeat or withdrawal.

It was the biggest cleanout ever recorded in a primary here and should put down for all time the argument that the last legislature was a popular one.

The killing off process will undoubtedly continue in November. Of the 44 house members and senators who were renominated 34 have general election opposition.

SIMMS LAW SUITS MOVING SLOWLY

Justice is grinding slowly on the governor's law suits. Russell Benedict who was arrested last summer for following another automobile too closely by a state policeman using the governor's official car with a Montana license is still waiting for a hearing of his cross complaint in district court. Spots Mangino, Baton night club operator, still has a $100 bond posted for appeal for his conviction for driving at the side of the governor's car last October.

OLD AGE CHECKS HIGHER IN JUNE

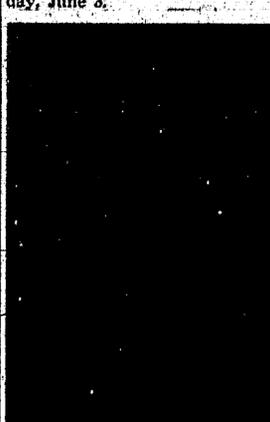

Welfare checks for the aged now being mailed for June average about $5 higher than the previous rate. The average check should be around $49. Higher payments were started a month ago for needy children cases. The department is playing on the safe side. Money on hand and the current rate of income would stand much higher increases which however would involve a gamble on the income continuing at the present rate.

TROUBLES OBSCURE STATEHOUSE GAINS

The statehouse, dreary with pessimism and worry since the primary voting, shouldn't forget that there are some bright spots: The penitentiary operation, a blur in the pants of most governors, has never operated so smoothly and quietly; Ports of entry, another trouble spot, have practically eliminated complaints under the direction of Dick Pino; Steve Reynolds has developed a smooth operation of the state engineer's department and put down much of the trouble that

ELECTION FAILS TO DAUNT SIMMS

Gov. John Simms got mauled in a surprising manner in the primary voting but it didn't take the light out of him. He flared right back on two of the subjects that caused him so much trouble in the election—Senator Dennis Chavez and the guaranteed-profit-on-liquor law.

Southern Pacific last year spent a record $117.5 million on capital improvements and probably will spend that much or more in 1956, President D. J. Russell told the annual stockholders' meeting of the railroad recently held in Wilmington, Delaware.

This is predicated on availability of steel and other materials needed to carry on the railroad's impressive building program, Russell said, and on SP's predictions that business will continue to increase this year.

"Industry and population in the eight western and south-western states SP serves keep growing at an amazing rate," Russell declared, "and so do our shippers' requirements. Our improvement program is geared to meet these challenges of growth and our responsibilities to our territory."

The rail president reported Southern Pacific's 1956 building program include substantial investments in freight cars and diesel locomotives, yard and line facilities and equipment for the company's diversified transportation services—pipe line, trucking and piggyback as well as rail operations.

Freight revenues for the first quarter of 1956, Russell said, were 8% above the same period of 1955, even though 1955 was an excellent business year.

ON A MARCH WITH VILLA

(Editor's note: G. Lynn Hatch of Lordsburg, Hidalgo County superintendent of schools, marched with Pancho Villa's army from Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, to Naco, Sonora, in the fall of 1915. With the stops en route, the march lasted about 21 days. Hatch then was farming at Colonia Dublin, a Mormon colony near Casas Grandes. With Hatch on the march were his brother-in-law, Charles D. Turley, and James Whipple. They drove supply wagons. The account of the march follows.)

In the fall of 1915 Pancho Villa's army was defeated by the Obregon forces in two decisive battles and driven northward. Villa moved his forces north with the intention of proceeding down the west coast and back towards the interior. His infantry was transported by train to Ciudad Juarez and then to Casas Grandes. The cavalry and artillery moved overland from a point north of Chihuahua City to Casas Grandes.

The infantry was stationed in Colonia Dublin, three miles from Nuevo Casas Grandes; the artillery at Nuevo Casas Grandes, and the cavalry scattered through farms with headquarters in Nuevo Casas Grandes. The forces remained there about 22 days.

