Workers will report to the refreshment stand in front of the Capitan branch of the Ruidoso State Bank. Bring work gloves. Trash bags will be provided. Work is scheduled between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Those who would like their lot cleaned up may call 354-2926. Use this number to volunteer a vehicle to haul trash.

Workshop on death and dying

New Horizons in Carrizozo will be sponsoring a workshop on the subject of death and dying May 1, at the center from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

The workshop will be conducted by Dr. Marion J. Heisey, associate professor in the counseling department at the University of New Mexico.

Although the workshop is intended to increase the knowledge of the staff at New Horizons, there is a limited amount of space available for anyone else who would like to attend. Call 648-2379 if interested.

Dr. Heisey's interest in death and dying developed after his own personal winning bout with cancer. He is a recognized authority on the subject and has published several articles as well as conducted workshops. The workshop is free.

Ruidoso Noon Lions Club project—

A positive approach to teen drug, alcohol abuse

The program is a joint effort of the National Quest Center, Columbus, OH and Lions International. It is supported by the American Association of Schools Administrators, the National PTA, the National Middle School Association, the National Federation of Parents for Drug-free Youth, and the Center for Early Adolescence at the University of North Carolina.

When parents, educators and Lion Club members take a united stand against drug and alcohol use, the effort can be much more effective. "Skills For Adolescence" is a full semester program for use in the 6th, 7th and 8th grades, the critical period when drug and alcohol experimentation begins. There are those who "bury their heads in the sand, like an ostrich," but drug use is prevalent, Ruidoso Noon Lions Club president Bill Allen said

SBAC hires Heckman—

Part-time position could net $90,000.00

By RIGO CHAVEZ

Just less than a month after resigning as chairman of the Sierra Blanca Airport Commission, Fred Heckman is back working for the proposed Fort Stanton Mesa airport, this time as a paid administrator.

Heckman, who cited business reasons when he resigned as the Village of Ruidoso's representative on the five-member commission on March 20, was hired by the commission last Thursday.

As administrator, Heckman will be paid $60-per-hour for up to 1,500 hours, or up to $90,000 per year.

Heckman said he was happy about his appointment and looks forward to working with the commission.

"The time and expense of being on the commission were becoming prohibitive," said Heckman about his March resignation.

About his new job he said, "The time the administrator's job will take is going to vary. Sometimes it will require a full-time commitment and more work. At other times it won't be so busy, which is why it was structured to function as a part-time, temporary position."

He added that the commission faces some tough funding problems in the near future. "Getting the initial funding to begin construction in the next four to six months is going to be a challenge."

In announcing Heckman's selection from a field of four candidates, commission member Tim Morris said Heckman's qualifications stood out because he was the only candidate that had experience in obtaining funding for projects like the proposed Sierra Blanca Regional Airport.

"Only he (Heckman) had experience with the Sierra Blanca Airport Master Plan and in obtaining federal and state grants," Morris said. "Let's face it, this is important because there will be no airport without funding."

Heckman took over immediately following the meeting that included a two-hour executive session in which the commission interviewed the candidate who submitted proposals for the administrator position.

Heckman will direct construction and engineering contracts, act as a liaison with agencies such as the Bureau of Land Management and New Mexico State University, direct funding for Phase I construction, prepare operation documentation and coordinate the operation phase-in once the airport is constructed.

Also submitting proposals were John D. Barton, a retired Air Force Lt. Colonel from Ruidoso, W. C. Hjalmsquist, also of Ruidoso, and Dick Wright of Roswell.

Barton's proposal included a $25,000 annual salary, $2,000 for equipment, $15,000 for secretarial services, and a total of $43,000 for the first year.

Hjalmsquist wanted $25 per hour and a minimum of 15 hours per week, $2,500 for initial set up costs and $175 per month for a car. Under his proposal, the county would provide all clerical support.

Wright's proposal called for an hourly wage of $25 for all services except secretarial, which was set at $20 per hour.

With the hiring of Heckman, the commission will become a more independent body, using the county only as its fiscal agent.

In other business, Ken Nosker, a Lincoln County Commissioner and the county's representative on the airport commission, was elected chairman and Tim Morris, who was recently appointed to fill the vacancy left by Heckman, vice chairman of the commission.

The commissioners approved the payment of $800.75 for 69 plaques presented in March to persons who helped with the airport project.

A change order in the contract with engineers, Leadshill and Herkenhoff providing for $30 per day for inspectors at the well site was also approved. Payment for cementing the well, if required by the state engineer, was also approved. The estimated cost is $7,768.

After the meeting adjourned, commissioners Nosker, Morris, Capitan Mayor Benny Coker and Conrad Buchanan of Ruidoso Downs, visited the well site on Fort Stanton Mesa, Stanton Mesa.

Ruidoso Mayor Lloyd Davis and village councilors Jerry Shaw and Ray Dean Carpenter accompanied the commission on the site visit.

Geologist Glen Hammock said that the well, which is expected to be 900 feet deep, is expected to be completed in the next two weeks.

"We had thought we'd be finished by now, but we ran into some rock about 50 feet down," Hammock said.

By RUTH HAMMOND

During the April 15 meeting, the Carrizozo Board of Education accepted resignations from head teacher Bruce Young, football coach and P.E. teacher Willie Gallegos, 4th grade teacher Jan Barham, and aide Denise Vega.

All other school personnel were re-employed for the 1986-87 school year. In addition, Mrs. Rasco was hired for .35 full time employee as registered nurse.

A special board meeting will be held April 28 at 7 p.m. to review the 1986-87 budget. The board approved budget is to be in Santa Fe on April 30. The budget hearing with the state department of education will be held in Carrizozo at 9 a.m. on May 14.

In other business, the board agreed to give $400 to Clarica Carpenter to attend the FHA national convention in Florida. Clarica is FHA-HERO state secretary for the coming year.

