Culley benefit Sept. 5

The Carrizozo Lions Club is staging a fundraising auction Saturday, Sept. 5 at 12 noon to raise funds for the Culley family. Their son Johnny is suffering from cancer.

Persons who have items to donate to the auction may call any of these telephone numbers: 648-2990, 648-2363, 648-2172 or 648-2527. John Booker of John's TV is in charge of acquisitions for the auction. There will be a crew on duty Saturday morning to operate a pickup service.

Hot dogs, snow cones, food, music and walk-on clowns will add a festive mood to the occasion. Bobby Wadsworth has donated his Frontier Park as location of the auction and entertainment. Attorney Richard Askew and his band will furnish music.

The public is invited to attend this benefit for Johnny Culley.

Bicentennial/Diamond Jubilee

Plans for celebrating Lincoln's county seat

A change is being made in plans for the Bicentennial Diamond Jubilee celebration Sept. 19 in Carrizozo.

It has been decided not to have the noon luncheon in order to give plenty of time to the Old Homes Tour and to have plenty of time to get organized for the 2 p.m. parade.

The barbecue after the parade was not in the original plans when the luncheon was set up. This will give visitors some free time between the tour and the parade. It will also coordinate all food efforts toward one project.

The town is in contact with the New Mexico Bicentennial Diamond Jubilee Commission asking recognition, encouragement and financial assistance in erecting a fitting memorial marker for Governor McDonald. The town has agreed to put a marker somewhere, the actual site to be determined. The park across from the post office has been suggested.

The celebration is now in four parts: The Old Homes Booklet, The Old Homes Tour, the parade, and the program in the park following the parade. Flags, speeches, food, music, and whatever else some good citizen might dream up will be the order of the day. Final plans will be in the Sept. 17 Lincoln County News.

At the close of the Civil War in 1865 this country began its development. Lincoln County was formed in 1869. On the eve of violence in Lincoln County in 1877 there were three big outfits forming up. Chisum had the South Spring Ranch just below Roswell, Tunstall had his ranch south on the Feliz, and Murphy had the Carrizozo outfit which he called Fairview Ranch. Hemmingway wrote, "in every war a few sparrows must fall." In the Lincoln County War the big birds didn't fare well either. Tunstall was killed in February of 1878, McSween in July of 1878, Murphy died a broken man in October. Chisum returned to Texas, a sick man, and died in 1884. As these men went down a new man came on the scene, William C. McDonald. From 1880 to 1918 he carved out a remarkable career.

At the beginning of the state's 75th birthday, New Mexico Magazine in its January issue states: "New Mexico has had 24 governors. Each individual, in his own way, has left his mark on the state and some have become legends. William G. McDonald is considered by many as one of these legends."

New owners from Arizona

Prehm property will be turned into a museum

By RUTH HAMMOND

Prehm's Department Store, established on 12th Street in Carrizozo in 1925, was once a booming business owned by Ernie and Minnie Prehm and their sons Otto and Ernie.

The business has been closed for several years and the windows have been boarded up. Signs painted on the outside of the building have faded through the years, giving only a glimpse of the activity that once was there.

Prehm's Department Store will be the location of another booming business if Ted Tatum has his way. Interested in preserving history, Tatum bought the building and contents and plans to restore the building to its original state and turn it into a museum, curio shop and antique store.

Tatum is now in the process of cleaning out the building. "It will take a long time" he said, "to restore the building to its original beautiful appearance." Items that have been in the store these many years are being carefully saved to be placed in the museum.

"We will not throw away anything of historical value," he continued. "We are going through everything with a fine-tooth comb. I want to preserve everything I can for future generations." Old papers are being put in boxes until they can be sorted and displayed in the museum.

"We will find a lot of history in here," Tatum said, referring to the building that has housed a meat market, drug store, cafe and liquor store in addition to being a department store.

The building was also the home of Carrizozo's second post office. The original post office cubicle remains intact and will become part of the museum. Tatum also plans to restore the old drug store and grocery store. Old canned goods and other grocery items will be replaced on the shelves of the grocery store section of the museum.

TED TATUM of Payson, AZ recently bought Prehm's Department Store. He plans to restore the building to "its original beautiful appearance" and "preserve everything in it for future generations" by turning it into a museum, curio shop and antique store.

Tatum said he will accept things to be displayed in the museum and that each item will be tagged with the owner's name. He will also accept antiques on consignment when the antique store is open.

Hailing from Payson, AZ, Tatum said he has been coming through Carrizozo on Highway 380 for 10 years while on his way to visit family in Georgia. Last year he decided to drive through Carrizozo and he "fell in love with the town." Subsequently he bought the Sunset Motel and the former Jackie's Cafe at the corner of 12th Street and Highway 54. His wife Patricia and their three children are in Payson while Tatum is working on the building in Carrizozo. His wife is an elementary teacher and the children, Ted Jr., Davis and Beth Ann, work in businesses he owns in Arizona.

