the Federal land under lease for many years, will give up all grazing and mineral rights on the 462.5 acres. He gets nothing in return in the way of cash-

The State Park Commission will make application for the purchase of this tract under the Federal Recreational and Public Purposes Act (as amended) The Federal government will survey the land and check to see if the tract has recreational potential.

Presuming that the land is declared fit for recreational purposes, that these purposes outweigh other use of the land, the Federal government then will so classify the land and it can be sold to the State of New Mexico for $2.50 per acre. The State Legislature, largely through the efforts of Rep. W. G. Shrecengost, appropriated $1,600 for land purchase during the last session.

The land is located three miles west of Carrizozo on Highway 380. It fronts the highway and surrounds a natural island in the Mal Pais, The Lincoln County Commissioners have agreed to build approximately a half-mile of road to the new park.

This park is a result of many efforts on the part of the Carrizozo Woman's Club. In May of 1955, when Clara Snow was club president, the project of getting a rest stop in the Mal Pais was first brought up, and later established.

Attending the Monday meeting were Floyd Cross, State Park Director, Jim Dillard of the Park Commission;; Ruth Armstrong, Woman's Club President; Clara Snow, Rep W. G. Shrecengost, Fred English, W. C. Withers, and Paul Payton,

INSIDE THE CAPITOL - By Will Harrison

State Republicans bank Barry Goldwater

SANTA TE - New Mexico Republicans have pinned their mainstay of the Republican nopes on Goldwater and are looking to the usually Democratic areas of southern and eastern New Mexico for the support they need to win.

The new group that siezed control of the party at last week's state convention in Albuquerque went so far out for Sen. Barry Goldwater for president that the state group would be an extremely awkward possition if the presidentdal nomination should go to another at San Francisco.

NEW LEADERS ARE STRANGERS

All the state's 14 delegates and 14 alternates were designated only after their assurances of supporting Goldwater, and groups backing Rockefeller, Lodge and Scrapton were denied any representation in a harsh show of power by the controlling group, Even old, established party leaders such as Ed Springer of Cimmarron, Paul Robinson of Albuquerque, former State Chairman Harry Robinson of Albuquerque, State Vice Chairman Willie Ortiz, State Chairwoman Allene Thompson of Albuquerque, were crushed in attempt to get on the delegation.

The convention vote was approximately four to one for the Goldwater slate over all the others.

CONSERVATIVE EASTSIDERS

The new group that took charge of the Republican convention is composed largely of young eastside conservatives.

The top figure is Anderson Carter of Lovington, a former Democratic legislator, A lieutenant is Lewis Cox of Roswell, another former Democratic legislator.

Many of the leading figures in the new organization were unknown to old line Republicans at the convention.

GOLDWATER GROUP

IS STRONG HERE While hardly anybody gives Goldwater much chance of winning the national election it oppears that he would probably run better in New Mexico than Scranton, Rockeleller, Nixon or

The highly efficient Goldwater organization that appeared at the state convention and controlled 80 per cent of the attendance is far more advanced than anything that could be built up for another candidate at this date.

ORGANIZERS PASS SPANISH GROUP

Lodge.

The new Republican controlling group has apparently made no effort to bring in the Spanish-American element, once the party, but is concentrating its efforts in areas of light Spanics-speaking population,

Their efforts will obviously be for Goldwater first, then for Sen. Ed Mechem and what's left for the rest of the state

DEMOCRATIC LEADER AIDS REFERENDUM

Albuquerque Demo Chairman Henry Kiker has joined the late rush to repeal the preprimary convention law at the November election,

Efforts to kill the law by referendum had been carried mostly by Republicans until

Kiker brought in his people, The constitution requires 10 per cent of the voters in each of 24 counties and a total number equal to 10 per cent of all who voted in the last general election, about 28,000. They must be filed by July 3.

ANOTHER TASK ELECTION DAY Even if the referendum pushers are able to get the names needed, a tremendous job for the time available, there will still be much to be done.

It's obvious that most of the people are against the convention system but getting them to vote is another thing.

The law requires that the law may be repealed by referendum only if 40 per cent of all those participating in the election vote on the subject.

