LOADING A FAMILY WITH A RUNAWAY TEAM

J. P. Nunn Sr. came to the Lake Valley area in the early 1880's by ox team. At the time of this incident, also in the early 1880's, he and his wife and several children were living in the old Grover house, one-half mile south of the Emmett Nunn ranch on the Lake Valley-Hillsboro road.

This is the story as Emmett Nunn heard it from his aunt, Mrs. J. P. Nunn Sr.

The family received word of an Apache raid threat and began getting ready to go to Lake Valley for protection. Mrs. Nunn's husband hitched up two saddle horses which had never been harnessed before. Mrs. Nunn held the team while her husband climbed into the wagon to take the reins. When she stepped out from in front of the horses, they ran away. Nunn couldn't stop the team but he could keep the horses going in a circle. Around and around in a circle the team ran. Each time that Nunn passed the point where his wife and children were standing, Mrs. Nunn managed to swing one of the kids into the wagon. On the last circle Nunn had slowed down the team enough so that his wife was able to grab hold of the end gate of the wagon and climb in. They headed for Lake Valley and arrived there safely.

SAVED BY TOO MUCH WHISKEY

Emmett Nunn, rancher south of Hillsboro, said he could not vouch for the authenticity of the following story which was told to him.

Years ago an old cowpuncher, who had absorbed too much whisky in town, was riding slowly homeward along the flat in Dry Draw, south of Jaralosa Creek in the foothills of the Black Range.

Unknown to the cowboy, Indians were lying among the rocks above the draw to ambush him. One Indian shot at the cowpuncher and missed. The cowboy paid no attention to the shot and continued riding slowly.

Another Indian fired at the cowboy and missed. This time the cowboy stopped his horse and dismounted. He had to get off.

The white man acted like none the Indians had seen before. They didn't know, of course, that the cowpuncher had drunk so much whisky he was oblivious to danger but not to the necessity of stopping his horse and getting off.

The Indians apparently believed they were shooting at a ghost. They left, and the old cowboy rode home safely at his own pace.

Grizzlies vs. Tigers

Friday Evening

Handcapped by the loss of their six-foot, three inch center, Roger Pope, the Carrizozo Grizzlies will attempt to get back on the victory trail this week-end when they travel to Capitan, Friday evening, and return home Saturday for a tilt with Tularosa.

The Grizzlies dropped two close decisions last Friday and Saturday, losing to a veteran Corona team, 68-60, and Hot Springs squeezed by the local club, 55-51, on the Tigers' home court.

Roger Pope was lost to the Grizzlies in the closing minute of the first half of the Corona tilt, when he drove in for a lay-up shot, swished the ball through the net, and sprained his ankle in the process. It is hoped that Pope will be available for action the week end of January 25 and 26, when the Grizzlies meet Jal and Eunice on successive evenings at Eunice.

Corona jumped to an early 18 point lead in the first quarter, in their 68-60 win over the Grizzlies and led by the shot making of Knight, Bryan and Huey retired at haltime with a 12 point average. The Grizzlies hurried right back into the ball game and cut the Cardinal lead to three points in the waning moments of the game, when Corona moved to an eight point spread for the win.

Billy Hicks easily walked off with high-point honors for the contest with 29 points, while Pat Huey and Eddie Knight led the Corona attack with 17 counters each.

The Grizzly "B" team annexed victory number eight when they turned back Corona, 48-38.

Trekking to Hot Springs Saturday evening the Grizzlies were again victims of a cold first quarter, which saw Hot Springs pull to an eight point lead, which was cut to a 23-21 advantage by half-time.

Hot Springs widened the gap in the third quarter, moving to a 33-31 lead as the Grizzlies were still ice cold in the field goal department. Again the Carrizozo five turned in a red hot fourth period, rolling in 20 points, but four points shy of