Tatum has been in ranching, construction and general business. He has experience in restoration of areas by having restored the town of Gisela, AZ which is in the geographical center of Arizona and located 11 miles from Payson.

Gisela is now a large building that houses a museum, a small motel and a restaurant. Gisela is five miles off the highway in a valley with a running creek. Tourists visit the area.

Tatum hopes to turn the Prehm building into the same sort of attraction in Carrizozo.

The museum will contain the old counters that were in the original store and other items that are still there, such as an old newspaper that was printed during the first year of World War II, bottle caps, dishes, a photo of a Davis 7-passenger automobile, a postcard of a train on a trestle at Cloudcroft, a postcard showing a dust storm on its way into Garden City, KS, complete with buildings in front of the raging storm, another postcard of Garden City as the storm hits, and a photo of the interior of Prehm's Department Store that is being printed in the NEWS this week.

Business is not booming as yet, but Tatum said that people are "dropping by every day to watch the renovation in progress."

9th graders to operate own weather station

Ninth grade students in the physical science class at Carrizozo High School will take daily readings from a weather station that was installed at the high school recently.

The weather station was donated by the National Weather Station to be used by students.

Science teacher Mariann Patterson said the readings of maximum and minimum temperatures each day and amount of precipitation will be used for the students' own records. The readings will also be posted in the school daily announcements and be posted in the hall at school.

"The purpose of the weather station," Patterson said, "is to teach students that taking statistics and keeping statistics is part of observation in the scientific method."

JUNK MAIL. Are you sick of all the junk mail that you have to sort through every day? Isn't there some way you can keep from getting it?

The answer is yes. Write to Mail Preference Service, Direct Mail/Marketing Association, 6 East 43rd Street, New York, NY 10017. Ask for a free mail removal form. Eventually your name will get off national listings.

CHAVEZS ACROSS AMERICA

Mary Whitney of Ottsville, PA writes that a book, "Chavez Across America" is mine for $29.85. She claims that the nationwide Chavez household search was expensive and time consuming. If individually researched, it would require me to spend thousands of dollars or months of work to search through national and state, government and utility records.

"Chavez Across America" requests must be received prior to Sept. 16. The edition will never be printed again. Oh, shucks!

The book represents their informative edition of knowledge about the location of Chavez Families in America.

COAT OF ARMS?

Chavez Across America is a hard bound library edition and is gold stamped on a leather textured cover. The book will:

- Facilitate locating relatives and namesakes.
- Help to initiate relationships with other Chavez families.

- Aid in the study of Chavez migrations and settlements in America with state and county counts.
- Provide educational chapters on how to research for the Chavez surname; where Americans came from; coats of arms and surnames and origins.

That last bit of information proved to me that Mary Whitney, coordinator of the Chavez book, thinks that this Chavez household is wet behind the ears.

JIM AND TAMMY

According to Harper's Index: The price of a copy of "Jim and Tammy Bakker," the authorized history of the PTL Club sold for $100 in 1986. Today: $20.

Morris Costumes of Charlotte, NM has come up with another meaning for PTL—Paint That Latex. The company is making Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker masks to get them in costume and specialty stores by Halloween. The handpainted latex masks cost $28.50 each (some proceeds go to the Bakkers).

PACK RATS

The Smithsonian, America's attic, is filled with all kinds of interesting things. And you think your closets and storage sheds are junky!

The famed museum includes the following in their storage:

- A top hat worn by President Warren Harding during his brief 1920 to 1923 term of office.

- The field tent used by Gen. George Washington on his campaigns during the American Revolution.

- Actual pieces of the Brooklyn Bridge.

- The trumpet used by famed jazz master Dizzy Gillespie.
- A stuffed Bengal tiger that is 11-feet-1-inch long and weighs 857 pounds.

HOME ALONE

"Listen," a monthly journal of better living, is available at the school library in Carrizozo. The publication provides a positive educational approach to problems arising out of the use of tobacco, alcohol and other drugs. It is utilized nationally by Narcotics Education Inc. also by many organizations in the field of rehabilitation.

The articles are very interesting and cover all areas: A "Listen" magazine editorial alumnus shares his interest in photography; Malcolm-Jamal Warner, teenage star of the "Cosby Show," gives an exclusive glimpse into the life of a TV celebrity and a story from a 1965 issue offers a timeless look at what it feels to experience peer pressure.

Warner, who plays Theo on the television show has lent his face to a video called "Home Alone" that gives safety tips and suggestions for things to do for latchkey children.

TEACH YOUR CHILDREN

Teach your children what a stranger is.

Teach your child not to take rides, candy, money or bribes from a stranger. Teach your child never to accept an alternate way home. Children need to know that any change in plans will be relayed to them only through school personnel.

Teach your child that any area covered by a bathing suit or underwear should not be touched by strangers (or others).

Don't allow children to break the rules in your presence.

