Cowboy Decals Illegal

Cowboy decals are on pick-up truck windows in great numbers. Some of them are particularly hard to see through. This problem was discussed by New Mexico State Police officers at a meeting in Alamogordo last Saturday.

At the meeting, individual officers complained of the cowboy scenes as hindering vision of drivers of vehicles on which they are placed. The police officers were also concerned that they could not see into such vehicles when they have stopped them and are approaching the drivers side.

Officer Dale Housley told the News that "to start with, it wasn't so bad. The scenes were small and transparent, but now they are all shapes and sizes and many of them are hard to see through."

The officers expressed concern that the decals present a hazard to the driver who is not able to have an unobstructed view of what is behind his vehicle.

Officer Housley reports that the New Mexico Motor Vehicle Department says that such decals or scenes are illegal.

New Mexico statutes state specifically, in Sect. 60-20-46, "Windshields must be unobstructed and equipped with wipers—windows must be transparent—No person shall drive any motor vehicle with any sign, poster or other non-transparent material upon or in the front windshield, side wings or side or rear windows of the vehicle which obstructs the driver's clear view of the highway or any intersecting highway or a view from the exterior into the interior of the vehicle. This provision shall not apply to removable ventilated screens which are not permanently affixed to the window glass."

Officers will very likely be moving soon to correct this situation on New Mexico's highways.

Firewood Cutting Policies Set

As cool weather approaches and personal-use fuelwood cutting swings into high gear, the Lincoln National Forest wishes to remind interested parties of its free-use cutting policy. Cutting of dead and down firewood for personal use is permitted on all National Forest lands within the Lincoln National Forest without permit except in the White Mountain Wilderness, Forest Service administrative sites, developed recreation sites, active commercial timber or fuelwood sale areas, and those other areas posted as closed to such use. Additional information concerning special free use areas on the Cloudercroft Ranger District is available in Cloudercroft on weekends.

Only wood that is dead and on-the-ground is to be cut. Do not cut standing trees, whether green or dead. Standing dead trees are essential to some species of wildlife. Do not cut or remove from private land. If you are not sure of land ownership, do not cut.

Free firewood is for personal use only and is not to be sold. It is available to all persons without regard to race, color, sex, national origin, or place of residence.

Power saws are required to have a properly maintained Forest Service approved spark arrester. Inspection to assure compliance is available on weekdays at ranger stations located in Cloudercroft, Mayhill, Ruidoso, and Carlsbad. Power saws should be fueled only when cool and only on ground cleared of flammable material. After fueling, move the saw at least ten feet from the fueling area before starting.

If you smoke, do so in a cleared area and not while working or walking. Be sure your smokes are out. Please do not litter. Take your cans, lunch wrappings, etc., home with you.

Cross-country vehicle travel on soft ground and steep slopes will damage the natural ground cover and vegetation, resulting in erosion. Your cooperation is requested in minimizing vehicle damage to the land.

Individuals interested in cutting trees other than those dead and on-the-ground, or for uses other than personal use, should obtain information from the nearest ranger station or the supervisor's office in Alamogordo.

New Medical Clinic To Serve This Area

The formation and location of a new medical group practice clinic, sponsored by the Lovelace Medical Foundation, to be known as the Roswell Clinic, was announced today by Dr. David J. Ottensmeyer, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Lovelace Foundation.

An arrangement has been made with Doctors I.J. and Steve Marshall, whereby the property & equipment of the present Marshall Clinic, located at the corner of Fourth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, in Roswell, will be transferred to the new Roswell Clinic in the form of a living trust, according to Dr. Ottensmeyer.

The Doctors Marshall will continue to practice in the new Roswell Clinic as senior consultants. The Lovelace Foundation is recruiting additional family practice physicians to complete the staffing. Remodeling will begin shortly to establish additional rooms and facilities, and a new entrance-patio arrangement at the present Marshall Clinic site.

The new Roswell Clinic is expected to begin operating in 1978 when arrangements are completed, remodeling has established additional working space, and recruiting has been accomplished. In the meantime, the Marshall Clinic will continue its present functions. The new Roswell Clinic will initially operate with five family practice specialists, including the Marshalls.

The Lovelace Medical Foundation Board of Trustees number among its membership, four Roswell residents and one former resident. When they became aware of the growing medical services shortage in Roswell and the difficulties of recruiting new doctors, the group suggested the establishment of a group practice clinic as a separate Roswell corporation and subsidiary of the Lovelace Foundation.

The Trustees are Robert O. Anderson, Chairman of the Board of Atlantic Richfield Company and the Lovelace Foundation; Robert H. Beck, Publisher of the Roswell Daily Record; Dr. George Morrison, retired ophthalmologist; Robert B. Anderson, President of Lincoln County Land and Cattle Company; and Phillip D. Helming, Assistant to the Chairman of the Board of Atlantic Richfield Company.

Gas Tax Supports Much Education

Taxes on the oil and gas industry are expected to pay more than a fourth of the costs of operating New Mexico schools during the coming year.

Recent studies by the New Mexico Oil and Gas Association have found that state and local assessments on the oil-gas industry cover 25-30 percent of the operating expenses of public schools in the state, according to Executive Vice President Peter Hanagan.

Total revenues for education from oil and gas sources was $96.2 million in 1975-76, the last fiscal year for which complete statistics are available. This total is about twice the amount received from oil and gas sources 5 years ago.

Each of the 88 school districts in all 32 counties of the state received monies even though 95 percent of oil and gas production comes from only 4 counties. In addition the 7 state universities and 12 other educational institutions and agencies received a portion of oil and gas revenues.

The schools' share of State income from oil-gas sources totaled $83.8 million. That was 28 percent of the total operation expenditures for all school districts as reported by the State Public Finance Division. Oil-gas revenues to schools averaged about $318 per student. 180 day ADM was 265,374 students.

The $83.8 million was equivalent to more than 60 percent of the salaries paid to all full-time teachers during the fiscal year, grades 1-12.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER Lee

Straley presented a check for $286,000 to Treasurer Michael Kimbrell Monday at the Courthouse in Carrizozo. The funds come from the government as compensation for untaxable lands. Part of the money is to be used to reduce county bond debts and thereby relieve taxpayers of the need to pay the bonds with additional taxes. (Lincoln County News Photo by Robert Cates.)

Officer Taylor is Exonerated

On Aug. 11 Hal Taylor, Assistant Chief of Police for the community of Carrizozo, was arrested and charged with burglary and larceny.

Taylor was placed in the Lincoln County Jail by Magistrate Bill Payne and suspended from the police force. His bond was set at $2,500 and no 10 per cent was allowed. It took Taylor some seven hours to make the bond.

The charges against Taylor alleged that he had entered a building at the Standard Oil Bulk Plant in Carrizozo and taken a quantity of .45 and .30 calibre ammunition. The ammunition in question was allegedly recovered at Taylor's home.

Jailer-Deputy Sheriff Richard Young, who was one of those bringing charges against Taylor, was with Taylor as his backup when the ammunition was allegedly taken. Taylor has said that the ammunition, which was worth well under $100, was simply unsafe and he removed it for safety purposes.

When he took a lie detector test given by Western Security Services in Alamogordo, it was determined by the examiner that Taylor had no intention of stealing the ammunition.

Since the intent of the action is the crux of the matter, the authorities have dropped all charges against Taylor. This was made official on Sept. 15 when Assistant District Attorney Frank Wilson notified the court of the Nolle Prosequi.

Following the City Council meeting last night, Taylor, who has been suspended from the police force during this situation, was reinstated.

Democrats To Meet To Elect Delegates

A Democrat precinct meeting will be held next Tuesday, October 18 at 7:30 p.m. The purpose of the meeting is to elect precinct officers and delegates to the county convention.

The precincts are as follows: Precinct 1 at the Capitan Magistrate office, precinct 2 at the Noyal Store, precinct 3 and 4 at the Commissioners' Room in the Carrizozo Courthouse, precincts 11, 12, 13 and 14 at the Magistrate Court in Ruidoso City Hall, precinct 15 at the Chapparral Motor Hotel Lobby in Ruidoso Downs, precinct 16 at Tom Barber's home in San Patricio, and precinct 17 at the Hondo school.

On Tuesday, October 25, the Lincoln County Democrat Convention will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Carrizozo.

State Receives $1.8 Million in Grants

The New Mexico Congressional Delegation today announced the awarding of Federal grants and loans totaling $1.8 million for New Mexico.

