

COUNTY EMPLOYEES RECEIVE $500 SALARY INCREASE—

Road superintendent resigns

By RUTH HAMMOND
The Lincoln County Commissioners held a marathon session Tuesday that lasted until 8:32 p.m. Chairman Bill Elliott announced after the second executive session that County Road Superintendent Bob Harcrow resigned.

Elliott said that commissioners called Harcrow into an executive session and told him that the majority of the commission was not pleased with his performance as county road superintendent. Harcrow told the commissioners that, "If you are not pleased with my work, I don't want to take your money." With that he resigned.

An earlier executive session lasted nearly four hours during which the commission called in each of the nine bidders privately to discuss their proposals for engineering services for road construction. The commission will ask three of the bidders to attend the May 28 meeting for personal interviews.

The preliminary budget hearing and the hearing for general revenue sharing took up much of the day. Revenue sharing requests were received for a total of $384,164. The commission cut this by $243,308 with the money for revenue sharing being $140,856.

The Carrizozo Health Center requested $8,780 and received $1,272 because the extra money may come from a grant that has been applied for. The road department request for $287,000 was cut to $19,000. This money will be used for two four wheel drive pickups. Larry Killgo, district supervisor for animal damage control, asked for and received an additional $5,000 from revenue sharing for Predatory Animal Control. This money came from the general fund.

The preliminary budget was approved after commissioners gave county employees each a $500 salary increase. The decision to give $500 instead of five percent was prompted by Elliott saying, "A five percent increase will mean a lot to the higher paid employees but not so much to the lower paid employees." He added that $500 would mean more to the lower paid employees.

In other business the commission heard a presentation by Rosemary Zink on the need of a paging system in Lincoln County for senior citizens living alone. The pager would be worn as a bracelet or necklace and would enable the person to push a button to summon help if needed. Zink was instructed to get more information to present to the commission.

The old Alto ambulance will be placed at Fort Stanton and high school students have been granted permission to ride in the ambulances as part of the First Responders Course. Release forms must be signed by the student and guardians.

The amount of $17,030 has been received by the county treasurer from correction fees and will be used to improve the jail as follows: building an exercise area, re-do cabinets, placement of exhaust fan and hood, commercial type gas range, and installation of a stand by generator for the jail and radios.

A proclamation was signed designating the month of May as Older Americans Month.

The low bid for dumpsters was accepted from Ron Williams Welding of Prewitt. The low bid for a goose-neck trailer was accepted from Gallup Portable Welding and Repair.

Action on recommendations from the Lincoln County Planning and Zoning Commission was tabled on not accepting Deer Park Woods roads, Pines of Gavilan roads, replats of lots 9, 10, 11, 12, Block 5, Agua Fria Subdivision, final plat approval of Manzana Valley Subdivision, and retaining Pajo Engineering to continue doing road inspections for the subdivisions.

A variance on the diameter of cul de sac in Pines of Gavilan Unit One, was granted because of the terrain.

A joint powers agreement was signed for the housing and care of prisoners for the town of Carrizozo.

SOIL STEWARDSHIP WEEK—

Local district joins nationwide observance

The Carrizozo Soil and Water Conservation District will join the nationwide observance of Soil Stewardship Week during the week of May 12, to 19, 1985, announced Bob Hemphill, Chairman.

"Tomorrow Together" is the theme of the 1985 observance. As the 1985 booklet for the observance points out, human survival depends on other living things: the grasses and grain, fishes and birds, wild and domestic animals. And we all depend for our basic necessities on soil and water. Together, we must think about ways to preserve and renew the topsoil from which all our food comes. Together, we must work to purify and protect our waters.

In 1985, the soil conservation movement in America marks its fiftieth anniversary. During the Dust Bowl era of the '30s, conservation districts, local units of government, were founded to take soil conservation information and techniques out to farmers and ranchers. But their task has grown. Now conservation districts also work with urban and suburban citizens in protecting construction sites, school yards, shorelines and parks from erosion. And they are involved in work to clean up the nation's waters.

Since 1955, the National Association of Conservation Districts has sponsored Soil Stewardship Week, in cooperation with the nearly 3,000 conservation districts, as one way to emphasize the importance of good stewardship of our basic soil and water resources.

Materials especially designed to carry the 1985 theme of "Tomorrow Together" has been distributed through our Carrizozo Soil and Water Conservation District to local churches. The mayor of Carrizozo, Harold Garcia, has proclaimed Soil Stewardship Week May 12-19 in Carrizozo. This observance is one way of thinking about protecting our God given resources for generations to come.

NMSU TO GET $2.2 MILLION—

Ruidoso Airport agreement reached

WASHINGTON — An agreement in principle has been reached between New Mexico State University and Sens. Pete Domenici (R-NM), Jeff Bingaman (D-NM), and Congressman Joe Skeen (R-NM) for transferring agricultural research land for construction of a new airport for Ruidoso, they announced late Friday.

