"PIONEER LIFE IN TEXAS"

(Following is a review of a book, "Pioneer Life in Texas," written by the late Max Krueger, uncle of Mrs. Monroe Howard of Capitan—Ed.)

It wasn't long before Max Krueger was no longer an immigrant in a strange land. He had become a full-fledged Texan, wise in the ways of frontier life and enthusiastic about buffalo hunting. He met up with William Taylor, an old hunter and trapper, and his 18-year-old son, (Bill Taylor was the father of Mrs. Monroe Howard's mother.) Krueger joined the Taylors in several exciting buffalo hunting trips, about one of which he writes:

"People who have never taken part in similar hunts have no conception of the excitement which takes hold of the hunter. When the chase extends over a distance of three or five miles, the herd scatters considerably, the stronger animals taking the lead, while the weaker lag behind. When this happened with our herd I made the singular observation that the leaders, when tired out by a long run, alternated the use of their legs—placing the greatest weight on the right legs for a time, then changing to the left, which was instantly imitated by the whole herd. Within 12 days we killed 12 buffaloes; and their hides, stretched and dried, in addition to the cured meat made a load of 2000 pounds for our wagon."

Texas began to build up rapidly. Waves of immigrants from the northern states were moving in and large tracts of land had been given promoters to encourage railroad building. "Within ten years—from 1870 to 1880—this immense territory had been covered with a network of railroads."

Krueger, with his limited means, had established a country store in the neighborhood of Twin Sisters. He was appointed postmaster and the following year was elected justice of the peace. As part of the duties of the latter office, he was called on to marry couples, charging $5 for a simple marriage ceremony. He tells about his disappointment on one occasion:

"William Haas, an acquaintance of mine, whose children and grandchildren now live in Blaine county, came to me one day with his bride-to-be. Both were of German descent and I tried to make the ceremony particularly solemn and impressive, and for the occasion I composed a nice address in German, dealing with eloquent passages from German authors. I quoted Schiller's beautiful lines: 'Honor to Woman. To her it is given to garland the earth with the roses of heaven.' It made a deep impression on the couple. The bride was moved to tears. She said she had never before heard anything so beautiful. Naturally I expected an extra fee for this effort, but after the ceremony Haas came to me and said rather bashfully, that as everything had been so solemn and beautiful he would not insult me by offering me the customary fee, but that he and his wife would reward me with their undying gratitude instead. Needless to say after that I always used the simple ceremony provided for in the statutes."

The author of "Pioneer Life in Texas" tells about attempts to produce rain artificially: "Based upon this well-known fact that in war after great battles, where large quantities of explosives were used, a few rainy days and even weeks would often result, the garrison at San Antonio received orders to send up balloons with dynamite bombs and make them explode in heavy masses of clouds. The results, however, did not come up to expectations. Another experiment was then tried; to force cold air into the heated strata by steam-driven fans arranged in a tower built for this purpose. This experiment also failed."

After Max Krueger lost his land and possessions following the three-year drought he moved to the little city of New Braunfels and became a life and fire insurance agent at which he was successful and accumulated enough money to go into business for himself. With $10,000 capital he founded the San Antonio Machinery and Supply Company in 1869. The firm prospered under his guidance and he later took his sons into the business.

Before his death in 1927, Mr. Krueger visited two tribes of Indians, once dreaded foes of early settlers in Texas, the Comanches and the Apaches. The Comanches, he noted, were dwindling in numbers and "the Apaches were becoming extinct." "Within a few years at the most," he wrote, "the last of the Apaches will have vanished from the American continent." His prediction might well have come true had not the ravages of tuberculosis among the Indians been checked.

Mr. Krueger's autobiography is concluded with the modest statement that "My later life does not differ essentially from that of any other business man."

Set Target Date For Bangs Testing

At the county-wide meeting held at the Carrizozo Woman's Club building last Saturday evening, the cattle growers present set July 1, 1957, for the date to have all cattle tested in Lincoln County and have the area declared a county free of brucellosis, or Bang's disease.

TESTING STARTS MONDAY IN CORONA AREA

A schedule for brucellosis testing has been set up as follows: Corona Area—Monday, Feb. 25, starting with Frank Sultemeyer, Clint Sultemeyer, Stub Lewis and Buster Thomsen. Tuesday—Joe Crump, Carl Hiner, Mike Nalda, Jack Shela, Bill Roper. Wednesday, Feb. 27—Archie Perkins, McClouds, Sheffields, Harry Ryberg, Bud Bagley. Thursday and Friday, Feb. 28 and March 1—Testing in the Cedarvale area. Monday, March 4—Testing in the Claunch area. Tuesday, March 5—Gallinas Mountains area. Wednesday, March 6—Start with Corbin Hester and proceed down the Gallo. Thursday, March 7—Start at Floyd Proctor ranch.

Those not on the list who have cattle they wish tested are asked to contact Archie Perkins or County Agent Ralph Dunlap, and they will be included. To get the program completed as fast as possible, the county was divided into 13 committees used in road planning work. The committees selected were as follows:

- Corona—Archie Perkins, Corbin Hester, Doc Dean. Lon—George W. Shanks, Ed Reynolds, Jr., Joe Crump. Ancho—Walter Wilson, A. W. Gnalkowski. White Oaks—Pat Murphy, J. D. Bunton. Carrizozo—Trumah Spencer Jr., Captain Encinosa—Charles A. Jones, Bill Edgar. Captain Angus—Floster Mall, Gilbert Peters. Nogal—Guy Dabney, Floy Skinner. Ruidoso—Alto—Paul Jones, E. E. Miller, George Creel. Glencoe—Ralph Bonnell, Kenneth Noaker, Tom Babers. Arabela—John A. Cooper, George Simeros, Clyde Marley. Pecho—Joe Skeen, J. P. McKnight. Lincoln—A. T. Pflingsten. Dr. Bob O. Bond, local veterinarian, is in charge of the program and is available to do the testing free. At the suggestion of the group, the testing will start in the northern part of the county and work southward. The objective is to test all the cattle over 3 years old in small herds and 20% of the larger herds of cattle.

TIME GROWS SHORT

Unless the county gets all its testing completed shortly, the cattle owners who tested over 18 months ago will have to retest. Dr. Nordstrom and Dr. Guth, veterinarians in charge of the state program, talked to the group on testing to eradicate brucellosis. They pointed out that this was done with tuberculosis in the 1930's. Now tuberculosis is a thing of the past. Dr. Nordstrom also pointed out that five states are now certified and that four counties in New Mexico are now certified. They are Hidalgo, Grant, McKinley and Los Alamos.

