The new Nike Drive-in Theatre opens in Carrizozo this Friday with the first showing in New Mexico of the film "Howlaway Junction." It is a story of love and adventure, produced by MGM, featuring Ava Gardner and Stewart Granger.

The Nike Drive-in, located on Highway 380, 1/2 mile west of Carrizozo, is equipped with the latest design in cinemascope screen and magnetic sound. Full concessions will be on the grounds. Since the beginning of construction six weeks ago, the theatre has gone up rapidly, with the following taking part in construction of the projection room, rest rooms, concessions, ticket booth, fence and parking area: Al Seay, Frank Vega, the Withers Brothers and Louis Gallegos.

Materials were supplied by Nickels Building & Hardware and by Big Jo Lumber Co. The Skeltons, proprietors of the Lyric Theatre and the new Nike Drive-in, announce that the Lyric will be closed on one night this week, Friday, for the opening of the Nike. Other than this Friday night, shows are scheduled at the Lyric as usual. Stout Jackson of Robstown, Texas, designed and installed the 30 x 60 curved and sloped screen. The sound and projection equipment is by Hardin Theatre Supply Co. of Dallas.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Nickels flew over Tularosa, and the Rulodo Valley early Tuesday morning distributing handbills announcing Friday's opening of the Nike. A shower of handbills fell over Corona and Capitan Wednesday and over Carrizozo Thursday.

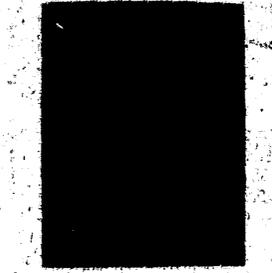

"Howlaway Junction" was released for previewing June 8. This exciting story took two years to film by MGM in Pakistan.

Ramblin' Around Lincoln County

Tape Recorded Interviews With People Who Helped Build Lincoln County

FLOY SKINNER

My name is Floy Skinner. I was born on the Bonita in 1887. My grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Bourne, came to Lincoln County in 1880. My grandmother's maiden name was Julia Fulton and she was a descendant of the inventor of the steam engine. They were originally from Virginia, but in 1869 they left there and came to Texas where they lived a few years. He had been a Confederate soldier in the Civil War, but he was wounded and after the war he lost all holdings, which was a big plantation in Virginia.

After they heard about the gold strike in Lincoln County my grandfather rigged up a two-wheel cart with a pair of oxen and he and his family, which consisted of his wife, five children and two hound dogs started west. They landed in Lincoln County in the fall of 1880.

In the following year my father, J. H. Skinner and my mother came to New Mexico as far as Lincoln County. They landed on the Bonita the 21st day of October, 1881. My mother told me it was one month to the day after Billy the Kid was killed.

Both my grandfather and my father built their cabins at Angus when they first arrived, but later they moved up the Bonita and homesteaded just below what is now Bonita dam. In the first few years my grandfather was here, he spent most of his time hunting and prospecting. He was a great bear hunter and killed a good many bear the first few years he was here. Then he devoted the balance of his years, which were several until he became disabled, to prospecting for gold he never found.

My father hauled supplies for Bonita City, which was a rising little mining town at that time. He did his first team trucking from Las Vegas, N. M. the nearest railroad station. It would take 11 days to make the round trip. Later they built a road to Carthage, and he did his trading in Carthage and San Antonio. During the years they lived on the Bonita they did most anything they could to make a living, but in 1885 my father and three uncles put in a sawmill. It was one of the first sawmills in that part of the country, and was located three miles below Bonita dam in what is called today Mill Canyon. My uncles names were Cleveland, Robert and William Bourne. There were also three girls in their family. Out of this family one survives, Mrs. Chloe White who lives in Albuquerque.

The sawmill was operated for a few years and they sold and traded considerable lumber. In one deal my father traded for ten head of Longhorn cattle. These cattle we kept on the homestead. We milked the cows and put up butter and killed them for beef. From that day until now the Skinner family has at all times owned and handled a few cattle.

Along about 1884 my father moved to Nogal and took charge of a mercantile store for P. G. Peters. We lived there a year and in 1885 my father was put in charge of a farm at Angus and we lived there a year. I was five years old at that time and that was my first chance to go to school. There was a lady by the name of Miss Pool teaching school at Angus and I went to her school that year. When we moved back up to the homestead, I went to school there. My second teacher was Miss Armstrong. The third was Miss Maggie Williamson. Then there was T. J. Griffin and then Miss Uta Gilmore, now Mrs. Paul Meyer. I went to school to her one term and to W. A. Robinson two terms, and these were short terms. Then I went from there to a subscription school on Nogal Mesa, taught by Miss Lyman.

A subscription school meant that the parents donated the money and built a little school house and each would donate $2.50 up to $10 a term, or maybe one family would board the teacher and others would donate enough money to keep the school going. After that I went to school in Nogal under Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dudley. In 1901 I moved over to Capitan and went to school that year and the next in the old high school building which is torn down now. W. L. Bradford was superintendent. In 1903 I went to Roswell to the military school; also in 1904, which ended my schooling.

When we lived on the farm we made almost everything we used. My father was in need of a hay baler, so he decided he would make one. He made it from materials we had from the sawmill, such as oak timber. But he was short one thing and that was a large spring to pull the plunger of the horse drawn baler. He wrote to the Roswell Trading Company and told them what he needed. They wrote back they could get the spring for him but he'd have to come and get it.

So my father rigged me up with a wagon with a chuck box and horse feed, one good horse and a mustang and gave me three dollars and a quarter and started me out for Roswell. I was about 13 years old then. The road was rough and full of rocks and it took me three days to get to Roswell. I stayed there overnight and part of the next day. While in town I met a friend, Perry Humphrey, who was making the trip to the Frank Coe ranch with an extra horse. We decided to make the return trip together and because he had a good work animal we hitched his by the side of my good horse and led the mustang by the side of the other work horse.

