INSIDE THE CAPITOL — By Will Harrison

Education marriage breakup possible

JOHN GOTT WEAVES A SUCCESS STORY

SANTA FE — John Gott, 30-year-old state director of finance and administration at $15,000 a year, has become a prime prospect for state school superintendent in peaking off a phenomenal two-year success story at the capitol.

Gott who has no record as an educator or administrator is one of the two or three finalists from which the state board of education will pick the new superintendent.

Gott, business manager of the Clovis schools, was unknown at the statehouse when Finance and Administration Director Ed Hartman hired him in 1961 as school finance officer.

Within a few months he was advanced to deputy director under Hartman, was offered a high salaried position by the Legislative Finance Committee, offered another high salaried place in the department of education, and was picked at the first of 1963 by Gov. Jack Campbell for the most responsible place in the administration, finance and administration director.

In recent weeks he has been felt out on taking either of two municipal school superintendent positions.

EXPERT ON MONEY AND THAT'S ALL

The young official is an expert on school money matters, but more than that he has a remarkable ability to command the confidence of legislators, public officials and others he encounters in his work.

He is also conservative on school money matters and school teaching methods which has endeared him to many in the legislature and perhaps accounts for some of his popularity in the state board which also seems conservative.

NMEA INFLUENCE IS AT STAKE

If Gott should be chosen superintendent it would probably breakup the marriage of the Department of Education and the New Mexico Education Assn. which for the past five years has made the two almost indistinguishable.

Retiring Superintendent Tom Wiley took office at the first of 1963 after four years at the head of NMEA.

The NMEA and the education department in the past couple of years generated serious antagonism in the legislature which in the recent session resulted in the department being cut $150,000 under its previous spending level, and in a serious but unsuccessful effort to sack the elective state board of education.

THREE LOCALS IN NMEA CROWD

Of the six candidates screened for final consideration three are from the NMEA crowd — Alamogordo Superintendent Earl Nunn, backed by the NMEA for state superintendent in '56; Mike Hust, superintendent of schools at Portales, and Hal Tunnel, superintendent at Elida.

The other two not identifiable with NMEA are L. J. Delayo of Maryland and Stanley Proctor of North Carolina.

WINNER INHERITS LOT OF TROUBLE

Whoever gets the job will inherit 140 mostly long-time staffers more or less frozen in by the state personnel law, many of them in bad repute with the legislature which puts up the money for the department operation.

Gott's conservatism and his ability to get along with the legislature, which is the education department's No. 1 need right now, keeps him high in consideration for the position.

If he gets it there will probably be an extensive turn-over in the department. (Continued on back page)

FARM NEWS

By County Agent Ralph Dunlap

Getting ready to spray? Plan on using a miticide in the first sprays, especially if you did not use a delayed dormant spray. Now is the time to keep the mites in check. Use Trithion, Tedion, Guthion or Genite 923, for mites.

Adding wettable sulfur to the spray material will help keep the mites under control as well as control powdery mildew. Jonathan and Golden Delicious show powdery mildew first with a stunted terminal growth.

A summary of sprays for apples is available at the County Agents office in Carrizozo. Plan Before Planting The Vegta

PLAN BEFORE PLANTING THE VEGETABLE GARDEN

"Plan before you plant" is a basic rule for successful vegetable gardening. May vegetables grown in home gardens are often wasted because too many of one kind mature at the same time. With few exceptions, vegetables remain edible for only a short period after they reach maturity. Top quality is even more transient.

One way to avoid having too large a crop at once, then nothing, is to make successive plantings of the same vegetable. Plant only enough seed of crops like lettuce, radish, and spinach to provide the amount you can use within a short period. Then, after a few weeks, plant another lot to mature after the first harvest has been exhausted. Or, if the variety used does not do well later in the season, plant other varieties that mature later.

This kind of planning calls for a careful study of seed varieties and must be done well ahead of planting time. It may mean buying more seed. But, these things pay off in greater satisfaction at harvest time. Another thing to look for in studying seed varieties is the height to which vegetables will grow. Plant tall-growing crops together and low-growing ones together, preferably to the south of the taller ones, to avoid shading lower plants. Vegetables need about eight hours of full sunlight to produce well.

