Carrizozo's Bobby Ortiz takes state high school scoring lead

Little Bobby Ortiz of Carrizozo is currently the hottest thing in New Mexico high school basketball even if the Carrizozo Grizzlies are not.

The Carrizozo shorty threw in 90 points during three games at the Ft. Summer Invitational Tournament during the Christmas holidays, boosting his state scoring leadership to a 29.9 points a game average.

Ortiz took over the scoring lead from 7-foot Nick (The Stiek) Pino of Santa Fe St. Michael's who led last week with a 25.4 average and who is now shooting at a 27.2 clip, good enough for second.

Another new face among the top-ten-scorers this week was that of Frank Gurule of Los Lunas—the only other Class A scorer aside from Pino among the leaders. Gurule was third with a 25.5 average.

Mitchell, also known as Wm. Evercole, is wanted by the FBI for burglary and larceny and escaping from custody.

Lila June Miller, age 18, from Johnston Town, Ohio, was picked up with John Mitchell with whom she was living at Lincoln under the name of Mrs. Wm. Evercole. She had written 17 insufficient fund checks totaling $187.63 and forged two checks, for $40.00 and $15.00.

This incident should be a warning to business people to obtain positive identification before cashing checks for strangers.

THEY CALLED IT BONITO

(This is the final chapter of a story about Bonito Canyon, taken from the original manuscript of Herman Consburch, who came to Bonito in 1850.)

Dr. Flynn was taken from grave again and after the Doctors of Ft. Stanton had treated him with some chemicals was sent to Boston on the request of his brother who lived in that city. The girl was taken to the Rademacher house, she had small flesh wound on the side of her body and Mrs. Rademacher nursed her until an Uncle came from Iowa and took her home. The answer to the question who or how started the shooting we could not decide to satisfy us as all victims were dead, the girl could not tell us much.

The women were of the opinion that Nelson intended a friendly visit to the girl under the stars and the old man tried to prevent this and so the trouble started. The night before Nelson came later to the store and when I showed him the cartridges he was asking for he said, "Them is the ones alright and I get them in the morning." That seems to show that Nelson had not planned the shooting or he would certainly have taken the cartridges with him.

After this miserable murder business everything was quiet again and went all right but the neighbors would not come anymore to the dancing parties for a while fearing probably there were some more murders among our peaceable citizens. We had picnics however and large prayer meetings conducted by outside preachers.

When Huber died in September, 1900, the store died with him and you could hardly call Bonito a village anymore. Some lived for several years with the best of hopes for the future until the Southern Pacific Railroad started in 1907 a 10 inch pipeline on the south fork of the Bonito creek two miles above Bonito.

The Railroad could not find good water for their locomotive boilers along their line and wanted that good clear water coming from the granite mountains of the south fork. To get permission to lay this pipeline the Railroad had to buy the land along the line or make satisfactory arrangements with the people. Most people cold and as they got good prices for the land and left for other places, thus our community was getting smaller.

Now in 1930 the Railroad built a 60 foot high dam on the Bonito creek 1/2 miles below Bonito and bought all places along the Bonito Creek above the dam. They tore down all houses and will not allow anyone to live in the Valley — there are only a few people living in side gulches. The whole country along the creek so to say belongs to the Railroad. The Company takes good care that water in the lake is kept pure as the water is used by the people along the very extensive line for drinking purposes. They fenced in the Bonito Valley and south fork for miles to keep cattle from spoiling the water.

The lake about a mile long among the finely timbered mountains make the country yet more beautiful but our Village of Bonito is no more as it is covered by the lake. Such is life in the far West.

WILL HARRISON'S Inside the Capital

DEMOCRATS CONFIRM REPUBLICAN ESTIMATE

SANTA FE — A Democratic committee of experts on state money has placed the shortage of money needed to finish the present year at $74 million.

The sum is only a couple of hundred thousand under what State Finance Officer Ed Hartman said it would be before the election at the same time that Jack Campbell and Rep. Jerry Brasher, his campaign advisor on money matters, said that the shortage was $15 million, and could be handled without difficulty by the legislature.

$18 MILLION FOR NEXT YEAR

The same committee estimated that $15 million to $20 million new money would be needed for the next year that starts July 1.

John Gott, who has been picked by Campbell for finance and administration officer, estimated that the amount needed would be near $18 million.

That figure is several million more than would be received from doubling the income tax as advocated by some Democrats, and happens to be right on the nose of what would come from adding one cent to the sales tax, as advocated by Republicans.

PRIMARY REPEAL WOULD HELP JOE

The scheme to repeal the direct primary method of nominating political candidates is widely regarded here as a device for the convenience of U. S. Rep. Jos Montoya in getting the Demo nomination for the U. S. Senate in 1964.

State Sen. Ed Mead of Albuquerque has a bill to repeal the primary in favor of what purports to be combination convention - primary system, but which in fact is simply a convention.