Joan Holborn reported on the first Lincoln County History Fair held April 12 hosted by Carrizozo. Participating were 48 students and 38 of these students will take 21 projects to the state contest on May 9.

Regional Science Fair winners in Roswell were congratulated. Carrizozo high school took six awards; Kelly Sheehan 1st place for microbiology, and a $250 scholarship, Mike Hicks 1st place for chemistry, Leah Patterson 1st place for botany, Fred Vega 2nd place for computers, Clarica Carpenter, 3rd place for medicine, and Luanne Zamora 3rd place for microbiology. Mid-

The NMSU sophomore of the Year is Mary Jane Ferguson, a 1984 Carrizozo graduate. School Superintendent

Dennis Sidebottom congratulated her.

Board members agreed to attend a joint meeting of Region VII and VIII in Cloudcroft. Date for the School Board Association meeting has not been set.

The board asked Sidebottom to find out more about the hydro-seed method of re-seeding the football field.

Ruidoso viable location for sound stage

By RIGO CHAVEZ

Lights! Camera! Action!

These could become familiar words in Ruidoso if the state can attract a private firm to build a sound stage there.

A $5,000 state funded feasibility study named Ruidoso as one of the prime sites in New Mexico for a sound stage.

The findings of the study were announced Monday in Santa Fe by Paul Lazarus, director of the State Film Commission.

Milton Forman, a Los Angeles sound stage consultant who visited the state in March said in the study that the other prime site would be Santa Fe. Ruidoso could become "a center to service the Southern part of the state," Forman wrote in the report.

"What really impressed Mr. Forman," said Lazarus, "was the support and enthusiasm from the community (of Ruidoso)."

Other factors which contributed to Ruidoso's high ranking were its access to Texas and its variable climate and terrain.

"With Sierra Blanca and White Sands so close by, the variety of scenery available within a short distance is immense," Lazarus said.

The report said that the seven cities Forman visited have warehouse-type buildings that could be used for "cover sets."

In Ruidoso, the report cited the hangar space at the present airport as being a viable space for a set once a new airport is constructed on Fort Stanton Mesa.

Forman, a sound engineer and cinematographer, served as a consultant to the new Goldwyn Studio in Southern California, the Astoria-Kauffman studio in New York and the Disney sound stage and studio being constructed at Epcot Center in Florida, Lazarus said.

The other cities Forman visited during his four-day stay in New Mexico were Albuquerque, Carlsbad, Farmington, Las Cruces and Roswell.

Lazarus said the funding for a New Mexico sound stage will have to come from the private sector.

"The study was just a preliminary look to access what New Mexico has to offer and excite the interest of private investors. The state's role is that of a catalyst—to get the ball rolling," he said.

Lazarus added that there are many ways in which a company might be attracted to build a sound stage in the area.

"A stage might be combined with a recording studio, or we might try to attract a TV series that could use the facility year round," Lazarus said.

Another idea he had would be to attract an advertising agency from another state such as Texas that might be interested in filming commercials in the area.

"There are alot of possibilities. The study is a very useful document in providing information to companies that might want to explore those possibilities."

Lazarus, who has been in the movie business for 20 years and whose film work includes "Westworld" and "Barbarosa", said that there are currently two motion pictures being filmed in the state "USA Today," starring Christopher Penn and Lori Singer, is being shot in the Farmington area and "Outrageous Fortune," starring Bette Midler and Shelley Long, is using locations in the northeastern part of New Mexico.

"With a sound stage the movie companies could stay in the state longer and pump more money into local economies," Lazarus said.

Lincoln 'Ramblings'

By ROSALIE DUNLAP
Haven't we been having the winds? It was too windy to have the piano entertainment during the last day of "Share the Suds" volunteers from Roswell at the Wortley Hotel. Then we heard reports of snow and sleet in parts of the county Saturday.

The Lincoln Heritage Trust has been doing some renovation and maintenance work on the Montano Store and Dr. Woods' house, getting ready for the upcoming summer season. The Jordan's are working hard on their new "The Patron Store."

Those from the Lincoln area who helped judge the first History Fair for the Lincoln County schools were Leota Pflingsten and Ofelia Salas, historical papers; Ralph and Rosalie Dunlap, and Lynda Sanchez. Others were a teacher from the Ruidoso schools, Johnson Stearns and Roy Harmon of Carrizozo, Rosemary Sineros of Tinnie, and Nancy Knight of Ancho. The Lincoln County Historical Society gave a trophy to Leah Patterson of the Senior Division for her Pat Garrett Project. The society hopes to be able to present a trophy to both the senior and junior divisions, and have more entries next year. Captain was unable to have any entries to be judged, but they did have some very interesting displays.

The Capitan Scouts, under the leadership of Larry Bandy and Ralph Dunlap, put in fence posts at the fairgrounds last week. This past Thursday prisoners from Sierra Blanca put up the wire fence and gates. It really looks better, and the fair board thanks all those who volunteered to put it up. Inez Marra, with the help of Betty Lou Joiner and Rosalie Dunlap, fixed dinner for the group Thursday. Inez makes a delicious stuffed sopapilla.

It is Mackie Knowles who will be living in the Gibson house. My apologies, Mackie.

Edward Penfield spent Wednesday night in St. Mary's hospital for observation after falling on some steps in Carrizozo. He is doing fine except for some stitches on his forehead and a blackeye.

The historical area sign frames near the Bonita Bridge (east) and the one west of Government Springs have had their last coat of paint and stucco and will be ready for installation.

Other work being done in Lincoln is some more finishing work on the Tunstall store, The Torreon Shop is sprucing up, and to get everyone in the mood the trees are blooming, the lilacs have been beautiful, and the lawns are beginning to green up.

Fruit is appearing, so we are keeping our fingers crossed that we don't have any late frosts. Another sign of spring are all the artist groups and art classes up and down the streets.

