Council sets new water rate

PIPLING — This quartet lays a 2-inch water line from a Carrizozo water meter to the Dodson Mineral Corp. site just north of the railroad overpass in Carrizozo. Shoveling is Ed Niderstadt while Carl Dodson and Robert Smith hold a spell of plastic pipe. Looking on is Frank Lindsey. Carrizozo City Council set a tentative commercial water rate to enable Dodson to get started on his wet mill operation.

No new TB cases diagnosed in county

Statistics published by the New Mexico Department of public Health show that no new cases of tuberculosis have been diagnosed in Lincoln County during the first seven months of 1967. In the same period last year a new case had been uncovered.

Statewide figures for 1967 show 154 cases of tuberculosis reported by July 30. Figures for 1966 show 160 cases for the same period.

However the Public Health Service attaches little significance to short term annual variations. More important is the slow but steady decline in tuberculosis infection which New Mexico has shown over a lengthy period. The average percentage decline in the case rate for the five year period from 1961 to 1967 was 4.5 percent while the average death rate from tuberculosis declined 9.5 percent in the same period.

Quicker eradication of the tuberculosis health hazard can be achieved by more extensive tuberculin testing in the schools in the opinion of the Public Health Department.

In 1966 sixty cases of tuberculosis were discovered in New Mexico children under 14 years of age. Among 925 young men in New Mexico rejected for military service last year five had active tuberculosis.

The Public Health Department also urges the quick appropriation of state funds to implement the New Mexico law passed last year requiring public health officers to file annual certificates stating that they have been examined and found free of contagious tuberculosis.

Contrary to popular opinion tuberculosis in New Mexico is not largely restricted to the Indian population. Public Health figures show 62 percent of last year's new cases of tuberculosis were from non-Indian racial groups.

Lamb crop down 8 %

New Mexico's 1967 lamb crop was down 8 percent from 1966, compared with the national 6 percent drop.

Lambs marked or docked are forecast at 498,000 head compared to 540,000 head as of July 1, 1966 according to the New Mexico Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Part of this decrease was attributed to dry weather conditions experienced during the first half of the year. However, some of the decrease was a result of a drop in the number of breeding ewes 1 year old and older, from 687,000 head on January 1, 1966 to 677,000 head for January 1, 1967. Lambs saved per 100 ewes 1 year old and older dropped from 79 percent for 1966 to 74 percent this season.

Dodson hooks into city line

A commercial rate for water has been tentatively established by the Carrizozo city council. Action was taken following a request by Carl Dodson of Dodson Minerals Corp., Carrizozo.

Initial input into Dodson's storage pit will be 500,000 gallons. An additional 20,000 gallons a day is anticipated need after the pit is filled.

Tentative price set is 30 cents per 1,000 gallons.

Dodson explained that two water wells drilled on his property have been dry and that drilling is proceeding on a third. He told that he would continue to try to develop his own source of water but that water was needed now so that he could get his wet mill into operation.

"Last year's payroll was $84,000," he told adding that after his plant was completed and into operation this would increase by approximately $100,000. Nine families in town are connected with the operation now, he told.

Capitan school holds workshop

A teacher's workshop began this morning (Aug. 17) in Capitan's home ec room tells Duane Darling, Capitan school superintendent. He notes that the faculty is complete with the same staff of certified teachers.

During a recent board meeting, the Capitan school board reviewed the state purchasing act and appointed the district superintendent's office as the purchasing center and the superintendent as the purchasing agent.

Approval is expected from the legislative finance committee for the trade of .93 acres of Capitan school property for more than 2 acres adjoining present school boundaries. Land involved is across and fronting on the Carrizozo highway.

Also discussed was the Title I program for the coming year and mapping out transport routes for this year. Bids will be received by the same this year, Superintendent Darling tells.

Bids will be opened tomorrow afternoon for LP gas at 5 p.m. Superintendent Darling says the school system had planned on natural gas, but costs seemed too high.

Council again asked who owns firehouse?

Along with approving a tentative commercial water rate, the Carrizozo City Council re-appointed Sally Ortiz and Arnold Boyce as representatives to the Carrizozo-Capitan Natural Gas Association board for a term of three years. Both were complimented by the council for their work.

Also appointed were Pat Voss to fill the two year unexpired term of Mrs. Armstrong, who resigned, and Johnson Stearns to fill the unexpired term of Fred Chavez on the Municipal Board. Chavez was appointed to the Carrizozo Recreation committee.