TOUGH REQUIREMENTS FOR SECOND RUNNERS

In Mead's proposal the convention would nominate one person for each office and would let others run in the primary upon the fulfillment of requirements that are practically impossible to meet.

Second runners would be permitted to enter if they received as much as 20 per cent of the convention vote for the place, and if they could secure petitioning signatures of 2 per cent of the number of Democrats voting in the preceding election in each of 16 counties — and that in the two weeks between the convention and the primary filing date.

YOUNG DEMOS SAY MONTOYA IS BEST

Montoya alone among the prospects for the Senate nomination to run against Republican Sen. Ed Mechem has been actively working.

He got a strong plug in a resolution adopted by the executive committee of the Young Democrats. It said:

"Congressman Joseph H. Montoya is perhaps New Mexico's best qualified official serving us today.

"It is the further consensus of this committee that Joseph H. Montoya can only serve the state of New Mexico in a further capacity."

The resolution perhaps was displeasing to Sen. Clint Anderson, U. S. Rep. Tom Morris and Gov.-Elect Jack Campbell and various others in official places, but it was a pretty strong public boost for the congressman.

TROUBLED REPUBS FIGHT EACH OTHER

Republicans who had no luck this year fighting the Democrats have turned to cutting each other.

At mid-December there were Mechem Republicans, Bolack Republicans, Jack Redman Republicans and another group devoted to getting Jos Skeen out as state chairman.

A meeting of the party central committee in Albuquerque last Saturday was adjourned by Chairman Skeen five minutes before Gov. Tom Bolack got in from Santa Fe. Bolack and Skeen didn't seem to think it meant anything but many of the Republicans thought the governor had been slighted. Bolack had met with young Republicans in his Santa Fe office during most of the time that the central committee was in session at Albuquerque. Skeen, state senator from Lincoln county, is on a term as chairman that runs until the middle of 1964.

Sen. Ed Mechem was in the state and he didn't attend the committee meeting either. (Continued on back page)

McBrides to take over Tastee Freez

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McBride are the new operators of the Tastee Freez, a popular refreshment place on U. S. 54 in Carrizozo. They have had experience in the dairy and cooking business and the Tastee Freez will not be an entirely new venture for them.

Mr. McBride resigned his position with the Arrow Gas Co. where he has been employed for the past two years.

The Lanes, Wade and Margaret, bought the business from Pick Warden 2 1/2 years ago and sold to the McBrides effective January 1.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SPONSORS FREE GIFTS

The Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring gift certificate drawings at the three remaining home basketball games, Corona here Jan. 4, Hondo here Jan. 5, and Ruidoso here Jan. 25.

There will be from 10 to 30 gift certificates, value $1.50 given at each game, all courtesy of Carrizozo merchants. The certificates are redeemable any time within 30 days. The drawing will be at half-time of the "A" game each night.

Rickerson finds dead man in car

Wm. C. Hackenberry, age 31, from Rt. 1, Box 803, Esbarta, Calif. was found dead in his car December 30.

The car which was noticed by the City Marshal at 1:30 a.m. was parked near the Monte Vista Service Station with the motor running. When Mr. Rickerson opened the station at 6:00 a.m. the car was still there with the motor running.

Then at 8:00 p.m. noticing that the car was still there, Mr. Rickerson investigating found the car locked and a man apparently asleep inside. He notified Sheriff Bradley who on arrival broke the lock on the door and found the man dead. Justice of the Peace R. L. Sherrill was called and a coroner inquest was held. It was determined that death was caused by carbon monoxide poisoning. The body is held by the local mortuary pending identification.

Monarch of The Old West

A Serial Story in Two Parts

White Wolf's two wives chattered happily as they skinned out the fat buffalo cow. There would be feasting in the Cheyenne lodges tonight, with choice ribs and sauté cuts sizzling over the blue flames of the buffalo chip fire.

It had been a highly successful hunt. Approaching the herd from downwind, White Wolf and his companions had driven the buffaloes in a circle, then riding alongside they had killed many fat cows with arrows from their powerful bows.

To the Cheyennes and other tribes of plains Indians that roamed the vast American wilderness for centuries before the white man crowded them out, the buffalo was more than food — he was a way of life. Standing over 6 feet tall at the

It's a penny a lick more January 7

It'll cost you more to lick a stamp January 7th—just one penny! And you'll dig deeper into your jeans for funds, to purchase air mail service and send packages about over the world.

About the only thing in your favor is that Uncle Sam has forethought enough to set the date after Christmas, which you might figure provided you with a little more Christmas money.

The Old Uncle has had his humped back jammed to the wall for some time. His gigantic Postal Department has been humming along at a deficiency, an enormous one, for some time, and he's finally come up with a solution to keep the wolf from the door for a little bit longer.

A few days back Postmaster General J. Edward Day gave a few people a squint at the new five-cent postage stamp which will be licked onto every ounce of first class mail which finds its way into the drops of the United States post offices, on the 7th. The new adhesive bears a bust of George Washington, in blue. The bust is the same done by Jean Antoine Houdon and has been on three-cent stamps issued in 1851. The first sight of the five-cent issue took place at the Federal Memorial Hall where the Father of Our Country took the oath of office as first president of the U. S.