Provide "safe places" for your children on their way home. Show them places they can go to if they need help such as a neighbor's home, or a certain store to use the telephone.

Teach your child things to do if approached by a stranger, such as: ignoring, walking away, using the safe places you have shown him/her in the neighborhood.

Encourage your child to tell you if he/she has encountered a situation that makes him/her uncomfortable.

DID YOU KNOW?

People have had dental problems ever since they had teeth. Tooth trouble cuts across class lines and cultural differences and no one is immune. Fortunately, oral hygiene has come a long way toward making oral neglect an unnecessary thing of the past.

Here is a fact you can get your teeth into. Plaque buildup can be controlled by daily oral hygiene and professional dental care. Plaque is a soft, sticky, colorless film made up of many kinds of bacteria. Plaque forms and continually multiplies when bacteria in the mouth interacts with fermentable sugars present in many foods. Almost everyone has plaque. It is constantly forming on the surface of the teeth, and if it is not removed, plaque can cause problems, such as stain and odor.

For less plaque and a cleaner, fresher mouth, follow this program of daily oral hygiene and professional dental care:

- Brush your teeth at least twice a day and after between-meal snacks if possible.
- Floss thoroughly every day to help remove plaque and food particles between the teeth and along the gum-line.

- Eat a balanced diet to help keep oral tissues healthy.

- Schedule at least two visits to the dentist every year for professional cleaning, examination and counseling.
- Rinse with an antibacterial mouthwash at least twice a day. One, Listerine Antiseptic, has breath-freshening and plaque-reducing properties. Studies have shown that when used in addition to regular oral hygiene, Listerine can both reduce existing plaque deposits and prevent plaque accumulation by up to 50% over brushing alone.

You often look only as good as you feel, and a healthy smile makes you feel good about yourself. So why not look and feel your best?

Check Your Safety Savvy

We at Texas-New Mexico Power Company are concerned about electrical safety. That's why we've developed this safety checklist. If you're a parent or teacher, you can clip this ad and use it to teach your children or students to use electricity wisely.

safety Checklist

- Avoid the use of water around electrical outlets or appliances. Water conducts electricity, so keep all electrical wiring away from water, especially around bathtubs, sinks or swimming pools.
- Never touch a power line with anything, including antennas, tree pruning tools, ladders, or kite strings.
- If you see a fallen power line, do not get close to it. Report it to either our office or the local law enforcement officials.
- Parents of young children should childproof their electric outlets.

Use and enjoy the benefits of electricity — the safest and cleanest power choice — but make sure that it is not used carelessly. Call or visit our office today for more information.

Corona Motel has new ownership

Corona Motel has begun to take on a fresh, spruced-up look since new owners Bill and Pat Kluting moved in. The couple purchased the business in June and have worked steadily at making repairs and generally giving the place a face-lift.

Bill, a truck driver since 1970, had most recently driven a route from Alamogordo to Las Vegas, NM—usually five times a week—hauling material to the Montano Fiber and Particle Board Plant. With retirement in mind, he had looked along the route for some place to settle and chose the Corona Motel.

So far, business has been generally good with the "No Vacancy" sign going up during the Corona Summer Festival. "We're booked solid through hunting season," commented Pat.

Resurfacing of the parking area is among planned improvements in the near future; the Klutings hope to eventually install two truckers showers with a lounge. Bill admits, "That's still a long ways off; we still have lots of little things to do."

Meanwhile, the family is easing into a life of "retirement" in rural New Mexico. Says Pat, "We've been here since the first of July and have seen nothing but the nicest people in the world."

The Klutings have two sons, Michael 28, and Gene, now a junior at Corona High School.

Thanks to a recent Associated Press story in the El Paso Times dated Abilene, TX we can breathe a sigh of relief—the demise of the concho watersnake is not imminent. You know all about the concho watersnake, of course. The world could not turn without it. Two decades ago it was listed as an "endangered species" by opponents of the Stacy Dam proposed by the Colorado River Municipal Water District in Texas. By claiming the water project would endanger a form of wildlife is the only way the dam could be killed or delayed under prevailing law and flawed logic. This particular endangered species would become extinct because the dam would destroy its sole habitat, thus upsetting Mother Nature's balance of life—according to the politically-clouted imbecillies of the environmental left. So construction of the dam has been "on hold" for two decades while taxpayers spent enormous sums on a substitute habitat for the coddled creature.

Don't get me wrong. I am an environmentalist. I believe in clean air, pure water, land and wildlife conservation. But it is possible to be an environmentalist without being an idiot at the same time. The people who are causing all this trouble make up the loony-left of the radical division of the environmental, which is why I refer to them, and correctly so, as "imbecillies."

Barring a few ragged-jeaned environmentalists, who never heard of a concho watersnake, or cared to? But they are vital to the balance of nature, wail the imbecillies. So that settles it. We must forego drinking and irrigation water and electric power for mere mortals. All hail to the concho watersnake! Don't horse around with Mother Nature (imbecillies strongly support abortion, but never consider that abortion also constitutes "horsing around" with Mother Nature.) Instead, break out kerosene lamps and pray to Mother for rain.