GIFT PLANTS CAN LAST LONGER

Many people buy or are given potted growing plants for the holidays.

You don't need a green thumb to get your gift plant to last a long time. It's easy. Give them full sun, cool temperatures and keep them moist and out of drafts. Most of the plants will last longer if kept at about sixty degrees, except when they are actually in use as decoration. Water them when the soil surface is dry to the touch on top. Never let them wilt or stand in water.

Many of these plants can be kept and used again, either indoors or out in the garden. Until you can plant outdoors, remove the dead flowers and keep the plants growing in a sunny, cool window sill. For future information, ask your county agent for a copy of Extension circular C307. The title is "Plants in the Home." It's free at his office.

HOUSES OUTGROW THEIR WIRING

Just because your house is relatively new does not necessarily mean that its wiring system is up-to-date. There are several reasons why this statement can be true. For example, the builder of the house may not have known the extent of your own special electrical needs. It also might be that the house was built to meet a price which did not allow for anything but just the bare minimum for wiring.

You do not have to be an expert to tell if a house is suffering from weakness in wiring. If the lights flicker and dim when appliances are turned on, fuses blow or circuit breakers trip too often, "octopus" connections are used because there are not enough outlets, and long extension cords are strung around the room, the wiring is most likely inadequate.

If you have these troubles in your home you are not realizing the fullest benefits of the electricity you pay for. An electrician or power company representative can help you make building plans that will avoid this, or help you correct your present mistakes.

SPRING CLEAN-UP BRINGS FIRE PROTECTION

Everybody takes a new lease on life when Spring rolls around.

And that lease on life — for you and your family — will be more certain if there's a thorough Spring clean-up done around your home and farm.

To help avoid a dangerous and destructive fire at your place is as simple as that. Rubbish and trash are high on the list of fire causes, according to National Fire Protection Association records.

Take these steps to a fire-safe home and farm.

1. Get rid of stacks of old magazines and newspapers, discarded clothes, rags, mattresses, old furniture, and other junk — all the clutter that gathers in attics, basements and closets in homes;
2. Check sheds and out-buildings for similar trash, then clean up winter rubbish in the farmyard and get rid of dead grass and brush around buildings, along fences and fields;
3. Clean your machine shop — get rid of shavings, scraps, oily rags, oil paints;
4. Clean up, oil and repair all electrical equipment and power machinery — home appliances, too;
5. Inspect and clean chimney, stoves, and heaters of all types.

"These are the danger spots. Look out for them — correct them — keep them corrected all year around, and you will have helped to keep you and your family safe from fire."

NEVER COMBINE CLEANERS AND BLEACHES

Never combine cleaners and bleaches when cleaning the bathroom. Many of the cleaning products contain chemicals which may cause serious injury or even death if misused or carelessly handled.

For example, the National Safety Council reported one death as a result of mixing a well-known cleaner and a household bleach in a toilet bowl. The acid content of the cleaner liberated chlorine when the household bleach was added.

One person died in a few minutes. Another survived, but was hospitalized for a long time.

If you use household bleaches, remember that they are solutions of sodium hypochlorite. Acid substances, even vinegar, added to the bleaches, will create and release poisonous chlorine gas.

If you are the type of person who reads the label only as a last resort, you may be in trouble when you use cleansers.

You are protected by the Federal Hazardous Substance Labeling Act. The act requires manufacturers to label their products, giving information about ingredients which may be harmful if misused.

SORGHUM TEST DATE AVAILABLE TO FARMERS

Lincoln County farmers can obtain the latest information on performance of sorghum hybrids and varieties from a new research report issued by the Agricultural Experiment Station of NMSU.

Copies may be obtained free at the county agents office in the courthouse in Carrizozo.

The report was prepared by Norman R. Malm, Assistant Agronomist, Plains Substation, Clovis; William J. Russell, superintendent, Southeastern Substation, Artesia; Harbour D. Jones, superintendent, Middle Rio Grande Substation, Los Lunas; and David H. Williams, superintendent, Northeastern Substation, Tucuman.

