Paul and Eleanor Payton, NEWS publishers, are in Kansas enjoying, we trust, that time of the year in the Midwest that inspired such songs as 'Harvest Moon' and 'September Song.'

We hope Paul is hearing the call of the wild goose as he pulls in the biggest fish every taken from a Kansas lake. Our lovely Eleanor will probably be sampling the culinary delights of the O'Donnal kitchen in flagrant disregard of her promise to our secret sorority.

Before Paul left we decided to initiate a collection of idiomatic phrases that seem destined to fade from the language if not preserved.

It all began one day when Len Dunning said, "That's as common as an old button shoe." Somewhere there lodged the thought that not many of today's children have seen a button shoe, and it is certain such shoes are not common.

Later, I commented to a member of the under 30 generation that I had on my best bib and tucker. A blank look (not uncommon) indicated a certain unfamiliarity with that expression. Indeed, I am not at all sure about the design and use of a tucker.

Paul added an expression or so to the list (one not printable in a paper destined for the high school library) and we decided to appeal to readers for additions to our lexicon of the past. Credits will be given in lieu of pay.

While pondering such sayings, there came to mind a certain spring and summer of many years ago. It was surely a magical time of memory spinning proportions. That was the year I was courted by a young gentleman who lived and worked in a town some distance away. He was a fine manly thing, as slender and tall as a pine, with hair black as a raven's wing, and eyes the blue of the Western sky. His voice was deep and mellow and could surely charm the birds from the trees.

Small wonder he created fancies in a young woman's mind—dreams of organdy, ribbons and rose covered bows; of unicorns, starlight and jasmine scented showers.

The telephone would ring and that amazing voice saying, "I will be there Saturday night, little darling; the good Lord willing and the creek don't rise."

There came a Saturday when that wonderful man failed to show. At the next call I rather tartly complained that there had not been enough rain to wash out any bridges.

My gentleman friend replied, "Little darling, it must have been the good Lord acting. Rose Ann Williams twisted her ankle as I was crossing the street. Surely I had to help the little thing (she was a good 5 feet 9 inches) home. It was only polite to stay for lemonade and cookies. One thing led to another and it was too late to travel on. But never you mind, my Mary. For you are a fine looking, high minded sort of a girl and I intend to make you my bride and the mother of my children."

As the summer roses faded and the first chill of fall called, my gentleman's visits became less frequent. Since the rains never came that year, I began to think the only part the good Lord had in preventing his visits was the creation of a certain curve-out at the cheek and curve-in at the waist of one Rose Ann. Certain observations led me to suspect that it wasn't the good Lord but that Rose Ann who became more and more willing. By the time the hills were touched with glorious gold and red, I had packed away that romance with the other bittersweet learnings of life, hurrying on with God's other creatures to ready for the winter ahead.

The years have passed. The blossom has become the promised peach—the grape delivered forth a heavy wine.

The blood hum and heart hope of youth have grown into a soul singing search—a different time and a different pace.

As the seasons of the year give forth perfumes equally enticing and marvelous, so do the times

The sick, lame, blind, still pray at Three Rivers

by Mrs. Harold Shepperd

A very special event will take place in Tularosa next month. A benefit dance will be held on Saturday, October 4, to raise money for the Santo Nino de Atocha Church at Three Rivers. The dance will be held at the American Legion Hall from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Why would such efforts be made to raise money for such a small chapel in a comparatively isolated valley? Who goes there? What does the chapel look like and what is the rather strange legend and tradition behind it?

The white adobe Chapel topped with traditional red Mexican tiles gleams in the tranquil atmosphere of the secluded valley. In the tower hangs an old bell. The white Chapel encased among the lush greenness of the fertile ground stands in stark clarity against the vivid blue sky. The only sound disturbing the silence is the river rustling through the salt cedars across the dirt road from the Shrine. This is the Shrine to Santo Nino de Atocha at Three Rivers, New Mexico. It is as old as the last century and as new as today—as faithful pilgrims still make their way to its door. As you push open the massive wooden door, which in itself speaks of ancient times, the image of the Santo Nino, centered behind the altar on a pedestal, welcomes you. Seated, the statue dressed in a wide-brimmed hat and a long blue cape, holds a staff in his right hand with an attached gourd for water. In his left hand hangs a tiny basket. Surrounding him are flowers and a new pair of tiny white shoes. Hanging heavily from his arm are hundreds of rosaries and medals. His basket is laden with milagros and cards. In a far corner stands a child's crutches and a small pair of badly twisted shoes.

Each part of the statue's mode of dress represents miracles associated with the Santo Nino where his legend began centuries ago in Spain. A young boy, believed to be the child Jesus, arrived tired and hungry in the village of Atocha, Spain. He was dressed as a boy pilgrim with plumed hat and cape. After he was given food and drink, miracles of healing took place. Thereafter images of the Holy Child were represented in the style of the boy pilgrim. Devotion to Santo Nino spread as other miracles were attributed to him. The basket in his left hand represents the container of food he carried as he appeared to the starving prisoners of Atocha bringing them food. Another legend concerns a man dying of thirst in the desert. When the boy pilgrim appeared and offered him the small gourd of water, the man turned away with disdain. The child ordered him to drink. The dying man found to his amazement that the tiny vessel refilled itself with water time and again until his thirst was quenched.

Reverence for the Santo Nino spread from Spain to Mexico and northward into New Mexico. The first Shrine in southern New Mexico was built to the Santo Nino in 1840 in the village of Dona Ana by Epitacio and Rosita Barela. Early settlers record as the image was brought for the first time into the isolated areas around the state, it would start raining, often ending a serious drought. As story of the rains spread from settlement to settlement farmers began to pray to him as they did to San Isidro and his fame as an agricultural patron grew. People believed the little Saint walked the fields at night to keep them tranquil and productive. Hence arose the custom of pilgrims bringing to the Chapels small shoes to replace "his sandals worn out from so much walking!"

The early colonists, living in fear of the Indians, prayed to the Christ-child not only for the safety of their fields, but of their bodies too. Often, after a raid, the settlers were left with severed hands or feet or heads...and they began to pray specifically for the protection of certain limbs. This suggests the foundation of the custom today of bringing milagros (medals) and hanging them on his statue. Even today, tradition holds that each medal of a leg, arm, head, etc. hung on the statue signifies the healing of an illness or infirmity. Most of the people have left the valley. Only a few families remain. But the Shrine which was once the gathering place for farmers, homesteaders and ranchers has not been abandoned. In this fast moving century of technology and enlightened religion, petitioners still return to the Shrine. They come from as far as Canada and New York and as close as Tularosa and Alamogordo. In times of stress and illness; in times of gratified thanksgiving, the faithful still seek the solace from the little Shrine at Three Rivers. Some of the people are certainly descendants of early settlers. Others may simply be devoted to the Holy Child. Who they all are or when they come is not always known. The Chapel is always open and every single Santo Nino de Atocha Church at Three Rivers is the gathering place for families who once inhabited the area. Efforts of these people have maintained the chapel in its original condition.

Six hundred miles Subdivisions and ranches may compete for county roads

Part II (Last week the NEWS began a series on the problems created by land development. Lincoln County is presently reviewing is ordinances relating to subdivisions.)

There are 17,000 miles of county-maintained roads in Lincoln County. It is probable that a number of rural residents will object to the use of the word "maintained".

This is no criticism of the county road department. It is a financial fact. Of those 17,000 miles, 44 miles are rated "heavy use", according to County Manager Les Olson. 288 miles get moderate use mark and the rest are designated "light use".

There are 600 miles of roads inside subdivision in Lincoln's intensive development area. This 8 township area is covered by a report now under study by the County Commissioners.

Developers are responsible for subdivision road construction and maintenance for the first four years after opening. After the county takes over, based on present day costs, the tax payer's bill will be about $40 per year per mile.

If development is orderly and efficient, there is little doubt that increased valuations would more than pay the road repair bill. Sporadic growth and subdivision that exceeds the demand would be certain, however, to create financial problems for the county!

Ranchers in remote areas already have problems of access in rainy weather. It seems unreasonable to add to the county's road problems when proper planning could improve rather than damage the situation.

The Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development Commission, in preparing the eight township study for the County recommended "The reasonable growth limits of developing areas should be defined so as to prevent premature platting of isolated land that leads to uneconomic extension of public facilities and services."

Reduced to simple language this means that there are not likely to be buyers for much remote land. As stated before, potential residents like the idea of country living when it is not really primitive. Most retired people need to be close to shopping and medical facilities. The county cannot afford to maintain roads in a whole subdivision for a 10 per cent occupancy.

The report further recommended "Proposed development where the allowed average residential density will exceed three housing units per gross acre should be required to provide street paving, water, sewer, drainage, solid waste systems as well as land for parks, schools and other public amenities. The Board...shall also encourage highly developed area adjacent to existing municipal limits to become annexed by the nearest municipality."

This, in essence, means the developer should pay for the beginning services that the residents are going to require. Part of his profits should go into the needs of the future rather than delaying the expense and placing the burden on tax payers. If it is not feasible for the developer to provide such services, then the land should not be developed.

Next week the NEWS will explore the tax problems and land values that relate to subdivisions.

Commissioners OK Lincoln work

Restrooms, parking and road access will be constructed in Lincoln opposite the pageant area.

Last week the Lincoln County commissioners agreed to pay a share of the $12,000 bill for the improvements. The commissioners approved a land lease agreement with the Old Lincoln Memorial Commission for the site preparation. $6,000 of the bill will be federally funded, $3000 state and $3000 local.

The commissioners also looked into Courthouse plumbing and heating problems. Plumbing Contractor Jesse English told the County that emergency repairs would run $2,887. English said there were other immediate repairs and offered to do the job for cost plus 10 per cent on materials and $15 an hour on labor. The commission tentatively approved the offer.

The commissioners also gave attention to the road department. Guy Henly was given a salary of $850 a month as temporary road superintendent. Tommy LaMay will receive $675 as chief blademans and flagmen will get $550.

The commissioners interviewed applicants for road superintendent Wednesday.

Plans for an auction of county equipment were made. Equipment approved for sales by the state finance department will be sold at a public auction Oct. 25 at 1 p.m. at the county yard in Capitan. A list of such equipment will be published in the NEWS.

No winner in Contest this week

No one came even close to estimating the 51 to 0 score in the Zozo game. Such horrors are evidently beyond the mind of man.

There were a couple of near guesses in the Capitan-Vaughn game which was 36-12. No one guessed the Corona victory of 12 to 0 over Roy.

The NEWS was almost sure that three chances would produce a winner, but the ten bucks goes into next week's jackpot.

All delivered cards must be in the NEWS office by game time. Out of town cards must be postmarked before game time. WE DO CHECK. Good luck next week!

Three Capitan business hit

Three business establishments in Capitan were hit by burglars sometime early Sunday morning.

