MAYOR OF TAGS
IN COURT MIX UP

SANTA FE — Gilbert Rivera, Taos mayor, justice of the peace, and candidate for Demo nomination for county clerk, has been cited by Lowell Green, court administrator for the supreme court, for reporting fewer cases than were assigned to him and for a $995 cash discrepancy.

33 CASES LISTED
AS "PENDING"

The report showed 33 cases which were referred to Rivera's court during that period by state police which are being carried in Rivera's records as "pending."

The Green report to the state officials show that Rivera reported fines of $395 during the period and state police records showing fines of $1,300 during the period.

State Auditor Casner said he could draw no conclusion of the Rivera case until he saw further reports from the JP or until an audit was made.

Rivera inherited the state police business in Taos when JP Jose E. Flores de Taos was suspended last summer on the auditor's claim that he was $13,134.73 short in his accounts.

STATE ACCOUNT PAGES
A HALF MILLION KAP

The attorney general has held that the legislature must take half a million from the state's current operating money and give it to the state permanent fund to reimburse a "loss" of that much incurred in the state investment council's loose handling of cap citizen money.

The constitution says that the investment council may not call bonds for less than their maturity price.

The council in January and March went ahead anyway and sold some $60 million of New Mexico city, school district and county bonds for half a million less than their maturity value.

They took the money and bought bonds of private corporations at a discount so that the bonds they bought had the same maturity value or par value as those they sold. And the ones they bought had a higher interest rate.

COULD HAVE SEEN
LOT MORE SERIOUS

Atty. Gen. Earl Hartley held that the transaction constituted a loss "in the constitutional sense" and the permanent fund must be reimbursed. The ultimate value of the bonds purchased won't be realized until they are paid off in the future. And meanwhile some of the companies that pledged the bonds could go broke.

The transaction was reckless in consideration of what might have happened between the sale of the old bonds and the purchase of the new ones.

Had the government lowered interest rates, as it sometimes does, the state might have had a real hard cash loss of half a million or more.

NATIONAL ELECTRIC

POWER GRID URGED BY

NEW MEXICO CONGRESSMAN

CHICAGO, Ill., March 27 — Congressman Thomas G. Morris of New Mexico today placed before executives and engineers of the nation's leading electric utility companies a bold challenge with regard to transmission of electric power and the building of atomic electric plants.

Taking a firm position on the need of a "national power grid" that would tie-in electric power systems from coast-to-coast, regardless of state borders, the Democratic Representative declared:

"A national power grid is going to be built in this country, and, if the private utilities don't build it, the government will. And, if the government does build it, very few Congressmen are going to vote to 'unbuild' it."

Mr. Morris was guest speaker today at a luncheon co-sponsored by the American Power Conference and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in conjunction with the 24th annual meeting of the American Power Conference at the Sherman House.

Bids asked on
Capitan postoffice

The Post Office Department is seeking competitive bids for an improved building to house its postal operations at Capitan, N. M. Postmaster General J. Edward Day announced yesterday.

Under the Department's lease construction program, a contract will be awarded to the bidder who designates a building suitable to the Department's needs and agrees to improve it according to departmental specifications and then rent it to the Department.

The Department's capital investment will be limited substantially to postal equipment. The building will remain under private ownership, with the owner paying local real estate taxes.

Bidding documents will be available on or about April 2 and may be obtained from R. A. Kin, Box 430, Albuquerque.

COUNTY AGENT DUNLAP SUGGESTS BATH FOR SHEEP

Although no new outbreak of sheep scabies has been found, I feel that the sheep owner should consider dipping. The dips using texpahene or lindane not only kill the scab mite but control ticks or (leeds) and lice. Use any of the insecticides at the approved concentration.

Lumber industry is big employer in state

SANTA FE, N. M. — About once a year the U. S. Forest Service announces the sale of $2.5 million worth of raw timber from federal and state forests in New Mexico and Arizona. About 40%, or one million dollars worth, is New Mexico's share.

Surely this is an insignificant figure compared to the hundreds of millions worth of oil, gas, uranium, copper and potash produced annually in New Mexico. Even counting the cut on privately owned forest land, the amount would still be small.

Yet, the lumber and wood products industry ranks third among this state's major sources of employment in the number of people employed. Only food and miscellaneous manufacture are ahead of it, according to the Industrial Division, State Department of Development.

Petroleum worth $500 million is produced annually in New Mexico but provides only 700 jobs in manufacturing. As a matter of fact, most of the state's natural resources are shipped raw or semi-finished to other states for conversion into finished goods.

Lumber, on the other hand, provides from 2,000 to 2,600 jobs, depending on the volume of construction going on. Lumber alone covers the full cycle of employment from logging to planing and millwork. A dollar's worth of log makes $10 worth of lumber and the money stays at home.

The lumber industry is unique in another respect. It extends its operations into small communities where other work is scarce, where ten or fifteen sawmill jobs are important supports of the local economy.

In towns like Chama, Cuba, Cañon, Dull, Magdalena, Quemado, Questa, Pecos, Penasco, Ponderosa, Reserve and Ribera, about the only sign of industry in sight is a sawmill.

A dozen large firms do three-fourths of the total volume of this state's lumber production. They employ an average of 150 men each, but the majority of these work in the forests, cutting timber and sawing and hauling logs. These large companies buy rough-cut timber from the small sawmills and their own men do come of their buying in out-of-the-way communities.

Again, wholesale lumber and mill production are only part of the story. While most of the wholesale product goes into construction as boards, joists and siding, certain specialized operations turn timber into treated poles, posts, trusses, railroad ties, furniture cores and pulpwood.

