CARRIZOZO, N. M.

STARK, BUT BEAUTIFUL — That beauty need not be, necessarily, built of the soft and comfortable, is evidenced at every hand in the black lava Malpais country, a portion of which is included within Valley of Fires State Park (entrance, three miles north of Carrizozo on Highway 380). The lava, geologists say, is the result of the most recent volcanic activity in the continental United States. The area draws thousands of visitors annually. Carrizozo Mayor Johnson Stearns was told at Santa Fe recently that 82,000 visitors were tallied last year.

Forest Service nixes swap with Mescaleros

The U. S. Forest Service has gone on record as opposing an exchange of 2,240 acres of Lincoln National Forest with the Mescalero Apache Tribe.

The Mescaleros had asked that the land — most of it in the Sierra Blanca Ski Resort area north of Ruidoso — be exchanged for an as-yet undesignated area of Mescalero Reservation land.

Last week, the Forest Service, in a more-than-200 page "Final Environmental Statement," said it does not wish to negotiate the proposed swap with the Mescaleros.

In a letter accompanying the statement, Lincoln Forest Supervisor Kenneth L. Evans of Alamogordo, said:

"The Environmental Statement sets forth that a land exchange with the Mescalero Apache Tribe is not in the public interest and . . . the Forest Service will not enter into negotiations . . ."

Most of the land is covered in a 30-year, special-use permit issued earlier to the Mescaleros for operation of the ski resort area.

Evans told The Village Press that "this land is simply not the kind of land the Service is interested in exchanging." He said that the service does not fear, that, should the land be eventually exchanged, it would be misused.

"It is simply not the kind of land we are interested in disposing of," he said.

The Mescaleros and the U. S. Department of the Interior may appeal the Forest Service turndown of the proposed swap; they have 30 days from the date of the filing of the environmental statement in which to do so.

The exchange was first proposed last September when the Mescaleros asked that the area be transferred from the Forest Service (a U. S. Department of Agriculture arm) to the Interior Department and held by the latter in trust for the Apaches.

The Apaches said then that the land was needed so that operation of the ski resort could be properly financed.

The Forest Service opposed the swap at that point, raising questions as to environmental impact of the switched use, water rights and the rights of public users of the land.

A formal hearing on the proposal was held last January at Ruidoso.

At that hearing Wendell Chino, president of the Mescalero Tribal Council, said:

"The obvious effort to raise questions and doubts to undermine the leadership and the management capabilities of the tribe must be answered before some of the other issues raised in the Forest Service statement are answered."

The Mescaleros once owned the land proposed for exchange. In 1852, the federal government formally honored Mescalero title to the land. When, in 1873, a Presidential Executive Order created the Mescalero Reservation, the land within the proposed exchange area was included.

But a subsequent Presidential Executive Order, issued in 1876, removed the land from the Reservation and turned it over to private mining interests along with other land just north of the present northern boundary of the Reservation.

The land became part of the Lincoln Forest in 1902.

Presbyterian meeting slated

The summer slated meeting of the Presbytery of Pecos Valley, United Presbyterian Church, will convene in the First Presbyterian Church of Ruidoso Saturday, July 1, at 10 a.m.

It will be the first time that the Presbytery of Pecos Valley has conducted a meeting in the Ruidoso church since the Ruidoso congregation has become a part of the United Presbyterian Church.

The Ruidoso congregation has been preparing to host this meeting. The sanctuary is being painted this week and other major repairs have been made. The women of the church will serve dinner to the representatives from the 16 area churches that will be represented.

The moderator being on vacation, the vice-moderator, Frank Crown, will preside. Reports on the recent meeting of the General Assembly will be given by Mrs. Lois Kiddy of Hobbs, George Wright of Artesia and Pat Mechem, youth delegate of Portales.

July Forecast:

Hotter, wetter month predicted

ALBUQUERQUE — July marks the onset in New Mexico of the rainy season and July usually averages four degrees warmer than June.

And July, 1972, will fit this pattern, the National Weather Service predicts.

The upcoming month can be described in two words, the service said:

"Hot. Showery."