Post cards will up a penny; likewise air mail letters will soar from seven to eight cents, and most every other postal service will acquire proportional increases, according to a recent postal bulletin.

There is no occasion to be alarmed at the sudden increase in postage or become excited about the Old Uncle's financial status, for he is well acquainted with problems of the mail. The problems have existed continuously since establishment of the system in 1839 by a general court of Massachusetts. And the rates are not yet exorbitant. Richard Fairbanks of Boston was allowed one penny for the transmission of each letter.

In 1863 Governor Penn of Pennsylvania established a post office in Philadelphia, with Henry Wadly as the first postmaster, where mail was transmitted weekly between Philadelphia and Newcastle, Delaware, and horses were even supplied to serve the routes! Despite those first bleak circumstances, however, the postal system continued to grow. In 1783 there were 75 post offices; in the mid-20th Century there were 40,000. In 1790 only 1875 miles of post routes existed for the mail-carriers to plough through the mud, in attempt that the "mail must go through!" And the MAIL DID GO THROUGH—by 1950 there were more than 2.1 million miles of routes! There's no released dope as just how much growth has been attained the last few weeks. But we can count on one thing, Uncle Sam certainly believes in delivering the mail wherever man goes—and they go to some hellacious places.

When people cast an eye westward and began the overland trek, the Pony Express was added up on April 3, 1860, to give faster service to the Pacific Coast. The first mail required 10 1/2 days & 75 ponies to deliver, besides the hide which was worn from the saddle portions of the Express riders. The fastest delivery time during that period was attained when the inaugural address of Abe Lincoln was delivered in 7 days and 17 hours.

We might think we are taxed for postal service now—but take a look at the fees of that age. The company charged $5 for each one-ounce at the beginning of the Pony Express, but was later reduced to $1. Buffalo Bill Cody was one of the Pony Express riders.

When gold was discovered in California by old John Marshall in January, 1848, and everybody pulled out for that country, Uncle Sam had another major mail problem. The Santa Fe Trail was humming and he cast an eye in that direction for a solution. The mail was dispatched to Leavenworth, Kansas; thence over the Trail into Sacramento, where Old Sutter was having all sorts of hell with the gold that had been discovered in the stream by his sawmill.

The first air mail was established May 15, 1918, in cooperation with the War Department, which furnished the planes and the pilots. The first pieces were flown between Washington, D. C. and New York City, 216 miles. President Wilson quit the White House to witness the departure.

By Kit Carson

One of the reserves for replenishing the larder of deficiency in the Uncle's postal till is the Dead Letter Office. Millions of letters each year find their way into the department which can not be delivered; millions are returned to the senders. In 1955, 574,510 parcels were dumped into the division; 123,093 were returned to senders; the remaining 451,417 parcels were sold at public auction and $261,915 realized. BUT...

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT IS... This little recompense realized from the sale of unclaimed mail will not suffice the deficit of Uncle's Postal Department. Neither will the increase of rates effective January 7th. The Department won't lose any sleep, however, because the Department was born with trouble and with one un-daunted ambition — "The mail must go through!"

LIQUOR LICENSE
MARS BOLACK TERM

SANTA FE — Tom Bolack, the one-month governor who set out with a supreme effort to make a good showing has suffered a marred record from one liquor license issued to a McKinley county politician.

The Republican governor shut off action on 40-odd pending applications for hooch selling permits but let one through for Demó Sheriff Mickey Mollieca of Gallup which stands to be one of the things for which Bolack's 31-day administration will be remembered.

NOTHING FOR TOM
BUT PAINFUL TAP

The liquor license, issued for an establishment in the Navajo country north of Gallup and vigorously protested by the Navajo tribe, is in the name of Dorothy Thompson who Mollieca says is his niece.

It is on land that turns out to have been owned by a brother of Howard Wilson, the governor's private aid, and the McKinley county commission action approving the license has been disputed with one member claiming the action was illegal.

There is no conceivable benefit for Bolack in the license but he is taking a hard rap for its approval coming during his administration.

LITTLE ONES PREFER
TO RETAIN PRIMARY

State Sen Ed Mead's proposal to repeal the primary and go to a convention of nominating candidates isn't running any better than Mead did when he was trying for governor early this year.

A sampling of opinion from twelve legislators produced a count of six against, four undecided and two favoring.

The open primary as practiced here is a thing of hope for hundreds of little people with ambition to get in public office who would have no chance in conventions controlled by the big figures of the parties.

There is also a general feeling that the proposed return to the conventions is for the benefit of U. S. Rep. Joe Montoya in getting Demo nomination for senator in 1964, which naturally isn't pleasing to others who would like to have the place.

POLITICS DISLIKE
BRUNACINI, MAYSHARK

Spanish-American Demo politicians from the northern counties are severely critical of the choice of Charles Brunacini of Albuquerque for revenue commissioner in the new administration, a post that has been traditionally held by Hispanics.