Lincoln is planning a Lincoln area artists show May 17. Some who are expected to participate are Glenn Dennis and Joy Lane, sculptures; Gary Morton, Gary Miller, Elisa Phillips, Walter Henn, Joe Salazar; paintings, Leota Pflingsten, wood carvings; Job Lucero, furniture; John West and Horace Cordova, jewelry; Glenn Dennis and Clark Pflingsten, artifacts displays; Cleis and Jerry Jordan, soap, etc.

The show will be held on the grounds of the Wortley Hotel.

Lincoln was written up in the April issue of the Americana, by freelance writers and photographers John and Joan Neary of Santa Fe. Good publicity for us.

How many saw the Governors Award program Sunday? Gwen Jones, accepted the award for the Capitan EMT with a few brief remarks by our Lincoln County manager, Suzanne Cox. NM volunteers are a busy group of people.

Jon Amastee and son David, El Paso, were visiting his uncle, Edward Penfield, Lincoln, and his aunt, Ruth Penfield, Roswell, over the weekend.

recently at a noon luncheon meeting at Carrizozo's Four Winds Restaurant

Allan told Carrizozo Lions Club members and Carrizozo administrators that "Skills For Adolescence" is their club's major thrust for this year and next.

Allan's endorsement of the program was evident in his enthusiastic talk at the meeting. Special guests, Dennis Sidebottom, superintendent of Carrizozo Schools, and Bruce Young, principal, learned how the program works; how to launch the program in their school and what the costs of bringing the program to their community will be.

Ruidoso Noon Lions have taken on the challenge of sponsoring a workshop for county teachers selected to attend an upcoming institute. Professional training and a carefully developed and tested curriculum guide will be provided for the teachers.

If the program is incorporated into Carrizozo courses, Carrizozo Lions Club will consider providing textbooks and other classroom material for use in the Carrizozo school system.

"If we can save one child, keep him on the right track," then the program is worth the effort. The program is aimed at helping children build a resistance to drug and alcohol abuse so that it never begins.

The central focus of the program is a course that teaches skills and provides opportunities for students to practice them in the school, home and community.

The students learn to make responsible decisions; resist negative peer pressure; develop self-confidence; talk openly with their parents; deal positively with feelings of rejection, loneliness, and anger; set and achieve goals.

The program combines a positive focus on the student with hard-hitting drug and alcohol facts. Using current information, student learn how to think critically about the immediate and long-term effects of drugs and alcohol.

The Skills For Adolescence program is one of the major projects of Lions International and has been in effect for about a year and a half. The program was implemented in the Albuquerque School System last year and is well accepted, Allen stated.

The program is scheduled to start at Ruidoso Middle School in September.

Teachers for the program are selected by the school principal and administration. All teachers selected will be required to attend an extensive workshop to be held in Ruidoso. The program is expected to involve all of Lincoln County.

"One of the finest aspects of the program is parental involvement. Parents are encouraged to participate during all phases of the program," Allen said.

Police report

Carrizozo town police, according to reports logged at the police department, had a slow week.

Sunday evening's incident of a saddled horse minus a rider could have fallen in the category of the unusual—horse at large—but the horse's owner was soon traced by Officer Adam Montez.

SUNDAY, April 20
Officer Richard Baker and Sheriff's Deputy Charles Flanagan took four juveniles to the sheriff's office in reference to two 3-wheelers being driven on the golf course. The youths' parents were contacted. The juveniles were advised to keep the 3-wheelers off the greens.

SATURDAY, April 19
Baker attempted to locate dogs who were responsible for knocking over dumpsters near the Woman's Club building at 3 p.m.

FRIDAY, April 18
Baker was called to E Ave. where he assisted Carrizozo Ambulance. The call was in reference to a resident complaining of chest pain. The man was transported to Gerald Champion Memorial Hospital at Alamogordo.

THURSDAY, April 17
When Baker arrived at the scene at a Birch Street address, an adult son, who was bothering his mother, was no longer in the area. The woman told Baker that she did not want the son back home.

TUESDAY, April 15
"There's Choncho!" warned several juveniles gathered at 9:15 p.m. outside United New Mexico Bank. The incident report states that Chief of Police C. A. Morales parked by Shop Rite observed a tan pick-up swerving.

According to the report, after parking the vehicle in an empty parking lot behind the Zia Senior Citizen Center, the subjects "took off running toward the alley."

Morales next day cited Angelo Vega for careless driving. Parties to a crime citations were issued to Pete Narvaez and Frankie Gallegas. The youths appeared before municipal Judge S. M. Ortiz, who after hearing the pleas ordered the three to appear at a later date. Morales needs to amend the complaint to correct a deficiency.

Morales on April 15, cited a 16-year-old for driving without a license. According to municipal court, Morales had warned the youth several times that he could not drive by himself with a learner's permit.

The case of Carrizozo vs John Doe (not his real name) was turned over to children's court. Ortiz removed himself from the case because he is "related by 3rd degree" to Doe. Ortiz noted on the transfer order that he recommended that driving privileges be suspended for 60 days.

THURSDAY, April 10
4:55 p.m. complaint from a resident at 12th Street was the result of a report to Lincoln County Sheriff's Dept. of a "disorderly subject. Faustino Gallegos was taken to the county jail by Morales for detoxification.

OVERCOOKED VEGGIES
If your vegetables overcook, make a pureed sauce from the over-done vegetables and blend into canned soup.

AVOID OVERSALTING
Never measure salt over the pot. A spill could ruin a good dish. Add salt toward the end of the cooking stage. Ingredients get saltier as they cook. Liquids evaporate, thus intensifying flavors.

GRAVY THINNER
If gravy is too thick, thin by adding chicken or beef broth. Milk will work for cream gravy.