The balance of the service's statement:

"Thunderstorms are frequent, there is less chance for hail and the probability of tornadoes diminishes. Though average rainfall figures tend to be troublesome, they can be used rather effectively in New Mexico for this month.

"Most of the state receives between 1.5 and 3 inches of rain but extremes range from 0.8 in the most arid deserts to 5.2 inches in the wettest mountains.

"The greatest monthly rainfall on climatic records for July is 12.17 inches at Portales set in 1950. Greatest one-day precipitation is an even 7 inches recorded at Tatum, July 30, 1925.

"It's hot too. Though temperature increases tend to level off, July readings manage to average a few points above those of June.

"An average of 27 days in southern New Mexico will bring 90-degree temperatures. Mountain areas will see an average of six 90-plus days. By contrast, an occasional night in the mountains can be expected to dip to freezing.

"Average daily highs for this month vary from 98 at Jal to 70 at Harvey's Upper Ranch (10 miles northwest of Las Vegas). Average daily minimums range from 40 at Eagle Nest to 68 at Carlsbad Airport.

"Extreme temperatures are Orogrande's 116 July 14, 1934, which ties with Artesia's June 29, 1918, reading; both recording the state's all-time high temperatures."

Consumers help push up prices

A lot is being said about high food prices these days, but few explanations are being offered other than accusations as to who is to blame.

"Consumer demands and tastes have increased drastically over recent years," said Mary Ellen Payne, county home agent with New Mexico State University's Cooperative Extension Service. "Higher quality foods are demanded and more convenience items are requested. Variety and convenience are key words in the present state of food products."

Non-food items are also getting a larger share of every dollar spent at the supermarket, Mrs. Payne said. Recent studies indicate that about 28 cents of each dollar spent at food outlets goes for non-food items. For example, more total money is being spent at supermarkets for paper products and foil than for eggs.

With consumers demanding more processing and special packaging, prices of products on the grocery shelf may be quite high compared to a few years ago, the home agent explains. In many cases, home preparation may be the answer to high food prices.

The old adage of "you get what you pay for" may never be more true than it is today," said Mrs. Payne. "If we were willing to go back to the standard of living of 20 years ago, the total food bill might not seem so high. Yet, back then the consumer was paying 23 cents of his take-home dollar for food, compared with only about 16 cents today."

Where do the other 84 cents of the take-home dollar go? How about a new or second car, a camper, color television, eating out and all the other luxuries we enjoy? The prices of many of these things have increased more rapidly than prices of food items, yet we are not as conscious of such increases, Mrs. Payne said.

MR. AND MRS. LEWIS CUMMINS
... golden anniversary

Capitan couple celebrate 50th

CAPITAN -- Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Cummins of Capitan will be guests of honor Sunday, July 9, when their children celebrate their parent's golden wedding anniversary.

A open house is planned at the Cummins home here from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and "all friends and relatives are cordially invited."

Mr. and Mrs. Cummins were married Feb. 24, 1922 in the Carrizozo Methodist Church parsonage by the Rev. L. E. Conken, then the pastor.

Their marriage license -- No. 1312 -- was issued by former Lincoln County Clerk R. M. Treat. Both Mr. and Mrs. (Bessie R.) Cummins are longtime Lincoln County residents.

Mrs. Cummins came to New Mexico from Tishomingo, Okla., with her family and lived at Portales two years before moving to Lincoln County.

Cummins arrived in Roswell in May of 1905, coming with his family from Muses Mills, Ky. After about three weeks in Roswell, the family moved to Lincoln County and made their permanent home here.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Cummins attended the Capitan schools and Cummins later earned a bachelor of arts degree at New Mexico Highland University at Las Vegas.

He taught in the Capitan schools for 37 years before retiring.

His hobby is the growing of house plants -- especially geraniums and fuschias. A display of these can be seen at the Cummins Supermarket in Capitan.

The Cummins are the parents of three children and have 11 grandchildren.

The open house is being planned by the Cummins children.