The tests were carried on at these four substations of the Experiment Station during 1962. The report includes information on sorghums grown under both dryland and irrigated conditions. Yields and other data on varieties of Sudangrass and millets are also given in the publication.

Names and addresses of companies that supplied seed for the tests are listed by the authors.

RANCHER SAYS TESTING STRENGTHENS BEEF IND.

Cattlemen, who long have suffered economically because they had no reliable scientific method for determining the ability of their animals to convert feed into desirable cuts of beef, now have a method in performance testing.

That is the opinion of F. R. Carpenter of Hayden, Colorado, rancher and past president of Performance Registry International, expressed at the second annual performance-tested bull sale at NMSU's northeast substation near Tucuman, March 30.

"The Babcock butterfat test revolutionized the dairy industry by supplying an accurate marketing yardstick," Carpenter told about 700 cattlemen, gathered for the sale. "We now have a 'Babcock test' for beef men which tells them how many pounds of good meat they are producing."

Carpenter related that he began his career in the cattle business as a New Mexico cowboy at 15, and recalled the days when cattle were sold unweighed by the bunch, with calves "thrown-in." He said the idea of weighing cattle before sale first encountered resistance, but finally became standard, and reminded the group that a similar resistance was encountered at first by sellers of pedigreed stock.

"With performance testing we are finally putting the industry on a real business basis," he declared. I went broke twice under the old guess-work system and I am not going to go broke again."

He praised Dr. J. H. Knox, head of the animal husbandry department at NMSU, as a leading figure in the performance testing movement, and described him as "a college man with a practical cattleman's viewpoint."

Carpenter also called on the cattlemen to support a system of dual grading for beef, emphasizing that the industry must adjust to the desires of consumers, who now want lean meat and less fat. Dual grading assigns separate grade identifications to a carcass — one for its quality of lean meat, the other for its cutability or yield of salable meat.

• But some of us don't see the biggest bargain of all — the dividend we draw from buying at home.

• Statisticians tell us that a home-spent dollar will turn over an average of three or four times in the community before it moves on to some other area. That means $3 or $4 or more local trade volume for every dollar we spend here. Which makes the "$3 for $1" sign not too far-fetched after all.

• More local trade volume results in greater local prosperity... and all the fine things that go with it. Thus... the biggest GENUINE BARGAINS in the world: the things we buy at home.

N. M. TB Association holds meeting

Patricia Romero, social worker at the Ft. Stanton Tuberculosis Hospital, was one of the speakers at the New Mexico TB Association meeting held in Carlsbad recently. Miss Romero, speaking on a panel on "Social Problems of the TB Patient and His Family", was a discussant on "At the Hospital". She brought out the background of various patients and the hardships of leaving home and being hospitalized for a lengthy period. Again pointing to the fact that much of this is needless if the public would recognize the need for periodic checkups.

Others in attendance at the meeting included Dr. H. C. Jernigan, National Tuberculosis Assn. Director-at-large from New Mexico, and George W. Bryan, superintendent at the TB hospital.

In addition to attending the NMTA sessions Dr. Jernigan attended meetings of the New Mexico Thoracic Society and the State TB Hospitals board, meetings held in conjunction with the annual meeting session of the NMTA.

On Intrinsic Values

A market commentator said, "Someone should write a book about confusing price with value. Prices actually fluctuate much more than do values, and it is overemphasis on price and neglect of intrinsic value which gets many investors (and analysts!) into trouble".

The man writing this paragraph had stocks and bonds on his mind . . . but his words apply equally well to the people living in Lincoln County and Carrizozo where the question of value is all important, the intrinsic value of the town you live in is particularly on our mind. It's the place where a good many people have invested their life savings.

Prices fluctuate, while the intrinsic values of your town remain constant. What made it a good place to live 50 years ago, are pretty much true today.

If you like an altitude just on top of a mile high, bright sunshine most of the time, reasonably dry atmosphere, plenty of mountains in the background, lots of wide open space around, a land that is growing and developing — you have all of these things aplenty in Lincoln County. Such values do not change, they are here to stay.