SAUCE THICKENER
Dissolve cornstarch or flour in a small amount of cold liquid to form a smooth paste. Add gradually to sauces that are too thin. One tablespoon of flour will thicken a cup of liquid.

PUDDING DESSERT
If your cake falls in the center, use it as a base for pudding. Cut the cake edges into squares and top with pudding.

PUDDING TOPPING
Hard and dry cookies can be ground and used as topping for pudding, fruit or ice cream.

Ernest V. Joiner

● GOING TO COURT can be a costly matter, as Bert Burns, 24, of Orlando, FL found out last month. Burns filed a suit against the Three-of-a-Kind bar for more than $4 million as a result of an auto accident that left him paralyzed. Burns alleged in his lawsuit that the bar illegally sold liquor to a drunken teenager who later hit and paralyzed Burns in the auto accident. Knowing how juries willingly dole out money from insurance companies, the bar's insurance company offered to settle with Burns for $500,000. Burns spurned the offer and the case went to trial. A jury of six women decided that although the bar sold beer to minors, it was not responsible for the accident. Burns gets nothing. He lost his chance to get $500,000. He has also been ordered to pay $12,000 court costs. In addition, he owes his lawyer $60,000. Perhaps he has learned that greed does not always pay. And since Burns' lawyer can hardly collect his $60,000 fee from a paralyzed man, he too may have learned the hazards of filing lawsuits against insurance companies for no other good reason than "that's where the money is." This is a classic rebuttal to those who believe that somebody other than the guilty person is responsible for their misfortune.

● HARRY G. Wilcox Jr., assistant district attorney, feels he is being singled out for criticism he doesn't deserve as a result of comment made in this column last week. He doesn't make the law, he merely enforces it. His explanation of why so many deferred sentences are being handed out is that the evidence presented by the sheriff's office is often incomplete, or that evidence has been gained illegally or outside the district attorney's rules and guidelines for the gathering and preservation of evidence. He cited an instance where law enforcement officers exceeded the limits of a search warrant. One undercover agent violated the law by actually selling dope to a person later arrested for the narcotic violation. All of which makes it impossible to go to trial and expect a conviction. Any good lawyer, he says, will bring up the civil rights violations at the trial. Therefore, considering the flawed evidence he has to work with, it is better to have the accused plead guilty in exchange for a deferred sentence. Something, he claims, is better than nothing. Further, he charges that the collection and preservation of evidence is the responsibility of law enforcement officers, not that of the district attorney's office.

● DISTRICT Judge Richard Parsons explained that a deferred sentence is not tantamount to "letting the accused off the hook." In all such cases, Judge Parsons said, he adds a condition that the guilty person signs a waiver of his constitutional rights during the probation. During this time he is subject to frequent and unscheduled inspections by the probation officer. Any evidence that probation is being violated results in immediate revocation of probation and the subject is required to serve out the terms of the original deferred sentence in the state penitentiary. He said his record for sending such violators to prison is more than 95 percent.

● THERE is additional punishment involved in deferred sentences. The guilty loses certain civil rights, such as the right to vote. He is subject to periodic investigation and his activities are closely monitored. If his conduct lands him back in court, his original sentence could be increased, depending upon the gravity of the situation.

● THE poor relations between the law enforcement branch and the prosecutor's office appears to be political. One official who does not wish to be quoted said that there is little chance of improving relations between the two offices. Only a couple of elections, he said, stand to bring the two agencies into a more cooperative posture.

● WILCOX pointed out that his oath of office requires that he not only uphold and enforce the law, but that he uphold justice. Law and justice are not always one and the same. It is neither law nor justice, he said, to prosecute a person with evidence illegally obtained, such as a recent case where he said evidence was gained through an undercover operator having sexual relations with a minor.

● WHATEVER the truth of charges against the sheriff's office by the district attorney's office, and vice versa, the public is being ill-served in the process. Perhaps a grand jury investigation is warranted. Somehow, more cooperation between the two offices must be established. Without that, neither agency can be said to be discharging its sworn duty to the public that foots the bill.

● PERHAPS you can explain it. Why would 221 Congressmen petition President Reagan to continue to adhere to a SALT arms control treaty which this country has never signed, and which the Soviet Union (which has signed) has consistently violated? That's what happened Saturday when more than half the members of the House of Representatives urged the president. "The Soviet Union," the petition read, "has been forced to dismantle over 500 operational launchers, including 14 Yankee Class submarines compared to only one operational dismantled by the United States." How do those 221 Congressmen know the Soviets have dismantled anything? "In the next two years, the Soviet Union will be required to dismantle three times as many missiles as the United States," these naive Congressmen continued. Required? Who is to require the Soviet Union to discard their edge-on nuclear weapons? How did they acquire all these missiles in the first place, if the number exceeds the non-existing treaty's ratio? If the Soviets had been abiding by the terms of their own treaty, would they have all these weapons in the first place? And perhaps just one of these Congressmen will cite one instance where the Soviets have adhered to any treaty unless it was to their unilateral advantage to do so? In literature and lore, the Devil himself has been known to keep his side of the bargain in exchange for a man's soul. The Soviets aren't so honorable.

In the 3rd century B.C., the courtiers of the royal court in China were required to carry doves in their mouths in order to sweeten their breath when addressing the emperor.

WATCH OVER WASHINGTON—

The many faces of Lyndon LaRouche

By LES KINSOLVING
WASHINGTON — It may be that there are still some Americans who agree with columnist Mike Royko that California is the Wacko Capital of the United States.

But hold on, there! Mike Royko is a citizen of the Great City of Chicago, whose Mayor is "Honest Harold" Washington, prominent slumlord and defrauder of clients, who is being held at bay in a furious municipal civil war by Alderman Edward "Fast Eddie" Verdolyak.

