

Ramblin' Around Lincoln County

(The pioneer story was written by Mrs. Annie E. Lesnett to her daughter, Mrs. Edith Crowford. Mrs. Lesnett came to Carrizozo in 1828 and lived here until her death in 1843. Permission to use the article has been granted by the Museum of New Mexico, Santa Fe, custodian for material gathered in the Federal Writers' Project.)

A PIONEER STORY

I have lived in the State of New Mexico for 61 years. I lived in Roswell for 25 years and in Lincoln County for 36 years. I met my husband, Frank Lesnett, in Chicago, Illinois, when I was 16 years old. He was born in Ohio. He joined the regular army at Fort Selden, Ohio, in 1870, for a period of five years and was sent to Fort Stanton, N. M., to serve his enlistment, fighting the Indians. He was discharged in 1875 at Ft. Stanton. He came back to Chicago and we were married July 19, 1876. We lived in Chicago for a while but Frank was never satisfied, for he loved the West and wanted to come back to Lincoln County. So he left me in Chicago with my people and he came back to Ruidoso, New Mexico and bought a half interest in the Dowlin's Mill.

This mill was owned by Paul and Will Dowlin at the time. Frank stayed there and sent for me and our baby son. I came by train from Chicago to La Junta, Colorado, and from La Junta to Fort Stanton on Numa Raymond's stage coach, drawn by four horses. Numa Raymond and his bride, who was from St. Louis, were passengers on the stage with me. I do not remember any of the places that we stopped except Jerry Hocradle's place, where we stayed all night and changed teams.

We had a very pleasant trip, no scares from Indians or desperados, although I was very much afraid of the Indians. My husband had told me so much about them and how they would go on the warpath, but at that time they were supposed to stay on the Mescalero Reservation.

My husband met me at Fort Stanton. He was driving two big bay horses to a Studebaker hack. The horses were named "Bill Johnson" and "Bill Dowlin." How happy I was when my husband met me and we drove up the beautiful canyon toward the White Mountains.

It was in May 1877. We went by way of the Pat Garrett Ranch which was located on Little Creek, and on by Alto and down Gavilan canyon to the Ruidoso. When we arrived at Dowlin's Mill I saw some blood in the front yard. Frank told me that a man named Jerry Dalton had shot and killed Paul Dowlin the day before. Dalton left the country and was never heard of again.

My new home was a four-room log house, with a big fireplace in the front room, which we called the parlor. We used kerosene lamps and candles for lights. A man by the name of Johnnie Patton cooked for us. We boarded several of the men who worked in the mills and helped on the farms.

We raised hogs and sold them to Fort Stanton. We raised our own feed to fatten the hogs and in the fall of the year the farm hands would butcher about a hundred hogs at a time. I would get some of the neighbor women to come and help render out the lard. We used a big iron pot and rendered up the lard out in the yard. I raised lots of turkeys and chickens and sold them at Fort Stanton.

I was always so afraid of the wild beasts that roamed around in the hills. I remember one time, my husband and the cook had to go to Lincoln to court and left a Mrs. Johnson with me and my three children, to stay alone at night. One night after we had all gone to bed, Mrs. Johnson and I heard something prowling around the house. We lay real still and listened, for we did not know whether it was Indians or wild beasts.

We did not have to wait long to know, for it was a mountain lion and when he got up real near the house he let out a roar. We almost died of fright, for we were afraid that he would break the windows and come in after us. We moved all the furniture and barricaded the doors and windows.

The lion kept walking around the house and roaring. After a while he left and went down to the cow pen and killed one of our milk pen calves. I told my husband when he came home the next day, that I would never stay home with just women folks again, and I never did while we lived on the ranch. (To Be Continued)

Most of the cast iron has arrived for the disposal plant. While the sewer line construction is under way, streets are temporarily blocked and clouds of dust swirl around homes as bulldozers and trenchers work.

Agriculture Dept. May Make Request For Stanton's Acres

Washington, May 13. — Public lands is now quite a bit of news in New Mexico. There is going to be another withdrawal from the public domain very shortly, I suspect.

The Secretary of Agriculture may make a formal request for withdrawal of some 20,000 acres, which comprises the old Fort Stanton Marine Hospital reservation in Lincoln County. This has always been federal land, however.

The Department of the Interior, to which I managed to get the federal land transferred when the Public Health Service abandoned the hospital, will turn it over to the Department of Agriculture, according to present plans, for joint use by the Agricultural Research Service of the USDA and New Mexico's ARMA.

The two would conduct studies in sheep and cattle breeding, wildlife management, and range management for dual use by game and livestock. This is what has been desired by the major livestock groups in New Mexico.

