Jim Jackson Dies in Chico, California

Jim and Grace Jackson lived for years in the Ruidoso Valley. Friends for many miles around will remember them for being at home at 37 North Greenwood, good neighbors and there was seldom a day passed they didn't have company drop in to est and listen to Jim's jolly tales or to the Southwest's Year Around to ask his advice.

Jim died the first part of April and was buried at Willows, Callfornia, near Jessie and Kid Moisture so far this year, according to our weather girl, Lula Runnels, is 88 inches. The Bonito Creek has been coming down pretty big and we've hoped it is washing a lotta "pescados" over the dam spillway. (Fish that is).

The Bonito Creek hasn't been stocked with fish in some 20 years. Folks fish up South Fork Bonito each year for native fish that don't grow too long. There are a couple of beaver dams down near Angus where the Game Dept. put some fish last year and fore they could learn how to swim very good us folks and some Roswell people caught our limits. We are hoping we deserve a few more fish this this year. We are keeping our lingers crossed and waiting to see if the Bonito Dam will be open for fishing this year.

injury Saturday morning when the tractor he was driving went off the bridge near his home and fell into Nogal Canyon, about ten feet:

His brother Joey found him and dug him from under the tractor. He was fortunate to fall on his back so his face was just out of the water and had only one arm pinned.

He suffered severe chest bruises and shocks, and was in the hospital overnight.
