'Old' Lincoln Town ---

Renovation Plans Are Outlined

The town of Lincoln will be the underlying principal behind the Museum of New Mexico's plans to make renovations and create new interpretive displays at the Lincoln State Monument.

At a meeting in the old courthouse last Thursday, plans for the renovations were outlined by Dr. Michael Warner.

The state agencies had applied for a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities of $188,000 to finance the work. The request was turned down, the group of citizens was advised. Warner added that the grant request will be resubmitted and that he is also performing a survey of other possible funding sources.

An advisory group of Lincoln residents, representing the Lincoln Historical Review Board, the Heritage Trust, Pageant Corporation and other parties, was formed to work with Warner in the final planning.

Warner's three-year, three-phase system of implementation plan will encompass physical and archaeological aspects. The old courthouse would become an orientation center; The downstairs rooms would be devoted primarily to informing the visitor about the general history of the town and region. Interpretive displays would include more extensive information about history of the town and region.

Those displays would include combinations of artifacts with effective graphic presentations, incorporating newspaper clippings, historic documents and historic photographs. Warner came up with interpretive plan dealing with three major areas - land, people, and general history.

The exhibits dealing with land would describe the area geographically and geologically, in an effort to show what attracted people to settle here. They will also address the types and utilization of resources. Artifacts, photographs and possibly slide shows will be designed to show the importance of water to the area.

Another room in the old courthouse will be designed to explain the folklore and social history of the people who inhabited the area in the past and the present, including exhibits on myths, literature and artwork. Other exhibits would deal with the economic utilization of the land, which included mining, farming, ranching and cottage industries.

The object of those exhibits would widen the historical scope of the museum to include more than just the Billy the Kid era, and the Displays would trace Lincoln's history from those days through the early 1900's to the present and would attempt to answer such questions as "why Lincoln survived and White Oaks died," and how the town's interesting historical flavor has been preserved. Warner added.

The old schoolhouse, constructed by the Works Progress Administration and having less historical value than the other buildings, would be used for a community center, a small public library and provide public restrooms. During the first phase of work, the school building would also be utilized as an area for staff member to fabricate exhibits and store their materials.

Other plans include restoration of the Watson House to an early 20th century condition, with one room restored as an apothecary general repairs and maintenance of the Tunstall Store, and an archaeological excavation of the McSween home site.

Durable metal signs, incorporating photographs, would be installed at all the state properties. Written brochures, possibly with the "Lincoln Independent" newspaper masthead, would also be provided to visitors.

Museum director Jean Webber advised the group attending the meeting, that the state is working to facilitate reopening of the Wortley Hotel. Webber said she planned to conduct interviews for prospective leasees during the weekend, and expected the Wortley to open by late June.

JUNE PROCLAIMED 'BEEF MONTH'

Governor Bruce King is issuing a proclamation on June 2, 1981, declaring JUNE BEEF MONTH. The event will be held at 10:30 a.m. in the governor's office, State Capitol Building in Santa Fe, New Mexico. # Memorial Day Blaze at Belco Industries

The warehouse at Belco Industries received extensive damage and the paint room was demolished in a fire which occurred Memorial Day, May 25. The 2:00 p.m. fire was believed to have originated in the vicinity of the exhaust fan which was located in the paint room. The rest of the manufacturing plant received smoke damage.

Carrizozo Volunteer Firemen used two big bumpers and a seat unit to battle the fire which was under control in an hour. Fifteen firemen responded to the alarm. Fire chief Albert Najjar, on behalf of the department expressed appreciation for the help of Lincoln County Sheriff's Deputy May McSwane and Carrizozo Town Police officer Dave Wheeler for directing traffic. Sheriff Deputy Gilbert Archuleta was off duty that day, but on duty as a member of the fire department.

The county ambulance and EMT's were standing by. Firemen required oxygen to clear their lungs and David McGuire, a local minister was administered oxygen when he was overcome by smoke inhalation in his effort to assist firemen.

The fire marshall from Santa Fe and Najjar conducted a routine investigation next day. Najjar will receive a written report from Santa Fe which will determine the exact cause of the fire.

