The Long and Short Of It Is . . .

By Kit Carson

Albuquerque

In the Manzano Mountains of Central New Mexico, north of Mountainair, is an old, old village. It is located on Route 10 and, despite its age, receives very little attention today other than by local inhabitants who conduct routine business in the area.

The village has a landmark making it outstanding in the nation, if not in the world. The aged, crumbling-down ruins of the adobe structure lends an atmosphere of the ages-long-since-past—an atmosphere one could dream of having existed when the first Spanish settlers moved into the valley. Those first settlers planted orchards, tilled the fertile valley and grew things to eat not long after Coronado made his

Some of you readers of the Lincoln County News might through a letter to the editor or this column, on the horticulture procedures of those days so long since passed.

Though about depleted, and considerably run down, the aged orchard, today, still struggles for its existence. Each year, it gathered from its ancient boughs, even though the trees are never watered or attended. No one seems to know the name of the apples—just Mexican apples—and just always count on them being there—and they are!

Manzano, since WW II, has lost many of its inhabitants. Prior to that time, six teachers taught in the schools, and the aged villa was a thriving community.

sweep through the territory, seeking hidden treasures. The first infiltration of settlers in and around Manzano came from Tlaco. They brought with them sacks-loads of gold, and diaries in which they documented all their operations and business affairs which had transpired since they departed the Old Country, Spain.

They brought with them seeds and planted crops. They offered their religion for the conversion of the Indians. They, too, brought with them the necessities to plant an apple orchard.

One of the those apple orchards exists today, bears apples, and lends an attraction as being the oldest apple orchard in the nation. Some, with a degree of hesitation, claim it as the world's oldest.

Someone might come up with the authentic information to establish these facts—let us hear from them. Anyhow, the age of the grove, as it can be ascertained definitely, is enough to flabbergast most of us.

Sam Sanchez, instructor in the public schools of Albuquerque, through an aged scroll handed down by his ancestors who came to this country from Spain, knows the apple grove was well established, deep-rooted, on a productive basis, and depended on each year for its fruit by his great, great-grandfather, Filomeno Sanchez. The aged patriarch had heired the orchard from his parents. You calculate the age!