Domenici, Bingaman and Skeen hailed the agreement as a "significant breakthrough" in the decade-long search for Ruidoso's new airport site and vowed to work for passage of legislation to "implement the agreement so that construction at Fort Stanton could begin as soon as possible."

The Senators and Congressman have sent letters to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, Agriculture Secretary John Block, and Interior Secretary Donald Hodel, urging their support of this agreement through their respective agencies.

The agreement in principle reached by NMSU and Domenici, Bingaman and Skeen is as follows:

NMSU will receive about $2.2 million in monetary compensation for lost research work and facilities at the Fort Stanton site. The funds will be used to compensate taxpayer dollars that have been invested in agricultural research at the site.

In return, the Interior Department will transfer approximately 1667 acres of land (the so-called site B) to the Sierra Blanca Airport Commission for use as an airport. Legislation effecting the transfer will be introduced by Domenici, Bingaman and Skeen.

The city of Ruidoso and DOT, upon completion of this land transfer, pledge to forego any future land requests at the Fort Stanton site. The Interior, Transportation and Agriculture Departments are all being asked to actively support NMSU's need for financial compensation and relocation of the agricultural research at the Fort Stanton site.

"Personally, I would like to thank the tireless efforts of NMSU President James Halligan and the Board of Regents who have worked almost around the clock this past year to resolve this issue and compliment them for all they are doing to help solve this serious problem," Domenici said. "I will work hard to get the three Secretaries and OMB (Office of Management and Budget) to recommend this to Congress. We must pass at least two bills to accomplish the desired result. I'll do all I can to get it done."

Bingaman said he was "gratified that we seem to be making some progress on the issue. It is of paramount importance that we take steps to protect the lives of people traveling in and out of Ruidoso. I will certainly bend all my efforts to helping take the necessary steps."

"This agreement represents our cooperative effort on how to best expedite this problem," Skeen said. "It is critical that we get on with the Ruidoso Airport project as quickly as possible. I hope this agreement will allow us to start construction quickly on this new airport."

May is Blood Pressure Month

The month of May has been designated as 'Blood Pressure' month. Do you have any idea what your usual blood pressure reading is?

The health care profession puts much emphasis on blood pressure because maintaining your blood pressure within a safe range can help prevent complications such as disease of the heart and arteries, blindness, kidney disease, and stroke. Preventing these complications is much easier than trying to correct them or treat them after they have occurred.

There are several places in Lincoln County where you can have your blood pressure checked free of charge, these are: Senior Citizen's Center in Carrizozo-every Friday; Corona Senior Citizen's Center-every third Tuesday of the month; Senior Citizen's Center in Capitan-every second Wednesday of the month; and the public health offices in Carrizozo and Ruidoso. The public health nurses are out in the field much of the time and a call to the offices at 648-2412 in Carrizozo or 258-3252 in Ruidoso for an appointment will help the nurses set a time to take your blood pressure at your convenience.

Dimmitt Bond, Bryan Hightower, Fred LaMay, Bill Gallacher, Truman Spencer Jr., are only a few of the ranchers in years gone by to receive the Banker's soil conservation awards for their efforts as cooperators in the Carrizozo Soil & Water Conservation District.

Saving and conserving of our natural resources is more important today than ever before as the increasing population puts raising food and fibre in the No. 1 priority.

We thank the many folks in agriculture for their dedication toward this goal and appreciate all of them.

Saving of your financial resources is important also and whenever you are interested in a savings plan, please come by one of our banks and we will be glad to explain what we have to offer.

Consider Our Commitment

What beauty abounds here on God's green Earth! And who can begin to measure its worth?! What price a sunset, a blossom-filled spring; A moonlit lake, a butterfly wing?

God gave us all these and so much more; There are beautiful harvests, too much to store. All this He meant for us here to treasure. How fortunate we are, enriched beyond measure!

But there is the danger that we might forget That for all this beauty we do owe a debt. For, as He gave to us His world to share, He also committed it to our care.

When God made the Earth, before it He stood. He looked His work over and said "It is good." Do you wonder sometimes what God has to say When he looks down upon His world today?

Man's obsessions have upset nature's balance. Today costly mistakes are taxing our talents. We mustn't forget Earth's not ours alone; That we're only mortal and soon will be gone.

We each have a duty to God our Creator To protect Earth's resources for those to come later. Yes, it's time our commitment went even deeper. If we are to be our brother's keeper.

Consider our commitment; consider it well.

The 30 minute programs will air this summer from June 24 through July 26, Mondays through Fridays, 10:00 a.m. and again at 5:30 p.m.

ROCK ON

I was among the spectators at a mini rock concert held recently at the court house commission room. The high school guitar and drum students provided the rock, complete with fluorescent lighting and powerful ear-drum shattering amplifiers. I am familiar with the sound of Cool and the Gang, 39 Special, Kiss, Men at Work, REO Speedwagon and ZZ Top. (How do they come up with these group names?)