The proposal overlooks the major claims to the land by the Mescalero Indians and the interests of livestock people who immediately adjoin the land. Therefore, it is probable that these people who have a direct or indirect interest in the land will not favor the governmental proposal for use of the reservation. I have insisted the Department of the Interior sit down with all interested parties and go into the disposal, just as I did in Santa Fe some two years ago. This will be arranged once a formal request from the Secretary of Agriculture reaches the Interior.

There will be a meeting of a relatively small group, to be made up of one representative from the Mescalero Apache Tribe, the Livestock Associations, the State Game and Fish Commission, the State College, and the Department of Agriculture. If there is still disagreement, I think the whole thing should be thrown open to a public hearing. I am quite sure there is going to be no general agreement on this idea, and I believe

Others find it in turning a spadeful of living soil in the pool of the morning, or in the mellow roll of the furrow alike at plowing time, for soil not only gives life, it in itself is a living thing, a combination of living organisms around a skeleton of finely ground particles of sand, silt, and clay.

All of us sense our dependence on the soil in the food we eat, many of the clothes we wear and in our houses.

The longing for land ownership—ownership of the acres one operates, a desire for that "poultry farm" to which one will retire, or "just a place to raise a few flowers" represents man's feeling that land is something stable, something to which he can tie, something in which he can sink his roots. In it he finds security amid peace.

Closely allied to that desire to possess land is the hope and the promise of fulfillment which land gives—hope for stability, for security, for peaceful living; the promise of bountiful harvests, food and a place one can call home.

This longing for land is universal. It surges no less in the heart of a Chinese, an Asian, or a European than in the heart of an American. Because of it, revolutions have occurred and wars have been fought. Yet it is a universal feeling so strong that it may yet help provide a basis on which man—and consequently nations—will learn to live in peace.

With a bit of land, man enjoys its use and its harvest. To get the most from it, he gives it his best knowledge of management and culture. And of the culture he bestows on it, the highest form is wise use of land and conservation measures.

The good soil steward knows that conservation helps make the hope and promise a reality, both now and for the decades and centuries to come.

Since soil is a God-given heritage to all people, man is merely its custodian and good stewardship is a sacred responsibility. Fortunately, it also is good business since it results in higher income, better living, greater ease of farming, lower production costs and greater efficiency in the use of labor and machinery.

Not only the material benefits but the spiritual feeling for the land must be added together to explain the intense and widespread support of modern, scientific soil and water conservation which has swept the country in recent years. Such interest is seen in the long hours which thousands of non-salaried soil conservation district supervisors are giving to speed up the program. It is seen in the many ways found by almost all groups to advance the conservation program. This is true of rural, urban, industrial, civic, professional, wildlife and other organizations.

Services Here for Child Auto Victim

Services are to be held at the Shaw Mortuary Chapel in Carrizozo Saturday afternoon for Linda Sue Cooper, age 16 1/2 months, who was fatally injured in a car accident last Friday night near Corona.

The child, daughter of Harry and Marlene Cooper, received a basal skull fracture when their car left the pavement on Highway 54, 7 miles south of Corona, and overturned three times. She was brought to Carrizozo hospital, along with her parents, by Jesse Wade and J. H. Carnell of Corona. Mr. Cooper sustained a skull fracture and Mrs. Cooper lesser injuries. Both were recovering this week in the hospital.

The accident was investigated by Sheriff S. M. Ortiz. It was stated that Cooper, who was on leave from the Service, and Mrs. Cooper were en route to Minneapolis.

The service at the Shaw Chapel will be in charge of Rev. Ralph Soller, pastor of the Asbury Methodist Church of El Paso. The child's remains will be shipped to Minneapolis.

The Cooper's auto was reported a total wreck. The accident was said to have been caused when the car, at a speed of approximately 60 m.p.h., struck loose gravel on the side of the pavement, swerved across the highway and overturned.

Mrs. Gavina Mirabal

THE JUVENILE CODE OF NEW MEXICO

By GINA ALLEN.

Executive Secretary, Third Judicial District Youth Commission

(SERIES II)

It is a matter of record that the capitol of the United States spends more money taking care of the monkeys in the zoo than it spends taking care of the children it hopes to re-educate and rehabilitate in the city's detention homes. Lack of financing has hampered the work of our corrective schools, our juvenile courts, and our probation offices all over the country.

In New Mexico many of our courts are so poor they must borrow money from the state in order to bring a case to trial. Obviously they have no funds to spend for probation work with the juveniles brought before the juvenile court.