The Delegation, in making the announcement, gave the following breakdown:

A $20,000 Professional Services grant to the Southern Rio Grande Council of Governments to assist their communities in reducing energy consumption and increasing utility effectiveness. The Economic Development Administration announced the awarding of the grant and said it will enable the SRG-COG to hire an experienced energy analyst for one year to develop strategies for conserving energy used by municipally owned utilities and their customers.

A $120,000 Technical Assistance Grant for Valle Del Sol Housing Corporation in Portales to enable individuals to participate in construction of about 40 homes under the "Self Help" program.

The Farmers Home Administration said the grant will be used to hire an executive director, a coordinator, and construction supervisor to help low-income families build their own homes.

A $153,000 loan for construction of 8 two-bedroom low-income rental units in San Jon, New Mexico. Announcement of the loan came from the Farmers Home Administration.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development announced a $52,525 grant under the Low-Rent Public Housing program to Bernalillo

Families Flee Missiles

Ten to 20 times a year, Dale and Judy Muncy get up before dawn, wake their two children and drive 25 miles to Socorro because someone is firing a missile in their direction.

The Muncys are among 150 residents along U.S. Hwy. 380 in the FIX (Firing in Extension) area beyond the White Sands Missile Range northern boundary. More than 100 others live just beyond the range's western boundary.

Since the 1950s they have been evacuated during test firings by United States and foreign launch units under an agreement that compensates them for the inconvenience.

"The Germans do such a good job we're off by 7 a.m. and back by 9," Mrs. Muncy said.

Many of the residents plan their shopping in Socorro around the firing days.

For vacating their land for up to 12 hours, each family is paid $33 per adult and $16.50 per child, plus mileage. Ranchers also receive an annual usefee.

"They've never hit one of our windmill towers, a corral, barn, or anything in all those years," Mrs. Muncy said.

But some residents remember the time 10 years ago when a Hound Dog missile was fired unannounced and hit about three quarters of a mile east of the Muncy place. They also recall an occasional dead cow after a firing, but said the range always compensates them.

Rancher H.E. Pender questions the routine.

"I know a lot of the small ranchers are glad when there's a firing," he said. "They get some money and a day off. But I don't have that much to do in town."

So we're out there, blundering around in the dark. There's cows to milk. In the winter there's ice to break. In the fall there'll be hundreds of cattle to feed. It's damned aggravating.

"I've no quarrel with the Army. They're good about paying, and they've never damaged us. If I thought they actually needed this area, I'd say fine. But I don't think they need it."

Electric Cuts Set For Elderly

Senate approval of an energy bill amendment that provides electric rate cuts to the elderly was applauded by the New Mexico Commission on Aging.

Roberto Mondragon, director of the Commission, stated that the senate action which would reduce electric bills for senior citizens by up to 40 percent is "the most significant national move to recognize the serious burden of rising energy costs for elderly on fixed incomes."

Mondragon added that the Commission on Aging has urged the State Legislature to pass similar "lifeline" utility measures during past sessions and will support legislation in this area during the 1978 session.

The Senate measure was adopted on a 56 to 36 vote as an amendment by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., that would make the lower rate available to all persons over 62 years of age.

The amendment is part of the electric utility portion of the President Carter's energy plan which has not yet cleared the Senate. The Carter proposal has passed the House.

Under Hart's amendment, utilities would have to offer senior citizens the same low electric rates they offer their biggest industrial customers. These industries often get a discount of as much as half of what residential consumers pay for electricity, Hart said.

The lower rates would only apply to electricity senior citizens need for heating, lighting and cooking, a level that states would determine.

"For senior citizens on fixed or dwindling incomes, higher energy costs can be a staggering burden. They shouldn't have to choose between paying the utility bills and other vital areas such as nutrition and health care," Hart said.

Opponents of the measure claimed it would cost utilities almost $1 billion to provide this so-called "lifeline" electric rate service for senior citizens, a cost that would be spread among other consumers.

But Hart argued the cost to other consumers would be relatively small compared with the benefits to senior citizens.

Carter asked Congress to give the government the power to order electric utilities to revise their rate structure.

New Litter Program Is Tried

New Mexico will launch a new litter reduction program that has been tested in twelve U.S. cities at a savings of thousands of dollars in sanitation costs, according to Morris Love, State Fafaris Representative.

Called Positive Little Reduction, the program has enabled cities such as Tampa, Florida, to reduce litter by as much as 70 percent, he said.

"Properly implemented, the program is also a major tool for us to hold the line against rising costs by increasing the cost-effectiveness of cleaning streets and other public areas and by decreasing both fire and health hazards caused by litter accumulation," he added.

Four interlocking components comprise the new program, he explained. They include updated ordinances, manpower and modern equipment, education, and law enforcement.

"Those four major components are designed to work together and directly against the seven sources of litter which also were identified in the research," he said.

"Before the field testing, carried out by the United States Brewers Association, it was assumed that pedestrians and motorists were mainly responsible for litter," he said. "But research revealed that well over 50 percent of litter comes from five other sources."

Those five are household refuse putouts, commercial refuse putouts, loading-unloading operations, uncovered trucks, and construction sites.

The Positive Litter Reduction program combines the most successful methods tested at sites ranging from Stouss Falls, S.D., to Dade County, Florida, which as an annual influx of more than 13 million visitors.

To put the program into operation, Morris Love will appoint an Interdepartmental Committee, composed of representatives from all key local government departments such as sanitation, attorney's office, building and zoning.

To gain public awareness for the program, an area-wide information campaign will be launched simultaneously. Using the "Pitch In!" slogan, symbol, and education materials, this campaign will urge all residents to containerize their litter and support the Committee's work.

This program supplements, extends and works along side of any other program in existence now or in the future.

Students Apply For Exchange Program

Fifty-two students from 25 New Mexico communities have applied to participate in the Governor's Student Exchange program set for November 4 for a two-week period.

The exchange program was set up by Gov. Jerry Apodaca to offer high school juniors the opportunity to study in a different school district while residing with a host family in the new district.

"The idea came from a meeting with some Clovis High School students during an open office hours session there," Apodaca said in explaining the program. "They believed that this kind of exchange would bring the state closer together, and teach residents of one area of our state about the others."

The first student exchange, initiated in 1976, had 11 participants. The second exchange, during the spring of 1977, included 24 students. "The program is growing steadily," Apodaca said. "I hope it can continue after 1978."

Editorial

Have we become a more "civilized" society over the years? Affluent perhaps, "civilized" I question. Violence is running rampant in our country and our judicial system has reached a point where it protects the wrong doer more than it does the average hard working citizen.

The laws in our country have become so complex that our law enforcement officials need a degree in law to insure conviction of the criminals they arrest, and to protect against suits by those same criminals.

The Constitution guarantees a trial by a jury of our peers, and the law says every man must be assumed innocent until proven guilty.

This is a noble sentiment, and was instituted when our laws were weak and innocent people were often convicted of crimes they didn't commit.

Now the scales of justice are tipped to the extreme in favor of the criminal. Murders, rapists, robbers, burglars & felons are brought to trial, at the taxpayers expense, and much of the time either exonerated or given such light sentences they are soon turned loose upon society again.

Very few of our penal institutions have facilities to rehabilitate the persons who do receive sentences and spend time within their confines.

Juvenile crime is on the increase at an alarming rate, and the law goes even further in protecting them than it does the adult criminal. Our law enforcement people are virtually helpless in attempting to stop these young criminals. The juveniles have no respect for the law or other peoples rights. They commit all manner of crime, from terrorizing the neighborhoods in which they live to murder, and much of the time go scott free.

We should take a long hard look at our Judicial system and demand that the laws be changed so that they are more equitable to the average citizen and less lenient to the criminal.

The U.S. Senate Finance Committee was told today by two major nationwide energy consumer groups that the House-passed Carter energy program is not only unworkable but limits future energy supplies and could endanger jobs.

Testifying for the nation's several thousand energy-using manufacturers of pulp, paper, paperboard, lumber, plywood and other forest products, T. Marshall Hahn Jr. of Portland, Oregon, told the committee headed by Sen. Russell Long (D-La.) that deregulation of oil and natural gas prices "provides the least disruptive adjustments to the new economics of energy."