They are equally critical of Gov.-Elect. Jack Campbell's selection of Duke Mayshark of Santa Fe as his personal aide. Mayshark who was on the state payroll a couple of years as tourist director in an early term of Republican Gov. Ed Mechem, doesn't know the politicians and they don't know him.

ALL GOVERNORS
SUFFER THE SAME

The raps falling on Campbell shouldn't dismay him. They are the same as all incoming governors experience.

And if Campbell goes through the usual pattern he will catch a lot more static until the legislature goes home in March and after that will have his opportunity to build toward popularity.

CAMPBELL'S PAL
UP FOR JUDGE

The sudden rise of Howard (Bud) Bratton of Roswell for U. S. district judge is attributed to his close relationship with Jack Campbell. The nomination for the judgeship would have to come from Sen. Clint Anderson which would probably put the new governor in the senator's debt.

If Bratton gets the appointment it means that George Hanneft of Albuquerque, nephew of former Gov. A. T. Hannott, and District Judge Sam Montoya of Santa Fe will be severely disappointed. They among half a dozen other prospects including Supreme Court Justice David Carmody and David Chavez, and District Judge H. Yearle Payne of Lordsburg, had strong hopes of getting the place.

Former Governor Hammett is reportedly sore about the turn toward Bratton. Bratton is the son of retired Circuit Court Judge Sam Bratton.

PAINFUL TIMING
FOR TAX LIEN

Federal income tax lien on the property of Rep. Bobby Mayfield of Dona Ana came at an unhappy time for the legislator when his committee is driving for more income tax on New Mexicans. Mayfield's Revenue Structure Sub-Committee has made a strong pitch for the state getting more of its revenue from income and property taxes.

Some political observers think the embarrassing action against the legislator might have been inspired from the Washington level in malice. If that was the idea it would have been more effective last month before the election. Mayfield has had unpleasant run ins with people who could get back at him with such as the lien.

Emilio Naranjo, Demo chairman and sheriff-elect of Rio Arriba, has strong backing for appointment to the state police board. Any one with a strong nominee for the state highway commission in the northeastern quarter of the state would probably get consideration from the new administration. The three prospects considered so far, Dr. J. Q. Thaxton of Raton, Ivan Hilton of Las Vegas, Joe Campos of Santa Rosa, haven't had a very good reception. Gov. Tom Bolack takes off in January for three months tiger hunting in India.

Rules For Lamb Cookery

There are three simple rules to follow in cooking lamb, in order that the finished product reaches the peak of taste satisfaction.

1. The type of cut determines the method of cooking.

2. Always use a low temperature.

3. Avoid overcooking. Practically all the high grades of lamb are tender and may be cooked by dry heat. Leg, shoulder, and loin, when cooked as large cuts, or roasted require a longer period of cooking. Chops are broiled, or fried.

Even the inexperienced cook can be an excellent lamb cook by keeping a few fundamentals in mind, which include starting with good quality lamb cuts. Following is a list of various cuts and the recommended cookery methods.

Leg of lamb - roast; Crown Roast - roast (obviously); Rib Chops and French Rib Chops - broil, panbroil, pan fry; Arm Chop and Blade Chop - broil, panbroil, pan fry, braise; Square Cut Shoulder and Cashion Shoulder - roast; Saratoga Chops - broil, panbroil, pan fry, braise; Neck Slices - braise, or cook in liquid; American Leg and Frenched Leg - roast; Loin Chops - broil, panbroil, pan fry; Patties - broil pan fry; Riblets and Stew Meat - braise or cook in liquid; Breast - braise or roast; Shanks - braise or cook in liquid.

An exceptionally tasty lamb dish is the braised lamb shanks. For this thrifty, delicious dish select meaty shanks (1 shank to each adult is a good means of selecting the amount). Brown the shank in a hot saucepan until the surface is golden in color, and the rich aroma causes taste buds to tingle. Add a sprinkling of fresh or chopped parsley flakes, salt and pepper to taste, and a cup of water for each two lamb shanks. Cover the saucepan tightly and cook over slow heat until the meat is tender and will pull easily from the bones. The broth can be thickened slightly for gravy, which is delicious served over fluffy potatoes or steamed rice. Add green salad, steamed carrots, hot bread and fruit, for a delicious, lamb of a meal.

Cold Reduces Screwworm

Screwworm larvae samples submitted to the Southwest Animal Health Research Foundation, Mission, Tex., for identification from New Mexico have shown a marked decrease during the early part of December, according to a report received today by William A. Ljungdahl, animal husbandman with the NMSU Extension Service and executive secretary of the State Screwworm Eradication Committee.

Through December 13 six samples from New Mexico were identified as screwworm. Four of these were submitted from Hidalgo County and one each from Otero and Sierra Counties.

Cold weather over most of the state undoubtedly was partly responsible for this decrease but reports from county extension agents and screwworm survey personnel indicate that screwworm infestations are going unreported in some areas of the state.

