

Completion of new Lincoln County court house expected by middle of February

Lincoln County Commissioners Charles A. Jones, Kenneth Nosker and Roman Nunez, together with the newly elected commissioners, who take over January 1, Joe McKnight, Robert Shaffer and Max Oliver, met with contractor Bob Ballard and his foreman Gene Hughes and architects Jim Vull and George Buffington Tuesday in an attempt to find out when the new Lincoln County court house would be completed.

Chairman Jones opened the meeting with the statement that he was interested in a good construction job, and get it done as soon as we can, Jones asked for discussion.

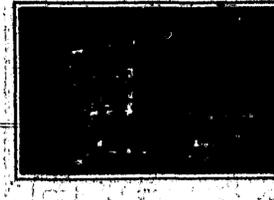

Ballard spoke of several delays, said he needed more time, does not know how much, and would like to have the time limit waived completely. All the materials to do the job are now on the construction site, the firm wants to do a good job.

Buffington said the original deadline was November 23, it's obviously impossible to meet that date. He felt the new building would be done by Christmas, the contractor should concentrate there and not work on the annex. Buffington said he did not think the commissioners wanted to push completion to the point of poor workmanship, and he recommended some kind of extension.

Ballard said the overall project includes tearing down the old building. An Albuquerque wrecking firm has the contract for both the court house and the school. If the people in the annex will move speedily when the time comes it will help. They might have to run temporary heat service to the old building, so the annex can be cut loose for remodeling. We set the time limit, said Ballard, it was too short.

Oliver spoke saying he was not in favor of an unlimited time. Some discussion followed and it was generally agreed that the new building should be complete by December 23, the annex complete by February 10-15. The old court house can be razed with no rush necessary.

Hughes said power was being run to the jail today, also the front offices, and when that was done these sections could be put up for acceptance by the county and the jail put to use.

What most people call the oldest court house in 3rd oldest. The first court house in Lincoln served 1867-1890 until Old Lincoln Co. purchased the old Murphy Store and transformed it to a court house. The Zeze court house was built in 1910.

Sheriff Glen Bradley said he had 10 prisoners in jail now, might have 20 by night. He needed the new jail as soon as possible. Hughes stated the people in the annex offices did not want to move until after the first of the year. There will be three new officials in county offices and they will get to help with the moving.

Federals moving in on state

SANTA FE — First thing on tap for the new Congress is passage of a federal program for medical care for the aged that would knock out the Kerr-Mills federal-state program operated from the state level which has been adopted by forty states and approved by New Mexico but not implemented here.

ment sleazing so much tax money that there is hardly any tax source left for the states to raise money to pay for their own programs.

but now there seems to be an explanation. It is supposed to go to State Rep. Jerry Brasher of Albuquerque, the governor's man in politics and the legislature, who is prohibited from taking any state job until his term expires at the end of December.

Also expected from the new Congress is repeal of Section 14 (B) of the Taft-Hartley Labor Law which would knock out "right to work" laws in twenty states and prohibit New Mexico and other states from enacting such laws.

The huge income tax is the federal levy that always comes to mind, but that's only part of it.

Revenue Commissioner Charlie Brunacini who is surrendering to his ulcers and quitting Dec. 31, has drawn up a difficult assignment for his successor.

This is going forward as the federal courts are forcing all the states to recognize their house and senate chambers with membership on a strict population basis, a chore that threatens to swamp the legislature that meets here in January.

The federal levy nine cents on every package of cigarettes, $10.50 a gallon on liquor, and collect other taxes on commodities and services that are so high that there is no margin left for the state to pick up anything.

Brunacini this week submitted an operating budget for the next business year that is $10,000 less than his spending rate. It must provide the automatic salary increases for the staff of 315 people and meet the cost of upgrading the quality of the staff in several sections which means higher paid people.

WASHINGTON LANDSLIDE

The landslide of state authority to Washington could wipe out the legislature reappointment problem by removing the need for state legislatures or state lines.

The Cardinal

Reported By
Janell Sickles - Michael Dayton

The Senior play "Hessie of the Hills", was a huge success. It was the best turn-out of any class play, in recent years. It was one of the best performances ever performed at Corona High School. During the intermission, Janell Sickles, in behalf of the senior class, presented a candy dish to Mrs. Wanda Riley, director, in appreciation for her help in producing "Hessie of the Hills".

The Cardinals will start their basketball season with 23 players. Their first game will be with Floyd, Nov. 20 on the Cardinal's home court.