Jim Ham was granted a permit to move a railroad building to a site on A Avenue. The building is to be located behind Postmaster Roy Harmon's house. A $478 gas bill for the Carrizozo swimming pool was to be revised. Bob Hayes told that the gas meter had the wrong head installed and that it was reading twice as high as it should. The meter is to be changed and the city presented with a revised gas bill of $239.

A request was made for a culvert to be installed across from the high school tennis courts. Heavy rain runoff makes the road almost impassable council members were told. Mayor Leandro Vega promised action. A $50 a month raise for City employees, Juan Heron was approved. The raise is retroactive to July 1 and will raise his salary from $330 a month to $380. The need for a new dumptruck for the Town of Carrizozo was told to council members. A special meeting may be called to consider this more. The present truck is too old, too heavy and too long, commented Councilman Buster Smoot.

The question of who owns the firehouse in Carrizozo was again raised.

According to H. Elfred Jones, city attorney, title to municipal properties was quieted about five years ago following a suit he brought to settle the matter.

Assistant Fire Chief Ziggy Lessau contended that the building belongs to the fire department, according to state records. He added that the building was erected using state fire funds.

Property, so far as rent is concerned, that the building is on belongs to the Town of Carrizozo, said Attorney Jones. Property is controlled and administered by the town board of trustees he said adding that it would not be advisable, precedent-wise, for the town to pay rent to the fire department for the use of municipal offices in the building.

The city council agreed to check with the state comptroller to find a legal way to reimburse the members of the volunteer fire department for their services.

STATE HIGHWAY PATROL:

Slick roads wreck three

Rain slick roads were blamed for a trio of crashes this week in Lincoln County roads by State Highway Patrol officers.

Coming down a hill on Highway 380 from Capitan, Josie Tremble Kelthy of Robert Lee, Texas, applied her brakes and a small trailer she was towing went into a skid and overturned. Mrs. Kelthy's '65 Pontiac was thrown into a roadside ditch and traveled some 128 feet over and down an embankment before coming to rest on its wheels. She suffered a laceration under one eye.

According to Investigating Officers Andrew Benevides and Darrel Austin, both car and trailer were demolished.

Starting around a curve 11.1 miles east of Carrizozo on Highway 380, John Edwin McKenna, 25, of Los Angeles, Calif., swayed, skidded, striking two poles, then skidded across the highway and into a canyon.

Also injured when the car overturned one and a half times was a passenger, Lois John Vella, 18, of Los Angeles.

McKenna was cited for failure to have his vehicle under control. Seat belts in the car were not in use at the time of the accident reported Officer Andrew Benevides, investigator. Hospitalization was required for Mrs. Carmea Brunselles. (Continued on Page 6)

Mules set for 25-mile race

SOCORRO - The second annual 'la Carrera De Machos' or mule race will be held here Sept. 2. The 25-mile race sponsored by the Socorro Jaycees will follow a portion of the Camino Real which lead from Santa Fe to Mexico City during the 16 and 17 centuries.

Tom Zimmerman, Jaycee project chairman, said the increased prize money and the popularity of last year's race should increase the number of entries this year.

'We had 10 entries here from New Mexico during the first race last September and we expect entries from several of the neighboring states this year. We increased the prize money, the first place winner will receive $400; the second place winner $150; third, $75; and fourth, $35. This should attract a number of additional entries.'

The entry fee for this year's race has been set at $25 and the entry book will close at 7 p.m. Sept. 1.

Last year's winner, Pete Higes of Lemitar, will enter his mule again this year which covered the 25-mile course in 1 hour and 51 minutes to win. Additional information can be obtained from the Socorro Jaycees or Tom Zimmerman, 119 College Ave., Socorro.

Corona schools begin Aug. 24

The Corona Public Schools will begin the 1967-68 school year with a meeting of all faculty members at 9 a.m. on Thursday, August 23.

Students will enroll and attend classes for the full day on August 24. Buses will run their regular schedule and the lunch room will be in operation, same prices as last year.

Corona schools will again use the continuous progress method in the elementary school and modular scheduling in the high school. Corona was the first high school in the state to adopt modular scheduling.

Both methods are designed to permit greater individual work by both students and teachers and also allow flexibility to scheduling of classes.

