

The gals really started something

BY GEORGE FITZPATRICK
In N. M. Electric News

There's an old Spanish proverb to the effect that when a beautiful woman smiles, somebody's purse weeps.

Down in Carrizozo, Lincoln County, the women of the community have been turning on their smiles with such skillful management that they have practically rebuilt the town.

A few years ago, members of the Women's Club began to realize that the town's economy was at a stand-still, that drastic steps had to be taken to start Carrizozo moving ahead. They decided the town needed a face-lifting, that it needed better recreation facilities, improved streets, a sewer system, improved school and library facilities.

Having decided what was needed, they set out to accomplish their program.

They smiled at their husbands, the city council, the county commission. When smiles didn't get the job done, they badgered public officials. They persevered and they persisted.

Today, Carrizozo has these new improvements:

- 1-A new courthouse.
- 2-High school and junior high school expansion, library.
- 3-Paving project.
- 4-Sanitary sewers.
- 5-Community auditorium.

6-Natural gas project, which required 318 gas deposits to qualify for a loan for installation.

7-Valley of Fire State Park, 8-City park development, with swimming pool, and other recreation facilities.

9-Organization of the Carrizozo Industrial Corp., which raised $3,000 by sale of stock to qualify for an SBA loan preliminary to setting up industries in Carrizozo.

10-New Municipal Airport.

11-Plans for Community Recreation Center which will be financed by Dr. and Mrs. A.N. Spencer and after an amortization period pass to city ownership. The center will cost more than $300,000 and will have bowling lanes, billiard parlor, ping pong, dance floor, snack bar, boxing arena. The Spencers have been generous in other projects for the benefit of the town.

12-Completion of a labor survey which signed more than 200 women for a labor pool for potential industry.

"Don't give us credit for all these things," one of the women leaders of the town said when the list was being compiled. "Many of these were community projects. Everybody worked on them, and everybody helped."

The editor of the town's only newspaper, Paul Payton, of the Lincoln County News, put it another way: "The women were the motivating force."

Their motivating force undoubtedly set a good example in private business, too. New stores and buildings, new fronts, redecorating have helped in Carrizozo's face-lifting. Two new motels have been built, and Johnson Stearns' new Citizens' Bank is one of the handsomest small banks in the State.

The new Carrizozo Industrial Corporation was organized, stock sold and incorporation put through entirely on the efforts of the women leaders. The first chairman was Mrs. Welcolin Armstrong, the first corporation secretary was Mrs. Paul Payton. Other board members included four men and one additional woman.

Judged by Benjamin Disraeli's definition of success: "the secret of success is constancy of purpose" - The women of Carrizozo can't fail.

Eight Canyon Job Corps host to 300 open house visitors

Nearly 300 visitors thronged the one and one-half million dollar plant of the Eight Canyon Job Corps Conservation Center last Saturday and viewed the facilities afforded the 187 enrollees training there, during its official Open House.

The facility is located on the old Cloudercroft road, eight rough and rocky miles south from Mesalero. It has been constructed on 200 acres of land acquired through a ten-year lease from the Apache Tribe of Mesalero, and consists of several large buildings, including administration, gymnasium, shops, two dormitories, 21 trailers and five homes.

The teaching staff, including administrators, comprises 52, supervising five different departments: Education, Work, Administration, Counseling, and Residential Living.

The Center is administered by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and is available to volunteers of ages 16 to 21 from under privileged families. The volunteers are screened through unemployment agencies in their home towns, and can remain in the program for a period of two years.

It is said that the great majority of the youths are unable to read or write when they enter the Center. Objective is to further their education and teach them a trade. Center officials said. Courses include heavy equipment operation, carpentry, welding, office administration, auto mechanics, photography and nurses assistants.

After completion of their time at the Center, they may go to an advanced Urban Center in the Job Corps for further study, get a job, or go into military service.