Bernalillo, Torrance and Guadalupe counties are testing the last few herds toward being certified. As a note of interest, he stated that January, 1957 was the heaviest testing month ever recorded in New Mexico.

Carrizozo C. of C. Puts Up Highway Signs

Three highway signs advertising Carrizozo have been put up on Highway 70, between Horro and Bradley's garage. J. E. Thornton, Chamber of Commerce president, made a trip south on Highway 54 Wednesday to put up signs in the vicinity of Tularosa.

LOVINGTON MAN RETURNED ON CHECK CHANGE

Charged with passing $48 in worthless checks on three Carrizozo firms, Geo. Register Jr. of Lovington was returned to Carrizozo Friday by Sheriff S. M. Ortiz.

It is no different from hundreds of others, but it is one well worth reading because it tells about a German immigrant who found a great challenge in the new America and made the most of it.

Driver Blames Speeding On "Backseat Driving"

Fines come high for speeding at 115 miles an hour. A motorist who lost a 1956 with State Policeman James Clayton last week paid off in Judge Howard's benchman's court in Alamogordo. It cost the speeder $100 and $5 costs. When Patrolman Clayton was in the vicinity of Three Rivers a car went by at a high rate of speed and he took out in pursuit.

As the officer began to approach the speeding car, the driver identified the police car and increased his speed. Speedometers climbed to 120 mph. Officer Clayton saw the chase was getting too dangerous, so he radioed ahead to Tularosa for a road block.

Both cars slowed for the turn across the overpass into Tularosa and the motorist was arrested near the Jet Drive-in theatre. The driver of the Chrysler Imperial admitted to going 125 mph. He was Kenneth L. Martin, alman of HAFB. He had as passengers in his car his wife, two small children and two elderly people. Asked why he endangered his life and the lives of his passengers, Martin's comment was "Too much back seat driving."

The county convention voted to send an un-instructed delegation to the state convention.

A Republican state central committee meeting will be held at the Hilton Hotel prior to the convention to pass upon any contests that may be filed with the secretary of the committee and to select the temporary officers of the convention.

Monday night's meeting at the court room in Carrizozo was presided over by E. M. Shafer, county chairman, with Mrs. Lloyd Vigil, secretary.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED

Upon motion made a resolution was unanimously adopted by the convention, as follows: "Be it resolved by the convention that a vote of confidence be extended to Robert M. Shafer, county chairman, for the splendid campaign he conducted as evidenced by the successful results of the last election; "That the convention delegates especially ask that his position be recognized and that all recommendations made by him in regard to any appointments be recognized and approved by the state officials in charge of such appointments; "Be it further resolved and recommended that a copy of this resolution be sent to the governor of the State of New Mexico."

Boys Take Home Economics, Girls Learn About Shop at Carrizozo High School

John L. McCollum and Miss Josie Abeyta have switched personnel of their classes this six weeks to help give both the boys and the girls a chance to learn something a little different. Boys taking Home Economics and girls taking Industrial-Arts seem to be a variation from their curriculum, but even though people might think boys don't need to know how to cook or sew, every day life requires some knowhow about them. Girls need to know at least a few things about tools, because someday they are bound to be in a situation where they will need to use a hammer or saw. "The boys are learning very quickly," says Miss Abeyta, "and I have had no trouble at all keeping high interest in either of the boys' classes."

The boys will soon begin to learn other things, such as sewing and handling sewing machines, washing clothes, ironing and patching torn garments. Since the beginning of the second semester, they have been learning to bake pies, make fudge, and prepare meals. On their last day of cooking, they prepared a big meal and invited guests. Among the guests were Wendell Watson, principal, Mr. John McCollum, Larry Ortiz and Albert Burck. Mr. McCollum stated that the main reason for girls taking shop work is to help them distinguish between good and bad

Services in Lincoln for Mollie Ann Hulbert

Services were held February 16 in the Community Church in Lincoln for Mollie Ann Hulbert, who passed away February 14 at the Carrizozo Hospital.

The service was in charge of Rev. Charles Corder. Two songs, "Just As I Am" and "In the Garden," were sung by Mrs. F. O. Brown, accompanied by Mrs. Marby Burns on the piano. Interment was in the Lincoln cemetery. The Shaw Mortuary was in charge of arrangements. Memorial bearers were Dan Giles, Bill Wilson, Ray Provine, Edgar Phillips and Phil Garcia. Mrs. Hulbert was born March 9, 1892 at Ft. Chabourne, Robert Lee County, Texas.

She is survived by her husband, Arthur Lloyd Hulbert of Lincoln; three daughters, Mrs. Fronie Ramey of Lincoln; Mrs. C. C. Womack of Albuquerque and Mrs. Ada Whitlock of Lincoln; a son, Alfred L. Hulbert of Ysleta, Texas; three brothers, George T. Lindley of Tempe, Ariz.; Travis Lindley of Tombstone, Ariz.; and Dick Lindley of St. David, Ariz.; also by eight grandchildren.

White Oaks Pioneer Dies in Washington

She was an old White Oaks resident many years ago and will be remembered by her many friends here. Burial was in Bremerton, Washington, on February 15.

JAMES ARTHUR GUESS

MARCH 2 DEADLINE FOR AUTO PLATES

Robert Means, license distributor in Carrizozo, announced that the deadline for paying 1957 plates, without penalty, is March 2.

Easement Granted For Nogal Road

Col. Russell M. Riggins and Mrs. Riggins last week signed an easement to the State of New Mexico and Lincoln County for a 120-ft. right of way across the R-Bar-Ranch, between the junction of Highway 380 and Nogal. Col. Riggins agreed to grant the road easement several months ago, but it was delayed pending a settlement with Alamogordo on laying the new Bonito pipeline which was to cross the R Bar Ranch in places. An agreement on the latter was reached February 11, when Alamogordo made a cash settlement of $635.00. Col Riggins was represented by Attorney H. Elfred Jones.

THREE EASEMENTS SIGNED

Three Nogal road easements have been filed at the county clerk's office. One remains to be filed. Due to pipeline construction, which crosses the road in several places, and recent rains, the Nogal road is in very poor condition. Six cars were reported stuck on the road Monday morning. The need for immediate improvement of this road has been called to the attention of Governor Mechem and Eber McKinley, State Highway commissioner.