The apparently non-professional job appeared to be the work of intoxicated persons, according to Sheriff Leandro Vega. Capitan Builders Supply, the Capitan Branch of the Ruidoso State Bank and the Branding Iron Saloon were taken for a total considerably under $1000, it is estimated.

At the saloon, the burglars gained entry through a vent in the roof, then cut a hole in the ceiling. The burglars emptied the pool table of change, perhaps paused for a beer and took with them some more beer and whiskey.

There was no sign of forcible entry at the hardware store. Manager Gary Palmquist believes they got in through the rear. Missing were chain saws and other tools.

The back door of the bank was forced but the robbers found no money and the safe remained intact.

Thus far, the sheriff has made no arrests in the case.

Gary Palmquist, manager of Capitan Builders Supply, stands in the back doorway of the business which was hit by burglars early Sunday morning.

Joe Ventura says it must have been a skinny person who came through the roof and ceiling of the Branding Iron Saloon in Capitan Sunday morning. The burglars made off with pool table change, some bottles of liquor and evidently stopped for a can of beer.

BSI contributes $5000 to Boys

New Mexico Boys Ranch received additional funds today to go toward the completion of their BSI dorm, according to Ted Bonnel, chief executive officer of Bank Securities, Inc. A color television set was raffled off, providing over five thousand dollars in additional funds for the building. Mike Kull, executive director of Boys Ranch, was given a check for the proceeds.

The Boys Ranch, which is over 31 years old this year, provides a healthy Christian home for up to 50 boys of school age. The Ranch is south of Albuquerque and is wholly dependent on private donations. It is not federal or state supported and has no affiliations with any one church or civic group.

"This is just what we needed to complete the BSI dorm for the little boys," said Mr. Kull. "It means a lot to the 14 gradeschool boys living there."

The five thousand dollar check was handed to Mr. Kull by American Bank of Commerce senior vice president, Bill Hunter. It represents another in a series of checks contributed to the Ranch by the employees, officers, and directors of Bank Securities Inc. during the past two years. More than fifteen thousand square feet of buildings have been added to the Ranch through their efforts.

The winner of the Magnivox Home Entertainment Center was Paul Dressler of Albuquerque.

The game started with Capitan Tigers kicking off to Hagerman Bobcats. The Bobcats scored early in the game with Mario Morales, 32, running around the left end. Capitan had control of the ball when pitched to the halfback, Robbie Richardson, 45, was fumbled but quick Kenny Cummins, 10, picked up the ball and ran 93 yards for a beautiful touchdown. The score was now tied 6 all. At this point Hagerman dominated the game with 5 more TD's and a 2 point play. The Hagerman Bobcats ended the game 38-6. Senior Kenny Cummins rushed for 174 yards, passed for 23 out of 238 yards. The Capitan Tigers tangle with Vaughn Eagles Friday night, September 26. Kick off time is at 7:30 p.m. at the Capitan Field.

A Bowl of Activities

A BUNCH OF WISDOM!
After a decade of educational "innovation," parents, school boards and students are demanding a return to the ABCs.

On balance, the growing call for a return to the basics seems a healthy signal that Americans are no longer willing to accept a face value-child-like-open educational system.

There are two special public schools in Pasadena, Calif., that are of interest to parents and educators all across the country. One is the Pasadena Alternative School a two year old experiment, where students are given individual freedom. There are no dress rules, no grades, no limits and no discipline—it is proving to be utter bedum!

About two miles away stands Pasadena's other special public school, the John Marshall Fundamental School—a bastion of traditional education. Letter grades, examinations, strict dress and the curriculum is strict and basic.

What is the significance of the astonishing contrast in the two schools? This: the fundamental school has a total of 1700 pupils and a waiting list of 1500. The so-called "Open Education" school has an enrollment of 500—and very few waiting. This suggests that U.S. education's so called wave of the future has crested. Parents and school boards and pupils are demanding that the schools stop experimenting and get back to basics in reading, writing, arithmetic, and standards to live up to... A CUP OF HEALTH!

1. What can I do for varicose veins?
Answer: One theory is that varicose veins are caused by eating a diet low in fiber. Fiber is abundant in whole grains, bran, fresh raw fruits and vegetables.

2. Do honey and blackstrap molasses contribute to decay of the teeth?

Answer: Any concentrated sugar kept in contact with teeth will produce decay in susceptible people. Honey and blackstrap molasses are less harmful.

Sports telecaster: "We interrupt your marriage to bring you the football season."

RECIPE THIS WEEK

1/2 medium bell pepper, chopped

1/2 medium tomato peeled and chopped

1 tablespoon onion flakes or better, a onion

1/2 cup celery

1/2 teas. garlic salt or a clove of garlic

1/4 cup vinegar

2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce

1 medium cucumber, peeled and diced

AROUND THE BOWL

Nogal is warm and sunny for a change, the wild flowers are still blooming, and things are happening—First of all if you turn your head just slightly while driving past the Post Office you will see a new well being drilled—at the Whitakers home. Sue Stearns and Bob are still working on their landscaping.

C. Dunton was the most distinguished person at Weight-Watchers—She has been a member for many years and has held the same slim figure during this time. We congratulate her!

The Nogal Church had a face lift last week with the help of Sue Stearns, Ralph F. Miles, W. and others. Agnes Crouse brought a nice flower arrangement and Rev. Crown talked on reaching out to your neighbor. The Ratchers from Lincoln were there as usual and next Sunday we hope we could have a full house. State Senator Arthur J. Hubbard Sr. of Ganado, Arizona will be our guest speaker at Nogal. People from Ancho and all around Lincoln County are invited. The Senator will talk about the Ganado Mission.

Please send your ideas and news to Roby Burke, Box 67, Nogal.

LIKE LOST CHILDREN, yearling brown bear cubs look around for their mother. Found along the coasts of Alaska and British Columbia, the brown bears are anatomically the same as grizzlies but grow twice as big.

Brown bears avoid fights but pose threat to humans

WASHINGTON—Alaskan brown bears are peace-loving—most of the time; vegetarians—some of the time; and dangerous—all of the time. Allan L. Egbert and Michael H. Luque studies the bears, aided by the National Geographic Society, and report on their work in the September National Geographic.

Mostly because of the brown bear's elusiveness and remote habitat, scientists only recently have begun to piece together the life story of Ursus arctos, which vies with the polar bear for the title of world's largest land carnivore.

Bears along the coasts of Alaska and British Columbia are known as "browns," and those inland as "grizzlies." Anatomically, they are indistinguishable, except that the brown bear often grows much larger.

Male grizzlies around Mount McKinley are considered big at 600 pounds; male on the coast often weigh twice that—probably because of more abundant and varied foods—and may tower 10 feet on hind legs.

Despite their formidable size, fighting is not a normal preoccupation of brown bears. The authors saw striking or biting in only 124 of more than 4,000 encounters they witnessed. Usually a single swat was the only blow struck.

"The bears seem to reach the pragmatic conclusion that to inflict pain on one's fellow invites retaliation. Meaningless combat is thus avoided," the authors write.

"There was, however, one overriding exception. While other bears, lulled by familiarity and easy feeding, learned to accept their fellows, such with cubs or yearlings remained unreconstructed tyrants. They are totally intolerant of intruders; their aggressiveness has evolved to protect their offspring."

Egbert and Luque studied the brown bears in the McNeil River State Game Sanctuary, an area accessible only by small plane or boat. The bears there have developed an unusual tolerance of humans over years of exposure to visitors, but potential danger is always present.

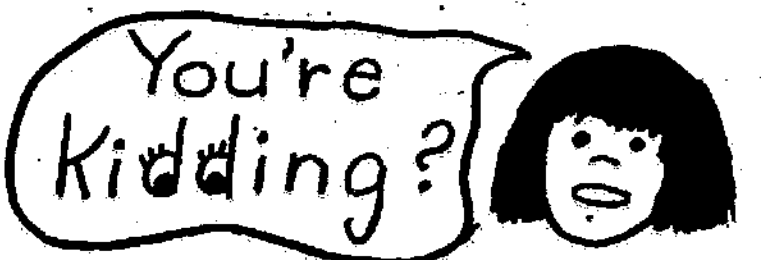

The scientists were charged only twice during four summers of research—both times by the same straw-colored female with two cubs. The first time she stopped about 30 yards away—"but not before subjecting me to the five most frightening seconds of my life," Egbert recalled.

A month later, the bear charged again, roaring angrily, but broke off, gathered up her family, and led them off into a thicket of trees.

Though the bears' favorite food is salmon and they are classified as meat eaters. They will consume almost anything edible. Early in spring they scratch roots and tubers from the ground, and later in the spring switch to the succulent growth of new vegetation.

They know what's good for them. A sedge preferred by the bears has a protein content exceeding 25 percent in late June and early July. Besides, the researchers found, the sedge has a pleasant, slightly nutty flavor.

Slum populations of developing nations are increasing three to four times faster than the more modern parts of cities. To help curb the migration of poor families from rural areas to the cities, where they are forced to resettle in slums and shanty towns, UNICEF last year trained over 13,600 village leaders in 30 countries to encourage self-help projects for the improvement of local water supply, sanitation and health services.

Polly's Bulletin Board

We haven't had a television set for years, it seems. It has been under repairs. The kids miss Sesame Street and Captain Kangaroo. It has been hard on me, dancing for the kids with a teddy bear; and talking like Cookie Monster has ruined my vocal cords.

So I told them, let's all save our nickels, dimes and even pennies for a deposit to have a telephone installed! Wonderful they screamed! "Quit screaming!", I screamed.

The day arrived when we opened the Froggy Bank. We counted their nickels, dimes and pennies. We also found 3 gum wrappers, 4 toothpicks, 2 buttons, 1 dead lady bug, potato chip crumbs, bits of crayon, and cinco centavos from Mexico.

It was a happy day when the telephone repair man arrived to install our phone. As soon as he left 'we' called Piggly Wiggly to ask what time they closed, even though we knew the answer.

You risked your life if you sat or stood near the phone area when it rang. The patter of little feet were all over you.

We talked for 10 minutes with someone before we realized we had wrong numbers. I would yell into the mouth piece because I didn't think I could be heard 'way over there' across town.

It has been fun having a telephone and it brings back memories. Today we picked up the receiver and heard no dial tone. I gathered the children around me and told them that our phone is dead. It was a sad time.

They are saving their pennies now to help pay for the television repairs. I sure have missed Sesame Street and when the phone comes back from the dead I will do my 'telephoning' under the couch covers.

It will be wonderful to ask for the time of day without childish interruptions.

Baubles, bangles and bright shiny beads bedeck the well-dressed Arabian horse at the Arabian and Half-Arabian U.S. National Championship Horse Show at Albuquerque, October 10 through 19.

The costumed horses and riders glitter and gleam as they parade around the ring in yards of velvet, brocade, silk and chiffon.