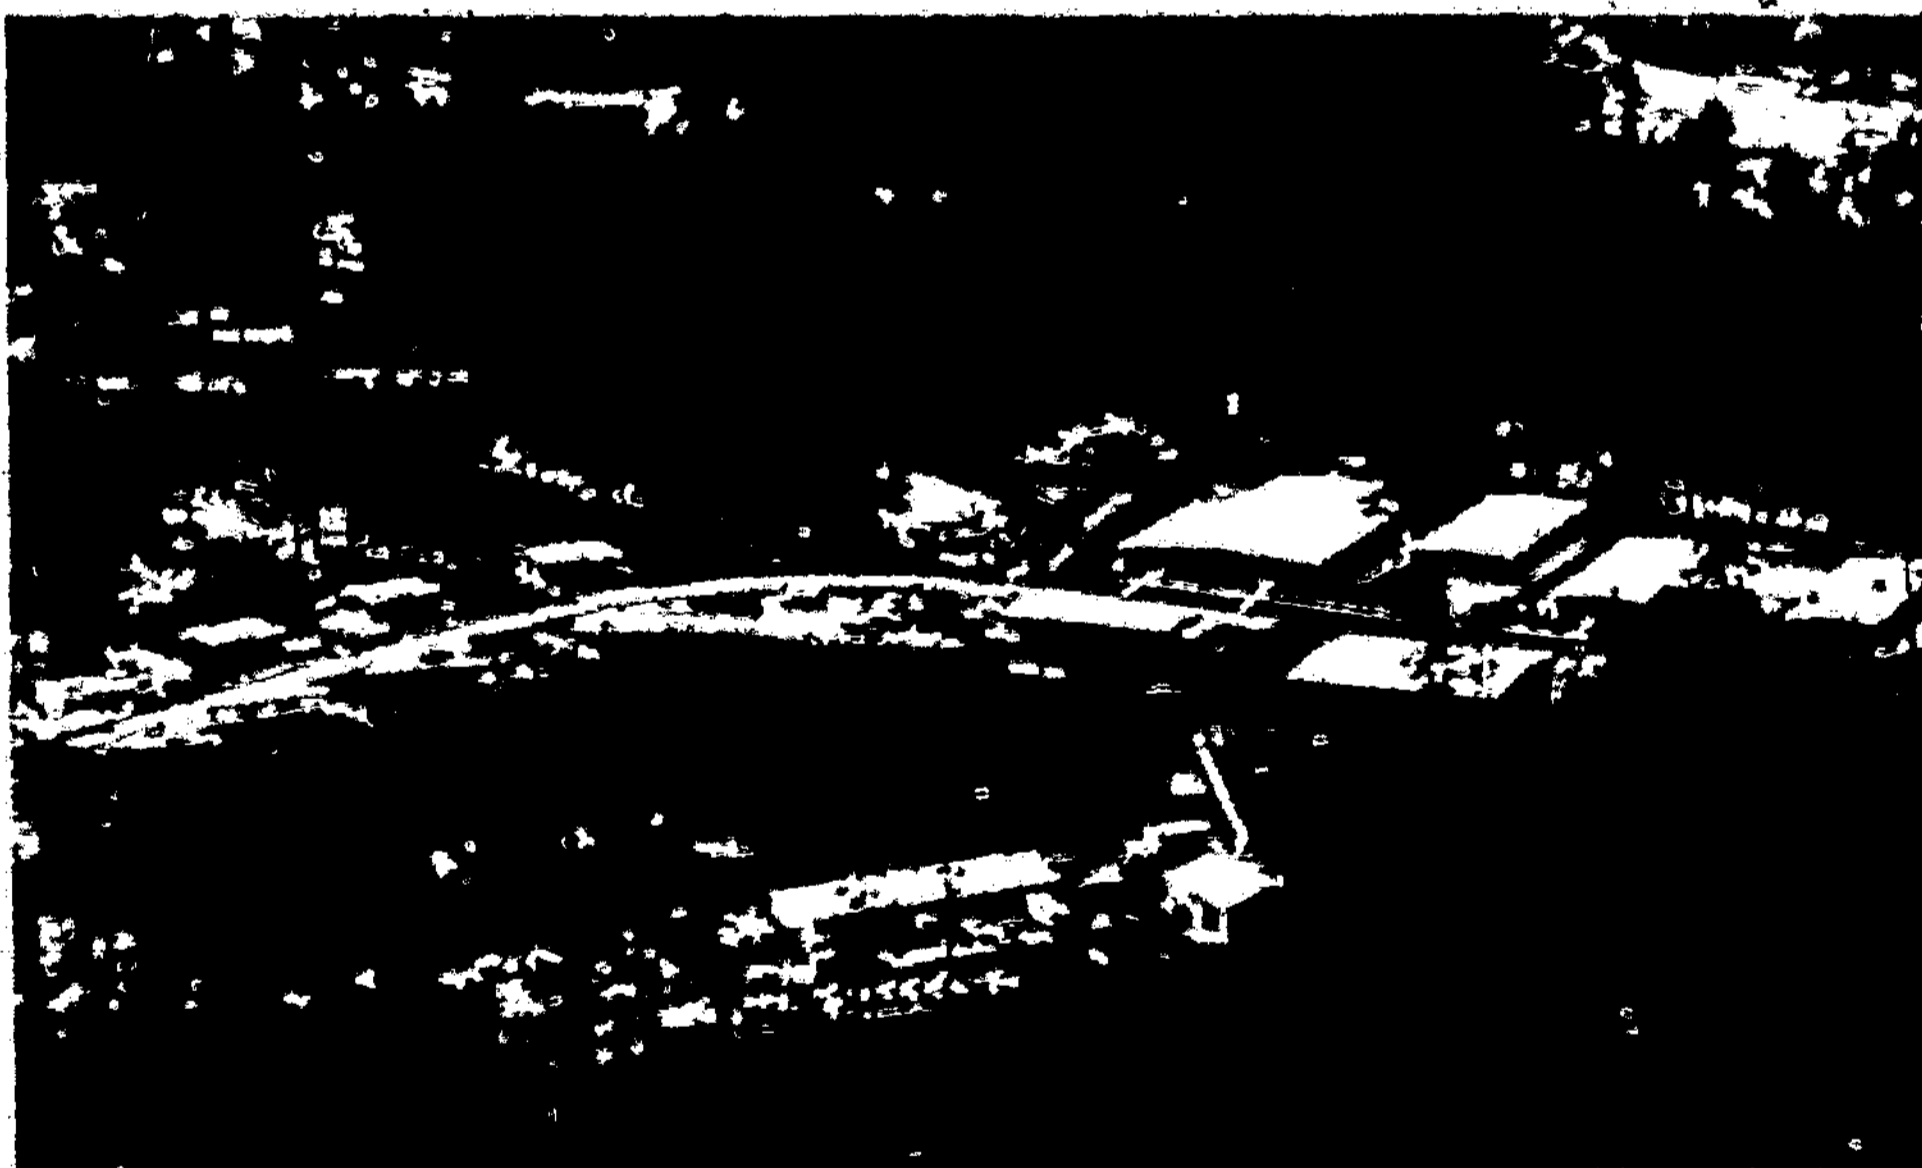

Equipment, tools and machinery used in the training is "brand new and of the finest available", officials said proudly.

The center has a full time athletic director and coach and engages in competition with a conference of ten other Job Corps Centers in New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Oklahoma, to which points they travel for games. The Eight Canyon Baseball and Football teams are currently champions of the Conference. In addition, at the present time the Corps has 14 teams engaged in intra-mural basketball.

The youths, who receive $30 per month, less deductions, including allotments home, are given 48 hours liberty each weekend, and bussed to such points as Alamogordo and El Paso.

Center Director is Clark Stanton, with Norman Tippecanoe as Administrative Officer.

The 66 Station will continue to operate under the name of CHRY'S 66 Service.

War document found

For a few days in March 1862, the Confederacy thought they had won the Civil War in the West.

This came to light upon the recent discovery of a copy of a handbill issued by Col. W. R. Scurry, commandant of the Texas troops in New Mexico. The handbill, probably the only surviving copy, was issued on March 28, 1862 after the battle of Glorietta Pass. It praised the Confederate troops for having "added another victory to the long list of triumphs won by the confederate armies."