Faced with the wrath of environmentalia the district began constructing an alternate habitat for a damned nuisance. Then what happened? After this costly tour de force it develops that the concho watersnake is prolific, not endangered. Are the imbecillies embarrassed? No. They're jubilant. They don't now and never did give a hoot about a crumbly concho watersnake. But it was important as a tool to cripple and delay construction of a hated dam that would have brought comfort and prosperity to people of the region.

We have been confronted with the same scenario so many times—coddling so-called endangered species while people suffer from lack of water and energy. We have never caught on that we have been (and are being) suckered on an on-going basis. Remember the ubiquitous snail darter which, though never endangered, held up a water and power project for years before we learned the little rascals were all over the country? Remember how another endangered species, the peregrine falcon, tripled the cost of a dam in Northern California before people came to their senses? Remember the Houston toad? The list goes on. Still we haven't learned that imbecillies are making fools of us with such endangered species nonsense.

Take the case of the alligator. At one time a person could go to jail for even verbally abusing the "endangered" alligator. Today we find alligators in Florida, Louisiana, Georgia and other spawning areas are crawling out of their muck, attacking entire towns and eating people who are forbidden to fight back. Now people are the endangered species! Thirty years ago, about the time alligator slime was elevated to sainthood, I bought a pair of alligator shoes in Mexico City. I haven't been comfortable wearing them because imbecillies threaten mayhem to anyone seen wearing alligator shoes or carrying alligator handbags. I've dusted them off and will wear them to my office next week. Come by and get a look at a pair of genuine alligator shoes, and thank God somebody got the alligator before the alligator got us.

Human ego aside, Mother Nature has all sorts of plans to make human beings extinct. She did a fair job of it with the Black Plague. Today she is trying AIDS and other erotic and exotic means to do us in. Why do not the imbecillies tell us that in the United States alone there are more than 700 species of plants which, if eaten, can kill a human being? According to the nation's poison control centers, the leading cause of poisoning in children under five (excepting, carelessly capped medicines) are plants? Plant poisoning from 1971 has increased 300 percent. Scientists attribute this unnecessary killing to the house plant explosion and to the "back-to-nature" dining made popular in recent years by the Imbecille Lobby. If you want to experience Mother Nature's revenge, try eating such plants as sweet pea, oleander, azalea, bleeding heart, buttercup, daffodils, lily of the valley, delphinium, rhododendron and 700 other plants nobody bothers to warn people about. So the next time the Imbecille Lobby comes up with a new "endangered species" that would be extinct if a dam were constructed, take a closer look at their credentials. Find out what organizations they belong to, their political ideology, and how they feel about a strong and surviving America.

Les Kinsolving

Revolution in Jehovah's Witnesses?

For 59-year-old Bette Vauls of the Baltimore suburb of Rosedale, April 13 was a day for which she has been eagerly waiting.

This was the date for the beginning of the trial of her $300,000 lawsuit against three of her fellow Jehovah's Witnesses.

Vauls was a Methodist until 1967, when she was converted by the Witnesses. She subsequently spent as much as 60 hours a month selling the denomination's literature.

Nine years later (her lawsuit alleges), her 14-year-old daughter was made the object of sexual advances by another member of the congregation.

When she reported this to the congregation's leadership, she alleges that she was subjected to a campaign of harassment and false accusations. She was also "disfellowshipped," which means that although she is permitted to attend services, she is forbidden to socialize with other members, who are expected to "shun" her.

Her lawsuit alleges that her telephone lines were illegally recorded and that the church elders gained access to her daughter's juvenile court records, which are sealed from public inspection.

The Baltimore News-American reported in August of 1985 that the Jehovah's Witnesses Committee of five church elders heard her case during 11 hours of meetings — during which they frequently referred to the content of her telephone calls.

The News-American also noted that Mrs. Vauls' lawsuit names as one of the three defendants Nick Lambros, who refused to disqualify himself from sitting on this committee in judgment of Mrs. Vauls, his accuser. (Lambros refused an invitation to appear with Mrs. Vauls on The Les Kinsolving Show in Baltimore.)

As for her complaint of sexual advances made toward her daughter, Mrs. Vauls told The News-American: "It was sloughed off, treated lightly and trivially." So she took her complaint to the Watchtower Society in Brooklyn, which is the international headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses.

This, she contends, resulted in no action except a campaign to find some reason to force her from the church. "In 1982," she recalls, "they hauled me in, under false pretenses of slandering somebody, I had no idea who."

An appeals committee made up of members of other congregations upheld her being disfellowshipped.

When The News-American continued investigating this case, it reported: "Jehovah's Witnesses, which claims 3 million members worldwide, has been plagued by defections since 1975, when the world failed to end as predicted by the church elders."