Pacheco-Montoya vows said

MORIARTY -- Miss Juana Montoya became the bride of Arturo Pacheco June 3 at 2 p.m. at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church. The Rev. Father Michael O'Brien read the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Montoya of Moriarty.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Pacheco of Arabella.

Traditional nuptial music included the playing of the "Love Story" theme and selections from "Romeo and Juliet."

Baskets of tall, white gladiolas decorated the altar -- which was flanked by candelabra with white tapers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an empire style gown of imported white silk with handclipped lace, bishop sleeves and an A-line skirt enhanced with chantly medallions and ending in a chapel length train.

Her matching, lace-petal headpiece was trimmed with seed pearls and attached to a bouffant veil.

She carried a cascade of white roses encircling a white orchid.

Miss Mary Ann Montoya, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

Paco Perez of Chihuahua, City, Chi., Mexico, was best man.

The maid of honor wore a gown of orchid marquis, styled like the bride's. Her hairpiece was a wreath of orchid and pink forget-me-nots entwined with baby's breath. Her colonial bouquet was of pink carnation and baby's breath.

The bridesmaids, Lucy Montoya, sister of the bride, and Cristina and Cecelia Pacheco, sisters of the groom, wore gowns of pale pink with similar wreaths as hairpieces, and carried colonial bouquets of orchid carnations and baby's breath.

Groomsmen were Eduardo Baeza, Chihuahua, Mex., Fidel Montoya, brother of the bride, and Frank Rivera of Tome.

Flower girl Cindy Montoya, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ricardo Montoya, in a pink gown styled like bridesmaid's, carried a basket of orchid carnations and baby's breath.

Sammy Chavez, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cristobal Chavez, was the ring bearer.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Community Center. A long lace over pink covered table was centered with a tall silver candelabra with pink candles, flanked by a mass of white gladiolas and pink carnations in which were nestled two white doves. The bride and groom cut the four-tiered cake in the traditional manner.

Mrs. Celani Dominguez and Mrs. Betty Ingram presided over the punch bowls. Mary Ann Tillman served the cake. Michele Anaya presided over the bride's book.

After a wedding trip to Nevada and Arizona the couple will live in Albuquerque. The groom, a senior at N.M.S.U. majoring in micro-biology, will enter the University of New Mexico to continue studies in specialized medicine.

The bride is a graduate of Moriarty High School.

Medicare basic premium upped

The basic premium rate for the medical insurance part of Medicare will go up from $5.60 to $5.80 a month beginning July 1, according to Mrs. Christine Graves, social security field representative.

The medical insurance part of Medicare helps pay for doctor bills and a variety of other medical expenses for people 65 and over. The program is funded by individual premiums matched by the Federal Government.

"The 20-cent increase in the premium in July compares to a 30-cent increase in 1971 and a $1.30 increase in 1970. The low increase this year reflects savings in the administration of Medicare as well as lower anticipated medical costs because of the Price Commission's guidelines limiting physicians' fee increases to an average 2 1/2 per cent a year," Mrs. Graves said.

The Medicare law requires an annual review of the cost of the medical insurance program. The premium rate is adjusted to cover the estimated medical expenses of Medicare patients during the 12 months beginning July 1.

Mrs. Graves may be seen at the County Commissioner's Room, Lincoln County Court House in Carrizozo, the fourth Wednesday of each month from 10 a.m. to noon.

There I met Alice Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Arvel Runnels, Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey and Mrs. Joe Disselkoen and daughter Jackie Ray of El Paso. with them. I appreciated their gracious hospitality and certainly did have happy moments with them.

The drive was beautiful. So green and many shades. There were many fisherman campers around Bonita Dam. The ladies seemed to throw their line just as easy and far as the men. All seemed so relaxed and happy, in the cool of the evening.

I then drove thru the cut off from Bonito to Nogal highway and there went to the ranches. Home by 9:30 just ahead of a terrific electric storm and one tenth of an inch of rain.

Santa Fe Opera opens July 7

SANTA FE - The first two nights of Santa Fe's 16th opera season will feature a new favorite and an old, both under the baton of conductor, founder, and general director John Crosby.