The strictly Arabian and Half-Arabian costume classes are among the most popular attractions at Arabian Horse Shows. The costumes are basically authentic with a measure of artistic interpretation mixed with the original to produce colorful, glamorous costumes that would amaze the sheikhs of old. Preparation for the classes is both costly and time consuming as the costumes can cost as much as $5,000 and are hand made.

Riders wear an ABA, modeled on the traditional garb of the Bedouin Arab. Originally a very simple garment designed to keep the hot desert sun off the rider, it has evolved in Arabian horse circles into an elaborately decorated costume made of lush materials with sunbursts of jewels and yards of braid. The shirt, trousers and sash worn under the ABA have only those portions which show decorated. The whole outfit is topped off with a head-dress, a plain square of material called a Kuffiyah, held on by a head cord of Ighal.

Women in Arabia did not ride horses, therefore, for the Costume Class women may opt to dress as the men do or to invent a costume which is limited only by good taste and imagination.

The horse, of course, gets the best of all. For he is an Arabian descended from the deserts and vanished sheikdoms and is rightfully exhibited in Arab dress. Not only does he wear the jewels, gold braid, velvet and satins of his rider, he is beplumed and be-tasseled. His bridle, breastplate, reins, saddle blankets, and breeching all have pompoms and fringe.

Though centuries removed from their heritage wearing all of this finery seems to create a change in the Arabian. He gets caught up in the thrill and excitement of the other costumed horses and goes dashing happily around the ring completely oblivious to the discipline of the show ring.

Even though the costume or appointments are exotic they count for only 25 percent of the judging of the class and seventy-five percent is on performance and manners.

The performance and manners part of the class requires that the horse be shown at the walk, canter and hand gallop. Other factors the horse is judged on are the basic ideas of good training, i.e., proper leads, closed mouth, no extreme head tossing or fussing with the bit, good gait transitions and all around good manners.

But horses and riders entering the ring at a hand gallop create an air of excitement that causes the audience to forget this class is based largely upon performance. Gone is the knowledge that little of the judging is on appointments and most of the judging is on performance and manners; for the audience is seeing the centuries old vision of the Arabian horse charging across sand dunes garbed in various and colorful regalia.

Native Costume Classes are held at different times through the Show. For dates and times please see the Show Schedule.

Tickets may be purchased at Tingley Coliseum Box Office or from Albuquerque ticket agency.

Admission to the Horse Show is free for the first three days; Friday, October 10, Saturday, October 11, and Sunday, October 12. Beginning Monday afternoon, October 13, there will be a per seat, per session charge of $2.00 for adults, $1.00 for youth between the ages of 7 and 17. There is no admission charge for children six and under for the duration of the Show.

Homecoming is here!

(News Special from Carrizozo High School) Homecoming is a big event at Carrizozo High School!

Festivities start Tuesday, October 7 with Jersey Day-Red and White-Day. Girls ask football players if they can wear their jerseys all day. Others not wearing jerseys don red and white clothing.

Tuesday night, the cheerleaders are sponsoring a poster contest at 7 p.m. in the gym. The person with the winning poster will receive a prize.

Wednesday brings a big favorite-Hobo Day. Students dress for the occasion, assuming decency is observed.

Slave auction and slave day will be held Thursday. There will be an assembly Thursday morning at 8:30 a.m. during which the student council will auction off slaves, such as cheerleaders, some teachers, some junior high and high school football players, and some students, to the highest bidder.

Friday is the busiest day, beginning with a pep assembly at 2:15 p.m.

Student Council will raffle a cake at the assembly. Starting at 6:00 p.m., the cheerleaders and Choncho Morales will lead a Snake Dance. Students are encouraged to participate.

For the Homecoming game the Grizzlies will meet the Tatum Coyotes on the Grizzly field, kickoff time at 7:30 p.m.

At halftime, the homecoming queen candidates will be escorted on the field and the homecoming queen will be crowned.

Following the game the Student Council will sponsor a dance in the cafeteria from 10:00 to 1:00. Music will be by "The Brothers and The Sisters."

The homecoming queen will be recognized at 11:00 p.m. and will lead the dance immediately following. Formal dress is not required, although girls must wear dresses and boys must wear nice slacks. No blue denim are permitted.

Admission is $1.50 single and $2.50 a couple. Any student grades 9-12 may attend the dance. 7th and 8th grade students may attend only as a date of a high school student. Alumni may attend as the date of a student, but not as a single.

Please come and join in our Homecoming activities with us.

A to Z

"Anything at ZoZo"

Hi, how has your week been? As for ZOZO, it's been a disaster! Cloudercroft wiped out Carrizozo 51 to 0. Come on ZoZo, get on the ball!

Hagerman destroyed ZoZo 44 to 0. Well, as the old saying goes, we got to get better, because we can't get much worse!

Varsity and J.V. girls Volleyball lost both games to Estancia but Varsity had a come back against Cloudercroft, Saturday. Way to go Varsity!

Bathroom Doors--as we said last week, the girls want the doors back on the stalls in the High School bathroom. The doors were taken off this summer, the reason we were given, was to stop smoking. We ask again, PLEASE return the doors. Thanks.

We, of ZOZO, think that the dress code is a real big step in the right direction. For all of you that didn't hear it, this is it:

"Dress code for Students"

The following dress code has been adopted on a one semester trail basis.

Students are required to be neat, clean, well groomed. In instances where a question arises student, parent, school authority conference will be arranged to review the situation.

Adopted by Carrizozo school Aug. 12, 1975.

There are a lot of new students this year and I think they deserve a little recognition: Cathy Wolfe, Robby Wolfe, Mary Jane Wolfe, Steve Howard, Rachell Dennis, Chuck Dennis and Ronny Works.

Insurance Program

The Carrizozo School Insurance Program is more than likely one of the best investments that you could make this year. For 6 dollars you get full coverage during school hours and all school-sponsored activities.

Over $5,000 was collected last year in sports and other injuries. If you don't already have school insurance, ask Mrs. Simpson or Mr. Wilkinson about it.

Activities

Thursday: ZoZo Jr. High plays at Vaughn 6:00 p.m.

Friday: Quemado vs. ZOZO Varsity Football, 7:30 p.m.; Admission: 1.50, Adults; 1.00 for students.

Saturday: Girl's Volleyball Round Robin at Capitlan.

Good news, people, report cards come out next week!

Let's hear it for Robbie Hollis. He broke his leg last Thursday night in the line of duty against Hagerman. Poor, poor Robbie. Hope he's better real soon!!

See You All Next Week!

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN PROPOSED AND FINAL PLANS FOR TITLE XX

1. The number of categories of eligible clients has been reduced, only to avoid duplication. Persons eligible under the proposed plan are still eligible under the final plan.
2. Maximum income for persons eligible on the basis of income has been set at $5,000 gross annual income for a family of four (4), adjusted for size of family. This ceiling was established after the proposed plan was published.
3. Fee schedule and description of method of collection are included only for Day Care for Children. Schedule was determined after publication of the proposed plan.
4. Number of service centers has been reduced to make names and definitions more clear and accurate. ALL SERVICE ACTIVITIES PROVIDED UNDER PROPOSED PLAN WILL BE PROVIDED UNDER FINAL PLAN.
5. Figures for estimated number of clients to be served, for cost of services, and for total cost of program have been changed, because more accurate figures are now available, and to reflect new groupings of services.
6. Schedule for proposed Social Services Councils has been changed because the earlier schedule was impractical.
7. Section on evaluation and reporting has been expanded to include more specific information.
8. The final plan is published in only one volume as the individual catalogs of services were found to be unnecessary.

The living is easy — the opportunities are great — in Carrizozo, New Mexico

A few miles from Carrizozo, rainbow and brown trout abound in streams and lakes. The beautiful 'Bonito' Stream is a favorite for fishermen and for picnickers seeking a time of serenity, of oneness with nature. Nogal and Bonito lakes attract their shares of anglers but soon, after a few more frosty nights, the autumn colors will remind travelers of the unequalled artistry of nature.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Bagley, Silver City, were in Corona Tuesday and returned that evening to Albuquerque where Mrs. Bagley's mother, Mrs. A.J. Atkinson, is reported recuperating from an illness. Mrs. Atkinson is ninety-six.

Frank Du Bopis came over from Albuquerque Tuesday to spend a few days working at the ranch.

Peter Llanes, Las Cruces, was checking scales in the area Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W.T. Keelin spent several days in Albuquerque recently. Mrs. Keelin, Grand Representative from Cedar Temple No. 26, attended the Pythian Sister Grand Temple Sessions, the banquet and joint installation ceremonies.

Mr. Keelin attended sessions of the Grand Lodge of the Knights of Pythias and was installed as Grand Chancellor of New Mexico lodges. He will take office January 1 and will announce committees and projects at that time. Congratulations, Bill! Grand Temple and Grand Lodge next year will be in October in Belen. This year the coveted Golden Spur rank was conferred on Les J. Harvell of Lordsburg.

Kennan Fuller returned late Monday from a visit to his old home in the O'Donnell, Texas area. He reports a good vacation with old friends, prosperous farms and good businesses.

Mr. and Mrs. V.C. Waldon spent two days last week on business in Roswell.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Strang, Phoenix, were visiting family and friends here recently. Mrs. Strang is a cousin of Elmo and Bobbie Lee Tracey.

Mrs. J.N. Wherry went to Albuquerque Monday on business and to visit with her brother, John Messer, and Mrs. Messer.

Mr. and Mrs. David McCloud spent the weekend in Santa Fe.

McGregor contracts up for bidding

Grazing contracts for 214,000 acres of military withdrawn land on McGregor Range will be awarded to the highest bidders on October 17, 1975.

Eleven grazing units ranging from 8,000 to 39,000 acres will be offered for grazing use by the Las Cruces District Office of the Bureau of Land Management.

Donald Jarvis, Acting Area Manager for the White Sands Resource Area, stated that a "show me" trip of the units to be offered will be held on Monday, October 6, 1975, beginning at the junction of U.S. Highway 54 with State Road 506, 12 miles north of Orogrande, New Mexico. The inspection trip will start at 8:00 A.M. and last all day. Travel is recommended by pickup. Prospective bidders are urged to make this inspection.

McGregor Range is located east of U.S. Highway 54 in south central Otero County about 25 miles southeast of Alamogordo, New Mexico.

The number of cattle allowed per individual grazing unit will be from 300 to 900 head. The grazing period on the various units will be from six to nine months. Grazing use will begin during the first two weeks in November for the various units. The eleven units this year will run approximately 5,450 head of cattle.

Anyone desiring further information may write the Las Cruces District Office, Bureau of Land Management, P.O. Box 1420, Las Cruces, New Mexico 88001.