We got along pretty well the first day and along about sunset camped overnight just this side of the Sunset Ranch on the Hondo. The next day the road ran right alongside a deep canal or water ditch. We had the mustang tied on the side next to the ditch. She was a good animal, but if anything ever touched her heels she would go wild. Well, she shied at this ditch and caught her hind legs behind the singletree on the wagon. She cut loose with her hind feet and kicked out the front endgate. Perry and I tumbled over backwards from the spring seat into the wagon bed to escape the flying timber. While we did this the mare broke loose and tumbled off into the ditch on her head and rolled over in the water. We jumped out and got the end of the rope that was broken and we pulled her head out of the water and finally got her up. Then I led her down the ditch about a quarter of a mile and found a place I could get her up. You see, we had wrecks on the highway in those days as we do now, only they were not so serious. We continued on up the Hondo. Perry went on his way and I came home.

The spring on the hay baler worked all right. We baled our hay and our neighbors hay and I think we went over to Mr. LaMay's ranch and baled his hay. My father made a model of the hay baler and patented it and later made a trip to Dallas to try to sell it, but was not successful. He also invented a machine that ran with springs to use for pumping water. He tried to perfect a vacuum cleaner that used the machine for its power. It seemed like he was always working on some idea. The hay baler worked for years and when my father sold the farm to the railroad in 1907 the old baler was left there.

Magnetite Corp. To Start Shipping

Preparations are being made by the Magnetite Products Corp. to get its product "Magco" from Lincoln county to the market. Starting around July 15, ten truckers will be employed to haul Magco from Capitan to the railroad at Carrizozo where the product will be shipped in open cars.

Magco is a heavy ore aggregate that is used for coating on pipelines for underwater use and for transmission lines. Pipe used for this purpose has to weigh 4.25 times as much as water.

The Magnetite company has about 25 men working at the present time in an open pit mining operation near Capitan. Power shovels are being used and special dumper machines haul the ore to the primary crusher. It then goes through a reduction crusher, cone crusher and through screens of various sizes.

Magco is described to be the result of a fairly new process. It was formerly produced in Canada and the Magnetite Products Corp. is said to be the only concern in this country making the product at the present time.

Paul Brenton, president and general manager of the company, and Parr Meritman, secretary-treasurer, are from Florence, Colo. It is their plan to expand their shipping to straight iron ore on a large enough carload quantity to make it pay.

Margie Clouse Resigns Position at Bank

Upon her return she will become bookkeeper at the Carrizozo hospital.

An addition is being made to the kitchen at the Camp Meeting grounds on Nogal Mesa. It will provide facilities for dishwashing, which previously was done outside, rain or shine. The work is in charge of Mr. Young of the Bonita.

Many Friends Call During Open House

Relatives and friends of Dr. and Mrs. P. M. Shaver gathered at their home in Carrizozo last Saturday afternoon when the couple held open house on the occasion of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Mrs. Paul Wrye of Dallas was not able to be present, but she and her husband and family expect to arrive for a visit with her parents the first of July.

As an anniversary gift to their parents their children, arriving Friday, installed an air conditioner. Mrs. Shaver was also presented an orchid and the couple received many other lovely gifts. Refreshments of punch and generous portions of the delicious anniversary cake were served the guests. Many pictures were taken of the happy anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Shaver and the remaining family.

Grasshopper Crop Begins to Hatch

County Agent Ralph Dunlap states that grasshoppers are beginning to hatch in various parts of the county. "Now is the time to be especially watchful of these range pests," he says. "The local showmen we have had are quite often enough to hatch the grasshoppers, although they have done the grass very little good." He continues:

"In looking for grasshoppers, you will have to look closely, as they are very small and likely to be unnoticed until they get larger. Be especially sure to investigate the low places, such as canyons and arroyos, as that is likely to be the first place they hatch.

"The grasshopper spray control project is still available to ranchers if they feel the area warrants it. The cost to the rancher is about 20 cents an acre, with a minimum area of at least 10,000 acres in a block."

4-H Leaders Attend Scott Able Camp

Those attending 4-H camp at Scott Able last week, June 12-14, with Ralph Dunlap were Laura Lea Keith, Clara Nell Burns, Mrs. J. E. McKnight and Judy, Mrs. Grady Eldridge and Ronnie, Mary F. and Howard Shanks.

Members from Chaves, De Baca and Otero counties were also in the group. Activities included nature hikes, handicraft projects, square dancing and various games. On Friday, Mrs. Marie Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Dunlap and Wayne and Lois attended a board meeting of the Southern New Mexico 4-H Club Foundation at Scott Able and were overnight guests at the camp. They returned Saturday.

Town Board Approves Road and Utilities for Subdivision in Carrizozo

Providing final agreement is reached with the FHA and VA housing authorities, a minimum of fifteen new homes will be built this year. This information was given the Carrizozo town council at a meeting last Thursday night with C. L. Cunningham, builder, of Midland, Texas. Mr. Cunningham told the council that FHA approval to the residential tract would not be given until a road was improved from E Avenue to the housing site of 20 acres, including the old ball park. He also said the site would have to be assured of water, power and sewerage.

All street improvements within the tract would be at the builder's expense, Mr. Cunningham said. At the request of the council, he agreed to put up 25% of the cost of the street improvement, the amount to be refunded when he shows the trustee firm contracts that 15 houses have been sold.

The trustees took under consideration the type of all-weather road to be built and will decide which of three routes to use, leading from E Avenue to the subdivision.

The tract has been platted for 74 home sites. Mr. Cunningham stated his belief there is need for 50 houses this year. There will be no through streets, thus slowing up traffic on account of children. Streets in the tract will be paved, sidewalks built and top soil brought in for landscaping, he said. Provisions are made for a children's playground in one part of the tract. "We estimate," he said, "that the subdivision will add a half million dollars to your tax rolls next year."

In other business, the trustees voted to spend money from the recreation fund to build two tennis courts on school property west of the old grade school. These courts would be laid out by side so that they will be useful for other sports, such as roller skating and volleyball.