The American Paper Institute and National Forest Products Assn. spokesman, who is president of Georgia-Pacific Corp., declared that "the so-called minor drain on the private sector of the Carter program over an eight-year period actually amounts to more than $100 billion."

The two large energy consuming groups, worried about acute energy shortages under the Carter program, employ some 1.4 million people and, despite major conservation measures in recent years, the paper and allied products industry still is the nation's No. 1 oil consuming manufacturing industry and is among the top five manufacturing industries in total energy consumption.

"In addition to a complicated and unworkable taxing system to raise oil & gas prices to consumers, the Carter program would discourage development of new energy supplies, increasing prices unrealistically to encourage conservation but creating new problems rather than solving anything," he declared.

"A carefully developed program of oil and gas price deregulation would not only provide the conservation-aimed prices, but also would encourage development of critically needed increased supplies and new sources," he declared.

Hahn expressed concern for individuals caught by higher energy prices, which would occur under both the Carter and the consumer programs, and pointed out that relief "can be accomplished without endangering energy supplies."

"Tax measures to relieve that financial strain on individuals should be part of an overall program for tax reform and relief, not a pseudo energy program. Such a tax relief program will be before the Senate later. The role of higher prices should be not only to help encourage conservation, as in the complicated and unworkable administration plan, but also to help finance badly needed investment in additional sources of supply and energy saving facilities."

The administration program also pits region against region, Sen. Long's committee was told.

Obviously alluding to the neck-and-neck Congressional battle over raising gas and oil prices by taxes rather than price deregulation, the nationally known scientist and G-P executive said that "if deregulation cannot be accomplished, then the equalization tax revenues should be used to encourage investment in energy production and conversion, which the nation needs so critically."

He suggested to the Senate tax committee, based on recommendations of the large consumer groups for which he testified, that an additional 20 percent investment tax credit should be available for qualified energy conservation, cogeneration (electricity as a by-product of process steam generation), fuel substitution and related additional environmental costs.

Clearly some program needs to be worked out so that business will be encouraged to expand and thereby create jobs for those who are now out of work. This was the apparent thrust of the Carter plan prior to the election, and the time for performance is at hand.

New Mexicans Can Participate Child Nutrition Hearing Set

A public hearing on child nutrition programs will be held in Dallas, Texas Nov. 3-4 to enable people in New Mexico and other southwest states to advise the U.S. Department of Agriculture of their concerns.

The hearing is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days and will be held in Room 7A23 of the New Federal Building, 1100 Commerce Street. The Dallas hearing is one of eight being held throughout the country.

We're holding these hearings to seek comment directly from people who are concerned with these programs," according to Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman.

"We want to know how well our programs are serving people and how they can be improved. We're going to listen and to learn." The child nutrition programs are the school lunch program, the school breakfast program, the child care food program, the summer food program and the non-food program.

The hearings will consider, but will not be limited to, public comment on the following areas: proposed meal patterns for the school lunch program; meal quality and plate waste; school breakfast program; summer food program; child care food program; nutrition education; competitive foods; training and staffing needs; administrative workload; student, parent and community participation; and federal state and local relationships.

The child nutrition programs provide cash and food assistance to help support food services to children in public and nonprofit private schools, residential child care institutions, summer day camps, child care centers, and family and group day care homes. The programs are administered through state educational agencies and USDA's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) regional offices. Persons interested in speaking at the Dallas hearings or submitting a written statement should contact Regional Information Staff, Food and Nutrition Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Room 5C30, 1100 Commerce Street, Dallas, Texas 75242. When contacting the FNS regional office, please indicate which hearing you plan to attend, the subject you will be speaking on and the approximate length of your testimony. Written comments may be submitted before Nov. 7.

Limited funds will be available from FNS to enable low-income individuals to testify at the nearest hearing site.

What Cogitation Indicates

ROBERT E. CATES

BITE YOUR TONGUE

The various protests currently going on around the world—to aid certain groups in their attainment of equality or freedom and the rights and benefits of first class citizenship, keep us constantly reminded of the everpresent body of prejudice which surrounds all human endeavor.

Complete objectivity is a very difficult goal to attain. The thought that our side is made up of the "good guys" and that those persons with whom we are unfamiliar or do not come in daily contact with are the "bad guys" is a view that has been with us perhaps since the dawn of recorded history. The Roman Empire divided Gaul into three equal parts for purposes of easy classification and characterized the citizens of all three parts as "barbarians". Everyone now recognizes that several areas of the Ancient World contributed as much or perhaps even more to the advance of society as did the glorious Roman Empire. Therefore, someone out there must not have been as "barbaric" as the Roman citizenry would have liked to have believed.

A great thinker once said that the theories which we believe we tend to call "facts", and the facts which we do not believe we usually call "theories".

It is difficult for most of us to realize that the world is not divided evenly between Americans and foreigners. American tourists are often surprised when traveling abroad to discover that they are no longer in the "host" role but are themselves considered "foreigners".

I am confident that the great bulk of the American public seriously feels that it is free of prejudice and can judge matters of human equality objectively. This, of course, is not the case. None of us is entirely free from the creeping mental paralysis of prejudice. Prejudice is inherent to the structure of society.

Just as a red chicken put into a pen with white chickens is likely to be pecked unmercifully—because of its different color—so the human family strives to enforce uniformity among its membership. The difference is that the chickens have only their sharp beaks with which to inflict injury while we have the much sharper weapon of words.

Our use of language, the words we choose to represent various thoughts & ideas, all too often reflect attitudes that we have acquired in the communities in which we grew up. Our views on many things are the products of our environmental influences. What we observe our elders saying and doing when we are young, scientists tell us, establishes a pattern of behavior to which we will likely continue to conform when we are adults, and which unwittingly we will pass along to our own children. In many cases these may be attitudes which we no longer agree with, but which we unconsciously continue to reflect through unselective word choices.

Bertrand Russell once called attention to the unconscious weighting of adjectives which displays prejudicial feelings. In speaking of himself, Russell says, one would say, "U an firm," in speaking to a similarly opinionated friend one would say "You are obstinate," but when speaking of someone one does not like one might say, "He is a pig-headed fool." In each case the degree of firmness is the same. It is only the frame of reference of the observer that changes. The choice of word, then, does not tell us much about the object or situation being described but can tell us much about the speaker.

Governor Earl Warren of California once observed that "When the Government does something for us, that is social progress; but when it does something for the other fellow, that is Socialism."

Until group interest is subverted and justice becomes the prime concern of mankind, language will continue to be one of the most effective weapons used against freedom and equality. Properly understood and employed, however, language can be the most valuable tool obtainable with which to remold the image of human dignity throughout the world.

To Protect Hunting — Game Thief Rewards Offered

Operation Game Thief and a special $1,000 reward have cracked the York Canyon elk case, in which five elk were shot & left by a road near Raton last spring. In a separate case, the program also led this week to conviction of a Roswell man on charges of an antelope hunting violation.

Operation Game Thief Coordinator Dan Pursley said special investigator Richard Barnhart followed up on a OGT tip and arrested 19-year-old Joseph Allen Burkhamer, Raton, on charges of killing elk out of season in connection with the York Canyon case. He said that further arrests are expected.

Burkhamer pleaded guilty to killing two of the elk and was fined $1,000 and given a six months suspended jail sentence by Magistrate Judge Florence Nowlin, Cimarron. The Game and Fish Department assessed an additional $1,000 in civil damages, $500 for each elk.

In a separate case, 26-year-old Jerry Chavez, Roswell, pleaded guilty to exceeding the antelope bag limit and was fined $400, with $300 suspended for a total fine of $100, by Roswell Magistrate Bobby Ramirez. The antelope case stemmed from an in-the-field tip from a hunter who observed the violation and immediately contacted Ruben Gonzalez, Southeast Area

Supervisor for the Game and Fish Department.

The hunter was eligible for a $250 reward, which he returned to the Operation Game Thief reward fund. He is the second Operation Game Thief caller to do so.

The caller whose information led to the arrest of Burkhamer in the elk case is eligible for a $1,000 reward from Operation Game Thief and an additional $100 reward put up by an Albuquerque man specifically for use in the York Canyon case.

That caller has been assigned code No. 151, Pursley said, and can contact the department on its toll-free telephone number, 1-800-432-4263, to collect the total $1,100. The caller did not have to give his name and was not called to testify.