The new favorite is Offenbach's comic opera "La Grande-Duchesse de Gerolstein," a hit of the 1971 season, which has been chosen to open the season on Friday evening, July 7.

The old favorite is "Madama Butterfly" which was the first opera performed by the company in 1957 and the first to inaugurate the new theatre in 1968.

Until last season's Santa Fe production, "La Grande-Duchesse" had not been staged in this country since the days of Lillian Russell.

The score provides an opportunity for singers of style and comic ability.

This season's production will feature the debut of the Canadian mezzo-soprano Huguette

Tourangeau as the impetuous young Duchesse. The Montreal born singer was a finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Company and has appeared with the opera companies of San Francisco, Boston, Seattle, Vancouver.

Another Santa Fe debut is that of American tenor John Walker as Fritz, the Duchesse's favorite soldier. A native of Illinois, John Walker has appeared with major opera companies throughout the United States, Canada and Europe.

Jack Davison, formerly an apprentice with the Santa Fe Opera, returns as a soloist to play Baron Grog, who is both the narrator and commentator on the drama. Since his training period here, Davison has gone on to major roles with New York City Center Light Opera, Washington Opera Society, the Boston Opera Group and a number of musicals on Broadway.

Hip hip hooray for Smokey!

And hooray for Capitan!
And hooray for taxpayers!

Hooray for taxpayers?

Yes. Hooray for the people from 21 states ... from all over the good old USA - who have helped us have better city and county services by sharing our tax burden.

Did You Know?

That before Mohaco developed the Spires Ranch into tracts and home sites ... 4,600 acres of land south and west of Capitan was rendered at only $1.65 an acre, as grazing land? Now there are about 700 different people owning and paying taxes on this acreage - a acreage now rendered at from $200 to $1,800 an acre, plus improvements. This means there is tax money rolling into our county and our town from 21 states - and several foreign countries (including Africa).

Did You Know?

That our city tax rate has dropped from $8.30 per $100 in 1965 to $5.10 per $100 in assessed value in 1971-'72? Having more people to share the burden has been a factor in the decrease.

Did You Know?

That these Mohaco landowners (outside Capitan) pay a road tax of $1 per 100 feet of road to Lincoln County? At least 60 miles of road on Mohaco land are taxed at $1 per 100 feet. And we, the developers of Mohaco, have not asked help from Lincoln County to maintain these roads even once? We have voluntarily kept up our own roads from the beginning of our development in 1965.

Some of these land owners have retired to our area and become friends and neighbors - but most of them hold Capitan, Lincoln County, and New Mexico in their dreams ... they look forward to a day they can vacation here or retire here in our beautiful country.

We, the good neighbors of Capitan-Mohaco, will be here to welcome them when their dreams come true.

Meantime, thanks partner, for your tax money ... money that helps us along the road to becoming even better than the place of your dreams.

Los turistas: their care and feeding

People meeting people . . .

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The State of New Mexico has just issued - and distributed on a limited basis - a booklet advising that all of us be kind to tourists. And no wonder, tourism is a major prop to New Mexico's economy, directly and indirectly. It behooves us all, therefore, to treat them tenderly. Here's some of what the state advises we do when dealing, in Governor Bruce King's term, with "our most precious commodity.")

WHY NEW MEXICO?

Perhaps the main reason more and more people keep pouring into New Mexico every year is because it's one of the few places left in the United States with breathable air and elbow room.

Other things bring them, too. After years of watching cowboys and Indians gallop across T.V. and movie screens, many want to see the real thing. At one time or another, most have read about the Spanish conquest of the Southwest Indian territory, and they've heard of the present harmonious blend of Indian, Spanish and Anglo cultures. Now, they are anxious to see where it all happened. Then there are those who could care less about real people and places; they just want to relax and have a good time in a place that's different from home.

Tourists come from everywhere, but mostly it seems, they come from neighboring plains states. Usually they are working people who have been saving and planning for a trip all year - maybe longer - and are expecting great things of a two-week vacation. They're determined to relax and not worry about money or having to do anything - no cleaning or cooking or fixing. For a little while, they're free, independent and cared for.