Another, large group, manufactures consumer goods, like cabinets, furniture, molding and store fixtures. While these products use other woods than New Mexico pine, such as hardwoods and ply-

Anderson says oath will hurt no one

Letter from Sen. Clinton Anderson

During the last school year 656 students in nine New Mexico colleges borrowed a total of $377,003 under the National Defense Education Act. Between 1953, when the program began, and last June 30, 1,632 students in our state have borrowed $707,770 to help meet their college expenses. Most of the loans have gone to students in science, mathematics, engineering, foreign languages, and teaching — specialties required for the national interest.

The Act provides that students must take an oath of allegiance and also sign an affidavit disclaiming subversive beliefs and affiliations. These are two very different requirements. I mention this because there has been some discussion of this matter recently and the facts should be clear. Both President Eisenhower and President Kennedy recommended that the affidavit requirement be removed because laws already exist to control subversion. There is no recommendation to remove the oath. I have taken the oath of allegiance on several occasions when I have assumed public office. It was an affirmation of my faith in this country and I was proud to do so. No student will be hurt by taking such an oath.

Rio Salado Retarding Dam will be SCS tour highlight

The Upper Hondo Soil and Water Conservation District will sponsor a Conservation Workshop for teachers on Saturday, March 31. Teachers from Hondo, Ruidoso and Capitan school systems are expected to attend in numbers which will make this one of the largest workshops of its kind ever held in this county.

The workshop will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Capitan High School with a fast-moving session "loaded" with dozens of demonstrations and activities which teachers and non-teaching persons will not want to miss. The demonstration session will be led by George Worley, director of the Park Foundation Watershed Conservation Education Project at the University of New Mexico. It will include many "live" demonstrations on such things as: relationship of arithmetic, math, social studies, etc. to resources and conservation; where they come from and how they differ; watersheds — what they are and how they affect our communities; and the living balance of plants and animals.

The demonstrations will be aimed at improving and broadening understanding of the local community in which teachers and others work and live.

At noon a free lunch will be provided at the Capitan school by the board of supervisors, Upper Hondo Soil and Water Conservation District. Ralph Bonnell, famous for his chuck-wagon barbecues, will be in charge of the meal.

After lunch, the workshop will move into the "field" to see firsthand some of the natural resources found in the community, and come problems related to resources and conservation.

Included on the list of "things to be seen" on the field trip are: silt and flood control measures installed on the Upper Hondo Watershed; erosion prevention measures installed along the Rio Bonito; and water conservation practices on the irrigated farms in the Hondo Valley. These activities have been installed with technical assistance from the U. S. Soil Conservation Service.

Highlight of the tour will be a stop at the Rio Salado Retarding Dam, which is the largest of the earth-fill structures constructed on the Hondo Watershed for the prevention of flooding along the Rio Hondo.

Those attending the workshop are asked to wear comfortable informal clothes, including a warm jacket.

In the words of Mr. Bert Pfingsten, chairman of the Upper Hondo SWCD Board of Supervisors, "All teachers, along with their husbands or wives, and anyone else in the area interested in learning more about the community they live in are invited to be with us on March 31st."

M.Y.F. takes trip to White Sands lately is our congenial R.E.A. Llieman, Bill Winchester of Corona.

Rookie Straley of Carrizozo spent the weekend with the Cope Straleys at Luna.

Oldtimers to Ancho would probably be interested in learning that the pump house at Luna, long a familiar sight, is no longer standing. Upon finding no buyer for the building, a construction company was employed to demolish the pump house. Early Sunday morning they completed the job by dynamiting and leveling the site. There is now no indication that such a building ever was.

Sunday after church services 42 M.Y.F. members and guests took a field trip to White Sands, where they enjoyed a picnic lunch and played on the Dunes.

Chaperons and driver of cars were: Mesdames Banks, Burns, Withers and Straley. The outing was closed with a devotional service before departing for home.

WHAT IS AN Independent Insurance Agent

So many times we are asked this question, what is an Independent Insurance Agent? One of the definitions of "Independent" is: not subject to another's authority or jurisdiction. This means that you are free to act in the best interest of your insured.

Each day we are more firmly convinced that as an independent agent, we can serve the public better than any other system yet devised, if we look after their interests properly, and command their respect by conducting ourselves as their representative — the link between them and the Company.

The public is becoming more and more conscious of the cost of insurance and of the services rendered by their agent. The major item that the independent agent has to sell is the actual service that he provides to his insureds.

Naturally the manner in which the agent serves his clients is determined to a large degree by the locale and the particular insurance needs of the population that he serves. Even though our community is small, our county is large and our Agency's growth during the past ten years has far exceeded our expectations. We have used several methods which have contributed to our development.

Before talking with our prospect about the cost of our merchandise, we are reasonably sure that we have convinced him that he wants to do business with us, and is willing to pay a little more for personal professional service, rather than "clinic" treatment.

Very often a customer is looking for someone in whom to confide on personal or business matters, we try to be good listeners, which makes price a secondary consideration if competition tries to move in.

We consider an accident or loss as a way of cementing relationship between ourselves and our insureds. This is our opportunity to show our worth to the insured. We do not ignore the smallest claim, for it is not the amount involved that impresses the customer — but the way it is handled — we are free to use the adjuster of our choice.

We keep up with changing coverages which are available and with the changing needs of our insureds.

We try to keep in close contact with our customers in two ways — personal contact and advertising. If you think publicity is unimportant you're mistaken, for advertising is like a giant octopus, reaching out in many directions. It goes to the right places, gets in to see the people we are unable to see, paves the way for personal calls, and it gives prestige.