Many farmers concealed their horses in an attempt to keep from losing them. Shortly before Villa was ready to move his forces, he ordered confiscation of teams and wagons. Hatch's horses were taken from the barn in which he had been keeping them, but he was told he would be paid. He informed one of Villa's generals that his team had been taken, and he was given a written order to locate the horses. Villa was reported to have 15,000 men and a slew of horses, and it took Hatch several days to find his team. He was told to be ready to go with his team and wagon when Villa moved.

Villa's forces marched on October 15.

Turley had a team and Whipple two teams. There were quite a number of other teams and wagons, with which the American owners sent Mexican drivers working for them. Hatch, Turley and Whipple had Mexican helpers. They traveled with the infantry, commanded by General Bracamontes, a well-educated and very fine man. The infantry and artillery took the road and the cavalry rode in lines on each side.

Before his army left Casas Grandes, Villa ordered the women and children with the forces sent to Juarez. There were five trainloads of them.

The army's first stop was Ojitos Ranch, a sort of mecca in the desert, which was owned by an English lord. The troops used the ranch sheds, corrals and fence posts for firewood. The army camped there over Sunday and by Monday morning the place was stripped. The ranch was stocked with a large number of registered Hereford cattle, and the Mexicans rounded up as many as they could find. They also took many of the Boyd brothers' Angus cattle from a near-by ranch.

On Monday morning the troops moved towards the Penuejos (handkerchief) Ranch and camped there on a bright moonlight night. Bracamontes sent a captain with 25 or 30 men to herd the Americans' and Mexicans' horses for the night. The next morning Hatch's team was missing. He never got the horses back.

Bracamontes ordered a big sorrel horse and a small gray mule taken from the Mexican men and hitched to Hatch's wagon. With this ill-matched team Hatch drove the remainder of the way to Naco.

Hatch made a wide circle on horseback and soon picked up his team's tracks. He followed the tracks south for half or three-fourths of a mile and came to a fence which had been cut. The tracks went through the gap in the fence, and he knew then deserters had stolen his horses. There was no point in searching further.

On returning to Villa's column, Hatch first overtook a herd of cattle, estimated at 600 head. Cattle were slaughtered when the army camped.

Hatch heard later that on the day after his team was stolen a group of Mexicans rode into his father's orchard at Colonia Juarez, 18 miles from Colonia Dublin. Two of the men were riding Hatch's team. They were deserters from Villa's army. Hatch's father tried vainly to persuade the Mexicans that these were not saddle horses.

The next camp was made at Pulpit Hill, in Sonora, northwest of Casas Grandes. The Americans took their horses to the bottom of the canyon for water. Infantrymen were swarming along the creek, taking their throats after a long march over treeless land. They drank and stretched out, and so thickly did they lie on the ground that Hatch and the others could hardly get their horses to the running brook.

The Americans had expected to return to Colonia Dublin after reaching Pulpit Hill. Hatch said they could have deserted later, but they didn't try. It would have been easy, for Villa did nothing about the numerous desertions—he just kept going. Throughout the march, Hatch said, "we were treated with every consideration. We carried no firearms, for we had no need for them."

Late the next afternoon Hatch saw Villa in the column for the first time. The revolutionary leader was holding the wheel of an artillery piece which had gone off the road and slipped down the side of the mountain. (Villa had remained in Casas Grandes until he learned that the United States had recognized the Carranza faction.)

The march that day was over a terrible road. Late at night they reached the abandoned town of Colonia Oaxaca, another Mormon colony. The smell of mescal filled the air. There was a still near the town, and several barrels of crude whiskey had been acquired by the soldiers. Villa ordered the whiskey dumped into the street, accounting for the noticeable odor as the Americans drove into Oaxaca. It was reported that some of the Mexicans were executed for drinking.

The troops spent the night in Oaxaca. Before they left the next morning, Hatch saw Villa ride by on a black mule. Pancho was whistling and happy.

Capture of Agua Prieta, border town across from Douglas, Ariz., was Villa's goal.