Section 13-8-24 of the Juvenile Code, which is reprinted below, provides that where there are no probation offices the juvenile attorney performs the functions of a probation officer. The juvenile attorney is also the district attorney. He is usually overworked and under-paid. He is trained as a prosecutor not as a social welfare worker. With the best intent in the world he has neither the time nor the training to undertake the work of a probation officer. He will have to do so, however, in far too many instances, until the people of New Mexico realize that it is poor economy to set up courts which cannot function properly because they are under financed. Money spent on probation today means children's lives saved, means less adult crime in the future, and a saving, in dollars and cents, to the society which has to build and maintain our reform schools and our penitentiaries.

Several sections of New Mexico's Juvenile Code follow:

13-8-23 — Juvenile attorney — Counties having juvenile court probation office.—In those counties in which a juvenile court probation office is established, the juvenile attorney shall be the legal advisor to the juvenile court probation office staff. The juvenile attorney shall prepare and file any petition made upon the request of a probation officer.

13-8-24 — Juvenile attorney — Counties without juvenile court probation office.—The juvenile court attorney, in all those judicial districts which do not have fully appointed juvenile court probation officers, shall receive complaints which allege that a juvenile has committed an act bringing him within the provisions of this Juvenile Code (13-8-19 to 13-8-73). Upon the complaint, made by a responsible person over the age of twenty-one (21) years, the juvenile attorney shall make an inquiry as to the allegations made in the complaint and a preliminary investigation of the matter in the same manner as a duly appointed probation officer.

13-8-25 — Preliminary investigation — Report — Petition.—If the inquiry and preliminary investigation discloses that no further action shall be brought, the juvenile attorney shall report the results of the preliminary investigation to the juvenile court. If the inquiry and preliminary investigation discloses that further action is warranted, the juvenile attorney shall bring such action by filing with the clerk of said juvenile court a petition, which may, upon information and belief, show that there is within the jurisdiction of said juvenile court, a juvenile alleged to be within the provisions of this Code (13-8-19 to 13-8-73).

This section concerns the investigation by the juvenile attorney whereby he determines whether or not there is sufficient evidence to warrant him bringing the case into court, or whether he believes that the situation could, best be adjudicated out of court, and if he determines both of these points in the affirmative, then the juvenile is released without a hearing, but may be placed on voluntary probation. If he determines these two points in the negative, then the case is filed and brought before the juvenile court and tried, however, this section also gives any responsible person over 21 years of age the power to sign a complaint directly in juvenile court and have the case brought in for trial. In other words, a person cannot say that nothing can be done because the juvenile attorney will not act, or some other person will not act, as any citizen has as much right to act as anyone else.

13-8-26 — Original jurisdiction of juvenile court.—The juvenile court shall have exclusive original jurisdiction in proceedings: (a) Concerning any juvenile under the age of eighteen (18) years living or found within the county.

(1) Who has violated any law of the state, or any ordinance or regulation of a political subdivision thereof;

(2) Or, who by reason of habitually refusing to obey the reasonable and lawful commands or directions of his or her parent, parents, guardian, custodian, teacher, or any person of lawful authority is deemed to be habitually uncontrolled, habitually disobedient, or habitually wayward;

(3) Or, who is habitually truant from school or home;

(4) Or, who habitually endangers himself as to his life or endangers the morals, health, or welfare of himself or others.

Highway Fatalities Rank as State's Third Major Cause of Death

Santa Fe (Special)—Highway fatalities, which ranked as the third major cause of death in the state last year and the fourth leading cause in the nation, is becoming "our national number one public health problem," according to the weekly bulletin issued by the State Health Department.

The bulletin states that the New Mexico Traffic Safety Commission reported 12,975 motor vehicle accidents in the state during 1936, accounting for 4,003 non-fatal injuries. The division of vital statistics of the State Health Department reports 411 highway deaths.

Bernalillo County led the state with 49 deaths; McKinley was second with 42, and San Juan third with 34. Catron was the only county without a single highway fatality.

Highway deaths recorded for the remainder of the state follow: Valencia 30, Lea 26, Eddy 21, Otero 20, Santa Fe 17, Guadalupe 16, Chaves and Sandoval 14 each, Taos and Luna 11 each, Rio Arriba 10, Torrance 9, Lincoln and Curry 8 each, Dona Ana, Sierra, San Miguel, De Baca, Quay and Grant, 7 each, Socorro 6, Colfax and Roosevelt 5 each, Union and Hidalgo 4 each, Los Alamos and Mora 2 each, and Harding 1.

Clovis Plans for Its Golden Anniversary

Clovis — A bit of Americana unfolded in terms of 50 years of progress will be the central theme of Clovis' Golden Anniversary celebration to be held here June 7-8.

Some of the main events in the two-day celebration include a parade, rodeo, free barbecue, old-fashioned style review presenting fashions from the Gay 90's to the flapper era of the Roarin' 20's, two "fly-in" breakfasts for private plane operators, and programs starring nationally-known entertainers.