In 1950 the people voted 54,000 to 14,000 for repeal of the same kind of law but it wasn't repealed because the number voting was short of the 40 per cent requirement.

MORE HEADACHES ON APPORTIONMENT

The U. S. Supreme Court ruling indicating that all state icgislatures must have members apportioned to population in both chambers will probably hit New Mexico in both the house and senate.

The special session of the legislature last November for reapportionment of the house on a population basis and the subsequent court adjustment did not get the job done.

There are presently eleven counties that are far short of the population required for the one house member that each was given in the final adjust-

They are Catron, Guadalupe, DeBaca, Harding, Hidalgo, Lincoln, Luna, Mora, Sierra, Torrance and Union.

Giving Albuquerque a quarter of the state schate as well as the house would just about place the city in control if the members vote together.

productive it has been the subject of some interesting comments by Premier Khrushchev of Russia, who seemingly did pick up some rather useful information during his tour of American farming areas, says Ralph Dunlap, County Agent.

Premier Khrushchev didn't quite get all the details or the terminology right, but he got the general idea. Here is what he said, according to the March 7 issue of the official Russian newspaper, Pravda;

I will reveal a secret: When the Central Committee effected the reorganization of the management of agruculture, we borrowed something from the practice of serving the farmers in the United States of America. I have in mind the scientific service, the introduction of scientific achievements. What is valuable in the American practice of organizing scientific service for the farmers? Concreteness, a businesslike attitude.

In the United States of America a farmer's service exists under the universities and colleges. When I visited the U.S.A. I became acquainted with the work of the institutes, in particular the organization of the work of the service for farmers. How does this service work? It has inspectors, or agents, as the Americans often call them. The agents meet with the farmers and persuade them to introduce this or that method, help them in the organization of production and furnish them with plans and recommendations. Let us suppose a farmer wants to organize the production of broiler chickens. He turns to the institute, he is given outlines, documents and advice, and a specialist is sent to this farmer to help him organize broiler production.

The farmer pays for the scientific service. This payment is in the form of a tax levied in the State budget. The farmers' funds are used to pay for the specialists who serve farm production.

As I was told, the inspector (agent) receives part of his wages from the Federal budget and part from the local budget, that is, from the payments made by the farmer. Thus he has an interest in having the farmer apply innovations, receive higher profits and deduct more for the needs of the scientific service, that is, for the payment of the Inspector and other specialists. If the farmer does not receive concrete help from the agent, he no longer turns to him and the agent has to guit the service. End quote.

"Old Mac Says" Gridley, Calif. Right Fur Piece From Give A Dam Canyon June 8, 1964

Editor Lincoln County News Carrizozo, N. M.

Dear Ed:

Well we are lucky to be here after fighting the traffic on Highway 66 and these California drivers.

We drove through snow for many miles yesterday, June 7 over the high passes in Nevada. Boy is that Highway 66 a bloody run. Old Powder and Darrell would be busy on that stretch of road. Drove all day yesterday thinking of the many fatalities that are on our high ways. The following is the result of that brain storm.

Of all the grim records of violence and death down through mankind's long history, perhaps the strangest and the most tragic is the story of the automobile and its annual army of victims.

Since the first horseless carriage chugged noisily down cobblestoned streets, more than 60,000,000 Americans killed and crippled and mained, have inscribed their names on what has been aptly referred to as the "Dishonor Roll."

The roll call of highway fatalities is no secret document hidden from the public gaze. In newspapers and bulletins, legal and police records, in court rooms and Judges chambers, the names on the dishonor roll and their innocent victims are made known to all. And not the names alone, but the catalogue of their deeds, driving while drunk or drinking, speeding, reckless driving, also violating the rules of the road, failure to dim lights, driving on the wrong side of the road, and so meny other causes of death on the highways. Also there are just a few of the offence. hi an endless roll cell the names are reed, and the judgements are given, then, all too often the dishonored heedlessly proceed to emblazen their names again on the abuneful record. Perhaps no significant improvement can be made until the great majority of us learn to look upon the problem as a personal challenge tether their one which is primerly up to

The advertising department of the Lincoln County News hopes you appreciate the pretty pictures in this space — they carry a message for us.