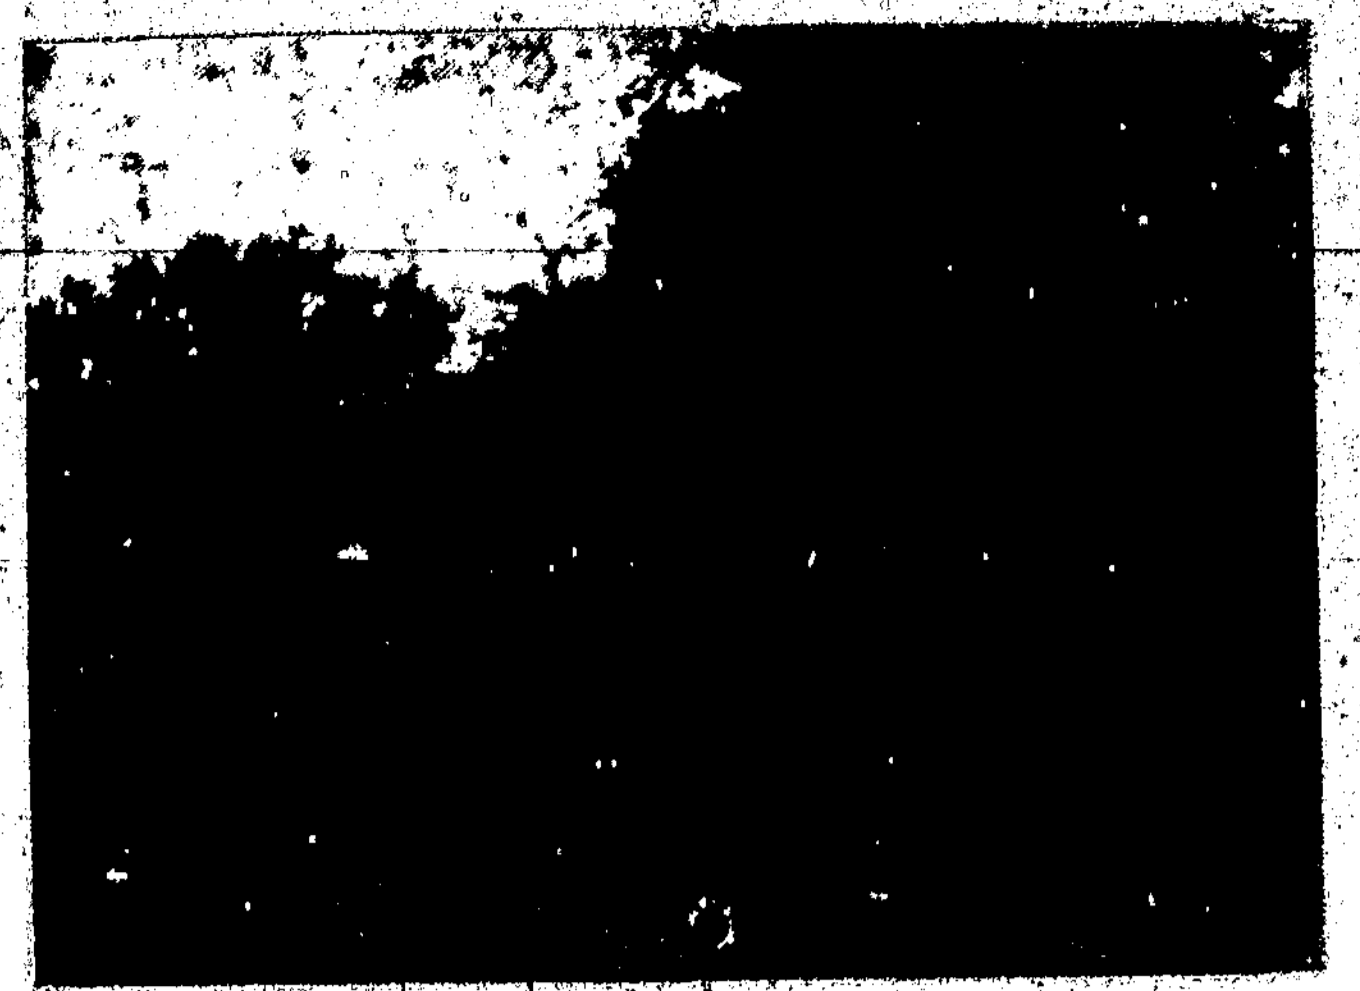

Two flowing springs, a short distance up the arroyo from the old grove, are responsible for the long life of the trees. The same two springs which had watered the Indians of the region long before White Man ever made a track in this country also induced the Spaniards into the valley. How they came by the seedlings, or plants, to start the orchard, hasty research would not reveal. It does not take a dreamer to know of the rugged and trying circumstances under which those old-timers settled the great Southwest and commenced growing good things to eat.

Bonito Bits

BY Louise Runnels

For those who wonder about the weather on the Bonito—snow still is deep on the south hillsides. Hunters were still trying to get camps and deer out that were abandoned when the big snow fell the first part of hunting season.

Hunters I've heard about this week getting their bucks were: Teenagers Billy and Bobby La May, who each killed five-point bucks. Kent Hayes killed a 10-point near his home at Angus on the north hillside. Kenneth La May killed a freak 12-point buck. David Courtney from Carlsbad got a 0-point buck.

In the Rinconada area near the top of Sierra Blanca, Bill McCarty and Leon Farrar and party killed four big bucks, one with 12 points and the least one weighing 187 pounds, with eight points.

Robert R. Runnels got his usual 12 point buck on his mining claim, the Old Bull Frog, which weighed more than 200 pounds.

Folks in Ancho and Ruidoso will remember Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cragg and Mrs. Cragg's mother, Mrs. Berry; they, and the youngest daughter of the Craggs, Ann, were here on a short visit from San Antonio, Texas, this week. They enjoyed staying in Mrs. Derry's cabin way up in the snowy canyon past Ruidoso Lodge. Carl is a lawyer with the Immigration Service. They took some venison, Christmas trees, pine cones and spruce limbs back to Texas. Carl and wife Gerry taught school in Lincoln County 23 years ago. Their oldest daughter, Carol and family, live in Maine. Mrs. Berry was a nurse at Ft. Stanton for years.

To visit Mr. and Mrs. Leon Farrar at Ruidoso on Sunday were Mrs. Leola Littell, her son Max Little and children and Mrs. J. W. Durko from Roswell. They said Mr. and Mrs. Pat Farrar have a home in Roswell and Pat works in an office where the Twin Rivers dam project is being built west of Roswell. Because of a heart condition Pat developed he has to live in lower country. They lived in Capitán and Ruidoso for years.

From Tucuman hunting and spending some time in their cabin on the Bonito were the Forrest Currells.

Mr. Charlie Pfingsten in Lubbock renewed his subscription to the Lincoln County News—he doesn't want to miss a copy. He writes that he and family expect to visit back in Lincoln County next year. He mentioned his daughter Mary and her husband; they are both teaching school in

Postmasters meet at Lincoln

By Allison Lindameed

Sunday the 19th the county postmasters held their annual meeting in the "Old Tunstall-McSweeney Store" building at Lincoln. The library was where the meeting was called to order by Dorothy Farnell, county director of the organization. The room was a lovely cheerful place with plenty of room to make it comfortable for those attending.

