Matt Surratt, 17, will go to trial Aug. 22 for the murder of his neighbor and classmate Katina Chavez.

District Judge Richard Parsons will preside over the trial set for Aug. 22-26 in Fort Sumner. A pre-trial conference will be held Aug. 1 in Carrizozo.

Presiding Judge Stanley F. Frost, 10th Judicial District in Fort Sumner, notified Parsons that courtroom facilities would be available at that time.

Chavez' body was found near her home in the Rio Ruidoso Feb. 21 after an all-night search. Surratt was taken into custody March 4 and remained in custody in the juvenile section of the Otero County Jail in Alamogordo until after a hearing was held to determine if he should be tried as an adult or a juvenile.

District Judge Robert Doughty ruled on June 3 that Surratt should be tried in juvenile court and released the suspect on condition that he stay with family out of the state until the trial.

Carrizozo Town Trustees

Carrizozo awards bids for water project

By Ruth Hammond

Carrizozo's long awaited water improvement project took another giant step forward this week when the town council awarded the bid for pipes and new lines to the low bidder. The bids were opened July 7 at the engineering office, Wilson and Company, in Albuquerque. Carrizozo trustees awarded the bid during the July 12 town council meeting.

The low bid of $25,097.45 for fittings and materials was submitted by Baker Utilities of Albuquerque. Two other bids were received; Waterworks Inc. sent in a bid of $25,177.32 and Pipeline Inc. submitted a bid of $25,242.06. The engineer's estimate was $31,588.

In other business, trustees granted a 28-day extension to Paul Collins to comply with the ordinance requiring sewer connections. The extension is until Aug. 9.

Trustees will consider adopting an ordinance creating a new zone which will allow more open space in property. The new ordinance will be considered at the Aug. 9 meeting to create the new zone A-2.

Trustees agreed to have engineers Wilson and Company proceed with construction documents for a new roof for the Rec Center.

The state highway coop grant was approved. The project will include removing existing subgrade and asphalt surface and replacing with base course and two-inch plant mix.

The streets to be improved will be the intersection of E Avenue and 8th Street and 5th Street from E Avenue to B Avenue including the intersection of 5th Street and E Avenue.

The highway coop grant of $74,000 is a 60-40 matching grant with the state to provide $44,000 and the town to provide $30,000. The town will advertise for an engineer for the specifications for the street work.

The town's final budget for fiscal year 1988-89 was approved. The budget includes grand totals of: unaudited beginning cash balance of $669,608, estimated revenues of $719,947, budgeted expenditures of $1,013,489 and an estimated ending cash balance on June 30, 1989 of $376,066.

The town received a letter stating that the ore crushing mill with all equipment and 38.98 acres is being sold for $100,000 with Plains

Realty receiving a 10% commission on the sale.

After an executive session of 28 minutes trustees approved hiring Clarence Beltran as police trainee.

Mayor Bob Hemphill announced that Congressman Joe Skeen will host a town meeting at city hall on July 18 from 7 to 8 p.m.

Trustees approved the sale of .006 acre to the state for $50 at the intersection of Highway 380 and F Street. The property will be used for right-of-way in the highway improvement project on 380.

Lightning strike injures 4 people

Four people were struck by lightning in Picacho Tuesday afternoon and transported to St. Mary's Hospital in Roswell.

Responding to the scene were Lincoln County Medical units from Hondo, Capitan and the Ruidoso ALS (advanced life support.)

The most seriously injured was Dr. Walter Hopkins, medical director for the Lincoln County EMS. Hopkins was placed in intensive care in critical condition but his condition had improved by Wednesday afternoon. According to his wife Gail, Dr. Hopkins was to be moved into a regular room by this morning.

Also injured and hospitalized were Nina Kimbrell, surveyor Jim Wright and another member of the survey team. All three were scheduled to be released by today.

The group were surveying near the Kimbrell home when the freak accident occurred. It was a pretty day with only one small cloud in the sky. Hopkins was cutting a small sapling when it started to sprinkle rain and the lightning struck the tree, knocking Hopkins to the ground unconscious.

In addition to being medical director for Lincoln County EMS, Hopkins is an emergency room physician at St. Mary's Hospital in Roswell and at Guadalupe Medical Center in Carlsbad.

A 48-year tradition

Nogal Mesa Camp Meeting July 20-24

By DOROTHY GUCK

The Nogal Mesa Ranchmen's Camp Meeting which held its first encampment in 1940, will be held this year July 20-24 on Nogal Mesa in Lincoln County.

The general four-day program has not had major changes at Camp Meeting in the years of its existence annually since 1940. The very basic simplicity of the services, meals and camp life allows full emphasis on worship to rebuild spiritual strength, and a giving and sharing of friendly brotherhood. The troubles and ills of the world, and even individual problems, seem less stressful when holding the hand of a friend in the natural beauty of this mountain religious oasis.

Three generations of ranchers are still working to keep the Camp Meeting a tradition of spiritual renewal for old-timers and new-comers alike. All are welcome to participate.

The interdenominational camp meeting on 23 acres of land in the mountain coolness of Lincoln County offers chuck wagon meals with plenty of barbecued beef and beans, volunteer singing and inspirational preaching.

Opening services will be held in the tabernacle Wednesday evening, July 20, after the first chuck wagon meal cooked by Eddie Jurado and his helpers. They will continue through Sunday evening, July 24. This year, preachers will be Rev. Bob Hubson, Sun City, AZ, and Rev. Edmund Robb, Marshall, TX. Paul Biggs will again be in charge of music, accompanied by Jane Shafer. John Walker will be in charge of youth activities, Glenda Armstrong of children, Matt Ferguson and Lyndon Arm-

Capitan mayor, fire department are at each other's throats

By Bartley McDonough

An acrimonious atmosphere prevailed Monday evening during the fire department segment of the agenda of the Capitan Village Council.