Chicago is also located in the Great State of Illinois, whose registered Democrats recently went to the polls in a primary election, where they nominated an unusually stimulating (and very varied) slate of top candidates. At the top, for Governor of Illinois, is Adlai Stevenson III — along with two Larouchies.

Mark J. Fairchild, age 23, is the Democratic Party's candidate for lieutenant governor of Illinois, while Janice Hart, age 31, and another Larouche, is the party's nominee for Secretary of State.

When Adlai first heard of this horrifying political development, he is said to have contemplated a running leap into Lake Michigan. Instead, he announced that he will be running as an independent rather than be associated with a ticket with these two disciples of one of the modern world's most certifiable psychoceramics.

The term "Larouche" is derived from their leader, Lyndon Hermyle LaRouche, a Stassen-like presidential-candidate perennial, who is one of the 20th Century's foulest oddballs.

Mr. LaRouche's autobiography notes the following:

"My principal accomplishment is that of being, by a large margin, the leading economist of the 20th Century." Mr. LaRouche is undeniably a leader — of sorts. I mean, what other economist has become convinced that Queen Elizabeth II is running a worldwide drug-smuggling operation? And what other economist has discovered that there never was a Holocaust — because it was the JEWS who brought Hitler to power(!)?

Mr. LaRouche's followers also agree that Henry Kissinger is a pederast — and several of them confronted him with this garbage in an airport as he was flying to Boston for open-heart surgery. His wife Nancy was understandably enraged at this, and she seized one of the creatures, for which she was subsequently hauled into court, and fined $10, suspended. The following day, I went on the air and urged that the court should have fined Mrs. Kissinger $20, because she failed to inflict bodily harm. Two days later, I was confronted in the White House Press Room by the correspondent of LaRouche's newspaper Solidarity and bitterly denounced by this frenzied young woman whom I understand has since broken with LaRouche.

In the United States today, there are, unbelievably, no less than 149 of LaRouche's disciples who are running for Congress, 14 running for the Senate, 8 for governor and 618 running for public offices. That more of these political-zombies might slip into election victories is a horror that should frighten every normal voter into unusual ballot surveillance.

Or do you want people in public office who maintain that Fritz Mondale is a KGB mole and Kissinger an agent of Soviet influence?

LaRouche's organization now operates under the misleading title of "National Democratic Policy Committee." Mr. LaRouche, who lives in a very heavily guarded estate near Leesburg, VA, was formerly associated with the Socialist Workers Party, where he was known as "Lyn Marcus." This is said to be a mixture of Marx and Lenin, both of whom he admires.

After teaching at the Communist "Free University of New York," LaRouche became leader of Students for a Democratic Society's Labor Committee. After breaking with SDS, LaRouche started his own movement, called the National Caucus of Labor Committees.

Part of the current LaRouche Party Line appears to support a number of causes dear to conservatives, such as: universal testing and quarantining of AIDS carriers; war on drug pushers; nuclear power; President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative ("Star Wars").

For example, LaRouche sent emissaries to try to join forces with Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, leader of the primary proposer of SDI, "High Frontiers." But General Graham, as the retired deputy director of the CIA and head of the Defense Intelligence Agency, declined to join forces with these nutcases.

"LaRouche is not for SDI," noted Graham, to The Washington Times. "He insists on the most difficult way, politically and technically, to achieve it and ridicules anybody who doesn't agree with him. They take an issue like SDI and do their best to destroy it by behaving like idiots."

When the general learned about this, he laughed and remarked: "That's a rather strange description of a man with seven children, isn't it?"

He added that the LaRouche paper also charged that he was "shacking up with a KGB agent." "My wife," added the general, "was quite surprised."

Exclusionary rule

The guilty sometimes go free, unpunished for their crimes against society even though the evidence seems clear.

The Constitution and the courts specify the rules and regulations by which law-enforcement agencies may operate in making arrests and obtaining evidence. Judges are bound by precedent to follow those rules and regulations.

If all the rules and regulations as set down in the law are followed scrupulously by both the prosecution and defense, a fair trial will have been assured, and it is assumed that a fair verdict will be rendered. There then would be no loopholes or technicalities for an enterprising defense attorney to use.

But it doesn't always work that way. Take the story out of Miami about a defense attorney whose whole philosophy is to find violations of the rules by the authorities. "The state has rules; they should live by them," the attorney said.

And, yes, he finds those violations by authorities, which, he asserts, permits him to get almost any accused drunken driver off. He says he has never lost in more than 20 drunk-driving trials and usually is successful in avoiding going to trial — because he has discovered a violation by the authorities of the rights of the suspect.

His rationale is that anyone arrested is entitled to the best defense an attorney can provide.

An example of one of his cases: The passenger in a vehicle driven by the attorney's client was killed in a traffic accident. The driver and passenger had been drinking beer most of the evening. A blood test showed that the client's blood-alcohol level was higher than allowed by law. He was charged with driving while intoxicated-man-slaughter, a crime in Florida that carries a maximum 15-year sentencing.

The attorney discovered that his client's blood sample had been taken by a nurse whose license had expired. The law requires the test to be taken by a licensed nurse. The attorney's motion to suppress the test as inadmissible evidence was granted by the court, according to the so-called exclusionary rule.

The charges were reduced and the attorney bargained for probation for his client, with the sentence to be expunged at the end of probation and his record wiped clean.

Outrageous? Yes. Unfair? It would seem to be.

There are no absolutes in law. The law is open to interpretation. A major abuse by law-enforcement officials or a violation of one's constitutional rights should be grounds for dismissal of a case or the inadmission of evidence. But some judges and courts carry to absurdity the dismissal or overturning of verdicts on the basis of minor technicalities.

In the case of the nurse who had taken the blood sample, but whose state-granted license had expired, was that not a trivial matter? The blood sample taken still showed that the suspect was drunk — regardless of whether the nurse had an up-to-date license.