The business meeting began at 2 p.m. with many things discussed in connection with doing the finest job ever of taking care of the Christmas mail. But in this the public is asked to cooperate and really do their mailing early. Roy Harman, postmaster at Carrizozo, gave many helpful hints as to how to expedite mail during the rush.

Louise Babers, postmaster at San Patricio, resigned as secretary of the group in order to devote more time to her new position as state editor. Mrs. Leola Joines, postmaster at Honda, was elected by acclamation to take over that office in the county organization.

Postmaster and Mrs. Solomon Alvarez of Los Cruces were guests of the day and Mr. Alvarez, president of the state chapter NAPUS, gave an interesting report about the national convention held in Denver in late October.

In addition to the report on the convention he gave some good suggestions as to how to further the success of our county organization. He also complimented us and hopes to organize other counties in the state and pattern their organizations after the one in Lincoln County.

After the meeting a delicious turkey dinner was served at the Wortley Hotel. Those who had not seen the interesting place were invited to look through some of the rooms and it was a pleasure to show the hotel to our visitors, especially.

Those present other than the ones already mentioned were: Frances Sh. W. of St. Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Proctor of Pecos, Gladys Noske of Glencoe, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Phillips of Lincoln, Jack Farnell of Ruidoso and Allison Lindameed of ALTO.

Hattie Phillips, postmaster at Lincoln, and her husband were very fine hosts and the postmasters enjoyed being with them. The dinner is always a no host affair but it takes some planning for the host postmaster to hold the annual meeting in her community.

DAD BEATS THE BUCKS. SON BEATS THE BUCKS.

Luther Arvin and son Billy went deer hunting in Water Canyon. Mr. Arvin walked and beat the bushes in the bottom of the canyon and 10-year-old Billy got a seven-point buck.

Mr. Arvin got blisters and colic on his feet.

Try a pinon Christmas tree

By Dorothy Gock

"Now it is time to prepare for Christmas." This warning came a little early this year to New Mexico when Santa Claus weather arrived before the middle of November.

Most of us are reluctant to change our ways, and we have always had a fir tree. With the mountain habitat of firs and spruce closed in by snow for the winter, this year let's try a pinon. I believe it is a special privilege of New Mexico residents to have a pinon. This little pine tree is unique to the Southwest, and other parts of our nation do not grow them and cannot have them as Christmas trees.

I don't remember using any other evergreen in New Mexico at Christmas time. "We want to pick our own," the children always said, and pinons are plentiful and available. We have a large choice, and usually trek over the hills finally going back to choose the first one we saw.

The pinon is well-shaped, thickly foliated, and doesn't shed its needles. We cut the stem at a slant and keep it in water in a cool place until ready to bring indoors. It remains fresh with decorations in the house for two weeks, by placing the stem in a pall of damp dirt—which also alleviates the necessity of building a stand. The pall can be easily covered with cotton, tinsel or paper.

In New Mexico where we have so many of our own Christmas decorations—the luminarias, pinatas, mistletoe, cedar berries, and even gilded tumbleweeds, the pinon is our very best Christmas tree.

There are many stories about the evergreens used at Christmas. I love the legend of the Christ Child who, as the story goes, stayed with a forester and his family and in appreciation for their hospitality broke off a branch of evergreen and placed it in the earth and said, "It has gladly received your gifts and this is its gift to you. Henceforward this tree shall bear its fruit at Christmas and you shall always have abundance."

Then there is the story of good Saint Winifred in the eighth century who stood before an evergreen and said, "Here is this little tree, a young child of the forest. This shall be your holy tree tonight. It is the wood of peace from which your homes are built and warmed; it is the sign of everlasting life, for the leaves are evergreen. See how it points toward heaven. Let this be called the tree of the Christ Child."

Each year since 1923 a living tree has been lighted by the president of the United States at the White House. In 1956 that tree came from the Lincoln National Forest. The nation's patriarch of Christmas trees is the General Grant Sequoia where carols are sung each year at high noon on Christmas Day.

The greatest tribute to the meaning of Christmas, "Peace on earth, good will toward men, was never more aptly demonstrated Remember, it is time to get the Christmas tree lights started as when you read this it will be December. The cost is so little compared to the cheer it gives to many here as well as to the weary travelers. Let's make our city a cheerful one.

Here is the correct date on the Eddie Zamora twins, boys, born November 11 at the Ruidoso hospital, weighing three pounds each. They had to stay in an incubator. They now weigh four pounds and if all went well they were to have come home this weekend. Their names are Emil Lee and Erick Dee. They have very happy parents and as happy little sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Lee Miller of Alamogordo and their daughter Joy, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Berelman and son Richard of Las Cruces spent the weekend of the 9th here at home, visiting with the parents, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hatfield.

Guests of Mrs. Willa Morris for a few days recently were her brothers, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Stewart of Ojo, N.M., and Mr. Henry Stewart of Mesquite, N.M. and their wife. Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Aker of Espanola, Mrs. Nancy Morris of Tularosa, Mrs. Rowena Kemp of Carlsbad and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Burnett of Alamogordo.