Practice has begun in choir, for the Christmas program.

On Armistice Day the Corona choir gave a program in honor of the occasion. The choir sang ten songs. There are 40 members under the direction of Miss Sherril Perkins and Mrs. Jeanne Porterfield.

PTA will meet November 24. At that time parents will be invited to tour the buildings.

Fourth period lunch money is due November 18.

Our first basketball game is November 20 with Floyd at Corona.

One rose from garden of a friend

I would rather have one little rose from the garden of a friend than to have the choicest flowers. When I stand on earth I would have one pleasant word. In kindness said to me than flattery when my heart is still. And life ceased to be. Bring me all your flowers today. Whether pink or white or red I'd rather have one blossom now than a truck load when I'm dead.

I want everyone to know, that fits me. I need your cheery smiles now and encouraging words while I can hear them. Remember to smile.

Hunting season opened Nov. 14. This town looked like a city Thursday. Many locating in near here and others passing through.

The Fort Stanton open house was well attended Sunday. A large crowd enjoyed the sights.

A few highlights of the P. R. Whitley's California vacation which is of interest, are as follows: at Chico they saw the largest oak tree in the world. It would cover 8000 people allowing two square feet to the person. It was 145 feet across. The limbs were so long that they were braced.

Near Santa Cruz they saw a Green Bay Tree which came from Australia in 1788. It was in a corner and the limbs spread 135 feet. The roots made mounds 18 inches above the ground.

Another side trip was to one of the Redwood areas. The trail there was ten feet wide with board walls. There was three or four thousand trees in that group, 200 feet tall. They are from 15 to 50 feet around. This little spot was ten miles from Santa Cruz. Most certainly all of this above is of great interest to us, who have not viewed it.

Patsy Sanchez accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Henry Sanchez and her brother, Tony went to Silver City November 7. Tony was born there. They had not been in that area since leaving ten years ago. They visited friends. Patsy spent the night with a girl friend in Hurley with whom she attended the Beauty school while they were in training. They all visited at Ft. Bayard and at Santa Rita, returning to their home near Lincoln Sunday evening.

Mrs. Anne Peñes received the sad news of the death of her son-in-law in Seattle, Wash. Monday. She left by plane Tuesday. He died of double pneumonia Sunday night. I do extend my most sincere sympathy.

We had several days of the most terrific winds alternating from all directions, cold and very uncomfortable. It missed Sunday night and continued the next day with 44 degree temperature. Skies are gray. Hunters are coming out of the mountains in fear of being stranded in a snow storm, which happened several years ago.

Old Lincoln Town

By Mrs. Edgar Phillips

Alfred Hulbert of Yaleta, Tex., is spending deer season here hunting and visiting with his father, A. L. Hulbert.

Peter Pfingsten was a very proud boy when he bagged his first deer last Saturday. It was a nice one too.

Other successful hunters here were Thomas Lister, James Meneroy and Skip Nethaway.

Bill Shreengost has to go to New Orleans, La., to a meeting. He leaves Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Lee Beall joined the canasta playing grand mothers at Ethel Howards in Capitán Monday. She said they had a lovely lunch and lots of fun playing cards.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Edington and daughters Sally and Billy spent the weekend with Mrs. Edington's brother, Clark Pfingsten and his family. Fred hunted but failed to get a deer.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Welsh of Logan, John, Mary Lynn, Melanie and John Ty Werner, the Joe Phillips, James Waldes of Roswell, the Benny Taylors of Alamogordo, and the Richard Phillips visited together over the weekend with the Edgar Phillips, Johnny and John Ty visited and hunted with Travis Werner on Saturday.

Many interesting plans being made for "Make it yourself with wool"

Many interesting plans are being made for the "MAKE IT YOURSELF WITH WOOL" contest, which will be held November 29th at the Roswell Inn. This year the judging will begin early, then the fashion show and presentation of awards will be at 4:00 p.m. that Sunday.

This plan will enable Lincoln County friends and relatives to return early. The public is invited to the fashion show, no charge. At that time two door prizes will be given away, an all-wool blanket, and a wool rug, made of a dyed sheep pelt in the winners choice of color.