There must be a balance to the freeing of the guilty on picaresque technicalities. There have to be sensible solutions to such questions. Only the judges can provide those sensible solutions. For they are the ones empowered to interpret the law.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

No plan to end rail service

EDITOR—In your April 3 editorial under the headline "Goodbye to SP," you lament the prospective loss of rail service in Lincoln County due to abandonment of Southern Pacific's El Paso-Tucumcari route after its merger with Santa Fe Railway.

There are absolutely no plans to abandon this railroad line through your community. Although levels of traffic may change, depending on business conditions and routing decisions, we plan to retain this line as an important part of the new Southern Pacific & Santa Fe Railway.

McCarthy defended

EDITOR—In your "Letters To The Editor" column of April 3, 1986 of The Lincoln County News, a letter by a Mr. Edgar Ross of San Francisco quotes you as saying "History has largely vindicated McCarthy." He is very disturbed by your statement and wishes to know where he can find any publication which would vindicate this "hateful man."

I wish to refer him (Mr. Ross) to the book "McCarthy and His Enemies" by William F. Buckley and L. Brent Bozell, published in 1964 by Henry Regnery Company, Chicago, Illinois. This book is a compilation of the various hearings by a committee of the US Senate to investigate the accusations by Senator McCarthy that the State Department had some "81" cases of royalty risks if not outright communists.

Senator McCarthy announced to the Tydings Committee that he did not wish to name the so-called risks publicly until there had been a thorough and quiet investigation of each one of the named suspects, since he thought there would be some on the list who were innocent and their reputations would be ruined if their names came out in the paper. But the Tydings Committee demanded that ALL the names be included. And the Democrats then took after McCarthy as a character assassin. The Democrats then proceeded in the most thorough character assassination of a very decent US Senator. It was a scandal in my estimation.

So if Mr. Ross is interested in fairness let him read the book by Buckley and Bozell and also this one listed here: "McCarthy" by Roy Cohn, a young lawyer who worked with Robert Kennedy on Senator McCarthy's staff. This book was published by "The New American Library" in 1968, New York.

I hope this will help set the record straight for Mr. Ross.

'Lunch-mob justice'

EDITOR—Mr. Edgar Ross of San Francisco expresses bewilderment regarding a fair assessment of the difficult and necessary investigative work conducted by the late Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin (Letters, April 3). Perhaps the following observations will add a bit more perspective to this matter.

Senator McCarthy's enemies, including Commies and fellow travelers, weep in outraged indignation over what they allege to have been that "ruffian's" sneers, character assassination, groundless charges, insinuations, guilt by association, and so forth. Over the years, the liberal media has righteously and repeatedly condemned such behavior.

But let's put the shoe on the other foot. Many of these same smide, viciously hypocritical and calculating McCarthy-haters used precisely those tactics in their attempts to destroy the Nixon Administration during that incredible Watergate hysteria of the early 1970s. A fair trial for Nixon? It would simply have been out of the question. Talk about kangaroo courts and lynch-mob justice! "McCarthyism," indeed.

INSIDE THE CAPITOL—

This is Gutless Candidate season

By FRED McCAFFREY
SANTA FE—Most political candidates want to have it both ways.

They'd like to create in us the impression that they are courageous, clear-thinking, forward-looking individuals who tell the truth without fear or favor—but on the other hand, they don't want to offend anybody.

Now, it stands to reason that you can't take strong stands on issues of any dimension and not tick somebody off. There is no way a campaign can be run that will make it attractive to and supportable by everyone, and it's foolish to try. But somehow, every time new candidates come out of the chute, they appear to think they can accomplish that.

YES AND NO: Let's look at just one candidate during the current campaign for example. It doesn't matter which one this actually is, because what he does is typical of them all.

This particular one gives a rip-roaring, tough-talking speech about what he will do when elected to "well-heeled lawyers and large brokerage houses" who, he suggests, are manipulating the state's bond issues to maximize profits to themselves.

That's a vigorous stand, which many of us think should be applauded. There is such a group aboard in our state, it would appear.

But is this candidate willing to take the next logical step? Let's ask him.

Will he express his disdain for such folks concretely by refusing campaign contributions from them? He hems and haws. It turns out he didn't mean to go quite that far. He wants to say bad things about such people, but still take their money if it is offered to him.

THE MONIED CLASS: Or take another position some who want to guide our destiny are presently espousing. They want to be a lot tougher, they give us to understand, about depositing state funds in New Mexico banks and thrift institutions. For safety's sake, they are saying, they will demand 100 collateralization, which banks have not been required to provide till now.

But ask them to go one step further. Are you willing to tell the state's financial institutions that they are no longer entitled to more or less automatic deposits of state funds, just because they are in business here? Will you look bankers in the eye and tell them they have to produce at least as much return on this

Samuels enters race for sheriff

Don Samuels, candidate for the Republican nomination for Lincoln County Sheriff, said he believes the future of the area depends on the youth.

"Following many years of working with young adults, I'm keenly interested in developing programs which encourage teenagers and our youth to participate in positive activities. We need to give them healthy outlets for their spirited energy," Samuels said.

He served for over 11 years as a Texas State Trooper, with the last four of those years in the attorney general's office before he moved to Ruidoso in 1983.

Samuels attended West Texas State University and studied business administration. He holds an advanced certificate in law enforcement from the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Samuels, who owns the Rocking Horse toy store, is active in youth activities of the Episcopal Church. He is a member of the Village of Ruidoso Personnel Board.

"I want the families of this area to call on me in time of trouble and know I am their ally. I want them to realize the law works on behalf of all our citizens," he said.

Samuels and his wife Sheri have two daughters, Amanda, 16 and Dona, 12.

Mainz runs for probate judge

Siegbert (Sig) R. Mainz is a candidate for the office of probate judge in the coming Democratic primary.