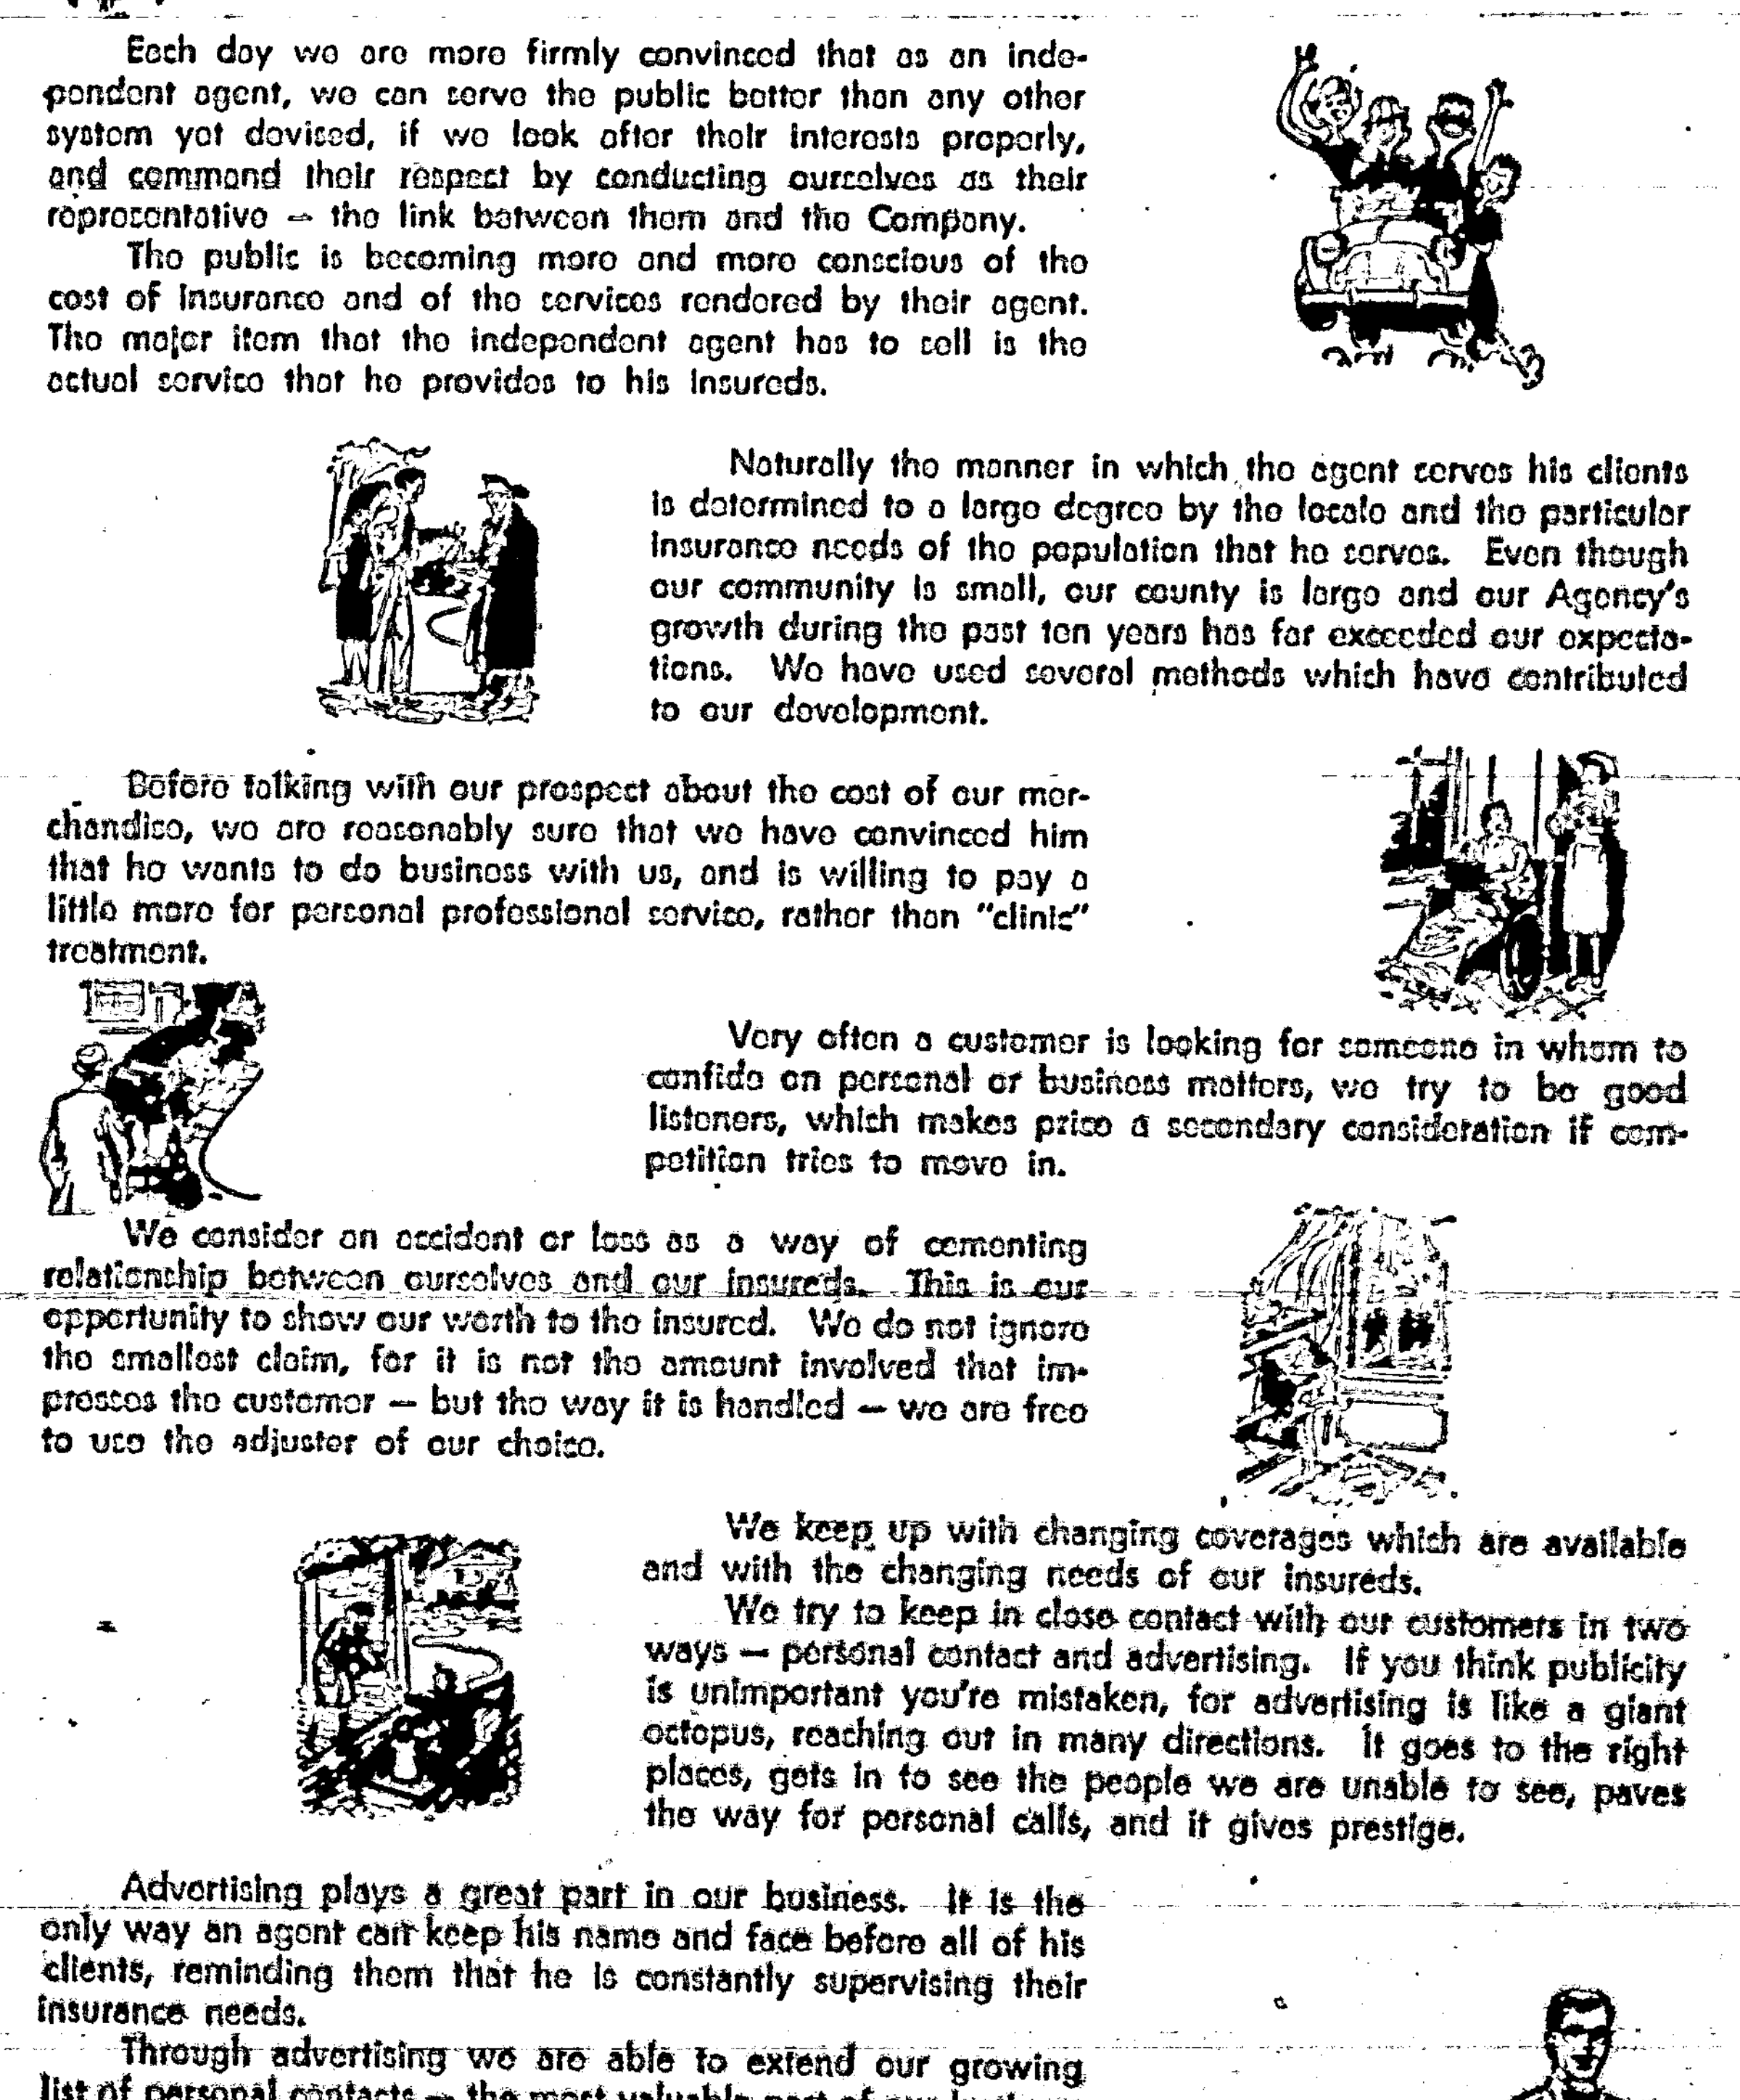

Advertising plays a great part in our business. It is the only way an agent can keep his name and face before all of his clients, reminding them that he is constantly supervising their insurance needs.

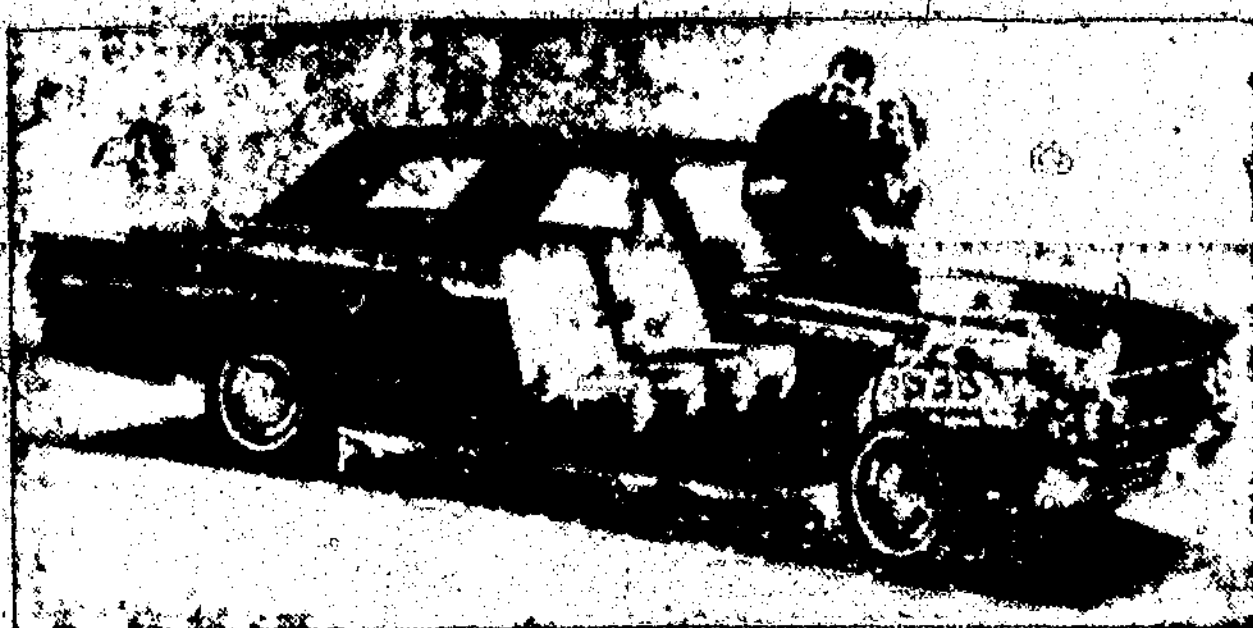

Through advertising we are able to extend our growing list of personal contacts — the most valuable part of our business — to all people so they may get the benefit of extra services provided by your Independent Agent . . . the best kind of service available.

the exotic game bird project, a cooperative venture between the states and the US Fish and Wildlife Service. The program is coming to an end this year, and for the reason the attempt will be made to propagate the birds at the Bird Farm. The francollins are wild-trapped in their native habitat, and are said to be extremely hard to raise in captivity.