Breeding cattle exports increase

The United States exported almost 50,000 breeding cattle in 1974, a 56 per cent increase over the 1973 level. The value of these exports, totaling $33.9 million, increased 51 per cent over the 1973 figures.

The cattle went to 43 different foreign countries, says Robert L. Coppersmith, Extension agricultural business specialist at New Mexico State University.

Crossbreeds topped the export list, with 89 per cent of the animals moving into Canada. Canada was also the most important export market for all United States breeding cattle exports, claiming 47 per cent of the shipments.

Half of the Charolais, the second most common export breed, moved into Mexico.

South Africa took almost a quarter of the Brahman cattle, the third largest export class and over half of the Santa Gertrudis cattle, which ranked fifth on the list.

Hereford cattle were the fourth most popular exported breed. The bulk of this category went to Hungary.

Last year UNICEF shipped more than 39 million pounds of high-protein CSM (corn-soyabean mixture) and WSB (a wheat and soy blend) to feed starving children in eight drought-stricken African countries and for distribution through health centers in eight other developing countries where severe malnutrition threatens the lives of infants and pre-schoolers.

A fabulous welcome is extended Mickey Rooney at the Downingtown Inn Golf & Tennis Club by Betty Fields, Administrative assistant. Betty, formerly of Carrizozo, was official hostess for Mr. Rooney's party over the Labor Day weekend.

Lincoln News

I was lucky enough to go up Corona way with my son, Richard, last week and had a grand visit with the Dimmit Bonds.

Johnny is so talented in decorating, painting, etc., that their home is lovely as is the view of part of their ranch from the windows. I enjoyed them and their home so much. Dimmit has done his part too. I particularly liked their swinging wheel gate.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peters of Tinnie were through Lincoln today and I had a brief visit with them. I was so happy that he is out of the hospital and she is feeling fine.

Molly Madden and her husband have just returned from a vacation trip to California. They visited relatives and friends in Sacramento and went to San Francisco for a day.

She was intrigued by San Francisco. She said they saw so many beautiful places and it seemed that all of the city was beautiful.

Kate Evans and Albert Booky were on the float, featuring the Hondo Fiesta Dancers, which won a second place trophy in the Eastern New Mexico Fair Parade in Roswell.

Beware of a man who does not talk and a dog who does not bark.

Mr. and Mrs. Roman Maes are as busy as can be, now that the tourist season is about over-cleaning and painting everything in sight. They keep their buildings in excellent condition at all times. As soon as anything doesn't look just right, they get busy, seeing that it does. It's always a pleasure just to walk around and look.

Mickey Thomas visited her parents recently. They are back at home in Alamogordo and feeling pretty well.

Edward Penfield and his sisters, Ruth and Julia, went to Dallas to the Trade Mart to buy more things for their shop. They had a nice trip.

They have so many beautiful things in their shop, it's no wonder their business is flourishing.

Mr. Roy Copeland Sr. passed away in Alamogordo early last Saturday morning and was buried at Angus Monday afternoon.

They lived in Capitan for a number of years when the children were in school and have many relatives and friends in this area.

His son Roy, his wife, and two daughters live in Santa Fe now. At present the son is in the Army, but was here for his grandfather's funeral.

We extend our sympathy to his wife and children in their loss.

The Gordon Rachers tell me that their son, Terry, wife, Patsy, and children are very happy in their church work in Guam and just as busy as can be. They hope to visit them in Guam sometime while they are working there.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis tell me they are very happy to be living in Lincoln again and their business is still good and getting better. They still call their store "Todes."

We are enjoying having them here. We miss Mrs. Salter and she tells everyone who goes to see her from here, that she misses being here. She is still living in Roswell.

A livestock guide for non-ranchers

If you think "wether" refers to the climate, or "guilt" is something you feel bad about, you'd better read the following "City Slicker Guide to Livestock".

If you're a novice around the livestock barns, you're better off speaking in the plural—as in swine or cattle—unless you're absolutely sure of yourself.

The word cow, for example, should be avoided unless referring to a female after calving. Pig is slightly more acceptable, but after you've studied this guide try boar or guilt on your friends.

Now for some definitions and other bits of trivia, not necessarily in order of importance.

In the cattle world there are beef cattle and dairy cattle. These never should be confused, especially in the presence of a rancher.

It is correct to call any young cattle, regardless of sex calves. An orphan calf is a dogie (one "g" to distinguish it from man's best friend).

Women's lib doesn't apply to cattle, so instead of cowpersons we have the term heifer referring to a female before she's calved, and bull meaning a male used for breeding.

A castrated male is a steer and a bullock is a young male slaughtered for beef. Not as easy as you thought, huh?

Mavericks, as anyone who watches television knows, are unbranded strays.

Major breeds of beef cattle, which are raised for eating are:

Angus—the black breed sometimes bred with Hereford for smaller calves and more resistance to skin diseases.

Charolais—a French breed distinguished by its cream or gold color. Originally it was a dairy cattle or used for a work animal, but now it is raised for meat or for breeding with the Angus.

Brahma—is the sacred animal of India which is believed to house the reincarnated spirits of the dead. In this country the breed is used because of its large size and its ability to hustle (graze wide areas of grassland) and its disease resistance, particularly in the Gulf Coast area. The bulls, of course, are highly temperamental (a fact to which any rodeo cowboy will attest).

Corona takes Roy 12 to 0

Corona had a taste of victory Friday night with its first district game winning over Roy 12 to 0. The following is a report by Coach John Warfield who substituted as the NEWS sports writer.

Offensive Back - Scott Nalda - 119 yds - 42 yds. avg. punting.

Offensive Lineman - Joe Salinas, good hustle, good blocking.

Defensive Lineman - Scott William outstanding tackling, 8 unassisted, 2 assisted.

Defensive Back - Ken Gibbs - good hustle; good tackling.

Our defense was excellent. Overall there has been 100 percent improvement in our blocking and 100 percent improvement in our tackling. Our execution was better both ways. Our center, Luciano Chavez, has been snapping the ball with consistency and much improvement.

This was Corona's first District win in three years and they have now had a taste of victory and I believe they like this over the latter.

The people in our community have just been great. The attitude of most everyone has been outstanding. We must continue to work hard and hopefully improve, but it is certainly easier to work under the present conditions, meaning the attitude we are now developing, a lot of spirit and pride, which means so much to our program.

We are developing a winning attitude.

Our next game is Mountainair, Friday, October 3. We are looking for improvement in each game we play. The coaching staff and team would like to thank everyone who has and is helping us to be more successful.

Score by quarters: 1st-6, 2nd-0, 3rd-0, 4th-6. Game statistics:

Yardage - 267 running, 14 passing, for a total of 281.

First Downs - Corona 11, Roy 3.

Scott Nalda made 3 punts for a total of 126 yards; 42 average.

Kick-offs - 3, 51 yard average.

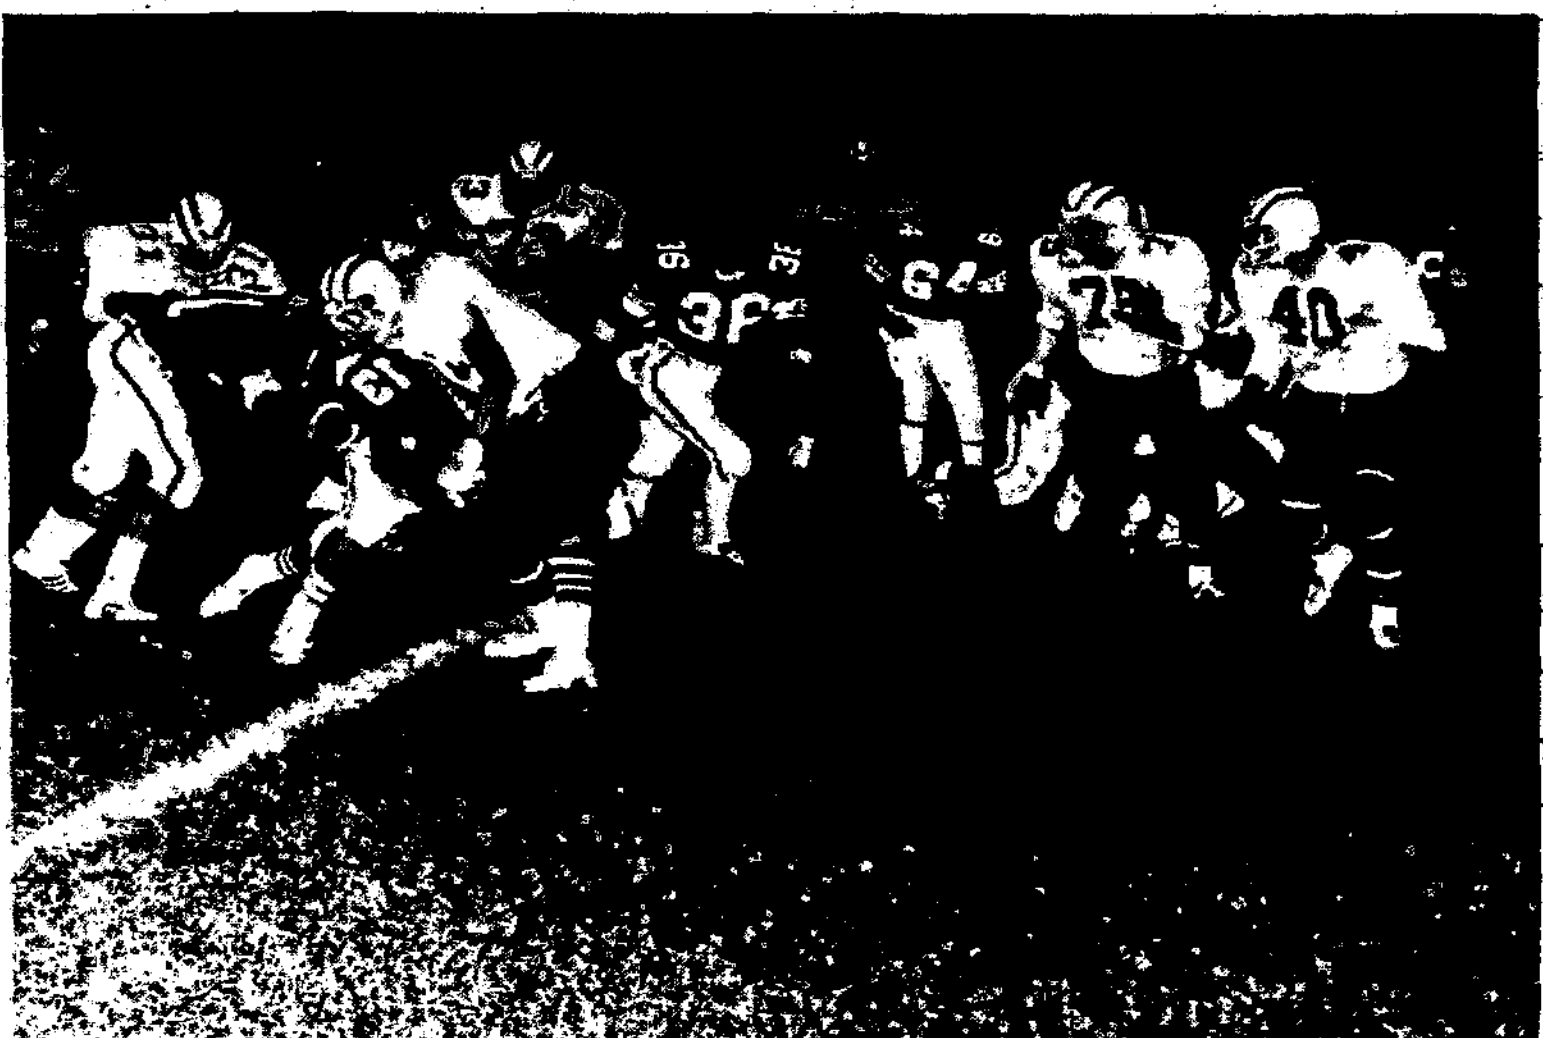

Touchdowns - Scott Nalda, 1, 49 yards; Steve Montoya, 1, 3 yards.