As I type someone, here at home plays 'Twisted Sister'. I have learned to communicate with my four sons with hand-signals. I had to resort to that when help around the house went undone. ("I didn't hear you.")

There was a time when I thought that 'Huey Lewis and the News' was a news reporting team...that Def Leppard was a jungle cat with a hearing problem...that 'AC-DC' referred to batteries...that 'The Police' was a law enforcement division.

By the way - the boys have named their pet rat in honor of the rock group, 'RATT'.

Market Digest!

PART TWO

We watch calories around our house. I don't want too many...and my husband needs more of them.

I worry when he takes a bath because I don't want him to slip down the drain with the water. And I don't like for him to go out in the high winds because he might get swept away in a gust. One of my goals when I married him was to fatten him up a little.

But it is hard to get the calories into him. He is a tall, lanky ranch raised boy who likes to eat meat. In his opinion, a meal isn't a meal unless red meat is involved. He won't even eat turkey for Thanksgiving.

My research shows that he doesn't get very many calories from the meat he eats. In fact, a three ounce serving of cooked lean beef only gives him 192 calories, which figures out to less than seven percent of the daily calorie intake for a man of his age.

He doesn't get many calories at breakfast. Two slices of bacon only add up to 63 calories. He gets 200 more calories in two fried eggs and 126 in two slices of toast. A glass of orange juice adds another 106, and the whole breakfast adds up to 585 calories. The red meat (two slices of bacon) only contributed one ninth of the total calories.

His favorite breakfast is ham with gravy and biscuits. Four ounces of ham give him 241 calories. He usually eats two biscuits (400 calories apiece) slathered with gravy. (800 calories).

If we want a high calorie breakfast, we can get two coconut donuts and 786 calories at the local donut shop. Add a glass of milk and 322 calories and the whole breakfast adds up to 1,108 calories, almost twice the calorie intake of the red meat breakfast.

When we order a burger with fries and a milkshake, we get more calories from the shake and fries than we do from the main course. The burger has 280 calories, while the shake has 380 and the fries come in with 220.

At home the comparison is even more obvious. Dissect the all-American hamburger. The four ounce hamburger patty (remember that we are talking about a quarter pound of meat) has 315 calories. Add a hamburger bun for another 110 calories, 20 calories in the ketchup, 100 calories in one tablespoon of mayonnaise, and 166 calories in an ounce of cheese. The condiments on the hamburger add up to more calories than the meat itself!

An eight-ounce soft drink constitutes 125 calories, and the same size serving of malted milk has 400 calories. By comparison, a four ounce serving of tenderloin steak comes with only 281 calories.

Walk into a restaurant and order a diet plate and what do you get? Shrimp? Peanut Butter? Fish or chicken? Guess again! Ground beef is on the plate because it contains less calories per ounce than any of the competition.

Three ounces of lean cubed steak contain 186 calories, compared to 245 in tuna, 255 in shrimp, 212 in roasted chicken, and 186 in fish filets.

Sandwiches are loaded with calories unless they are made with one of the red meats. For instance, a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich complete with two slices of bread only has 290 calories, and a ham sandwich has 300. However, a cheese sandwich has 325 calories, and a peanut butter sandwich without even any jelly has 365.

It is amazing how fast the calories add up. Fourteen cashew nuts give you 238. For that, you could have had three ounces of top blade steak or a serving of lean leg of lamb.

Try counting up the calories after a Sunday dinner sometime. I did and the results were surprising. The tip roast was excellent, and only contributed 170 calories per serving. But the candied sweet potatoes and apples were 240 calories. The summer squash in cheese sauce was 120 calories. The whole wheat bread was 75 calories a slice. (Butter, by the way, has 100 calories per tablespoon.) The cottage cheese added 120 calories to the meal. The salad dressing was 101 calories per tablespoon. And to top everything off, the chocolate cake was 350 calories for three ounces.

Sometimes you drink more calories than you eat. Consider the man that drinks two martinis before dinner (205 calories a piece), a glass of wine with his prime rib (that is 115 calories, the six ounce prime rib is 409), and some after-dinner brandy (96 calories). Not only would he be well on his way to being drunk but he would have consumed 820 calories in his drinks, compared to the 409 for the best piece of meat he could buy.

For 350 calories you can choose between a serving of fried potatoes, a chicken thigh, two scoops of ice cream, or you could have a rib eye for 100 less.

When you add it all up, red meat is the lightweight champion in the calorie counting contest.

NEXT WEEK: The third and final part of Wilson's article explores meat's healthful ingredients; good nutrition, and the meat choice of Olympic champions - beef.

WATCH OVER WASHINGTON

By LES KINSOLVING

The Pentagon's disastorous "Operation Trust-The-Media"

WASHINGTON — Remember how loudly the Big Media screamed when the Department of Defense excluded reporters from the first two days of the landings on Grenada?