When the American teamsters came out towards Agua Prieta at the San Bernardino Ranch, which was partly in the U. S. and Mexico, some of the cavalry had arrived there ahead of them.

Hatch unhitched his team, hooked the horses on to an old mowing machine and cut alfalfa for hay. They spent the night about eight miles south-east of Agua Prieta. The next morning Villa moved the greater part of his army close to Agua Prieta. The supply wagons were kept back at the ranch.

(The battle of Agua Prieta and the remainder of the march to Naco will be told in next week's column.)

S. P. Employees Earn Safety Award

Safety efforts of Southern Pacific's Rio Grande division employees have earned an Award of Merit from the National Safety Council.

The award, second highest granted by the safety council, is one of two earned by Southern Pacific for 1955. The other was awarded the railroad's general shops at Sacramento, Calif. Granted for prevention of personal injuries to employees, the award of merit is based on safety performance for four years in comparison with the accident ratio of the entire railroad industry for a similar period.

The Rio Grande division, headquartered in El Paso, chalked up a score 57% better than par for the line-haul railroad industry while the Sacramento shops were 50% better than par for the maintenance end of railroading.

There's An Art to Tying a Fleece

There's an art to tying a fleece for compactness and best appearance.

One of the best tiers in the business today is Ralph Baca of Roswell. Baca has been tying wool for the Vincente Gallegos shearing crew in Chaves and Lincoln counties for several years.

Here is the procedure that he follows:

He spreads the shoulder wool over the fleece, gathers the fleece, between his legs and folds in, tying as he holds fleece between his legs and off the floor. When tied, the fleece is compact, the better looking wool is on the outside and it is free of dirt and tags.

Good tying today is almost a lost art. Very few people working around shearing crews like to tie. Most of them would rather shear. Little do they realize that tying and preparation of the wool for market is one of the most important steps in the shearing operation. In fact, a clip which is properly prepared and attractive in appearance will often bring the grower one to two cents per pound more than a poorly prepared clip.

One of the more recent recommended procedures for preparing wool for market is table tying with pick-up boys rolling fleeces on the shearing floor and carting them to the tying table. The fleece is rolled from the breech forward with the shoulder portion of the fleece on the outside. If the fleece develops a break in the roll, a half turn from the left end of the fleece will usually correct the break in the roll. When the fleece is taken to the tying table, it is given a half turn. This permits the tier to draw the string crosswise of the roll and thereby make a more compact and attractive bundle.

Better preparation of wool for market, from shearing to tying, is certainly the key to greater returns.

Control Ants By Using Insecticides

Ants are natural inhabitants of the earth, just like man. But ants and people can't live together very well in the same house.

Several species of ants invade houses and infest food supplies. Some special prefer grease and meats, while others feed on sweets. Other species attack wood and annoy us when they swarm from basement cracks.

Here's how to control ants in and around your house:

Chlordane or dieldrin sprays are effective against ants when painted or sprayed on runways or other places where the ants are found. If the ant hills can be found, dust with 5% chlordane or 2 1/2% dieldrin in a ring around the entrance.

The Santa Fe Crop Report states in its June 1 issue that continued dry weather has taken its toll in New Mexico to the extent that it is doubtful whether 500,000 bushels of wheat will be harvested.

New A&M Report About Sheep Ranching

James R. Gray, former economist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service at State College, recently completed a study of sheep ranching in the Southwest. He has summarized the results of his study on organization, costs, and returns in Agricultural Experiment Station Research Report No. 7, just released by New Mexico A&M College. Following are highlights of the summary:

The three major products of southwestern sheep ranches are: lambs, wool and sheep, in that order. Lambs constituted 37% of the total cash receipts; wool, 35%; and sheep, 12% during the 15 years 1940-54.

The four major cash costs on sheep ranches during that period were: feed, including grazing fees (29%); livestock purchases (21%); building and improvement expenditures (17%); and labor (13%).

When operating conditions were favorable, improved operating techniques pushed net ranch income to high levels. However, operating conditions were unfavorable in 5 of the 15 years, and very poor in an additional 5 years.