The places where most of our money goes, have almost nothing to offer in price or value compared to the intrinsic values of the country and towns we live in. We include tax money sent to Washington, tax money sent to Santa Fe, money spent on the luxuries and necessities of life in this lack-of-value statement.

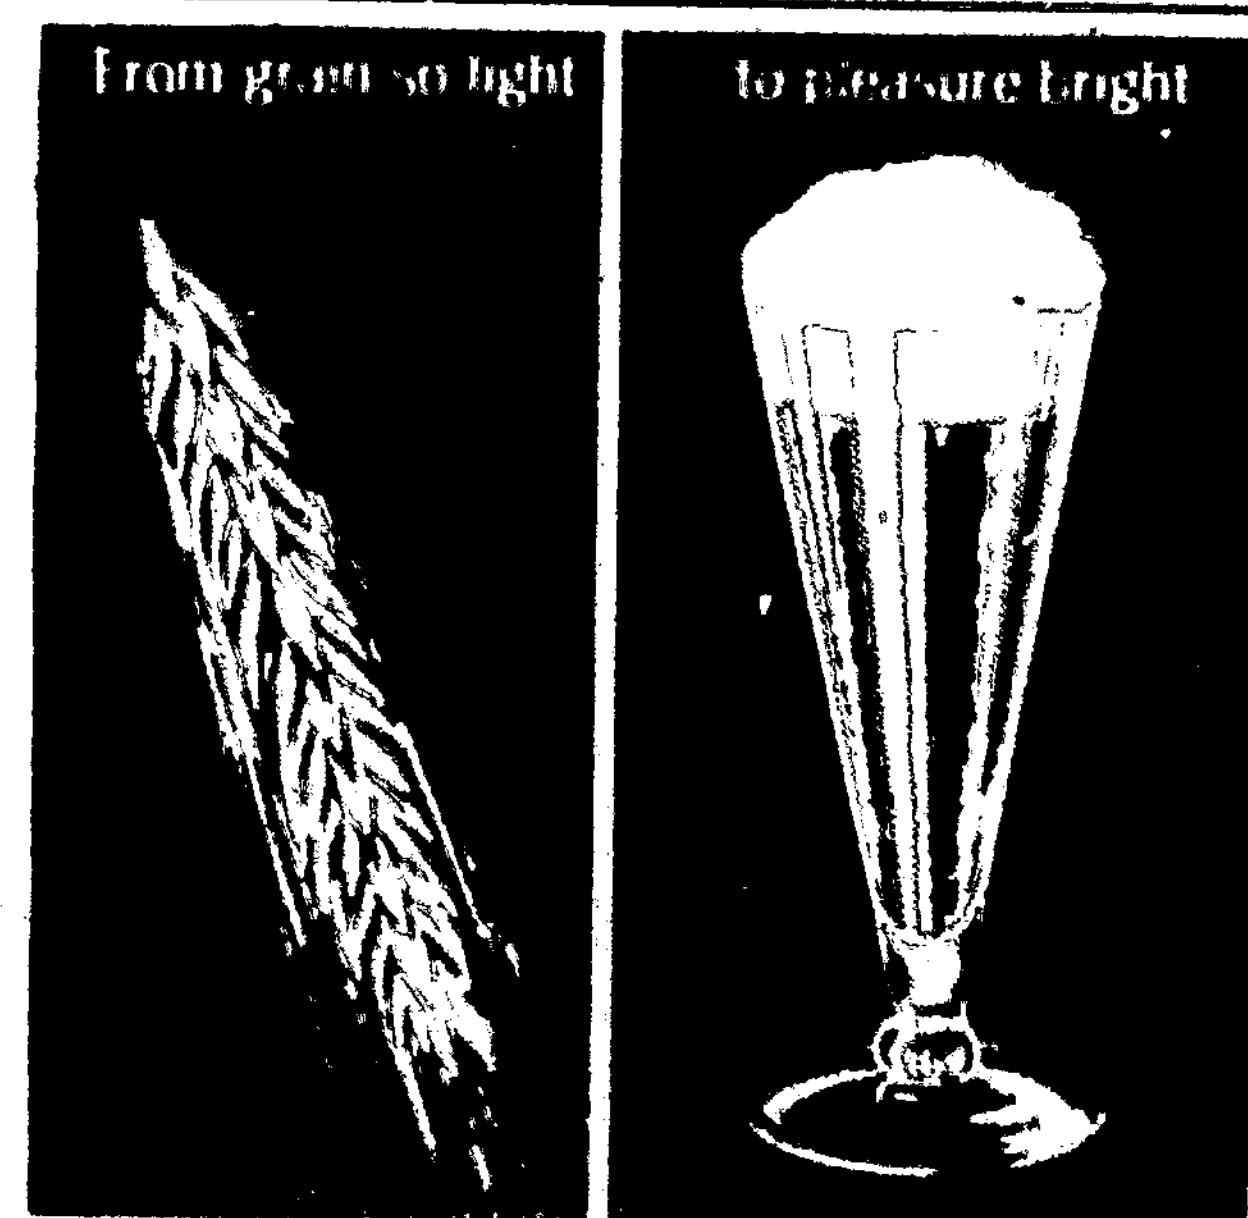

Where better to invest your money than in land, a home, business, ranch, school, church or the improvement of any of these items — in The Land of Enchantment, where you live. Value received for money spent, is greatest here at home. The price may seem high, but the value is greatest.

Industrial development is being talked in the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce, and around town. Such an accomplishment as industrial development does not happen fast, but occasionally does happen. We believe the Chamber of Commerce should take some interest in the following fact, which came from a reliable source.

In a survey of 147 Chambers of Commerce representing 100,000 commercial organizations, 42.2% said that community cultural activities were very influential in keeping old, and attracting new, industries. Why? Because key personnel on every

A good definition of "intrinsic" follows: "Belonging to the construction, nature, or essence of a thing; essential; inherent."

Carrizozo could easily have four or more of the runningest girls in the state. Folks watching the triangular girl's track meet at Capitan were in no doubt about who the swiftest were. Margaret Withers, Waynette Withers, Gayle Peebles, and Rozella Kirkpatrick topped the relay field while Margaret and Waynette ran off with all the dashes they entered.

Lots of fun and excitement at this track meet. Capitan has a top relay team, meet went off in fine shape. We'll have some pictures for printing later, such action photos have to be edited and such processing takes longer in our shop.

This story sounds like Nugent was involved — Three ministers went fishing, a Methodist and a Presbyterian taking their Baptist neighbor to cast in their favorite waters.