Entries for the contest should be mailed soon. November 20th is the dead line for entries. Entry forms are available at the Fabric Shops or Home Ec. departments or from 4-H leaders. Each girl will receive a gift; she will compete in her age group for prizes. The 10 to 13 year olds are in one group, the 14-17 in group B, the 18-21 in C group and the adults in class D. The two National winners will receive a fabulous trip to Europe! Lincoln County produces more wool than any other county in New Mexico. The District Nine contest includes Lincoln, and Chavez counties! As of now this District has more contestants than any other area. Those interested may write or call Mrs. Paul Pacheco, Tinnie, who is the director for Lincoln County, or your community director; they are: Tinnie, Mrs. George Sistreros; Picocho, Mrs. Joe McKnight; Hondo, Mrs. Hazel Arthurs; San Patricio, Mrs. Tom Babers; Glencoe, Mrs. Ralph Bonnel; Ruidoso, Mrs. F. E. Baird; Nogal, Mrs. Ralph Dunlap; Corona, Mrs. Dimmit Bond; Capitan, Mrs. S. M. Cozzens.

The judges for this contest will be qualified Home Ec teachers and home agents from other counties who do not know any of the contestants.

All Lincoln County contestants are invited to attend the free modeling classes in Roswell at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday, 14, 21, and 28th at 1:00 p.m. There will be someone there to answer questions regarding fashions, accessories, and construction.

Roger Fleming

Fleming will address annual convention

Roger Fleming secretary-treasurer and director of the Washington office of the American Farm Bureau Federation, who will address the organization banquet of the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau's 44th annual convention this month, got his start in Farm Bureau with the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation.

Fleming was born and raised on a livestock farm in Tama County, Iowa, graduated from Iowa State College in 1935 with a degree in agricultural economics and worked briefly for the Cooperative Extension Service after graduation.

From the Extension Service Fleming moved to the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation in 1938 as head of its newly-organized research department. He headed the organization's state legislative activities from 1939 to 1943 when he volunteered for service in the U. S. Navy. He was commissioned an officer in the supply corps and served for two-and-one-half years, including 18 months aboard a destroyer-escort in the Pacific.

While he was still in the service, Fleming was selected for the post of secretary of the IFB F and was given leave of absence until his return to civilian life in May 1946. Two years later he became head of the Washington office of the American Farm Bureau Federation and in December 1949 also became secretary-treasurer of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Just for fun

The pretty homemaker jumped from bed at the sound of her alarm clock, slipped into the minimum undergarments and housecoat. In her usual efficiency, it was no time until she had fed and hustled off the kiddies to school and hubby to his office.

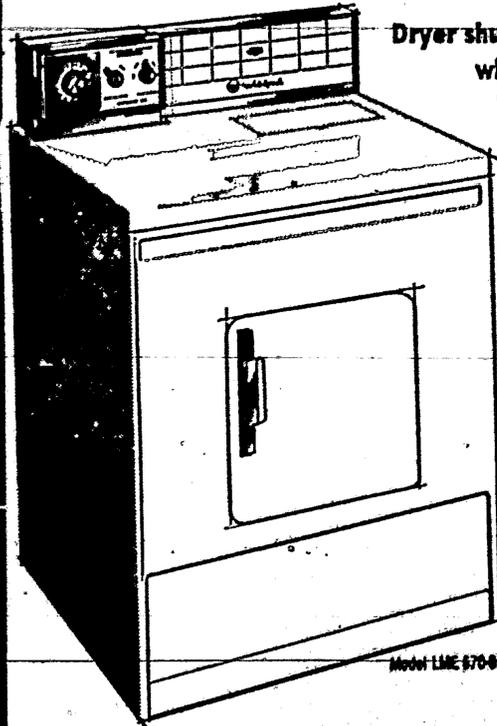

Wasting no time, she gathered the family's soiled items and hurried to her basement laundry room to start a load of washing. Finding the load a bit light and her robe a little soiled, too, she reacted Gypsy Rose Lee fashion and added her housecoat. Alas, she then spied some frightening cobwebs in the corner and grabbed a broom to do them in, but in feminine squeamishness—with ability to improvise she donned her son's football helmet to protect her hair and approached the task.

Just then the inevitable meter man arrived to read the utility meter. He moved quickly about his task and was about to leave as the housewife stood aghast in a broom-swinging pose. Then he stopped for a moment and turned with a smile. "I sure hope your team wins the game, lady!"

"A page for independent thought"

Training period

What does one do to salute the New Year — blow his horn and other stuff. What does one do on Lincoln's birthday — be sure to have your check cashed Tuesday. One should do a little chopping in the yard to properly salute Washington's birthday.

Valentine's day is a time for kissing, start with your wife, then work around the neighborhood, with repeat calls where necessary. Good Friday is a time for prayer, and Easter Sunday a church full, at least enough to scare the preacher out of his pulpit.

