SCREW-WORM ERADICATION CAMPAIGN INITIATED IN SOUTHWEST

Screw-worms are in for a rough time this year, as plans are to eradicate this pest through a joint effort of agricultural research service, Southwest Animal Health Research Foundation (an organization of stockmen), and the Texas Animal Health Commission.

The sterile fly technique — developed by ARS scientists and used successfully to eradicate screw-worms from the Southeast in 1958-59 — involves the aerial release of millions of laboratory-reared screw-worm flies, made sexually sterile by exposure to radioactive cobalt.

Constant vigilance on the part of livestock and pet owners in New Mexico will be essential to the success of the eradication program.

Owners and handlers are urged to follow these precautions: (Continued on back page)

All three county commissioners urged the planning committee members to stay with their task, even though they had little power. They can work on county road projects, get more people interested in roads, and do a lot of good in the county.

The county commissioners have arranged with a contractor to stockpile gravel at five points in the county which will cut down on mileage for all county road work. The county pays when they get the rock. These gravel stockpiles will be used to fix bad spots and for general improvement of county roads.

Eldridge told the committee of a project state rifle range near Ft. Stanton and said a half-mile road would be needed. This range would have 40-50 targets and would attract 200 to 400 shooters at meets. The planning committee and commissioners said this could be done. Meeting adjourned.

New clue to John Wallace Olinger furnished by Miss Genevieve Riley

1839 West Fifth St., San Pedro California Mr. Paul W. Payton LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS Carrizozo, N. M.

You may recall that in your issue of October 6, 1961, you kindly published a letter in which I asked for information about John Wallace Olinger. No replies were received, which suggests that your readers know nothing about him. However, a clue furnished quite independently by Miss Genevieve Riley, daughter of John H. Riley of Lincoln County War fame, led to the establishment of some pertinent details of his life.

Only speeches allowed from the three governor candidates, total time for all three about two minutes. Mead, glad to be with you; Murphy, thanks for invitation, get behind whole ticket; Campbell, fight the primary then unite. Calvin Horn, guest speaker, told of his world trip. Planning committee agrees on repair of $800,000 road

The Lincoln County Road Planning Committee meeting in the courthouse in Carrizozo Monday agreed that the road most needing work at the present was the Tinkle-Arabella stretch, an $800,000 road that is going to pieces and regardless of other road needs this investment should be protected, a seal coat being the immediate need.

Members present were Grady Eldridge, M. K. Vance, G. W. Shanks, Walton Wilson, Clint Sultemeir, Archie Perkins, Robert McDaniel, Pat Murphy, Fletcher Hall, three county commissioners, Kenneth Noaker, Charley Jones, Ignacio Torres, Roy Callaway, superintendent and maintenance superintendent for Lincoln-National Forest; Leroy McKnight, Lincoln County maintenance foreman; and Ralph Dunlap, county agent.

Discussion centered around the fact that the planning committee's power was cut down in the Burroughs administration and has not been restored, actions of the planning committee have been ignored by the highway commission, and little can be done except to go along with the state highway district commissioner during his term in office.

All three county commissioners urged the planning committee members to stay with their task, even though they had little power. They can work on county road projects, get more people interested in roads, and do a lot of good in the county.

Tales From Back Yonder

Monkeys now and then, during the course of their daily routine, get their tails in a crack. They squeak and moan hideously, sometimes vociferously and outrageously, and a complete unpredictable turmoil is the aftermath — and people ain't no different!

With reflections of such predicaments, with both humor and seriousness being considered, the recollection of a certain man who, so to speak, "got his tail in a crack," comes to mind. The Column had the privilege of knowing the chief character of this tale for many years.

He was an aged minister and had, for many years, served a little church in a Northeast-community devoutly and faithfully. In addition to his never-tiring services to the church he carried on certain other work in order to supplement funds for his livelihood and assist in carrying on his church activities; for he was not a savior of theology, being one of those religious classifications who attained his ecclesiastical order by being "called to preach."

It all happened one day during a conference with his board of deacons, a church order usually composed of staunch, deeply, unerring religious members, depicting what we think of as having existed in our Pilgrim forefathers. Upon the discussion of a certain subject, during the meeting in that little Texas town, a severe argument arose concerning expenditure of a certain portion of the church funds. For some reason or the other, during the conference, the deacons pointed an accusing finger at the aged minister, implying that shady circumstances existed about the disbursement of those funds.

Belligerently, and in a fit of rage, he arose from his chair and declared, "It's a god damned lie!" A spell of complete silence at once engulfed the religious meeting, and the drop of a needle would have been audible. The conference dispersed, without even so much as a closing prayer.