Information received from Mission, Texas, indicates that sterile screwworm flies will not be dropped in areas where the expected high temperature for the day is below 60 degrees, Ljungdahl added.

Progress in Eradication The number of confirmed cases of screwworm infestations in New Mexico dropped from 207 from 16 counties in October to 87 confirmed cases from 11 counties in November. So states a report from the Animal Disease Eradication Division of USDA's Agricultural Research Service, Albuquerque.

William A. Ljungdahl, animal husbandman with the NMSU Extension Service and executive secretary of the State Screwworm Eradication Committee, who released information from the report today, for the second consecutive month, reported the highest number of confirmed infestations — 28. Grant County reported 17 cases, Hidalgo 10, and Otero 10.

The opinion persists among livestockmen that in some counties the number of reported cases is not a true indication of the incidence of screwworms Ljungdahl says. Reports of screwworm infestations are very important during the winter months, as screwworm larvae submitted during this period will have considerable influence on establishing overwintering areas.

Ljungdahl urges ranchers to examine cattle and if screwworm infestation is suspected, to collect and submit larvae to the Southwest Animal Health Research Foundation, Mission, Texas, for identification. Ranchers should also make sure that no screwworm - infested animals are shipped interstate, he cautioned.

The Mission fly rearing plant reported that sterile fly production reached a total of one billion during November. Sterile fly drops on the Mexico side of the international boundary were initiated during November. An area of 13,000 square miles in Mexico is now receiving regular fly drops.

The known overwintering area in New Mexico has received since June 3, 1962, nearly 25 1/2 million sterile flies for a weekly average of 1,136,322. This area in New Mexico is bounded on the east by the Rio Grande, on the north by a line through Faywood, on the west by the Arizona state line and on the south by the International border.

WAY TO SADDLE & BRIDLE

The Ancho Junior Ranchers held their meeting Dec. 13, at the home of their leader Nancy Knight.