What does one do on April 1 — generally get fooled and you should stay in bed. What does one do on Mother's Day — this day is sort of multi-purpose. You can show mother how to operate the new washing machines, iron, or other like gift. On Memorial Day most people get in their car, and do the "500" in all directions at the same time.

What does one do on Father's day — first you roust the old man out of bed, tell him this is his day, he can take the kids to the mountains, picnicking, or anything else he wants to do with them.

On July 4 — people generally shoot fire crackers, but many others go to the barbeque at White Oaks and a few to the races, it's Independence Day, but that was years ago.

People get married in August (June not popular any more), go back to school, and have babies — which pretty well takes care of the month. Labor Day happens early in September and it don't mean a darn thing, you can ignore this day successfully.

What does one do on Columbus Day — we personally favor something on the rocks in memory of that rock the early settlers trod on. Then comes the month of November, with elections, veteran's celebration, lots of football. Fall colors galore and the point of the message.

You can almost do as you like for those other days, but to do justice to the prime day in November one needs to use forethought. Start early, like tomorrow, eat only two meals a day and those light. Give the cook plenty of extra grocery money and keep telling her what a fine culinary artist she is. If your pants are tight, have them let out. If your stomach is in bad shape, take it to the doc purchase some drenching type liquid for a do-it-yourself application.

In short — get your appetite in shape, and be thankful you are alive in this great land on Thanksgiving Day.

Of cabbages, beets, and onions!

We read a lot about the population explosion (3.1 billion people in the world today, and estimated 3.8 billion by 1975) and can see in our own state the tremendous growth in many areas. Lincoln County is scarcely an example of growth and chances are favorable that few middle-aged people now living in the county will see major growth here — but chances are real favorable that some kind of growth will reach this area.

If more water were available now, the entire local picture would look different. Some day more enterprising people will develop water — right here.

While back in the field . . . the number of farms has dropped from 4.9 million to 3.5 million in the past 12 years while total U. S. farm acreage has fallen by some 4%. This does not mean we are raising less food, rather, the opposite is true. A change of methods has changed the production picture.

Union County, N. M. used to have a population of 10,000 people at a time when there were many small farms in the area. Same was true over most of the county. The shift started in the early 40's when agriculture staged a major recovery from drought conditions and farms and ranches started getting bigger — the trend continues.

More notable changes have come along with the consolidation of farm units. Some 350,000 large units, 15% of U. S. farms, today produce 60% of all farm products. This is more food than 6 million American farmers were able to produce 50 years ago. Whereas the average American farmer still earns $3,000.00 a year, the average of these larger farm units is a net of some $17,000 a year. The average net worth of their farms is $200,000.

There is no sour grapes in the advise to small operators: "They better gang up to keep up. The most benefit, the entire program of farming and ranching from both local and government angles, is geared to the biggest payoff for the biggest operators."

believe, Harry Goldwater is one of the few rugged American individualists left in this day of "me-too" or "let-the-government-do-it" people. But now I'll add you to the list, Mr. Payton, because you told the New York Times where to go and you said it with all the spirit, frankness and humor that separates men from mios;

Sincerely,
Miss Leslie Marnon

Dear Sir,
I'm sending $425 for another year's subscription of the Lincoln County News.

Mrs. H. L. Fry, a Kansas friend of many years, sent us a glass of plum jelly which is about gone, also a program of the 4th Piano Festival, 400 pianists at 25 pianos, held in Dodge City, Kansas. Mrs. Fry has taught piano at Spearville, Kas. for a number of years. We can't quite figure out how 25 pianos going at the same time would sound, but it ought to be interesting. Have heard several large groups, in fact conducted one band of over 300 musicians, and the sound of band instruments does not multiply as one might think. Lots of professional singing groups of 24 people can do sounds like a real large (100 or more) choir. Those 400 pianists came from Dodge City, Clarion, Fowler, Kinsey, Meade, Minneola, Mullinville and Spearville. Two conductors put them through their paces.

That original date is close to 110 years ago making the Fort one of the oldest set of buildings in the county that are being maintained in good shape today. son, son of Era Smith, former News publisher who died last week, was in the office visiting last week and the conversation went back to the early days of the News. The surprise we got was in learning that the News was a handset newspaper up until 1945. Can remember our younger brother, Dwight staying out of high school during the 1928 year to operate the Linotype machine for Dad Payton and he had that machine (one of the first to put automation in the newspaper business) several years prior. During the days Mrs. Smith had the News it was an exceptionally well printed paper, with a good news content. We have marveled at that good print, knowing the kind of press equipment they were using, almost as much as knowing about the handset part . . . a mighty slow way to put a newspaper together.