Sheep numbers per ranch increased from 13 sections in 1940 to almost 20 sections in 1954.

Investment per ranch was high, particularly since 1946. Total investment exceeded $100,000 since 1947, reached $200,000 in 1952, but has declined since then.

Net ranch income per ranch exceeded $3,000 in 12 of the 15 years, $4,000 in 11 years, and $5,000 in 7 years. It exceeded $9,000 in 1950 and $10,000 in 1951.

Prices were favorable to southwestern sheep producers in two periods, 1941-42 and 1949-51. Prices were extremely unfavorable to sheep producers in 1945, 1952, and 1953. However, operating conditions were favorable in 1945, allowing net ranch income in 1945 to remain at a moderately high level.

Lamb crop percentages, as a result of unfavorable operating conditions fell 2 1/2 from the 1940-44 period to the 1950-54 period.

Fleece weights increased 8% and lamb marketing weights, 5 per cent.

More than 60 southwestern sheep ranchers cooperated in the study, several of them being from Lincoln County.

Single copies of Research Report No. 7 may be obtained from the county Extension Office in Carrizozo.

Santa Fe, N. Mex. (FHTNC)—Governor John F. Simms issued a proclamation May 15 setting aside the period of May 22 through June 21 as "New Mexico Naval Company Sign-up Period." The proclamation was issued in conjunction with the start of a Navy recruiting drive to enlist an entire recruit company from the state of New Mexico.

According to Lt. Cdr. J. L. White, USN, Officer in Charge of the Albuquerque Recruiting District, the requirements from the company are the same as for a normal enlistment, which are, generally, good moral character, age 17 to 31, and the passing of enlistment examinations.

Public Feeding Test Shows Value of Balanced Supplement

The profit advantage of a good balanced cattle supplement over a single source protein was demonstrated again in a 136-day public feeding test just completed at the Bourbon Stockyards in Louisville, Ky. The demonstration was conducted by the Ralston Purina Company with the cooperation of the Bourbon Stockyards.

Twenty calves averaging about 600 pounds each were purchased and divided into two equal lots. In Lot I, five graded Utility and five Commercial. In Lot II, nine graded Commercial at the beginning, and one Utility.

Both groups were fed in pens at the Stockyards where the public could watch the day-to-day progress. Lot I was fed ground ear corn with a fortified balanced supplement containing 5 milligrams of stillbestrol per pound. Lot II got ground ear corn with soybean meal. Both pens had livestock mineral throughout, and both had hay free choice during the first month.

At the end of the feeding period, nine calves in Lot I had up-graded to Choice. The tenth graded Good. In the soybean meal pen, six graded Choice at the end, two Good, one Commercial and one Utility (sold early because of sickness).

The advantage of the balanced supplement showed up convincingly in the final profit figures. Cattle in Lot I sold for an average of $19.29 per cwt., bringing a total of $1844.70. Total feed cost in this pen was $1630.00, which resulted in a labor profit of $214.70 per animal.

The soybean meal calves sold for an average of $17.32, bringing a total of $1490.65. Total feed cost here was $1539.64, resulting in a feeding loss of $48.99 per animal.

The only feeding variable between the two lots was the balanced supplement fed in Lot I compared to the single source protein fed in Lot II. The final ledger showed a profit advantage of $26.28 per animal in favor of the balanced supplement.

WATCH FOR MITES ON FRUIT TREES

Fruit growers should be on the lookout for mite infestations. Mites are very small, but they can cause a lot of damage to fruit trees.

There are three major species of mites which attack fruit trees in Lincoln County. They are the brown or clover mite, the European red mite, and the two-spotted mite. The brown mite and European red mite over-winter in the egg stage on the trees, while the two-spotted mite over-winters on the trash and cover crop in the orchard.

Dormant sprays control the brown and European red mites, but they can't control the two-spotted mites on the ground. Therefore, the use of a dormant spray doesn't mean that mites won't be a problem. The mite problem is greatly reduced by dormant sprays, but the two-spotted mite may still build up infestations in orchards which are full of trash and weeds.