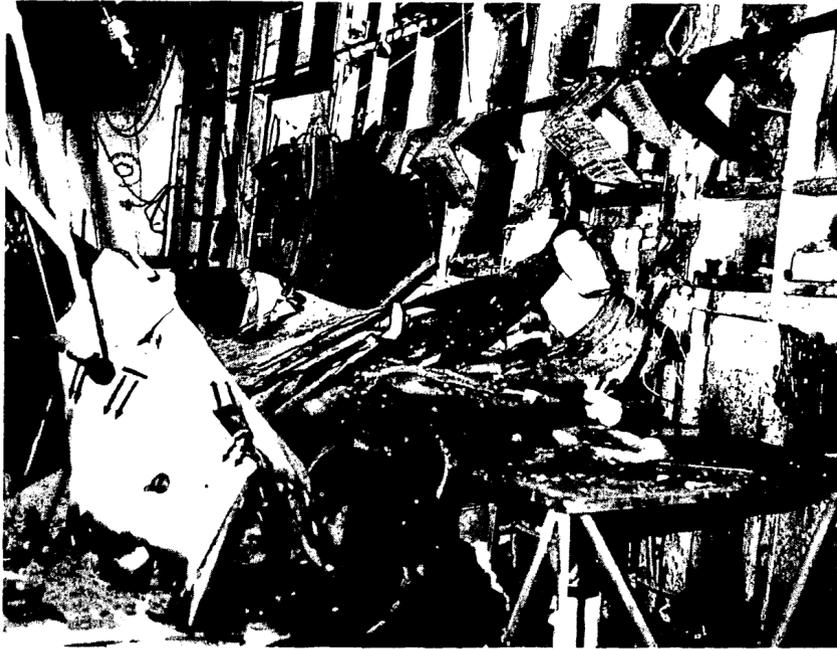

The area that received the most damage was sandwiched between the former Cibola Hotel and the vacant Lyric Theatre. The fire did not affect production and work at Belco continued next day at the industry's assembly line located at the former Cibola Hotel. A temporary paint shop and warehouse has been established at the former City Garage building.

where undamaged welders and empty crates were moved to.

Belco, which employs 37 men and women, manufactures gas engine electric arc welders which are delivered the world over. The industry has been in Carrizozo eight years. The general offices are located at 406 12th Street. In addition to the production plant facility where the fire occurred, Belco has a welding shop at another location.

ORIGIN OF the fire which prompted a 2:00 p.m. call to the Carrizozo Volunteer Fire Department to the Belco Industries warehouse, was this paintroom which was totaled by the blaze Monday afternoon. Luckily the fire was contained to the back part of the building and the production part of the plant suffered only slight smoke damage.

Thank You

We sincerely appreciate the assistance given by so many Carrizozo people during the fire at Belco.

Our personal gratitude goes to each & every person that helped & to the great Carrizozo Volunteer Fire Department.

Just Fun

Thanks and a tip of the hat to Phyllis M. Zumwalt of Hondo for sending Post Script a story which explains the difference between a Republican and a Democrat. The item appeared in the Curry County Times of Clovis in Ray Freedman's column, 'How it looks from here.'

A new reporter covering the legislature for the first time, wrote the following for his paper back home:

—As a newcomer to working with the legislature, I have had many questions to ask the old pros in the business. They have been most helpful to me. It occurred to me that perhaps you would be getting more of your money's worth from me if I passed along some of that knowledge and insight. For instance, just what is the difference between a Republican and a Democrat? Many people say the differences are insignificant. To those people I say, pshaw! Consider these differences:

—Democrats buy most of the books that have been banned somewhere . . . Republicans form censorship committees and read them as a group. Republicans consume three-fourths of all the rutabaga produced in this country . . . The remainder is thrown out. Republicans usually wear hats and almost always clean their paint brushes. Democrats give their wornout clothes to those less fortunate . . . Republicans wear ties. Republicans employ exterminators . . . Democrats step on the bugs. Democrats name their children after currently popular sports figures, politicians and entertainers. Republicans name their children after their parents or grandparents, according to where the money is.

—Democrats keep trying to cut down on smoking but are not successful . . . Neither are Republicans. Republicans tend to keep their shades down, although seldom is there any reason why they should . . . Democrats ought to but don't. Republicans study the financial pages of the newspaper. Democrats put them in the bottom of the bird cage.