Not until a few days later was the disheartening decision made to retreat down the Rio Grande. Curator Bruce T. Ellis of the Museum of New Mexico in Santa Fe found the handbill in an old book. A facsimile was released in the current issue of the Museum's quarterly publication, El Palacio. A check with archivists at Yale University and the State of Texas convinced Ellis that no other copy of the handbill is known though historians have known the general text of the order from a later version.

Other articles in the current "El Palacio" included one by John Wilson called "Prisoners Without Walls," which reproduces an extensive report by Major Henry Davies Wallen, commandant of Fort Sumner in 1863 and 1864 during the period when the Navajos and some Apaches were being re-settled in the Bosque Redondo Reservation.

An article with a number of photographs by Museum Photographer Bob Nugent records an expedition by some members of the Museum staff last winter. At the time a young Korean, Choe Choungchae, was studying Indian at the Museum and led the Museum people to Tsankawi Ruins near Los Alamos to demonstrate the ancient Korean art of f'akpon or making of a rubbing. At Tsankawi he used ancient American-Indian petroglyphs. The article describes the methods and materials used and could serve as an excellent guide for those who would like to try the Korean technique.

Hard Times

by Gery Austin

New Mexico has had a gentle winter, still the old and the sick have an easy time in the next six weeks or so.

Food supplies are at their lowest as temperatures reach and hold the heights.

Weakness from hunger will set up most animals for their natural predators long before the weakness from old age. The two weaknesses together are certain death in nature.

One of the most frequently heard questions in the field—"I wonder how old this deer is?" The antlers will tell you nothing. The teeth can tell you up to about eight years. The game biologists estimate eight years represents the beginning of old age in deer. A few years ago a hunter in Utah shot a tagged deer which had been released as a yearling 19 years before.

The best records are kept by zoos. Although these animals are protected from certain of their natural enemies they are subject to special problems and diseases in confinement.

Records for mammals show grizzly bear, 32; buffalo, 30; elk, 22; mountain lion, 20; beaver, 19; 22; mountain lion, 20; beaver, 19; wolf, 16; squirrel, 16; chipmunk, 12 and cottontail rabbit, 10.

For birds, age records show buzzard, 118; great horned owl, 68; eagle, 55 and hummingbird, 8.

In reptiles the box turtle is known to have lived to age 123 and the cottonmouth snake has made age 21.

Of the amphibians, the toad has reached 36 and bullfrog 30.

There are no reliable records for salt sea fish but of the fresh water species the catfish has reached 60 and the carp 47.

A check of the ages above will show a slight general trend for the smaller creatures to be the shorter lived. This may be accounted for in basic rate of metabolism which is generally slower for the larger species.

"I'm told you can tell the age of a cottontail rabbit by certain characteristics of the thigh bone. As the world's greatest (I'm being quite modest when I say I'm the world's greatest) baker of hauepfeffer it has never occurred to me to check on this while mangling my favorite deli while mangling my favorite delicacy.

Next to the confusion over the aging of deer I find the most confusion over the aging of birds. The aging of most game birds is easy but as each species is different you must carry much information in your head. Generally you can tell the birds of the year from mature birds by the shapes of certain feathers and by the color of others.

When a game management man stops you and asks to check your game he may be checking for age. If he finds most of the animals taken in the area are in the older age bracket, he suspects he has a problem. Was there a crop failure or if the young were born why didn't they survive? He'll go looking for factors and his recommendation for next year's season will be influenced by what he finds.

No bears were reported killed. This animal, heavy and built low to the ground, could flip a car. Three were killed in 1965.

Levon Lee, assistant chief of game management for the Department of Game and Fish, compiled the New Mexico figures. He said the reporting of road kills is improving but he is sure that many are missed.

Asked to account for the persistent high kills in certain areas, Lee said he could not be sure. But he believes the Ruidoso area is a natural and historic crossing for deer of the Sacramento Mountains. The kills will increase with increasing traffic.

In other areas, winter drives the deer down across roads. If winter comes gently and gradually it might take a deer herd weeks to work across a road.

Certain prey species, particularly the rodents, have protruding eyes with nearly spherical lenses. This horizon-to-horizon viewing enables them to see above and behind as well as to the front and either side without turning their heads.

The bright safety colors used by hunters may protect them from other hunters but I doubt their value in hunting of certain species. Some animals and birds are known to be color blind but others can see colors. You might guess this from the loud outfits some of them wear, especially during the breeding season.

I wouldn't think of wearing bright clothes while hunting turkey. Now a color-blind deer might not know your bright jacket is orange but he will be wary of any large one-toned area.

But that's all right. When there are so many hunters that you feel the need for protection of bright colors, there will be so many hunters they will keep the deer running and might just run one right over you.

It's all in the way you look at it, but remember, when you look at a wild creature you can be fairly sure he was looking at you first.

One room school is leaving the scene

SANTA FE--That symbol of the old frontier, the one-room school, is disappearing from the New Mexico scene, according to a report from the Statistics Division of the State Department of Education.

At the present time, there are 15 schools in the state with only one teacher as opposed to 64 of these schools in 1960 and 197 in 1950.

Of the 15 one-teacher schools, two, Las Gallinas and Maestas Place, are located in the Las Vegas City district, two, Conchas Dam and Trementina, are in the West Las Vegas school district, two, Rowe and South San Isidro, are in the Pecos district, and two, Winston and Hillsboro, are in the Truth or Consequences district.

The other one-teacher schools are El Paso Gap School in the Carlsbad district, Hope School in the Artesia district, and Duran School in the Encino district. Other schools are Yeso School in the Ft. Sumner district, Vermejo School in the Cimarron district, Abiquiu School in the Espanola district, and Puerto de Luna School in the Santa Rosa district.

There are 215 students in these 15 schools this year with Puerto de Luna having the largest membership of 32. Hope School has 17 students and Las Gallinas, Abiquiu, and Trementina have 16 students each.

The schools at Conchas Dam and South San Isidro each have 15 students. Rowe and Yeso schools each have 14 students. The Duran school has 13 students. Winston and Hillsboro schools each have 11 students and Maestas Place and Vermejo Schools each have nine students. At the El Paso Gap School, there are seven students.