While the majority of Americans loudly cheered this decision, the Big Media's top brass got together and issued something of a manifesto. This rather pompous and self-serving statement implied that the Pentagon had raped the First Amendment's freedom of the press. (But they were smart enough not to try testing this claim in court.)

The Big Media brass claimed that reporters have always accompanied US troops on major military missions. This was as much as an historical falsehood as their claim that reporters have a great record in keeping US secrets.

The Defense Department reacted to this Vesuvian broadside by recruiting a panel, under the leadership of retired Maj. Gen. Winant Sidle. This panel held extended hearings on the relationship of the military to the media. It made a number of suggestions.

On the basis of one of these suggestions, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger agreed to set up a pool of military reporters, who could be summoned with only a few hours notice and be ready to fly to any unannounced destination. But the Defense Department press office made the bad mistake of leaving the selection as to which reporters up to the news bureau. The result was a major disaster.

On Saturday evening, April 20, at 6:00 P.M., three Defense Department aides, equipped with identical statements, telephoned eight news bureaus: AP, UPI, Cable News Network, Mutual Radio, Newsweek, The New York Times, Copley News Service and The Wall Street Journal. These media organizations were asked to have one of their reporters or news crews, ten individuals in all, at Andrews Air Force Base by 4:00 A.M. the following morning, prepared to spend one week in an area which is hot and wet.

These news bureaus were also told: "There is a need for secrecy. It is paramount. Any leaks could jeopardize the operation. You may not discuss with anyone the fact that the pool has been activated."

It took little more than six hours before the Department of Defense first learned that their trust in Big Media had been violated and betrayed. The reporters' pool had not even reported into Andrews, much less begun their flight, before the Pentagon received a phone call from a network which had not been included in this reporters' pool. This network asked what was going on. And one hour later, at 1:20 A.M., this network (CBS, reportedly) called again. In reaction to the "No comment" at 12:20, they "threatened to put something on the air unless we told them what was going on," recalled Pentagon Spokesman Michael Burch.

For the rest of the following day and on into Monday, the Pentagon was deluged with phone calls inquiring about the supposedly secret "Operation Trust-The-Media" from "practically every news bureau in Washington." And on Monday, The Washington Post featured the entire story on the secret operation on page one — with the notation that they had had a query about it from one of the Post reporters in Nicaragua.

At a Pentagon news briefing, I asked Spokesman Burch if, in addition to Managua, they knew about this secret operation in Havana and Moscow. He replied that he did not know.

Earlier in this briefing on April 23, Burch said that the purpose of this media pool was to provide a possibility of covering possible combat.

Q: Am I correct in my understanding that in many combat operations, any branch of security risks the lives of our armed forces?

Department of Defense: That is correct.

Q: Given the breach of security this weekend, how many men in our armed forces are going to have to die before Secretary Weinberger will abandon this ruinous scheme to stroke the Big Media by trusting them to respect security — which they did not do this weekend?

Department of Defense: The Secretary believes that the press should be able to cover military operations. He is interested in finding a way in which we can accommodate the press, yet still be assured that the mission will be protected and the lives of American soldiers and citizens will not be jeopardized.

Spokesman Burch went on to declare that the reason the Pentagon began publicly acknowledging that this reporters' pool was covering only a military exercise was: "Because we were on the brink of hysteria in this town... People thought that some sort of real world crisis was imminent or an invasion of some area of the world was imminent."

Q: How could you have expected to keep this secret? You call these bureau chiefs, and they start talking to reporters. How did you expect that this was going to be secret, Mike?

Department of Defense: I think that we can continue to work on this system and refine it. I think we can find a way.

Q: You have said that this town was on the brink of hysteria... What a price to pay to service the media. What a terrible price! If this had been a combat situation and men were killed because of leaks in the press, then what would you say?

Department of Defense: I would say that you have just given a fine editorial...