Other states that have received black francolin are Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and Nevada, but nowhere in the United States has the bird become actually established as yet. It is described as a spotty bird and choice eating, weighing just under a pound.

TROUT PLANTING

Last week's trout plantings by the Game Department totaled 119,363 fish that weighed 6,216 1/2 pounds. Included were 23,163 rainbow trout that measured 7 1/2 to 9 1/2 inches. These were released in the following waters:

Rio Grande upper and middle; Animas River, Chisosa, Riverside, Swan, Estancia, Manzano and Del Rio Drains, Escondido and Glenwood ponds, Bear Canyon Reservoir, Virden Box (lower Gila River), Eagle Creek.

The Fish and Wildlife Service planted 3,520 rainbow trout—8 1/2 inches in Acornita Reservoir and 10 inches in the Rio Grande below Elephant Butte Dam.

BIRD FANCIER LEARNS THE HARD WAY

A nice mess of birds destined for the dinner table of an Albuquerquean wound up in JP court as evidence of a serious violation. The offender, with his 14-year-old son, was arrested along the Rio Grande not far from Belen, with nine robins and one of the rarely seen Bohemian waxwings in possession. He said he had been shooting songbirds all his life and liked to eat them. He contended, further, that it was not a violation to shoot these birds.

It cost him $30 in fine and court fee to find out that songbirds are protected by law and must not be taken under any circumstances.

SEARCH FOR IBEXES CONTINUES

THE Department of Game and Fish is continuing its search for a half dozen Nubian ibexes which, if obtained, will be held as possible breeding stock.