Mr. and Mrs. Newt Robinson of Las Cruces spent the night of the 22nd with her mother, Mrs. Daisy Gehring. Thanksgiving morning all three went to Nogal to spend the day with Mr. Robinson's sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Alexander. Sonny Robinson and his wife and two children of Las Cruces joined them.

Miles Williams killed a 30-point buck November 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wallace and three daughters of Lovington spent the Thanksgiving holidays with his sister and brother and their families, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Dean and Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Wallace.

Millie Wallace entered the hospital in Roswell November 20 and is still there. She is doing fairly well, but will have to be there for a while.

The revival at the Church of the Nazarene in Capitan began November 27 and will continue until December 3. Services are held each evening at 7:30 p.m., with Rev. Kenneth Fry of Roswell as the speaker. There's lots of good congregational singing. If you need a ride call EL 4-2245.

Joe Hobbs and Ara Dollnar went to Hidalgo to the doctor November 22. Both still are quite ill. I had a pleasant visit with Mr. G. C. Brown of Corona, Sunday for a short time. He was enroute to Roswell on business. It was so good to see him and to hear about my friends in Corona.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cheney left Tuesday morning for Houston to visit their son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bert Cheney and two children for a while.

Gerald Dean Jr. came home from Lubbock Christian college and brought Miss Madeline Graves of Lovington with him. She attends nursing school in Lubbock. They were here the weekend of the 11th and left Sunday afternoon.

Gerald returned for Thanksgiving with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Dean, Sr.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dean have moved from Lovington to the Harlan property west of Capitan to spend more time here. At least two or three days of the month. Their home is in Lovington. Welcome to Capitan. We are glad to have both of you with us for a longer time.

SO/3 Elmer H. Shrum arrived home Wednesday afternoon for a two-week leave from the Naval Base in San Diego, Calif.

Overton, former operator of a large farm and feed lot in Iowa, served as an assistant to the Iowa Secretary of Agriculture from 1936 to 1939. He began his 15 years of government service in the U. S. Department of Agriculture in 1939 as a statistician in the Office of the Iowa Crops and Livestock Reporting Service and later joined the Agricultural Division of the U. S. Census Bureau where he served as a training instructor in the western states. He returned to the Statistical Reporting Service in 1956, serving for one year in the Livestock and Poultry Branch in Washington before transferring to Denver and his present position with the Western Livestock office.

Overton, with his broad understanding of cattle numbers and cattle movements, has been instrumental in helping the industry obtain monthly cattle-on-feed reports in several of the western states.

Liggett, who has been in present position since 1952, was a daily newspaper reporter and photographer while finishing high school and attending Colorado State University where he majored in agricultural economics. He entered the agricultural journalism field as a photographer and feature writer for the Record Stockman newspaper in Denver. Later he became news editor and farm reporter for KFEA, Greeley, Colo., from which position he entered the service as ski trooper, later becoming official Army photographer and public relations specialist.

After the war he handled news for other Denver radio and television stations and served for four years as publicity director for the University of Denver.

Liggett is vice-president of the Agricultural Relations Council, vice-chairman of the National Farm-City Week Committee, and a member of the National Association of Television and Radio Farm Directors and American College Editors Association.

Several hundred cattle growers from all parts of the state are expected to attend the 4th quarterly winter meeting. Sessions will be held in Milton Student Center on the NMSU campus.

John Stark, Deming, president of the Cattle Growers, emphasizes the importance of the meeting because of the many problems facing the industry at present.

Denver expert at meeting

Two important topics which New Mexico cattle growers will consider at their forthcoming quarterly meeting on the New Mexico State University campus, December 1-2, are their industry's role in the field of public relations and the current marketing situation and outlook for the future.

Lyle Liggett, Denver, Colo., director of public relations for the American National Cattlemen's Association, will lead the discussion on public relations; Robert S. Overton, who is in charge of the Western Livestock Statistical Reporting Service, USDA, Denver, will review the marketing situation and outlook for the cattle industry.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Hunting season draws to a close, with the largest run of would-be hunters since 1955—some people trying to make money from the hunters told them not to pay attention to any signs. That is all they wanted to hear. Some people sold camp sites for $5 and others charging $150 to hunters, and sending them on somebody else's land to hunt. Confusion, confusion, confusion!

God sent the snow to save us from complete destruction. Eight of us went the first hour of the season. Goats, sheep and dogs too many to mention.

Phone calls started coming in to all ranchers with phones, "Is my husband alright, has he got his pills, my daughter is expecting a baby and could you get her to a hospital?"

There were signs on all roads "Help us, we are snowed in." When the graders arrived they were told to open up the roads so they could get in more beer and whiskey. One man was carried out because of an appendicitis attack, he said. After getting him to the hospital and giving him a dose of soda he was trying to go back to the hills like thousands of others.