Now that the trees have a lot of new, lush growth, the two-spotted mites will move up on them. This very small mite feeds in colonies on the undersides of the leaves. They usually form a very fine webbing, and upon close examination, the greenish-yellow to red mites may be seen feeding on the leaves. Not long after the mites have been feeding on a leaf, small yellow dots appear. Eventually, the whole leaf takes on a yellow brown color.

Prompt Work Puts Out Bonito Canyon Fire

Friday afternoon J. B. Hightower on Monjeau Lookout sighted a fire at the head of Bonito Canyon.

Upon receiving that information, the forest service went into immediate action and by morning all danger had passed. Lightning was the cause of this fire. With the dry condition of the forest electrical storms are a source of great anxiety to the men at the lookout stations.

dealers' state association announced one day that the group would be willing to give up the law if they were protected by a ceiling on license fees. The next day the governor's liquor director, Hilton Dickson, went before the group and said that he couldn't maintain order in the industry without the mandatory mark-ups that make liquor prices here among the highest, if not the highest, in the country.
Earlier Sen. Dennis Chavez was quoted in the Clovis News Journal in mild criticism of the welfare lien and relative responsibility laws. Simms popped back next day with a hot response which didn't improve the relations between the two Democrats.

JOE MONTOYA GETTING STRONG

Lt. Gov. Joe Montoya, apparently feeling his oats after running better than any other opposed candidate in the primary, is moving toward a powerful position in the Democratic party.
Montoya campaigned on a position opposite to that taken by Governor Simms. He called for repeal of the welfare lien law and implied opposition to price support laws and the big truck act.
As a result he is being looked to for leadership by some of the other state candidates who fear they may suffer in November if the party persists in its defense of the measure. Many Democratic legislative candidates are in the same boat after winning nominations as opponents of the lien, fair trade and truck laws.
Montoya has also stepped out in a movement independent of the governor to bring the legislature into a controlling position in road building. He has organized a legislative committee that will soon undertake a series of hearings throughout the state on local road needs. Construction of roads could be enforced by the legislature through the constitutional amendment approved last fall giving the legislature control over the road department's budget.
All this is adding up to a difficult problem for the June 11 Democratic convention in Santa Fe which will write the party's platform for 1956. Politicos are wondering how the document can be drawn to support the promises of many of the candidates to knock out the lien, truck and price laws without repudiating the governor and the 1953 Democratic legislature.

Along the Way..

By PAUL BAKER

Senator Clinton P. Anderson, writes from Washington that highway building in New Mexico should double if the road bill which came before the Senate last week for a final vote becomes law. If the state is able to match federal funds, New Mexico will receive a grand total of $364.6 million over 13 years for interstate, primary and secondary roads and urban construction.

Also that the Bureau of Land Management is planning to re-arrange its land records in the various states with New Mexico serving as the pilot. The exact cost and time required for the modernization will not be known until bids are opened. The state offers a challenge because of its land-grant history, and its "hot" activity in oil, gas and uranium. The call for bids should go out about mid-June.

Round One—Man builds five-foot fence to keep dog "Hongry" in back yard while new lawn is planted in front yard. Hongry knocks man down while leaping over fence. Hongry goes back to alpha quarters in front yard. Winner of Round One: Hongry.

Round Two—Man gives Hongry to another man who lives on ranch 8 miles away. Hongry breaks away and gets lost for four days. Round two: Draw.

Round Three—Hongry returns to former home with the fence around it. Hongry is footsore and somewhat winded but otherwise in good physical shape. Winner of round three: Hongry by big margin.

Round Four—Still time to place your bets. Hongry looks like a sure winner.

Editor News: Enclosed please find check for renewal of my subscription to the Lincoln County News. Would like to congratulate you on the "Old Timer" series of tape recordings you are carrying. It occurs to me that Memory, and the esteem and pleasure we have in Memories, is one of the greatest gifts God has bestowed on us here below. Yes, in many ways memories are better than their original events, for instance, much less strenuous. So we go on enjoying the 20 and 40 year old "news" about as much as the present.