Office All Classes will inspect school buses at 9 a.m. Monday, August 21. There will be a meeting of all bus drivers in the board room following the inspection.

All vacancies in the Corona school system have been filled. Superintendent Hall told the News Tuesday.

Publisher's policy

The Lincoln County News editor served on the State Special Hospitals Board during all of his lifetime, originally appointed by a Democratic governor. We were saved from being mentioned in an editorial in the Albuquerque Journal only by the fact that this special board was split up and made to serve all state hospitals and Payton went off a couple of months ago.

The Journal editorial says of four newspaper mensevering on state boards: "Will these men be able to look at Cargo's record with an unbiased eye come 1968 -- or will their desire to continue in their somewhat prestigious positions obliterate their judgment?"

First off, the Journal is throwing stones at a glass house -- they live in the biggest glass house in the state and they can't afford the luxury of throwing as many stones as they do. This newspaper is guilty of running as many as ten full page advertisements for U.S. government bonds in one issue (August 16) which is such a bad case of poor newspapering that they must be trying to coddle Washington, D.C. forces and that stamps the Albuquerque Journal as the most biased of all newspapers in the entire southwest.

We question the judgment of this editorial on these grounds -- must an editor-publisher live on an island of no participation in city, county, state affairs?

The News editor has done a stint with the local and county political party of his choice (Republican). During our tenure in office of county central committee we told any listening Republicans that our first duty was to make our newspaper serve all people of the area -- which does not make us quite as good a central committee member as one should be.

Should an editor serve on his church board, on the town board, on the board of county commissioners, on a civic club board . . . he would be showing some bias during his time in office on any of these boards.

Our opinion goes like this -- many editors can serve out an appointment by Cargo, or other governor, without letting it influence his newspaper judgment - but such service is not easy.

The big majority of newspaper editors in New Mexico do not write editorials that offend either party or persons. The big majority of newspapers (for other people) follow a Chamber of Commerce line of don't say anything that would hurt the old home town, conflict of interest does enter into the picture.

Things go like this at the Lincoln County News - the editor tells our subscription department that when it comes to paying the price to read our paper we have no friends. Such thinking goes a little deeper. To do a good editorial job or a good newspaper job, a person has got to put this task before friends. A tough decision, but one we made years ago. A person mistreats his wife, then asks us to keep the news out of the paper -- our answer is, "We will not discuss that matter."

A frequent request is, "Please don't print the record of our divorce". Again we will not even discuss the matter. The same goes for juvenile cases. The matter of what to print is our business and we'll make the decisions. This is a basic policy matter, other people make it a friendship matter.

We think editors need to get involved, to live a full life and to learn what the wheels of a chamber, church, school, council go around. An editor can be an unpopular guy for standing up to be counted. Lots of doors are closed to him which recalls Harry Truman's famous phrase, "If you can't stand the heat, better stay out of the kitchen." Editors should serve, to the best of their ability.

NEW SIGNS — Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce members have approved this design for permanent redwood signs to be erected at all four entrances to the town. Signs are to be made by woodworkers at Camp Sierra Blanca, who presently turn out approximately $6 per foot of the area Forest Service signs and also others for various school districts.

Camp Constructive

'You can't win 'em all,' says Jack Schuster, retiring director of Camp Sierra Blanca, referring to the percentage of boys rehabilitated in this division of Springer. However, he says, "we do have only a small part of our boys in trouble again."

The reason for this is obvious for anyone interested in taking a short jaunt up behind Ft. Stanton. The small neat cluster of reddish brown buildings reflect the pride of the boys and men who built them.

Working with a small budget, staffers and inhabitants made (and still do) a dollar do the work of five. When funds were exhausted, boys would chip in out of their own pockets, from monies earned during "outside work" to get the necessary tools and materials.

Now, three years after dozers started pushing dirt around on a barren hillside, Camp Sierra Blanca has a well-furnished arts and crafts shop, Dr. and Mrs. A.N. Spencer providing lapidary machinery and an electric kiln for ceramic work; neat well furnished quarters for the boys; a sign shop that turns out about 80 per cent of the signs for the Forest Service and others for local school districts; and an education building that is having another wing completed.

Busy hands and busy minds help wayward boys straighten themselves out and the staff of the camp tries to help each boy find his best talents and develop them.