Teachers honor Sen. Montoya

Marshall Farris, president of NEA-New Mexico, announced today that Senator Joseph M. Montoya (D-New Mexico) would receive special recognition for his outstanding service to education.

The award will be made at the annual NEA-NM convention which will be held in Albuquerque October 22, 23 & 24, 1975.

During the convention, on October 23rd starting at 6:30 p. m., there is scheduled a special banquet and ball at which time recognition is given to those educators who have been selected for induction into the NEA-NM Hall of Fame Society. It will be during this banquet that Senator Montoya will be singled out for recognition.

Grizzly carries the ball for the ill-fated Carrizozo team. NEWS sports photographer, Frank Hoff, covered the 51-0 game.

The happiest sight at the Carrizozo-Cloudercroft game was the ZoZo Cheerleader line up. Cloudercroft made 329 yards while Carrizozo totaled 114.

Picture people, color, 'magic' at Championships

As many as 200 hot-air balloons are expected to converge on the New Mexico State Fairgrounds, Oct. 3 through 12, for the combined 1975 World Hot-Air Balloon Championship and the fourth Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta.

Spectators can prepare themselves for the photogenic event by packing extra cartridges and rolls of color print, color slide and color movie film. Even the sky's not the limit on picture opportunities -- as long as there is film to shoot.

The nine days of events offer many ideal picture-taking situations as more than 20 nations and 200 international balloonists will pilot their unusual aircraft as a part of this country's Bicentennial celebration.

For best results with a still camera, Kodak photo experts suggest you remember to hold your camera steady and squeeze your shutter release gently each time you spot a subject. Move in close to ground-level subjects to eliminate peripheral distractions and add impact. Picture individual balloons as they ascend by panning -- slowly, steadily -- with the balloon, keeping it centered in your viewfinder, and squeezing the shutter release as you continue to pan. Use foreground spectators, balloons, and burners to "frame" skyward views of balloons, en masse, in flight.

While you are looking up, keep track of what's underfoot. Balloonists love picture-takers as long as picture-takers keep their feet off the balloons.

If you are a movie-maker, you can cope with the various activities by holding your camera steady. Film each action only as long as it is interesting. Then, change your point of view for the next scene. Instead of panning with an ascension, choose a very low angle and film the balloon as it rises and moves through your camera field of view. Your footage can document close-up color and design details, the thrilling "release" of the ascent and, finally, another bright bauble in the sky.

As a member of a chase crew, picture the descent -- and celebration champagne toast -- for your movie finale. Even if the descent doesn't occur until dusk, an existing-light movie camera can record it on a fast film such as Kodak Type G Ektachrome movie film.

Balloonists call their romantic, slightly anachronistic sport "indescrivable." Bring your camera to the World Balloon Championships and you'll find one picture is worth a thousand words.

Tigers roll over Vaughn

by Adam Aldaz Ricky Clifton
The Tigers got back on the winning track after suffering its only defeat against the Hagerman Bobcats.

The Tigers really had a good comeback as they blasted the Vaughn Eagles 36 to 12.

The first TD came from Kenny Cummins as he broke for a 20 yd run. PAT was good as kicked by Cummins also.

Then again in the first quarter, Kirk Phillips broke away for a 40 yard run for the TD. The PAT kick was good by Cummins.

In the 2nd period the Vaughn Eagles came back to score 2 TD's. The runs were both one yard dives by Bliznick. PAT's failed.

K. Phillips came back on a good second effort run in the 2nd quarter to put the Tigers ahead at half-time 20-12.

The second half was all Capitan's as the Tigers defense stiffened and their offense continued to score. Robby Richardson, playing his best game of the year, exploded for over 150 yds rushing, although he did not score (he had a 70 yard TD called back) he busted tackles all night long and kept the Eagles, wishing they had not visited the Tiger den.

The scoring in the 3rd quarter came from quarterback, Henry Cummins, again on a 20 yd run. Kenny also ran the 2 pt. conversion. Cummins who has really put the points on the board for the Tigers this year, raced 24 yards for the last score and he also converted the 2 pt. conversion in the last quarter.

The Tigers came out of the dressing room and really put the stop to the eagle offense that had given them so much trouble in the 2nd quarter. David Hightower led the Tiger defense as the junior linebacker teamed up with his teammates and shut out the eagles in the 2nd half.

The Tigers will be playing Tatum on Capitan field, 7:30 Friday night.

The Tigers are looking for their 4th win of the season.

In dairy cattle the most common breeds are: Holstein--refers to the large black and white type which produces lots of milk with little butterfat.

Jersey and Guernsey--breeds which produce less milk but more cream.

In case you've been perplexed over the question of horns, here's the pointed truth: male and female cattle both have horns, but usually the ladies are de-horned to prevent injury to themselves and the cowboys. Bulls sometimes are de-horned, but more often the points are weighted so that they point downward.

Not to be ignored are the swine--the plural of pigdom. The youngsters are piglets, the mature female is a sow and the female after farrowing (giving birth) is a gilt. Not to ignore the gentlemen, the male stud is a boar (not to be confused with other bores you may know) and the castrated male is a barrow.

For those more polite persons, hog may be used interchangeably with swine. Pork refers only to the carcass, and hog bellies are the parts from which bacon comes.

The major breeds of swine are:

Hampshires--black with white belt (no reference to karate intended.)

Poland Chinas--black with white points, including feet and tail.

Dorcs--solid reddish color.

Yorkshires--solid white.

Ranchers say that during the past decade the swine industry has made great strides in producing hogs with more lean meat and less fat. Now efforts are being made to eliminate the extremely muscular meat which loses water and dries out in cooking.

In defense of the much-maligned hog, we are told that swine are highly intelligent and easily trained, and when allowed to be, are very fastidious about their environment.

Destroying one more misconception, it is a fact that garbage-fed swine operations have nearly completely disappeared from the industry.

Moving right along to dairy goats, as distinguished from Angora goats raised for mohair wool, the following terms apply:

Young male and female goats are kids. Females before bred are doelings and after they've kidded (given birth) they are does.

Male studs are bucks and the castrated male is a wether (whether he likes it or not).

Sometimes called "The Poor Man's Cow," there are five registered breeds in the United States: Toggenburg, Saanen, Alpine, Nubian and La Mancha.

The first three breeds are Swiss in origin, while Nubians are the most popular breed. La Mancha is a fairly new breed of dairy goat.

According to breeders, dairy goats are the most efficient milk-producers in the world. Goats milk is purported to be easier to digest because of its smaller curd.

Finally, for the purposes of this guide, we come to sheep. Again, there are mutton breeds used for meat and wool breeds raised for fleeces. Both breeds have fleeces, but generally mutton is coarser and shorter.

Although there literally are dozens of breeds of sheep all over the world, the major mutton breeds are Dorset (white face), Suffolks (black face), Hampshires (black face with wool on top of head and legs), and Southdowns (mottled face in black and white).

Wool breeds are Rambouillet, Corriedales and Columbias, and they are distinguished by the fineness of their wool.

As with goats, the castrated male sheep is a wether. The male stud, is a ram the female is an ewe and males and females under one year are lambs (as if you didn't know).

When looking at one sheep of the wool variety, of course, keep in mind you are seeing the equivalent of two men's wool suits.

An average sheep produces 14-16 pounds of wool in the grease (with lanolin still in the fiber). After washing, it equals about eight pounds of clean wool.

Sheep shearing is done yearly in the spring, except we're told that in Texas it's usually done twice (it figures).

But don't put the sheep only in the meat and wool producing category. Think about that fleecy critter next time you use makeup (lanolin), or anti-freeze (glycerine), or a tennis racket (gut strings).

The lowly sheep literally is a supermarket on the hoof.

Ft. Stanton's past comes to life with ladies touch.

by Mary Rich

The drums will beat again; the trumpets will sound on the parade ground of Old Ft. Stanton when a group of ladies revive something of the fort's colorful past, Friday.

The drummer and the bugler of 1855 will be replaced by the Ft. Bliss Marching Band Friday at 2:30 p.m. when members of the New Mexico Federation of Woman's Clubs dedicate the new Fort Stanton museum.

Now a museum, at one time the building was an early version of an officers club. Inspecting the renovated site are New Mexico Federation of Women Club officers (from the left) Mrs. Jerry Wertheim, Santa Fe; Mrs. Emil Keihne, Reserve, Mrs. Paul E. House, Albuquerque with Assistant Administrator, John Genta.

The museum is one of a four-part project under the leadership of the Federation President, Mrs. Paul House of Albuquerque, for the Bicentennial. Mrs. House set the NMFWC slogan as "New Horizons for the Handicapped" and then went to work.

Elaine House is a sparkly, outdoors-looking blond who speaks with enthusiasm and compassion. The organization's projects began when she visited a friend in the State Hospital at Las Vegas and was distressed that there wasn't a pleasant place for patient visits.

"It was a beautiful day and I thought how wonderful it would be if my friend and I could sit outside."

Thus Meadows Hospital in Las Vegas became the first step with covered patios, lawn furniture and landscaping. Los Lunas Hospital and Training School, Carlsbad Area Retarded Children's Farm and Fort Stanton Hospital and Training School were added as district projects.

The Ft. Stanton project was the restoration of the former officer's club as a museum with dual purposes; artifacts of the 120-year-old Indian fort will be preserved and will provide work-therapy for the 170 student-patients who will maintain it. The organization provided the hospital with $2207 for materials and the maintenance department installed new floors, roof, windows, showcases, paint and landscaping.

Mrs. House said that artifacts from the period represented by the Fort were needed and would be most welcome.