Top Dignitaries Visit Red Canyon

Last week Red Canyon Range Camp was visited by top ranking officers from three foreign countries. They arrived at Red Canyon to witness Nike operations. The dignitaries included one of the top-ranking officers in NATO, Italian General Clemente Primieri, General Primieri, Commander of Allied Land Forces in Southern Europe. As such he is in charge of all NATO group forces in his large area. Also arriving was Major General Nusret Aytey, of the Turkish Army.

A large group came to Red Canyon from Canada. This group included three major generals, five brigadier generals and 23 colonels. Heading the group was Major General J. M. (Rocky) Rockingham. The dignitaries stayed most of the day and were given a tour of Red Canyon Range Camp by Lt. Colonel John J. McCarthy, Camp Commander. The tour included briefings by W/O Giles and Captain Mendheim, assembly site and operations officers, respectively, and then witnessing a Nike firing. After the shoot and a lunch they returned to Fort Bliss.

Another group that arrived at Red Canyon were five representatives of the West German Federal Ministry of Defense. The officers, nattily clad in the new West German Army uniform of slate grey with double breasted blouse, are on a tour of military facilities throughout the United States sponsored by the Mutual Assistance Program. The buses being used are B-750 Ford trucks with 50-passenger school bus chassis. Mr. Means is presently reconditioning five buses which have been in use since 1934. He installs new engines only when necessary. One '54 engine with a record of 133,000 miles, was taken out and found to be in excellent condition. It was using less than a quart of oil between changes. The buses are completely serviced every 1500 miles, which Hank says, is the reason they are giving such good road performance. Four new buses are to be added to the fleet this year, making a total of 13 in all. Around June 15, buses and drivers will assemble at Rio Vista and it will be full steam ahead for three weeks getting the workers to the beet fields. Carrizozo is one of the rest stops. Here the workers are fed and the buses filled with gasoline, ready for another lap on the journey north. While the workers are on the job in the beet fields, Mr. Means is at Ft. Lupton servicing the buses for the return haul. He sees that they are in tip-top shape to pass rigid safety inspections.

Bonito and Nogal Lakes Area May Be Recreation Areas

By AILEEN LINDAMOOD

At 10 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 10, a group of men met at Bonito Lake. The purpose of the meeting was to draw up a tentative set of plans for establishing a recreational area on the property acquired by Alamogordo and Holloman Air Base. The plans are to be presented to the Alamogordo Chamber of Commerce for approval. Those present from Alamogordo were City Manager Rolls Buck, Attorney Frank Boyce, Engineer W. F. Turney, President of the Chamber of Commerce Fred Bonnell, and Acting Forest Supervisor Dave Stevens. Others present were Roy Barker of the State Fish and Game Department from Santa Fe; Marlon Embrey, conservation officer from Capitan; Alan Johnson, president of White Mountain GPA from Carrizozo; George Dingwall from Alto; Fred Swetnam, Ruidoso forest ranger; and Bill Hart, president of the Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce.

ANNUAL MEETING OF COUNTY SAVINGS & LOAN

The annual meeting of all members of the Lincoln County Savings and Loan Association will be held Monday, March 4, 1957, at 2 p.m. in the offices of the association. Directors for the ensuing term will be elected.

Caption in El Paso Times says "U. S. Population Tops 170 Million" An error, of course, but it shows how everybody is thinking big these days. . . . We never saw anyone as happy about getting stuck in the mud as J. F. Tom was Monday. Driving into town from his place his truck skidded off the road, knocked down a couple of fence poles and bogged down. Jim got out his shovel, dug out and drove on into town. He was real pleased about the mud. . . . Leave it to the weather to do the unusual. Old timers say they have never seen a setup like this in February—two days of drizzling rain, already amounting to over an inch of moisture. The rain and snow was general in a wide belt across New Mexico. . . . Old timers, please take the time to write what you remember about old Bonito City and mail it to Mrs. Louise Runnels, Bonito Route, Nogal. The Runnels are giving a prize of $10 for the best article. . . . The News is starting a subscription contest March 1 with $185 in prizes for the four contestants entered. At the close of the contest the price of the News will be increased 25c cents a year, from $2.75 to $3.00, and will sell for 10 cents a copy on the news stands. The small increase in yearly subscriptions has been made necessary by another advance in the cost of newsprint, which goes up an additional $4 a ton effective March 1. The price of newsprint has advanced 10c every year for the past four years. The small increase in the price of the News will help meet the additional cost. Until the close of the contest, new and renewal subscriptions will be at the old price. (See page 6 for details of the contest.)

Preparations are under way at the Hank Means garage in Carrizozo for the transportation of approximately 12,000 Mexican farm workers to the sugar beet fields of four mountain states—Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and Montana. Since 1954 Mr. Means has had a contract with the Great Western Sugar Beet Company to repair and service buses used in the long haul from Rio Vista to a camp at Ft. Lupton, north of Denver. From there the Mexican nationals again board the buses for their final destination, the beet fields in the various states. The workers spend approximately six weeks in the fields, weeding thinning and transplanting the young beets, a job which still requires hand labor. Harvesting of the beets is done by machinery. When the work is over the workers board the buses for the trip back to Mexico, with money in their pockets that will go a long way in the old country. The buses being used are B-750 Ford trucks with 50-passenger school bus chassis. Mr. Means is presently reconditioning five buses which have been in use since 1934. He installs new engines only when necessary. One '54 engine with a record of 133,000 miles, was taken out and found to be in excellent condition. Pat Neal, formerly of Carrizozo and now a feature writer on the Clearwater (Fla.) Sun, has been doing some thinking about New Mexico's drought and comments as follows: The rancher fighting it out on his drought-stricken lands is not as the burdened donkey or the yoked oxen, though they are his brothers in patience. There is patience of endless servitude; his patience of courage, intelligence and hope. These lands of his have known astonishing prosperity in the long "normal" years of rains. Now he has seen a half dozen successive years of abnormal drought. He believes (and God grant that he be right) that this is a situation that cannot last. He just believes he can outlast these terrible years. The rancher is an intelligent gambler in the hardest kind of game. He must hang on—indeed he must. But here is the (Continued on Back Page)

A TALE OF THE BUTTERFIELD TRAIL

(Editors note: Forty years ago a San Antonio, Texas, woman, through a chance remark of her son to a member of a fishing party, located the grave of her father, Jim Giddings, who was killed in 1861 during an attack on a California-bound group traveling the Butterfield Trail, at the east end of Stejn's Pass, west of Lordsburg and in Hidalgo County. The fisherman, whose father had buried Giddings' skeleton, was Dr. R. W. Noble of Temple, Texas. On March 9, 1939, Dr. Noble wrote a letter concerning the incident to Benjamin P. Cheney of Boston, retired vice-president of the Santa Fe Railway, who was then at Coronado Beach, California. Cheney's hobby was traveling the old overland mail routes. The letter is in the possession of C. G. Ferry of Lordsburg, a friend of Cheney who died while on a trip alone in northern Arizona country in 1942.)