A few tourists lose all inhibitions, pretend they are royalty and get so caught up in giving orders that they come on like super family. When this happens, fix your face in a grin, and repeat the following line under your breath several times:

Tourists mean a lot to me
They're a smokeless industry

That isn't a riot mob coming toward you, it's a tourist "family."

Tourist families tend to be much larger than the facilities available to them. Once the word gets around that someone is taking a trip, everybody has to get in on the act. Uncles, nieces, unheard-of cousins, the neighbors, and, of course, the kids, because Grandma has come too, and there was no one else to leave them with. The kids have brought their best friends, the dog, the turtle . . . The point is, that by the time they get to where they're going, they don't much like each other - that's why they're so happy to see you.

There you stand - calm, unruffled, cheerful - welcoming them to New Mexico with a warm smile and a helpful gleam in your eye. Never mind what you're thinking; it's what they see and hear that counts.

Suddenly they feel almost human again. They think you're wonderful. They think everybody in New Mexico is wonderful, and all because you have been repeating the second magic formula under your breath:

A tourist a day
keeps the wolf away

Tourists never pull into a service station just for gas. Usually they start requesting and questioning before the car comes to a full stop. Courteously you show them the way to the restrooms, vending machines, trashcans, and anything else they ask for. You knew all along they weren't stopping just for gas.

THE PIT STOP

While the family takes a station break, the driver becomes firmly attached to you. He looks over your shoulder while you're checking things under the hood, and follows you around while you're wiping the windows. This is because he misses not having anything to do, and, of course, he can't do anything because he's on vacation. Give the poor fellow a break; let him hold the gas trigger. That way, if the gas spills over, it won't be your fault. Rested and refreshed, the family climbs back into the car, and the driver, who had plenty of time to do so earlier, asks for directions.

Carefully you point out landmarks that will make getting to wherever they're going easier. The wife asks that you draw them a map and hands you a paper towel from a sippy under the seat. It looks very much like the kind you keep in the restrooms.

Satisfied that they've understood your directions, you wave them off with a cheery "enjoy yourselves" and head for the restrooms to make a routine check for neatness and supplies. In the first one, you quickly lock yourself in so no one can hear you mumbling:

Every tourist I greet with a grin
Will make a point of coming again

RED CHILI OR GREEN CHILI

The tourist family usually wanders around restaurant tables in a pack, looking undecided. You're undecided too, torn between leading them to one of your tables, and guilt ridden because for an instant you were hoping they'd go somewhere else.

Your kind nature gets the best of you, and you hurry over and smilingly invite them to sit down. They look grateful and settle in.

Menus in hand, they look doubtful. "what's a soap-a-peela?" Patiently you explain the unfamiliar foods, and warn them that some of the chili dishes are pretty hot. They're willing to experiment - all but the kids; they want hamburgers and cokes, with lots of ice and straws.

During the meal you check on their needs. You bring them extra napkins and two pitchers of water, never once saying "I told you so." You smile at the children as they spill mustard and catsup on one another, and reassure the embarrassed parents that it's all right. You respond to their inquiry about sites to see by giving explicit directions to historic sites.

Check in hand, you thank them for stopping and invite them back. They leave, looking happy and satisfied.

You clear the table and pocket the "generous" tip. Back in the kitchen you pause for a little cry, but in between sobs, you manage to choke out:

Every tourist I put at ease
Will send friends for me to please

The spokesman for a tourist family always makes the overnight arrangements. Sometimes he's very brisk and businesslike, but often he's too tired to care what you give him as long as it has beds in it. He breathes a sigh of relief as you graciously lift the responsibility from his shoulders, and meekly follows you into a room, well-stocked with towels, glasses, pitchers, and everything the family will need for comfort. You show them how things work, and assure them that cleaning will be done only after they're up and out.

FOUR EXTRA COTS, PLEASE

The sight of a family collapsed on beds and chairs warms your heart, and you whistle all the way back to the desk.

The next morning, looking alert and eager, they all troop in for information on sight-seeing, restaurants and shops. You have a friendly chat with them, suggest places they can visit, and tell them how to get there.