Representatives from the New Mexico Bicentennial Commission which has provided matching funds for the project, from the Governors office and elected officials are expected for the ceremonies.

The event will be the final activity of the two-day District Four Federation Convention which begins Thursday at the Inn of the Mountain Gods. Mrs. House cordially invites the public to the Fort Stanton opening.

120 years of fires have been held in the museum's fireplace. The snow shoes, once a necessity are now a decoration. The interior of the building has been carefully preserved.

Water colors make the center hallway an art gallery. Mrs. House hopes the museum will attract additions from visitors.

The original fort was two miles south of the present Ft. Stanton. Two log and adobe blockhouses constituted the first buildings. Eventually a regular military post was established with officers quarters, company barracks, commissary, quartermaster offices and guardhouse all built of adobe.

In August 1861 the fort was abandoned and partially destroyed by its garrison following the invasion of New Mexico by Confederates for a few months, then abandoned again as they retreated back to Texas.

In the fall of 1862 Ft. Stanton was reoccupied by Union forces under the command of Colonel Christopher (Kit) Carson. In 1863 the fort was moved to its present location and well-built permanent structures erected. These are the buildings that the visitor may see at Ft. Stanton today.

Ft. Stanton was Carson's headquarters during his campaign against the Mescalero Apaches in 1862.

Things were not one-sided during these years, however. In 1864 Indians stole the fort's horse and mule herd, a mail runner was ambushed and forced to abandon his cargo, and patrols were often attacked and forced to retreat to the fort for safety.

In the post-Civil War period Ft. Stanton was visited by General Lew Wallace, author of Ben Hur, and was home for a young lieutenant who would later attain fame as General John J. Pershing.

Another young man who would also make quite a name for himself had the honor of spending a night in the Ft. Stanton guardhouse. He was Billy the Kid.

Ft. Stanton was abandoned and turned over to the Interior Department August 17, 1896. On April 27, 1899 it was turned over to the Public Health Service to be used as a Marine hospital.

In June 1953 Ft. Stanton was turned over to the state of New Mexico for use as a tuberculosis sanatorium, then later converted to a hospital for the mentally retarded.

A Historical Note

(The following is from an article on New Mexico Forts written by Rick Hindley for the Albuquerque Tribune.)

Although Ft. Stanton has been in continuous use since 1855, and has had a number of different owners and uses, many of the original buildings are still standing today.

These include the commanding officer's residence, the combination guardhouse-guardroom, the adjutant's office, officers quarters, cavalry stables, and company quarters. Most of the original parade ground also remains.

The fort belongs to the New Mexico Department of Hospitals and Institutions and is operated as a division of the Los Lunas Training School and is used as a state hospital for the mentally retarded.

When you drive into Ft. Stanton the scene is quiet, peaceful-almost idyllic. Located in the foothills of the White Mountains, eight miles southeast of Capitan, Ft. Stanton seems the ideal place to go if you want to get away from the noise and heat of the city, the chaos of freeways, and bad news in general.

But, things were not always so. Ft. Stanton was established in May, 1855 on the Rio Bonito to control the Mescalero and White Mountain Apaches. It was named for Captain Stanton, 1st U.S. Dragoons, killed by Apaches near the site on January 19, 1855.

A collection of books will be the principal attraction in one of the museum rooms. The library is being catalogued and will be added too.

Mrs. House, Mrs. Keihn and Mrs. Wertheim are dressed quite differently from the officers ladies who once used this dressing table for pre-party primping.

Chief, John Hall, takes the axe to the ribbon at the opening of the new Alto Sub station serving the Angus Bonito area.

Volunteers cut ribbon at Alto

The ribbon was cut in fireman's style at the opening of the new Alto Angus Bonito sub station No. 2 Sunday.

Chief, John Hall, used a fireman's axe for the occasion and the volunteers entertained about 50 guests thereafter.

The attractive new building will also be used for community meetings and as a voting place. Mrs. John Hall provided the decorating talent for the interior.

The building was constructed by George Lore with money from the state, county and the fire marshal, as well as member contributions.

The department has two other stations at Angus and Nazarene Camp. There are five trucks with one serving as an emergency first aid vehicle.

The volunteer firemen serve a 110 section area that is bounded by Ruidoso, Fort Stanton, Nogal and White Mountain. There are 50 members of the department responsible for the structures in this area and for cooperation with the Forest Service fire fighters.

Officers are John Hall, chief; Neal Chapman, assistant; Bob Finley, secretary; George Lore, treasurer; John Von Rosenberg, captain; Frank Kirby-Smith, lieutenant and Terry Hall, fire marshal.

Milk is checked for adulteration

Consumers can be confident that the milk and dairy products they purchase are free from adulteration, says Borden Ellis, Extension dairy specialist at New Mexico State University.

State and federal regulations require regular checking for antibiotics and pesticides. Dairy cooperatives and processors also have complete quality control programs.

A sample of each farm's milk is checked regularly for antibiotics. Most plants daily check samples from each load they receive. There is no tolerance for the presence of any antibiotic or growth inhibitor, so dairy farmers must use all materials as directed and discard milk from treated cows for at least 72 hours.

Most plants use a freezing point test to check load and farm samples for the presence of added water. This test also insures that washing and sanitizing solutions have not entered the milk.

Dairy farmers must follow exact procedures to be sure that milk is not adulterated. They want to assure consumers that dairy products do not contain antibiotics, pesticides or added water, concludes Ellis.

Annual Trinity Site tour set

Trinity Site, an area of White Sands Missile Range where the atomic age was born with an earth-shattering blast 30 years ago, will be open to the public during the annual tour to be conducted Saturday, Oct. 4.

Trinity - where man first proved the tremendous power of the unleashed atom on July 16, 1945 - is open to the public only once each year. Access to Trinity is of necessity limited since the site is located in the northern part of the missile range and serves as an impact area or safety zone during missile firings.

The Alamogordo Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with White Sands Missile Range officials, have sponsored the open house annually for many years. Traditionally held on the first Sunday in October, the tour is planned this year and in future years for the first Saturday in October.

Trinity Site has been declared a National Historic Landmark by the U.S. Department of the Interior's National Park Service, and highlight of this year's tour will be the unveiling of a plaque with this designation.

The plaque will be presented by Theodore R. Thompson, deputy regional director, Southwest Region, of the National Park Service. Colonel Frank C. Schoen, deputy commander for technical operations, White Sands Missile Range, will accept a certificate of designation for preservation of this historic site.

As in past years, entry to the missile range for the Trinity tour will be escorted caravan through the Stallion gate east of San Antonio, N.M., and from Alamogordo through the Tularosa gate.

The Alamogordo caravan will assemble at the Grant City parking lot north of the city and will leave the parking lot at 8:45, entering the range at 10:15. The caravan from Stallion will leave the gate for Trinity at 11:15.

Tour members will be allowed to enter the range only with the caravans - neither before nor after - and they must return with the caravans. A Military Police escort will be provided, and drivers will not deviate from the designated route. Motorcycles will not be permitted on the tour.

Regarding radiation at Trinity Site, Lieutenant Colonel Edwin Dodd Jr., WSMR radiation protection officer, has issued the following statement as an aid in determining whether to visit Trinity Site:

"Although the level of radiation to which a Trinity Site visitor is exposed is very small, each potential visitor must weigh in his own mind the benefits he may derive from visiting this historical site against the potential of exposure to low levels of radiation.

"Additionally, small children and pregnant women are potentially more at risk and are generally considered groups that should only receive exposure in conjunction with medical diagnosis and treatment."

Visitors on the tour should pack a picnic lunch and drinking water. Additional water (non-iced) and restroom facilities will be provided at the site by WSMR.

Photos may be taken at Trinity Site but nowhere else on the range. Cameras should be kept in glove compartments or trunks of cars during the trip to and from Trinity Site.

Items prohibited on the tour include weapons of any type, alcoholic beverages and pets except guide dogs.

The tour is scheduled to arrive at Trinity Site about 11:45 a.m. and to depart about 1:15 p.m.

From Montoya:

Presidential protection is under scrutiny

WASHINGTON--U.S. Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D-N.M., scheduled hearings here this week to see what could be done to improve the protection provided for the President, vice president and candidates for these offices.

Among those scheduled to testify were three law enforcement officers who interviewed Sara Jane Moore the day before she fired a pistol at President Ford.

The three are San Francisco Police Department Inspector Jack O'Shea, Gary Yauger, Secret Service agent in the intelligence office here, and Martin Haskell, Secret Service agent with the agency's San Francisco field office.

Sen. Montoya has introduced two bills to authorize $26.4 million for flood control projects near Socorro and in Santa Fe.

"The largest of the two is the proposed Hidden Mountain-Loma Blanca reservoir system near Socorro that will consist of two earthfill dams," Sen. Montoya said. "One of these would be on the Rio Puerco at the Hidden Mountainsite, and one on the Rio Salado at the Loma Blanca site."

Sen. Montoya said these two dams would replace the authorized Rio Grande floodway in the area from San Acacia to Bosque del Apache. He said they will cost about $23.8 million.

"The Santa Fe flood control project would consist of a rockfill dam at the Granite Point site on the Santa Fe River about 1.4 miles above Santa Fe," Sen. Montoya said. "This project would also consist of replacing the Collega Street bridge and raising Apartment Drive bridge, and channelization of about 6,300 feet of Arroyo Mascaras."

The two bridges cross the Santa Fe River. "The proposed project on the Santa Fe River would provide the City of Santa Fe protection from floods up to about 100 years," Sen. Montoya said. "The Arroyo Mascaras project is designed to provide protection from the standard project flood."

Domenici Says:

Elderly are held against will

WASHINGTON--U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici Monday said that many elderly Americans are being held, against their will and without receiving medical aid, in mental hospitals throughout the nation.

Domenici spoke as the Aging Committee's Subcommittee on Long-Term Care of the Elderly began its investigations into Medicare and Medicaid fraud and related problems of long-term care.

In his opening statement, the New Mexico lawmaker said that a recent Supreme Court decision (O'Connor vs. Donaldson) "gives hopes to these many elderly Americans that they soon can be freed from the institutions in which they are now, against their will, being held."

"Too many Americans are just like Kenneth Donaldson—they are capable of taking care of themselves, they are no danger to anyone, yet they are in mental institutions against their will," he pointed out. "Mr. Donaldson's case is one that is often repeated in this nation."

Donaldson was kept in a mental institution for 15 years against his will, without receiving treatment necessary to cure him until he filed suit in 1971 against the hospital. Without explanation, he was then freed. This June 26 the Supreme Court unanimously decided that Donaldson should have been free all those years and that "a state cannot constitutionally confine a non-dangerous individual who is capable of surviving safely in freedom by himself or with the help of willing and responsible family members or friends."

Domenici said that the Court's decision also raises questions about other elderly.