After fishing a while with indifferent luck, the Methodist said, "I think I'll go ashore and stretch my legs." He stepped from the boat and walked to land, apparently on the water. When he came back, the Presbyterian did the same, he too apparently walking on the water.

The Baptist minister said to himself: "If they can do it, I can. After all, I know more about water than they do."

ring of the ladder possessed a high level of education and did not wish to live or raise families in culturally underdeveloped areas.

There are two sources of cultural development in the small town, (other than extensive native culture); people moving in from other areas — and the local school. We have stated before and will say it again, one or several cultural fields in our local school are sadly neglected. What little music is being taught is good, but the teaching staff is short and so is the time allowed. This is educational neglect of the worst order, and one that would influence any industrial development should the Chamber of Commerce get to the point of inviting outsiders to look over our community.

The Chamber of Commerce has influence — here is a good place to use some . . . for a better community.

As his brethren revived him) the Methodist said: "Mac, we should be ashamed. We should have showed him where the rocks are."

We have recommended three singers, Helen Lock, Joyce McCollum, and Virginia Curtles to Rev. Noel Moore, pastor of First Baptist Church. These three girls are good, all practiced up and ready to go on tour.

Seems like a lot of boys (especially in Carrizozo) think it okay to sing or participate in music activities. We think they are the ones who lack the guts to take advantage of opportunities presented in this life. We did some catch-as-catch-can barbershop singing with Jimmy King, Missouri publisher, one time and listened to him tell about singing with Dizzy Dean — only one of thousands of top athletes who find singing a wonderful relaxation.

STICKS AND STONES NOT BREAKING JACK

SANTA FE — After three and a half months Gov. Jack Campbell still seems to have three critics for every one that approves his administration.

