EARLY-DAY LAKE VALLEY SCENE

The stubborn little mule is balking at having his ear pulled by Arthur Lea Rice, a boy who was living in Lake Valley, Sierra County at the time this photograph was taken between 1900 and 1903. The building directly back of the boy was the Keller-Miller store. At the right was the former post office, and at the rear of that building is shown part of the former Cosmopolitan Hotel and Restaurant. This photo is from D. M. Miller's collection of early-day Lake Valley pictures.

Lowell Preston Lindsay of Nogal left Carrizozo Tuesday, March 5, for the induction center at Albuquerque. He is the only youth to be called up for service from Lincoln County this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Petty Sr. were co-hosts. Music for dancing was donated by the Southwestern Music Co., courtesy Jack Harkey.

Refreshments of sandwiches, potato salad, punch, cake and ice cream were served.

JEST IN FUN

A father was teaching his small daughter to tell time.

"These are the hours, these are the minutes, and these are the seconds," he said, pointing them out. The small girl looked puzzled. "Where are the jiffies?"

Jones: "You don't want to plant these seeds. It says on the packet it will take them two years to bloom."

Smith: "That's all right, I took them out of last year's catalogue."

TV Adds Spice to Cooking

Here's food for debate in the kitchen—TV or not TV?

Television in the kitchen—many housewives (and their husbands) would object strenuously because of the distracting influence TV could have in this "work room."

Other wives, however, would be sure to hail kitchen television as a morale booster, and point out how ideal it would be for cooking programs and shows on the subject of the home.

But other features of the efficiently designed kitchen pictured above would find most women in delighted agreement. The handy telephone gives counter steps and the sliding windows of ponderosa pine look out on a relaxing view and let in plenty of light and air.

The spotlights over the counter area are vision savers at night and the double sink of stainless steel is efficient and easy to clean. An overall atmosphere of warmth is provided by the cabinets of ponderosa pine, which are stained to bring out the natural beauty of the wood. The windows are painted to add a touch of color.

Windows Add Style, Color To All Homes

In architectural circles, the question occasionally arises: Why not build a house without windows? The reasons are obvious. A house needs windows for light, air, and visibility. No amount of artificial lighting can replace sunlight. Even air conditioning is no substitute for a spring breeze. And since his cave-dwelling days, man has had an inherent need to gaze outside. Less obvious, however, is the fact that windows are also one of the best decorating elements a house has. Various shapes, sizes and styles can enhance the architectural design and color can improve the overall decorating scheme both inside and out.

Wood windows offer architects and home-owners both these advantages. Because they are made of ponderosa pine they can be painted when new to harmonize with color plans, then repainted as often as the home-owner cares to make decorating changes.

In choosing exterior colors for windows, the home-owner should observe a few points of caution, according to Practical Builder magazine, light-construction industry publication.

Windows, the magazine says, should be painted in warm, inviting colors which harmonize with the roof, trim and siding. Bright accent colors should be reserved for focal points, such as on the panels of a modern panel entrance door or on window boxes. One exception, Practical Builder says, is on picture windows, which frequently are painted in the accent color.

The color of windows inside depends primarily on the size of rooms and the home-owner's taste. A room can be made to appear larger by painting windows the same color as the walls. On the other hand, painting the windows in a contrasting color will break up large wall expanses and add highlights. Considered soft warmth can be added to a room by staining the clear ponderosa pine in one of a number of shades from mahogany to blond. This retains the richness of the natural wood grain.

INSIDE THE CAPITAL

resist additional illegitimates too much because each one brings an increase in the state check... Best approach to the problem seems to be in hunting down the fathers and requiring them to put up support for their babies. There is already law for that if the district attorneys would do it.

GOVERNOR GIVEN NEW AUTHORITY

The Democratic controlled legislature (68 per cent of the members) has whipped through a reorganization of the state money control system that will give the Republican governor new authority over the so-called independent state offices.

Democrat Jim Hannah, the elected auditor, will no longer have control over current spending, that authority being transferred to one of the governor's hired men. The reorganization of the money-control gives the governor additional power over all spending of public money, and raises the possibility of the governor moving in on the huge roads operation.

The Democratic senate refused to confirm Republican appointees to the Democratic highway commission. If the commission becomes defiant of the Republican administration it may be expected that the governor will use the new authority given him by the current legislature and the new powers set up for money control by the special election of 1935 when the constitution was amended regarding the independence of the state highway commission. It appears that the executive could bring the commission to its knees.

THE LEGISLATORS' GOOD AND NAUGHTY

Two members of the current session of the legislature have been missing meetings because of Bourbon poisoning... One legislative figure is confronted with a divorce case because of his carryings on in Santa Fe... Two senators have embarrassed colleagues with off-color stories on the floor while children and women were in the gallery... These are the exceptions. The legislators generally are cleaner and more serious than usual. There is no legislative poker game, no party hide-outs, no glaring scandals, such as have marred some other sessions... Sen. Plm Carr of DeBaca was the only one frightened by the senate vote repealing the unpopular welfare lion law. He voted against repeal but after tallying the vote and learning it has carried changed his vote to show that he had also voted for repeal. No others changed. Adoption of the lion act in 1933 was the cause of some legislators falling reelection.

FUNDAMENTALS FOR THE FARMER

The address made by Charles B. Shuman, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, at that organization's recent annual meeting was notable by any standard.

Mr. Shuman laid down a set of fundamentals that are basic to a sound and successful agriculture. The first is freedom to change—to make shifts in farm operations in response to variations in supply and demand. That freedom, he then pointed out, has been restricted by government pricing and acreage control programs.

A second fundamental—and to many minds this will seem the most important of all—is a free market for farm products, a market in which farmers "... are free to sell their products at any time, at any price, and in any quantity for the best price possible." One of the features of such a market, Mr. Shuman pointed out, "... is that it clears itself." And he gave as a concrete example of this: "During the past year, we have produced livestock and dairy products at an all-time high rate in a relatively free market, and yet we have little accumulation of surplus.

Still another fundamental is the opportunity to accumulate capital and to own property. Here Mr. Shuman made a trenchant comment: "One of the greatest barriers to the accumulation of capital is high taxes. In turn, high taxes are a result of the public demand for more and more government services. Farmers have been as guilty as other folks in their demands for the subsidies and protection that big government offers."

Removing Crayon Marks From Walls

Small children with crayons usually leave their artistic marks on this world at one time or other. And often their murals and vivid designs are displayed on the living room or bedroom wallpaper.

When this happens, don't try to remove the stain with water or other liquid cleaner that may drive the stain deeper or spread it.

Instead, remove crayon marks by one of the following methods:

1. Scrape off as much of the crayon as possible with a table knife. Then sponge lightly with a cloth dampened with a fat-solvent, such as carbon tetrachloride, acetone, or denatured alcohol.
2. Or apply a blotter to the crayon spots and press over the blotter with a warm iron.
3. If there are still some grease stains, apply a thick layer of Fuller's earth, cornmeal, cornstarch, or talcum powder to the spots. After 24 hours, lightly brush off the powder.

Homemakers are cautioned to have the room well ventilated.