That part of the letter pertaining to the Butterfield Trail incident follows:

At this time Dad (M. G. Noble) with my Mother and two little girl babies drove from San Jose (Calif.) in a Concord coach to San Antonio, Texas. I think they left San Jose March 8th, '61; they landed in San Antonio July 8th, '61. Moses Carson and his brother, Linsey Carson, came along in the party with their families and acted as guides and scouts.

They got through without any trouble with the Indians; at Tucson they learned that the last stage going west was attacked by Indians at the east entrance of Stejn's Pass. There were seven men on the stage. The fight lasted about two days and the men were all killed. Some outlaw white men had engineered this attack on the stagecoach, having the Indians do the dirty work.

The Civil War was on between the North and the South. Of course the contract with the stage line was suspended. A man by the name of Jim Giddings of San Antonio, Tex., was the manager at the Texas end of the line with headquarters at San Antonio. The management was in California. They ordered him to bring all the valuables (money) and pick up all the horses, and bring them all to California. He was supposed to have about $28,000 in money belonging to the stage company. The outlaws were supposed to have gotten that.

When the news of this fight reached Tucson some men from Tucson went over there and buried five of the seven men—two were missing. Somehow they were able to identify the five men that they buried and they knew that Giddings and another man were not in that bunch. This was about the first of April that the attack on the stage was committed.

It was some three or four weeks later that Dad and his party reached Stejn's Pass coming east. I have heard Dad and my Mother both tell of the various incidents on that trip many times. I was a youngster and the stories were rather thrilling and they got impressed on my mind very strong. I have my Mother's diary that was written on that trip—there were just short notes written here and there.

They reached the old stage stand (in New Mexico) in Stejn's Pass about eight o'clock at night. They watered their teams and she mentioned that their black horse lay down and they couldn't get him up. They had to take the harness off of him and put it on another horse. They worked four horses to the old Concord and had two extra horses that they led.

I have heard Mother describe the old horse, that she gathered what green leaves she could find and other green things and fed the old horse, and after they were through watering they drove a mile and half eastward and turned off of the road and camped about a quarter of a mile from the road.

The next morning they found the skeletons of Jim Giddings and the other man just outside of their camp. There were some of five people of this crowd a several vehicles. They would corral their vehicles every night and make their beds down inside of this corral. These skeletons were just outside of this corral. The wolves had eaten all of the flesh off of their bodies and only the bones were left.

They gathered up these bones in a blanket and took them back to the road. As there were no trees that they could use for a marker they selected a point where a horseback trail had cut across the point of the slope of the mountain where the trail diverts from the road. Owing to the rocks they could only dig the grave about two feet deep. They put the two skeletons wrapped in the blanket down in this grave and filled in the dirt. They had brought along a two-inch redwood plank to repair breaks of their vehicles with—they had no occasion to use it. They cut off enough of this

ALTO BRIEFS

By AILEEN LINDAMOOD

M. M. Prinke of Albuquerque, state representative of the Armstrong Cork Company, spent Thursday night with the Lindamoods.

Ben Pfingsten stopped to see the George Dingwalls on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stewart of El Paso came by Monday on their way to their Eagle Creek home. After spending the night they visited in the community before returning home Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lemon of Carrizozo were callers at the George Dingwalls on Tuesday.

The Carl Greens of Ruidoso were by Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Lucas of Angus were TV visitors at the George Dingwalls Friday night. Jim Black of Capitan stopped by Thursday en route to Ruidoso.

F. B. Lindamood was a business visitor in Carrizozo on Friday.

plank to make a headboard and a footboard, and my Mother wrote on the headboard a description of these two skeletons giving their names. They piled rocks, as big as two men could lift, on top of the grave to keep the wolves from digging the bones up, and then they resumed their journey.

There was rather an interesting incident concerning Jim Giddings. He had one child, a girl three years old, at the time that he was killed. The only knowledge that she had ever learned in regard to her father was that he had been killed by Indians in Arizona, (actually in New Mexico). In 1917 I was at San Antonio and went out with a party to Madina Lake fishing. While sitting on the deck of a motor launch with one of the fishermen, Mr. Earnest Brown, he remarked to me that his grandfather, Jim Giddings, was killed by the Indians in Arizona.

I replied, "My father buried Jim Giddings where he was killed by Indians in Arizona." Something occurred to break the conversation and nothing more was said until we drove in and stopped at the St. Anthony Hotel in San Antonio. As I was getting out of the car Mr. Brown came to me and said he would like to talk to me about his grandfather; that his mother, who was then sixty years old, then had her grips packed to go to Arizona to see if she could find any information in regard to her father. I told him just where my father's party had buried him.

Two weeks later I got a letter from Mrs. Brown, nee Giddings, telling me she had just returned from a trip out to Stejn's Pass and also to Tucson and Tombstone. She said that she got off the train at Stejn's Pass Station and went to the bank and told the president her mission and asked if there was anybody living over near Stejn's Pass that had been living there for a great while.

(Berry pointed out that Mrs. Brown probably talked to the president of the small bank in nearby San Simon, Ariz., since there was no bank at Stejn's. He believes someone drove her to Stejn's and the supposed grave of Giddings.)

He (the bank president), told her that there was a man named Woods that had settled there in 1865; that he was hale

"Among gas turbine advantages over piston truck engines," Barr said, "are better hill-climbing abilities, less maintenance, wide fuel choice, and easier cold-weather starting." Chevrolet has no immediate production plans.

STATE GAME DEPARTMENT

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS

Proposals for two game-law amendments and two new game laws have been prepared by the Legislative Council for consideration by the Legislature during the present session:

1. An amendment to the statute on scientific collector's permit. At present an individual or a scientific (non-profit) organization, in order to obtain a permit for collection of wildlife specimens in New Mexico for scientific purposes, must first possess a hunting license. Many of the collectors are non-residents and are collecting specimens to be used for educational purposes. New Mexico is the only state now requiring a hunting license as prerequisite to the issuance of a collector's permit. The proposed amendment would strike out the phrase, "who has a hunting license."