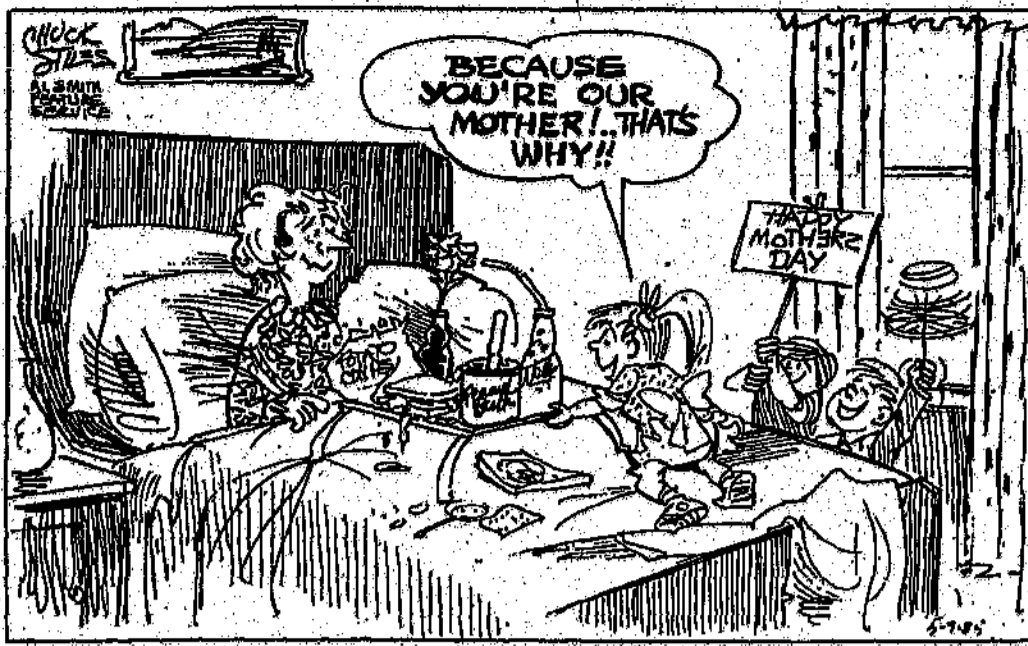

Q: If a (military) crisis arises, are you going to reactivate this arrangement (the press pool) again?

Department of Defense: We'll try.

Q: Even though a leak could occur and endanger the lives of American troops?

Department of Defense: One of the things we agreed to in the Sidle Panel was the planning for

SANTA FE—“One portion of our agreement provides that we will make no further comment upon it than is contained in this joint statement.”

That is the last sentence in the news release announcing signing of the Treaty of the Northeast Heights, under which the ponderous question of whether we New Mexicans are to have interim legislative committees was finally settled.

If the so-called leaders in House and Senate had adopted that “no-talking” attitude a little earlier, all of this might have been more easily concluded.

Instead, all during the time of negotiations, those who were parties to them were pouring words on one another, often, as weapons.

BLAH, BLAH BLAH: Some New Mexico politicians, as we know, blurt out whatever comes to their minds, in totally un-disciplined candor, no matter who's around to listen.

They are not the kind of folks we are complaining about; they are too simple-minded to commit this kind of verbal assault.

There is the kind-of-talk you will find, for instance, on the Nixon tapes — the sort that politicians often have to use in private as they grope their own way toward finding out what it is they believe. They are often the compulsive talkers who have to hear a thought put into audible form before they know how they feel about it.

There's plenty of that among New Mexico politicians.

But lately we've been hearing something else.

THE WORD THAT WOUNDS: Maybe our elected officials have grown more sophisticated. Now they are more and more using language to hurt.

When Senator Les Houston,

just to choose one, repeatedly refers to Governor Anaya as “a tyrant,” he is working to implant a picture in our minds. He does the same thing when he refers to the Governor as a supporter of “left-wing causes,” a charge one supposed had gone to its grave when Joe McCarthy went to his. He attempts the same thing by calling Toney “the most political governor our state has ever seen,” an accusation that is as meaningless as it is unprovable.

Partly, what Houston and those who are like him want to accomplish is to anger the other side, in an effort to generate over-reaction that leads to political mistakes.

SPEECH TO THE TROOPS: But there is another aim as well. Often the person with the angry mouth is really talking to those who stand behind him as much as

Letters TO THE EDITOR

EDITOR—If those demonstrating radicals on college campus have their way, they would force American investment out of the Republic of South Africa. To stop apartheid, we are told.

Here we have a bunch of college students who most likely can't even park a bicycle straight, and they are going to solve South Africa's problems? Most of them don't know enough about South Africa to locate it on a map.

Should these radicals have their way, South Africa's economy would become a shambles. South Africa's Blacks and Colored would be the first to suffer, and they would suffer the worst. One Ethiopia at a time, please!

Any taxicab driver in town knows that these campus loud mouths are demanding a cure that would be far worse than the disease.

Corona elementary visits zoo

By L. CALDWELL

(Corona Elementary School students journeyed to Rio Grande Zoological Park last week on their annual field trip. Special thanks to dedicated teachers Betty Ann Bell, Irma Bryan, and Sandy Essary for allowing me to tag along and to aides Barbara Worley, Teri Stewart and Beth Sisk who help those teachers do their jobs so well. Herewith a narrative of my experience.)

Sunshine began to fill the big New Mexico sky, and there was only the slightest hint of a Southwestern windstorm. The one thing we could not control, the weather, became a gift; all systems were "GO" for the long planned for, long awaited, trip to the big city. The only hitch in the plan occurred first thing - mechanical failure of a bus turn signal. After what seemed an endless delay, teachers and aides gathered up their assorted students, ice chests full of drinks, sack lunches, jackets (we didn't need them, as many a little mouth told us we wouldn't) and miscellaneous other necessities. Finally, we were on our way.