As fast as the deacons could hot-foot it around, charges were made and even he was quoted from the church, kicked out without so much as a chance to make "acknowledgments." But the pious man did not relinquish his church activities nor his daily religious works. He bought a piece of land on the edge of town and built his own church.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT IS . . . The best of people oftentimes "kick over the traces!" This one is on my Grandfather Carson — the frontman who came from Bradley County, Tennessee, to the timber country of Northeast Texas in 1853, and homesteaded there. Old timers during those days were apt to be contentious about certain things, and more often holl-bont about idiosyncrasies which actually amounted to nothing. But once those small peculiarities were infringed upon, all hell could break loose, and usually did.

Long tortuous trips over the frontier trails on ox wagons or mule-drawn equipment, hauling freight, usually gave frontier individuals ample time to dream about things which they would do, once they reached destination and a place where things could be had for a celebration. There they'd rind off the muck of many days on the trail and mingle with the throngs seeking amusement, whether it was the enjoyment of a newspaper, the lecture of an "educated professor," a medicine show, a few drinks — sometimes finny — at the saloon, swanpin yams at the livery stable, or what-have-you.

Along during the years right after the Civil War, much freight was hauled over land by wagons from Jefferson, Texas, toward west to the rapidly growing village of Dallas. Jefferson was then a shipping point, of sort. Shippers sought their way up the regional streams from New Orleans with supplies and carried cotton back. From the port at Jefferson, those supplies were freighted over the rugged trails of the frontier region farther west. In turn raw materials were hauled back for shipment to the Orleans port. Railroads, as far as utilization in that section, were unknown. Jay Gould had not yet made known his intentions to penetrate the timber country with long, shiny steel ribbons, and eventually hit Jefferson as "dead as a door nail!" The sturdy needs of the settlers were, therefore, meagerly taken care of by the long caravans of freight wagons.

It was in that business which my grandfather found himself freighting over the Old Jefferson Trail to Dallas, back and forth, immediately after the War of the States. He hauled cotton into Jefferson, and supplies back to the settlers and plantation owners.

During those many trips, a two-gallon keg always had its position by the driver's seat. The keg was of a two-gallon capacity, no larger or no smaller. It was a definitely one of those items of peculiarities which was not to be hampered with, in any shape, form or fashion, except to be filled. It all commenced on a trip when the old freighter lost a bale of cotton from the top of one of his wagons, while fording a stream in the East Texas timber country. The incident no doubt filled his temper and lasted throughout the trip; for once the 500-pound bale of lint hit the water, it almost drank the stream dry, absorbing an untold amount of water and becoming very heavy.

There were two other teamsters along with the freighter caravan. They combined force — the three of them — and they pried, stretched, poked and heaved, and finally got the bale of cotton out of the water hole and loaded back on the wagon, and took off down the trail, winding around through the woods. "mad as a wet hen!" — and "ucked out."

They hit Jefferson, the cotton weighed, a price agreed upon — a "dock" being considered for wet cotton — and the gross amount DUE calculated. Customarily the list was supplies for the return trip was then tendered the merchant. He in turn filled the "bill" which was deducted from the gross. The balance was taken in cold cash, put in a bag, and tossed under the wagon seat, to carry back to the outposts. — and usually "sunk in another piece of land."

The freighters then hit the heart of town for activity, while the merchant stacked out the merchandise according to the itemized bill. Those crafty merchants were known to have an eye for money, and it was common trail gossip that they were "crooked as a barrel of snakes," and were wont to "pad" the sales list. Such talk was transmitted up and down the trail and released at the camping grounds at night, as they drank from the kegs, cooked and ate, and swapped yarns.

Freighter Carson was aware of the merchants' devious activities, and the incident back down the trail with the wet bale of cotton probably poured fury on the situation. Late evening approached and he returned to the store gallery, where the merchandise was stacked out for loading into the freight wagons. He and the merchant proceeded to check off the various items from the list, as they were loaded into the freight wagons, making preparations to hit the trail bright and early next morning. Everything went along fine until one item on the list was reached. A sort of silence, deathly quiet, prevailed on the rough platform of the store front.

Suddenly all hell broke loose. I heard the incident talked all my younger life, in plain words to a certain point. And this is something the way it happened, and the cause.

Upon the attention to a particular item on the list, which was the customary filling, on every trip, of the old two-gallon keg, Carson raised up in the face of the Jefferson merchant and looked him square in the eye.