Rounding out the long list of features geared to every taste and all ages are such events as free street dances, old fiddlers' contest, beard-growing contest, hoop skirt contest, saw milking contest, a variety of concerts, a special Santa Fe Railway program and the dedication of nearby Carillon Air Force Base.

"We are confronted with a massacre without precedent, without good reason, and without a ready solution," the report says.

Traffic Safety Commission records show about 40% of the fatal accidents in New Mexico in 1936 were caused by excessive speed. About 28% were caused by the driver being under the influence of alcohol.

FOLKLORE CORNER

By TED RAYNOR

(Editor's note: The following Las Cruces incidents, dating back from 30 to 50 years, were related by B. G. Dyne, long-time Las Cruces druggist.)

'PURGE' OF THE VOTERS

Between 40 and 50 years ago the lot back of the Las Cruces Drugstore, where the Masonic building now stands, was surrounded by an adobe wall. There, on election day, the Republicans, then by far the most numerous party in town, "corraled" as many voters as possible. To keep the voters in a contented frame of mind, cooking facilities were set up on the lot and Mexican food was served. And generally there was a barrel of wine to clinch their party loyalty.

On one election day two young fellows came into Dyne's Las Cruces Drug Co. Store, on Main Street south of the present Las Cruces Drug, and asked a clerk for Croton oil. They bought all that was in stock—1½ ounces, the equivalent of 700 drops. Croton oil was a powerful purgative and an adult was never given more than a drop well diluted with water. The oil also was used for blistering the joints of horses.

On the sly, the pranksters poured the Croton oil into the barrel of wine; and pretty soon, Dyne recalled, all the doctors in Las Cruces were treating voters in the adobe-walled lot. Presumably, some of the "purged" voters got to the polls before closing time.

The election methods have changed vastly—and all to the good—since those days when the voters came out in line from the adobe-walled lot, tickets in their hands so that they would be sure to vote Republican on reaching the polls.

There were very few Democrats in Las Cruces at that time, but you could gamble on a Spanish-American Democrat being arrested on election day, Dyne said. On one election day in Las Cruces 75 Democrats were in jail. No one seemed to know exactly what the charges were. The Democrats always were released after the polls closed or on the following day.

THE TAMALES BUSINESS THAT FAILED

For several years, before 1925, a Spanish-American man peddled tamales along Main Street in Las Cruces, selling them for 10 cents a dozen. People employed in Dyne's Las Cruces Drug Co. were among those who bought the tamales for lunch or at intervals during the day.

Living with the peddler and his wife was a nephew who helped in the underhanded business that finally came to light and forced the tamale man to seek another occupation.

One morning, as Dyne opened his store, he saw the boy standing outside and asked him why he was not with his uncle. The boy said his uncle had kicked him out the night before.

"But he'll be sorry," the boy told Dyne. "I caught that big dog a few nights ago."

The dog, which probably weighed 70 pounds, belonged to Mrs. Santiago Ascarate, who lived in the block south of Dyne's store.

The boy had let the cat out of the bag.

He helped his uncle steal fat goats from farmers to provide meat for the tamales. When there were no fat goats to be stolen, dog meat was used in the tamales. How long, none of the customers knew, but a surprising number of dogs in the downtown area had disappeared.

Well-fed cats also had disappeared, and it was suspected that they had found their way into tamales when there was neither goat nor dog meat available. It was suspected, too, that jackrabbit meat had been used at times.

The tamale peddler's business failed in a hurry.

THE VANISHED BANKERS

In territorial days two brothers came to Las Cruces, easily obtained a charter under the territorial government and opened a bank. People trustingly deposited their money. One morning, several months later, when customers came to the bank, the woman clerk told them the brothers were not there.

Nobody knew where the brothers came from; nobody ever knew where the two went. All that was known about their disappearance was that they had left on the night train for Albuquerque, taking all the cash in the bank which totaled between $50,000 and $60,000.

Santa Visits 'His Ranch' Near Green Tree

Santa Claus in person, red suited and bewhiskered, paid a personal visit May 11 to the site of his new southern branch—the Santa Claus Ranch of Ruidoso—two miles east of Green Tree on U. S. Highway 70.

According to the Ruidoso News a crowd of more than 100 persons, most of them children were on hand to watch the first spadeful of dirt turned in the construction of a fabulous children's playground, which has now begun.

The incorporated playground enterprise, headed by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schneider, T. B. Hood, Jodie Filleman and Mayor Don Snyder, all of Ruidoso, may have portions ready to open to the public late this summer. Besides Filleman, Schneider said J. B. Emde and other contractors would be at work to speed the initial construction.