I saw a fire in a stable once and we took all the horses out only to have them run back into the burning barn. So at Whitto Oaks and Ancho. The police kept up a 24-hour guard to keep hunters from going back. I rode up to a camp where a shooting match was going on. The table had room for two lanterns. The rest of the space was covered with empty whiskey bottles; children playing around, women and men half drunk, shooting at cans. Other camps were all around. I shut my eyes and quietly rode away.

In the Ancho area ranchers shoveled snow half the night to get a woman to the hospital to give birth to a baby. In the Honda valley a rancher's friend asked them not to camp in his alfalfa field. They told him to go to hell. He asked me what to do—shoot them? All the law was busy rescuing the stranded hunters so no help there.

One rancher at Corona rode up on a sportsman butchering a sheep. He said, "What goes on here?" The sport said his license said anything was legal east of Highway 64.

The damage to date for one small rancher: 10 days labor lost; 10 more to repair fences, gather stock, etc.; 50 head of goats missing, six butchered and dressed in one canyon; two dogs shot—not killed but just shot; four sheep dead; one cow and one windmill shot up; one mule shot three times; two burros shot, one dead and one crippled.

A businessman asked me not to put up posted signs. It was bad for business. Brother, old brother. A few years ago the Game Dept. asked the ranchers to live with the sportsmen. The rancher will be lucky to live.

One rancher sent his 16-year-old boy to tell the hunters to camp out of his horse pasture. The boy came back and said they refused to go. So the last time I was by the game rancher, near Nogal, had a bottle of whiskey inviting all the hunters in his home for a drink. Camp in the hay barn, plenty of wood in the corral fences, he told them, Welcome. Later he told me "If you can't whip them, join them."

It is a continual struggle for survival. The Indians were run out by the Spaniards. The ranchers passed laws and squeezed out the Spaniards in a lot of places. The homesteader got a holt of land from the big rancher. The big rancher changed the law in his favor and did away with homesteading.

Many a veteran came home from Korea and World War II wishing for a small homestead to live on to help him make a living with his small disability pension. But the people who had bought the ranches had all the land they thought. Why they thought the state land is theirs just because they leased it for almost nothing for years and years I don't understand. I have had forest and state land for 40 years and I know it won't BOY SCOUTS visiting the Philmont Scout Ranch in northern New Mexico are waiting to pick their mounts for a horseback trip across rugged mountain country. Each summer thousands of Boy Scouts and Scout leaders gather at Philmont for training and recreation.

Raton area suggested as trip of week

RATON, New Mexico — The southeastern corner of New Mexico is cattle country, but there is a lot more in the landscape than cows.

Raton Pass commands one of the most spectacular views to be found anywhere in the Southwest. At another point, you can stand on the rim of a volcanic crater and see into five different states. The town of Clayton thrives on our appetite for beefsteak, but Clayton also boasts the biggest collection of antique automobiles in New Mexico.

A trip from Raton to Clayton takes you through this range country studded with isolated peaks and mesas; a region of unusual geological and historic interest.

Any visitor to Raton makes it a point to drive to the crest of Raton Pass, the 7,500-foot gateway to New Mexico from Colorado which is charred by automobiles and trains of the Santa Fe Railway. A chairlift operates at the top of the pass to take sightseers even higher and affords a broader view of the mountain ranges of Southern Colorado and northern New Mexico.

The streets of Raton are busy in the summer. There are many Boy Scout uniforms in evidence—on both men and boys. The Philmont Scout Ranch, visited every summer by counters from every state in the union, is less than 50 miles from Raton. And on summer weekends visitors flock in from Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado and from other parts of New Mexico for the horse races at La Mesa Park.

A fine highway, U. S. 64, spans the 52-mile distance between Raton and Clayton. However, many travelers prefer to use State Road 72, which is partially unpaved but well-maintained and which travels over the Johnson Mesa and joins U. S. 64 at Deo Molina, midway between Raton and Clayton.

The long high Johnson Mesa gets its name from a pioneer cattleman who operated a ranch on its southern slope. To the south the horizon line is broken by two of the highest peaks in the plains country of eastern New Mexico—Laughlin Peak at 8,810 feet and Sierra Grande at 8,720 feet. About 30 miles east of Raton, State Road 72 passes a Scenic-Historic marker pointing out the site of Folsom Man State Monument. The monument is a mile and a half from the road, and is entirely undeveloped as a place to ment, and there are picnic tables in a clearing at the base of the mountain. Continuing on U. S. 64 toward Clayton, Rabbit Ear Mountain appears ahead. This 6,000-foot peak was named for a Cheyenne Chief named Rabbit Ears, who is buried there, and it was the site in 1717 of a fierce battle between 500 Spanish volunteer soldiers and a host of Comanches.