"What about the mentally ill who are dangerous," he said, "and the state's role in these cases? What about the nature of our responsibility to the elderly who cannot live by themselves but are not dangerous? Just what kind of care do they have in their future?"

"In my own state of New Mexico, for example, many elderly patients were literally dumped out of mental institutions in a money-saving effort. These people had lived most of their lives in institutions and were, of course, extremely vulnerable. We need to address these types of situations and make sure that federal law is not in some cases actually encouraging them. That's an important reason we are here today."

The subcommittee hearings will continue through this week.

Letters to the Editor

Sept. 23, 1975

Dear Mr. Payton,

Sometime back around 1968 a good friend of mine from Albuquerque went down in a plane crash in the area around Santa Fe. Extensive searching never located he or his companions. Just recently a gentleman named Dan Wright moved here from your city. He told me that back around the first of this year a hunter discovered a plane with five skeletons in the Pecos wilderness.

Mr. Wright suggested that you might be willing to look back through your newspaper files for information for me.

The friend who was lost was Ken Brittan. We have since lost contact with his wife. We may never know for sure except through the newspaper account.

If it isn't asking too much, we request your help. Any word will be greatly appreciated.

Thank you,
Row Robinson

Litter might cause accidents

The New Mexico State Highway Department today announced that the road agency is spending nearly one-half million dollars annually on litter pickup.

Department maintenance officials said that trash and garbage is being needlessly strewn on New Mexico's highways by the unthinking motorist. Roadside parks and rest areas are becoming a haven for "litter bugs."

One official stated that litter could possibly be the cause of accidents on New Mexico's highway system besides being a nuisance and eyesore for the tourist traveling the Land of Enchantment.

A statewide highway beautification campaign has been launched which will provide the opportunity to call citizens, young and old, to cooperate in a meaningful Bicentennial celebration.

Environmental poster contest expanded

All age groups are invited to participate in the Smokey Bear and Woody Owl Environmental Poster Contest this year. The National Council of State Garden Clubs, sponsor the contest, especially encourages youth and senior citizens to enter the competition.

Any member of the community-at-large is eligible to design and submit a poster with an environmental theme. Posters may show Smokey, Woody, both or neither, but must include both picture and slogan.

Judging will be based equally on originality, design, slogan, artwork, and message effectiveness. Competition divisions are: Kindergarten - 2nd grade; 3rd - 5th grades; 6th - 8th grades; 9th - 12th grades; and a new category, above 12th grade.

There are no restrictions on art materials to be used as long as the poster is basically two-dimensional and no larger than 12 x 18 inches. All entries must be identified by the artist's NAME, GRADE OR AGE, AND HOME ADDRESS on the poster back. Entries must be in the mail to the State Poster Chairman no later than November 30, 1975. Chairman for New Mexico is Mrs. James P. Ballog, 4717 Comanche Road, NE, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87110.

State winners will have their entries forwarded for Regional and National competition. Winners will be announced and prizes awarded at the 1976 Regional Meeting of National Council Garden Clubs.

For further information, contact your local garden club, a Forest Service field office or the Office of Information, Forest Service, Southwestern Region, 517 Gold Ave., SW, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87102.

GOOD THINGS HAPPEN IN Carrizozo

Smokey Bear Museum popular

by Margaret Rench

Visitors this week at the Smokey Bear Museum were from Texas, New Mexico, Oregon, Florida, Kentucky, California, Ohio, Oklahoma, Connecticut and Michigan. Almost unbelievable. Thanks to the 15 ladies from Tularosa Extension for visiting us. A lovely group of ladies.

The Branding Bar, the Bank and the Capitan Builders Supply were broken into last Saturday night.

Saturday afternoon a car accidentally ran upon the walk just east of the Cummins Store door and caved the wall in. It moved some of the shelves and broke lots of merchandise. No one was hurt, which was fortunate.

Geraldine Dean, Jr. and Ric Allen went elk hunting Monday September 22 in the Gila Forest. Returned last Friday, though they had no luck, they did enjoy the hunt.

Ellen Faye Hammons is enjoying a week's vacation from her duties at Cummins store. We miss her but do wish her a happy week.

Mrs. Hollis Cummins spent last weekend in Roswell visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G.B. Waltrip.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Harris of Ruidoso Downs spent a few hours with their aunts, Mrs. Maude Kingston and Miss Lou Harris. Sunday, their brother, Jess Harris, visited them.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Annaratore for three days were Mr. and Mrs. David Piano and Louise Owens of Memphis, Tenn. last week.

Mayor and Mrs. Jay Johnston were in El Paso, Tex. and Deming on business last week.

Albert Gallegos is enjoying a vacation in Tijuana, Mexico.

Work day at the First Baptist Church in Capitan was held last Saturday.

Mrs. Rench and Mrs. Pounds made a business trip to Carrizozo last Saturday.

There is going to be an Athletic Club meeting Thursday night at 7:30 p.m., Sept. 2 at the school cafeteria. Election of officers for the coming year will be discussed at this meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jenkins of Clovis, N.M. became the proud parents of a daughter, born Sept. 20 weighing 8 lbs. 12 1/2 oz. Her name is Dara Geñice. Her grandmother, Amelita Jenkins, of Capitan visited her and the happy parents Tuesday through Thursday. Her uncle, Bobby Jenkins, is employed with the Clovis Fire Department, so, he can see her often.

Miss Lou Harris and Mrs. Maude Kingston accompanied Mrs. Rench on a business trip to Ruidoso last Friday.

No rain, though each night has grown colder with no killing frost to date.

Mrs. Amelita and the late W.C. "Binder Bill" Jenkins of Capitan announce the recent wedding of their daughter, Elizabeth Ann, affectionately known as Goose, to Billy Bob Goodrum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Goodrum of Ruidoso and Picacho. After a short trip to Alpine, Arizona the couple are now home on the ranch near Picacho.

A wedding shower was held for Mrs. William Robert Goodrum. Friends of Elizabeth Ann Goodrum, the former Goose Jenkins of Capitan honored her with a lovely wedding shower, Tuesday evening, Sept. 9 in the Fellowship Hall of the First Baptist Church in Capitan.

Hostesses for the evening were Juanita Abercrombie, Daylene Huey, Lorain Cox, Gloria Cummins, Geneva Walker, Mary Loomis, Gail Landers, Susie Abercrombie and Mae Stiles.

The table was beautifully decorated with dahlias from Jack Mayfield's garden, arranged

BLM outlines projected pay for Lincoln Co.

The Lincoln County Commissioners had asked the BLM to detail anticipated income from BLM grazing fees and to estimate land controlled by the Taylor Grazing Act.

William Spalsbury passed along the following letter to the Commissioners which answered part of the questions:

Mr. William C. Spalsbury
State Supervisor
Division of Wildlife Services
10,304 Candelaria Rd., NE
Albuquerque, NM 87112
Dear Mr. Spalsbury:

I hope the following information answers the questions you asked in your letter of July 29, 1975. I am sorry for the delay in answering you, but all this information was not readily available at our district office.

There are 518,640 acres of national resource lands (Taylor Grazing) in Lincoln County. Of these lands, 171,287 acres are leased to grazing (Section 15 lands) and 347,353 acres have grazing authorized through grazing privileges (Section 3 lands). All of these lands are classified as suitable for grazing only. There is no agriculture production of these lands.

The grazing fees charged by the Bureau for the use of the lands varies annually in accordance to a flexible formula. The fee charged for 1974 and 1975 has been $1 per animal unit month.

The determination of the amount of the grazing fees that are returned to the county is somewhat complex. Fifty percent of the fees collected for the leased lands (Section 15 lands) is returned through the State to the counties. According to our Washington Office, Lincoln County will receive $19,119.76 from the fees collected in Fiscal Year 1975.

The fees from Section 3 lands or lands which are within a grazing district are distributed differently. For these lands a portion is taken from the total fees collected by the Bureau for a range improvement fund. This portion is predetermined each time the annual fee amount is adjusted and is published in the Federal Register. Then 12 1/2 percent of the balance is distributed to the states. We do not have a record of what amount of this is distributed to the counties from the State.

Again, I hope this information is helpful.
Sincerely yours,
James S. Morrian

There was much excitement at Capitan Field as the Tigers chalked up another victory Friday night, September 26. The Tigers' rolled over Vaughn Eagles 36-12. The scoring went as follows:

1st quarter - K. Cummins-Cummins kick; K. Phillips-Cummins kick.

2nd quarter - K. Phillips, kick failed.

3rd quarter - K. Cummins-K. Cummins run.

4th quarter - K. Cummins-K. Cummins run.

In the 2nd quarter, Vaughn scored 2 fids, but both extra point attempts failed.

The Capitan Tigers are now 3-1. We are proud of the Tigers, so guys, keep it up!

October 3, 7:30 p.m. the Tigers are once again at home as they tangle with Tatum Coyotes. Be sure to attend, as we all look for another Tiger victory.

The Capitan Tigerets traveled to Hondo, September 24, for a volleyball scrimmage. The Tigerets "A" & "B" teams won. The Tigerets look forward to October 2, as Hondo travels to Capitan.

The entire Capitan FHA chapter extend their sincere thanks to Seniors Kenny Cummins, Pat Griego, Kirk Phillips, & John Taylor for their great help and fantastic service at the FHA Installation Banquet, September 23. Nice going, guys. The FHA District J meeting is to be held Saturday, October 4, in Alamogordo. A large number of Capitan members are planning to attend.

Monday, September 29, the "C" was repainted. Beautiful fall weather greeted the foremen, water and lime carriers, picture takers, some faculty, and, of course, the lazy students. Foremen steadily watched over their workers. Water carriers were frequently sent down the mountain for water, lime carriers slowly but steadily struggled up the mountain with 50 and 10-pound sacks, while picture takers, faculty, and lazy students relaxed in the warm sun. There were also those students who rearranged the rocks and cut the brush around of "C". After the white wash was applied, students wearily walked back to school before reaching the school grounds, the students were detained at the creek. The girls' voices shrilled and the boys laughed. All walked back to school wet, knowing this was a day to always remember.

The Senior class is sponsoring an Enchilada Dinner October 3, from 5:00 to 7:00 p.m. in the school cafeteria. Eat a great dinner before a great game. Tickets must be purchased by Friday noon. They may be obtained from any Senior student.

We, at Capitan High School, appreciate the support of the people who attend Tiger football games.

Christian Youth meet

by Steven Stearns

The Junior Christian Youth Organization (CYO) met Sept. 25 at the Methodist Church. Joy Gallacher and Veda Lou Stephenson sponsored the group. We sang songs. Mrs. Stephenson led in Bible study. Then we sang some more songs and played and had refreshments. Those present were Mary Jane Ferguson, Stacy Stephenson, Gray and Lynn Gallacher, and Steven Stearns. The next meeting will be Oct. 9.

week's new offerings of flowers, milagros, and wee shoes appear. Dozens of candles are lit each month and even on the darkest nights the windows glow softly from the flickering candlelight.