Operation Game Thief's task force set the $1000 reward as one of its first orders of business, Pursley said. Standard reward in big game violations is $250, although it can run higher in especially flagrant cases. Minimum rewards in cases involving birds, small game, fish or protected nongame animals is $50, and can also be set higher.

Government May Lift Ban On Bobcat Hide Exports

Anticipating that the federal government may lift the current ban on bobcat hide exports, the N.M. Department of Game and Fish is advising trappers to record basic information on when and where they trap each bobcat and to save each skull for biological research.

"It's very important that they begin to do this now," said Harold Olson, assistant director of the department. "Our personnel need the information that trappers can supply, and trappers will have to cooperate to receive export permits when the ban is lifted, presuming that it will be."

Even if it lifts the ban, the U.S. Endangered Species Scientific Authority (ESSA) would require that each hide be tagged to qualify for export, Olson said. The Department is proposing to tag all New Mexico bobcats taken in the coming season. If the proposal is approved, trappers will be asked to turn over the skulls of trapped cats and information including the county in which it was taken, the general locale, when taken, sex and condition, to the Game and Fish Department, which will then tag the hide and qualify it for export.

Olson said that almost all the value in a hide lies in its export potential, as the ultimate market for the furs is in Europe.

"The department's biologists, through cross-sectioning of teeth, can determine a particular bobcat's age, then combine that data with the other to get better information on geographic distribution, age & sex ratios, habitat preferences, and numbers. By providing us with this information, the trappers can help us help them."

An animal protectionist group, Defenders of Wildlife, petitioned the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service earlier this year to place the bobcat on the Endangered Species List. The group asserted that recent high fur prices and increased trapping were reducing the species to the brink of extinction, an assertion most professional wildlife managers disagree with.

ESSA placed the embargo on bobcat fur exports, Olson said, pending investigation of the species' status in the United States. The status will be reviewed in Geneva, Switzerland, late this month during a meeting of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora.

Game and Fish Department Director William Huey will attend the meeting as an advisor to the U.S. representative for the Fish and Wildlife Service.

"We're confident that when the convention hears the available facts on bobcat status that the embargo will be lifted," Olson said. "ESSA may well impose a limit on the number that can be exported from each state, or from certain states, but it should allow trade to continue."

He said the department's position is that a quota would not be necessary for New Mexico, but if one is established that we recommend that it be set at a minimum of 6,000 hides annually.

"Our projections based on research in this and other states gives a population of 25,000 to 30,000 bobcats in New Mexico, figuring very conservatively," Olson said. "Given the species' reproductive capabilities, the increased level of trapping seen in the last couple of years has in no way threatened the bobcat population."

AROUND TOWN & SURROUNDING AREAS

Southeastern Regional Library was here.

Breaker one nine for the book truckers! Last Thursday I visited the bookmobile. Katy Raton, director, Keith Montrud and Elfrida Martin, clerks were very helpful. Next stop will be on October 18, 2:45-4:15 in front of the electric office. This free service, a cross section of complete library services has been coming to us since July 1965. Now it comes twice a month. For people that sew there are even patterns in envelopes.

Robert (Bobby) J. Archuleta, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Florencio Archuleta is here on leave, Bobby who is with the Marines completed his training in San Diego with the 3rd Recruit Battalion and is scheduled for tour in Hawaii for the next 20 weeks to a year.

The "Occult", a new 16 mm, a sound motion picture, will be shown at the First Baptist Church on Saturday, October 15 at 6:00 p.m. Hal Lindsey, author of two best sellers, ("Late Great Planet Earth" and "The Devil is Alive and Well on Planet Earth") guides viewers to the bizarre world of the occult declaring it to be not just a passing fad but a vital part of the continuing struggle of Satan to usurp the throne of our eternal God.

Mr. Lindsey declares that in witchcraft, astrology, Ouija boards and other forms of the occult, people do experience supernatural phenomenon and that from the ruins of Babylon to Main Street, USA, people are being drawn by mystical voices that call from darkness.

The purpose of the film is to stir up sentiment against the practice of witchcraft and to expose Satanic power that is its root. Public invited to watch film.

Following the movie, junior and high school students will enjoy a hayride and wienie roast, the First Baptist Church announced.

A Roswell friend of Mrs. Joel Pafford stopped in to visit with her this week end, Mrs. Gary Dollahan.

How many times have you asked the kids when they come home from school, "What did you have for lunch at school?" I usually find out that what they had is what I planned for supper. - Thursday, October 13:
 - B-B-Q Sandwich or Chef Salad

 - Fruit
- Friday, October 14:

LeAnne Straley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Straley, Ancho was here to spend the week end with her parents. LeAnne is employed in Casper, Wyoming with Bank Examiners as part of her college program.

The local informal Church of Christian Scientists were giving their building, located on 12th Street a face lift this weekend. Friends of the group from Midland, Texas joined the painting party. They were from the First Church of Christian Scientists in Midland.

In Carrizozo, the local church of Christian Scientist hold 11:00 a.m. Sunday and 8:00 p.m. Wednesday services. They also maintain a library. Happy birthday to the following: Barbara Turner, Aileen Lindamood Oct. 13; Sharon Steinepris, Jimmy Ortiz Oct. 14; Cynthia Morales, Thelma Aggar, Henry Vega Oct. 16; Bill Gallacher, Bill Hayes Oct. 18; Wayland Dobbs, Jr., Rachael Monreal Oct. 19. Here this week end were the family of Lincoln County News' publisher and editor, Dr. Robert Cates and Mrs. Cates (Pat) and daughters Laura and Sharon from Las Cruces were seen strolling along 12th Street last Saturday.

Public school students are not the only people that may take advantage of the school library. If you haven't seen the fine library services that your school offers, make a note to go sometime. While there you might check out some books for yourself. Some new books are 'Ceremony' by Leslie Silko, 'Raise the Titanic' by Clive Cussler, and 'Special People' by Julie Nixon Eisenhower. The public is invited, the library hours are 8 to 12:20 p.m. and 3 to 3:25 p.m. Mrs. Florian and her assistants will gladly assist you.

Kendal Jo and Robby Miller, who recently married at the First Baptist Church here, have arrived in Schweinfurt, Germany. The Millers, who both hold the rank of second lieutenant in the United States Army began a three year tour of duty in Germany. Robby is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Bill Miller, who incidentally have a wedding anniversary today.

On October 4 at 6:00 p.m., 18 Happy Homemakers met in the home of Mary Ellen Payne, County Extension Home Economist for their final meeting of the year. The group enjoyed a 'Pizza and build-your-own-sundae party'. They went over their record books and final project 'Teens Entertain'.

The 4-H program in Carrizozo and surrounding areas is currently looking for volunteer leaders to begin a new year. The strength of 4-H comes from many sources. The Cooperative Extension Service provides resources and versatility. Volunteer leaders provide healthy adult-youth relationships, teach skills and give supervision and encouragement. Parents who are involved in 4-H help to reinforce their children's learning experiences.

The 4-H program, an informal, learn-by-doing approach to education, encourages young people to choose their own projects and set goals for achievement. During National 4-H Week (Oct. 2-8) President Jimmy Carter commented, "Freedom To Be" is a most appropriate theme, since the 4-H effort reaches out to all young Americans, rural, and urban, from all racial, cultural, economic and social backgrounds."

Carrizozo is fortunate to have Mary Ellen Payne, County Extension Home Economist to guide the 4-H programs in our area. Working in her office is Angie Garcia and Colleen Garret, of Capitan. Anyone wanting to learn more about 4-H, either as a volunteer or member may call the Lincoln County Extension office.

4-H is farming, growing, sewing, art, health, nutrition, leadership and much, much more for children, teens and adults. You can't keep 4-H down on the farm. It has not lost the farm but gained the city.

One 4-H'er in this household takes a special interest in 4-H baking projects. Unit I is called "Let's Learn to Bake" and for 3 days we had griddled cakes, only he calls them 'griddle cakes.' I think he has something there....

It Isn't Easy, But —

Strip-mined Land Reclaimed

Strip-mining is literally turning parts of New Mexico's San Juan Basin upside down. Where Indian ricegrass, blue grama and fourwing saltbush once stood, the land is scarred by strip-mining.

Since the energy crisis began, Americans have been looking at coal, the nation's largest reserve of fossil fuel, as an alternative source of energy. In New Mexico, the largest coal deposits are found in the San Juan Basin around Farmington. There, coal is close to the top of the ground and can be economically strip-mined.