2. An amendment to the guide license law is designed to give the Department of Game and Fish more adequate control of the guide and outfitting business which commercializes on the wildlife resources. It would give the commission authority to make regulations that would cope with changing conditions so far as these services are concerned, and it would protect the legitimate operator and his clients.

3. A proposed new law would permit creation of regulated shooting preserves for upland game birds. The need has been apparent in New Mexico for some time, particularly as concerns pheasant shooting. Most of the other states now have regulated shooting preserves on which private individuals raise or purchase game birds, release them on areas approved under their permits, and allow hunting at a fee. There is no cost to the taxpayer, or to the license holder who does not avail himself of the facilities. It would increase hunting opportunities for those willing to pay the preserve fee, without decreasing the hunting opportunities for others on the outside.

4. A proposed new law would require locker plant operators to maintain records for one year, of all game, fish and livestock submitted for processing or storage; and to have such records available for inspection at any time by law-enforcement officers. The purpose of such a law would be to hinder traffic in contraband meat of all kinds.

LICENSE VENDORS TO BE BONDED

The bonding of all license vendors will now be required, according to a resolution adopted by the State Game Commission. This order is effective with the beginning of the new license year on April 1.

This policy has been frequently recommended by the Attorney General's office and by the State Comptroller, as a requirement for anyone handling State funds. The Commission regards it as sound business practice. In the past few years the premises of some license vendors have been destroyed by fire, and adequate insurance against such hazards must safeguard assets of the Department of Game and Fish.

The applicant, if accepted by the Commission, will then furnish a bond based upon his expected sales for the first year.

Whistler, the famous artist, was complimented on his paintings by an admiring lady. "Yes," she said, "I was reminded of some of your paintings when I walked along a river the other day. The air was so clear that the trees and foliage looked as if you had painted them." "That's true," Whistler replied, "even nature is beginning to get on to the trick."

Mrs. Carl P. Radcliff, in an impressive ceremony, lighted 11 candles which spelled out Founders Day, each candle representing an integral part which helps the organization to function.

She was assisted by Supt. Fernin S. Montes and Mrs. Hazel Arthurs, who read some interesting facts about the PTA organization and its two founders, Mrs. Birney and Mrs. George Hearst.

FARM NEWS

Sheep Producers Plan Increase in Council Members

Denver—Plans to increase representation on the American Sheep Producers Council will be put into effect at the annual meeting of delegates to the council on March 11 in Denver.

There will be approximately 137 official delegates eligible to attend the meeting as voting members of the ASPC, a promotion and advertising organization set up by sheepmen to boost the consumption and production of lamb and wool in the United States.

The delegates, all sheepmen, will represent various state and area sheep councils, plus most major farm organizations.

In the past, there have been 54 delegates to the ASPC, but following a reorganization meeting last fall, it was decided to increase the representation on the council in order to assure that all sheep producing sections of the country have a voice in the control of the Council.

At the same time, the directors of the council, with a present membership of 16, will be increased to 37 members.

Representation will be based on the amount of money paid into the American Sheep Producers Council by the various state and area sheep councils for advertising of lamb and wool. Previously, representation was based on sheep numbers.

The delegates meeting in the Shirley Savoy Hotel will hear reports by the various departments of the ASPC as well as its advertising agencies.

The new board of directors will assume their duties officially on Tuesday, March 12, when they confer to elect officers and approve the budget. It will be left to the discretion of the new board whether or not it will name an executive committee of 15 members. The executive committee would carry out the policies of the board during times when the board would not be in session.

Kill Cattle Grubs With Rotenone

It's time to get after those cattle grubs again. Since December, the grubs have been chowing up as lumps on the backs of cattle. Each lump contains a fat, white maggot about one-half inch long which remains in the animal's back for about two months. During this time, the insect feeds on material secreted as a result of its irritation to the skin and increases to about one inch in size. Soon after the grub first appears under the skin on the back, it cuts a hole through the hide so it can breathe.

The holes that cattle grubs cut in hides and the loss in milk and weight caused by their irritation cost dairy and cattlemen in the United States about 100 million dollars a year.

From now until the end of March, cattle should be treated for grubs. Rotenone is the only recommended toxicant for cattle grub control. The ground corrie or cube root used should be of 325 mesh fineness, and contain 55% rotenone. It may be applied as a spray, scrub, or dust. Sprays should be applied at 400 to 600 pounds pressure and dusts should be rubbed in with a brush or the fingers. The rotenone must get into the grub holes to give control.

For a spray solution, use 7 1/2 to 10 pounds of 55% rotenone and 2 pounds of household detergent (Dreft, Vel, etc.) in 100 gallons of water. For scrubbing, use 12 ounces of 55% rotenone and 2 ounces of neutral soap in each gallon of water. Use a 1 1/2% rotenone powder for dusting. About one gallon of spray should be used per animal or enough

HEALTH FOR ALL

What's your prescription for the common cold? Everyone seems to have his own, and each one seems to work—sometimes. This is the peak of the cold season. Of course, no one can count the number of colds now plaguing the public. It's not a reportable disease, and it's not a factor in mortality statistics. But judging from the fact that deaths from pneumonia, bronchitis, rheumatic fever, and asthma, among others, are highest in January, we know it's a pretty tough month to get through.

It's two to one you have a package of cold tissues in your pocket this minute. What is the best way to get rid of a cold? Science doesn't have a ready answer, since evaluation of treatments for the common cold is difficult. Some colds seem to be self-limiting—that is, you get over them in five days or so no matter what treatment you use. Others hang on for weeks. Sometimes if you go to bed with the first symptom of a cold, you can lick it in a day. Other times it doesn't work.

The standard treatment for a cold is to force fluids—drink all the water and fruit juice you can get down. And now a new treatment has been announced that works on an opposite principle—dehydration. This method sounds heretic but, if your doctor agrees, you might give it a try.

According to Dr. Guy T. Vise of Mississippi who had good results with 90 per cent of patients with this treatment, you must wrap up in a sheet and several blankets so that even head and face are covered for two hours daily in company with hot water bottles or an electric pad. Drink no water. Take only a cup of soup, juice, tea or coffee every three hours. A laxative and sometimes other drugs such as aspirin, antihistamines, and antibiotics are given if necessary.

If you don't like this method, try to avoid getting a cold. It's amazing what plenty of rest and sleep, a balanced diet, staying away from crowds, and wearing proper clothes will do to discourage infection. It's really worth trying.

Don't Waste Money On Fuel Additives

Souping up your motor with fuel or oil additives doesn't do very much good or harm—so why spend your money?