Serious trouble in big Albuquerque, significant trouble from little politicians all over because they can't catch the payroll, and a general overturn of displeasure with the new governor's checking income tax proposal and subsequent retreat to the sales tax which he had sold over and over would not go through, would seem to have the politician in an awful jam, but that isn't true.

NOBODY FAUNCHING TO TAKE HIM ON

Campbell is almost as safe for a second term as if he were a popular governor because there isn't any big, strong popular Demo faunching to run against him in next year's convention and primary.

As this was written there had not been a single name brought forward as a prospective challenge for the Demo nomination for governor.

The state party nominating conventions created by the recent legislature will go a long way toward discouraging any hopefuls who might develop ideas between now and next February when the conventions meet.

THREE IN CHARGE OF CONVENTION

Campbell and Sen. Clint Anderson and U. S. Rep Joe Montoya are sure to be in charge of the Demo convention and aren't likely to let anything dangerous come out of the meeting.

That seems to take care of the governor's safety within his own party, and so far at least there isn't much of a threat from the Republicans.

Former Gov. (for a month) Tom Bolack could give Campbell an interesting campaign but he has said so many times that he won't run that if he did sign up for the race he would look as bad as Campbell signing the sales tax law.

Dr. Jack Redman of Albuquerque, who made a lot of friends running against Joe Montoya last year, might develop into a popular candidate for governor if he decides that is the office he wants.

GOVERNOR'S RACE IN THIRD PLACE

The fact is the governor's race next year stands to be a third rate affair far behind the interest in the presidential campaign and the Joe Montoya vs Ed Mechem battle for the U. S. Senate.

Most all the major Demo politicians have conceded the Senate nomination to Montoya, and the ambitious ones are centering their interest on Montoya's House seat.

LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS — THURSDAY, APRIL 25, 1943

The scrape for that place on the ballot is almost certain to dominate the Demo convention and primary election.

If there is a favorite for the Montoya place on the ticket at this date ten months in front of the convention it would seem to be Land Commissioner Johnny Walker. There are a dozen others who want it.

JOHN SUDDERTH GROWS STRONG

State Highway Chairman John Sudderth of Roswell and Hobbs has some of the party regulars worried about the land commissioner nomination.

Walker and many others in the party want Guyton (Shepherd) Hays, chief field man in the land office, for the job but the widely known Sudderth is building up as a formidable contender.

In addition to the sway he has as head man in the huge roads operation and his presence at ribbon-cutting ceremonies all over the state where ever new roads are completed, he also has the backing of many Democrats from the John Burroughs' administration.

Guy Shepard of Farmington, land commissioner 1940-52, is another strong one who may run for the job.

FREE RIDES LOOM FOR TOP FIGURES

The new convention system is quite likely to give Joe Montoya the Senate nomination, U. S. Rep. Tom Morris renomination, and Gov. Campbell renomination without opponents in the primary election.

Any candidate who can get more than 80 per cent of the convention vote on the first ballot gets a free ride in the primary election giving the voters no choice for the office.

MORE THAN ONE FOR JOE'S JOB

It would be extremely hard, however, even in a closely controlled convention, to hold the fight for Joe Montoya's place in House to one nominee from the convention.

The new law requires balloting in the convention until one candidate receives a majority of the convention vote for each office.

In the course of the balloting any candidate who got as much as 20 per cent on any roll call qualifies to have his name on the primary ballot.

LAW ENACTED FOR MONTAYA

The new convention law was pushed through for the benefit of Joe Montoya in getting the Senate nomination without a damaging primary battle, but also stand to benefit Governor Campbell and other office holders who will be going for a second term.

THE LONG and SHORT OF IT IS . . .

By Kit Carson 865 Ortiz NE Albuquerque

The Lowly Burro The lowly burro was a God-send for prospectors and trappers of the early days of the Old West.

He was a cantankerous sort of handy animal that everybody, whether they used him directly or indirectly, liked if for no other reason than to have something around to fuss. Even when we see one today, we think of the miner's pick and shovel, a few frijoles, side meat, an old coffee pot lashed on his back with a scanty bedroll, along with other things that make the unique creature complete in appearance. And of course, too, we remember him as Joseph's mainstay.