Just as they're returning, the maid stops by to report that the room was full of feathers and the pillow cases were empty. "More pillows," you whisper, and turn to ask them how their day was. They're exhausted but happy, and want to keep the room for a week. You let them know how delighted you are to have them.

After they leave, you sit down at the switchboard, and whisper into the headset:

A tourist made comfortable
during his stay
Will be so at home
he won't go away

Tourists act strangely in shops. They dash about, bumping into each other and the merchandise, shouting "look, look," and "what's this for?" You smile calmly, answer their questions, and offer to help.

While showing native crafts, you tell how and where they were made, and pretend not to notice that someone is polishing his shoe with the corner of a Navajo rug. You suggest gifts for their friends and relatives back home, and praise the selections they make - two Apache tear drops, one tomahawk, four Mexican jumping beans . . .

While wrapping the merchandise, you comment on how the sombrero the lady is trying on goes with her short jump suit. She glows with pleasure and buys it.

They all leave looking well pleased with their purchases, and promise to come again. You say you'll look forward to seeing them.

As soon as they're through the door, you walk casually to counter, pick up a sales slip, and purposely scribble:

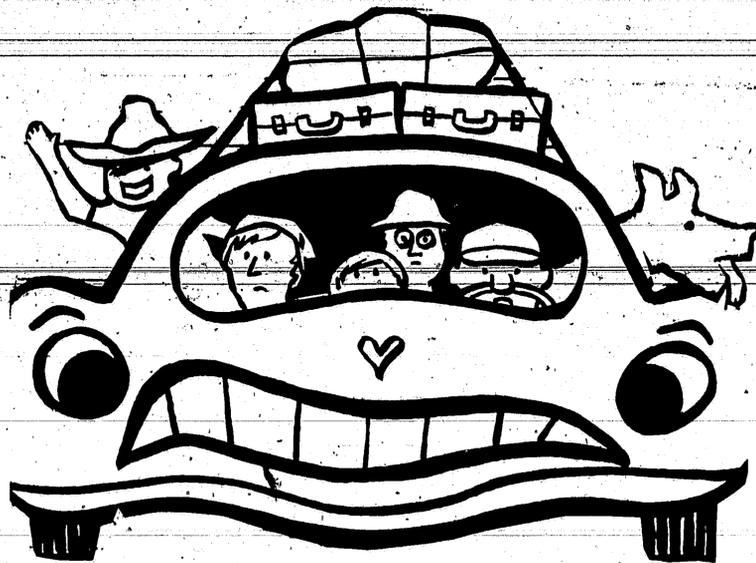

Each tourist I serve with courtesy
Is sure to return and ask for me

Bass planted at the Butte

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES--The Department of Game and Fish planted Elephant Butte Lake with 100,000 largemouth bass last weekend, using a helicopter to distribute the fish to various areas of the lake. The planting marked the first time that a helicopter had been used to plant warm water fish in New Mexico.

The 100,000 bass, one inch in length, were obtained from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, through a request made by the department last year. Largemouth bass, walleye and northern pike, all obtained through the federal hatcheries, are planted in the lake almost every year. These plants are made in several of the state's warm water reservoirs that have fluctuating water levels during spawning periods. The maintenance plants are made to insure continued good populations of game fish.

Helicopters have been used in recent years to plant trout in remote waters of New Mexico. R. L. Brashears, the Department's Chief of Fisheries, came up with the idea of using the chopper to better distribute the bass in areas of the lake that has more suitable bass habitat.

QUESTIONS, QUESTIONS!

Tourists ask questions because they don't know you well enough to talk about anything else. They ask about everything, and when they can't think of anything, they ad lib something up. You're much more responsible. If you don't know the right answer, you find out what it is.

Usually there are maps and pamphlets on hand that will answer most questions about New Mexico. But the powers that be can't think of everything, so you keep a ready store of information in your head about things like where banks, stores, doctors, mechanics and campgrounds are; what there is to see and do in the area, and how to get there and do it; some of the State's history, and what's happening in it now. The tourist is delighted to learn so much, and is impressed with your knowledge. When asked how people in New Mexico make a living, you simply stare long and pointedly at your visitor, and smile wistfully. He understands, and is so anxious to see to it that no one goes without work, that he rushes right off to see, do and buy everything.