Because all those little bodies had had time to run off some energy during the mechanical failure delay, all those little tummies were sending hunger signals to all those little brains by the time we reached Willard. "Don't eat yet," warned one prudent teacher, "you'll be starved by the time we get home." It was to no avail. Out came the brown bags, and the munching proceeded. Fortunately, no one seemed to be ravenous, so leftovers were around for a return trip snack.

Upon arrival at the zoo, we were issued a set of rules and regulations, which were duly read to the group. Some listened, some obviously did not. Anyway, we were granted admittance, and the real education had begun. "Where are the tigers and lions? I want to see the giraffes. Let's go see the giraffes first." Having been "assigned" my own rambunctious son and three of his buddies to keep up with. I was beginning to perceive the enormity of my task. Although each wanted to go his own direction, all agreed to stick with the lady with the camera, so we proceeded to the Rain Forest. This is an enclosed building that simulates the deepest jungles of the world in all their steamy stealth. It is a paradise for bird lovers and those who like greenhouses. It was a new experience, I'm sure, for those little New Mexicans to feel simultaneous heat and humidity and to admire the rare birds and exotic fish living there.

Back outside in the dry New Mexico air, it was decided that we would proceed to the reptile house. There an impressive variety of reptiles wowed the little boys ("Look at that one! He's the kind that'll squeeze ya to death!") accompanied by writhing and gagging beyond any adult's acting ability) while little girls let out assorted "Yucks" and made awful faces at the lazing lizards.

We continued on to the bears, who were all trying to stay cool in their "caves", the lions, tigers, and other assorted cats. The most entertaining animals were the seals, who were thoroughly enjoying the warm weather by splashing around in their pool and making us all wish we could join them in their game of flip-a-piece-of-tree-bark-around-the-pool. It was quite a game of frisbee! We trekked through the Children's Zoo where we could actually pet the animals and discovered that the sacred cows of India are the same rough and tough specie we call Brahmas. We marvelled at the monkeys who really put on a show, and made us wish we could fly through the air with their greatest of ease.

About two hours and 84 tired feet later, we all met back at the entrance. Wonderfully, no one was lost or asleep on their teacher's shoulder. After quick pit stops, everyone was ready to find a soft seat on the bus for the long trip home. It seemed to be quieter on the way back, or maybe my ears had just numbed.

contingencies and an evaluation by the commanders of whether or not the press could be accommodated. I can't tell you that the press would be accommodated in all future operations.

General Sidle was visiting the Pentagon that day to be the speaker at a commemorative ceremony honoring the legendary World War II military correspondent Ernie Pyle. Hardly any of the Pentagon press corps was willing to attend this service in the Pentagon courtyard so close to the press room in Correspondents Corner.

After this outdoor ceremony, Gen. Sidle met with a dozen reporters in the Pentagon briefing room. He told these reporters that he was very disappointed in this breach of security, because.

"Commanders in the field are going to say: 'Wait a minute; can we trust these guys?'"

This welcome news of justified military awareness was followed by Gen. Sidle's recommendations:

"Have a pool of reporters - but don't tell them until the troops have already started the attack."

"The Department of Defense ought to have veto power on the reporters selected - and not because he may be negative - but because of a lack of integrity. This past weekend reflects on the trustworthiness of the press."

"The pool of reporters could be selected privately, and they could be notified without notifying their bureaus."

While Sidle said he favored trying this reporters' pool again, "I'm talking about practice, not combat." He noted that another solution would be simply to exclude all reporters from initial phases of any military operation depending on surprise. He also noted the British control of the press during the Falklands campaign "didn't turn out badly" but "they have an official secrets act."

to those he pretends to challenge. Houston, at just this stage in our legislative wars, knows well that his own margin is very thin, and that he could be in deep trouble if he allows it to fade away. Thus his words may be in large part to hearten his own supporters and bind them to him in a kind of fortress mentality. ("We are the gallant ones who will fight that little sucker to the death.")

That kind of motivation makes the spokesperson for a cause (it is "crusaders" who most often make use of the technique) broaden the chasm between himself and the other side, instead of bridging it.

Such people are polarizers, either by temperament or by ad hoc inclination. More often than not they are ideologues, to whom "principles" matter more than the humans who hold to them. It is easy for them to slide into bullying and demagoguery.

We've seen a lot of that lately, and it is sad that it came when a spirit of conciliation was so badly needed here.

Our group toured the High Plains Museum on the campus of the West Texas State University at Canyon. This museum is the oldest state museum in Texas.

They also visited other places of interest around Amarillo. However, our mountain kids enjoyed swimming at the motel pool the best. Everyone had a wonderful time.

Capitan, now has a Home Interior Representative, Jean Lovelace, who is also the MVD Clerk, at the City Hall, is now the Home Interior Displayer for this area. Anyone interested in having a party may give Jean a call at 354-2508.