Proof of the way this works is being shown with the August 26 dedication of the Eddie Crabera Dining Hall, named in honor of one of the camp's "graduates" who gave his life for his country in Vietnam. Others, following in Crabera's footsteps, have redecorated and remodeled the dining hall. Monies for the materials were provided by Dr. and Mrs. A.N. Spencer.

"The boys are great to work with," comments Schuster. From the appearance and spirit of the camp, there may be a parade of "graduates" of the high calibre of Eddie Crabera.

This is what Camp Sierra Blanca is all about.

INSIDE THE CAPITOL by Fred Buckles:

Man pollutes his environment

(Fred Buckles is on vacation. The guest columnist this week is Joseph W. Palmer, executive director of the New Mexico Petroleum Industries Committee.)

Man has been polluting his environment... particularly the air he breathes and the water he drinks -- since his own beginning. In the act of taking his first bath, the first man "polluted" his bathing water. And when the first man-made fire occurred, he began to pollute the air he breathed. Since then, the accumulations of centuries and the manifold increase in the world's population have compounded what is today a very real problem -- the conservation of the nation's, in fact, the world's air and water resources.

As the chief supplier of abundant, low-cost energy, petroleum is inevitably and inextricably involved in the entire field of air and water pollution control. (The preferred expression is air and water "conservation.") What is the petroleum industry doing about it nationally? What are we doing about it in New Mexico?

The oil industry has been grappling with water pollution problems for some 40 years. Oil's comparatively early interest stemmed partly from the unique nature of the business. We not only use water, as other industries do, but also produce it as a normal part of oil field operations. Water is found in intimate contact with oil and gas in underground formations. And all oil fields produce formation water, or as it more commonly is called, "oil field brine" -- as a by-product of their operations. On the average, the volume of oil field brine is two to three times that of oil -- or two to three barrels of water for every barrel of oil.

The problem of disposing of formation water has been and still is both troublesome and expensive. It cannot be discharged into streams without damaging vegetation, fish and wildlife. In the early years, the water was held for release during periods of maximum river flow for maximum dilution. This wasn't the answer. We then turned to larger, shallower pits, "evaporation pits," so-called, in the hope that the water would evaporate, leaving salts behind.

This worked better yet, on occasion, the pits leaked and brackish water seeped into fresh water formations. This practice, both nationally and in New Mexico, is fast disappearing as state regulatory control agencies (the New Mexico Oil Conservation Commission included) increasingly prohibit open pit salt water disposal.

Oilmen now agree that despite the extra expense, the best way to dispose of formation water is to return it to where it is found -- to the producing formation or some other underground, brine-bearing formation. This is called "brine injection" and sometimes involves the leasing of land and drilling of special wells.

Some of these costs, however, are recovered through new developments in oil technology. In some cases the water is used for "secondary recovery" -- to force out some of the remaining oil in the formation. Today, one-third of all domestic oil production comes from these secondary recovery operations.

COMMENTS BY C.

The Lincoln County News is printed by the photo-offset method, which gives excellent picture reproduction. With us, photography is an important part of every issue.

Imagine our chagrin to discover every camera not working! Ysabel Hernandez of Carrizozo Hardware graciously lent her Yashica A and we were off. The pictures you saw in last week's News were taken with her camera. For a family price outfit, it turns out excellent pictures.

Thank you Ysabel.

Saturday, a long-awaited purchase was made: a Koni-Omega. All the publisher had heard from this editor was praise for this camera. Well, with the help of a friendly banker, a dream is now a reality.

Part of the advantage of this model is its suitability for taking action pictures. Now you can look forward to football game shots that show more than a milling mass of humanity and rodeo shots with something more definite than blobs of a horse and rider (?).

A man on the mend has dropped by the office a couple of times. He's Leslie Neilson of San Diego, Calif. He and his wife were injured near here in a car wreck caused by a blowout almost a month ago. He's been out of Lincoln County Municipal Hospital a few days now. His wife is scheduled to be released today and they will return to San Diego by train.

Mr. Neilson expressed his appreciation and gratitude to all in Carrizozo who helped them. He is lavish in his praise and very sincere.

We hope they return.

A White Oaks serviceman would like to hear from persons in the area: Kenneth L. Crenshaw 2 238 413 Supply Battalion 3 FGR Supply Co. Central Receipts P.O. San Francisco, Calif.