In the ground breaking ceremony, the Rev. Wm. B. Holmes, Jr., First Presbyterian Church minister of Ruidoso, spoke an invocation.

T. B. Hood, Ruidoso banker, was master of ceremonies for the brief program.

Lake J. Frazier, Roswell, president of the Ruidoso bank, turned the first spadeful as Santa stood by watching the event. Schneider spoke briefly and then Santa distributed candy to the children present.

The 30-acre tract on the national Highway 70 route is to be converted into a children's playground, at an expenditure of some $300,000 now, and eventually a sum of half a million dollars is to be invested in the project if its incorporators estimate.

Candy houses, steam trains, lots of baby animals, souvenir shops, toy shops, a herd of reindeer and other attractions are planned. The buildings will all be in fairyland style, colorful and in keeping with the story-book characters of Mother Goose tales.

Santa was on hand through the courtesy of Carter's Mercantile Co. of Green Tree.

Per capita consumption of paper and paperboard in the United States has risen to 421 pounds, more than 130 times the figure for many Antille and Near East countries.

Canon City, Colo., May 15.—Members of the senior class of Capitan High School visited Colorado's famed Royal Gorge on their recent tour.

It was a highlight of a trip that included points of scenic and historic interest in and around Denver, Colorado Springs and Canon City.

Several of us witnessed the performance of our aerial might at Holloman Air Development Center last Saturday and were thrilled by the take-off of a Matador, the Falcon kill of Q-2 drone, the incredibly fast sled run, the ground to air rockets, the mighty sonic boom that shook the houses and broke some glass, the neatness and alertness of the base and the skill and energy of personnel.

Bill Gould, formerly of Fort Stanton, now with the Inspector General's office, took some of us on a tour of the base. There is a regular little Fort Stanton colony at Holloman now.

2,397 Babies Born in State During March

Santa Fe, May — New Mexico women, ranging in age from 14 to 50, gave birth to some 2,397 babies during March, according to the State Health Department's Division of Vital Statistics. Four babies were born to 14-year-old mothers while the oldest mother was a 50 year-old Navajo from San Juan county. The most popular age for new mothers is between 20 and 24. Some 703 babies were born to mothers in this age group.

Legislation Provides Federal Aid on Land And Water Problems

The 1957 session of New Mexico Legislature passed enabling legislation which permits local groups of landowners to work together in solving mutual problems caused by floods, Robert L. Guice, extension soil conservationist at New Mexico A&M College, states.

The purpose of the act is to enable local groups to secure federal assistance provided in Public Law 556, (Small Watershed Act) and amendatory legislation. Thus New Mexico now has the ability to further conservation, development, utilization, flood prevention and disposal of water, and thereby preserve and protect the land and water resources of the state.

The conservationist said landowners within a proposed watershed district must file a petition with the local Soil Conservation District board of supervisors.

Within 30 days the supervisors must hold a public hearing on the proposal. If the board of supervisors finds that the proposed watershed is feasible it shall hold a referendum on the question.

If the results of the referendum show that a majority of the votes cast favor creation of the watershed district, then the supervisors certify such results to the county court clerk and the watershed district is duly created.

The watershed district will be governed by a board of five elected directors. Each director must be a landowner.

Local groups seeking federal assistance under the Small Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act do not need to organize a watershed district until the final work plan has been approved by the USDA.

Santa Fe and Electronics
New electronic methods keep constant check on all freight cars moving over Santa Fe rails

New electronic wonders are contributing to precision railroading on the Santa Fe.
Takes freight car locating, for instance. With our Red Ball service, we can "put the finger" any time on any one of many thousands of freight cars moving over the 13,150 miles of Santa Fe rails every day.
Information on these cars is recorded on cards which are fed into electronic machines. These "electronic brains" process the cards in less than 2,000 per minute—and tell us within a few seconds where every car is, and what it contains, where it is going.
This information is immediately available for our customers. Shippers of produce may take advantage of any changing market conditions and divert their shipments while on route to other points where markets may be more favorable.
With this advice, consignees know in advance the time of arrival of their shipments. This facilitates their plans for delivery of shipments or scheduling of production.
This method of locating freight cars is only one of the many electronic tools now employed by Santa Fe. Some of the others are microwaves, two-way radio, and superonic rail detectors.
Something new in the science of railroading is a daily objective on the Santa Fe—the railroad that's always on the move toward a better way.

Grasshoppers are again likely to be a menace on the rangeland in Lincoln County this year. Now is the time to start looking for the newly hatched hoppers; they will be small and extremely hard to find.

The hoppers usually hatch in protected places such as canyon bottoms or old dead grass. If you have a small isolated hopper infestation, it will pay to spray them before they spread to the surrounding rangeland.

Dieldrin, aldrin, or heptachlor are some of the many chemicals that could be used in hopper control.