SEN. PETE DOMENICI SAYS—

Education aid solution found

WASHINGTON — Senator Pete Domenici (R-NM) announced Monday that Education Secretary William Bennett, at the Senator's request, has come up with a solution which will not impose a $27 million penalty on New Mexico taxpayers for problems in impact aid assistance for education.

Domenici, in a letter to Governor Toney Anaya, said the solution, details of which are still being written in the Education Department, helps "avoid adverse consequences to the taxpayers of New Mexico ($27 million penalty) and will allow for the continued flow of impact aid assistance ($38 million annually) to New Mexico."

"I did write to the Education Secretary in March, requesting that he waive the requirements for New Mexico," Domenici said. "But he informed me in his response that he does not have the authority to waive these rules and regulations."

The solution being written up would require the State of New Mexico to make minor adjustments in the manner in which local property taxes are computed into the state's equalization formula. This adjustment would be necessary for the next three years to compensate for the mistakes of the past three years, in which federal impact aid assistance was misallocated.

"By using a six-year period, Secretary Bennett will then be able to find that New Mexico, on average, will be in compliance with the federal law," Domenici explained. "No penalty for the misallocated funds would need to be imposed and the impact aid money can continue to flow to New Mexico."

"If the state implements the Secretary's proposed solution, New Mexico's school districts will continue to benefit from this important source of federal education assistance," Domenici said.

"I am urging Senate President pro-tem Les Houston and House Speaker Gene Sainberson to take advantage of this solution to a very serious problem for our state, and urge you to do all in your power to enact these changes into New Mexico's law," Domenici said. "Impact aid assistance to New Mexico could be cut off in early June if this change is not enacted."

"I stand ready to help in any way I can," Domenici added.

Crime of the week

RUIDOSO, NM — People who own cabins usually only use them while on vacation and leave them vacant the rest of the time, thus making them easy targets for burglars. Police would like to find the campers who broke into cabins in the Ruidoso area.

Sometime between April 4, 1985 and April 15, 1985, 10 cabins located at the west end of Upper Canyon were broken into. Through investigation, officers were able to find all of the property from the burglaries located at a campsite in the forest just inside the reservation adjacent to the cabins. Whoever burglarized the cabins took the items back to their campsite and left the items there.

This week, State Crime Stoppers joins with the Ruidoso

Crime Stoppers in offering up to $1,000.00 for information that assists officers in clearing this case.

If you have any information about this case or any other serious crime call the State Crime Stoppers toll free at 1-800-432-6933 or the Ruidoso Crime Stoppers at 257-4545. As always, callers can remain anonymous and receive a cash reward.

Corona spring music program

Corona Spring Music Program was presented May 1 to a large and enthusiastic audience in the auditorium. Directed by music teacher Helen Kay Lindsey, the musical variety show began with Mrs. Irma Bryan's kindergarten class interpreting "The Farmer in the Dell". Characters in costume were the farmer, Roy Bradley; the wife, Anna Garza; the child, Yesenia Arellanes; the nurse, Angela Lueras; the dog, Kimberlee Riley; the cat, Joseph Sanchez; the rat, Leonard Gonzalez; the cheese, Jeff Gomer; and the knife, Phillip Lueras. The small fry also showcased their talent in "Wizard of Oz" and "Bean Bag Rock" led by Angela Lueras.

First graders entertained with "Oh, What a Miracle" and a lullaby rendition of "Music, Music, Music" led enthusiastically by Charles Passmore. Mrs. Lindsey explained that children learn much more than singing skills in her music class, and the lullaby sticks are a teaching tool. The sticks help develop fine and gross motor skills, coordination, and perceptual training as well as increase concentration and listening skills and creative development. Of course, the use of lullaby sticks also promotes rhythmic awareness. The first grade class concluded its performance by dedicating "Hawaiian Rainbows", complete with lei costuming, to the Hawaii-bound Senior Class.

Miss Sandy Essary's second and third graders presented the colorful Ribbon Dance in which long colorful streamers were twirled around the dancers. The students also demonstrated their sense of rhythm and coordination by performing the Filipino Tinkling Dance. Named after "Tinkling" birds as they hop between tall reeds and tree branches, the dancers hop over and between two bamboo poles as they are clicked together to the beat of the music.

"Schools Days" was a crowd-pleaser sung by second through sixth grades. As teacher Jeanene Gibbs directed and Mrs. Lindsey accompanied on the piano, first grade teacher Betty Ann Bell and husband Mack displayed their "acting" talents. Along with Bob and Denise Byrd, the costumed couples mimed the lyrics as the children sang.

Mrs. Gibbs' class rendered their enthusiastic version of "I'd Like to Teach the World to Sing" before singing with the Oak Ridge Boys impersonated by Mario Delgado, Les Owen, Sammy Stevenson, and Jim Larremore. Their rendition of "Elvira" was greeted enthusiastically by the crowd, especially when a somewhat sultry Elvira herself (Alvina Romero) sauntered onstage.