All of these one-teacher schools have only elementary grades. While some of them have all of the elementary grades, others will have a portion of the elementary classes. For example, one school has only the first, second, and third grades.

In some instances, these schools are as much as 50 miles from a larger school in their districts. Also, many of the children who live in these isolated rural areas must travel long distances each day from their homes to the schools.

The other factor, travel time, becomes important in those mountainous areas of the state where the lack of paved roads and high country weather conditions prolong the time spent in bussing students from their homes to school and back.

So, while the number of one-room schools in New Mexico is declining, some of them will probably be used for some time to come.

One of Corona's beloved citizens passes on

CORONA—By Effie Mulkey

Alex J. Jenkins, 81, born April 26, 1886, in Lincoln County, New Mexico, passed away March 29, at Corona. Funeral services were held at Corona Baptist Church with Hanlon Mortuary in charge March 31 at 2 p.m., Rev. James Wells of Carrizozo officiating. Pall bearers were Walter Bryan, Leon Erramouspe, Ernest Wright, Alton Talley, Ernest Lureas, and W.G. Thomson.

Final resting place was the Corona Cemetery.

Mr. Jenkins was a long time resident of this area, a former Mayor of Corona, and well known in Lincoln County for his many activities in ranching, mining, and politics.

Mr. Jenkins was a member of Corona Baptist Church. He was first married to Myrtle Fort. One son was born to them. In 1913 he was married to Charlotte Parker. Three children were born to this union. He was preceded in death by his wives and one son, Richard. He is survived by one son, Willie Jenkins of Mesa, Arizona and two daughters, Mrs. Geneva Thomson of Corona and Mrs. Ruth Gray of Santa Ana, California, also eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, and many other relatives and friends.

One of Corona's beloved citizens, Alex J. Jenkins, 81, passed away here Wednesday, March 29. Funeral services were held Friday, March 31, at Corona Baptist Church. Mr. Jenkins had been in Mesa, Arizona the past four or five months, and had been home only two weeks. He lived alone, and only a few days before his death he drove his car alone to the Fox ranch five or six miles west of Corona to see his friends, Mary and Ernest Wright, who sat up with him the last two nights preceding his death. Also with him when he passed away was his daughter and son-in-law, Geneva and Chancey Thomson. Mr. Jenkins spoke Spanish fluently and had many friends among the Spanish speaking people of this area. He was our friend the past 22 years. We as well as his relatives and friends, will miss him and long remember his good deeds and his willingness to help any one at any time.

Corona's Women's Extension Club met Thursday, March 30, at the recreation room, and the business meeting was held in the morning. A covered dish luncheon was served at the noon hour, and Easter decorations were carried out with the main table having a tree sprayed and hung with Easter eggs, and flowers of many different colors, also different colored ribbons, and spring colored napkins. Mrs. Dimmitt Bond and Mrs. Mitch Nalda were hostesses. The afternoon program was embroidery on burlap with Mrs. Bill Hall as leader, assisted by Mrs. Mitch Nalda. Mrs. Nalda and Mrs. Hall displayed work of wool thread on burlap, and crew embroidery, also members worked on wall hangings, pictures and flowers embroidered on burlap.

Mrs. Louise Bea Ingram had as her dinner guests Easter Sunday, her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hooker and their son Martin; Mrs. Ingram's daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Roper, and Mrs. Ingram's grandson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roper and their three children all of Albuquerque. Also her granddaughter, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Cook and their two sons of Portales, and Mrs. Ingram's daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Tracey and their children, Kay and Mike, and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil McCord and Donald M. Kibben of Corona. They all attended the dance Saturday night before Easter, and it was reported a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward Thomson and children, Perry and Timothy, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Parker of Albuquerque attended the funeral of Mr. Jenkins Friday. Mr. Thomson is a grandson of Mr. Jenkins, and Mr. Parker is a brother of the late Mrs. Jenkins.

Paul Harvey Says

I CRY OVER SPILLED MILK
Again dairy farmers are trying to boost milk prices by dumping milk, by artificially creating a shortage.

There's got to be a better way. The so-called National Farmers Organization got some of its earliest financial assistance from Walter Reuther. Auto Workers' organizers taught NFO organizers how to organize.

The objective of more equitable prices for dairy products is entirely just and defensible, but when I saw dairy farmers jump out of the frying pan and into the arms of Walter Reuther I knew that this organization was most likely to adopt his answer for everything: Strike!

Presently, dairy farmers of 25 states have been directed by NFO headquarters to withhold milk from the marketplace. They'd rather dump it down sewers than sell it at today's prices.

An during previous "withholding" actions by this organization, there is a box of violence as non-strikers seek to move milk to market.

There has been vandalism and destruction of property and some violence and there may be bloodshed in the milkshed. However worthy the objective, this is not the American way of influencing prices!

NFO spokesman Oren Lee Staley claims that his organization's militant effort has created milk shortages in many areas.

His immediate objective is an increase of two cents a quart at the farm level, and "we'll dump it on the ground rather than sell it for less."

I am genuinely sympathetic to farmers, per se, who, fewer in number than heretofore, have less clout in Washington. Thus, they get the short end of the stick in so many ways.

I can get mightily incensed over the senselessness of an Administration continuing to import meat and meat products while our own ranchers are on the financial ropes.

The dairy farmer's plight is somewhat different, it is a cruel paradox that he has become so efficient --

That he has bred improved cows capable of giving more milk --

Then adopted scientific feeding to get still more milk --

Then modernized the milkshed so that one farmer can tend a larger herd --

And now all that milk has flooded the marketplace with such a plentiful supply that the price is down. The dairyman is pinched so tightly between his price and his cost that many say they "may have to go out of the milk business."

This is not an easy or a painless adjustment for a dairyman to make. His investment is considerable. Besides, dairying has for so long been his life.

But I keep remembering once upon a time when other segments of our agriculture were similarly pinched. Then Agriculture Secretary, Ezra Benson, dared to say that farmers had become coproductive -- that one man could now produce so much more per acre and tend so many more acres -- that smaller, less efficient farmers were going to have to go into some other business.

That hurt deep. Secretary Benson was politically tarred and feathered and eventually ridden out of Washington on the lines of a pitchfork.