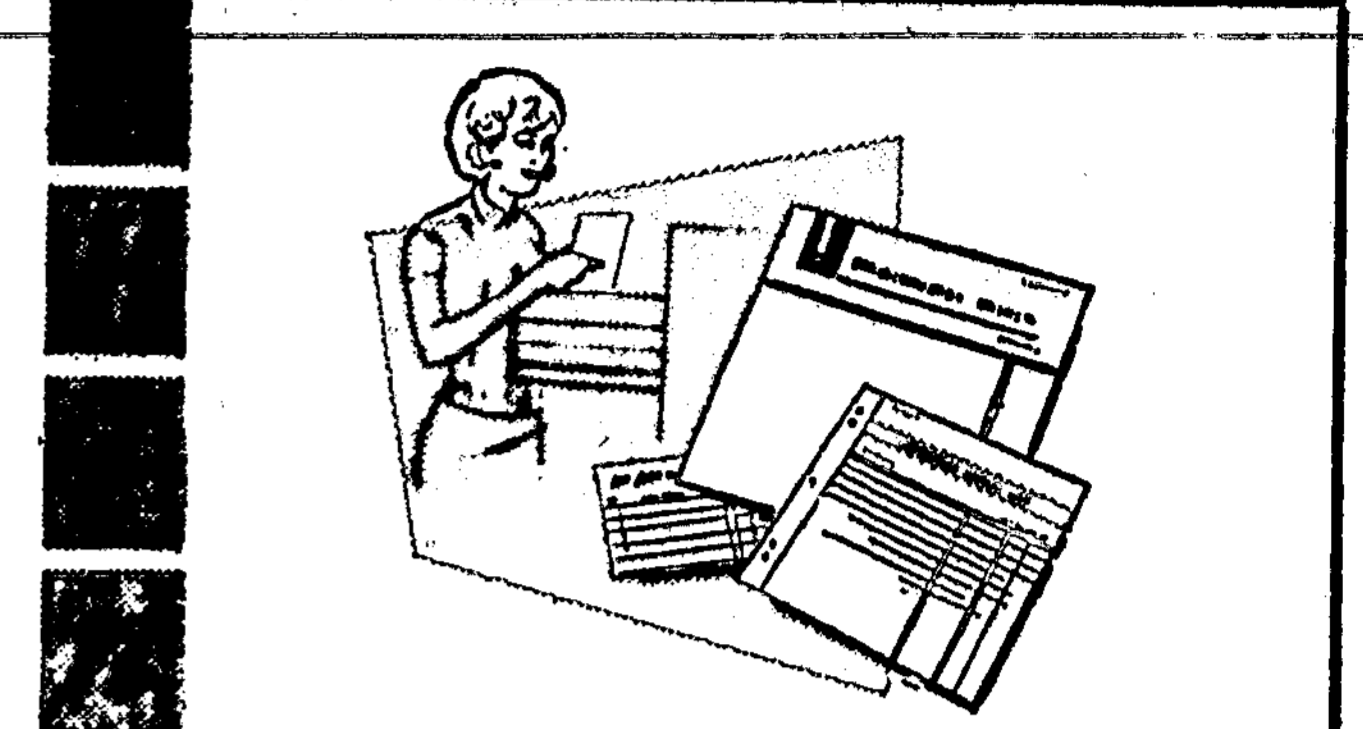

The group went directly to observe the proper way to saddle and bridle a horse. Different types of bridles and blankets for young horses being trained were demonstrated. Gordon and Becky Barham helped their father with the demonstration. The group returned to the house where the meeting was called to order, by Pres., Tommy J. Straley. The pledge was led by Gordon Barham. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Sec., Hugh Bancroft. The Treas. report was given by Pete Gnatkowski. All of the members reported that their Christmas Party, which was held Dec. 8, at the Woman's Club, was a success. Thank you notes were to be mailed to all mothers who helped with the party. Mrs. Knight was presented a very pretty western shirt by the 4-Hers. Each member was given paper and pencil on which to write their reasons and placings of horses. These were pictures of horses which were judged. After the papers were handed in, Mr. R. C. Barham gave his placings and reasons and answered questions. The leader, Nancy Knight, gave each member a 4-H folder for Christmas.

Lola Dunlap, the outstanding 4-H member of the year, was presented a 4-H jacket. Meeting was adjourned, Mrs. June Straley served refreshments.

HOW TO HIT PAY DIRT IN YOUR ADVERTISING!

By Bernice Fitz-Gibbon

Recognized as a top retail advertising expert, Miss Fitz-Gibbon served Marshall Field and Macy's and was successively advertising director of Womankind and Gimbel's.

One of the questions that I hear over and over from retail store clients is "Where should I advertise?" It is easy to understand the confusion. Today there are many more advertising outlets (media) than there were, say, twenty years ago. In which of these myriad media should the store owner place the bulk of his advertising? Is there such a thing as a "best" advertising medium for a store? Or is it television? Or newspaper? Or direct mail? Or is it best to place a dribble here and a drab there?

I notice that more and more stores are leaning to the dribble-and-drab method. They are dipping a tentative toe into radio, magazines, direct mail, billboards, car cards, house-to-house throwaways, sky writing, telephone solicitations, sandwich men, round trucks that tour the town, and what have you. But is this take-off-in-all-directions advertising (or what might be called "buckshot") wise? Will it bring in a walloping profit? I think not. Nor would I suggest that advertising monies be channeled into television. Television commercials sell by irritation-not invitation. They are an intrusion, an outrageous interruption in the entertainment which is the primary business of TV. They are the penalty one pays to see Loretta Young walk through the door or Ben Casey turn his sweet sour charms on the patients.

What about direct mail? Of course, I don't think any great harm is done by an occasional direct mail piece (to use up the weight allowance in the charge envelopes). But I do not think that a personal letter establishes any rapport between the store president and the customer. I do not believe that a customer is thrilled to death to receive an envelope with her very own name and her very own address on it. I do not believe that she is flattered and fluttered with this "me and you stuff," the big store president talking to little me and chatting things over just like old friends.

Then where should a store place the bulk of its advertising money? The answer is newspapers. The newspaper is the only constant medium that will bring daily traffic and sales to a store. Did you know that (according to a recent survey) 93,000,000 people read a newspaper on an average weekday? And 79 per cent of them said they would feel lost without it? And did you know that a woman's number 2 reason for buying the paper is to read the ads? So it's foolish for a store to dissipate its budget and diffuse its selling message by spending appreciable sums in other fruit and (to a retail store) feeble areas. I believe that when you run an ad in the papers you don't have to call in the figure boys to make a penetration study and reader analysis to find out if your stuff sold. You jolly well know by looking at your cash register. Here is why.

"Wad ye deny p-r-r-rint?" I once knew an old Scotsman, and when he wanted to prove that something was positively, absolutely, indubitable, without-a-shadow-of-a-doubt true, he would crown his arguments with, "And I saw it in the newspaper. Wad ye deny p-r-r-rint?" Funny thing but most people feel the same way. They believe a thing is the gospel truth if they read it in the paper. Mind you, I am not saying a thing is true because it's printed in a newspaper. I'm saying that it's easy to believe that it's true. It seems to be true. This willingness to believe" rubs off on the advertising. That means a that half your selling job is done already.

But, you may say, a newspaper is short-lived. Nobody wants to read yesterday's newspaper. That's true. Today's masterpiece wraps tomorrow's fish. That's good. Nothing could be better. The paper's being so very dead when it's death is in a reasonable result of its intense vitality and liveliness when it's alive. Only something very new can get so very old so quickly. Other media, which theoretically die more slowly, never have that hot-off-the-press aliveness. Besides, isn't that what your store is selling... hot-off-the-press aliveness? In fashion. In home furnishings. Or in whatever you happen to sell. And isn't the eternal cry of the customer, "Eat what have you got today?" Newspapers shout back the answer. Newspapers have "urgency" in every page. They have a kind of we've-got-it-but-you'd-better-get-right-over-here kind of appeal that moves merchandise—fast. Television has none of this. And, incidentally, did you ever try clipping a television program off the screen in order to read it again the next day? So make your pitch through the papers — and watch business boom.