If the infestation is large, let me know immediately so that a control program can be started before it is too late. The rancher, federal and state each share one-third of the cost of the control program.

Ernest McDaniel and Ralph Bonnell last week told me about the livestock marketing association they have formed to sell their cattle.

By this means several ranchers grouping their cattle together, they can usually get a better price than any one person can get.

They said several buyers had already contacted them and that all the buyers wanted the calves and cattle dehorned. Ranchers in the county should think about this item.

Do you have enough of one type and grade of livestock to attract a buyer or would it pay you to combine with a neighbor?

How close can you estimate the clean wool on a sheep? This is going to be one item discussed and tried at the sheep demonstration at the Sken Ranch 16 miles south of Pecos on June 11. You are invited to come and try your hand at estimating the clean wool.

Other items on the program are "Recognizing Grades of Wool," use of the squeeze machine and a group discussion on problems affecting the wool-grower.

Gardeners should start watching their garden now for insects. You can control these pests much easier now than later when they build up to such enormous populations. Malathion is an excellent control for most garden pests.

If you are laying plastic pipe be sure to make allowance for expansion and contraction. Normally you should allow one foot for each 100 feet of pipe. Plastic pipe is especially useful in hard water areas, as it does not corrode as readily.

Plastic Pipe For Farm Water Systems

Are you looking for a good, lightweight and easy-to-install pipe for your farm water system? A pipe that will resist rust and corrosion? Then try plastic pipe, suggests J. Leo Dirnberger, extension agricultural engineer at New Mexico A&M College.

Black flexible polyethylene pipe is particularly adapted for use in outside water lines. It comes in coils from 100 to 400 feet and in sizes from 1/2 to 3 inches in diameter.

Semi-rigid plastic pipe is also available in 20 foot lengths and in sizes up to 6 inches in diameter.

The conception rate of ewes bred early in the season could be improved by keeping the rams in cool quarters during the summer months, according to the American Veterinary Medical Association.

A lung disease of cattle, pulmonary adenomatosis, appears to be increasing in rural areas where "silbo filler's disease" occurs in man. Nitrogen dioxide from decomposing fodder appears to be the cause of both conditions.

The Ancho Ladies Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Clyde Stoneman on Thursday. Eleven members and three guests were present. Guests were Mrs. Betty Brooks of Carrizozo; Mrs. Joe Bunton of White Oaks and Mrs. Crow of Corona.

Little LeAnn Straley is spending part of her time with her grandparents, George and Katie Mae Straley.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Fambrough of Tucumanari were in Ancho one day last week. They were returning from the funeral of Bill's aunt, Mrs. John Dale Sr., in Alamogordo. Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hightower and Mrs. E. I. Harkney attended Mrs. Dale's funeral also.

Mrs. George Goodson, formerly of Ancho but now living in Alamogordo, has been ill for the past few weeks.

Mrs. Billy Bryan and children and Mrs. Herb Fuller, all of Corona, were Saturday guests of the Clyde Stoneman family.

Mrs. Charles Stoneman, Mr. and Mrs. George Stoneman and Mildred, the Billy Bryan family and the Clyde Stonemans enjoyed a picnic in the Jicarillas Sunday honoring Irene's birthday.

Sammy Stoneman is ill and is having to miss school Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Orrie Smith was in Ancho Sunday and Monday on business.

Mildred Stoneman of Ruidoso is spending the week with the Clyde Stonemans.

Mrs. Ida DePinc and daughter Toni visited Mrs. Esther Grimsley on Monday. They were en route to Colorado. Mrs. Grimsley returned to her home in T or C Tuesday.

Mrs. Minerva Richardson, cousin of the Straley family and a sister-in-law of Sam Richardson, was one of the victims of the Lampasas flood. She was swept away in her car by the high water.

Cope Straley, student at N. M. A&M, was home over the week end.

The Presbyterian youth group met at the J. A. Hightower home last Thursday. There were 11 young people present.

The square dance on Saturday was a success.

WILL HARRISON'S Inside the Capital

SPANISH VOTERS FEEL THEIR OATS
Santa Fe, May 22—There is flexing of muscles and mounting pride in the big Spanish-American voting group of northern New Mexico.

Throughout the Santa Fe area there is talk of trying to bring out Maurice Sanchez, chairman of the Albuquerque city commission, for the Democratic nomination for governor, and there is common rejection in the group of the old belief that one with a Spanish name is at a disadvantage in elections.

The people of the area were heartened by Joe Montoya's successful run against Tom Bolack for Congress last month and by earlier local successes.

GROUP CAPTURES SANTA FE SCHOOLS
The city of Santa Fe, seat of Spanish culture and influence in the nation which had been in Anglo control, showed an abrupt reversal in the school election of last February.