Former Witnesses, who have formed support groups around the country, claim that as many as one million members have left the group since 1978. Several lawsuits are pending around the country by former members charging the organization with fraud, alienation of affection and defamation of character."

Robert Balzer, a spokesman for the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society in Brooklyn, when asked for comment, replied: Jehovah's Witnesses go strictly by the Bible. People are disfellowshipped only if they do not respond to efforts by the congregation's elders to make them see their errors. They're free to do what they want. We don't respond, as a rule, to critics. Jesus didn't."

When asked how many of the 723,000 US Jehovah's Witnesses have been disfellowshipped, spokesman Balzer said: "Even if I did know, it isn't something I would reveal, because it's an internal religious matter."

Inside the Capitol

By Jay Miller

SANTA FE — One day last week Gov. Garrey Carruthers became a double-threat with the uttering of just one sentence.

You have no doubt heard of the football player who can both run and pass or the baseball player with outstanding hitting and fielding abilities. Our governor demonstrated at least a dual resolve when appearing before the Commission on Higher Education. If he can pull it off, he'll be a true double-threat.

DOUBLE-THREAT: The governor's double-threat statement went something like this: Capital outlay requests for next year will have to be limited to only maintenance projects and any which have not been reviewed by this commission will get an automatic veto if the item passes the legislature and gets to my desk.

PORK-BARRELS: The governor is getting tough on all those capital outlay projects that legislators like to take back to their districts and flaunt any time their actions are challenged by a constituent or a political opponent.

The governor's finance director Willard Lewis has already told the legislature's tax study committee that there is essentially no severance tax bonding capacity for the next several years. Some committee members protested loudly and are quietly planning to disregard the caution to take it easy with the rapidly depleting severance tax funds next legislative session.

The governor has two ways he can stem the tide of severance tax bonding. He can veto any legislation appropriating money for building purposes. In addition to the threat to the higher education people, he told a press conference a few days later that he would veto any capital outlay bill that hadn't been reviewed by an administrative agency prior to the legislative session.

The other tool for curtailing the spending of severance tax funds which the governor possesses is a much more subtle one. The state Board of Finance decides how the severance tax bonds should be sold. The governor chairs that board.

Last week the board decided to front-end load the issue of bonds which it authorized for sale. This means that the board chose to make a higher payment in the first year, thereby avoiding the payment of as much interest. The board also decided to issue the bonds for a shorter period of time than the 10 years for which severance tax bonds have traditionally been issued. This action will save additional interest charges.

END-RUNS: The governor also stated at his weekly press conference that he expected any capital outlay requests to go through the process of being reviewed by the appropriate executive agency before being introduced. Nowhere is this process ignored more than in the higher education arena which is why the governor's statement to the Commission of Higher Education is so significant.

Thirty years ago the legislature created the Board of Educational Finance to screen all university requests that legislators couldn't find the money to completely fill and to prioritize them into some sort of order and to make recommendations for funding levels of both the operational budget and the capital outlay budget.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for helping

EDITOR—I would like to take this opportunity to say thanks to you and to the rest of the people who joined, on the spur of the moment, the Carrizozo Buyers Club to help Carrizozo kids at the Lincoln County Fair.

Without the financial help of everyone I asked to contribute the kids here would not have had as good a backing as they did. Every cent counted and we were able to buy two pigs from our home town kids.

The Carrizozo Alumni Association joined with us in our efforts and I would like to give them a special thanks too.

I was unable to contact many people this year because of the short notice but would like, at this time, to ask everyone interested in joining the Carrizozo Buyers Club for next year to contact me or Gordon Barham. We hope to make next year even bigger and better for the kids at the Fair.

Again thanks to everyone who so generously contributed to our club. Thanks Carrizozo!

BETTIE DEAN, Carrizozo Buyers Club.

Look who's in charge!

EDITOR—I would like to start this letter with a quoted passage from a summary of revelations by a journalist who isn't afraid to tell the truth to the American people.

"In May of this year, a Soviet military official by the name of Marshal Nikolai Ogarkov was promoted to the highest military position in the Soviet Union. He is now the right hand man to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"Who is this Marshal Ogarkov? He just happens to be an extremely brilliant (and dangerous!) military strategist who has been making dramatic proposals for an all-out attack against the United States!

"Ogarkov has proposed that Russia win World War III by launching an unprovoked surprise nuclear strike against the United States—with the potential of wiping out 135 million Americans in just half an hour!

"The Soviets have captured the lead in the 'space race.' In May of this year, they successfully launched the largest military rocket ever put into space—while the last seven American space vehicle launches have mysteriously failed!

"Even the highly authoritative military intelligence publication from England, Jane's Space Flight Directory, said, 'The Soviet Union has taken an almost frightening ten-year lead over the United States in its space program.' (June, 1986)

"Some experts say that if the Soviets successfully launch three more rockets like the one in May, they could effectively demand the surrender of the Free World to their communist empire!"