Taking Only The History

Taking only the history of the colonization and conquest of the New World, including the Pacific Islands, as a basis, is not the evidence overwhelming, not of a conscious policy but of an uncanny instinct in the White European for conquest and imperialism generally, that he so often first attacks the primitive on his spiritual side? His native religion is made sick; his gods dethroned. The rest, then is easier: social organization deteriorates, ancient rituals and usages which gave unity to the tribes are abandoned, and an alien, and therefore meaningless, morality is imposed. Thus weakened it is time for the trader to enter, along with the soldier reinforcements. Missionary, trader, soldier thus many native cultures have been destroyed.

Taking only the history of the socialization and conquest by the New Deal, including a few Old Deals, as a basis, is not the evidence overwhelming, particularly of the conscious policy, but more so of the uncanny instinct in the master politician for human weaknesses, that he regularly attacks his constituents by giving them food, wine, clothing, libraries, dams, and jobs requiring little work. The rest, then, is easier. Independence of spirit deteriorates, the family, once all important in American life, loses its closeness, and the new trend of bigness, big government, big towns, big taxes, becomes a fixation. Thus weakened by the constant strain to bear the burden of taxation and petty bureaucratic rulings, government offices with handouts take over, government wardens clamp down on rancher and merchant, and colder reinforcements control the unruly. Handout, takeover, taxes — thus America — the greatest democracy this world has known — is on its way to self destruction.

The first paragraph is from "Karamitaway Country" by Roy Redhelm, from the book, "The Southwest in Life and Literature, compiled and edited by C. L. Sonnlechen.

Roads For The Future

If traffic flow during the holiday season just past is an indication of the importance of north-south travel through New Mexico, those persons particularly interested in tourist business should give some attention to the maps on this page — Vehicles of all descriptions were traveling bumper to bumper all the way down U. S. 54 in one of the greatest movements of people across a nation that motel, service station, and restaurant men have seen.

Start at the top map where highway 85 comes into Cheyenne, Wyo., then start south through Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Trinidad, Raton, Springer, Las Vegas, and about 6 miles on south of Las Vegas. Any vehicle heading for Lincoln County, El Paso or in a general southwest direction has a choice at this point — they can continue on to Santa Fe on 84-85 or take Highway 84 to the point where it joins Highway 60 and go on south by this eastward jaunt.

It would seem likely that if a south-north highway could be brought from one of two points, Bernal across to Encino and Duran, or from Pastura on Highway 54 north to connect on to Highway 84 — that travelers wanting a short road to southern New Mexico and many other points, would have such a route by following 85 south to Bernal, a new highway to go on south and join on to Highway 54 to continue their trip to El Paso and on south.

Maybe as many as three hazards confront such a new route. 1. The Interstate Highway going north through a more westerly section of New Mexico. 2. Getting state and federal road officials to see the new highway as necessary and getting highway business people in southern New Mexico interested and active for their own welfare.

Right now the wheel isn't squealing so no one knows it needs any grease.

It was an unusual experience driving north on US54 before Christmas, the heavy flow of traffic was behaving well — the hazard was dodging the flow of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas tumbleweeds blowing across the highway. Every so often one of the small-type cars would catch a tumbleweed in its bumper and buzz along with the driver straining to see over the weed.

Winter wheat looked good all the way north, also plenty of cover to the Midwest ought to winter in fine shape.

L. Z. Manire reports Legion membership up to 27. This organization does more to take care of veterans of all wars than any other organized group.

A guy just back from a visit in Philly says he had a little difficulty finding all the tourist attractions he wanted to see. He says at one point he asked a policeman: "Could you tell me where Ross's home is?" And the policeman leaned close and confided: "Listen, Mac, this new administration has closed all them places."

New Mexico has a new administration with a wonderful opportunity — they need to do more than close places.

THE LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS - THURSDAY, JAN. 3, 1963

New Mexico at 50, state of contrasts

SANTA FE — All over New Mexico this year, there are celebrations marking fifty years of statehood. For it was just a half-century ago that the American flag got its 47th star. New Mexico was admitted to the Union on January 6, 1912, and Arizona followed the next month. For most of the time since, it seemed as if they would be the last to enter the family of states. But the recent drive to admit Alaska and Hawaii ended in success and the 50-star flag.

Most of these early structures are now in ruins; but one, erected prior to 1629 at Acoma, is still in use. Acoma is one of the nation's oldest inhabited settlements. It was built atop a 357-foot sandstone mesa. Stones and roof timbers for the church had to be dragged up footpaths from the plain below. In the decades just after the American occupation, Indians were not treated so well. Navajos and Apaches fought westward expansion — and lost. Reservations were delineated. Government schools sprang up by the dozen. Protestant missionaries entered the struggle for Indian souls. For many years segregation was the custom; Indians were disfranchised. They were thus left out of the main stream of New Mexico life.