The recommendation for this expenditure was made to the trustees by Mrs. A. N. Spencer, on behalf of the newly appointed recreation committee for the Carrizozo School district. The trustees also voted to hire a recreation director for two months, at $250 a month. It was suggested that a program of summer recreation be started as soon as possible.

The trustees also voted after discussion to extend a water main from 17th down E Avenue to Aspen St.; also to give D. G. Eannun's trailer court water and sewerage at a later date when a contractor arrives to put

Rickman Explains Payment Method In Soil Bank Plan

Secretary of Agriculture Benson has authorized implementation of the Soil Bank in New Mexico by issuing preliminary eligibility requirements for farmers to participate in the Acreage Reserve phase of the Soil Bank. H. Mark Rickman, chairman of State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee in Albuquerque, announced today. The Acreage Reserve Program provides for the duration of the program which is established for 1956-57-58-59.

Payments will be authorized for reducing production of wheat, cotton, corn, peanuts, rice, and tobacco. The program is voluntary except participation on the Soil Bank requirements for gaining price support on corn. To be eligible, a producer must reduce below his farm acreage allotment established for the 1956 and subsequent crop years. The over-all limit on the cost of the program is $750 million a year, a specified maximum limit for each commodity which will be announced by the Secretary at a later date.

Under the 1956 Acreage Reserve farmers who are eligible to take part in the program may earn payments in connection with one or more of the commodities specified in the law by complying with the basic rules of eligibility established in keeping with the law. Acreage Reserve must first be representative of the land used for the crop; second, result in the harvesting of acres of the basic crop less than the farm allotment; and third, acreage must not be grazed, cut for hay, or cropped for the entire year. In addition, noxious weeds must also be controlled on the reserved acres in order to participate in the Acreage Reserve. Farmers must comply with all acreage allotments established for the farm.

The 1956 program contains specific provisions for payments to eligible farmers to participate this year. Any farmer who complies with the provisions of the law will be eligible for payment. (Continued on Back Page)

NO NEED TO WAIT ON WELFARE CHANGE

SANTA FE, June 20 — The Democratic platform proposal to raise the age from 17 to 21 of children required to assist indigent parents could be put in effect at once if the Democratic majority on the welfare board so choose. The board has a wide range of authority in enforcement of the law and could eliminate the demand on the youngsters by regulation.

EX-LEGISLATOR SUES ON 60 MPH LIMIT

Former legislator LeRoy Wise of Hobbs who tried to get the Demo nomination for governor in 1954 is challenging the legality of the 60 mph speed limit. Wise, tagged by police for driving 70, recalled that he had voted for a law in the legislature of 1953 which set the daytime speed limit at 70 miles an hour. It was the highway commission that left the limit at 60. "Wise has taken his suit to district court although the same law does say that the highway commission can change the rates if justified by an engineering and traffic investigation.

STATE PLANNING BIGGER PENSIONS

The state board of finance in working out the spending plans for the next 12 months is considering a state contribution of 75% of workers' salaries for retirement. The figure, presently 5%, is being increased on the possibility of workers voting to bring themselves under federal social security benefits as well as the state pension plan. If adopted it would increase the maximum retirement pay for workers to about $350 a month.

CANDIDATE RUNS AND WORKS

Robert E. Martinez, Demo candidate for sheriff of San Miguel county in what is regarded as a close race with Republican Fidel Paybal has been returned to the bureau of revenue payroll at $305 a month. He had resigned in March shortly after filing in the primary for the nomination. That doesn't seem quite fair. If Martinez has to work for the state he won't have time to make a proper campaign.

GRANTS WATER BAN WORRIES COMMISSION

Some members of the economic development commission and also of the EDC's big advisory commission are pulling their hair over State Engineer Steve Reynolds' creation of a water conservancy district in the Grants area just at the time that huge water consuming uranium ore mills were about to be cut up in the area. The ban against drilling more wells in the Grants water basin created by Reynolds May 21 is regarded by the critics as a block that may seriously retard the state's uranium development. Land Commissioner Johnny Walker said at the first of the week that he also was "seriously concerned" and would seek a conference with Reynolds on the subject. Ore valued at more than $100 million has been located in the region but isn't worth a dime until it goes through mill processing. If the basin order stands mills locating in the area would be required to purchase land with water rights at a cost that could be prohibitive.

LIQUOR INSPECTOR JOBS NOT TO BE FILLED

Revenue Commissioner Mike Gallegos said he did not plan to fill two vacancies in the liquor inspector squad, a keen disappointment to scores of politicians who have been after the jobs. Ernest Peralta of Socorro was shifted out of a liquor post to a school tax job to avoid any conflict that might come up with his being Socorro Demo chairman. The second vacancy is that made by letting out Canute Martinez of Rio Arriba last year. Still working are four inspectors.

ALBUQUERQUE POSES BIG SINECURE PROBLEM

Some of the top people in the Democratic organization have been expressing concern about the party's ten legislative candidates in Albuquerque. Of the nine with opposition in the primary only one of those favored by the administration was elected. (Continued on Back Page)

GARDEN HOSE "DON'TS"
 Your hose is a valuable piece of gardening equipment. Experience has shown that it's unwise to allow the couplings at either end to drag (when threaded connectors are banged out of shape, they won't connect). . . unwise to bend the hose (bends weaken the materials, make for breaks). With proper care, a good hose should last and last.

"I OWE ME." This approach to the business of saving money, say many who have tried it, can help make a bank account balance grow at a satisfying rate. When payday rolls around, you automatically set aside so much for the utilities bill; so much, if you rent, to pay the landlord—so much to pay each of your regular fixed expenses. Why not earmark a definite sum to pay yourself—to deposit in your savings account with us? Every pay day presents an opportunity to build up your reserve of money-in-the-bank. Maybe thinking of that opportunity as an obligation will help you to seize it.