North from Clayton, State Road 370 leads to Clayton Lake, a reservoir formed behind a dam built by the State Game and Fish Department. The lake is stocked for fishing, and it also serves as a watering place for migratory birds.

Clayton is a prosperous town, and proud of its history. It is liberally sprinkled with Wild West avants, and it was here that the notorious outlaw Black Jack Ketchum was hanged in 1901. Near Clayton in the 1890's a giant wolf terrorized ranchers for five years, and gave Ernest Thompson Seton the idea for his book "Lobo, King of the Currumpaw."

Clayton is making a bid for more tourist business through its Fort Jordan Stockade, a reproduction of a frontier fort which houses a museum and a buffalo herd.

(Dorothy Jensen Neal (Mrs. R. N.) was born in Wisconsin. She was raised as the daughter of a Methodist minister in Indiana where she received her education. She taught public school music and Latin for 18 years in high schools in Indiana, Illinois, Arizona and New Mexico.

She came to the Southwest in 1928 and immediately fell in love with the country, especially that in the mountains. She spends her summers in Eagle Creek Canyon and her winters in El Paso. "Captive Mountain Waters" is her first book.

By Dorothy Neal
"Captive Mountain Waters"
The end of an old piece of wooden pipeline in Eagle Creek Canyon started haunting me during the summer of 1953. I stopped at the Country Store in Alto one afternoon and asked the Lindamoods who might be able to give me some information on it. They told me to visit Mrs. Hightower up the canyon and she referred me to Floy Skinner. After an afternoon with Floy I knew there was a story in the pipeline and its people.

back and took pictures. Then I went to the station in Carrizozo and asked to see Mr. Hicks. He was just coming in and again I introduced myself, thinking, "Where have I seen that man before?" I did not realize I had talked to him just a few hours earlier. I am sure he wondered how such a scatterbrain would be able to retain facts for a book.

The next day, still in the picture-taking mood, I decided I needed a picture of a leak in the pipeline. I pulled out a plug and took some pictures. In trying to put back the plug I broke off the point. With a rock I was finally able to pound the broken plug into the pipe, but I was thoroughly drenched in the process.

With the incentive and material I had, I talked to E. O. Williams, Division Engineer, about available material in El Paso. He sent me to Henry Mulchahey, who has for the past two years looked up facts, figures, files, records and maps at the Southern Pacific offices. It was almost necessary for me to stand on my head to read names and amounts of land on some of the maps.

I learned, too, that Mrs. Le Baron, the widow of the first pipeline supervisor, Wm. Garvin, lived in El Paso. Such a charming lady she is, with a fantastic memory. During our first conversation she said, "I have some pictures Mr. Garvin made. Would you like to see them?"

Not only did I want to see them but to use them. This desire she PUBLIC NOTICE

A review of 'Captive Mountain Waters'

By Louise Rumlus
A short review of "Captive Mountain Waters" is a story of more frontier fighters capturing waters by pipeline and how it affected the lives of people in Lincoln and Otero counties from 1880 and on.

For a couple of years Dorothy Jensen Neal collected material for her true story. It is an amazing piece of history for anyone's book collection who is interested in Southwestern fact stories. We are only beginning to accumulate the story of this part of the country which makes this story valuable beyond means. Many individuals mentioned are still living and stories of those who have gone away make this story most interesting.

"Captive Mountain Waters" relates facts about kinds of pipe laid along and through many mountains and valleys to towns from Orogrande to Pastura, N. M. The hardships and happiness of those men and their families during this time takes us back and we seem to go along with them.

Valuable snapshots, chronology are included; illustrations were done by Dorothy's son-in-law, Bob Stagg, which make the story complete.

The beginning is at Orogrande, N. M., taking water from the Sacramento Mountains; Tres Ritos (Three Rivers) from the west side of Sierra Blanca in the Indian reservation and to Eagle Creek and the Bonto to Pastura to the northern part of New Mexico.

It contains facts about the early settlers in Bonto Canyon and Bonto City where the three mountain pipelines and Bonto and Eagle Creek pipe lines are included. The sale of the Bonto pipe line from the Southern Pacific in 1954 to the city of Alamogordo finishes information that has been controversial over since the sale began is told. The portion of the story about Tres Ritos and the Sacramento lines as the men maintaining them make interesting reading.

It was not Dorothy's intention to leave any pioneer's names or deeds out of her story. "Captive Mountain Waters." Her satisfaction will be that she did her very best and is grateful to ones completed and many others who contributed.

CLAUNCH

(Too late for last week)
Snow, snow, snow! We have certainly had it. The men are enjoying a day or days that they can hunt. Some have already got their deer.

We were very grateful that all the folks were well during the bad weather.

Montie and Telo Bussie and daughters Monette and Peggy Sue Bussie were called to Lubbock to attend the funeral of Mr. Galliger, Mrs. Bussie's father.