Through the years the Chapel has been cared for by the "mayordomos" who are elected every two years. A major restoration took place under the patronage of Thomas Fortune Ryan III. Other improvements are currently planned—the most important to refurbish and refence the old, old cemetery adjacent to the Chapel.

The mayordomos also sponsor the two annual fiestas held each year which are always well attended. The next fiesta will be held in January to honor the Santo Nino and will be celebrated by a Mass and lunch. Mass is still held the second and fourth Sunday of each month at 4:30 P.M. ...so the tradition of the Santo Nino is still very much alive in this quaint white Chapel tucked so quietly away.

In order to continue these traditions the mayordomos cordially invite everyone to attend the benefit dance at the American Legion Hall, Tularosa, on Saturday, October 4, from 9 to 1. Tickets are $5.00 a couple and may be purchased at the door. Each ticket will also be a chance on valuable door prizes to be presented during the evening. Music will be provided by the Chancellors. Donations for the Church fund may also be mailed in care of Three Rivers Church, Three Rivers, New Mexico 88350.

...Way West

of life, the stages of being, offer rich rewards to those who accept the difference.

One fine day this week, I was contemplating the welcome excitement of nature's autumn, relaxing into thoughts of life's ripening with a certain willingness to gracefully wander into the rocking chair stage.

The telephone rang, and oh, that voice opened a crack in memory's treasure chest. There escaped a bubble of long ago laughter, the whiff of apple blossoms. As my pulse quickened, I wondered, "Does the heart of an eighteen year old beat beneath this old gray head (dyed blond)?"

There was a moment of the tantalizing taste of youth. And then came the remembered phrase, "I'll be there in November, little darling, the good Lord willing and the creek don't rise."

I thought to myself "If Rose Ann doesn't twist her ankle or twitch something else" But there suddenly was the certain knowledge that this New Mexico darling wouldn't worry one bit about a Texas little darling. Many years had passed and now a New Mexico deer would have more allure than a Texas deer.

Instead of a new uplift, I'm saving my nickles and dimes for a new scope.

The above bit of lore has been changed as to names and facts to protect the not so innocent. And dear readers, it is what might be known as wisdom on wry bred.

W-W

Thus comes the long introduction to a certain time of year in New Mexico—the season of the deer is nigh.

Veda Lou Stephenson says it is also our season of discovery. We find an interesting number of long lost freinds, all bearing rifles.

Orene Crenshaw accepted a handful of hunting maps and rules from Fred English with the comment that she would distribute them along with a note to the effect that there was certain proof there are places to hunt other than the Crenshaw ranch.

Another unnamed friend said that she thought Western hospitality was a certainty until her first hunting season as a New Mexico ranch owner. After losing six cows, five calves, three water tanks and the old man's favorite long john's left on the clothes line, she said not a word when her husband put up a sign "Lucky trespassers will be prosecuted. Others will be shot."

Full-Time Job

A husband came home to find the whole house in a dreadful mess.

"What on earth happened?" he asked his wife. "You're always wondering what I do all day" she replied. "Well, now you know. I didn't do it today."

CHEEK TO CHEEK in the Red Sea, it's not Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers but a pair of murray eels. The fish, two feet long, peep from a stolen hour in this unusual photograph from the September National Geographic.

STARLED STARE of this hermit crab is its natural look, watching its underside world through eyes that resemble pinpoints. This crab's eye view illustrates life's intriguing adaptations of eyes in World, the National Geographic Society's new magazine for children.

Eyes have it in adjusting

WASHINGTON—What has built-in bifocals, sees with mirrors, could spot a dime at 1,000 feet, can watch forward and behind its back at the same time, and views the world in glorious grays?

Answers: a horsefly, a crocodile, a hawk, a rabbit, a dog.

And it all comes naturally to them. They are examples of life's adaptability, or what nature has come up with in the way of individualizing that most specialized of all sensory organs, the eye.

Some of the more spectacular samples illustrate the September World, the new magazine for children published by the National Geographic Society.

The bifocal effect of the horsefly's eyes—found only in the male's eyes—is produced by two kinds of facets among the 7,000 in each eye. Larger facets on the upper part of the eye register coarse images, smaller ones provide sharper detail.

Mirror vision, as it might be called, is a light-saving feature of crocodiles, cats, dogs, deer, and most nocturnal animals. Light entering the eye passes through the film-like retina that registers what the eye sees. Then the light hits a mirror surface and bounces back to reinforce the image.

At night in a beam of light the eyes of these animals reflect with this eyeshine.

In daylight the irises may squeeze nearly shut, producing, for instance, the slit pupil of the cat's eye which catches 50 percent more light than man's and needs only one-sixth as much for seeing.

With the sharp distant vision characteristic of birds, a pigeon could see a grain of wheat the length of a football field and a hawk could spot a dime on the sidewalk from atop the Empire State building. Eyes of hawks and eagles have at least eight-power magnification.

On the ground, horses, lions, dogs, and cats all see better than man. However, elephants and rhinoceroses are so nearsighted they can hardly make out other elephants and rhinos 100 feet away.

Rabbits' eyes give them a view behind as well as ahead and to the side, as with many animals that are favorite meals of hunting creatures. With fewer dangers to watch out for, foxes, tigers, and other hunters have forward-looking binocular eyes.

Dogs, cats, and most animals don't see color, but register the world in shades of gray. Exceptions are man, birds, fish, reptiles, and octopuses—all see in bright colors.

For what it's worth to bullfighters and picnickers, bulls don't see red—they may as easily be provoked into a charge by flapping a beach towel as by waving a red flag.

How to control the amount of light that enters the eye is a problem with many solutions. Camels' eyes have pupils with toothlike edges to shade them from the desert's glare. Palau Islands geckos, small nocturnal lizards, have pupils that contract into four small pinhole apertures in daylight.

Eels, living on river bottoms, protect their eyes behind tough, transparent windows in the skin of their heads.

Shy sharks and other oddities attract biologists to Red Sea

The Red Sea holds billions of dollars in mineral wealth, but the incredible array of animal life swarming through its tepid waters is even more valuable to scientists.

Everything from shy sharks to seeing-eye fish live in the sea, attracting marine biologists from around the world to study life forms found nowhere else on earth.

Dr. Eugenie Clark, who has been diving along the length of the Red Sea for 25 years, writes in the September National Geographic:

"The Red Sea is perhaps the most extraordinary large body of water on earth. It has a higher salinity than any ocean. No rivers run into it. Scorched by tropical sun and seared by desert drought—annual rainfall averages less than an inch—it loses each year through evaporation the equivalent of about six feet of water."

To replace this deficit, water flows in chiefly from the Indian Ocean through a shallow strait at the southern end and, to a lesser extent, from the Suez Canal northwest of the sea.

"Most ocean depths are cold," Dr. Clark writes, "but the cigar-shaped Red Sea holds warm abyssal water, especially in certain volcanic depths where temperatures reach 138 degrees Fahrenheit. These hot spots hoard potential fortunes of immeasurable worth: in the open sea."

Insurance is important in a farm business

Modern ranchers and farmers should be sure to have enough personal, employee and vehicle liability insurance to cover possible court actions, says Robert Coppersmith, Extension agricultural business specialist at New Mexico State University.

This hedge against risks is important because of the capital outlays needed to equip and maintain a farm business. A sizable judgment, resulting from a careless accident, could reduce a rancher's or farmer's capital severely or even put him out of business.

Farms and ranches currently require such large investments that owners have higher asset valuations and are now subject to larger liability suits.

As additional power equipment is added, exposure to hazards and machine-caused accidents increases.

Because risks in an individual case are so unpredictable, a farmer should try to prevent accidents. However, accidents do happen and adequate liability insurance is a must. This is especially true since the law now makes it easier for injured persons to collect damages, Coppersmith says.

A farmer risks several kinds of liability. As an individual, he may be held liable for negligent acts. As a family head, he may be held liable for the negligence of family members. As a landowner and property owner, a farmer may be held liable for property upkeep negligence or for damage done by his livestock.

As an employer, he may be held liable for both employee injuries and injury to other persons by the employee. A farmer may also be held liable for negligent business use of his farm machinery, cars and trucks.

LONG LASHES fringe the eyes of the African ground hornbill. The lashes are really feathers that help keep out dirt and dust. Similar eyelashes are portrayed in the September World, the new magazine for children published by the National Geographic Society.

places 5,000 times more iron, 25,000 times more manganese, and 30,000 times more lead than normal seawater.

"And the value of the gold, silver, copper, and zinc in the upper 300-foot of a possible 300-foot of sediments alone has been estimated at more than two billion dollars."

But biologists are more interested in fish than minerals. Despite the aridity and harsh sterility of the sea's surroundings, its coral-encrusted margins, from the surface to a depth of some 200 feet, concentrate a collection of living things unique on this planet. Investigators still are finding species new to science in the sea.

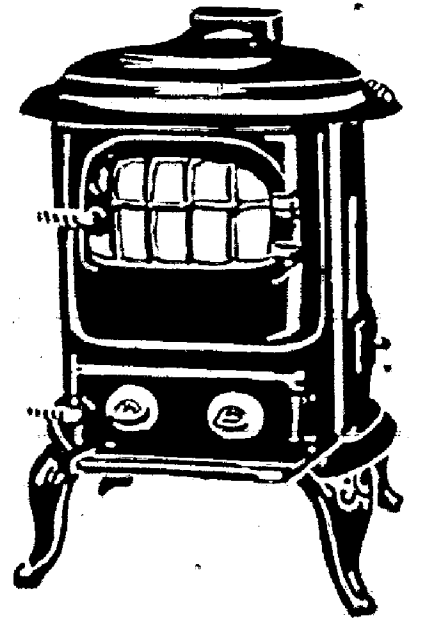

Dr. Clark saw a shark that resembles the aggressive Indo-Pacific grey reef shark but behaves quite differently, fleeing if confronted by a human diver. She describes 15 of these sharks in a courtship frenzy:

"A female broke away from the throng and swam upward with a male following and biting her repeatedly, tearing the edges of her fins, slashing the sides of her body, leaving a crescent of tooth marks on her flanks."

"It looked like vicious, aggressive behavior, but we knew well what size chunks he might have torn from her, and so could only conclude that these were 'love bits.' We were the first to record the courtship biting by these sharks anywhere in the open sea."

Dr. Clark also recorded the behavior of the goby, a seeing-eye fish that has a close relationship with a small shrimp. The shrimp is half blind but able to dig a hole in the sea floor that both fish and shrimp call home.

While the shrimp works, the goby stands watch, using its antenna as a guideline, the shrimp, which lacks peripheral vision, stays in constant contact with the body. The fish transmits information by its wiggling motions.