WALK DOWN ANY STREET (any typical "Main Street," that is), and you may see the hardware dealer getting a haircut at the barber's; the barber buying nails at the hardware store—or both men at the bank, getting change, perhaps, or cashing checks. What more have you seen? A picture of the "economic interdependence" of a community's citizens — and the dependence of all of them on the services provided by their bank. The bank is indeed an essential part of American life.

ON A MARCH WITH VILLA

(This is the conclusion of the column on the march with Pancho Villa, which G. Lynn Hatch of Lordsburg, his brother-in-law, Charles D. Turley, and James Whipple made as teamsters in the fall of 1915 from Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, to Naco, Sonora.)

On Saturday, the Americans had gone up town by the quarter. The street was full of soldiers. Hatch was standing near Villa when one of his generals rode up and asked if Villa would like to try out his horse. Villa mounted the general's beautiful black horse, rode out to the street along the boundary—the middle of the street—dashed up and down the Mexican side, and occasionally across to the American side for the benefit of spectators. The horse seemed to be perfectly reined, but when the general asked Villa about his mount Villa replied the horse was poorly reined.

While Villa was maneuvering on the horse, one of his men standing near Hatch said to another soldier: "What a wonderful man! One could easily give his life for such a man."

Villa and his bodyguard left Naco on Sunday morning. The Americans now were dealing with General Rodriguez, next in command to Villa. Monday morning Rodriguez ordered the Americans to report to him at the quarter. They hooked up their teams and drove there. Rodriguez told them to load wounded men on the wagons and haul them to a hospital in the American mining town of Cananea in Mexico.

The Americans asked for money to buy horse feed and some clothing, and Rodriguez gave them $100 in U. S. currency. They crossed the line about leaving their teams in the street. After buying shirts and overalls for their Mexican helpers on the march, Whipple turned to Hatch and Turley and asked them what they wanted.

Enough money to get to El Paso, they replied. They were taken over by U. S. Army soldiers when they crossed the line and were turned over to immigration officers after they refused to return to Mexico.

Immigration officers told the Americans they could not put them back into Mexico but that the Mexican boys with them could not stay in the U. S.

Whipple hadn't given up hope that he could get at least one of his outfits across the line. He told Rodriguez it would be necessary to drive into the U. S. to get feed and provisions. Although Rodriguez gave permission, a Mexican guard stopped Whipple. He reported the guard's action to Rodriguez and the latter said to get a delivery wagon to haul the provisions to the line and transfer them. Whipple gave up, came back to the American side about, and the three boarded the night train for El Paso.

Villa abandoned his forces in Naco, and the men scattered for home. Rodriguez got back to Casas Grandes with a few pieces of artillery and some soldiers. Turley's black mares helped to pull the artillery back and were recovered in Dublin. In Casas Grandes as a result of spite over dissension between him and another general, Rodriguez filled the muzzles of the artillery with dynamite and set them off. Cannon barrel pieces were blown for blocks, Hatch said.

After Villa left Naco he moved into the mountains west of Chihuahua City and spent the winter there. In the spring of 1916 he raided Columbus.

Villa's army not only scattered after reaching Naco, but his band school disappeared as well. This had been a teen-age project organized by Villa to keep occupied the boys who had been left behind when the women and children were sent to Juarez from Casas Grandes. Hatch said he didn't think any of the boys were over 14. They were too small to carry rifles but not too small to walk from Casas Grandes to Naco. Their drums were tied on the backs of the wagons. A quick stop and a wagon tongue would ram into a drum and smash it. By the time the column reached Naco there wasn't a whole drum left.

THE LAW WEST OF THE PECOS

On May 31, 1901, the Capitan Progress, a weekly newspaper, printed the following story about Judge Roy Bean:

Judge Roy Bean, of "Law West of the Pecos" fame," added another chapter to his career and a tourist is stricken with nervous prostration that promises to last him until he returns to Massachusetts.

The Law West of the Pecos went through the Pullman car and gave all the passengers a smell of his revolver.

The judge was on one of his tri-weekly "trains" yesterday and when the train stopped at Langtry, Texas for dinner at 6 o'clock last night he paid little attention to the passengers. Two fresh young fellows from the far east wanted a drink and went into Judge Bean's saloon. The judge was resting easy and at first did not want to wait on them. One of the men wanted a drink of whiskey but the old man said he had none. The passenger then offered him a $2 bill to pay for a bottle of beer. Bean refused the bill, saying that it was not money and he would take no paper in payment for his goods. The other fellow had to change the bill for him and he got the beer.

In the meantime the other stranger had engaged the judge in conversation and the man who bought the beer went out without paying for it. Presently the judge noticed that his man was gone and taking his 45 revolver from the counter went

Pioneer Residents Recall Early Days

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Bullion of Iron Springs, Yavapai county, Ariz., recently celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. The couple were married at the Lincoln County Courthouse in Lincoln.

Miss Mary Latham, as her name was then, could speak no Spanish and the probate judge who was to marry them could not speak English. An interpreter was found. His charge for interpreting was the same as the fee of the judge, $5, a small fortune in those days. The courthouse was the same from which Billy the Kid escaped and the bullet holes of the shots he fired were in evidence at the time of the ceremony. However, no matter how wild the place was, the judge did a very good job, for both the participants are both still very happy.

Mrs. Bullion is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Latham and they lived in Nogal, which was a 35-mile ride through the rough country to their home. Mr. Bullion was a tophand on the ranches around about and can tell tall tales of the happenings during the pioneer days in southern New Mexico.

In 1930, after the birth of their three children, the couple decided to come to Arizona and moved to Seligman. Later they lived in Mayer and then came to Prescott in 1940. All those years, Mr. Bullion was a ranchhand, but after coming to Arizona he took up mining. He is now a watchman at the Yavapai County Garage.