Noticed an old World War II vintage Grumman Avenger torpedo bomber parked at the Carrizozo Airport. This one had been modified for spray work. Had forgotten how big some of the older ships were.

The downpour we had Tuesday evening in Carrizozo started the rivers running again down the city streets. Last in line was Bob Mcans. He had water running in front, through and behind his establishment. Saw him busily diking up around his front door.

Another dike was busy trying to keep a torrent from pouring down on Laabs field. Seems like the west fence is almost low enough to let water run directly in. However this gentleman was winning and water was continuing west.

Spray to begin this week

Grasshopper spraying is expected to start this week in the Capitan area. The spray area includes 500,000 acres and takes in an area from the Bonito River to 30 miles north of the Capitan Mountains. Malathion is being used at the rate of 8 ounces per acre.

Apple harvest starts this week in the Hondo Valley. There is an estimated 40,000 bushels of apples in the county. The majority of these apples are in the Hondo-Tinile-Picacho area with some in the San Patricio area. Ben Sanchez gave me a well shaped Red Delicious from his orchard.

Last Saturday they were packing apples and pears at Tinile. Bert Pfingsten expects to start picking this week. The market on the apples are from $5.50 to $8.00 per box.

Apples are available at the fruit stands in the Ruidoso-Bonita Hondo valleys. Pears are available for canning for the next two weeks. They are scarred by frost but useable.

or freezing. Think of quality, availability and supply of the product. Consider your family's likes and dislikes and compare total costs. If you have a home garden or can get low cost produce, you may be ahead to can or freeze food. But if you must buy the fruits or vegetables, your final cost may be the same or more than commercially canned or frozen products.

To have a tasty product, you need to start with good quality, fresh produce. In the peak of the season, fruits and vegetables are generally highest in food value, flavor and quality and lower in price than the rest of the year.

If you plan to buy produce, learn when each product is in season. Study the supply situation for the entire nation, too. If bad weather, for example destroyed the peach crop, canned peaches would probably be higher than last year. And you might want to put up some yourself this summer.

Compare the costs of home and commercially processed fruits and vegetables. A quart of home canned fruit will serve about eight persons compared to a 10-ounce package of frozen fruits or vegetables that will usually serve three.

The incentive price for shorn wool will be 67 cents a pound for wool marketed in 1968. The announced support prices for wool and mohair are up one cent over the 1967 prices.

The incentive price plan is part of the national program to encourage increased production of wool in the United States. Each producer will get incentive payments on shorn wool, based on a percentage of his gross sales of wool.

Summer jobs for son or daughter hold double deductions when income tax time rolls around. Be sure you cash in on the extra break.

For example, parents may still take the $600 dependency deduction, no matter how much their youngster earns, provided the following conditions exist:

The young worker is a full-time student during the least five months of the year, or he is 18 years old or less.

The parents continue to furnish more than half the cost of his support.

In addition to parents' claiming a deduction, the young wage earner can claim his own $600 exemption when he files his tax return. And it is now possible for him to earn as much as $899 tax free.

Take advantage of this double deduction, when claiming your deduction, also make sure junior files a return to claim a refund on taxes withheld by his employer.

Does it pay you to can or freeze fruits and vegetables at home? You need to consider these factors before deciding if you can save money by canning

Methodist charter members attend 40th anniversary celebration

by Chaplain Kline

Four, of the seven living 1927 charter members of Capitan Methodist Church, were present last Sunday for the 40th anniversary of signing the charter by the nine original members. These four were: Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Hall Sr. of Albuquerque, and Mr. and Mrs. D.S. (Doc) Williams of Capitan. Not present, due to funeral of her son, was Mrs. Alfred (Edith Rockwell) Sloan of Mountainair.

By coincidence, this was also the 20th anniversary of the holding of the first service of worship in the present building. Chairman of the building committee, 20 years ago, was Jack Aldrich. He read the selection of Scripture at the first service at 11 a.m.

Dr. F. Lee Wilshire, former district superintendent (now refired, residing in Albuquerque) preached in the morning. The Anthem, "I Have Good News Today", was sung with sparkling spirit by 21 children in The Sunbeam Singers Choir. A trio, composed of Mrs. Clarence Smith, Dean Brandenburg and Mrs. Alfred Kline, sang, "Whispering Hope". Mrs. Billy (Veda Lou) Stephenson sang, "Keep on Believing". Communion for all present concluded this service. One hundred and eight persons filled the church.