The Coytches went to Carrizozo on business Monday.

Charlie Ray Montgomery and two daughters Joan and Judy visited their father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Montgomery last week. They were from Lubbock. Billie Montgomery and family of Albuquerque are there this week.

Mr. Bello sold his ranch to a man from Silver City. They will certainly be missed when they move.

House guests at the John Smith place Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lovelace and sons Dutch and Willis Ray.

Lena Jobe and girls Sharon, Sandra and Sarah, and Edith Smith of Mountainair also visited the Smiths.

Willis Ray is employed at Fosse Hardware and drives back and forth from Claunch to Carrizozo each day. It was rough going last week.

The road maintainer is needed very badly on our roads, which have deep ruts and high centers. Gotie on, Dan, we need you!

Burl Talley's father, Matt Talley from Texas and his brother Rex from Alaska visited in Claunch last week. Always glad to have old-timers come our way.

Jimmie Busie is driving the bus for Tels while she is gone to Texas.

John Couch's daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Petros from Albuquerque, were visiting last week with the Couches.

Garvis Jobe returned to Ft. Stanton Sunday morning to work again this week as he is employed as a night guard.

Edith Smith from Mountainair is visiting her parents, the Smiths.

Jimmie Busie drove the bus Monday and got stuck and never did get to school. It was 12 o'clock before they got out of the bog.

Keep leaves clean. Wash with soap and water if necessary. Not only do they look better, but dirt on the leaves reduces the amount of light available to the plant.

Put the plants in a sunny window than during spring, summer, and fall. Supplement light with fluorescent lights. You will need two 40-watt tubes about 18 inches above the plants.

Early vaccination recommended. The ideal time for vaccinating heifers for brucellosis is between 6 to 8 months of age for all breeds, vaccinating dairy heifers in 4 to 8 months and for beef breeds 4 to 12 months.

Vaccination between 6 to 8 months of age will produce immunity to the disease without causing prolonged blood reactions. Animals vaccinated under 4 months of age are not likely to acquire immunity. A positive reaction to the brucellosis test may occur later in life if the animal is too old when vaccinated.

Vaccinating dairy heifers between the age of 6 and 8 months is usually no problem for dairy men. The time extension to 12 months for beef breeds was made to fit in with range operations. Calves born on the range are sometimes rounded up and available for vaccination only when heifers are almost a year old.

Range operators, however, could benefit from the extra effort to get heifers vaccinated at the optimum period of 6 to 8 months. Benefits to be derived from vaccination at this period are as follows:

Vaccination between 6 to 8 months of age provides the best possible immunity with the least side effects.

Animals could be vaccinated when not under other stresses such as hauling, weaning or marketing.

Animals vaccinated prior to marketing bring better prices.

Animals vaccinated on the owner's ranch are eligible for free vaccination under the brucellosis control program. A charge of about a dollar-per-head is made at marketing centers.

If vaccination is done on the ranch, the important replacement heifers are not likely to be overlooked.