Reports from the U. S. Bureau of Standards of tests on more than 150 different fuel and oil additives showed that none of them made any important improvement in engine performance. Some actually cost the operator unnecessary expense.

On the other hand, some of these additives have actually been found to be corrosive to hard metal bearings. Using them will do more harm than good, especially under severe service conditions in farm tractors or trucks.

Other additives upset the chemical balance in motor oils and may cause serious lubricating problems. High-quality modern motor oils are balanced chemically, and will do all the things that makers of oil additives claim that their product will do.

Most additives are made up primarily from light lubricating oils. The only time you would be justified in using a fuel or oil additive would be in an emergency when a valve begins to stick or some other similar trouble arises.

Don't use any additives if you are not having any trouble. If you do have trouble, use them only in an emergency, and then look for the source of the trouble as soon as possible. Put your car, tractor or truck in the hands of a reliable mechanic if the trouble persists.

material to cover grubby area if dusting or scrubbing. The control treatment should be repeated in 25 or 30 days.

REPORT FROM WASHINGTON

By DENNIS CHAVEZ, U. S. S.

Washington — I suppose New Mexico has long been conscious of her small amount of water, which is actually the least amount of running water in any state. The prolonged drought of recent years has brought home to everyone the fears many of us have held about our water shortage. There is no immediate solution to additional water. The problem of today is how to save, and use, what little we have.

In the last Congress we enacted a small water projects program, which holds a lot of promise for New Mexico. The deficiencies are now showing themselves, particularly where there are no organized conservancies or irrigation districts, or any other legal entity, which has the capacity under this law to contract with the United States for development of water.

In the operation of the Act, interested organizations may prepare their plans and make applications for loans through the Bureau of Reclamation and that the Bureau of Reclamation will examine these plans and process the application on acceptable projects. The applicant must advance $1,000 to defray, in part, the cost of examining the proposal and in the event that the Bureau of Reclamation is asked to make special studies for use in the application for a loan, the applicant must advance funds for the Bureau's use in connection with such studies.

There are numerous private developments along the stream systems not only in New Mexico, but in many of the western areas, where assistance is needed, in order to provide diversion dams or headings, improvements to canals, laterals, drainage works, and in some cases regulatory facilities. In most instances they have no organized districts and are not in a position to finance the employment of private engineers or to advance planning funds to the Bureau of Reclamation for making the necessary surveys, designs, cost estimates, or the economic analyses required in determining the non-reimbursable grants to which they may be entitled, in the form of flood control, fish and wildlife benefits, navigation, and sediment retention.

The type of development to which I am referring should receive technical assistance in determining whether or not there is a possibility that they have a feasible project before they are obligated to undergo an expense which may be of no value to them. As a matter of fact, very few of the people who have written to me can visualize how they could receive any benefit from the Small Reclamation Projects Act of 1956.

The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee should be holding hearings shortly on various reclamation proposals. I have written to Senator James Murray, who is chairman of the Committee, about what I have outlined here, and I have also called the observations to the attention of Senator Anderson, who serves on this committee. I feel confident we can get this problem studied.

Two camels plodded along side by side in a caravan crossing the burning desert. Finally one looked around furiously and said: "I don't care what anybody says, I'm thirsty."

This is the bedroom facing the living-terrace at the rear of the home. With folding door closed, the large master bedroom is divided, providing a guest room—with its own closet. Or, this extra room can be used as a den, as a TV room, game room—in short, an all-purpose additional room.

The living-terrace photo snapped by the magazine's photographer for the cover of the 54th edition of SMALL HOMES GUIDE looked so inviting that the editors asked Architect Elmer Gylleck to design a special house, with a patio area just like the one on the cover.