"In a belligerent tone he barked, 'I don't mind paying you for three gallons of whiskey, and that I'll gonna do. But first I aim to trash hell outa you for stretching my two-gallon keg to a three-gallon size!' — and did. I think there were more serious circumstances to the affair than just a "thrusty!" Anyway that portion of the tale was always just sort of murmured around home. We descendants never exactly knew just how it came out. But there wasn't much speculation. Either one of the three freighters were bound to have been of the "Paul Bunyan" type; for had either of the three been a small man, they would have never pried the 500-pound bale of water-soaked lint cotton from the creek bed, rolled it up the banks of the stream, onto a high wagon. You just wouldn't figure a man of that type coming out at "the little end of the horn" in a fight with a Jefferson merchant!

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT IS . . . Many bizarre circumstances during the early days grew from minute incidents, in the beginning of practically no consequence, but many times swelled into a serious aftermath. It's no different today.

Ten Apple Festival Princesses chosen

Ten of the one dozen princesses to appear in the annual Apple Blossom Festival at Hondo during a gala program the evening of Saturday, April 28 have been chosen. Mrs. George Perry, Jr., directing the event, announced.

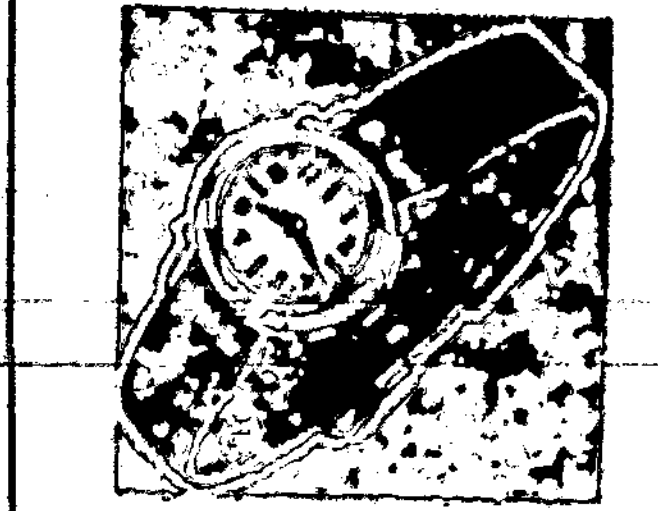

The ten, each representing a community in the southern part of Lincoln County, include:
Sandra Jones of Ruidoso, who will do a piano number and will recite an essay she composed.
Patsy Shier of Ruidoso Downs, who will exhibit her flower arranging talent.
Toni Tully of Glencoe, who will give a piano number.
Martha Simeros of Arabela-Tinola, whose contribution on the program is to be announced later.
Alberta Kingroll of Picocho, who is to give a reading.
Diana Shaw of Capitan who will also give a piano number.
Linda Escobedo of Ft. Stanton, who will present a chautau talk, an exhibition of her shooting ability with a monologue.
Patsy Sanchez of Lincoln, who will present a Mexican traditional folk dance.
Priscilla Gomez of San Antonio, who will sing, and will model, also.
Ruth Jander of Hondo, who will exhibit some of her homemaking talent.

Not yet named are representatives from the communities of Nogal and Carrizozo. A queen of the apple blossom festival will be selected by a panel of judges from out of the county. Her selection will be on the beauty, poise, talent and scholastic standing. Each princess will have an escort, and Mrs. Perry said this year, the sponsors of the festival will provide the entrants with their gowns. Attendants to the princesses also will be provided dresses, and all are to follow a particular color scheme and design.

A printed program, a souvenir of the colorful affair which heralds the beginning of another season for the famous three apple producing valleys in Lincoln County, is planned, Mrs. Perry said with sponsors to assist in the cost of publication and in the cost of stag-

TO 4-H CLUB MEMBERS:

Greetings and good wishes on your forthcoming observance of National 4-H Club Week. You deserve congratulations for the fine record you have achieved in your program—strengthening the four-fold development of HEAD, HANDS, HEART, and HEALTH. In 4-H you develop mentally as well as physically, benefitting from the guidance of parents and public-spirited leaders. You also contribute to a more responsible and competent citizenship — which is today's greatest challenge to young people.

I would commend you especially for your constructive and worthwhile efforts in learning to live and work cooperatively with others. Your promotion of goodwill and friendly association with other people, and your over-coming circles of friendship, will help bring about better and happier relations at home and abroad.

Already you have built bridges of understanding to more than 50 other lands with 4-H or parallel organizations, and I trust your program will continue to grow and expand. May each of you influence other boys and girls, other young men and women, to join you in learning, living, and working through 4-H.

LINCOLN

By Mrs. Edgar Phillips

The Penfield family spent the weekend in Lincoln.