Some sixty persons shared delicious dishes of home-prepared favorite foods, memories, plans for the future and new friendships at the Anniversary Dinner in the basement.

Dr. Joe B. Scrimshire, present district superintendent (living in El Paso) preached at 2:30 on "Christ Loved the Church and Gave His Life For It". Sunbeam singers sang "Jesus Was A Loving Teacher" and "Who Made Ocean, Earth and Sky", followed by, "A Tree's the Ncest Thing". Mrs. Dan (Joan) Griffith sang "The Lord's Prayer". Sam Cox was leader for the responsive reading. Closing hymn was "Lead On, O God of Love". Rev. Jess Raines offered the prayer of benediction.

Immediately following the above "Afternoon Anniversary Assembly", Mrs. Jack Aldrich was leader for the reading of greetings from persons unable to be present and the presentation of four new name plates for persons deceased in recent years. They were: R.G. Stewart, Reed Sherrill, Mrs. Blye Cox and Mrs. Myrum Mayfield.

Appreciation was expressed for the Mary Werner Memorial Communion Rail and the Ruby Merchant Memorial Baptismal Font.

As a result of many years of cooperative efforts between oil producers and state regulatory bodies, more than 90 per cent of all oil field brines produced now are adequately handled. Process continues in eliminating the remaining 10 per cent.

Refineries also use great amounts of water. For example, recirculation of cooling water is commonplace in refineries. Many oil refineries, especially on our seacoasts, use brackish water in their cooling systems to reduce fresh water requirements. Where high quality water is scarce, as in New Mexico, refineries treat incoming water extensively before use. In fact, many refineries can claim that their effluent is better in some respects than the water it received.

Because of their long concern over water quality and their experience in waste treatment matters, oil companies have in many cases been able to offer expert assistance to state regulatory bodies in establishing appropriate water quality criteria. This was, in fact, done in New Mexico when the oil industry generally supported in New Mexico Department of Public Health criteria for interstate stream standards as required by the Federal Water Quality Act of 1965.

Moreover, the petroleum industry and its associations, in concert with other interested business and agricultural groups in New Mexico, not only assisted in drafting but also supported passage of both air and water conservation laws in the 1967 legislature.

As a state, New Mexico is comparatively fortunate in the quality of its air and water. Air conditioned by nature and water short, New Mexico also is industry and population short. Hence the great polluters, man and his industry, have not created in New Mexico the critical problems facing many of our neighboring states.

Nevertheless, man now has the time and leisure and, yes, money to ponder and apply solutions to air and water conservation problems.

We believe a good start has been made in New Mexico through enactment of 1967 statutes on air and water quality control. The petroleum industry will continue to support these and other well-reasoned measures to conserve our air and water.

Hot weather cooling tips

LAS CRUCES -- You are driving up a long grade on a hot day pulling that vacation trailer, maybe behind a slow truck, and the red light flashes when the radiator boils. At this point you have two choices, says Charles M. Hohn, agricultural engineer with the Cooperative Extension Service at New Mexico State University:

1. Stop beside the road. With no more forward motion, it boils harder. You may get scalded if you are not careful. The sun bisters you as you stand by the car, and you may have a problem getting water. The stop may take 20 minutes or so.

2. Try the easyway. At the first red flash, open all windows wide, turn the heater on HIGH and turn the blower on HIGH as well. For about one minute everyone will be uncomfortable, but the temperature will fall back to safe driving condition immediately. The short discomfort is far better than nearly the same heat for the long roadside stop. Besides, maybe the traffic and road conditions will prevent you from pulling over anyway.

Use this technique with caution and make a radiator and coolant check as soon as practical, for it is possible that a broken hose may cause overheating without flashing the light as it should, Hohn adds.

Hydroplaning makes 'ski'

LAS CRUCES -- It takes only one-fifth of an inch of water on the road to turn your car into a boat.

"Driving on wet roads at high speeds, especially with worn or underinflated tires, can lead to disaster," points out Charles M. Hohn with the New Mexico State University Cooperative Extension Service.

What happens is a phenomenon called hydroplaning, he explains. When a vehicle travels on roads covered with as little as one-fifth of an inch of water, slush, oil or even mud, the front wheels can ride the surface of the fluid -- just like a surfboard or water skis on a lake.