I think it's time for you congressmen to get off your dead posteriors and vote to deploy SDI.

CORNELIUS U. MORGAN, Baltimore, MD.

Forestry makes its point

EDITOR—The article entitled "Gutsey Woman Places Men Under Citizens Arrest," which appeared in the Lincoln County News on Aug. 20, contained some misrepresentations regarding Forest Service policies and activities. I would like to correct these misrepresentations for you and your readers. Your willingness to set the record straight in the matter of William M. Smith, as printed in your opinion column in the same issue, encourages me to believe you will do the same in this matter.

In the article you indicate that the Forest Service is "plotting roads through her (Carlyn Lietzman's private) land to provide access to Lincoln National Forest for the sole benefit of off-road vehicles." The only public road through Mrs. Lietzman's property is a legal, Lincoln County road designated CD24. We will provide access across her land only on this legal right-of-way.

In addition, the Forest Service cannot confiscate private property to satisfy our needs or the needs of any user group. We can only seek to obtain right-of-ways by legal means. However the public does have a legitimate right to responsible access to their National Forest, and I am responsible for providing it to the best of my ability.

I would also like to point out that the two men allegedly arrested had twice stopped at the ranch headquarters to ask directions. Their confusion was caused in part by the directions given by ranch employees and the no trespassing signs Mrs. Lietzman has placed adjacent to the county road in a place which leads people to believe it is not open to the public.

I hope the above clears up some of the statements made in the article, and will assist your readers in understanding a complex situation. Either Ranger Sams at Ruidoso or myself here in Alamogordo would be happy to provide you with information by telephone when any matter arises which involves the Forest. When we can be of further assistance, please let us know.

JAMES R. ABBOTT, Forest Supervisor.

Questionable decisions by Ruidoso City Council

Who said there's no gambling in Ruidoso?

By J. A. "AL" JUNGLE

I do not like for someone to gamble with my money. It is being done at the present time. It all started back in 1980. Lloyd Davis, who was Mayor of Ruidoso at the time, ordered a study of Ruidoso's water rates. I had given the mayor the results of a study of minimum rates at that time. It appeared that our minimum rates needed adjusting since 70 percent of home owners did not live in Ruidoso except for a few months each year and were paying minimum water charges of $3.60 while using the same water facilities as the rest of us.

After the water study was completed a new schedule of rates went into effect in 1981-82. The net monetary result of the new water rates was no less than astronomical. The new minimum rates were $12.50 and the increase rate in gallonage use was substantial. Over 500 non-producing water meters were replaced along with nearly six miles of deteriorating water lines. It would be conservative to say that the minimum rate change, along with basic rate change, and the replacement of the faulty meters increased the water income by more than $300,000. All of this was necessary to assist a water department which was broke with no funds to make repairs.

At the time the new rates were made effective, the city council, recognizing that the emergency was limited in scope, promised that the increased water rates would be subject to an annual study and reductions made when the emergency was over. An annual study was made in 1983 with the intention that annual followup studies would be made. A new six-member council was sworn in in March 1984 and the promise to revalue water rates was soon forgotten. The higher rates and resulting operation surplus was accepted as routine with no plans to reduce water rates as had been promised.

The water department operating surplus is simply put—a slush fund for the council to handle projects which, without these funds, would require the approval of the voters.

Now, for the second chapter of the story of gambling.

On March 2, 1983 voters of Ruidoso approved an $8 million bond issue to construct the Grindstone Dam Project. Six million dollars of this issue would be retired by a 1 percent sales tax.

The bonds were sold and the 1 percent sales tax put in place. The first bonds matured in 1984. Due to the fact that these bonds were sold at interest rates less than originally projected, when the first year's sales tax was received by the city, over $400,000 remained after the bond payment was met.

This resulted in a bonanza to be used to prepay bonds or hold towards completion of the dam. The overpayment which resulted the first year was also reflected in an overpayment the second year, third year, and so on.

In the meantime Grindstone Dam is empty. Reasons for the delay are interesting but not relative to this account. What is important is when the dam is filled there won't be a filtration plant to handle the water purification. There is also a large holding tank which has not been constructed. The approximate $2 million necessary to complete the Grindstone Project are non-existent. Why? you might ask. Very simple. The $400,000 annual surplus has been placed in the same account as the water surplus. The total funds in this account now should make the council feel very comfortable.

Now, let's go to chapter 3 which discloses the gambling arena.

In 1984 a plan to drill four wells in the Eagle Creek area was proposed in order to have a supplement to our water supply. The proposed site was on Forestry land and the wells were to be drilled without the approval of the State Engineer. It appears that the site was outside of an water basin area controlled by the State Engineer. Completion of the wells, therefore, depended upon speed and secrecy.