In anticipation of their upcoming Hawaiian trip, seniors Mike Lindsey, Tommy Worley, Sabra Sultemeier, Cody Lightfoot, Wayne Sanders, Joseph Erramouspe, Freddie Stewart and Shawn Perkins presented a "Hawaiian Surprise". Decked out in beach attire with a New Mexico flair, the class demonstrated their hula styles. "Grass skirts," over swim suits created a layered look complemented by cowboy boots. Large flowered print shirts added to the colorful costumes which were topped off with black hats and completed with sunglasses.

Piano solos were performed by Mrs. Lindsey's students Katrina Archuleta, Kelly Caldwell, Candice Byrd and Melissa Johnson. Jason Gibbs demonstrated Music of Tomorrow with a computer program he had rearranged from a disc. The computer, through commands and signals, rendered its electronic version of a Bach sonata.

The beautiful and colorful Maypole dance was performed by the 4th, 5th and 6th grades. The tradition originated in ancient Rome when Flora, goddess of flowers, was honored. The custom of gathering blossoming flowers spread throughout the Old World where expanded and elaborate festivals evolved. The blooming plants and flowers were attached to a tree or pole and intertwined with colorful ribbons. The dance was the grand finale of the entertaining music program.

Ask Doctor Dan . . .

I think our two children watch too much TV, but my wife thinks 6 hours a day for our 6 and 8 year old boys is not too much. They don't get outside and play much and are doing poorly in school. What can I do to convince my wife I'm right? C. F.

Watching TV is a passive activity which requires no physical exertion and little intellectual activity. If your children are doing poorly in school, access to TV should be restricted until daily studying improves their academic progress. If your children have favorite programs, they can be allowed to watch them as a privilege. The privilege can be taken away until grades improve.

Many recent studies suggest that watching violence on TV leads to increased aggressiveness in children. Although these are not conclusive studies which show a definite cause and effect, they do give parents a reason to consider before letting children watch violence on TV (this includes cartoons.)

Encourage your children to engage in other activities such as reading, hobbies, sports and board games. Either or both parents may play with them. Plan more family outings.

If certain shows on TV portray beliefs and values which you strongly disagree with, don't let your children watch those shows until they are old enough and mature enough to make their own decisions in such matters. If you are unable to convince your wife about TV watching, then I suggest you both agree upon a third party who can help you arrive at a compromise solution.

Send questions to Dr. Dan, Box 8, Carrizozo, NM 88301.

VIOLENT LINCOLN COUNTY WAR by noted author Xanthus (Kf) Carson

"But all was not as friendly in Lincoln as the bailes. Mr. McSween's trip east was to lead to tragedy. On his return he reported success to his wife. He had collected $3,053.79, all that remained of Emil Fritz's $10,000 policy after deducting expenses for McSween's trip, his fee and that of an eastern firm of lawyers. The Fritz heirs were not satisfied. By this time Lawrence Murphy's new partner, Jimmy Dolan, had married one of Emil Fritz's nieces. On the advice of Murphy and Dolan, the heirs brought suit against McSween for embezzlement, and William Brady, Sheriff and Murphy's friend, attached his property - not only the store he owned jointly with Tunstall, but cattle on Tunstall's ranch on the Rio Feliz.

this "dastardly act, shooting on sight and giving no quarter."

And this is exactly what he did! Violence soared to such proportions that the Federal forces were called to the scene. Gen. Lew Wallace was forced to put the Ben-Hur Script aside, while he coped with the bloody mess.

In Lincoln, men stalked the streets, loaded to the gills with firearms, a girth full and a Winchester swung over the shoulder. Tension was not only paramount in the frontier town, it existed all over the county.

McSween, assuming the duties of an attorney, swore in R. M. Brewer as special deputy, to arrest the men who shot Tunstall.

Bill the Kid joined Brewer's gang to hunt down the killers. Pursuit led them to Chisum's ranch, in Roswell. Results: A few days later the Brewer gang returned to Lincoln with a report that Morton and Baker had been shot to death while running away from the posse.

The Kid got the blame for these killings. George Coe later quoted the Kid as saying, "Of course you know, George," he said in answer to a question. "I never meant to let them birds reach Lincoln alive!"

Billy's vengeance was working. In a toll of hot blood! A few quiet days passed. But not many. Then another fight took shape in Lincoln.

On the first day of April, the Kid and the others hid behind the adobe wall of McSween's corral. The men were laying for a fight.

Almost as soon as the four some had finished digging port holes into the mud wall, Sheriff Brady strode by. A fusillade of lead laid him death on the ground.

Whose shot killed the man was never decided. Billy was named as the murderer of Sheriff William Brady in an arrest warrant.