W • W
We estimate that in general the methods used around the News today are about 50 years old, though our machinery is much newer than that. The problem for the small newspapers in trying to keep up with the times, is the cost of scrapping equipment now on our floor and buying new. Our Intertype cost $15,000 only five years ago and we'd take a bad beating in selling that machine. The hunter check station off the road going to Fort Stanton reported 800 hunters registered last Sunday. Our guess is around 20 deer taken for the bunch. Other reports indicate that the season has been slim pickings for the hunters.

Which is safer? Molten metal . . . or can of peas

The average person probably wouldn't hesitate a minute to answer that question. It would seem obvious that a housewife getting ready to prepare dinner is safer than a Kennecott smelter worker near molten copper.

Actual records tell an entirely different story. National Safety Council figures show one in every 43 persons suffers a serious home accident during the year. By contrast one in 133 Kennecott employees has a lost time accident during the year. Kennecott employees are three times safer on the job than the average person is at home!

How is this accomplished? Why are men working with explosives, heavy equipment, acid and molten metal so safe? It's the result of a carefully planned safety program that leaves nothing to chance.

Careful studies to determine possible hazards result in rules and regulations for safe work practices. A broad program of education teaches employees how to achieve safety. And carefully tested personal protective equipment provided to employees by Kennecott helps prevent injuries if the unexpected should happen.

Safety is no accident at Kennecott. It's the result of cooperation by everyone to make every job a safe job.

Dear Sir,
We enjoyed very much the article in your October 29 issue on conservation work at our place southeast of Nogal. It was through a former long-time resident of Lincoln County that we saw the write-up. Tom and I drove down to Cleburne today to visit with Guy and Eula Dabney and Guy gave us his copy of the News.

Having been in the hospital in Fort Worth the greater part of the summer, it really lifted Tom's spirits to see the picture of that beautiful country and read about how much has been accomplished toward his over-all plans through the fine planning and cooperation of the Soil Conservation Service. We hope to spend Christmas up Lincoln County way, as we have for the past several years.

We would like to have 10 copies of the paper with this article. Would like to subscribe to the News if you will advise the yearly rates. Please send copies of the article to our Sweetwater address, as we expect to go home November 7.

Beautiful for calf roping

By Mrs. Rosalia Kirkpatrick

It was a perfect Sunday afternoon for a roping, warm, clear skies, and visibility for miles. Ten ropers had paid their fees and warmed up their horses. The calves, 29 in number, had just been turned out across the arena to go into roping chutes on the other side. But, alas, the gate was open and all 29 headed directly for it. Oh, what a scattering!

THE LONG AND SHORT — By Kit Carson

The camel of Saudi Arabia

Desert nomads use camels as trading stock for 1st . . . and additional wives

Hofuf, Saudi Arabia — The third trip into Hofuf and the great al-Hassa oases to make an acceptable photograph of the 800-year-old stronghold met with more success than anticipated. As luck would have it, this group of Arabs appeared on the scene just as the camera came into motion, with a prized albino camel White is a rare color for the humped beasts. However, should the coat show black hair, it is frowned upon, and condemned.

Behind this old fort are held the famous camel sales. It is also the trading point for the bedouins when they come into town from the surrounding deserts. It was in this section that I came into possession of my prized saddle which found an air passage to America.

For the past five months, I have been deep in the Uthmaniyah area, south of Hofuf, in the rugged Rub al-Khali, and have rubbed shoulders with the bedouins most every day of that time, and watched his camel herds. The vigil was so lonely and in such an isolated section that I came to look forward to their passage from the north to the south, and practically learned them by a certain appearance and the number of camels in the herds. Much information about the camel was gathered during these observations and range visitations.

It is conservative to say that the camel to the desert nomad ranks next to the Islam religion in importance. The beast even means life to him in many instances, and it is therefore not a surprising fact that a bedouin's wealth is determined by the number of camels in his herd. And it is also to be remembered that he uses them as legal tender to purchase the first and additional members of his harem.