Children of the couple were home for the anniversary date, but the son, R. L. Bullion, Ferndale, Wash., was unable to be present for the open house held Sunday. Other descendants of the couple are their daughters Mrs. Ida Bodine, Truth or Consequences, N. M., and Mrs. Alma Richwine of Prescott; six grandchildren, Daniel, Tommy, Wanda and Charles Bullion; Mrs. Leonard Rogers of Hurley, N. M.; four great-grandchildren, Ava, Dennis and Bandy Rogers and Dan Bodine.

* ABOUT PEOPLE

Larry Simon of Green Tree is visiting the Jack Elliotts at Odessa, Texas.

The "Doc" Delaneys, Ruidoso, visited in Roswell the past week end.

Jim and Eddy Wimberly were business visitors to Roswell on Saturday.

The R. H. Forresters of Wheeler, Texas stopped by for a visit with friends in Ruidoso on their way to El Paso last week.

When he went into the tourist car he shoved the gun in the face of every passenger he met, pending investigations. Finding that he was mistaken, he passed on until he found the right party. Pulling the trigger, the judge poked the young cannon into the face of the man who had beat him and said: "Thirty-five cents or I press the button!" So anxious was the stranger to comply with the demand of the "court" that he offered the judge a dollar, not wishing to wait to find the exact change. The judge changed the money and turning to the startled passengers said: "That's the kind of an hombre I am. I am the law west of the Pecos."

Booklet Gives Help On Gas Tax Refunds

S. P. Vidal, district director for Internal Revenue Service, announces availability of a 15-page IRS booklet designed to help farmers file claims for refund of Federal tax paid on gasoline for farming purposes.

Entitled "Publication 308," the free instruction book explains in simple language how to claim a refund of the tax on gasoline used during the 6-month period January 1 through June 30, 1956.

It also tells how the new law relieves farmers from the Federal excise taxes on diesel and special motor fuels.

Refund claims are to be filed between July 1 and October 1.

"Publication 308" and gas tax refund forms may be obtained from the Albuquerque District IRS office, Albuquerque, or from county agricultural agents, according to Mr. Vidal.

FORD sets 500-mile record at Indianapolis Speedway

Again proves nobody outperforms Ford

... dramatic demonstration of the kind of performance and roadability that makes all your driving more fun in a Ford!

A Ford V-8 hurtled across the brick and asphalt surface of tough and testing Indianapolis Speedway... whirling through the tight turns and flashing over the straight stretches... to set a mark that no stock car ever reached before!

Previous to Ford's record run, no other stock car had gone even one lap at Indianapolis at 100 m.p.h., but one of Ford's laps was timed at the electrifying speed of 113.7 m.p.h. And Ford averaged over 107 m.p.h. for the full five hundred miles... close to the average set by the extremely costly, specially-built race which won the Memorial Day '500!

Ford fully realizes that the waker of claims and counter claims about "racing victories" (many of them completely contradictory) must be confusing and disillusioning to the public. Ford ran this race against time, over the true "Classic" distance and at the most famous track in America, in order to dispel this cloud of doubt and disbelief and prove that no one outperforms Ford!

Pete de Paolo, leader of the team of drivers that piloted the winning Ford, states fully: "No other stock car could have equalled this performance!" And Pete de Paolo should know, for he was the first driver to win the "500" Classic with a better than 100 m.p.h. average. And now he comes back with a group of drivers to establish a stock car record with the great '56 Ford!

Ford wrote this new mark large and bold in the record books. And the whole Ford did the trick. From the hood-hugging throbbing horsepower to the road-hugging rear end, Ford demonstrated that it has what it takes to make your driving more enjoyable. Convince yourself that driving a Ford can be real fun. Test drive a '56 Ford. There's a set of keys waiting for you, so come in and see us soon.

Cattlemen to Organize Performance Ass'n

New Mexico cattle producers are in the process of organizing a beef cattle performance association, according to W. E. Flint, extension beef cattle specialist at New Mexico A&M College.

The new group will be known as the New Mexico Beef Cattle Performance Association, and will be affiliated with the American Beef Cattle Registry Ass'n. The American Association was recently organized on the basis of knowledge gained from New Mexico's "Weight-for-Age" program, Flint said.

Purpose of the organization will be similar to the DIFA program carried on by the dairy industry—to evaluate animals on production and progeny.

Flint said that a working committee consisting of: George Ellis, Bell Ranch; Glenn Burris, Albuquerque; Bill Littrell, Philmont Ranch; Carl Butt, Clayton; and Jack Copeland, Nora Vista, have met to draw up the organization's constitution and by-laws. A general organization meeting is scheduled for June 15 at Clayton.

This marks about the 18th year that the dairy industry has celebrated Dairy Month and about the 5th year that USDA has supported this industry's effort to help move surplus milk.

STORED BLANKETS SHOULD BE CLEAN

Every homemaker wants to put her wool blankets away for the summer in a perfectly clean condition. The non-agitation method of washing woolens will keep them in good shape for storing.

First of all, if the binding is excessively soiled, brush a solution of one tablespoon of low sudsing synthetic detergent and two cups of hot water into the binding.

A bucket of suds is not necessary in the non-agitation method. Use from two-thirds to three-fourths cup of the detergent in about 10 gallons of 100 to 120 degree water.

The wash water should be agitated to dissolve the detergent before the blanket is added. Soak for 15 or 20 minutes. A blanket should be turned once.

Two rinses with a five-minute soak period for each in lukewarm water is the next step once the blankets being turned once during each soak period. A machine wringer can be used if the tension can be adjusted to a loose position.

Placing the blanket over two clothes lines in a shady place or on a large flat area such as a protected table or floor area is the suggested way to dry it.

Loosened nap can be removed by brushing both sides of the blanket in both directions with a stiff bristled brush when it is damp dry or completely dry.

Insecticides Effective For Roach Control

Cockroaches are probably the most disagreeable insects which invade a house. They destroy food and fabrics and spread filth and disease. If they spend any length of time in a house, a distinct roach odor develops. It's no disgrace to have roaches, but it is a disgrace to keep them.