Strip-mining is not a complicated process. Basically, it involves removing the soil and rock, called overburden materials, to expose the coal seam. In many cases, the overburden materials are blasted and then removed with power shovels or dragline equipment.

The chunks of earth that are removed are called spoil. They are dumped into areas previously mined, forming steep ridges. Once the spoil is removed and the coal seam exposed, small power shovels or front-end loaders dig the coal and load it into trucks. In the past, this was the final step in strip-mining. The ridges of spoil were left where they were. The deep pits where the coal had been were left open.

Now federal law makes it mandatory that strip-mined land be reclaimed.

Reclaiming semi-desert areas sounds easy, but it isn't.

On Electricity Rates —

Consumers Get Voice

Consumers of electricity will get to tell their side of the story, thanks to a new federal grant and a new unit within the Attorney General's office.

Attorney General Tony Anaya has announced the award of a $200,000 grant from the Federal Energy Administration to intervene in regulatory proceedings involving electric utilities. Simultaneously, Anaya established a new Energy and Utilities Unit within his office's Consumer Protection Division to advocate consumer views and interests before the Public Service Commission.

"This money will allow us to expand our legal staff to take on more utility rate and regulatory proceedings," Anaya explained. "More importantly, the bulk of the money is set aside to hire expert witnesses for those cases. We have been in many cases in the past two and a half years, but have generally been unable to match the utilities' high-priced economists, engineers and other experts — paid for by their ratepayers. This new federal funding will help us to match the sophistication of their presentations."

New Mexico's application was one of only twelve to be granted by FEA, out of 41 submitted.

Not all of the money will be spent directly by the Attorney General's Office, however. Sixty thousand dollars will be turned over to the Energy Resources Board (ERB) for it to contract for expert witnesses. "We have worked very closely with ERB since the inception of this application and will be coordinating our expenditures with theirs," Anaya noted. "We are very grateful to Fred O'Cheasey and the ERB staff for their support, and plan to continue our joint efforts with them to use this money as effectively as possible."

For consumer groups that want to give their side of the story themselves, $48,000 of the grant money has been set aside. This money will be distributed to groups needing funds to participate effectively in Commission proceedings involving electric utilities. Grants will be awarded on the basis of such factors as the cogency and uniqueness of the positions to be advocated, the groups' membership and experience, and quality of staff and consultants.

Consumer groups may also benefit from technical assistance through the professionals who will be hired by the grant. Moreover, a mechanism will be established for consulting with consumer groups on their concerns and suggestions for utility proceedings.

Consumer groups wishing to obtain financial or technical assistance or serve in a consulting capacity are invited to send representatives to an open meeting to be held on Thursday, October 20, 1977, at 10:00 a.m. in the Attorney General's Office, Bataan Memorial Building, Santa Fe.

Representatives should contact Assistant Attorney General Paul Biderman, project director, at P.O. Drawer 1508, Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501, 988-8851 (Ext. 249), to obtain advance copies of draft guidelines for determining group eligibility for subgrants, as well as the agenda for the meeting.

Gemsbok Drawing Set

Residents and nonresidents will get equal chances in the drawing today for the dozen each of gemsbok and Persian ibex licenses to be issued by the N.M. Game and Fish Department, but the price differentials between resident and nonresident license fees will remain in effect.

A federal district court panel in Albuquerque recently handed down a decision in the case brought by a Texas hunter, David B. Terk, against the department two years ago, ruling that the department could charge different fees for nonresident hunters but that it could not set aside block numbers of licenses for residents and nonresidents.

Terk's suit arose over New Mexico's desert bighorn sheep hunt, for which five resident and one nonresident licenses allotted. He said that such quotas, and the price differentials in nonresident and resident license fees, were unconstitutional.

The decision did not affect this year's bighorn sheep hunts, but will affect next year's.

SANTA FE - New Mexico voters don't want to see a change in the quota system on liquor licenses, according to Gov. Jerry Apodaca. He sites his attempt in the last session to change the law.

"Public sentiment was immediately against our proposition earlier this year to allow one license for each 1,200 population," he said. "I'm very confident that if it were put to a vote, the people would support restricted licensing."

Apodaca said the mail to his office ran almost totally against any change in the present law during the last session. "The general public told us very clearly they want to see limited licenses," he said.

Even though the so-called quota system may drive up the resale value of liquor licenses, it appears the most vocal elements in the state want it that way. Apodaca obviously doesn't anticipate introducing any changes in the coming session of the legislature.

The State Corrections Board unanimously voted to take first steps toward acquiring Villa Solano missile site near Roswell as a minimum security facility for about 100 adult inmates.

Earlier the Santa Fe County grand jury said the Villa Solano site was a must purchase because of overcrowding at the State Prison in Santa Fe. Currently more than 1,159 men are housed at the Santa Fe facility. Normal capacity is 850.

The grand jury also said the legislature should appoint a special committee to study the prison and cited overcrowding, low-employee salaries and lack of minor funding as the prison's chief problems.

The jury also said construction of the new Los Lunas medium security facility "should be placed on a full emergency basis" to relieve the Santa Fe prison problem. Corrections Chief Ed Mahr said groundbreaking will take place at Los Lunas next spring with completion of the new prison in about two years.

The State Park Commission meeting last week in Albuquerque laid out plans for the rehabilitation of the lodge at Conchas Lake State Park near Tucumcari and major improvements for Elephant Butte State Park.

Rosemary Duffield, recreation director at Los Lunas Hospital, received an outstanding service award in the field of parks and recreation from the New Mexico Recreation and Park Association meeting in Hobbs earlier this month. She works with handicapped children at Los Lunas. Sam Graft, director of the State Park Commission, also received an award. He had received one in years past when he was Parks Director at Las Cruces.

James D. West, Jr., of Albuquerque, was named education director for the State Corrections Department last week. West, a University of New Mexico graduate, helped set up the School on Wheels program in Albuquerque for troubled children.

A 60-year-old Santa Clara woman was the eighth case of bubonic plague in New Mexico this year, and persistence of Espanola Hospital officials was given the credit for catching the symptoms. State Health and Social Services Department spokesmen said the woman was suffering from a gall bladder attack when admitted to the hospital, but diligent attendants also diagnosed the plague. The woman recovered and was released later.

State Liquor Director Carlos Armijo has issued an order to show cause why Fortuna Properties, Inc., the embattled owners of Ruidoso Downs and Supland Park race tracks, should not lose their liquor licenses at the two tracks. The San Diego based owners of the tracks also were under the gun last week to sell their interests in the tracks. They told the State Racing Commission meeting in Albuquerque they would agree to sell their interests.

Brown Construction Co. of Albuquerque was the apparent low bidder last week on a 10-mile Interstate 25 project north of Truth or Consequences. The bid was $4.88 million and will change the highway about eight miles north of Truth or Consequences for 10 miles north.

Gov. Jerry Apodaca last week appointed Ernest S. Romero of Taos to the State International Trade Commission. Romero is president of the Centinel Bank of Taos and replaced Manuel A. Ferran of Albuquerque. His term will expire April 20, 1978.

A bowl of activities

Robie Burke

Here is a cupful of crime for the teenagers!

Inmates in the Louisiana State Prison at Angola are giving speeches against crime. The anticrime speeches, given before high school students and civic groups, began as an escape plot, but it ended up as heroes. The inmates tell stories about drugs and prison life. School principals say it makes a strong impression on students.

Sanders and Ken Plaisance, 35 a lifer, have been making the speeches for years. They estimate they've made 299 speaking tours.

After a recent speech, in which Sanders said he wouldn't know his children if they were sitting right in front of him, a pretty 13 year old girl approached him.

"Do you know me?" she asked. "I'm your daughter."

The stories of Sanders and Plaisance are similar. They really want to convince kids that if they mess too much with alcohol and dope, they'll eventually end up with us at Angola, and we certainly don't want them to join us. These two men have been beneficial to all high school students.

A Dash of Horse-back riding for all you cowboys!

A man by the name Sam Diamond began a horse back ride, back in 1975 and he is still riding today. "What I am trying to do is re-discover America," said Diamond, who was in Greenville, Texas, when asked. Dike an old-timer he's taken his time on the trip, playing the piano in Nashville and Memphis in Tennessee and Little Rock, Ark.

There aren't too many people left with the guts to ride 4,000 miles on a horse, however he took it pretty easy, stopping when he pleased and etc.