—Most of the stuff alongside the road has been thrown out of car windows by Republicans. Republicans raise dahlias, Dalmatians and eyebrows. Democrats raise kids, Airedales and taxes. Democrats eat the fish they catch . . . Republicans hang them on the wall.

—Republican boys date Democrat girls . . . They plan to marry Republican girls but feel they're entitled to a little fun first. Democrats make up plans and then do something else . . . Republicans follow the same plans their grandfathers made. Republicans sleep in twin beds . . . some even in separate rooms . . . That is why there are more Democrats.

problems could be this motorized bike, for some people. Generally it has a single cylinder 50-cc engine of no more than 2 horse power. You use the pedals mainly to help the engine get going. They aren't for speed, since they go about 25 mph, and no faster than 30. In most cases all you need to operate a moped is a valid driver's license. There is no ignition key, simply flip the start switch to "on" pedal or push a short distance and the engine starts. Some have two gears and others only one.

There are all different models and makes. Ask around - talk to people who have them. Visit dealers before you buy. Mopeds are slow and small and easily overlooked by drivers. A moped driver should drive defensively. Use loud colored clothes and a helmet. Avoid high speed highways, pot holes, and people, but you can still have fun when you drive with caution. A moped could get you to work and back more cheaply than a car but maintenance is crucial. Find out how to take proper care of it then it will last. Happy Riding!!! Mabel

GAME & FISH, NEWS

A couple of weeks ago I made mention of the fact that a good way of obtaining fishing information is to check with other anglers on the lake as to their success. However, you can't just approach another fisherman and ask him "how and where" he is catching his fish and expect to get any pertinent information in return. Instead, this form of information seeking is an art in itself, no less difficult than trying to get a wary brown trout to take a hook carefully concealed in a worm.

You must present the "bait" carefully, and then be prepared to set the hook at exactly the correct moment. If you do all of this properly, you will have the angler begging to tell you "how and where" he caught his fish.

First of all, you must place your "victim" in one of two general categories: (1) trout fisherman (fishes for any or all species of trout), or (2) bass fisherman (fishes primarily for bass, but will resort to crappie, catfish, walleye, etc.).

Now, if your victim falls into the trout category, your chore is an easy one. The trout fisherman is usually a true gentleman, and when shown a genuine interest by you, he typically will take you by your hand and show you step by step how to catch a trout.

On the other hand, the angler in the bass category is a very complex individual that often has to be handled with kid's gloves in order to acquire any valid information.

These individuals are a very competitive nature. As you approach one to seek information, you must quickly evaluate the individual, his attitude, and his fishing tackle. Watch to see if he hides any rods that might have a "secret" lure tied on.

A casual, "Hello, have you caught 'em all?," is a good start. His response will dictate your next move.

If he's a grouch that mumbles a greeting and holds up a few fingers indicating his success, you might as well move on 'cause this type won't break. Likewise, if the individual grumbles and holds up one particular finger, don't stop to chatter on how he caught the one fish. Move on.

However, if you get a warm greeting in return, move on to step 2. Ask him what he is fishing for, if he has fished this lake before, and what type of structure he has been fishing (note: be sure and use the word structure several times as this word really excites a bass fisherman).

Then, proceed to tell him where you're from, how long you've been coming to this lake, about the big fish you lost last year, etc. While you're bearding his ear, tear his fishing tackle apart with your eyes and scan the boat (or shoreline) for stringers, fish baskets, etc.

Pay particular attention to the baits, or lures on the end of the rods. If he did hide a rod as you approached, try to locate it and determine the bait.

A word of warning, if you see spinnerbaits hanging from all the rods, the fisherman has a crazed look and is foaming from the mouth while mumbling "stickups" and brush, be careful.

Spinnerbait fishermen are a wild breed, usually descendants from East Texas fishermen where lakes are virtually flooded forests. These people are from the old school of thought that bass grow on trees, and they have literally beat down the great forests of Toledo Bend and Lake Livingston, with their spinnerbaits.

A number of these fishermen have moved to New Mexico and that is why our lakes have very few stickups left in them.

To rid yourself of these varmints, step back and tell them you saw a stickup about a mile or so up the lake. They'll disappear as if by magic.