Cockroaches are present in some places all year, but during the summer they become very active, and any house may harbor several. Once they get a foothold and start laying eggs, they really become a problem. Because cockroaches are flat, they can slither under doors and windows and through the smallest cracks. Many roaches come into houses from sewers and trash piles, but many are carried into homes inside grocery boxes, potato sacks, and other containers which may be moved into the house from an infested store or warehouse.

For every roach you find in your house, there may be 25 that you haven't seen. One roach is bad enough, because if it's an adult female she can lay eggs which will result in a total infestation of 400,000 roaches in one year.

At the first sight or sign of a cockroach in your house, start a clean-up campaign inside and out. Don't confine your house-cleaning to the kitchen only, for there's a species of roach for every room in your home. Clean thoroughly, especially in dark, damp places and behind stoves, refrigerators, and water heaters. Dispose of all trash and any spilled garbage in the vicinity of your house and yard. Then apply dieldrin or chlordane inside and out.

Use 5% chlordane or 2% dieldrin dust outside around the foundation of the house and under shrubs and trees near the house where it's damp and protected. Insecticide sprayed around the house is also effective. Inside the house use dieldrin or chlordane in a water emulsion. Apply the insecticide with a paint brush or spray gun to baseboards in the kitchen, bathroom, and closets. Spray behind the water heater, refrigerator, automatic washer and range. Spray around pipes and openings for pipe and conduit under the kitchen sink, bathroom wash basin, etc. When you apply insecticide to food-storage space, remove all the food and shelf paper. Apply dieldrin or chlordane to the shelves, wait until the liquid dries, and then put in new shelf paper and then the food containers.

Mix emulsions according to the container. Follow all directions and precautions exactly.

Touring Editor Praises State

Editor, News:
I thought you might want to see some of the publicity resulting from the travel editors' tour. The following was printed in the Chicago American May 27 and was written by Herbert H. Beck, travel editor.—Joseph A. Bursey, director, New Mexico State Tourist Bureau.

New Mexico's In Bloom Now

By HERBERT H. BECK

We have just had the good fortune to visit New Mexico. There we met spring—in full flower. Everywhere we went, in lower and medium altitudes, gardens were ablaze with giant roses, tremendous poppies, tall delphiniums, and many other colorful flowers.

Lilac, forsythia, and spruce shrubs were in blossom. Early though it was, some of the desert cacti were flowering and we enjoyed taking pictures back-dropped by the ever-present mountains.

With a group of travel writers, we toured New Mexico under the guidance of the New Mexico Motor Club. Middle May is an excellent time to see this great state of mountains, plateaus and deserts, for color contrasts are nearly as great as in the fall color season.

VISIT UNIVERSITY

Our first day was spent in the Albuquerque area. We toured the University of New Mexico campus, its buildings styled in interesting pueblo architecture, and enjoyed the archeological display in the administration building.

Next stop was the top of Sandia mountain.

Here, 11,000 feet up, is the highest television tower in the world, but, important to the traveler, is the view of the Rio Grande river valley—a 30-mile scene of plateau, river, and the mountain ridge to the west.

Returning down the mountain, we looked at Sandia Cave, high up in a sheer cliff, where the bones of the Sandia man were found. This evidence of habitation dates back 10,000 years.

A bit farther north, we drove through the Santo Domingo Indian pueblo, an adobe town headquarters of the Santo Domingo tribe. These Indians are extremely clanish and their religious ceremonies, which take place in a kiva or lodge room in the town plaza, have never been witnessed by the white man.

Not far off to the Coronado state monuments where archeologists have uncovered and restored one of these kivas. Entry is from the roof by ladder. The walls are covered with paintings of religious symbolism and it is interesting to hear the story of the southwestern Indian's early life.

RECEPTION BY SANTA FE

Our Santa Fe Railway friends gave us a reception that evening at Albuquerque's Alvarado hotel. We dined at La Placita in the "old town" section. This restaurant serves outstanding Mexican dinners in a very old adobe building fronting on a plaza which dates back to 1794.

Our tour next day took us eastward on Route 66 and then south to Carrizozo. Just north of that town one of the last great eruptions took place.

This black lava is one-and-a-half miles wide and about 80 miles long. After thousands of years the sills and crevices still have razor-sharp edges and the cooling of the bubbles is still apparent—a fantastic sight!

On Route 230, in the midst of the Lincoln National Forest, we stopped at the tiny town of Lincoln, made famous by Billy the Kid.

The old courthouse where Billy the Kid was imprisoned in 1881 is a state monument. Here, too, is a Spanish-dorreon (fort) and other buildings of historical interest.

We spent the evening at Ruidoso. This resort town is high in the Sierra Blanca Mountains. They have room for 10,000 visitors in lodges, motels, and cottages, flanking a beautiful stream.

It is an area greatly favored by west Texans who come here each season to escape the heat and enjoy a mountain vacation. Ruidoso Downs race track has become a great center for quarter-horse racing.

Quite room for full maturity without crowding. For example, small-headed and leaf-type lettuce should be thinned to about two plants per foot of row. This large-headed lettuce varieties and cabbage to from 8 to 12 inches apart. Carrots, beets, turnips and pumpkins are thinned to spacings of one to two inches in the row.

Thinings are not always wanted. One young beets at best ground. Transplant lettuce, cabbage, tomatoes, pepper and eggplant to other rows and give your plants a maximum planting to distance ratio.

Some Poisonous Plants Affecting Range Livestock

By IVAN WATSON
Extension Animal Husbandman
New Mexico A&M College

When animals are allowed free choice of forage they usually select the more desirable plants and avoid those which are toxic. Hungry animals often feed on whatever is available, including poisonous plants, instead of selecting the better forage. When poisonous plants are harvested with hay or their seeds become mixed with grain, it is difficult for animals to separate the good feed from the toxic material. There is a great variation in the toxicity of poisonous plants and in the amounts necessary to cause injury or death. Some act as acute poisons while others must be eaten over a considerable period of time to produce harmful results.