In a campaign that was featured by an intense undercover struggle between the Spanish and non-Spanish elements the former won both places at stake, giving them all of the five places on the board.
The delayed shock came last week with the replacement of half dozen administrative school officers with Spanish-Americans.
There has been shrieking protest but those in legal control have shown no sign of backing up. The situation has developed religious and racial feeling in the old village such as it has not known in recent decades.

POLITICAL SAVVE OFFSETS NUMBERS
In New Mexico at large the Spanish lineage group is outnumbered maybe 65 to 35. What they lack in numbers, however, is made up in better political savvy, and in population distribution which gives the Hispanics control of big areas of the state.

The group holds one of the two U. S. Senate seats, one of the two House seats. Efforts to capture the governor's office have been futile in recent decades but that, perhaps, because the candidates were offered by the minority Republican party.
Some Democrats of the ethnic group are now telling that a

Demo with a Spanish name could make the hurdle.
ONLY NEW MEXICO RECOGNIZES GROUP

The Spanish influence is manifested here like no other place in the country. We have the only congressional representatives of the group. The New Mexico legislature has 21 of Spanish names which is more than ten times as many as all the border, and near-border, states.

The Arizona legislature has one with a Spanish name, Texas has one, Colorado has none, Utah none, Nevada none and California none.

The number of the group is puny here in comparison with Texas, California and the Spanish-speaking voters in New York.

MECHEM HARBORS HIS OLD ENEMY

Republican Gov. Ed Mechem is still shocking people by hiring or keeping Democrats. It's really not unusual because no Republican could be elected here without Demo help, and it could be that he's looking for Demo support next year when he's expected to go for re-election.

Outstanding among the Democrats working for the Republican is Ray Rodgers of the welfare department. He's in Albuquerque on a dinky job drawing about $500 a month.

This Rodgers is the one who was Demo state chairman when John Miles ran against Mechem for governor in 1950.

RODGERS ON PAYROLL

Rodgers' wife is also staying on as a worker in the Republican bureau of revenue.

Rodgers has subsided as a political influence but he has memories.

He was twice state Demo chairman, twice state school superintendent, twice land commissioner, twice state treasurer, and before all that was county superintendent in Eddy.

No other politician in New Mexico has such a record.

Mechem has also picked up another former Demo state officer for his team. He's Rich Grissom, who used to be state treasurer and is now serving on the Mechem tax commission.

SPONSORS QUIT SCHOOL PROGRAM

The movement to abolish the elective office of state school superintendent and set up an elective state board which would appoint the superintendent looks like it may have been abandoned by some of its original backers.

The constitutional change was originally sponsored by the NMEA teachers group and P-TA organization. Now many of the NMEA'ers have cooled. They apparently fear the prospect of getting some tough political hoppers on the elective board of nine as more dangerous than one political superintendent.

The NMEA crowd has some serious critics among school people who could conceivably come to power on an elective board.

Mother and Daughter Banquet at Hondo

Sixty-five mothers and daughters attended a mother-daughter banquet held at Hondo High School Thursday evening, May 9. The banquet was given by the home economics department under the supervision of Mrs. George Arthurs.

"Mothers welcome" was given by Evangeline-Montes, and the response by Mrs. Fermin S. Montes. Maria Salcido led the group in prayer.
Martha McKnight played a piano solo and Patsy Joiner gave a poem, "With Love to Mom." The senior girls sang "Shortnin' Bread" and other girls kept in rhythm with a "Kitchen Band" using kitchen utensils as instruments. Mrs. Arthurs read a poem in honor of all mothers, written by her husband, George Arthurs. The oldest mother and grandmother present were Mrs. Willie Brady and Mrs. Alice Booky. The youngest mother was Mrs. Ernest Booky. Mothers with the most children were Mrs. Silva, Mrs. Sedillo, Mrs. Eloy Torres and Mrs. R. C. Nunez. They were all presented with gifts.

The home economics department and Mrs. Arthurs were highly complimented for the fine work done by the mothers present.

Got a job for this giant killer?

Here's proof of the reserve strength in GMC's 370 that pays off in any operation.

DEEP in the pine woods, this 24-ton GMC, with locally added trailing axle, wades into a pile of forest giants, using its power take-off to flip 1,000-pound logs onto its back. In ten minutes it has a staggering load—and practically no road to haul it over.

You may never need to subject your trucks to such grueling service, but experience like this is your assurance of stamina and reserve strength far beyond normal requirements.

And the GMC 370 can be yours for hundreds of dollars less than comparable competitive trucks. Just check with your GMC dealer.