If there are no spinnerbaits on the rods, your conversation by now should let you know if your victim will provide the desired information. If he starts asking you about your success, move on.

It is extremely important that your prey doesn't know you have been skunked and are totally frustrated. Instead, maintain your composure and compliment him on the nice stringer of fish he has. Tell him how he HAS to be the best worm (substitute crank bait or whatever else you think he is using here) fisherman you have ever met.

If his eyes come aglow and he settles back into his deluxe fishing chair and props his feet up, set the hook 'cause you got him.

You will now not have to ask another question because you're fixing to find out how, when, and where he caught the fish. You'll find out that he learned his technique because his wife has a brother whose sister has a best friend that has an uncle that fished with Bill Dance when he was a kid. And, you'll probably find out that next year he is going to quit his job and fish the pro circuit. But, at least now you'll have all your information you need where and how to catch your fish. However, should you approach a boat with a husband and wife in a large stringer of fish tied on side, and your greeting gets a response only from the wife, I move on. The wife caught all the fish. She's not going to be able to tell you much more than that she caught them on the "cute little thing" at the end of her line, and that this is her first fishing trip. And, the only the husband would have for you mind your own business.

International Ranchers' Roundup

Three New Mexico State University Agriculture College staff members will be speakers at the International Ranchers' Roundup August 10-14 in Del Rio, Texas.

Dr. Chris Allison, NMSU Extension range specialist; Dr. James Gray, agricultural economist; and Dr. Rex Pieper, range researcher, will take part in the five-day meeting designed for ranchers in the arid region of North America.

Dr. Carlton Herbst, USDA-researcher at the Jornada Experimental Range northeast of Las Cruces, is also on the Roundup program as a featured speaker.

Promoters of the Roundup say it is the most comprehensive conference ever held specifically for Southwest ranchers, and could become the largest event of its kind.

Representatives from seven states and five countries will be on the list of speakers. Experts from Angelo State, Kansas State, Nebraska, Oklahoma State, Texas Tech and Texas A & M universities will join the NMSU educators in the broad-based forum.

The program will also feature representatives from six producer groups, two international concerns and eight state or federal agencies. Representatives from more than 20 prominent Southwest ranches will also take part in the program.

Delegations from Mexico, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa will visit during the week to discuss their respective nation's ranching situations and how American producers can help them.

A major topic to be covered in daily sessions will be development and maintenance of foreign markets. The long-term outlook for ranching as it is affected by government policies and worldwide economic changes is also included in the educational sessions.

Other topics include improved management of beef cattle, sheep and goats, working ranch horses, range resource conservation, wildlife, ranch business practices, and mineral lease agreements.

Two all-day tours of progressively managed ranches in southwest Texas and neighboring

New Mexico are scheduled as part of the educational program. Conference organizers say entertainment will be offered in the evenings.

The deadline for pre-registration is June 30. Pre-registration fee is $125 for an individual, and $150 for a couple. Registration fees will go up $50 in each category after the June 30 deadline.

Conference officials say these fees are less than those charged for similar conferences with fewer educational opportunities. Pre-registration packets are available from Roundup, P.O. Drawer 1849, Uvalde, Texas 78801.

The conference is being organized by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service with cooperation of other Extension services in the region, including New Mexico State University.

'Designs for the Future' Conference June 4-5

Strategies for overcoming obstacles to quality education statewide will be addressed when about 150 legislators, educators and members of the public convene at New Mexico State U. June 4-5 for a conference, "Quality Education in New Mexico: Designs for the Future."

Sponsored jointly by NMSU, the state's Board of Educational Finance and the New Mexico Department of Education, the participants will identify specific obstacles to educational quality and outline strategies for overcoming them. Three symposia, concerning higher education, the public elementary and secondary schools and issues from the general public's viewpoint will serve to focus on the problems and elicit input from attendees.

Conference attendees have been invited from a number of strata representing the many relationships to education and the various regions of the state. These include legislators, school superintendents, representatives of the state's Board of Education, the state's Department of Education, the Board of Educational Finance, public school teachers, counselors and administrators, university administrators, university faculty and representatives of the public from business and other organizations.

The conference will begin at 9 a.m. Thursday (June 4) with a welcome by Mrs. Alice King, wife of the New Mexico governor. A keynote on "The Issues Before Us" will follow by NMSU College of Education Dean David R. Byrne, whose office is arranging the conference.