Almost all our faults are more pardonable than the methods we think up to hid them.

The temperance group in our Florida community was busy during a "wet-dry" election campaign placing in hundreds of windows placards which read: "This Home is Dry." The local printer printed a special card for his own window, confessing: "This Home Leaks a Little!"

Do You Know?

1. There is a steady stream of cars quietly going over to the Bonita Dam? Wonder why?

2. That there is still a lot of activity at the McDaniel Trailer in Nogal?

A note holder may be made by removing bait holder, spray the trap, then glue on a picture of a small mouse. Write "Notes" across top and this verse across bottom: "Not for mice, Not for cheese. Leave a note if you please. Good Christmas present make it before things get too busy."

If you have plants in your home, and you find many of your plants are dropping their buds, before they bloom, you need acid in your soil. If you do not have the proper commercial food on hand just use a 1/2 teaspoon of vinegar in 1/2 gallon of water and pour around the plants. Do not put too much. This much also helps plants bloom.

Around The Bowl

It's beginning to look like October, pumpkins are maturing and owls are "Hooting". Gardens are turning brown and flowers are dipping their heads with frowns. Grass is growing slower and apples are dropping faster. It is a wonderful month for mysteries and goodies. Happening at the postoffice, Ralph Forsythe had a smile on his face when he loaded Steven his over night house guests, and Sue Stearns into his Jeep. They were going over to see the animals at the Grizzly Adams movie set. Steven had a birthday and we congratulate him.

We have a special visitor this week, David Granger is visiting with his parents Mr. and Mrs. E. Brieger, and we are very glad to have him home again. He has been working in Houston.

Our dear little 101 year old friend Molly Bosh, is still trying to recover from an illness and I heard through the grapevine that she is improving a little, so get those cards in so she will be cheered up.

Bye now till next week.

Job Service Offices

Need Money Now

Job Service offices throughout New Mexico can continue to operate for at least a month with funds on hand, Employment Security Commission Chairman William A. Anderson says.

An assessment of the agency's financial condition had been requested by the Department of Labor regional administration as a result of the failure of Congress to pass the Labor-HEW Appropriations bill, tied up by a dispute over abortion funding.

"Through application of basic management techniques, we have achieved a substantial surplus, and we can draw on this carryover money to keep our offices open until Congress acts on our appropriation," Anderson commented.

The ESC also will be able to draw on CETA Title VI funds, appropriated under a separate bill and administered by ESC under the Governor's balance of state program, to complete October operations if necessary.

Scientist Probe Stratosphere For Fital Answers

What effect does man's activity on the earth's surface have on the stratosphere? How are the ozone content and temperature affected? And what effect will these stratospheric changes have on the earth's surface? To answer these questions, scientists need more information on the photochemistry of the stratosphere; its aerosol, carbon dioxide, ozone, water vapor, nitric oxide and chlorine content.

Researchers from across the country are now working together at White Sands Missile Range to gather this information.

Next week, sophisticated sampling equipment will be lifted by two giant helium balloons launched over White Sands Missile Range. Part of the ongoing STRATCOM (for STRATOSPHERIC COMPOSITION) program, the balloons will be launched from Holloman Air Force Base. They are scheduled to travel as high as 25 miles above the earth's surface and remain aloft approximately 33 hours.

The Army's involvement with the program is, of course, defense oriented. Ballistic missile defense, communication and electronic warfare all are dependent on electromagnetic waves in the atmosphere. Through the STRATCOM experiments, the Army hopes to better predict what distortion a nuclear blast would have on those electromagnetic waves and the functioning of our defenses.

A unique aspect of the STRATCOM VIII program is its large number of test platforms. Besides the two balloons, three parachute drops, a U-2 flyover, five rocket flights as well as ground site tests are scheduled to collect and measure data.

Collected data will be compared to check the ability of a photochemical model to accurately predict profiles of atmospheric composition.

The first balloon, with a volume of nearly 22 million cubic feet, is scheduled for launch September 26, winds permitting. It will carry 30 instruments weighing 1,100 pounds. As the balloon near its peak altitude of 25 miles, a nitric oxide sensing instrument will be dropped by parachute. Immediately after, a second parachute will be dropped carrying an instrument to measure nitric oxide by a different technique.

The balloon will remain at the peak altitude for an hour gathering data. During this period, a third parachute will deploy a water vapor sensor.

During the afternoon, the balloon will be brought down about 15 miles for a series of experiments during sunset. Release of ballast during the evening will allow the balloon to regain peak altitude for measurements during sunrise the next day.

Flight termination is planned for about 3 p.m. the day after launch.

The second balloon will be launched a few hours after the first. Containing 11 million cubic feet of helium, it will carry a three-instrument, 1,000 pound payload to a 23-mile altitude. Experiment objectives require both balloons to be aloft at the same time.

The first balloon payload was fabricated and assembled at the University of Texas at El Paso under direction of Miguel Izquierdo, Professor David Murefay, University of Denver, will direct the experimental program of the second balloon.

White Sands Missile Range will provide radar, rocket and telemetry support with data acquisition and processing, coordinated by Bob Jones of National Range Operations Directorate.

Arthur Korn, Aerospace Instrumentation Division of the Air Force Geophysics Laboratory in Massachusetts is responsible for balloon design, launch and flight control. Holloman Air Force Base's Balloon branch, commanded by Major Joseph Koehky, will launch the balloons. Duke Gildenburg, Holloman meteorologist, is responsible for weather and balloon trajectory predictions.

Federal agencies supporting the STRATCOM program or specific experiments are the Department of Defense, Energy Research and Development Administration, the National Science Foundation, and the Ames, Goddard and Langley divisions of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A NASA U-2 aircraft, carrying sensors complimentary to those aboard the balloon platforms will be airborne

Wells, Harkey Married

Rhonda Wells and Steve Harkey were married Saturday, September 10th in a single ring ceremony at the Assembly of God Church in Mountainair, New Mexico. The Rev. James Wells of Dexter, the brides grandfather officiated. He and Mrs. Wells celebrated their 59th wedding anniversary on this day also.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Wells of Claunch. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Harkey, Star Route-N, Carrizozo.

Baskets of white gladiolus with blue mums and large satin bows stood on Roman pillows on each side of the altar area. Candelabra entwined with greenery held varried blue candles.

Mrs. Rolland Hubbard of Dexter, aunt of the bride, played the wedding processional and recessional and accompanied Roberta Ortega as she sang "One Day at a Time". Laurie Voss of Carrizozo registered the guests.

Lindsay and "Cat" Payne, both of Carrizozo.

Mrs. Wells, mother of the bride wore a two-piece pale blue knit short sleeve dress with a belted waist and white accessories. Her corsage was also blue mums and white rosebuds.

Mrs. Harkey wore a navy and white skirt waist navy accessories. Her corsage was also blue mums and white rosebuds.

The bride carried a silk hankie in her sleeve cuff belonging to the late Paul Wahl, a tradition in the Harkey family.

A reception was held in the Fellowship Hall of the church following the ceremony.

The brides table was covered with a lace cloth over a blue cloth. The brides bouquet was used as the floral arrangement. The three tier heart shaped cake was topped with a heart with bells. Between the tiers were

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father, Bill Wells. Her lace gown fashioned by her mother featured a three tier skirt, sweetheart neckline edged in lace and full long cuffed sleeves. Her shoulder length veil was of the same lace as the bridal gown and attached to a pearl clip.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of light and dark blue mums with white rosebuds and accented with forest green leaves.

Roberta Ortega of Sulfer, Oklahoma was Maid of Honor. Bridesmaid was Lorita Wells, of Claunch, cousin of the bride. They wore flowered gowns on a light blue background with butterfly sleeves and square neckline edged in lace. They carried arm bouquets of blue mums & white rosebuds tied with light blue satin bows.

Best Man was Sammy Roper of Carrizozo. Groomsman was G.L. Straley of Ancho. Ushers were Gary accents of blue roses. Mints and nuts were also served.

Serving the cake was Mrs. Linda Wells of Mountainair, cousin of the bride, who also made the cake. Pouring at the punch bowl was Mrs. Barbara Langley of Clovis, sister of the bride.

Approximately 140 guests were seated at tables with white coverings with vases of summer garden flowers.

For going away the bride wore a light pink summer dress with contrasting flowered print at the collar-cap sleeves and waistband. Trips to the Royal Gorge, the Petrified Forest and Grand Canyon were planned.