Regret to note you are so dry up there. I landed here in a place where I can feel normal, that is, wishing for rain. Thought I'd get out of a business that depended so much on rain when I left the ranch. But am in one now just as sensitive to it as ever—the tractor and implement business.

Hope you have someone calling around with the "Watchtower" and "Awake" magazines regularly now. The news of the future still surpasses in importance that of the past, or even that of the present.—D. Vernon Payne, San Angelo, Texas.

Editor News: I sincerely want to express internal Revenue Service's appreciation and thanks for the splendid cooperation you gave us during the recent income tax filing season.

With your usual liberal assistance in news dissemination, we were again able to achieve an economical and successful taxpayer assistance program. Statistically this year we assisted more taxpayers and devoted 30% fewer man-days to the task.

Our program is a year-round activity, and is designed to keep the public informed on tax matters which are of individual or collective importance. The success of this program depends largely on the continued cooperation of the news disseminating media in New Mexico.

J. P. VIDAL, Director
U. S. Revenue Service.

The Western World, of Bandon, Oregon, points out: "After all the revolutionary changes which have taken place in the advertising world in the last ten years, the newspaper—it is now proven—remains the best medium of advertising."

The proof is found in the lineage figures. As the World adds: "In spite of all the competition from new media, newspaper advertising continues to grow and the public continues to express its confidence in newspapers to an amazing degree."

The newspaper—large or small, daily or weekly—is an established American institution. Nothing has changed that—and nothing will as long as we remain a free nation.

COW-MAN'S CABIN

They were dirt-roofed and homely And rambling and squat. Just logged and mud-dobin' But we loved them a lot. Their latch strings on the out, And the doors wouldn't lock. Get down and walk in. 'Twas "plitter" to knock. Maybe nobody home 'Help yourself, leave a note But the grub was all there. To show you were square. Might be gone a week Stay as long as you please

You know you were welcome As a cool summer breeze. Might be spring before, you'd see him Then he'd grin and declare He'd a give a good horse if he'd only been there. But things have changed In spirit and way That would gladden our hearts In those early days. There wasn't a fence In the world that we knew. The West and the people Were honest and new. And the range is spread out, With the sky for a lid. I'm old, but I'm glad I lived when I did.

E. L. Towley Traffic Fatality in Corona

Lincoln County's third fatal traffic accident occurred within the Corona city limits Tuesday, May 29, about 3 p.m.

The one-car accident took place near the railroad underpass just a few hundred feet north of Corona Motor Company Garage.

The car driven by Eibert L. Townley, 42, Atlanta, Ga., went out of control on the curve, turned over on the road below, and then landed right-side-up in the ditch next to the railroad track.

The woman, owner of the car, Lauran Y. Bunderson, 39, of Deming, was thrown from the car, receiving a broken hip and the wrecked car.

Townley remained in the car, and appeared to be suffering from shock when removed from the wrecked car.

The Corona city ambulance and a Kaiser Traveler with cot placed in back took the injured to Vaughn for first aid.

Townley died the next day after the accident in the Mountainair hospital from a broken neck and internal injuries.

Police listed excessive speed as the cause of the accident.

FREEDOM IS AN ABSOLUTE

Dan Thornton, former governor of Colorado, had some wise words to say to the Oregon Cattlemen's Association. He urged these producers to reject government subsidies. And he made his big point with a simple question: "Do we wish to remain a free enterprise nation or accept socialism?"

There is no real middle ground between these two extremes. "A little bit of socialism" inexorably grows, like live yeast, until we have a whole lot of socialism. Then the individual becomes a robot, responding to the strings pulled by the bosses, who are the politicians and the bureaucrats.

Groups of people may turn to government to help with some temporary problem. But, after the problem has been solved or has changed, government is still right there with its controls and its regulations and its rulebooks.

Moreover, government aid is always subject to the unpredictable winds of political expediency—as vast numbers of farmers must have learned by now. So far, according to all evidence, a majority of livestock producers have been adamantly opposed to looking to government for solutions to their problems. They deserve all credit for that—and they will deserve still greater credit if they steadfastly maintain that position.