A number of likely contacts have been made, but as yet nobody has come up with this extremely rare animal. Levon Lee, game management chief with the Department will continue to contact zoos, in the United States and abroad in his attempt to locate a few of these animals.

Lee is also corresponding with possible sources in an attempt to locate Siberian ibexes. These animals occupy habitat ranging from the Siberian steppes to actual desert lands, and will presumably be well able to adjust to New Mexico, if obtained.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT IS

WHITE SANDS' GIGANTIC HIDDEN TREASURE

Has again hit the limelight! — and from accounts likely, once again, to be found. The Santa Fe branch of the AP has released a story telling of a dead prospector's family seeking legal permission to extract a fabulous treasure from Victoria Peak on the Mesquite Range.

Mrs. Ova Noss, widow of Milton E. (Doc) Noss, prospector who was shot at Fort C. a few years back and her son by a former marriage, Harold D. Beckwith of Wichita, Kansas, have acquired legal assistance in Kansas City, and commenced a head-on drive to obtain a permit from authorities to dig in and haul out the millions of dollars worth of gold, silver, copper, and gems from its long time hiding place.

Beckwith is supposed to have accompanied the late Doc Noss into the cave in late years before the prospector was shot to death. He has supplied his attorney with a description of the treasure, its location, its magnitude, and ancient artifacts left there by the early day Spaniards, who are supposed to have worked the mine. He declares he has seen Victoria Peak Cave's treasure in all its massive quantities and riches. He also says a few skeletons, old Spanish effects, ruins of a crude smelter, and mine workings exist in the area, and the old shaft is rich in the mother lode.

Noss and another prospector a few years back were moving the great treasure in the cave, to a higher level. Beckwith was with them. He was then only a boy. They, in their procedure, set off a blast of dynamite to widen a passage, which accidentally closed the old mine shaft. Noss was later killed, and his family has been seeking the treasure ever since. Federal authorities have blocked their work from time to time, however, since the site is on the Mesquite Range. They now seek to have that hindrance restrained and supplied with proper legal permission to carry on their work, regardless to whom the huge treasure belongs.

The site is on Victoria Peak, Section 16, Township 16 South, Range 3 East. The land is included in the government-owned mesquite testing grounds. This columnist had not anticipated discussion on the subject at this time, but since it has brought the news a few words are in order. Sally Calderon of South-west Texas little over a year ago detailed this writer on the story, since it has been in the files, scheduled for appearance in a column.

Sally was in the region when work was being carried on around Victoria Peak, for recovery of the treasure, and when the murder took place. He remarked about the treasure, "It's stacked in there like cordwood (speaking of the cave and the gold bars hidden therein), and there must be in the neighborhood of three and one-half million dollars worth of it."

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT IS — Beckwith and Mrs. Noss, especially Beckwith since he has bogged around in the treasure, are apparently sure of their ground from the portrayal of their efforts "Quien sabe!" However, they are up against a cold-shouldered proposition, dealing with Federal authorities on such a matter. It'll be slower than the tortoise. The next generation might even get a whack at it, searching for the treasure!

THERE'S a certain expression we hear fairly often, and have for years. It pertains to man's time on earth with his expectancy of a life hereafter. The expression amounts to something like this: "I'm not here for very long — I'm just passing through."

Of course we surmise its full meaning, as it has been for years, to include that period spent on earth while on the passage into successful orbit and his safe return to the Great Beyond. But with the turn to earth, the saying could take a different meaning, ultimately covering a different scope. NOW that same term could apply to man as he PASSES THROUGH, on his voyage in space, cruising about, exploring unknown territories, approaching the far-away limits of the moon, Mars, and etc. — approaching the planets in space as the ancient mariners plowed their caravels about the tiny islands of the Pacific.

Col. Glenn's successful orbit proved that man is master of space — scientific brains have only to provide ample transportation. Even at that, being the most progressive nation of the world it leaves us with the feeling, deep down in, that our modes and methods are fast becoming ancient — as did the horse-and-buggy days! And come day people will grin and remark about us of today — what crude people we an tiguas were!

THE VOICE OF THE NEW MEXICO TAXPAYER

This week's discussion is taken from a statement recently made by the State Board of Social Welfare of New York. In the opening paragraph the Board says:

"This Board has been concerned over the years with the many problems that have stemmed from Federal-State relationships in the public welfare field, especially with the steadily increasing domination by Federal authorities and the consequent loss to the State and local economy."

The Board goes on to say that there is no disagreement on the fundamental objectives of all modern public welfare — "to help people who have no other resource but public aid, and to provide that assistance as promptly, as effectively, and as economically as possible, in accordance with the best self-help practices. What is involved is a bureaucratic network of federal regulations, reporting, auditing, bulletins, State letters, interpretations, conformity reviews and a snow storm of other administrative paper requirements."

"Once again this Board finds it necessary to express concern, its very real alarm, over another threat to extend federal dominance in public welfare — the latest welfare proposals of the Federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Here again, this Board and the staff of the State Department of Social Welfare do not quarrel with objectives — providing for needy people who must be helped, rehabilitating individuals who can profit thereby, and using every known modern technique for breaking the chain of dependency in rarely deprived families. Our anxiety arises from the specific ways and means proposed to reach these objectives.

"These new proposals, if adopted by the Congress, would give the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington full power to dictate in detail to all States, and therefore to all the thousands of local communities in the nation that administer public welfare, just how it is to be managed — almost down to the last piece of paper.

"The discretion vested in the Secretary is without limitations. The philosophy implied and inherent ignores the basic right and responsibility of the State, to stop and to reverse the trend of increasing federal domination, of a growing complexity that is getting completely out of hand, and of the constant threats to withhold federal funds because of alleged non-conformity with federal regulations.