The couple are now at home South of Carrizozo where Mr. Harkey is a partner in the Carrizozo Welding and Supply Company.

Courtesies extended to the couple was a shower given by the Women of Claunch and a personal shower for Rhonda given by Mrs. Charolette Birmingham and her daughter Sandra.

Social Security Helps Women

"Although social security touches the lives of everybody in one way or another, there are some aspects of the program that have special meaning to women. These features are discussed in a booklet called 'A Woman's Guide to Social Security' which is available at your nearest social security office," Dan Mathis, social security field representative, said today.

"The booklet contains many useful tips to women, including a reminder to notify social security whenever you change the name you use in employment, and how to report wages of household help for social security

Mathis may be contacted at the County Commissioner's Room in the Courthouse in Carrizozo on Tuesday, October 18, between the hours of 10-12.

Schemnitz Studies Plight of Bighorn Sheep

Say bighorn sheep to most people, and they think of trophy heads. But, say bighorn sheep to Dr. S.D. Schemnitz of New Mexico State University's Agricultural Experiment Station, and he thinks of 19 bighorns struggling to survive in the Big Hatched Refuge southwest of Deming.

According to Schemnitz, the desert bighorn are indigenous to southwestern New Mexico. "This herd is one of the last remnants of the days when herds of bighorns roamed over many of the mountain ranges of southwestern New Mexico," Schemnitz said.

The herd hasn't always been small though. In the early 1950's, its population was estimated between 120 and 125 sheep. But, severe droughts in 1954 and 1956, combined with overgrazing by deer and livestock, caused widespread starvation. By 1960, the bighorn population in the Big Hatched Mountains had dwindled to 25 animals.

Schemnitz, head of the Fishery and Wildlife Department at NMSU, is project advisor for the study funded by the Bureau of Land Management & the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish. Also working with Schemnitz are graduate students Mark Lenarz and Tom Watts.

"We undertook this cooperative, three-year study to find out how many bighorns inhabit the range and why the herd hasn't increased in size over the last twenty years," Schemnitz said.

The researchers also want to find out if the range has recovered enough from the droughts of the 1950's to provide the bighorn with adequate supplies of forage and water.

The study began in September, 1976, when researchers shot three ewes and two rams with harmless tranquilizer darts. Schemnitz estimates the tranquilizers were in effect for five or 10 minutes.

"During that time, we attached radio-telemetry collars to each sheep and took body measurements," he said.

The collars emit distinct signals that can be picked up several miles away, thus making it possible for the researchers to follow the herd's movements. By monitoring the herd, researchers have made several interesting discoveries.

"For instance, we found only 18 sheep living in the entire mountain range," Schemnitz said. "We also learned to recognize at least 11 of them as individuals." The researchers have given these individuals names, such as "Old Mama" and "Phantom."

In addition, the researchers found that a lack of food and water do not appear to be factors limiting the herd's growth.

"Although there seem to be no natural seeps or springs in the Big Hatched Mountains, we do assume bighorns get moisture from eating prickly pear and other succulent vegetation. And we assume this supplies them with their water requirement," Schemnitz said.

The researchers also found horn and body growth of the Big Hatched sheep was comparable to pen-raised bighorns. Further, they found that lambs seemed healthy and well fed. "This indicates that high quality foods like yucca, octillo, and prickly pear and grasses are available. So, we assume food is not a factor limiting herd growth," Schemnitz said.

Assuming food and water do not limit the herd's size, then what does?

According to graduate student Lenarz, one obvious reason for small herd size is the high lamb mortality rate. "During the first year of study, seven lambs were born, but one survived through the first year. Some disappeared as early as weeks after birth, while others reached the age of 11 weeks before disappearing," Lenarz said.

Lenarz also pointed out that first year is critical to survival. "A lamb survives that first year, it usually or often live to a ripe old age of 10 or 12 years."

The evidence suggests that lambs die when the herd moves from the Hatched Mountains across the flats small group of mountains outside range. "This implies that predators such as coyotes, are killing some of lambs," Lenarz said, although emphasized that predator kills unsubstantiated.

University Tests Crambe As An Oil Substitute

New Mexico State University is testing crambe to determine if it has potential as an industrial seed crop in New Mexico.

"Mash the seeds in the palm of your hand," said Carl Roberts, a research specialist, "and you can feel the oil coming out of them. When that oil is extracted from the seeds and refined, it can be used as a petroleum substitute in the petro-chemical industry."

Roberts went on to explain that he is working with Dr. Koert Lessman, head of NMSU's Agronomy Department, to determine if crambe has potential as an industrial seed crop in New Mexico.

"If crambe grows and produces well in this climate, it will further diversify agriculture in New Mexico," Roberts pointed out.

Crambe is believed to be a native of the Mediterranean area. It's seed was first introduced into this country by the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station in the 1940's. Intensive evaluations of a number of strains of crambe began in Texas in 1958, with the first detailed work done by Lessman in Indiana beginning in 1962. Since then a number of states have tested the potentials of crambe.

Crambe gained attention when a law was passed outlawing the killing of sperm whales. At that time it was discovered that crambe oil could replace sperm whale oil in making a variety of plastics and lubricants.

According to Roberts, one of the major products of crambe is its oil. Crambe oil is produced by crushing the seed with the pod still attached. Once crambe's dark yellow oil is extracted, it contains 51 to 60 percent erucic acid, a crystalline fatty acid found in cruciferous plants such as parseed and mustard. Extracted erucic acid is important because it can be used as a mold lubricant in casting steel, in manufacturing rubber additives, as a lubricant and as a possible ingredient in waxes.

Researchers have also discovered that purified erucic acid may be split into brassylic and pelargonic acids. Brassylic acid is used in making nylon-type fibers, plasticizers, polyesters, alkyd resins, lubricants and surface active agents.

On the other hand, pelargonic acid is currently available for industrial uses and is used for the production of jet-engine lubricants, plasticizer alkyd resins, vinyl stabilizers, flotation agents, insect repellent, pharmaceutical and other synthetic chemicals.

Assuming crambe could be successfully raised in New Mexico there would be several advantages growing it.

Scientists Experiment With Seawater Barley

"Water, water, everywhere—Nor any drop to drink," goes Samuel Coleridge's lament about the sea in "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner." Nor any drop for crops, a farmer might add.

But two scientists at the University of California at Davis have found a way to use some of that sea water to grow barley.

About four years ago they set out to solve a problem nearly as old as the sea; how to grow crops in a salty environment. Besides tapping the vast amounts of water and minerals locked in the oceans, a solution could put normally barren coastal lands to use.

An estimated 10 percent of the world's farmlands are plagued by high concentrations of salt, virtually a poison to plants.

The traditional anti-salt strategy has been to leach, or remove, it from the soil, requiring costly land reclamation projects. The barley project is different.

"Our philosophy is to genetically suit the plant to the soil rather than adjusting the soil to the plant," said Dr. Emanuel Epstein, director of the project. It is sponsored by the Department of Commerce and the National Science Foundation.

Mainly because of its adaptability to adversity, barley was chosen for the experiment. From 7,200 genetically distinct barley seeds tested for their salt resistance, 22 "finalists" were selected.

"It was like an elimination trial in sports," said Dr. Epstein. "We weeded out the strains most sensitive to salt." The seeds were planted in a sandy, 60-by-125-foot plot near Bodega Bay, Calif. Part of the plot was irrigated straight from the Pacific; other parts received diluted sea water. One section got fresh water.

"The gophers nibbled away at the plants and we had to install a net to keep the birds out," Dr. Epstein said. But many plants grown in sea water survived, and although smaller than normal, were of good quality. The yield was an average 900 pounds per acre, compared with about 2,000 per acre on a normal farm.

This summer the scientists harvested their second crop, and the yield was even greater. One variety's yield increased by 60 percent.

But even if those crops succeed, the question of whether saltwater cultivation is practical on a larger scale will remain. The scientists know their method would be limited.

Mid High Braves Win Again

The Ruidoso Mid-High Braves continued their winning ways last week in Carrizozo. The game started off bad for both teams as there was a scheduling mistake involving the times to play. That resolved, the Braves went on to beat Carrizozo 34 to 0.

Scott Neal drew first blood for the Braves by going around left end for the score. He did the same thing for the 2 point conversion. Neal also scored the second score for the Braves with a Quarterback sneak. The conversion failed.