Symposium I, "The Issues as Viewed by Higher Education," will feature remarks by NMSU President Gerald W. Thomas; Dr. Donald Stuart, Santa Fe, executive secretary of the Board of Educational Finance; and Dr. John Aragon, Las Vegas, president of New Mexico Highlands University; Working sessions for participant discussion will follow the panel for each symposium.

Luncheon speaker will be Brigadier Gen. Thomas Swalm, 833rd

Air Division Commander, Holloman Air Force Base, on the relationship between public schools and the military.

Symposium II, "The issues as Viewed by Public Schools," will feature Gordon King, superintendent of the Aztec Municipal Schools; Miss Jo Ann Krueger, assistant principal of Del Norte High School, Albuquerque; Lynn Medlin, Tatum, president of the New Mexico School Boards Association; and George O. Teel, Hope, president of the New Mexico

Board of Education.

Breakfast speaker the morning of June 5 will be Dr. Thomas Hoeksema, associate professor of English at NMSU, who coordinates the Honors Program. The third symposium, "The Issues as Viewed by the Public at Large," will include Ms. Carol McKeag, certified public accountant in Las Cruces; Frank Barnett, Portales, a lay member of the state Board of Education; Mrs. Ginger Ford, Albuquerque, incoming state president of the Parent Teachers Association; and Aubrey Dunn, Mountain Park, businessman and former legislator.

Following the sessions, coordinating recorders will give reports on their impressions gathered as they move around the discussions. These include Jack Waver, editor of the Las Cruces Sun News; Mrs. Georgia Cunico, Albuquerque, outgoing state PTA president; and NMSU Executive Vice President Donald C. Roush. A presentation on a "follow up plan," an instrument to survey a cross section of New Mexico's citizenry, will be presented by Dr. Timothy J. Pettibone, professor in the NMSU educational management department.

WILDLIFE NEWS

Civil damages to be assessed persons convicted of illegally killing or possessing deer in New Mexico have been doubled—from $100 to $200—by the Department of Game and Fish, effective this month (May).

Persons who illegally take or possess a game animal are liable through civil damages assessed by the department to the public and state for the loss, said Harold Olson, director of the Department of Game and Fish. The assessments are compensation based on estimated value of the animal to the state's economy. Collected assessments go to the Game Protection Fund for use in wildlife management, Olson said.

"The increase is basically for economic reasons," Olson said. "Realistically, a deer is worth more than $200 to the state's economy, considering the cost of the sport-man's license and gas, food and lodging for the hunt."

Minimum amounts for civil assessments on protected species are set by the legislature. The Game and Fish Department director is empowered to raise that amount, however, in line with inflationary costs. The civil assessment for killing or possessing a deer was last raised—to the $100 amount—in the early 1970s by former Department of Game and Fish Director Ladd S. Gordon.

"The $200 figure is still low," Olson said. "The assessments continue to fall short of current inflation rates. But we think this doubled assessment offers more compensation to the public and state for the loss and serves as some deterrent to persons considering violations of wildlife laws."

Persons convicted of illegally taking, attempting to take, capturing or possessing a deer are criminally liable for the act and may be fined as much as $500 and/or sentenced up to six months in jail, Olson said. Monies collected from fines go to the state school fund for operating public schools.

In addition, firearms or bows used in illegally taking or possession big game animals are subject to seizure by the Department of Game and Fish.

Fall hunting seasons aren't as far away as they seem, and youngsters planning to hunt with firearms have until September 30 to enroll for a hunter safety class, required by state law before they can apply for or purchase a firearms hunting license.

Classes will continue statewide into the fall's big game seasons, but youths under 18 should enroll or take a class "the sooner, the better," according to John Davis, Hunter Safety coordinator for the Department of Game and Fish. He recommends May—while school is in session and prior to the big rush for class space in September.

The State Game Commission set the September 30 deadline for enrollment. Those who have not enrolled by then will not be able to take the required course and, subsequently, cannot apply for or purchase a license for hunting with firearms, Davis said.

The hunter training course is usually taught by volunteer instructors over a period of several days, with class sessions from two to three hours in length.