"To accomplish this urgently-needed change, this Board proposes that: "Because many of these problems stem from federally required State plans, the Social Security Act should be revised to require that, not a State's plan, but its State laws, should be used as the basis for determining whether a State is in conformity with federal law.

"Such a revision would also shift the responsibility for accepting or refusing federal welfare funds from administrators to legislators. The amount of funds that are now available to a State is so great that the decision to accept or refuse such funds should be made by those who have the duty to decide the major fiscal policies of the State. After all, the effect of such fiscal decisions goes far beyond the interest or jurisdiction of any single State agency.

"The federal administrator's powers to review a State's program for conformity should be limited to reviewing a State's welfare laws. This would restrain federal administrative personnel from continuously stretching federal requirements and threatening a State agency with withdrawal of federal funds unless its voluminous State plan is amended again and again to conform to the latest federal interpretation of its own regulations."

QUACK

Information Service of New Mexico Tuberculosis Association

"See a doctor — but be sure he is a doctor." One of the best pieces of medical advice anyone can get is, "See a doctor." When you feel sick, don't trust yourself to diagnose the trouble. A doctor can do it much better. That is what he has been trained to do. And there is a second piece of advice that should always go with the rule: "But be sure he is a doctor." Every year, the American public spends millions of dollars on medical quacks — bogus doctors with unproven methods. They use scientific-sounding words and mysterious, secret formulas. At best, these quack remedies are simple harmless; at worst, they are extremely dangerous. Quack promises cures, even for incurable diseases. He is generally anti-doctor and anti-medical associations. He is also opposed to proven methods of treatment. He probably advertises (something a bona fied doctor would never do), and he often talks freely — brags, in fact — about the cures he has effected. But the worst thing of all about a quack is the time he wastes, time when the patient could be undergoing valid treatment from a genuine doctor. Time that, in some cases, might mean the difference between life and death. So, if you aren't feeling well, don't dose yourself. See a doctor — and be sure he is a doctor. Quacks are for ducks.

"Around Town" A bridal shower was held at the Herrera Hall for Rita Vega, Saturday evening. Hostesses were: Mrs. Natalia Vega, Mrs. Sandoval, Bonny Fief, Viola Fenter, Jane Ortiz, Eugenia Vega, and Julia Samora. Punch and cake were served to 75 guests. Mrs. B. Ortiz received a prize, a bottle of Champagne, for breaking the donkey pinata. Miss Vega's wedding is planned for March 31 at 4:00 P.M. Mr. and Mrs. Truman Spencer, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Pat Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Stephenson are attending the Cattleman Convention in Albuquerque this week. A fire was reported Sunday morning east of Sally Ortiz's house. The fire truck responded and had the fire, a brush fire, out in minutes.

Mrs. Amanda Chavez, 91, dies Mrs. Amada Chavez, 91, a life long resident of Lincoln County died in San Patricio, March 21. Burial services took place in Hon-do on the 23rd of March. Mrs. Chavez is survived by her seven sons, Abram, Trancito, Candido, Adelaldo, Lepoldo, Rumello and Ermando and her daughter, Florida. Very little biographical information was available on the deceased.

HOW BANKS HELP Family Money Managers

Probably the greatest boon to families in managing their money matters is a checking account. Since checks can be written in exact amounts, the question "Where was I short-changed?" need not arise. Since checkbook stubs form a running record, there's no reconstructing of "How much was paid to whom for what?" Since cancelled checks—proof of payment are returned to the signer, he need not request and file receipts. In the U. S. A., 90% of all bills are paid with checks, drawn on more than 50 million checking accounts in banks. Keep your personal accounting simple — by keeping a checking account at our bank!

Many People and Some Dogs Know the Difference

In the thinking of many people who study, work with, and spend money on — advertising — there are two main qualifications necessary to effectively get an advertising message across to a reading public.

First: a publication must have editorial integrity and vitality; its success depends in great measure on giving honest, vital service to its readers and community. A "mail-out throw-away" cannot qualify in any editorial way. A newspaper, with high readership, has greater sales pull.

Second: a publication must have an appreciation of the reason for its existence. The Lincoln County News exists to serve a large portion of people in Lincoln County. Which again gives the newspaper an edge over the advertising throw-a-way.

WHITE SANDS' GIANTIC HIDDEN TREASURE

Has again hit the limelight — and from accounts likely, once again, to be found. The Santa Fe branch of the AP has released a story telling of a dead prospector's family seeking legal permission to extract a fabulous treasure from Victoria Peak on the mesa of Bangor.

One Noss, widow of Milton E. (Doc) Noss, prospector who was shot at T or C a few years back and her son by a former marriage, Harold D. Beckwith of Wichita, Kansas, have acquired legal assistance in Kansas City, and commenced a head-on drive to obtain a permit from authorities to dig in and haul out the millions of dollars worth of gold, platinum, diamonds, and gems from its long time in place.

Beckwith is supposed to have accompanied the late Doc Noss into the cave in late years before the prospector was shot to death. He has supplied his attorney with a description of the treasure, its location, its abundance, and ancient artifacts left there by the early day Spaniards, who are supposed to have worked the mine. He declares he has seen Victoria Peak Cave's treasure in all its massive quantities and riches. He also says a few skeletons, old Spanish effects, ruins of a crude smelter, and mine workings exist in the area, and the old shaft is rich in the mother lode.