At half time the score was 20 to 0 and Ruidoso scored twice more in the second half. So far on the season, Ruidoso has won all four contests they have been in by scores of 40 to 0, 34 to 0, both games over Carrizozo, 34 to 0 over Capitan, and 14 to 6 over Roswell Mesa.

Neal was chosen offensive player of the game with 20 points in the game. Frederickson intercepted a pass and ran it back 70 yards for a TD. Neal scored the last score of right tackle.

The cheerleaders for Ruidoso were Cyd Wright, Lols Covill, De Lese Newton, Connie Rue, Cristi Mount, and Angela King. Mrs. Wright is the pep club sponsor.

In Other Sports

The 4th annual Carrizo Mountain Classic Golf Tournament will be held October 15 and 16 in Carrizozo. The tournament will be a 36 hole metal play contest with 16 man flights and a championship flight. The entry fee is $30.00, and entries are coming in from all over New Mexico. A hamburger fry catered by Jackie Martin will be on tap for Saturday night, and a breakfast Sunday morning will be taken care of by the Ladies Golfers Association.

The 7th and 8th grade football team will travel to Capitan on Thursday afternoon to do battle with the young tigers. The 7th and 8th graders are 1 on the season and will be trying to post their second win of the season over the tigers.

Little League football is now upon us. Saturday will be the first games for all four teams. At the Capitan field Capitan will play one of the two Ruidoso teams, while Carrizozo will play the other right after.

Teams Have Ups and Downs

Football in Lincoln County involved many ups and downs. To start with the ups, Ruidoso High ran all over Hatch Valley High School by the score of 27 to 0. The district match was just a warm-up of Ruidoso in that they face Tularosa Friday night.

Josh Ensor scored the first TD with Brad Maddox kicking the extra point. In the second period, it was Ensor and Maddox on the scoreboard again. The half ended with the score 14 to 0. In the third quarter Hector Aguilar caught a TD pass which was jarred loose into the end-zone, but the Warriors recovered the ball for the TD, with Alex Padilla doing the honors. Quarterback Borde Williams scored the last score on a Quarterback sneak. Williams was 9 for 13 in the air. Josh Ensor gained 76 yards on the ground in 15 carries. Ruidoso had 290 yards of total offense to Hatch's 70 yards.

The Corona Cardinals faced Vaughn in Vaughn and started out doing a great job both on offense and defense. Corona kicked off to Vaughn and covered the kick well. Two plays later Cully Nalda and Ken Gibbs sacked the Eagle Quarterback in the end-zone for a 2 point safety.

Vaughn then kicked off to Corona from their own 20 yard line. The Cardinals put together a steady drive that resulted in a 3 yard touchdown by Scott Nalda. Nalda also ran the conversion over.

Neither team scored during the remainder of the half and Corona went into the dressing room with a 10 to 0 halftime lead.

The Eagles were first to get on the scoreboard in the second half by scoring on a TD pass. Their conversion was good so the score stood at 10 to 8.

Both teams suffered from penalties and mistakes, but the Cardinals were next to score on a 2 yard run by Joe Salinas. Nalda ran the conversion in to make the score 18 to 8.

The Eagles caught fire late in the game and scored 14 quick points to win the game 20 to 18.

Leading Tacklers: Walter Genster, 15 tackles; Scott Nalda 12, Ken Gibbs 10, Troy Yancy 10, Scott Williams 9, Scott Nalda, 39 carries for 188 yards, 1TD; Ken Gibbs, 12 carries for 27 yards; Joe Salinas, 2 carries for 4 yards, 1 TD; Cully Nalda, 3 catches for 57 yards.

The unbeaten Carrizozo Grizzlies (3-0-2) went against the Hagerman Bobcats (5-0) last Friday night and suffered their first loss of the season.

Before gametime Friday the Bobcats were ranked 2nd and the Grizzlies 3rd in Class 'A' ranks. The Bobcats proved worthy of their No. 2 ranking.

The unimaginative and sometimes dull Grizzly offense failed to mount any sort of a drive all night, and kept the Grizzly defense on the field most of the night.

The Grizzly defense managed to hold the Bobcats at bay for the first half of the game, but finally folded in the 2nd half. Hagerman broke a scoreless tie after receiving the 2nd half kick-off and marching the length of the field for a 6-0 lead.

At the start of 3rd quarter Hagerman again started a long drive. Hitting on five consecutive short range passes the drive was culminated on a 30-yard draw play. With the Grizzly offense still unable to move the ball the Bobcats managed to block a Zozo punt and ran it in for their 3rd touchdown of the game.

In five previous games the Grizzly defense had given up but two touchdowns. But with the offense unable to move the ball, resulting in poor field position throughout the game, the Grizzly defense finally broke down for the first time this season.

The Grizzlies will now have two weeks before their next game, when they will travel to Reserve for their first district game of the season. The following Friday Capitan will visit the Grizzlies for what could decide the winner of our district.

Capitan also took it on the chin in the last two minutes of their match with Melrose. They lost 6 to 0. As all of this week's football coaches noted, penalties and mistakes were the difference in all of the contests. This week Carrizozo has a week off. Capitan hosts Reserve, and Corona travels to Hagerman.

Football Contest

From the Sports Mike

And they all laughed at the cricket for the prediction of an 18 point spread, but it was the closest guess of the final score as yet for the cricket. Actually Ida Beltran has the honors of the closest guess with 16 to 0. This is close to Mrs. Barney Zamora's guess of 19 to 8. She is week by week only a few points off at all times, and has won once.

Jimmie Lucero Sr. and Eddie Luna both had the Hagerman score correct, but missed the Carrizozo score. Four people had the Carrizozo score figured correctly, Larry Marlin, Manuel Verdugo, Mabel Chaves, and Cindi Fenter.

A tip of the hat from the cricket to Margaret Lane and Marie Barela for following the prediction exactly in the face of strong public sentiment.

So the jackpot this week is $50, and the game to guess is the Capitan vs Reserve game this Friday in Capitan.

In predicting this week's action, Carrizozo is easy as they will take the week off from play. Ruidoso will be at Tularosa (3A) for what is probably the hardest match so far this year. Capitan will host Reserve for the Capitan Homecoming, and Corona will be in Hagerman for the Hagerman Homecoming.

Predictions: Carrizozo should not lose this week. Capitan should win by 28. Ruidoso to win by 2, and, alas, Corona will have a long ride home from Hagerman after losing by 30.

Girls Volleyball

Saturday night Capitan hosted Dexter in what turned out to be one of the toughest matches they have played. In the JV match Dexter intimidated the Tigers by the scores of 15 to 5, and 15 to 1.

The Varsity match was closer with Capitan winning the first game 15-6 and then dropping the next two by score of 15 to 9 and 15 to 4. In the second game the Tigers were ahead 7 to 2, but Dexter proved to be too strong and pulled the game and the match out. Coach MacVeigh commented, "We were just beaten by a better team. They took a game from Estancia last week, and will probably play them for the state 2A title." This was the last non-district match for Capitan with the District round robin tournament happening this Saturday in Cloudercroft for the first round. Capitan is playing Hondo at 12:00 noon, Lake Arthur at 2:00 p.m. and Cloudercroft at 5:00 p.m. The tournament is used to select the top two teams for the District tournament to be held in Carrizozo. Carrizozo has declined to play in the district round robins for reasons that are not clear to the Lincoln County News at this time.

The News will try to fairly investigate the reasons that Carrizozo will be hosting the District Play-offs, but is not participating in any of the competition until then.

The Ruidoso Girls Volleyball team was busy this last week with three matches. In the first they beat Hatch by scores of 14 to 16, 15 to 6, and 15 to 10. Their next opponents, Cloudercroft, proved to be much stronger. Ruidoso jumped to a lead with a 15 to 13 first game victory, but dropped the second and third games by 15 to 10 and 15 to 10. In the third match of the week, Alamogordo proved to be too strong for the girls and won 15 to 4, and 15 to 6.

The Corona Cardinals met the Carrizozo Grizzlies at Corona at 10:30 Saturday morning. In a previous game with the Grizzlies to win both the 'A' and the 'B' games. The Cardinal 'B' team beat Carrizozo 15-9, 15-6. The 'A' game was a close race, and ended with the scores of 16-14, 16-14. A really outstanding job was done by Bessie Luera who got in 13 points with her serve.