Four wells were completed with water production and immediately the State Engineer included the well area under his jurisdiction. These wells cost approximately $450,000. Previous to the drilling phase Mayor George White, with the new six-person council concurring 20 days later, signed a so-called "Finders Fee" contract with the Atkin-Landfair, Inc., firm agreeing to pay the engineer a certain fee based on the acre feet of water found.

As a result this firm was paid over $1,200,000 on this open ended contract. No business man would have agreed to such a contract with questionable limitations. But our mayor and council did! Mayor White signed this contract in spite of a warning in a letter dated April 4, 1984 from City Attorney Lee Huckstep which said, in part, "I cannot recommend accepting a vague understanding of the meaning of the paragraph as now written." Copies of this letter were sent to the six new councilmen, all of whom were new on the job. Objections were made to the city council concerning the contract with no action taken.

After the wells were drilled an agreement was made between the Forestry Service and the administration to perform certain projects for the Forestry Service. There is no record that this agreement was approved by the city council.

The agreement covered the following:

1. Install an underground transmission pipeline to transport water from the wells to a point in Ruidoso.
2. Build a road in the Forest Service area where the wells are located and the pipeline area.
3. Install an underground electrical service for the well operation.

Even though $2 million has already been spent on the wells it is questionable whether the three projects (above) should not be delayed or scrapped.

1. In the past a natural creek bed has been used to bring water to this city. Since the wells are recognized as a backup water supply, why not continue to use the creek bed whenever our city supply makes the use of the wells necessary. Why spend money on a system which is supplementary and not a part of a system used on a daily basis?

2. To anyone who has driven over the area where the proposed road will be built I say "nuff said." The only benefit here will be for the campers.

3. Local electrical engineers say the underground electrical system is not necessary as there are poles in place which could easily handle whatever power is required at the wells. The question here is why the city obligated itself to spend over $600,000 on the Phase 2 Project? On Aug. 25, 1987 the city council approved going out for bids on Phase 2. It took no more than 10 minutes to make the decision. This agenda item received no publicity and there were no one, except the writer, to protest the spending of water revenue and Grindstone funds on the wells project. The council was not impressed. This time was used to discuss a 2-foot property variance than was used to discuss the spending of $600,000 of the taxpayers money. Spending over $2,000,000 on the Eagle Creek wells is a risky business not without the chance of failure. The availability of the water produced by these wells could be placed in jeopardy as the result of water suits by the State of Texas and the Tribe. The Administration is relying on the fact that the wells are in an aquifer not subject to the water suits.

The State Engineer does not agree and thinks the area of the wells will be affected by the outcome of the water suits. If so, this will amount to financial disaster for the city.

In the meantime the Grindstone surplus and the excess water rates are bankrolling the city council in the Eagle Creek experiment.

What is the rush? Why not wait a while and delay the spending of the $600,000 until more is known about the water suits. We have lost the suit with Texas and will probably lose the suit brought by the Tribe. Since the agreement with the Forestry Service was not signed by the council, is it a valid agreement? There has been very little news exposure here. We are still groping for answers.

Yes, this is a big gamble and as long as the taxpayers regard attending council meetings as an exposure to the plague, with news reporting so limited on matters requiring investigation, we will continue to face problems in the administration of our city affairs.

It was a great idea but so far the legislature has not been able to make it work. Those university lobbyists are just too darn convincing. Carruthers has now done two things to strengthen that system. He has appointed an entire new board, which has also had a name change to Commission on Higher Education. He hopes this board, which contains two former legislators, will have the influence to compel legislative approval of their recommendations. If they don't, the governor still has the veto threat.

VIPs PLAN strategy for the 1987-88 Capitan school year. From the left: counselor Dick E. Hilmou, high school principal Larry DeWess, and superintendent Scott Childress.

New staff at Corona

Six new staff members have been employed at Corona for the 1987-88 school year, including a new superintendent.

Lucille King comes most recently from Capitan where she was director of special education. She received a BS in elementary education, then returned to NMSU to earn a master of science in special education. In 1982, she received the degree of education specialist in administration.

She is a native of New Jersey, but joined the Navy in 1953, and while stationed in Hawaii met and married a sailor from Corona, NM, Jack King. They have four children and five grandchildren, "and one on the way." When asked about her plans and goals for the district, King said, "I want to make this the best little school in New Mexico—with the help of the staff and the community."

Devra Post is the new math and physical education teacher. Her duties include volleyball coach and cheerleader sponsor.

A native of Melrose, she attended EINMU where she chose health and p.e. as her teaching fields. Post most recently taught three years at Hagerman. She has three teenage boys, Clay, Jesse and Bill.

The new English teacher is Sydney Lahti Hill originally from Riverside in Southern California, "when it was a farm community. I wanted to get back to a small town, so I'm delighted to be here," said Hill. After a 20-year absence, Hill returned to school and earned a BA in English from Highlands University in Las Vegas, NM. She is recently married to Jay Hill.