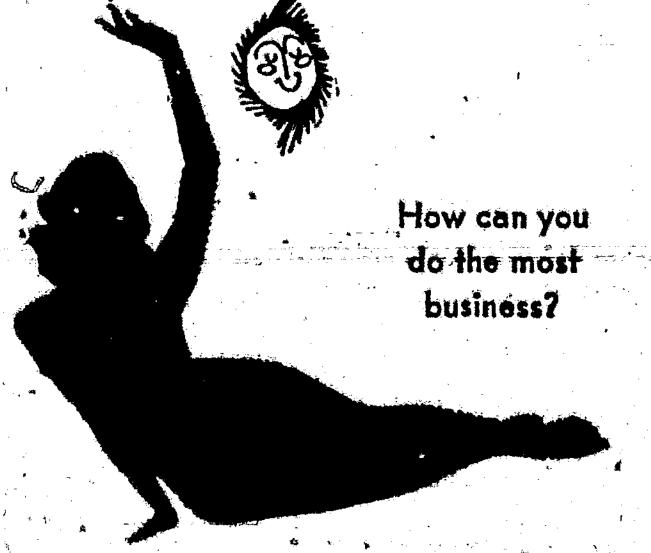

The message is simply this — we're all spending about as much as we can afford on publicizing our separate business places (and should be taking a full tax deduction for such expense). Whether or not you select the one means of advertising that will generate more business for you and all the town is up to you. It's your money . . . where you spend it is also your problem.

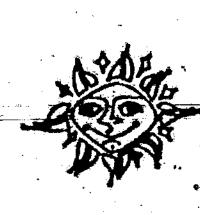

A ghost town has no newspaper. A dead town may have a newspaper but no merchandising appeal. A live town will have a newspaper full of lively advertisments that invite people in each week . . . not just for special occasions . . . to every business place in town.

Again, we're all spending advertising money, plenty to do a good job for the home town. Are you spending yours in the one way sure to reach your customers, sure to help make a live merchandising town. That one way is: The Lincoln County News, read by more people in Lincoln County than all daily newspapers combined.

A cordial welcome awaits you

Pay-off for Clara Snow!

Patience is a virtue, diligence has its reward. Clara Snow is both patient and diligent. Her reward came this week.

Back in May of 1955, when Clara Snow was president of the Carrizozo Woman's Club, the gals decided there should be a park in the Mal Pais. They finagled around and finally there was a roadside park in the black rocks.

This was not enough to suit those energetic Lincoln County females — they wanted a real life-size park and kept talking, working, writing letters, button-holing state officials, prodding men's organizations. They never quit,

Monday at a meeting of state park officials, Ruth Armstrong, present president of the Woman's Club, Clara Snow the 1955 president, Fay Harkey and other interested Carrizozo people — the deal worked out.

Fay Harkey is giving up all of his entitlement, both grazing and mining to the land, the park officials will start immediately going through the red-tape process of bringing the park into being.

Congratulations Clara, and all members of the Woman's

One plank we like!

A trip to Albuquerque last Thursday to set in with a committee of ten formulating a political platform and resolutions was worth the time away from work (electric power off Friday, made us miss the adoption of Thursday's work.)

Anything goes in the formation of political platforms and resolutions and having viewed platforms of past election years we feel that "anything" remains a term not quite loose enough to suit the occasion. Political protection platitudes. phrases that presume to let voters know their candidates are concerned with the issue and ready to jump either way, have been a strong point. Plank No: 5 in the Republican platform is one we recommend to that other party also. It reads: "Creation of Department of Commerce and Conservation for the state, with division of tourist, industrial development, planning office, parks service, state forest service and publications, to be directed by a bipartisan board appointed by the governor."

This June II trip to Albuquerque was the first time we have been slowed down from a steady 65 MPH between Carrizozo and Corona. The road was loaded with tourists, travelers and trucks. From Moriarity to the four-lane leading to Albuquerquo the pace is about 30 M PH because of the constant stream of traffic. Tourism is not the bread and butter of a weekly newspaper but it means a great deal to the state, more each year, and our best efforts should be devoted toward tourism planning.