You gaze into the nearest mirror and admire yourself. Very deliberately you smile at the diplomat in the glass, who smiles back and sings:

In they come, out they go
And all think I'm New Mexico

Males noisiest:

Cicadas sing in NM summer

Cicadas, commonly called locusts, sing loudly on summer days in New Mexico. While the males only make a lot of noise, the females are busy laying eggs. The egg laying activity of the cicada is the most injurious thing that these insects do.

But they also cause home gardeners quite a bit of anxiety because of the mysterious holes they leave when the mature nymphs emerge, the hollow shells of skin they leave when they change to winged adults and the dead and broken twigs that appear on shrubs and trees.

There are several species of cicadas in New Mexico. All of them spend their immature or nymph stage in the ground. The number of years that the nymphs spend in the soil varies with species. Some spend one or two years while others spend five to nine years. An eastern species that isn't present in New Mexico spends 17 years in the soil and is called the 17-year locust. During their stay in the soil they suck their food from the roots of trees. However, their feeding does not seem to injure the trees.

When the nymphs mature they dig their way out of the soil, leaving a clean round hole one-fourth to three-fourths of an inch across depending on the size of the species. These wingless nymphs crawl up on the nearest tree trunk. There they shed their skin for the last time. They leave behind their digging legs and develop two pairs of strong wings.

The males sing to attract their mates. After mating the females insert their eggs in twigs and small branches of most trees and shrubs. As they lay their eggs with a knife-like laying device, they severely damage the twigs by splitting the bark lengthwise. The damaged twigs often die from the egg-laying site to the tip. Damaged twigs are easily broken by winds.

Spraying to control cicadas is usually not recommended. They are difficult to control because they must be killed by contact since they are not feeding. They are strong fliers and reinestation can be very rapid if the entire area is not sprayed.

If a valuable shrub or tree is being used for egg laying, some degree of protection can be obtained by spraying with carbaryl (Sevin) every three to five days during the two weeks to a month that cicadas are active.

He knows that look, it means he's qualified to change the oil in a three year old cream puff.

She already has them pegged for four children's portions and a cup of coffee.

He's not about to step in front of that $19.95 camera.

What d'ya know about rodeo?

It's rodeo time in Village Press country. If you're new to rodeo watching (and more and more people come as spectators to rodeo each year), here's a handy compendium of rodeo terms, its "lingo," so to speak:

Average-Prize money is paid to the best of each go-round, contestants with more than one go-round are paid for the best average of all the go-rounds.

Buford-A calf or steer that is small, weak, or more easily thrown or tied than the others.

Crow-hopping-A jolting, back-snapping step peculiar to some bucking horses.

Day money-The winner of each go-round is paid prize money.

Dally-Looping the rope around the saddle horn after roping a calf or steer.

Day-Money Horse-A bronc, tough enough to earn a high score, but not tough enough to unload his rider.

Dink-Poorly trained roping or steer wrestling horse.

Draws Dead-A cowboy who draws stock impossible to win on, such as a saddle bronc that refuses to buck, or a steer that turns back or balks.

Dusted-Being thrown from a bucking horse or bull into the arena dirt.

Earing Down-Subduing a wild horse by twisting its ear.

Fishing-A roping term; throwing a wide loop that settles clean on the calf's neck... a near miss that makes a catch.

Flank (or Flank Strap)-A strap around the flank of a bronc or bull that is pulled tight. The animals will buck hard and high to rid himself of the "flank."

Goose Egg-No score in a riding event for bucking off or otherwise being disqualified.

Go-Round-Each contestant competing on one head of stock for each event. The number of go-rounds will vary with the size of the rodeo.

Gravy Run-Drawing an animal that makes it easy to win.

Honda-The eye is one end of a rope through which is passed the other end of the rope to form a loop as seen on the bull ropes.