The Saudi Arabian camel is of the one-humped variety, called the dromedary, since the word dromedary might be more colorful, even mysterious, if not romantic. The two-humped beasts are found largely in the Far East and are of a more ill-tempered lot. The huge soft feet of the still popular ancient beast makes it possible to travel over the deep sands of the desert, with as much as 200 pounds strapped on each side, at a speed of two miles per hour, covering a distance of about 20 miles during a day's run. It is not necessary for the nomad to cease travel for the animals to graze, as they can nibble on the sparse desert vegetation without halting, swinging the long neck from first one side of the trail to the other.

Dromedaries bear travel as many as five days without water, however, if it is available, they usually drink about every three days. This characteristic makes it possible for the camel caravan to make long desert crossings without water. Should the period between water holes be longer than five days, the bedouin is acquainted with a method which is called "smuffing." He drains a little water from the goatkin bags strapped on the pack camels, and injects a small amount into the camel's nose. This painful process cools the beast's head, and usually saves its life until a water hole is reached.

Next to transportation for the Arab, the camel's milk supply tanks in importance. It is a decided staple food for an Arab, and many times they live for days and weeks and months with nothing more than the camel milk from the herd. I talked with one old bedouin who was traveling 1800 kilometers to the north, and he announced his intention of making the entire trip with no food other than the camel milk.

A camel's milk contains no fat, and therefore can not be used for making butter. The milk can be curdled into cheese which is prized highly. It's tasty, too, I found. A bedouin came along one day and gave me a supply, I hauled it around for weeks, nibbling on it.

You may take this statement with a grain of salt; I did. Should the bedouin run out of food on the desert and is faced with starvation, a camel can be made to vomit, spilling a fluid from its stomach that has saved many a poor bedouin's life. However, I might add that from my observations on the desert, I have no doubts about this statement.

Practically every part of the camel is eaten by an Arab. However, an old camel is tough chewing. The hump of the one-year-old beast is declared to be the best meat. It has graced the food spread of many an Arab celebration as hospitality was paid to the Americans during the Peninsula's oil development program. The fanciest camel dish for the outstanding ceremonial occasions is roast camel stuffed with roast sheep, stuffed with roast fowl, stuffed with boiled eggs, stuffed with rice! And this is declared by all to be a stuffing good meal, always served from one common dish, placed upon the floor in the circle of guests.

The bedouin never runs out of fuel, the same as he always possesses a herd of camels, for camel dung is the chief source. And it is the nomad's lot to keep an ample supply gathered for the cooking. Where there is an abundance of the dung, usually found in quantities where a huge camp of thousands of camels have gathered, the nomads gather the droppings, and package the surplus in fiber bags, and offer it for sale at the nearest market. My observations across the source water holes indicated that these Arabian women were smelters at the trade, being fast and very industrious at the task, like picking cotton.

Even camel urine is valuable. It is declared by both the bedouin men and women to be a prized hair shampoo, departing the "pleasant" odor of desert herbs. And the bedouin, on cold mornings, huddles up a little of the stuff to warm his cold hands. Newly born babes are anointed in camel urine.

Many times the beast is killed upon the death of his master, who is wrapped in the hide and buried on the desert. Thus, it is said, ending what the bedouin claims as camel service from birth to the grave.

The camel is indeed a colorful beast in the Middle East, and especially with the bedouin of the rugged, ferocious deserts of Saudi Arabia. For years the beast has been the mainstay of the Kingdom, having been introduced about 1000 B. C., and until the oil revenues piled high in the King's coffers, he, with his harem, traveled by camel, and even today keeps a herd, along with a large fleet of American-made Cadillacs, of about four thousand head at Riyadh, the land's capital.

I found it very interesting to watch the endless herds passing over the desert stretches of the Uthmaniyah area, far south of Hofuf. They with their strange masters afforded me with many exciting moments of land, I came to appreciate their passage with excitement and added interest each day.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT IS . . . In that raw study, I learned one thing, never to confuse the romantic type of camel as boasted on the travel brochures with the honest-to-goodness old bedouin camel of the Rub al-Khali desert of Saudi Arabia, where a tourist probably never has been, and many decades will pass before he ever plants a foot there. There one learns the camel as he might have been with the Three Wise Men.

STATE'S ECONOMY WORST IN NATION

Gov. Jack Campbell is making a noble effort to move the New Mexico economy but the state is in last place in Business Week Magazine's copyrighted "Measure of Personal Income" report.

The report which is published every month shows New Mexico in No. 50 place among the states in gaining only 2.4 per cent during the eight months through August over the same period a year ago.

The nation gained 5.8 per cent and Arizona, Colorado and Texas on the New Mexico borders were up from 5.6 per cent; to 6.9 per cent.