Almost without fall, every town in the state seeks development of some sort, industrial or other. Those towns that have a payroll want more, towns without a payroll want some. This avenue of state expenditure requires long-range and level-headed planning.

All features of this plank tie themselves together or are closely related — planning office, parks service, state forest service, publications (N. M. magazine) so that one commission could guide their work-

The most important element of such a department was thought to be part of implementation (legislative), talked about but not written in This feature is over-lapping terms in office for the commission and long enough terms so some of the planning may become completion before commission member are reappointed by the governor.

The biggest drawback to present department of development operations is lack of carrythrough on plans of several administrations. There are other drawbacks, in fact a long string. of them which are costly to the

You can look around your home town and see results of "lack of planning", the same lack is hurting the state in more ways than just tourism. With an honest commission and their terms in office spread out - New Mexico could profit greatly from a Department of Commerce and Conservation.

A worthwhile chore!

Chores are chores and making a float for any occasion is one short on ideas, time, monyoungsters are scattered, everyone chort on ideas, time, money . . . the excuses and allbis are many when it comes to getting up a parade entry.

The Lincoln County Rural Development stewed around for 30 minutes and finally out came an idea, then help started coming and it looks very much like the Smokey Bear Parade at Capitan on July 4 will have another parado entry.

This can be said - more people gather in Capitan on July 4 than any other place in the county on any occasion. It's a fine place to show off Lincoln County, organizations, resources, business, or just-forthe-helluvit.

Give it some thought, You might come up with an idea that would make a hit at the county's biggest parade . . . this July 4 in Capitan.

After viewing the polo match at San Patriclo would readily agree that the horse and rider together make a team. Other than that, polo is a lot like the shinny game-we use to play on ice. Seemed to us that Lincoln County's two polo players, Pete Hurd and Tom Barbars, were as good as any on the field. San Patriclo defeated El Paso last week, El Paso was hot (so was the weather) Sunday and took San Patricio 3-2. Such a remarkable contrast took place in Carrizozo Sunday, its more than worth comment. One, two, three blocks from the Methodist Church you can see some of the most decripit. rundown properties found anywhere in the state — inside the church Sunday was as beautiful a setting as could be

THE LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS, THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1964

By Arnold Boyce

We moved into the last days of school with a hurry-hurry to complete chorus reliearsal for Baccalaureate and graduation programs and at the same time have the sixth grades instrumentalists practice with the marching band to introduce them to the work they will be doing during next session, inventories of music, books, equipment, uniforms, horns, all of which must be inspected as to the serial number, condition, credited as turned in by the correct student, the condition of the item, copies of the inventory must be made for our file and for the principal's office, all items must be packaged away in storage.

Once this is completed all items must be inspected again, repaired, replaced or made ready for re-issue on August 3 when the summer band program, begins at our new band room, of course the entire stock must be moved to the new building first.

The band has about three weeks to prepare the half time shows that will be presented at the football games in September, and it promises to be a good year coming up in 1964-65, with a snappy band presenting some fine shows.

We must concern ourselves with other end-of-the-school year thoughts. Which is proper and desirable. At the same

THE LONG AND SHORT - By Kit Carson

Along the Persian Gulf &

Abnain Saudi Arabia -- Readers might be concerned with my occasion to the Middle East, other than, of course, the writing possibilities.

By assignment I am a technical representative to Saudi Arabia petrochemical construction contractors. Such assignments constitute a program which has been under way for some time to prepare the Arabians for future jobs in the great Middle East oilfields.

The work takes me to many interesting places, and it affords numerous eye-witness accounts of a strange people who are undergoing a drastic change in the way of life, for instance, conversion from the camel caravan to the gigantic oilfield truck and heavy equipment methods.

These strange individuals, three decades ago, lived almost altogether by Medieval Age customs. The Kingdom's religion too, is strange, but no noticable efforts are being made to change it!