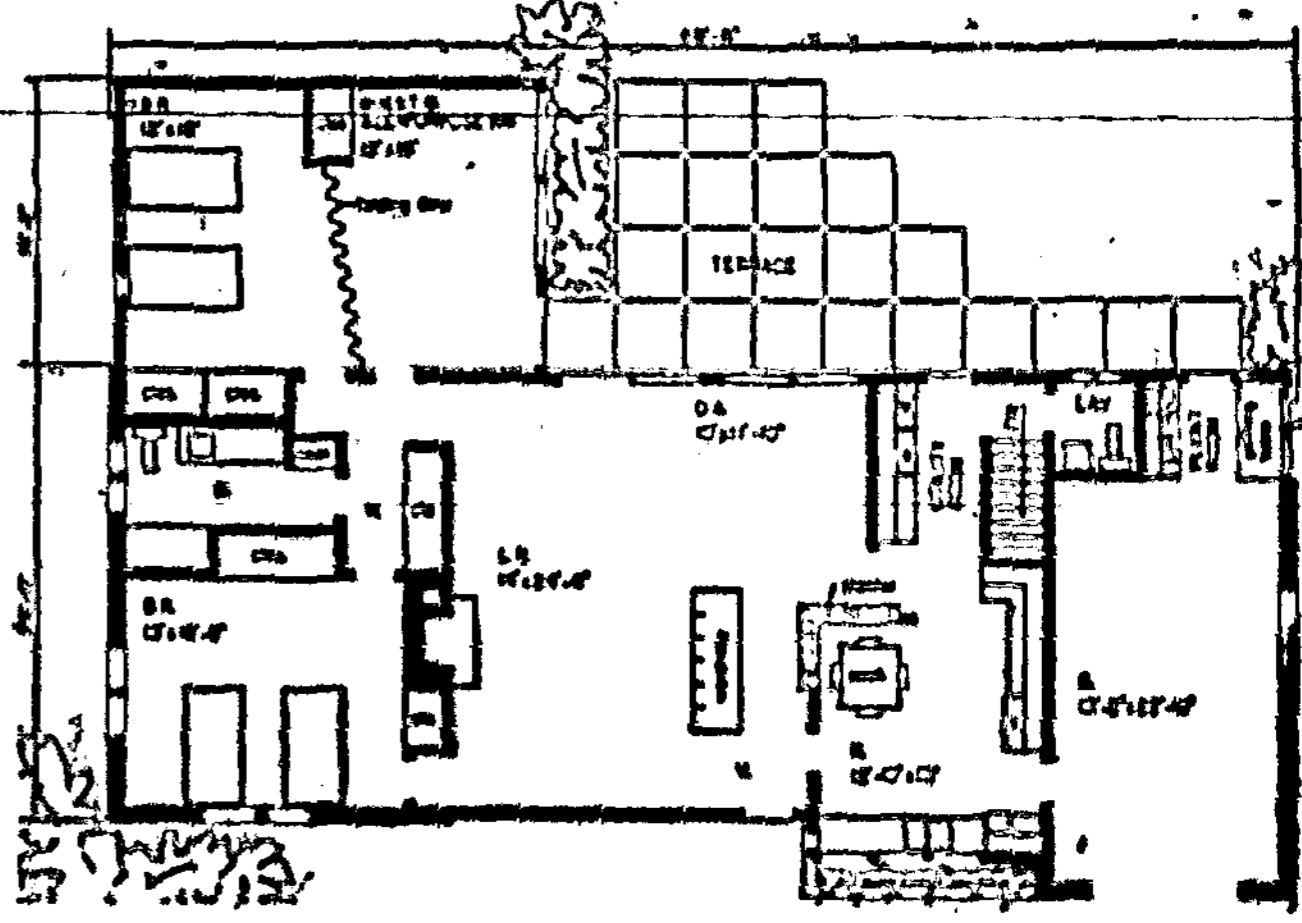

Here is the house. Architect Gylleck came up with. The plan is for a three-bedroom home, two of the bedrooms being separated by a folding door that allows them to open up into one big room.

Open planning is strongly featured in the living-dining area. There is a low planting wall between the breakfast nook and the dining room, enhancing this feeling of openness. Another feature is living room access to the front bedroom, permitting it to be used without disturbing other rooms.

Although the house does have a basement, the laundry has been brought up into a more convenient location for the housewife—near the kitchen. Additional bath facilities have been provided with a washroom off the utility room.

Note the special small room provided at the end of the garage for homeowners with green thumbs. This plant room can be a cheerful place, full of greenery and blooms. A door gives quick access to the outside garden area in the summertime.

The floor area of this house is 1,013 sq. ft. For information on blueprints and their cost, write to SMALL HOMES GUIDE, Dept. 1013, 621 N. Dearborn Street, Chicago 10, Ill.

Methods of Combating Parasites on Poultry

Depluming Mite. The very small depluming mite lives at the base of the feathers, where it usually spends its entire life cycle. The irritation caused by this mite is so intense that a fowl pulls out its own feathers in the badly affected areas, usually around the tail and sometimes on the neck.

Lindane will destroy the depluming mite. Apply to the roost, walls, and litter, using 1 1/2 ounces of 25% lindane in 10 gallons of water. Use new insecticide each year.

Sticktight Flea. The sticktight flea gets its name from its habit of attaching itself very firmly by its mouth parts to the comb, face, earlobes, and wattles of poultry. Fleas are usually found in clusters.

This type of flea breeds in the dust on the floors of poultry houses, as well as on the soil under other houses and out-buildings. Such areas should be cleaned thoroughly and sprayed with lindane, creosote oil, or flooded with water. Since dogs, cats, rats, and wild birds frequently harbor large numbers of these fleas, they should be excluded from the poultry yards as completely as is possible.

Coruco or Mexican Chicken Bug. The coruco is frequently taken for the bluebug because of its large size and similar habits. A coruco is nearly as large, but has only six legs, a slimmer segmented body, two antennae, and a horny skin, in contrast with the leathery skin, lack of antennae, and the oval-shaped body of the bluebug. The coruco lays its eggs in cracks where the young are born and live. It attacks both day and night. Sometimes large numbers of corucos travel from place to place in groups. Control measures include use of lindane as for mites and lice, but require repeated applications, every two or three weeks, until all corucos are gone.

You Help Pay Food Transportation Costs

When you hand the cashier a ten-dollar bill to pay for the groceries, eight cents of that money helps out in paying for the gasoline, railroad rates, and other transportation that speeds the food to the store and to you.

That's how the U. S. Department of Agriculture has it figured. On the average, eight pennies out of every dollar go to pay the cost of hauling groceries to you. And, when you stop to think of it, how many foods you buy are locally produced?

There's a lot of difference in costs of hauling various kinds of food. It all depends on how many miles the food must travel, whether it needs refrigeration, and the retail price per pound.

The transportation cost on a dollar's worth of head lettuce grown in Arizona and sold in Chicago is 23 1/2 cents. But it only costs about a nickel to ship a dollar's worth of concentrated orange juice from Florida to Chicago.

When the price you pay for food at your grocery store changes, the proportion of money that goes for transportation changes, too. For instance, in 1954, the shipping costs for Iowa pork went to New York figured at less than 4 cents for a dollar's worth. A year later the price of pork had gone down, but the same freight charges amounted to over 5 cents on the dollar.

Hazards in highway driving increase with the square of your speed. Thus, driving at 60 is approximately four times as hazardous as traveling at 30 mph.

Controlled on rangeland... These are just a few of the results of research at the Agricultural Experiment Station at New Mexico A&M College, as described in "Progress in Agriculture," the 67th annual report of the station. The 63-page report, which covers research work at A&M from July, 1953, through June, 1956, is now available free at county extension offices or the department of information, P. O. Box 757, State College, N. M.

The booklet discusses latest scientific developments in these subject-matter sections: Field crops, livestock, agricultural economics, horticulture, home economics, poultry, agricultural engineering, dairying, and botany and entomology.

Best Buy Nursery Stock From Licensed Dealers

Are you sure the nursery and floral stock you buy is free from insects and disease? Do you buy from an inspected grower and licensed dealer? Your answer to these questions should be "yes."

From the standpoint of nursery and floral production New Mexico has a unique situation as compared to its neighboring states. As a result, a high percentage of the nursery and floral stock sold in the state must be imported, with the inspected grower supplying the remaining small percentage. Some of the growers supplement their supply by importing stock.

To supply the consumer with insect and disease-free stock is the business and livelihood of some two-hundred licensed nursery and florist dealers, and some ninety inspected growers operating in local communities within the state. They are a part of your community, interested in the community and support it as a taxpayer and in many instances as a contributor to many worthwhile projects. The dealers and growers support laws which are designed to protect the public when buying nursery and florist stock, and in turn are required to comply with these laws before selling such products to the public.

They are also in a position to supply information, should the information be desired, concerning the many aspects connected with the nursery for floral stock they sell. The stock in their place of business, whether grown on their premises or imported, is inspected periodically, and must be free of insects and disease before being sold. Should the situation arise where further discussion or assistance is desired, your grower or dealer is still there in his usual place of business ready to help you.