Hooy-The half hitch that completes the tie of a calf's legs by the roper. The tie usually consists of two wraps around three legs and the hooy around two of them to hold it secure.

Hooker-A bull who uses his horns, throwing his head back and around to rid himself of a rider.

Hot-Shot-A prod which gives a slight electric sting. Cowboys have been known to use it on each other as well as on stubborn or lazy animals.

Piggin' String-A short length of light rope used to tie the feet of a roped calf or steer.

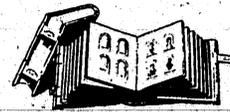

Pulling Leather-Holding onto any part of the saddle. Pulling leather disqualifies a saddle bronc rider.

Rank-A rough, tough animal.

Re-Ride-When the performance of the stock is unsatisfactory the judges can issue a re-ride in that go-round for a contestant.

Re-Run-Stock used for the second time, in the same rodeo.

Spinner-A bull that turns in tight circles to throw his rider.

State rodeo set for 4-Hers

CLOVIS - New Mexico's young horsemen and horsewomen, too, will complete in the annual New Mexico Statewide 4-H Rodeo in Clovis July 6-8, according to Billy Dictson, associate Curry County Extension Agent.

Four hand-tooled saddles will be awarded to the all-round winning junior and senior boys and girls, Dictson said. Belt buckles will be given to the event winners.

Events for senior boys are bareback riding, ribbon-roping, tiedown-roping, and bull-riding. Junior boys will compete in ribbon roping, steer riding, break-a-way roping and barrel racing. Events for both junior and senior girls are barrel racing, pole bending and goat-tying. Performances will start each day at 8 p.m.

books

Published this month by the University of New Mexico Press, PHILMONT: A HISTORY OF NEW MEXICO'S CIMARRON COUNTRY, by Lawrence R. Murphy; University of New Mexico Press; 1972. Bibliography included.

This is a comprehensive story of a large section of northeastern New Mexico beginning with the pre-Spanish inhabitants and concluding with the development of Philmont Scout Ranch in a part of the region.

Included in the descriptive history are stories of the development of the Beaubien and Miranda Land Grant into large ranches, such as the Lucien Maxwell empire, an account of gold mining which extends into the 1940s, information about railroading and lumbering, and the story of the Colfax County War, which was settled only after the U. S. Supreme Court settled the issue of the validity of the original land grant.

Best researched are the chapters describing the Cimarron region after contact began from the United States in the early 19th Century.

Also included is an 11-page selected bibliography which will be useful for students of New Mexico history.

DHI board meet at Fort Stanton

FORT STANTON--Improvements and expansions - physical and administrative, actual and planned - were inspected and reviewed Monday at Fort Stanton Hospital in a daylong meeting of the board of the New Mexico Department of Hospitals and Institutions.

Board members toured the facility after receipt of a report from Fort Stanton Administrator Jerald Myers.

Inspected were recently-completed messing and related food service areas, and renovations underway on a student canteen and recreation room.

Mrs. Arlene Hanna, Director of Cottage Life, said the facility shortly will be receiving 92 beds, 82 mattresses, a number of tables and chairs, and other "badly needed" furniture. These will be purchased from capital funds approved by the 1972 session of the State Legislature.

Myers told board members that he has recruited a speech therapist intern and two psychiatric interns who will report for duty in September from Eastern New Mexico State University.

The facility now has one psychiatric intern from the same university.

Mrs. Beth Capps, director of Education, told the board that Fort Stanton shortly will initiate a "modified unit system" in which a team of staff workers work with individual groups of students "within the cottages."

"Every member of the staff here is a trainer, involved in working with our children," Mrs. Capps said.

She noted that most students in the state institution are "primarily the severely and profoundly retarded." She said that less-handicapped students are being placed in community programs away from the institution.

"We are gearing our program to prepare students for placement in sheltered workshops," she said.

Myers said Fort Stanton remodeling will continue "on an orderly basis" and that staffers will be hired for new intermediate care facility.

He said "we hope to fill 100 of 120 intermediate care beds within the next couple of months."