However, technicians today are making rapid progress in teaching these Middle East people to work large industry, the American way, The Arabs are intelligent, and quick to learn-

My work, from most every angle, is quite fascinating! And if you follow this column, you'll find this statement is really

My first travel along the west coast of the Persian Gulf proved very shocking, despite the fact that for several days I had undergone a softening-up process. Only a fairly good bituminous-topped American designed road existed, to make vehicle transportation possible, which is one of the most recent transformations from the centuries-old camel caravan. The road surface indicated that it had been hurriedly thrown together, and lacked the usual rigid construction practices.

On the other hand condemnation was not in line, for a glance at the desert volds algnified that nothing thort of the famous American guts and stiff backbone had built this road in such an ugly land.

The right of-way was flanked as far as the eye could see, with miles of wicked looking dunes, sands of which certainly sbould have been worn out centuries ago, from an endicss shifting.

There were no tourists in this land — not by a helluva lot! Such a visa presently is not avallable. There were no sightseers, or people just motoring around, no vacationists were out testing their strength by exploring the strange dangerous regions. There were no boat enthusiasts driving around with colorful, enticing equipment, even though waters of the Gulf was not far away.

There were no speed zone signs; no designated highway symbols: and no JP courts, to assess fines for speeding; etc.; and a complete lack of everything that an American is accustomed to seeing along a highway. Instead it was endless desert country, inhabited by strange individuals, It is the most vicious stretch in the whole wide world. The biggest desert of the Arabian Deninkula commences not far from the Gulf, and parts of it have never been explored by man. It is the Rub al-Khali—750 miles long and 400 miles wide, and covers an area almost the size of Texas. Sand mountains of complex shape and arrangement attain heights of 500 to 1000 feet, and quite frequently change location.

Abgaig lies in the northern edge of this desert, and the American-made oilfield industrial center is sometimes regretfully acquainted with the desert's dangers.

iopia, is Tanganyika, and Ordivia Gorge, where the persistent Dr. Leakey, the archaeologist, and his wife. Mary, have been active in excavating prehistoric human remains and artifacts for the past three decades. Many of their finds are hundreds of thousands of years old. The most recent discovery being a highly prized speciman, tests show, almost two millida_ years old;

I was traveling in an Arabian taxi, driven by a national, who could not or else would not, explain anything about the vicious looking land through which we traveled.

Strange sights were along the route, some of which a person only expects to know by movie or imaginary drawings. One distinguishable was that of three nomads, clothed in the usual robes and turbans, crouched in a half-kneeling and a half-sitting position, in one great big tangled mess of Arabs and their robes, whipped around by the driving sands,

It was difficult to reckon just how long the creatures had been in such a position, or how long they would remain that way. No doubt until the blowing sands ceased, which might be today, tonight, tomorrow, or many hours later. And then, as the Arab says, the wind might immediately commence from another direction.

Prayer is ordinarily a private affair, but is often conducted in groups, wherever Moslems happen to be at the appointed hour. In the larger centers, on Friday a congregational prayer is conducted in the Mosques, and all men are expected to be present. Women make themselves scarce as far as public life and physical display is concerned! I saw what was described as Arabian women with the Bedouin camelherders. They were tee-totally covered, from one end to the other, in black robes, with only two holes for the eyes to peck through.

is much the same as the American congregations, except there is no designated leader. The third pillar is "zakah".

The Friday Mosque gathering

This is a free translation to mean obligatory alms, which is a religious tax paid to the government for charitable work, as well as personal and voluntary alms to the needy. Islam recognizes that a difference exists in the wealth of men, and requires the rich to devote a share of their substance to the welfare of the poor. An observation of the descri settlements of the Bedouins, which I have had several occasions to see indicates this a most worthy decreel

The fourth and fifth pillars are "fasting" and "pilgrimage". Both are interesting and strange to the New World, I'm sure. They will be treated seperately. due to wordage.

Friday rather than Sunday is the weekly day of rest in Saudi Arabia, Thursday and Friday correspond to Saturday and Sunday in the United States. Visiting protestants abide by this Kingdoms practice, and conduct services accordingly. I attend church on Friday morning; whereas in the States, it would be Sunday morning.