Before buying nursery or floral stock it is advantageous, and in most cases, cheaper in the long run to consult your local licensed dealer or inspected grower. The price may not be what you expected to pay, but many bargains are not always bargains. In some cases, you may be able to obtain twice the number of plants, but if they do not grow, you still have no live plants, and twice as many to dig up and discard. One good live, green, growing plant looks better than two or three dead ones. It is with nursery and floral stock as with anything else—you get only what you pay for.

The more people who can answer you to the above two questions, the more beautiful, healthier, growing green plant life can be seen in New Mexico.

Need Good Records For Wool Payments

Sales documents are required in support of applications filed by producers for payments under the wool program.

Wool producers are reminded that the best time to obtain adequate sales documents is at the time shorn wool or unshorn lambs are sold.

Sales documents must show: (1) The name and address of the producer; (2) date of sale; (3) net weight of wool sold, or in the case of unshorn lambs, the number and liveweight of the unshorn lambs sold; (4) the name, address and signature of the buyer; and (5) in the case of shorn wool, the net amount paid the producer where the sale was at his farm, ranch or local shipping point, or the marketing deductions and net sales proceeds where the wool is sold on consignment through a pool cooperative or other marketing agency.

In making applications for payment on the sale of shorn wool or unshorn lambs, the producer will be required to report the date of purchase, the number, and the liveweight of unshorn lambs purchased by him on or after April 1, 1956 and before March 31, 1957.

Considerable inconvenience was encountered by producers who did not obtain proper sales documents for their sales in the 1955 marketing year. Many applications consequently had to be returned for additional information.

The National Wool Act became effective for the sale of shorn wool and lambs sold with the wool on at the beginning of the 1955 marketing year. The legislation provides for payments to producers to bring the national average return for wool up to the incentive price level. The announced incentive price level for wool sold in the 1956 marketing year, starting April 1, 1956 is 62 cents a pound, the same as the level for the 1955 marketing year.

● JEST IN FUN

A group of freshmen taking astrology had their first class in the observation lab one evening. The professor went to the telescope and began to make an observation. Just then a star fell. "That was a fine shot," one of the students said. "Why, you hardly had time to take aim."

A kindergarten teacher putting her charges through a psychological test set them to work carving soap. "Panda, dog, man, table, tree, gun, car," she

'Hopper Feed Bill Could Amount to $4 1/2 Million

Four-and-a-half million dollars—that's how much grasshoppers could cost New Mexico farmers and ranchers in 1957, according to recent infestation predictions. Dollars-and-cents-wise, the pests will probably be more expensive to farmers than ranchers, but area-wise, they pose a serious threat to more than 2 1/2 million acres of rangeland. Extent of damage will depend on the severity of the prolonged drought and growth of range forage.

Infestations in 1956 were almost as widespread, but control operations in some areas helped to hold crop and rangeland damage to a minimum, says John J. Durkin, extension entomologist at New Mexico A&M College. For example, treatment of 672,000 acres of range in Colfax, Union, Lea and Lincoln counties in 1956 resulted in a 95 per cent kill. Ranchers paid $118,300 for the control work, which will save them more than 1 1/2 million dollars worth of range forage. Similar amounts were paid by the state and federal governments who shared in the cost of the control operations.

Perennial trouble spots in range counties are the San Augustine Plains area of Catron and Socorro, and rangeland in Union, Colfax, Curry, Quay, Lea, and Lincoln counties.

He wrote as the tots told her what they were making. Then she came to a lad whose work appeared to defy description. "What's this?" she asked. "Soap flakes," said he.

He: "Can I turn off the hall lights?"
She: "Yes, you may."
He: "Can I turn off the ceiling lights?"
She: "Sure Robert."
He: "Can I turn off the table lamps?"
She: "Why, yes, Dobbie."
He: "Now that it's dark in here, can I ask you a question?"
She: "Yes, dear."
He: "Say, do you thing this luminous necktie is worth two bucks?"

Butterfield Trail

and hearty, that he knew him well, and if she would get in his car he would drive her out there, some twelve miles. They found Mr. Woods' home and when she gave him the description of the grave and its location, he said, "It's right over there about a mile and a half." He got in the car with her and they drove to the grave. There was the old wagon road, the old horseback trail bearing off to the right and in the forks of this was the grave. The rocks were still there, the old headboard and footboard were still standing. The wind had blown the sand against the edge of the boards and worn them down to almost a feather edge.

Mr. Woods told her that he recalled when he first located it that there was writing on the headboard describing the two bodies that were buried there and after she had called Jim Giddings' name he recalled that that was one of the names on the headboard. He could not recall the name of the other party, and I do not recall Mother or Dad ever mentioning the other party's name.

Mrs. Brown thought it very remarkable that for sixty years this information had been within 150 miles of her and she had never learned of it, but the day she was ready to make a trip to Arizona to see if she could learn anything in regard to her father, a man stepped up and told her right where to go.

Her first idea was to dig up the remains and bring them to San Antonio, but there were two skeletons in there. The description Mother gave of them—one was a tall man, evidently six foot or more; the other one was a man of rather short stature. One of them had a great deal of gold filling in his teeth; the other one had good teeth. But she had no description of her father and she didn't know which one of the skeletons would be him.

She then decided to put a monument over the grave just marking a historical point in Arizona (actually New Mexico). She had a 12,000 or 15,000 pound

County Student on Dean's Honor Roll

State College, N. M. — Eddis Petross of Claunch is among 50 students at New Mexico A&M to be named to the Dean's Honor Roll for the school of agriculture and home economics for the fall semester of the school year 1956-57.

Petross, a senior, is majoring in agriculture education. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Petross.

rock of granite shipped out there and hauled out and set either on the grave or by the grave, I don't know which. I hope she had it behind the grave as the rocks and the old wooden headboard would be rather an interesting feature to look at. She had engraved on this stone all the information that she had been able to pick up in regard to the death of her father. If you will drive over the old Butterfield Road at this end of Stein's Pass you will find the stone.

(Perry said he remembered talking to Mrs. Brown at Stein's and the tombstone reaching there very promptly after her return to San Antonio. The stone remained on the outside platform of the freight house for some months before the persons who had agreed to erect it, got busy. Then, not knowing where Giddings had died, they set up the stone, where at that time there were two short boards, worn thin but still standing.

(Giddings was killed about a half mile east of the stage stop and on the south side of the largest wash, Perry believes, but the monument is about three miles west of where it should be. However, the monument is on the south side and close to the wash's eroding bank.

The Giddings monument, his grave and the Butterfield building definitely are in New Mexico, and east Doubtful Canyon, Perry said.)

We can say of such people:—How can there be defeat?