The situation has changed greatly since statehood. Today, New Mexico Indians may vote if they like. They serve in the armed forces along with other citizens, and in increasing numbers their children attend integrated schools. Yet many of their ancient, leisurely folkways survive, and they are often on the warpath for the tourist dollar with a thriving business in arts and crafts.

Some are painters working in water colors and oil and earth pigments. Others are jewelers, weavers, potters, or carvers of kachinas (doll representing tribal god). Also in contrast to atomic physicists and missile men in New Mexico are non-Indian artists who live in many parts of the state today. Early in this century they were attracted by the Indians, whose culture patterns provided an inexhaustible supply of subject-matter for their canvases. Many, too, found inspiration in the state's mountains scenery and canyons.

There are now four noteworthy art colonies in New Mexico — at Taos, Santa Fe, Albuquerque and Mesilla. In each of these a bohemian atmosphere prevails, with creative achievement at a nationally recognized level. Galleries in Taos enjoy, for the most part, a short season, from June through September only. Mesilla, in the extreme southern part of the state, has warmer weather and all year patronage. Indian and non-Indian, astronaut and artist in New Mexico are alike celebrating the golden anniversary of statehood this year. The United States Post-office department issued a stamp commemorating the state's first 500 years. Many celebration events have taken place already.

Asset to Tourists. In the last few decades the tourist business has become one of New Mexico's biggest. Besides Carlsbad Caverns National park, the state has nine national monuments and eight state parks. These areas are set aside to protect archeological ruins, historic buildings, and scenic wonders of New Mexico. There are also eighteen Indian pueblos and scores of villages with a Spanish flavor to attract visitors.

Industrial development got off to a slow start after statehood. It was not until World War 2 that large-scale factory employment reached New Mexico. Isolation made New Mexico an ideal spot for manufacture of secret war materials. The first atomic bomb was detonated on its deserts. Atomic bombs were built in the secret city, Los Alamos, in the Jemez mountains near Santa Fe. Albuquerque, Clovis, Roswell and Alamogordo became sites of air bases. Nuclear research still goes on at Los Alamos, and atomic tests are conducted underground near Carlsbad Caverns. Meanwhile, several of the state's military bases serve the space age. Rockets are launched at White Sands missile range in southern New Mexico, and there are satellite tracking stations at Kirtland Air Force base at Albuquerque and the Holloman base near Alamogordo.

Contrasting sharply with all this scientific activity is the sedentary life of the Indians, who still occupy pueblos built in prehistoric times or range over hunting grounds that have been tribal holdings for centuries. Pueblo Indians lived in prosperous "city states" in New Mexico when Spaniards first explored the Southwest. Apaches roamed the region, too, and in the 18th century Navajos came in from the north.

BIGGER BETTER BARGAINS...

Monarch

When the tribe's larder ran low, braves killed a few buffaloes and everyone feasted on the meat. For variety, they enjoyed smoking tongues, bone marrow, and delicacies such as buffalo livers, which they ate raw with perhaps a drop of gall for seasoning. Surplus meat was not allowed to spoil; squaws dried it in strips and converted it into pemmican, a nutritious and concentrated food that would keep almost indefinitely.

To the Indian, the buffalo's hide was almost as valuable as his meat. It provided shelter, clothing, and many other necessities. A half dozen hides, stretched together with sinews, made a strong and durable teepee covering. Properly cured, and with the hair removed, buffalo hides could be converted by skillful squaws into clothing, moccasins, saddles, bridles, ropes, pouches, and countless other useful things. Hides with the hair left on made warm sleeping robes and winter clothing.

When the time came for the tribe to move camp, a buffalo hide stretched across two poles dragged behind a horse became a "travels," a vehicle for transporting small children and household goods.

Most Indian household utensils also came from the buffalo. The Indians fashioned spoons and cups from buffalo horn, hide scrapes and crude hoes from buffalo bones. Many an Indian maiden made a comb for her hair by simply scorching the rough skin of a buffalo tongue.

The pride of every Indian lodge was the warrior's shield, a beautifully decorated protector made of thick layers of green hide from a buffalo and heated over a fire until it became almost as hard as iron.

Some tribes even made bows from buffalo rib bones fastened together with a glue obtained by boiling scraps of rawhide from the neck of a buffalo bull. Arrows used with these bows were sometimes tipped with flint-hard pieces of buffalo hoof.

Finally, when the Indian brave had made his last hunt on earth, a buffalo robe became his shroud.

So important was the buffalo to the Indian's way of life that it is easy to understand why the red man spoke of the great beasts as "our brother, the buffalo."

In the legends of most plains tribes, the first buffaloes came out of a great hole in the ground many moons ago, and were hunted by tribal ancestors. We may doubt the validity of the hole-in-the-ground part of the legend, but modern science has confirmed the fact that more than 10,000 years ago prehistoric Folsom man hunted a now extinct, and even larger type of bison on the North American plains.