But he was right.

IF THE PRESIDENT DARED
Americans are not spineless; they're uninspired!

Americans are not afraid to fight all out, but most detest anybody who fights "half-out." Americans are not fleeing into LSD to escape reality, but to escape the unreality of subsidizing the lazy, penalizing the producers and deciding who dies with a roll of the dice.

You draft them to go 6,000 miles to fight Communists. . . Yet throw them in jail if they try to fight the Communists 90 miles from Florida. . .

No wonder they protest! Fully prepared to be accused of presumptuousness, I am going to suggest some words for our President's lips:

"Fellow Americans, we have backed into an unworthy war in Vietnam from which we cannot now back out, so we are going to win that war however necessary."

"It is the consensus of our nation's military leaders that they can neutralize this enemy's war-making potential within 45 days starts one week from right now."

"Our enemy has one week in which to sue for peace."

"Tonight your President is calling for volunteers. While Congress has been considering a patchwork renovation of our nation's draft machinery, it has become increasingly apparent that the cumbersome, costly, inefficient military draft is unworthy of the American tradition."

"It is now obvious that America's six-percent fraction of our planet's population cannot police the world with masses of marching men. We must, instead, hold our enemies at arms length with our superior technology."

"To fight modern wars with the weapons which give us the advantage, we will need skilled specialists in our military services."

"I am asking the Congress immediately to raise pay and benefits for all services to a level commensurate with private industry. Your President is determined to renew the prestige of career military service."

"I expect that adequate divisions of specialists trained in modern warfare will cost us less than vaster armies of marching footsoldiers. But if they cost more, we cannot afford less."

"I have directed all draft machinery frozen immediately for the duration of the armed conflict in Vietnam, our nation's 4,000 draft boards will stand by for service only in the event of an all-out national defense emergency. Thereafter, all draft machinery will be abandoned in favor of volunteer military service."

"Your President is aware that allegiance must work both ways. And I pledge to you -- whom I am asking to volunteer in the most streamlined, most efficient and most effective military force in the world -- that we will keep this 'club in the closet' in the closet until any time that our own national security is in danger."

"And any time our security is in jeopardy, we will fight to win." Thus might our President make it feel good again to be an American.

Commentary

"And may we strive to touch and know the great common woman's heart of us all; and, O Lord God, let us not forget to be kind."
--Club Woman's Collect

Their 46th year

It was never a man who could make a home. There may be tarpaper on the roof, logs for siding, dirt for floor, but no matter, some woman will be tidying up the place and it will look like home to her family because she will give the enclosure a feeling of home.

That's the way things have been in Carrizozo since the founding about 1905 and as a matter of record since April, 1920 when Carrizozo Woman's Club was organized with Mrs. R.E. Blaney as president.

The long list of active Woman's Club members includes those who want their town to be a friendly, cheerful and neat looking place -- like their homes. The leaders of the community have taken their turn at leading Woman's Club activities.

This is an especially good year to recognize the Carrizozo Woman's Club one of the best reasons being that the state convention is being held in Lincoln County and women from all points north, east, south and west will be passing through or by Carrizozo's beautiful Woman's Club building.

The world of women!

In a small Nevada town out near where Tony Payton lives, the girls in a club were reviewing the treasurer's report covering a fund-raising dance which they had just run. "My father made out this statement," the treasurer explained, "and he says we have a deficit of eighty-five dollars. Isn't that wonderful?"

The president agreed and gave the floor to a member who had raised her hand. "I suggest," said this member, "that we do something constructive with this deficit money. Why don't we give it to the Children's Hospital?"

"I don't think we should give all that deficit money to just one charity," objected another member. "Why don't we give part of it to the Heart fund?"

The extended debate which ensued was finally brought to an end by the remarks of Sally Payton. "I move," intoned Sally, "that we compromise. Let's give one-third of the deficit money to the Heart Fund and three-quarters of the deficit money to the Children's Hospital."

Without further ado the motion was seconded and put to a vote. It carried by acclaim, and the meeting was adjourned.

What do they do?

My, what a long list of improvements around Carrizozo can be attributed to the Woman's Club.

Sort of number one on their list of accomplishments is the wonderful Valley of Fires State Park completed and in business last year. This project was many years cooking, but it finally came to a boil and the Woman's Club can take almost one hundred percent of the credit.

Bringing a mobile dental unit to town and paying most of the bill, all for the benefit of our youngsters, is an expensive project each year.

Granting a scholarship to worthy Carrizozo graduate each year is the only local grant of this kind, the work of Carrizozo Woman's Club.

The downtown park was an early-day woman's club project and later Carrizozo Woman's Club had a part in Spencer Park.

Organization of Carrizozo Industrial Development Corporation was the work of Carrizozo Woman's Club, with little or no help from men. This Corporation has a valuable place in Carrizozo's future, for instance that corporate backing can be supplied, when needed, is one of the best reasons.

This list does not include the multitude of items performed each year by the Woman's Club with only minor recognition on the part of the community.

What do Carrizozo Woman's Club members do -- they contribute much to keeping Carrizozo alive and on the way.

They enjoy life!

Carrizozo Woman's Club does not have problems of splitting deficits like the Nevada Club but they have an equally big time doing what they do and that is a lot of doing.

For instance -- picnic lunch at Valley of Fires Park in September, program on "Building with youth" in October, time for Thanksgiving in November, Christmas at White Oaks observed, Lincoln County landmarks viewed, most cherished possessions brought out big crowd at meeting, and that only starts the year.

Love every one of those girls, for their good humor with their local newspaper, the many opportunities they afford for action pictures, for the pushing and prodding they provide for the community, and for themselves -- God-bless their ever-loving lipstick.

Inside The Capital

By Fred Buckles

SANTA FE--A debate is raging on a key question: Does the legislature have authority to write substantive law spelling out its intent in the big General Appropriations Act?

The state constitution apparently limits the purpose of the appropriations bill to appropriations to support state functions. But State Supreme Court decisions dating back to 1923 bulwark the contention that the legislature has the right to identify in detail how it wants funds spent.