The Shreengosts were hosts at a birthday party for Mrs. Shreengost's father, Bert Pfengsten, Friday evening. About forty of Bert's long-time friends enjoyed playing bungee and coffee were served. It was a lot of fun.

Mrs. Boylan entertained with a tea to introduce Mrs. Bickston who has recently moved here to her neighbors in Lincoln. We are hoping Mrs. Bickston will enjoy living here.

Roman Maes has carved some figures from aspen logs he brought from the ski area. Roman does very nice carving. Some of his work is outstanding.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Beall came up from Alamogordo, Friday and attended the birthday party at Shreengosts. Their son Jack and his wife and daughter of El Paso spent Saturday night and Sunday with them. The Bealls went back to Alamogordo Monday but hope to be back-up soon to stay through the summer.

Mrs. Sara Salazar is quite ill at her home in Lincoln.

Mrs. Juanita Bassford of Alamogordo has been visiting the Joe Bacon's and other relatives and friends. Mrs. Bassford formerly lived in Lincoln.

...the Turner hospital. He has been named Ralph Franklin, Jr.

The Lyric Theatre features for Sunday and Monday was "Life Begins for Andy Hardy." The stars include Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and Lewis Stone.

It has been rumored recently and the rumors are becoming more persistent, that an effort is being made to close this railroad crossing on Main street.

The oldest incorporated trade association in the country, the United States Brewers Association, was organized in 1862... the same year that

IN NEW MEXICO, Confederate troops marched victoriously northward, taking Albuquerque and Santa Fe and moving toward Fort Union. Two volunteer regiments, one led by Kit Carson, met and defeated the Southern forces in a fierce battle in Apache Canyon near Glorieta Pass (March 28), by August, 1862 the Civil War in the Southwest was over.

Then, as now, beer was the traditional beverage of moderation... light, sparkling refreshment that adds a touch of Southwestern hospitality to any occasion. New Mexicans have always enjoyed the good fellowship that goes with every glass.

TODAY, in its centennial year, the United States Brewers Association still works constantly to assure maintenance of high standards of quality and propriety wherever beer and ale are served.

held the state agency for the Mining and Manufacturing reflecting material, Scotch-lite.

A 10 percent agency was held at that time by Abe Ribble, deputy chairman of Roosevelt county, under an arrangement worked out by Harold Fats Leonard who transferred the agency when he went on the state highway commission.

NO AUTHORITY FOR '41 DEAL'

State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Benny Sanchez, acting without legal authority, ordered the plates coated with Scotchlite at a price about three times the usual cost of plates.

The cost was so high that only one plate was designated for each car although the law said that plates shall be displayed front and rear.

The cost was so high that the plates were designated for three years use although the law said that they shall be issued annually. And the plates were manufactured without date on them, that also without legal authority.

The plates were used through 1961 without any indication of the year for which they were issued. Corner tabs are being used for 1962, and more tabs will be sold for 1963.

HE WAS ONLY THE HIRED MAN

There was considerable talk about taking Commissioner Benny Sanchez to court but it was dropped with all realizing that he was only the hired man in the deal and that others were responsible but could not be held to account for the multiple law violation.

The administration asked the legislature to legalize the illegal licensing and an act of 1961 made it all according to law. Something had to be done.

New conventional plates are available for 17.5 cents each, the Scotchlite plates cost 46 cents.

BAD ADVERTISING FOR NEW MEXICO

Worst aspect of the outlawed plates of 1960 is their deterioration and how bad they promise to be before they expire in 1964.

Already some of the plates have faded and checked to the point that they are hard to read.

Discoloration makes them choddy and a bad advertisement for the state.

The reflecting quality of the plates isn't much of a safety feature. A strip of reflecting tape on bumpers advertising the Boy Scouts or appealing for forest fire prevention is much more effective.

Cattle breeding school meets at N. M. S. U.

The last day of Cattle Breeders School at New Mexico State University began with a ranchers panel composed of Paul Patterson, Roswell; Don Driggs, Santa Rosa; and James Turner of Silver City. These three men discussed long range breeding programs, with the emphasis placed mainly on increasing calf percentages and increasing uniformity in commercial herds.

Increasing calf percentage involves several steps. Probably the most important of these is pregnancy testing. A good method that has proven effective is to pregnancy test heifers as bred yearlings and again the following year. This should show up the dry breeders that are to be culled and eliminate the process of testing the older cows. Of course, this may be done throughout the life of a cow for complete accuracy. Some dry cows are naturally going to show up thru the summer and these may be put in a dry cow pasture and sold in the fall.