The most effective method of eliminating losses from poisonous plants is the eradication of such plants from pastures or ranges where losses occur. Plowing and cultivating will usually accomplish complete eradication on farm land and should be done before such plants produce seed. Where eradication of poisonous plants is impractical, it may be necessary to work out a system of pasture and range management that will permit the use of the range without causing excessive losses.

When pastures or ranges have been stocked to full capacity during normal years and no reduction in the number of livestock is made during dry years, it would be advisable to supplement the usual forage with other roughage or concentrates to avoid losses from poisonous plants. Some study should be given to classes of animals utilizing the range. Some plants may be poisonous to cattle and not to sheep and vice versa.

It is desirable to know whether the substance that produces the symptoms in animals poisoned by the plants is an alkaloid, a glucoside, or whether it belongs to some other category. Knowledge of this sort leads to more rational treatment of the affected animals.

Some of the common plants in New Mexico producing alkaloid poisoning are jarkspura, both the tall and low species. These plants appear attractive to cattle because of the pleasant acidity of the leaves and they are refreshing in hot weather. The lupines, which belong to the legume family, fall in this classification. Some are toxic and others are not. Their toxicity may depend on soil analysis. Another group of the alkaloid containing plants of importance in New Mexico is death camas. The more common name for death is wild onion, of which there are several species.

Plants producing glucoside poisoning are divided into two groups—those producing hydrocyanic acid or prussic acid, and saponins. The more common plants in New Mexico producing prussic acid poisoning are wild chokecherry, sorghums, sudan, Johnson grass, arrow grass, and suckleya. The sorghums, sudan and Johnson grass may produce prussic acid only when they have been stunted in their growth from drought, frost or other causes. Arrow grass is only slightly toxic when growing and the toxicity becomes greater close to maturity or under drought conditions. Suckleya, which has been found in the northeastern counties around old Lakebeds, resembles the running pigweed and may be identified by a triangular seed pod with the branches on the main stem.

There are a number of factors that influence the absorption of prussic acid from plants after it reaches the digestive tract. Prussic acid is a rapidly-acting poison and offers little opportunity for remedial treatment. The symptoms consist of uneasiness, rapid respiration, depression, stupor, and convulsions resulting in paralysis and death. The entire process may require only a few minutes or may last several hours.

Under the second division of plants containing glucosides, which have been referred to as saponins, two species are common in New Mexico. They are the bitterweed and pingue, or Colorado rubberweed.

Some of the more common poisonous plants in New Mexico that produce realmod poisoning are the whorl milkweed, of which there are several species, and water hemlock. There is no known remedy for treating affected animals. The symptoms are not as acute as in prussic acid poisoning. The respiratory organs and muscular system are affected and the animals have difficulty in breathing.

CORONA

By MRS. A. E. MULKEY

Former Residents Visit in Corona

Mrs. L. E. O'Dell and daughter, Miss Anne Key, of El Paso were in Corona Wednesday, June 13. Mrs. O'Dell's father, W. N. Dumas homesteaded a section of land down the Gallo Canyon near Lon about 25 miles southeast of Corona. She and her daughter went out to look at the old home place. The land was patented June 13, 1925-31 years ago. It takes three years of living on a homestead to get it patented, so it must have been 1922 when the Dumas family first came to Corona. The old homestead is occupied presently by J. P. McKnight and George W. Shanks.

W. N. Dumas lives at Lampasas, Texas, where the O'Dells went last week end for a family reunion.

The O'Dells, including Mr. O'Dell, spent several days in Carrizozo last week where they have friends.

Miss Helen Winchester daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Winchester of Corona, is now working for the Bell Telephone Co. in Albuquerque. She has finished her first year at E.N.M.U. at Portales, and will return next fall for her second year at college. She is a 1935 graduate of Corona High School.

A reception will follow the ceremony at the home of Mrs. Rodie Gloss, aunt of the groom-elect.

Miss Willingham received her B. A. degree from Eastern New Mexico University at Portales and has been teaching the fifth grade in Aztec, N. M., the past four and one-half months.

Mr. Thomas is a freshman ministerial student at Eastern.

The couple will make their home in Portales where Mr. Thomas will continue his education.

All friends and relatives are invited.

District Phone Mgr. Transferred to Denver

E. C. "Red" Phillips, of the Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Company, has been transferred to Denver, according to R. L. Bolling, exchange manager. He is a veteran of more than thirty-six years in the telephone business.

Born in Portales, he attended school in Tucumcari beginning his telephone career there as a plant student on October 27, 1919, then as a combination man. With the exception of a three-month period in 1920, Phillips has spent the entire time with Mountain States.

He worked as an installer for two years in El Paso leaving in 1924 to become exchange manager at Las Cruces, and returning to the plant department in El Paso in 1926. When Mountain States began operation of the exchange at Gallup in June, 1927, "Red" Phillips became its manager. Beginning in 1929 he managed the Santa Fe exchange for nine years.

INSIDE CAPITAL

Already a majority of the Albuquerque candidates have said they would not go along with the party platform on welfare or trucks or fair trade prices or labor.

The legislative hopefuls are irritated what is already the sorest spot in the state for the Democrats. If Albuquerque gets out of hand in the general election as it did in the primary it would be mighty dangerous for the party.

In the all-Democratic affair in May, Governor Simms who was born and reared in Albuquerque lost the county to Ingram Pickett by 2400 and wound up with less than 40% of the party vote. That was in a total vote of 10,000.

If the same ratio of opposition should prevail in November when some 60,000 Republicans, Democrats and Independents go to the polls it could be high disastrous for the governor.

Simms' Republican opponent, former Gov. Ed McChem, carried the county by 6,000 in his run for reelection in 1932 and by more than 8,000 in his first go.

The situation marks Albuquerque as the No. 1 spot for Democratic work in the campaign.