Mainz is a newcomer to the Otero County political scene but no newcomer to the Alamogordo area.

Mainz, 50, came to Alamogordo in 1966 and resides at 1200 Michigan. He is the owner of the Alamogordo Singer store at 808 New York Avenue.

SIEGBERT R. MAINZ

He is married and has two sons. The youngest is 19 and serves in the US Marine Corps at San Diego.

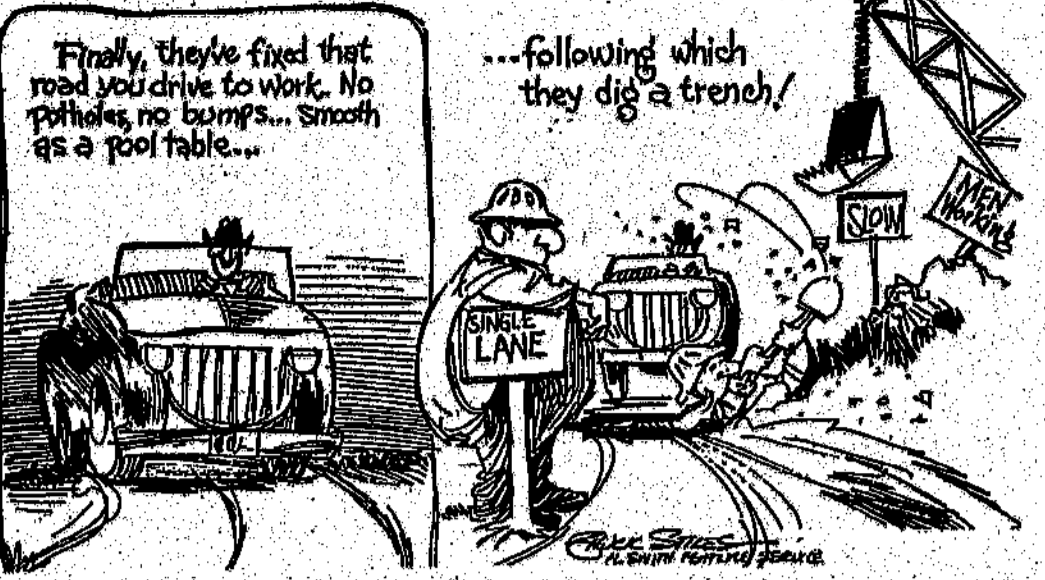

He says his many years in the local business taught him fiscal responsibility and independent decision making. The fact that he is an independent businessman enables him to be available to the public 24 hours a day.

He is acquainted with many people and knows of the need for good and responsible service. Mainz pledges fair and impartial conduct on all probate court matters and said the office will be run efficiently and with high ethical standards.

He will conduct an active campaign and solicit the votes and support of all persons interested in good and open government.

Mainz was born in Germany and received his formal education in business in that country. He made Alamogordo his home because he loves the Southwest area and the frienmoney as we can get if we invest it elsewhere?

"Again we get the horns and haws. Nobody want to make the money people angry. Bankers, after all, contribute to political campaigns, and this year, money's hard to raise. So we mustn't offend the financial community.

And so another bold new initiative dies a-borning, because it might generate a shred of opposition, and no political candidate wants to do that, ever.

DESIDERATUM: Wouldn't it be wonderful if just once in these runs for high office we could have at least one aspirant who would be totally honest in telling what he plans to do?

Don't you think a majority of voters might even go for such a man?

What's most offensive about most of those presently running is their desperate desire to be inoffensive.

We don't need a lie-detector test for the man who becomes our next governor, or a urinalysis. What we need is a test for guts.

Pfeffer asks task force on crime

David Pfeffer, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Lincoln County Sheriff, says he hopes to foster more cooperation between area law enforcement agencies.

"We need to work together to fight crime in Lincoln County," Pfeffer said. "To do this, I want to establish a task force involving the district attorney's office, the sheriff's office and all other law enforcement agencies in the county to focus on drug trafficking and other major crimes."

Pfeffer, who is currently a captain in the Ruidoso Police Dept., has been a police officer for 11 years. He is a deputy medical investigator and a special investigator for the 12th Judicial District.

Active in the Sertoma International service club, Pfeffer said he wants to be "the people's sheriff."

"I plan to be available to help people from all over the county. If that means spending one day a week down in the San Patricio area or Capitan, that's what I'll do."

Pfeffer's candidacy has created some controversy because of a Ruidoso regulation that requires village employees who are seeking public office to resign their post with the village.

Pfeffer said he is still waiting to hear from village attorney John Underwood, who was asking for an opinion on the constitutionality of the regulation.

"This is important to me, so although I hate to, if I have to resign from the police department then I'll resign," Pfeffer said.

Pfeffer and his wife Roxann have four children.

WORKMEN PROCEEDED last week to load this house at El Paso Natural Gas Lincoln Compressor Station. The structure is one of eight dwellings scheduled to be moved from the location.

SEVEN MORE TO GO—

First house moved from El Paso Nat'l Gas Station

by LINDA CALDWELL
The first of several company houses to be moved from El Paso Natural Gas Lincoln Station was on its way to Deming this week. The 27x57 structure was moved by the Martin and Bartlett firm of Hatch, NM, and according to Gilbert Bartlett, "We can move anything you can get loose," although he added, "We don't move brick."

Bartlett is not responsible for disconnecting plumbing or utilities - he is "just the mover." "The first thing we do is unbolt it from the concrete foundation." The boss and his crew of Tinker McConnell and Walter Everitt then knock holes in the concrete footing and place a jack in each hole. One side of the house is raised and a huge steel beam is placed under the house. When the procedure has been completed on both sides, the winch truck picks up the beams and ever so gently places the load on the trailer.