Noss and another prospector a few years back were moving the great treasure in the cave, to a higher level, Beckwith was with them. He was then only a boy. They, in their procedure, set off a blast of dynamite to widen a passage, which accidentally closed the old mine shaft. Noss was later killed, and his family has been seeking the treasure ever since. Federal authorities have blocked their work from time to time, however, since the site is on the Missile Range. They now seek to have that hindrance restrained and supplied with proper legal permission to carry on their work, regardless to whom the huge treasure belongs.

The site is on Victoria Peak, Section 16, Township 16 South, Range 3 East. The land is included in the government-owned missile testing grounds.

This columnist had not anticipated elaboration on the subject at this time, but since it has been the news a few words are in order. Sally Calderon of Southwest Texas little over a year ago detailed this writer on the story. Since it has been in the files, scheduled for appearance in a volume.

Sally was in the region when work was being carried on around Victoria Peak, for recovery of the treasure, and when the murder took place. He remarked about the treasure, "It's stacked in there like cordwood (speaking of the cave and the gold bars hidden therein); and there must be in the neighborhood of three and one-half million dollars worth of it!"

take a different meaning, ultimately covering a different scope. NOW that same term could apply to man as he PASSES THROUGH, on his voyage in space, cruising about, exploring, venturing heretofore unknown, approaching the far-away rim of the moon, Mars, and etc., approaching the planets in space as the ancient mariners plow their caravels about the tiny lands of the Pacific.

Col. Glenn's successful orbit proved that man is master of space — scientific brains have only to provide ample transportation.

Even at that, being the most progressive nation of the world, it leaves us with the feeling, deep down in, that our modes and methods are fast becoming ancient — as did the horse-and-buggy days! And some day people will grin and remark about us of today — what crude people los an tiguas were!

THE VOICE OF THE NEW MEXICO TAXPAYER

This week's discussion is taken from a statement recently made by the State Board of Social Welfare of New York. In the opening paragraph the Board says:

"This Board has been concerned over the years with the many problems that have stemmed from Federal-State relationships in the public welfare field, especially with the steadily increasing domination by Federal authorities and the consequent loss to the State and local economy."

The Board goes on to say that there is no disagreement on the fundamental objectives of all modern public welfare — "to help people who have no other recourse but public aid, and to provide that assistance as promptly, as effectively, and as economically as possible, in accordance with the best self-help practices. What is involved is a bureaucratic network of federal regulations, reporting, auditing, bulletins, State letters, interpretations, conformity reviews and a snow storm of other administrative paper requirements."

"Once again this Board finds it necessary to express concern, its very real alarm, over another threat to extend federal dominance in public welfare — the latest welfare proposals of the Federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Here again, this Board and the staff of the State Department of Social Welfare do not quarrel with objectives — providing for needy people who must be helped, rehabilitating individuals who can profit thereby, and using every known modern technique for breaking the chain of dependency in sorely deprived families. Our anxiety arises from the specific ways and means proposed to reach these objectives."

"These new proposals, if adopted by the Congress, would give the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington full power to dictate in detail to all States, and therefore to all the thousands of local communities in the nation that administer public welfare, just how it is to be managed — almost down to the last piece of paper."

"The discretion vested in the Secretary is without limitation. The philosophy implied and inherent ignores the basic right and responsibility of the State, to stop and to reverse the trend of increasing federal domination, of a growing complexity that is getting completely out of hand, and of the constant threats to withhold federal funds because of alleged non-conformity with federal regulations."

"To accomplish this urgently-needed change, this Board proposes that:

"Because many of these problems stem from federally required State plans, the Social Security Act should be revised to require that, not a State's plan, but its State laws, should be used as the basis for determining whether a State is in conformity with federal law."

"Such a revision would also shift the responsibility for accepting or refusing federal welfare funds from administrators to legislators. The amount of funds that are now available to a State is so great that the decision to accept or refuse such funds should be made by those who have the duty to decide the major fiscal policies of the State. After all, the effect of such fiscal decisions goes far beyond the interest or jurisdiction of any single State agency."

"The federal administrator's powers to review a State's program for conformity should be limited to reviewing a State's welfare laws. This would restrain federal administrative personnel from continuously stretching federal requirements and threatening a State agency with withdrawal of federal funds unless its voluminous State plan is amended again and again to conform to the latest federal interpretation of its own regulations."

the rule: "But be sure he is a doctor." Every year, the American public spends millions of dollars on medical quacks — bogus doctors with bogus methods. They use scientific-sounding words, and they probably advertise (something a bona fide doctor would never do), and he often talks freely — brags, in fact — about the cures he has effected.

But the worst thing of all about a quack is the time he wastes, time when the patient could be undergoing valid treatment from a genuine doctor. Time that, in some cases, might mean the difference between life and death.

So, if you aren't feeling well, don't dose yourself! See a doctor — and be sure he is a doctor. Quacks are for ducks.

HOW BANKS HELP Family Money Managers

Probably the greatest boon to families in managing their money matters is a checking account. Since checks can be written in exact amounts, the question "Where was I short-changed?" need not arise. Since checkbooks form a running record, there's no reconstructing of "How much was paid to whom for what?" Since cancelled checks—proof of payment—are returned to the signer, he need not request and file receipts. In the U. S. A., 90% of all bills are paid with checks, drawn on more than 50 million checking accounts in banks. Keep your personal accounting simple — by keeping a checking account at our bank!

"See a doctor — but be sure he is a doctor." One of the best pieces of medical advice anyone can get is, "See a doctor." When you feel sick, don't trust yourself to diagnose the trouble. A doctor can do it much better. That is what he has been trained to do.

But there is a second piece of advice that should always go with