Livestock prices, like all prices, rise at one time and fall another. But freedom is an absolute that can't be subjected to variation.—Ind. News

HE PINK WIGNED BIG

A man who discovered the joys of fishing rather late in life became even more insistent than ordinary anglers upon recounting his triumphs to skeptical acquaintances. When these inferred that he was a liar, he bought a pair of scales, installed them in his library and made his friends watch while he actually weighed his fish.

One evening a neighbor rushed in excitedly to borrow the scales. He was back in ten minutes, his face flushed with delight. "Congratulations me, boys!" he cried. "I'm the father of a 24-pound baby boy!"

INSIDE CAPITAL

no concession to the opposition in setting up a new county organization. Chosen for county Demo chairman was Jack Beatty, Simms' treasurer in his first run for governor and one of the palace guard since he has been in office.

Santa Fe county which supported the governor in the May election made no divvy with the opposition but installed an administration organization for the county.

And it may be recalled that it was only last April and early May that the governor was making weekly TV appearances in defense of the controversial points of his administration.

CONVENTION BATTLE IS NOT LIKELY

All this doesn't forecast a battle royal in the Santa Fe convention. If the governor decides to stand on his record the chances are that opponents will stand silently by with the implication that they will let him run his own race. It's hardly thinkable that he would turn his back on his own record and succumb to the demands of his intra-party opponents.

The most likely course seems to be one of blaming the legislature for the unpopular acts and promising further study of the subject and maybe modification of the laws.

The problem is a difficult one which is solved satisfactorily will indeed establish Simms as a political strategist of unusual talent.

LIFESPAN OF INDIA'S ELEPHANTS ONLY 60 YEARS

Three feet high at birth, Indian elephants stand eight to ten feet at maturity. Despite legends to the contrary, they seldom live more than 60 years says the National Geographic Society.

The Indian beasts carry a single fingerlike projection on the end of the trunk, while their African cousins have two. The African's tusks are heavier. Trained in ancient times for warfare, the African is not widely domesticated today.

Give Spring Cleanup To Electric Motors

When you do your spring clean-up, be sure to include your electric motors, especially the one on the evaporator cooler on top of the house. Along with the motor clean-up job, check the installation, the load on the motor, and lubricate it.

One of the symptoms of a dirty motor is overheating. To determine if a motor is heating, lay a hand on the outside case. If you can't hold your hand on the motor for at least 10 seconds, stop the motor and locate the cause of overheating. To clean a motor, use a clean, dry cloth and a brush—never an oily cloth. Clean the outside of the motor and the ventilation openings. Don't blow dirt inside the frame and don't allow grit to get in the oil holes. If the shade of the motor appears to be especially dirty disassemble and clean it. A clean cloth and brush dampened with carbon tetrachloride is best for removing oil and gum.

On motors with a commutator and brushes, clean the brushes with carbon tetrachloride. The commutator may be cleaned the same way or with fine sandpaper. Do not use emery cloth, as emery dust will cause a short circuit.

When checking the installation, see that the motor is securely fastened in place, that it is in line with the driver machine, that the belt is not worn and has correct tension, and that the driver machine (cooling fan) is in good repair and well lubricated.

Lubrication is very important for electric motors. Too much or too little are both harmful. Follow the manufacturer's directions when oiling the motor. Oftentimes, the correct weight of oil and how often to oil can be found on the motor name plate. If no instructions are available, lubricate sparingly three times a year with SAE No. 10 oil for motors up to 5 horsepower. Use SAE 20 for 2.3 and 5 horsepower motors.

After cleaning, oiling and checking, the motor should be ready for use and will give you another season of trouble-free operation. Remember, if that was the cooler you were working on, don't forget to remove the pads and wash them out. Also clean out the dirt and scale that has accumulated in the bottom of the cooler so that it won't clog or wear out the circulation pump.

The beaver, once mercilessly hunted to near-extinction, is making a comeback, says the National Geographic Society. Lustrous beaver fur lured men into the remote corners of America. Trappers, exploring distant wildernesses, opened rich lands for farmers and miners. Dealers in pelts amassed fortunes.