They have a devious way of eluding and aggravating the master, and causing him all sorts of anxiety and worry, some have been known in an apologetic sort of manner for certain acts of their cussedness, to lead their masters to lodes of gold and silver, and some of the greatest strikes of minerals in the country.

Three years back, one of the cussed things almost caused me to die of heart failure. We—my mining partner and I—had packed deep into the State of Coahuila, Mexico, having gone as far as possible in a pickup, hauling this burro in the back as a future pack animal. When travel for the vehicle became impossible, we chuffed out the ornery mule, not much bigger than the fist, which we had hustled up in the late hours of a night in Villa Acuna, Mexico, from the rear of the pickup and lit out across the desert.

We traveled the rest of the day, and camped that night in an arroyo, where a little water was available. The ornery burro was turned foot-loose. My partner said he would not stray. But I had my own ideas, since we were so very far from any point of civilization, or even a remote settlement—not even a ranch house. And it was about all the little old mule could do to wiggle with the bare necessities to sustain us until we could once again reach a source of subsistence. And I could just see him bolting camp on us.

All night I slept with one eye open—first one then another—and listened and wondered if our pack animal would be at camp when we rolled out the next morning. I slept near the fire, in my bed roll, where a pot of frijoles simmered all night in an old bean pot set in the edge of the coals. The desert air becomes very cold during the later hours of the darkness, especially when you have been cooked to within an inch of your life by a scorching hot sun the day before.

And a pot of beans after such a night's spree of jackass worrying has the darndest best flavor for breakfast there is. They are a delicacy anyway that can't be equalled when allowed to simmer and boil slowly in an old earthen pot around the camp fire, with several chunks of side meat floating around and cooking and becoming all the time during the boiling process, a part of the frijole itself.

Early next morning, I unrolled with eagerness, and almost afraid to look around for the cantankerous mule. I went about my break-of-dawn camp chores and making preparations to tramp farther into the scorching hot desert of Coahuila—a place that has the appearance of being good for nothing except another location for hell in case the devil cared for a more desirable site.

I looked for the mule, high and low, I could not see a single sign of the old cuss. I rued the day we had taken the time to search out Villa Acuna for one of the things, and began mentally making calculations as to how we could handle our supplies, without a pack animal. We had one old Mexican who served as camp cook, and I knew he could not pack all of the stuff we had along. And I knew I did well to trudge along with myself in such a terrain and did! They converged upon the main street where the conference was in full swing, and commenced to bray. And those critters can certainly echo the hills with their gruff, unparalleled voice of which there is no equal in the world. Pat cussed, Dave said, and cussed some more. A few tried to disperse the band of aggravating mules. But the jackasses would not retreat to their range.

Garrett finally gave up the rally and everybody went home, until the mules decided they were ready for such a gathering to be held in White Oaks!

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT IS . . . If you wish to be antagonized and helped all in one parcel of flesh, just hitch up with the lowly burro!

It's not enough to love flowers — you have to hate weeds.

FARM BUREAU STRIKES SPARK

The New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau resolution blasting the repeal of the primary election nominating system could set off action in other big organizations that might force the legislature next winter to reconsider its action.

The New Mexico Oil and Gas Assn. last fall started such a fire burning against the proposed state income tax increase that resulted in the scuttling of the scheme a few months later.

Gov. Jack Campbell has already announced that he would call the legislature for a special session in January or February which would be just in front of the party nominating conventions set up by the 1963 legislature.

DEMOCRAT NOMINEES MOST ALWAYS WIN

The return to the convention system of picking party candidates is extremely serious because New Mexico is 97.2 per cent a one-party state by the record of the past 33 years with only a few exceptions.

The last time the convention system was used in New Mexico, 1954, the Demo convention designated only one candidate for each of two U. S. House places, U. S. senator, governor, land commissioner, attorney general and two supreme court places, giving the zero no other choice in the subsequent co-called primary election for those nominations.

As usual they were all elected after being picked by the four or five people in charge of the convention.