But annoyed by direct mail

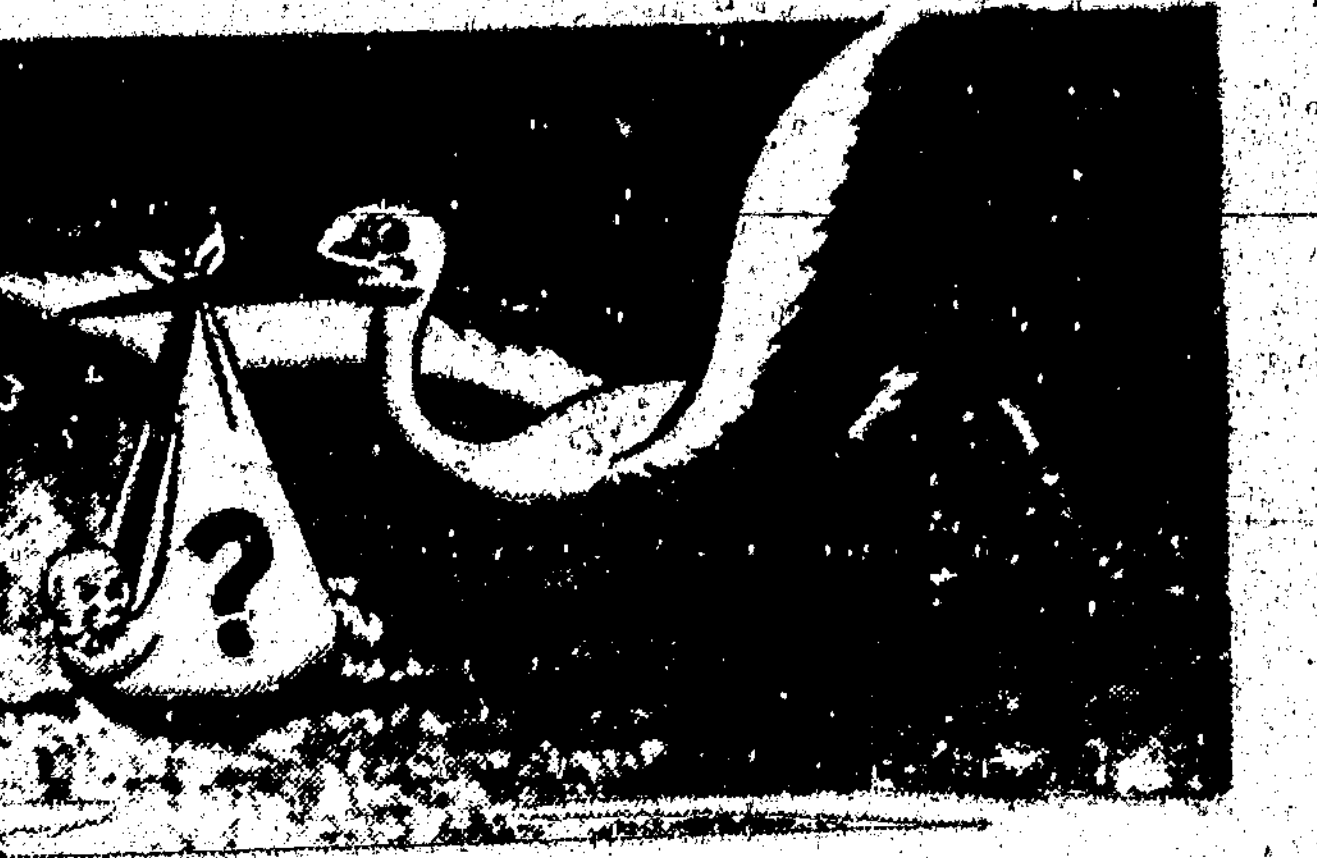

53% of those who receive advertising in the mail discard it without reading it, Bureau of Advertising study reveals.

Almost four out of ten persons are considerably annoyed when they get advertising in the mail. And among the upper economic group the figure is almost five out of ten.

These are some of the findings of a four-city survey conducted for the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association and reported in a folder just released by the Bureau.

Don't starve house plants
Are you starving your house plants? Even though you give house plants fertilizer, you can still be starving them. House plants, like all plants, must have light to manufacture food from fertilizer. Therefore, light is the limiting factor to most plants, not fertilizer. During winter months house plants will actually be light starved. But you can help the plant make the best of the light it does get.

Keep leaves clean. Wash with soap and water if necessary. Not only do they look better, but dirt on the leaves reduces the amount of light available to the plant.

Letter to the Editor
Captain, N. M.
November 24, 1961
Mr. Vassar Thompson
Ft. Stanton, N. M.
Dear Sir:

I, Josephine Cooper, have decided to make a suggestion and ask a few favors of some friends and I decided to ask you.

I suggest we get some kind of entertainment started for the young people (maybe ourselves) for these long dreary, snowy days.

This is what I suggest. That we, Capitan and Ft. Stanton, make some sleighs similar to the ones we've seen in pictures and perhaps some of our rancher friends that have horses would agree to pull the sleighs.

And, I naturally think the kids would need a chaperone, also. I think the horses would need to be gentle and dependable and to have a pasture to graze them in when they aren't busy and for feeding them too.

It probably will take some extra feed too, and we will also need a horse and saddle for someone to ride to go bring them in from the pasture.

I think it should take two from here. I don't know how many you might want.

I imagine every child will want to ride at first.

If you think it would work I should be glad to assist you in any way. I will get around and help take up donations gladly.

Respectfully, your friend
Josephine Cooper

Dear Sir:

I hurriedly sat myself down to write a letter to first one and then another as you can see.

Perhaps Carrizozo would be interested too. Would you mind to help? Perhaps the lumber company would be pleased to build them for us. Maybe the ranchers might run their own and that way they could pay for the upkeep of their horses. It surely gets monotonous to sit through those snows, three or four months of it. I think you will agree and I can imagine how the kids will benefit.

WHERE IS THE LAST HARBOR OF THE GOOD SHIP "MAYFLOWER"?

WHY IS A PERSON SOMETIMES REFERRED TO AS A STOOL PIGEON?

WHAT IS THE SIZE OF A HUMMING BIRD'S EGG?

HOW LARGE IS THE PLANET JUPITER?

LESS THAN 1/2 INCH IN DIAMETER! A NEWLY HATCHED HUMMING BIRD IS NO LARGER THAN A FLY!

THE LARGEST PLANET OF OUR SOLAR SYSTEM... JUPITER... IS 89,000 MILES IN DIAMETER... AN AREA THAT CAN CONTAIN MORE THAN 1,000 EARTHS!