We all have some cows that will have a calf that is below par. These cows may be put in an "out cow" pasture to be culled in the fall.

A bull's ability to settle cows is all important in increasing calf percentages. This ability may be improved by semen testing all bulls and by furling-out bulls in waves. The best bulls may be turned out first and each wave should contain old young animals.

Probably the surest method for increased uniformity in a commercial herd is to use related bulls. Breeding for increased milk production will also aid in producing uniform calves at weaning time. Selection at replacement heifers is certainly important and is probably done more efficiently with the calves at the cows side. A good point here is to select good heifers whose mothers are older cows with clean eyes.

Another good practice in selection of replacement cattle is to look for heifers with wide pinbones, and if they are, bred to calves at two years of age, wean their first calf early and keep them separate from the main cow herd until they are three. This is to allow them some extra supplemental feeding. These replacement heifers should be culled before they are bred and after they calve. To sum it up, a good breeding program should strive to breed cattle that will weigh more, be of higher quality, and be wanted by more buyers.

A surprising amount of interest was shown in artificial insemination.

LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1962

tion, which was ably discussed by Dr. T. H. Belling of N. M. S. U. Dr. Belling, one of top men in this field, stated that A. I. would definitely work in commercial herds in the Southwest. A hormone to control ovulation is in the final stages of development. This hormone will be fed in the supplemental ration for 21 days prior to breeding time. At that time it will be discontinued and all cows will be bred artificially for three consecutive days. This is primarily done to dispense with heat detection methods and shorten the calving period. The conception rate of cows bred artificially is naturally affected greatly by the age of the cow, the current weather and the kind of year the country experienced previously. The last program at the 1962 Cattle Breeders School was a demonstration of ultrasonic equipment used to measure the "flaring" qualities of live animals. This equipment had been used the previous day to measure the rib eye on three steers. These steers were butchered and the rib eye measured again revealing the amazing accuracy of this ultrasonic device.

On February 14, the F. H. A. members held a meeting to nominate candidates for F. H. A. Sweetheart and beau. Proceeding this meeting, Mr. Henderson showed a film of the Christmas at Fort Stanton Hospital, where four teenage patients received gifts from the "Captain F. H. A. Chapter."

Coming March 23, is the big annual F. H. A. Talent Show. There will be three divisions: Music, Dancing and Dramatics. Children under 12 years of age will be classified as one division.

If you would like to enter, please contact either President Patsy Sanchez or Secretary Glenda Fetters.

ED MEAD RUNNING AGAINST POLITICOS

Albuquerque Ed Mead has gone into final spirit for nomination for governor — at least an even money prospect to win with practically the whole Democratic state organization against him.

It is a political anomaly like never before in New Mexico. The organization favored candidates for governor, congress and the senate have always won, and always ran as the favorites, but possibly not this time.

Against Mead are Sen. Clint Anderson, Rep. Joe Montoya, John E. Miles, Paul Case, Fats Leonard, all the northside Democratic county chairmen, Land Commissioner Johnny Walker, Auditor Bob Castner, the corporation commissioners, Atty. Gen. Earl Hartley, and most everybody associated with the party organization. Also, it appears that none but Mead's own family is putting up any money for his run.

Mead is exploiting his position as a prominent Baptist going against two Catholics, Leo Murphy and Jack Campbell, and is enjoying the benefit of the extensive advertising of his produce, Meads Fine Bread. Political observers credit him with heavy support in eastern and southern New Mexico and in the Albuquerque heights.

Lloyd Burson, a student at the New Mexico Western College at Silver City and son of Mr. and Mrs. Art Burson of Corona, was reported as anchoring the winning medley with a clocking of 4:29 in mile relay February 24, when the Mustangs of New Mexico Western College won the first time since 1955 at the Invitational Relays in Arizona. They were competing against the University of Arizona, Arizona State University, New Mexico State University, and Texas Western College.

THE LINCOLN COUNTY ROAD PLANNING COMMITTEE MEETS

The Lincoln County Road Planning Committee met in Carriazo on March 5th, to consider recommendations for road improvement in Lincoln County.

According to the State Highway Department, no road work has been planned for Lincoln County for the next three years. The present system of spending money in a Highway Commissioners District was discussed.

Commissioner Kenneth Nocker discussed the probable crusher contracted by the county to stockpile gravel.

The group recommended that the Tinle-Arebella road be sealed to prevent further deterioration.

They also recommended that the 1961 priorities of one contract each on the Capitán-Pine, Lodge road and on the Conona-Lon road be continued.

Clifton Sultemeler and Fletcher Hall were elected chairman and vice chairman for the coming year.