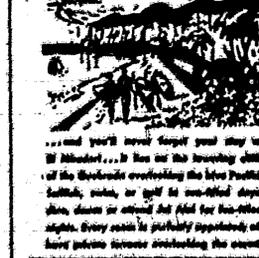

1954-55 GMC, soft ground, down and up ravines, it totes a Hercules payload day in and day out in the timberlands of North Carolina. Five trips a day, six days a week the year around—and it stays a stranger to the repair shop!

THE JUVENILE CODE

(b) Concerning any child eighteen years of age or older living or found within the county, alleged to have violated or attempted to violate any federal or state law or local or municipal ordinance prior to having become eighteen (18) years of age. Such minor shall be dealt with under the provisions of this Code (13-8-19 to 13-8-73) relating to juveniles.

This section gives the juvenile court the exclusive original jurisdiction in the case. That means that no other court can knowingly receive a case concerning a juvenile or have anything to do with a case concerning a juvenile charged with violation of the Juvenile Code. The district court does retain jurisdiction of juveniles in matters of guardianship and divorce proceedings, etc., but only the juvenile court can hear matters concerning a juvenile who has broken the law or violated other provisions of the Juvenile Code. This Section also points out the numerous ways in which the Juvenile Code may be violated.

FT. STANTON LANDS

We will wind up with a public hearing. What I am leading up to is this: If the public hearing is held, it will provide an excellent arena in which the State Land Commissioner might join in a general discussion of federal control and holding of lands where there is a transfer of federal interest in the older public domain. This land was held by the Public Health Service with some 1,500 acres transferred to the State along with the hospital, and the balance was transferred to the Bureau of Land Management. Now, the Bureau of Land Management proposes to shift it again to the Department of Agriculture. Right here we could begin a general exploration of the idea of federal control of these lands.

There are so many ramifications in the way of earmarking of revenues and criss-cross purposes that any immediate transfer of federal lands to states is just about out of the question. It may come, but it will be some time. It isn't just New Mexico which is involved. All public lands states would be involved in any particular proposal. There is something we might be able to do, however, and I am exploring this with the office of the President. This has to do with switching some of the revenue from federal lands now returned to the states and counties, and of special interest is that of returning revenue to the counties. Right now, Uncle Sam returns some revenues to the counties with it earmarked for road purposes. The advanced federal aid - to - highways bill provides sufficient road funds today to where this archaic earmarking of forest money might be put to more useful purposes, in some cases. The Cotton County Commissioners first raised the issue of allowing the counties discretionary use of some percent of the revenue so that it might be switched from roads to helping to finance some of the rural hospitals which are suffering financially. I pitched the idea and some questions of my own over to the Bureau of the Budget, and some consultation with the White House indicated an interest in the suggestion. It's only an idea, but we are going to look into it a little further, and if some satisfactory formula can be worked up, I'll lay it before the state and counties for their vote on the proposal.

DANGEROUS PLAYTHINGS — These are blasting caps. Four different kinds are shown, all equally dangerous in untrained hands. Children are especially vulnerable because of their curiosity and their ignorance of the potential danger. Small and harmless looking, the caps are powerful enough to blow off a youngster's hand or blind him for life. Blasting caps are vital tools in construction and farmers need them to explode dynamite to clear fields, but children should be cautioned "DON'T TOUCH BLASTING CAPS!"

Blasting caps can maim, blind and kill. With that grim note, Sheriff S. M. Ortiz issues a warning about the danger of blasting caps to all youngsters and their parents.

Every year scores of boys and girls are hurt in blasting cap accidents, the sheriff pointed out.

He sternly warns children: "If you find a blasting cap, leave it where it is and call me or some other grownup. Don't pick it up. Don't touch it—no! even with a ten-foot pole."

The sheriff describes caps as being small, metallic cylinders about as big around as a lead pencil and varying in length from one inch to five and one-half inches. One type has an open end and is fired by flame from a fuse. Another has two covered wires coming out of one end and is fired by electric current. Both kinds are dangerous. Shock, heat or careless handling can set off the caps which are loaded with a sensitive explosive.

Blasting caps are needed to explode dynamite to build roads, dams and skyscrapers, and to mine coal and metals. They are vital, too, in laying pipe lines and farmers use them frequently in clearing fields and removing boulders.

But only an experienced person knows how to handle the caps safely. When one explodes, hundreds of small pieces of sharp metal fly out in all directions, sometimes as far as 100 feet; and even at that distance they can cause serious injuries.

Sheriff Ortiz, who is presenting this safety drive at the request of the National Sheriff's Association and the Institute of Makers of Explosives, has this safe and sound advice for parents: "Teach your children to know a blasting cap at sight. Teach them when a cap is at sight they would a rattlesnake. Shock, heat or careless handling can set off the caps which are