The question is simply this: Should the vital appropriations bill merely list appropriations or should the legislature amplify its purpose in appropriating the funds? In recent years there has been a tendency of the legislature to include more and more substantive law in the big bill.

In the recent 60-day session the legislature defeated a bill to permit local school districts to apply cash balances for teacher pay raises. But the language turned up in the general appropriations bill.

The important bill also contains a number of new legislative restrictions on the State Highway Department which has been under fire several years. The Highway Department is created by the constitution.

There is some evidence to support belief that the road agency might successfully oppose the restrictions. As a practical matter, this is not likely to come to pass, however.

The legislature called for a monthly report from the Highway Department to the Legislative Finance Committee on its fiscal status. It also told the Highway Department that debentures could not be issued without legislative approval. And the Highway Department's budget was line itemed in detail in the appropriations act, pinning down expenditures to specific purposes.

Another section of the bill, not related directly to money, says: "For the purpose of log maximum use of state-owned aircraft, the Department of Finance and Administration shall maintain records of all flights made by state-owned aircraft. The director of each state agency owning an airplane shall provide the Department of Finance and Administration with information which the department may require, including a record of all flight schedules on a daily basis."

The Highway Department owns three planes and the Oil Conservation Commission owns a plane. There are also other state planes.

Franklin Jones of Albuquerque, respected tax attorney, warned the Senate Finance Committee against the dangers of writing substantive or explanatory law into appropriations bill. An attorney general's opinion prompted some changes in language in the legislation.

No one has posed a formal challenge to the practice of inserting substantive law but the procedure could bump into trouble sometimes.

Gov. David Cargo vetoed the controversial dairy products code and was roundly criticized for his action by Larry Ingram of Tucuman, president of the New Mexico Dairy Processors Association. Ingram said none of the governor's allegations about restrictions in the bill were true.

Cargo had said the bill would forbid sales of milk at filling stations and would establish a series of other restrictive controls. Ingram said the legislation was sorely needed by milk processors and farmers.

Directors of the New Mexico Education Association asked the National Education Association for an investigation of the financial support of education in New Mexico.

The action was taken despite the fact that the center of attention on appropriations in every session of the legislature for the last six years has been on public school support.

Virtually every prime boost in state spending for years has been for education. New Mexico residents spend more per capita on education than citizens of any other state. The heavy outlays by the state on public school support leave little to expand other programs which might benefit the state.

Gov. Cargo rightly points out that education is important but he underlines the need to shift part of the fiscal lead to local needs.

Cargo will renew his proposal to transfer part of the property tax authority from the state to local school districts in the 1968 Legislature.

The governor signed the bill merging the State Cattle Sanitary and Sheep Sanitary Boards into the New Mexico Livestock Board. The bill cleared the legislature without a dissenting vote.

No one has asked us but we're about to tell you how life is--living with a woman's club president. Generally we eat pretty good because this president has a keen way of fixing tasty food . . . but on woman's club days the evening fare gets a bit skimpy, tea and crumpet type of menu. Generally she does more than her share of chores around the office, like working all day fall to come through and whether or not there will be a 300 program at the next meeting. No one has called us Mr. Woman's Club president yet, thank goodness, probably those guys down there don't even know and we're not about to tell them.

Carson and Gorge parks contrasting

The New Mexico traveler out on a trip about this Land of Enchantment comes to one conclusion very quickly: this is, indeed, the fifth largest state in this country. Also, for varied and beautiful and interesting scenery, there are very few of our other states who can begin to hold a candle to our State of New Mexico.

Take these two contrasting state parks, for instance: Taos' Kit Carson and Rio Grande Gorge State Parks. The first, a quiet spot not far from the bustling center of this renowned historical art center. It affords the visitor a place to enjoy peaceful relaxation under shade trees with all the facilities for the comfort of the visitor available within a short walk of any of its boundaries. Children play in the playgrounds and most visitors from far away make a pilgrimage to the grave of the great frontiersman and National Hero, Kit Carson. Four miles walk, at a slow pace, from the very center of Taos town, and the visitor to Kit Carson State Park is transported from the fast paced world of reality to the comforting relaxation of time-out-of-mind restfulness.

Not too many miles up the highway northward, past Questa to the turnout to Cerro and beyond, the park visitor, be he hiker, camper, picnicker, or trailerite arrives at Rio Grande Gorge State Park. Before he knows it, after Kit Carson and Rio Grande Gorge Park. Before he knows it, after traveling over more or less flat lands, he comes to the rim of the gorge where he can park, get out and stretch, and walk to the rim to look down upon the silver ribbon of the storied Rio Grande flowing and cutting its bed deeper and deeper by fantastical millions of an inch each day.

By graded and walled trails, the visitor can hike down to the very edge of the river where with a license, he can fish for those big ones to his heart's content, or bring down his picnic lunch to enjoy in a quiet, disturbed only by the sound of the ever flowing river. Perhaps he has packed his sleeping bag to stay overnight alongside one of the sheltered picnic tables.

The Rio Grande Gorge State Park is suited for the outdoorsman--and woman--who likes to get close to the nature of things and who enjoys vast spaces and the magnificence of the handiwork of nature. It is also very welcome to all of those who just like to get out and relax amidst sights well worth seeing.

Farmers financial comeback inevitable

By Paul Harvey
We worry about the wrong things. The Society of Petroleum Engineers, meeting in Dallas recently, heard some disturbing predictions: "We are running out of gas, we have barely enough reserves to last 20 years."

That same day, as 4,000 engineers and scientists were viewing our dwindling petroleum reserves with alarm, Ford announced a breakthrough in the development of an electrically powered automobile.

Now Monsanto has developed a fuel cell which will run a four-ton truck 49 mph for 1,000 hours! Why get ulcers over a petroleum shortage in 20 years when we'll have electric cars, economical, practical and smog-free within ten?

Intrepid Americans somehow always seem to manage, with courage and ingenuity, to circumvent disaster. But where we may manage to ball ourselves out of these crises, and thus delay doomday, the inevitable fate of nations which exhaust their resources remains -- inevitable. Many once-green nations died in dust.