"This rig will hold more than the tires," said Bartlett looking at the still inflated tires on his trailer. "This load probably weighs only about 75 or 80,000 pounds total," he said. And the structure was not a particularly large one to move by his standards: "It's only about 27 feet from eye to eye. The widest thing I ever moved - and it was just a little ways - was 44 feet. We moved a 40 footer down from Hatch to Deming, and that was a trip."

Bartlett says he can run about 50 mph down the open highways - that's with a state police escort, and he was sure the Lincoln Station house would be in Deming in one day's travel.

When asked if he had ever lost a house, Bartlett was quick to remember one, and only one, about 35 years ago. "We were gonna move one from Rincon, at the base of the San Andreas mountains, up to the old Jack Brown place. We had to go uphill and around a sharp point, and I'd back that thing up and crank the wheel, and I'd do it again and again. Well, I'd backed up and turned as much as I could, but the boys, they said I could do it one more time; so I tried it, and directly I heard a big yell like somebody'd been killed, so I slammed on the brakes, and when I did that, off she went - it was about 100 feet down. Well, we went back and got another house, and that time I was the boss! We got it up there, but it took us seven days to go 25 miles." It's usually a very smooth trip, he added, and remembered a time when a jar of apricots was left on a shelf in a house. "That jar was still on the shelf when we got the house settled in its new location," he said.

Bartlett says he charges by the square foot and by the mile, "plus". "That's plus permits of all kinds. It costs between $165 and $300 just to go down the highway." He checks out the route and if there are any low wires, he meets with appropriate utilities. Their engineers see what has to be done and give a price for raising the wires. "We're getting ready to move a theatre from Ft. Bliss in El Paso to Anthony, and one utility, I think it's the telephone company, said it'll cost $13,000 to raise their wires. Then another utility said they wanted $23,000 to raise their wires," he said. The gas company house won't have that problem - it's a relatively low load, and a board nailed to the roof keeps any wires from snagging. "Walt rides on top in town," said Bartlett, "and he makes sure we get through okay."

The process may seem monumental for those of us who make way for the big loads, but it's just another day's work for Gilbert Bartlett and his crew.

Houses up for public bids

by LINDA CALDWELL
In addition to the house moved this week, seven more El Paso Natural Gas Company houses are scheduled to be put up for public bid at an as yet undetermined date.

According to E.W. Tubbs, Cost Center Superintendent at Lincoln Station, company officials will soon set a date after which the seven houses may be put up for bid and will be open for public inspection. He added that no houses will be open to the public nor will any bids be accepted before the established date.

There are presently 29 houses at the natural gas complex located approximately 12 miles south of Corona. Due to a gradual reduction in the work force at the location during the last few years, the company determined that the eight houses would not be necessary to maintain and decided to dispose of them through public bids.

Dates, plums and figs

(part 2)

It is always amazing, when talking about "worst-wierd" dates, that so many of them turn out to be first dates. I guess either everything goes uphill from there or we've got the brains to get out. Who knows?

Anyhow, to the "Crab Fellow" story, which was also a once and not again encounter: "I met this fellow through a friend," the woman recalls, "and he suggested a picnic on the beach. I thought that was a really good idea and suggested we have a crab barbeque with wine and french bread.

"My date said 'fine.' So I bought this live crab, they're not cheap, you know, and brought it to the beach in a picnic basket. The guy opens the basket and starts talking to the crab.

"Then he starts giving me a lecture on the interrelationship of all living creatures, and how man must recognize his brethren, including crabs.

"In the end we threw this poor crab into the ocean, saying a prayer to bid it farewell..."

This seemed like an "8" rating on a scale of "10" wierd, at which point my friend JoAnn mentioned she had a "worst" to break the pace.

"On my first date with John, we went to this quaint little restaurant way out in the middle of nowhere. However, since I wasn't really feeling well, having badly sprained my ankle the day before, we ended up leaving early.

"It was pouring rain. John said he knew a shortcut home. We got about 15 minutes from the restaurant and the car got stuck in mud. Since I wasn't about to sit in a car on a deserted road, we walked five miles with my taped ankle wrapped in a plastic bag..."

There must have been something about the togetherness of the mud trek that brought the two some sort of better communication, since they've been married over a year now. "He's the only fellow who ever listened to what I had to say," JoAnn comments.

What about my worst-wierdest? Actually, it's a tie, and both occurred in the first year of my singlehood. But the "Owl Fellow" wins out by a margin point, so...

This rather respectable, thoroughly pleasant and polite man asked me out to dinner. The dinner went smoothly. We talked about his kids, my kids, our respective ex-spouses, the usual.

When he found out I was a writer, he bashfully admitted he wrote poetry, and would I like to hear some of it? Sure, why not?

The poetry was at his home high in the hills. We drove there. We entered. The nice fellow mentions to me that he forgot to pay the electricity bill, so there aren't any lights. Instead he lights a few candles.

This illuminates the owls. There are stuffed owls on the walls, ceramic owls on the mantle, owl paintings all over the place, owl embroidered pillows, etc.

In the dark place with the flickering candles and what seemed like millions of owls, the fellow reads me poetry. At the close of an hour, I told him I had a headache and had to go home.

He took me home. The poetry really wasn't bad. I never went out with him again either.

AAVRON SUMPTER is the Carrizozo "Student of the Week". He is in second grade and was chosen because he works well independently and gets along well with others. Aavron likes to play with his dog Cody and he likes to play football. His parents are Bill and Rita Sumpter.

Gen. Lew Wallace, the author of "Ben Hur," has turned his versatile time to mechanics. He has invented a steel railroad cross tie, which if it is as successful as the inventor claims it will be, will revolutionize railroad construction. Denver is forging ahead at a grand rate these days. Her real estate sales for the past twelve months foot up $60,000,000, and in the same length of time the sum of $12,000,000 has gone into new buildings. In eight years the population of Denver has increased from 35,000 to 135,000, or 307 per cent.