GRACE FINALLY GETS LONG SOUGHT JOB

Mrs. Grace McAfee, the nice looking lady politician from Portales is slated to go in as state personnel director July 1, a job she has been after for a solid year. Mrs. McAfee came here as secretary to Corporation Commissioner Ingram Pickett, was moved over to the comptroller's office when it appeared that Pickett would run against Simms, and was shifted to the personnel office a couple of months ago as an assistant to Severo Licerio who is on loan from the Employment Security Commission. Portales legislators almost had a falling out with the governor over the delay in getting Grace in the job. This place pays about $425.

YOUR TOWN

If you want to live in the kind of a town you like, Like the kind of a town you like, You needn't slip your clothes in a grip And start on a long, long hike. For you'd only find what you left behind— There's nothing really that's new.

It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town, It isn't the town—it's you.

Real towns are not made of men afraid. Let somebody else get ahead. When everybody works and nobody shrinks You can raise a town from the dead. And if while you make your personal stake You neighbor may make one too, You can make a town what you want it to be. It isn't the town—it's you.

EDITORIAL NEWS

The article appearing in last week's paper, quoting officer Mr. Mercer that I parked illegal is ridiculous and if this obscure practice is allowed to continue it will do great harm to our trading center and have many people and tourists by pass this town as this racket is already well known over the state and outside of the state that folks are being pinched for being one or two inches too far from the curb. We are all deeply in favor in getting the reckless speeders and drunken drivers. But let's use common sense on parking matters and invite people to visit us.—C. E. Degner

The cotton allotment for New Mexico for 1936 was 179,378 acres of upland cotton and 8,424 acres of extra long staple cotton. The state received an allotment of 455,924 acres of wheat which approximately 12,000 farmers received an individual allotment to plant these two basic crops.

Rickman stated that the administration of the program will be handled through the state and county ASC offices. In addition, it is expected that community committees composed of farmers in each community will participate in the establishment of yield grouping of commodities to be placed in the Acreage Reserve Program. It is estimated that of the total cotton acres allotted to the state of New Mexico, 39% of the total acres allotted will be eligible and payment will be made to reduce cotton production normally produced on the allotted acres. Rickman said he expected that over 50% of the wheat acres will be placed within the Acreage Reserve Program and payments made to farmers due to the extreme drought conditions and the destruction which has occurred in the large wheat producing areas located in the eastern part of the state. Rickman stated that the Secretary will issue regulations pertaining to the administration of the Conservation Reserve phase of the Soil Bank within the near future. This part of the Soil Bank provides for the Department of Agriculture to enter into contracts with farmers for a minimum period of three years under which a farmer would devote a designated part of his crop land to conservation uses. He would agree not to harvest any crop from the designated acres and not to pasture it for a specific period except for certain emergency conditions. The Department of Agriculture would be authorized to pay for a fair share of the cost of establishing the conservation use, and in addition to make annual rental payment to the producer, which will provide a fair and reasonable payment for the land deferred into conservation uses. In New Mexico it is expected that the acreage placed under Conservation will be conserved by establishing a cover crop of various grasses. The over-all limitations on the Conservation phase of the Soil Bank is not to exceed $450 million a year. Rickman added that the State of New Mexico has approximately 360,000 acres of dry land and 90,000 acres of irrigated land eligible to participate in the Conservation Reserve phase of the Soil Bank.

SOIL BANK

Maximum and minimum acres of the basic crops which may be placed in the Acreage Reserve have been established, Rickman explained. For wheat, the maximum is the larger of one-half of the wheat allotment, or 50 acres. The minimum is the larger of 10% of the regular allotment, or five acres. For cotton, the maximum is the larger of one-half of the allotment, or ten acres. The minimum is the larger of 10% of the allotment, or two acres.

Payment which a farmer may receive for participating in the Acreage Reserve is determined by multiplying a base unit by a yield factor. The National Average rates established for the 1936 payments are corn, 90 cents per bushel; cotton, 15 cents per pound; wheat, $1.20 per bushel; peanuts, 3 cents per pound. Payments will be determined for underplanting the allotment for cotton, rice, tobacco, peanuts, or wheat. The payment rate will be based on the normal yield for the designated acres. For underplanting 1936 winter wheat because of adverse weather, the payment will be $1 per acre. For destruction due to natural causes, or for plowing or otherwise physically incorporating the crop into the soil, or for clipping, mowing, or cutting the crop, the payment will be based on the smaller of the appraised yield for the field or the normal yield for the farm, but will not be less than $6 per acre.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Starting Monday, Mr. Charles Fruit will have charge of the Gladys Morriss Beauty Salon until Mrs. Morriss is able to return to work.

Morriss Beauty Salon

Recognize These Designs?

The roof line is often the clue to the architecture of a house. The "early English" house has an extremely steep-sloped roof. The eaves drop very low, often below the level of the first floor ceiling. The roof may have a number of small, sharp peaks and gables.

The "contemporary" design has either a flat roof or a steep roof. The true "ranch house" will have a rambling, low-sloped roof.

The "Cape Cod" has a steeply sloped roof, though not nearly so steep as the early English design. Sometimes the Cape Cod will have single-window dormers.

The most frequently seen "split level" has two roof levels, reflecting the two main living levels in the house. The roof levels, like the living levels, are less than a full story apart.

The "southern colonial" has a fairly steep roof. It also has a flat roof over porch, supported by stately columns.

Years ago, it was possible to distinguish a house type, in some measure, by the materials used in covering the roof. Certain styles were more likely to be covered by straw, wood, tile, pitch, or slate.

The current tendency is to seek roof distinctions not through varied roofing materials, but through the use of color. A wide shingle comes in a multitude of colors, suitable for any local preference. The darker tones of roofing generally are preferred for tall houses, the lighter colors for low, rambling dwellings. Early English houses, with a multiplicity of roof surfaces, usually resorted best to the more subdued shades. Southern colonial houses also call for the darker colors, which help maintain the traditional aspect of stables.

A virtue of the lighter colors for one-story contemporary and ranch houses is that they attract attention, drawing the eye of the observer upward. The art of looking up goes the distance of proper height and enhances the importance of the house.