When the front wheels hydroplane, the driver loses ability to steer, and most important, he loses the use of his front wheel brakes, Hohn said.

Major factors in hydroplaning are depth of fluid on the road, surface conditions, amount of tire tread, air pressure in the tires, and speed of the vehicle. Threadbare tires have lost their ability to "wipe" moisture off the road, and under-inflated tires tend to lower the speed at which a car will hydroplane.

For example, an auto with tires inflated at 24- to 30-pounds will hydroplane at speeds ranging from 50 to 57 miles-an-hour, according to the National Safety Council. Partial hydroplaning can occur at 30 miles an hour if your tires carry only 24 pounds.

At about 50 miles an hour the front tires are lifted up on a tough film of water with only ribs touching. At 55 miles an hour the front tires lose all contact, and at 60 the front wheels can come to a complete stop.

"No one knows how many traffic accidents have resulted from hydroplaning," Hohn said. It may be a key factor in many "mystery crashes"

Her car struck a lava outcrop and continued into a borrow ditch, remaining upright, reported investigating officers Benavides and Sergeant Raney who added that seat belts were not in so at the time of the accident. The entire bottom of the car was ripped out they noted.

Mrs. Castillo has been transferred from Lincoln County Municipal Hospital to Albuquerque for additional treatment for a reported broken shoulder.

The San Francisco branch mint, closed in 1955, was reopened after 10 years to coin nickels and pennies. The historic facility still is hard at work, turning out coins of all denominations.

OLD NO. 5 BACK ON JOB

An 89-year-old coin press preserved in the Nevada State Museum in Carson City was chipped back to work at the Denver mint in 1964. Within a month, Old No. 5 was stamping out coins. The museum--housed in a former mint building--is patiently awaiting the return of its prize exhibit.

Coin shortage revives old No. 5

Washington -- The United States Mint has withstood fire, earthquake, and rebellion, but it almost crumbled before the voracious parking meter.

The demands of meters and vending machines helped to create severe coin shortages in the 1960's. The situation was so bad in 1961 that a Connecticut bank was reduced to advertising in trade journals for any spare pennies that neighboring banks might part with.

The Mint increased production and took other steps to meet the demand for small change, the National Geographic Society says.

OLD NO. 5 BACK ON JOB

An 89-year-old coin press preserved in the Nevada State Museum in Carson City was chipped back to work at the Denver mint in 1964. Within a month, Old No. 5 was stamping out coins. The museum--housed in a former mint building--is patiently awaiting the return of its prize exhibit.

In the calendar year 1966, the main mint in Philadelphia and the two branches in Denver and San Francisco turned out a record 9.5 billion coins. The coin shortage was over.

The Mint had coped with the crisis without resorting to measures employed early in its history. Then the makeshift copper supply came from nails, kettles, and bands from powder kegs.

In 1792, Congress authorized the first United States Mint to be built in Philadelphia. The act establishing the mint specified the death penalty for officers or employees who debased, reduced the weight of, or stole coins.

The mint filled an urgent need, for as George Washington wrote, "Without a coinage . . . a man must travel with a pair of scales in his pocket or run the risk of receiving gold at one-fourth less than it counts." Tradition says that Washington himself contributed his personal tableware for the "half-dimes" that were the United States Mint's first coins.

CONFEDERATES SEIZED MINT

In 1862, branch mints were started in Charlotte, North Carolina; Dahlonega, Georgia; and New Orleans. The Civil War closed the first two. The Confederates ran the New Orleans mint until the city fell to Northern forces in 1862. The New Orleans mint reopened in 1879 and closed again in 1909.

The California gold rush led to the establishment of the San Francisco mint in 1854. Prospectors with pokes of gold dust and nuggets were its best customers. In four years, the San Francisco mint produced more gold coins than all United States mints had turned out before the discovery of gold in California.

The second San Francisco mint building withstood the 1906 earthquake and fires. The $200 million in currency and specie stored in its vaults helped the city revive business after the disaster.

A mint operated in Carson City from 1870 to 1893 for the convenience of nearby silver miners. The coin most in demand was a 20-cent piece--it bought two shots of whisky in mining towns. The Denver mint was established in 1906.

The main Philadelphia mint, now housed in a 1901 building, will move into a modern new home late in 1968. Automated production lines will spew out 10,000 coins a minute--enough for the hungriest parking meters.