After generations of agricultural surpluses, our own farmland is being depleted. Seven hundred thousand farms have gone out of farming in seven years.

Four million acres of farmland are lost every year to highways, airports, suburban developments and recreational facilities.

Other millions of acres are drying up and being abandoned as our water table recedes.

Again, American ingenuity will rescue us in the immediate future -- if necessary row crops will be grown without soil in chemical-saturated gravel.

But will that be enough to feed the onrushing tide of world population? "The pill" notwithstanding, population is pyramiding.

It required thousands of years to populate our planet to one billion people. Within another hundred years we were two billion.

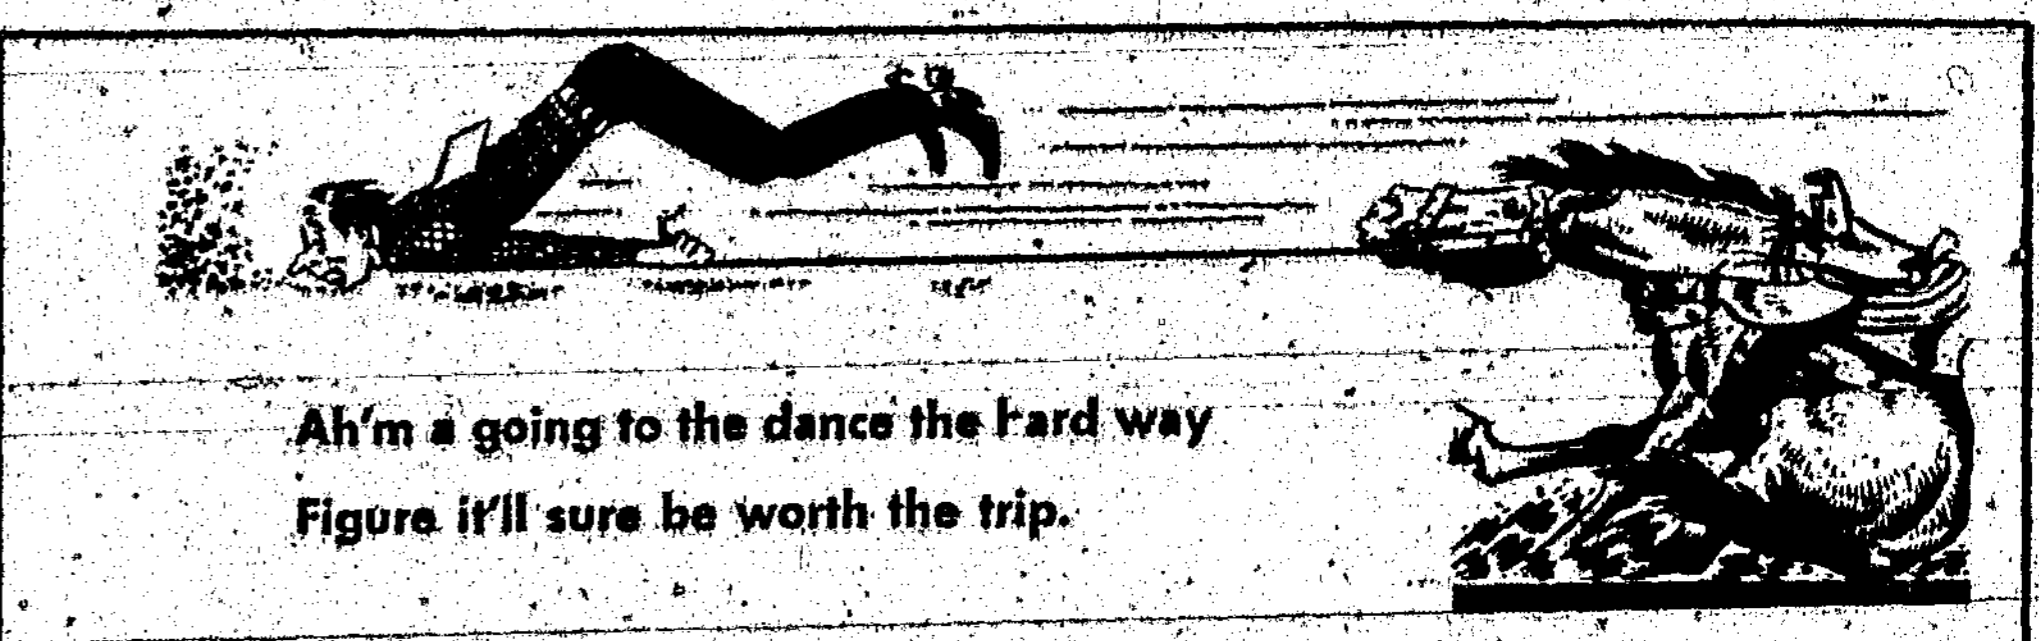

Thirty-five more years -- another billion. Fifteen more years -- added yet a fourth billion!

Dr. Allen Barnes of John Hopkins figures that within 600 years, every person on earth will have only one square yard on which to stand, and he includes the polar ice caps!

Most serious students of this subject figure Americans will feel the pinch in our food supplies within our lifetimes. During the past five years world population increased two per cent; world food supply increased only 1 1/2 per cent. So, very soon, the farmer, so long underpaid, is going to be back in the drivers seat.

Very soon, the farmer will not be driven to desperation in an effort to add two cents to his price for a gallon milk. Farmers will have such a stranglehold on the world that they will be able to dictate their own wages, prices, working conditions. I hope that when that time comes, they will be more considerate of our needs than we have been of theirs.

Ah'm a going to the dance the hard way

Tax evaluation to be discussed April 13

by Ralph Dunlap

"Tax Evaluation" will be discussed on April 13th at the Lincoln School. Mr. Lon Nelson will be the guest speaker at the meeting, starting at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Ivan Watson will moderate the meeting sponsored by the Lincoln County Farm Bureau. Questions on what is used to arrive at a tax value are encouraged, but any questions on a personal tax problem will not be answered.

The apple trees are in full bloom in the Hondo-Ruidoso-Bonita valleys, and as of Tuesday there has been no freeze damage. Lucio Zamora was planning to spray on pollen to get a better fruit set in his Red Delicious orchard.