Doris Taylor, the new special education teacher, is a relative newcomer to New Mexico. She and her husband Bud have lived on the Barham Ranch for the last three years and she taught in Ruidoso. Prior to that, Taylor lived in North Carolina and Florida. She earned a BA from the University of North Carolina and is currently working on a masters degree at NMSU. She has three children (a son in West Germany, a daughter in Berkeley, CA and a daughter in Amsterdam, Holland, and two grandchildren.

Aiding in the special education room will be Myr Gömer. She holds a BS degree in business administration from the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley and runs her own business, Myr's Best Cookies. She has one son, Jeff, who is a third grader at Corona Elementary School.

Stephanie Sours will be teaching grades three and four. A graduate of NMSU, she lived in Las Cruces several years before coming to Corona. She has an infant daughter, Kelsey Cheyenne.

MARCELLA SANDOVAL (with hands reaching over the net) gets ready to block Cloudcroft player in Saturday volleyball action. The Grizzly varsity dropped the match to the lady Bears 0-3 in opening game of the season. Other Grizzly player in picture: (far left) D'rese Agullar. Next action for the Grizzly girls will be Sept. 10 and Sept. 12 at home as they host Vaughn A&B and Hondo A only.

Grizzlies drop opener to Melrose 14-6

CARRIZOZO GRIZZLY defense (dark uniforms) feasts on ball carrier from Socorro in recent scrimmage. Grizzlies will try to get into the win column Friday when they travel to Hatch, game set for 7:30 p.m. kick-off. Carrizozo opened their season last Friday and lost a tough 14-6 decision to Melrose at Laabs Field. Richard Guevara scored the only TD for Carrizozo on a 85-yard kick-off return.

GRIZZLY PLAYER Jeanna Sims (center of picture) reaches high for block attempt against Cloudcroft. Varsity dropped first match of season 0-3; junior varsity won its match 2-0 against the Cloudcroft JV.

Tigers lose to Eunice; face Tatum on Sept. 4

The Tatum Coyotes, 1986 Class A state football champions, visit Capitan Sept. 4 for a clash with the Tigers scheduled for 4:30 p.m. on old Tiger Field.

Tatum runs a 5-3-3 defense and returns the entire line from last year's championship team. They have lost some talent in the backfield. The Coyotes have team quickness and pursue well on defense. Tiger coach Blane Miller said "in order to beat Tatum we must be fundamentally sound and carry out our assignments." Miller went on to say that his team's intensity needs to improve, along with play execution.

The Tigers were skittish last Friday, losing to a greatly improved Eunice Cardinal team 12-6.

Eunice scored in the second quarter on a 35 yard draw play and failed to convert the extra point. The Tigers drove the length of the field near the end of the first half and scored on a 10 yard quarterback keeper. Tino Gallegos missed the extra point.

The Cardinals scored their second TD midway in the 3rd quarter on a 32 yard off tackle play. Capitan mounted a drive which stalled out on the Cardinal 20 yard line when the Tigers turned the ball over on a fumble.

Capitan missed two prime opportunities to score in the 4th quarter when a pass was dropped and a Tiger back couldn't hold onto the ball.

Jerrold Martin and Larry McEuen are looking at injuries and will probably not play this week.

Coach Miller named Anthony Sanchez offensive player of the week and Kerry Clements defensive player of the week.

Brochures explaining insurance available to Carrizozo school students were sent to parents last week. Parents not receiving a brochure or needing more information should contact the high school office.

Envelopes with payment are to be turned into the high school by Tuesday Sept. 8. Carrizozo school principal Mel Holland said. A preferred plan and an economy plan are being offered, each with 24-hour or at school coverage. Dental coverage is an additional option being offered.

Safety precautions with microwave ovens

Microwave ovens have been called the most important time-saving device invented for use in the kitchen. While they are becoming more and more popular, consumers need to be aware of dangers involved with the use of microwave ovens.

The most frequent danger is electrical shock. Consumers should make sure the microwave oven is installed properly with a circuit that is rated for at least 15 amps of current and an outlet that is polarized and grounded. They should also check the electrical cord and plug regularly for signs of wear or damage.

Fires, burns and explosions are also dangers. Fires can result if food that is on paper or plastic is overheated. Exhaust outlets must be free of blockage (exhaust outlets are located in different places on various models.)

Burns can result from heated vapor that may be released suddenly when the covering on a dish is removed too quickly. Also, the first bite of food can be very hot due to the fact that microwaves do not heat food evenly. Food should be stirred thoroughly before eating to avoid 'hot spots'.

The danger of 'hot spots' make it unwise to use microwave ovens to heat infant formulas and baby food.

Explosions may occur if dishes put in the microwave are not safe for microwave use. Glass containers not designed for microwave use may explode on removal from the microwave oven.

Consumers should read thoroughly the instructions that come with their microwave for safe use. Most instructions include tasty, tempting, time-saving recipes that should be followed. Adjustments from regular recipes must be made carefully as many recipes require coverings to retain moisture and to ensure proper cooking temperatures.