Since being in the Kingdom, I have had an occasion to wit-, ness a mid-afternoon Moslem prayer session. The Arabs quit work, and formed a close group, They faced Mecca. They prayed for several minutes, making many strange gesticulations, There was no noticeable leader. After prayer they moved to a nearby water fountain, removed sandals, and washed their Americans have been staunchly advised to never interrupt one of these prayer sessions.

Practically all laws of the Kingdom are based on the Koran, and an Arab certainly stands by his people, even though within they are clanish and are constantly feuding. Should one of the nationals happen to run over an American with an auto, causing injury or death, no charge is pledged against the Arab, even though it was his fault. The foreigner shouldn't have been in the path, :-The Koran prohibits the striking of one another, and the penalty is much more severe than the usual American fine. It can mean rotting in a nasty jail, especially if the culprit is an alien, hoping that King Saud will happen along at Christmas time and grant a reprieve, which, it is told, he sometimes does! This is a bit nasty for a close. Nevertheless it is THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT . . . An eye witness account, An old Arab crawled down from a piece of heavy equipment, and went to the adjacent desert sands, to use the bathroom.

He dropped to a squatting position, resting the knees and toes firmly into the loose sand, with legs spread apart. With the right hand, he removed the urinal organ from the pants, and

When completed, with the left hand he reached out and gathered up a handful of the hot desert sand, the temparature was well over 115 degrees, and dabbed it on the penus, and smeared it around. After a moment he arose, returned to his equipment, and to his work. Since, I have stumbled into several such acts, all when a modern, clean bathroom was nearby. Just what part the hot sand played in the operation, I have not learned — no one seems to know! Although it is a common practice, probably older than the Korani

In the larger centers, where desert sand is not always available, the bathrooms are equipped with a special designed urinal, for the Arab who must squat to wet. The fixture is set level with the finished floor. and has two grooved foot rests, to prevent slipping!

So the Arab just squats to wet, and that's all there is to it. We Americans are not so strange. At least not the males. Not yet!

Test your personal economic literacy!

The greatest problem in the world today, aside from the danger, of world-wide nuclear incineration; is the confusion of people regarding the policies that are really good for them.

The tragedy of this confusion is that the development of economic literacy on the part of all the people is not a difficult process; the natural laws and principles which govern our material welfare are very simple when stripped of the technical multiplemeaning words in which they are usually described,

Below you will find 15 questions on which you can test your eprsonal economic literacy. Check your answers against the correct ones at the bottom.

1. Do you believe that any government can give anything to the people without first taking it away from them?

2. Do you think that Federal taxes, sent to Washington to be spent as Rederal aid, are used as wisely or efficiently as they would be if the money had never left home?

3. Would you say that the upper brackets of the personal income tax is an important source of revenue that substantially relieves the small taxpayer?

4. Do you believe that deficit spending (additions to the money supply) to avoid the raising of taxes really saves the people money?

5, Do you believe that doubling everybody's income tomorrow morning would increase real purchasing power? '

6. Do you believe that any successful business can pay anything to its employees and stockholders that it does not receive from its customers?

7. Do you believe that any business (other than government enterprises) that does not offer its customers competitive values can long survive?

8. Do you believe that any business can really avoid passing on to its customers the cost of its taxes?

9. Do you believe that strikes for higher wages (without higher productivity) are really against corporations, rather than against the customers who buy the products ?

10. Do you believe that business profit is a cost that could be removed from selling prices?

11. Do you believe that profits are unimportant to job security and better working conditions?

12. Do you believe that economic action by the Federal Government can repeal the law of supply and demand?

13. Do you believe that any nation, as a whole, can apply any more industry, integrity, thrift, and moral responsibility, than is present in its individual citizens?

14. Do you believe that any free nation can long endure without a high degree of industry, integrity, thrift, and moral responsibility?

15. Do you believe that any nation of people lacking personal integrity, thrift, and moral responsibility can ever expect its political candidates to offer them a truly sound platform?

The American Economic Foundation says: As you read the questions you may have remembered many arguments that would suggest some answers of "yes," "maybe," or "sometimes," but the answer to all of them is "no."