The Lincoln County Development Association will meet in Coronanex Wednesday, April 12, to discuss problems in Lincoln County and which problems should be considered first. The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. and will be in the Community Room of the Corona School.

Fruit frost forecasts are again being broadcast this year on KWSV-TV and radio. This information is on the noon, 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. news, also in other local news media. This service is made available through the U.S. Weather Bureau. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Babers give the local reading daily from San Patricio, and the Lincoln County Branch assumes the local costs.

Shorn wool payments will be made at the rate of 24.8 per cent of the dollar returns each grower received from the sale of shorn wool during 1966. The payment rate, according to the USDA, is based on the difference between the incentive price of 65 cents and the national average price of 52.1 cents received by growers.

Each grower's wool payment is determined by multiplying his dollar return from the sale of wool (less marketing charges) by the payment rate of 24.8 per cent. The percentage method of payment is designed to encourage growers to improve the quality and marketing of their wool. Under this method, the grower who gets the best possible price for his wool also gets a higher incentive payment.

Don't make creep rations for lambs to complex. A good, simple creep ration can be made from 10 per cent cottonseed, 90 per cent rolled milo, and one percent aureomycin crumbles. If you feel it needs it. Rations that contain alfalfa meal, high levels of soybean meal, and bone meal only increase costs without affecting performance.

Keep in mind a creep ration supplements the ewe's milk. Lambs getting adequate amounts of milk don't need a creep ration containing protein, vitamins and minerals. The creep ration supplies additional food energy and helps develop the lamb's rumens. The rumen must be well developed to utilize nutrients in roughages. If you can get lambs on a ration containing roughage at an early age, feed costs usually are reduced.

Complex creep rations may be needed in special cases or where the producer is shooting for the early market. Planting seed of unknown quality and performance is one way a farmer can fail to make a good crop.

There is absolutely no way to judge the performance of seed just by looking at it. Planting just any seed is a gamble because you have no idea how good or bad it is.

Certified seed, on the other hand is true to variety. It has been tested and must exceed or equal the requirements for germination, varietal purity, adaptation, and freedom from weed seed.

Certified seed is safer because you know exactly what it is and what to expect from it. It must have a proven high performance to pass certification. For further information on certified seed varieties and hybrids, contact the county extension office.

Designs on fabric you choose are important. You want colors that appeal to you. But just as important to a professional-looking garment is how accurately the design is printed on the fabric. Here are some suggestions for buying fabric with printed designs:

Stand about 20 feet away from the fabric to see if the pattern is repeated across and down. Usually the design is correct on the vertical direction, but the crosswise thread may not be at right angles to the warp thread.

This occurs as the fabric is pressed in manufacturing. It is impossible to straighten a pressed-off-grain fabric if it is a wash-and-wear or a durable press.

Extra yardage is required for most fabrics with design. The back of your pattern envelope will give you correct yardage requirements.

To have the garment make you look more attractive, you must consider the direction of the design motif when cutting each pattern piece. If you disregard the design direction, the garment will look twisted on you. That is, a flower motif may be placed on one side and perhaps several inches off-grain on the other side.

Knowing signs of pending danger will not carry you safely out of the situation unless you react correctly for that danger.

Every driver must anticipate trouble on the road, and must train himself before the incident in order to take the proper procedure to correct the situation. Take the skid situation, for example, you should turn the wheel in the skid direction and pump the brakes lightly to correct the skid.

There are more than enough hazards today driving when the visibility is at best but the attribute of a good driver is the ability to avoid these hazards or maneuver out of them with as little damage as possible. Drunk drivers are more common at night. Watch roadside bars for tipsy pedestrians as well as drivers. Fifty per cent of highway fatalities involve a drinking driver.

Don't tailgate, if you're being followed too closely, which is especially annoying because of his headlights glaring from your rear-view mirror, allow him to pass and consider it a good riddance. Pedestrians and animals are much harder to see at night; this is one of many good reasons to reduce speed. In any case, do not overdrive your headlights.

Getting ready for spring planting? Be sure to read the tag or label before buying seed. All seed sold in New Mexico must bear a tag showing such quality-determining factors as germination percentage, weed content, purity, etc.

Standards required for registered and certified seed are true to type for the variety or hybrid selected, high germination rate, and freedom from noxious weed seed and from insect or disease damage.

To clarify the terms on the tag or label of crop seed, here are the most commonly used words.

Pure seed: Means the seed will produce plants true to type for the variety. Usually expressed as a percentage of the seed purchased.

Germination: Percentage of the seed that will produce normal plants under favorable conditions.

Weed seed: Percentage, by weight, of weed seeds. Seed designation is determined by law, official regulation or general usage.

Inert matter: Broken seeds that are one-half or less the original size, and all other foreign material such as chaff, stems, soil particles, etc.

Other crop seeds: Percentage by weight of seeds not of the crop or variety specified on the label.

Hard seed: Percentage of seeds which remain hard but sound at the end of the prescribed test period. Hard seeds may germinate at a later date.

Treated seed: Term indicates the seed has been given a chemical coating as a protection against many soil and seed-borne diseases and insects.

Always buy from a reputable dealer. A "cheap" seed, may be the most costly item you can buy.

If you are having plant disease problems, here are some hints for better plant resistance to diseases:

Always buy disease-resistant plant material. Disease-resistant varieties are especially bred to resist one or more pathogenic fungi or bacteria. Garden catalogs and seed packets often list disease resistant characteristics. By all means try to use such varieties. Perennial plants also need spring care. Prune out diseased or weakened limbs or shoots. A healthy plant is more able to withstand diseases and insects.

Many pesticide preparations for the home garden are available to combat fungi and bacteria which attack foliage, flowers, and fruits. Remember, if these are used, they are only effective when applied as preventive measures. Read the label and follow directions carefully. A grease-fire in a frying pan naturally calls for turning off the heat under the pan. If a lid is handy, slide it over the pan in a motion away from your body to smother the flames. Don't lower a lid down over the flames; this causes flames to spread sideways and might burn you. If a lid is not available--reach for the table salt and smother the flames by throwing it directly on the flame.