The situation began at the May 9 meeting of the council. Mayor Benny Coker's intention was to get Ordinance 88-4, updating Ordinance 64-4, approved by the council. Members of the fire department said they had not seen a copy of the new ordinance. They were also upset with the use of the word "appointed." The proposed ordinance was then tabled.

At the June 13 meeting of the council, paragraph 3-3-3 again came under scrutiny. This reads as follows: "The chief of the fire department shall be elected by the members of the fire department and APPOINTED by the mayor with the approval of a majority of all members of the governing body."

The fire department wanted this modified to read: "The chief of the fire department shall be elected by the members of the fire department, submitted to the mayor and the governing body for a majority approval." Mayor

Coker broke a 2-2 tie by voting in favor of the new ordinance.

At the July 11 meeting Chief Virgil Hall Sr. presented a copy of the fire department's by-laws to the council. Coker announced that he was appointing Terry Cox as acting fire chief while the by-laws were being reviewed. Cox then said he was resigning from the fire department.

Trustee David Rouleau questioned the appointment of Cox as it had not received approval by the council. Trustee Renfro suggested the by-laws of the fire department be reviewed and the council and fire department get back together or "we won't have a fire department."

Coker mentioned something about secret meetings of the fire department. Mrs. Jimmy Wright said these meetings are open to anyone. Wright had invited the mayor and council to the May 10 meeting of the fire department.

Chief Hall moments later asked "why have you (mayor) over-ridden the state fire marshal?" The by-laws were tabled to be reviewed.

It appeared that Virgil Hall is still the fire chief and Terry Cox is still a member of the Capitan Volunteer Fire Department.

The News later learned that fire department members Hollis Fuchs, Jimmy Don Wright, Pat Huey and Virgil Hall Sr. had met with state fire marshal Standerfer on July 8 in Santa Fe. These firemen said Standerfer had approved the proposed by-laws of the Capitan Fire Department. Standerfer said he would be in Capitan soon.

In other action the Wayne Hobbs solid waste contract was renewed for another year. Dorothy Smith and Frances Shaw were reappointed to the cemetery board. The rules and regulations for the cemetery board were approved by the council.

Brian Wilmeth was approved animal control officer for the village. Attorney Runnels will go over the contract. The Smokey Bear Museum contract with Willie Hobbs was approved for another year.

The council received the resignation of trustee Dave Strickland. Coker asked that the council appoint Darralene

The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the fair building in Capitan.

ELFEGO MONTOYA, left, was grand marshal for the July 4 Smokey Bear Stampede Parade in Capitan. Lois Aldrich was the grand lady.

Lincoln braces for 'Old Lincoln Days'

Tiny Lincoln, New Mexico population 70, near the resort town of Ruidoso, was once the county seat of the largest county in the United States.

The town now swells by several thousand persons during an annual celebration of Territorial Frontier Days.

Known as "Old Lincoln Days," this year's festivities will begin Aug. 5, and run through Sunday, Aug. 7.

Living history camps of soldiers and mountain men, spinning and blacksmithing demonstrations, and vendors selling items from frybread to souvenirs will surround the pageant grounds behind the Old Courthouse and line the single town street (US 380).

Archaeologists from the McSween House archaeological dig will be on hand to explain the demise of the object of their study and what they have learned from its remains. And, of course, the museums in Lincoln will beckon with their artifacts and explanations of the town's bygone days.

The highlight of Old Lincoln Days, however, is the 42nd annual presentation of a folk pageant, "The Last Escape of Billy the Kid." Utilizing a volunteer local cast, the production is given outdoors at 8:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and again at 3 p.m. Sunday afternoon, following a parade through town. The entire pageant is done in pantomime, with the narration coming from a sound booth. During the pageant horses trot by, guns flash, and a romantic version of the Lincoln County War (1878) comes alive for the audience.

The Lincoln pageant began in 1940 as part of New Mexico's Quatro Centennial Celebration. It was presented in the then unpaved roadway in front of the courthouse; today the paved roadway is US

Highway 380. Local artist Peter Hurd played the first Billy the Kid. Repeated again in 1941, World War II then interrupted the summer presentations until they were resumed again in 1949. Since then the amateur production has become a Lincoln tradition.

Diane Shreengost will be director this year. The first practice is scheduled for Thursday, July 14. Everyone is encouraged to participate.

strong of campfires and Joe Wigley of outreach.

Officers for the meetings are Rev. Rick Steele, manager; LaMoyné and Opal Peters, Wesley Lindsay, Scott and Bob Shafer, Walt Wilson, and Johnson Stearns; with a complete roster of New Mexico residents and their committees.

A prayer will be voiced for the speedy recovery from surgery of Walt Wilson who was Camp Meeting chairman for 17 years. A memorial service for those who passed away during the year will be held Saturday afternoon under the direction of Chloe Peters and Glenda Armstrong. There are prayer meetings for men, women, youths and children. A schedule of fun activities, campfires, hay rides, horseshoe pitching, etc. is planned.

For those attending for the first time, there is camping space available at no charge for those participating in the services. A schedule of activities and some simple rules is posted at the registration booth. All youngsters must be sponsored or accompanied by adults. Bring your own campers, tents, or bedrolls. Water, electricity and restrooms are provided. The altitude is 7,000 feet, so rain wear and jackets are essential for comfort.

If camping is not possible, everyone is welcome to attend daily services. Meals are served on tin plates and cups from large cauldrons by the ranchmen, at 6 to 8 a.m., 12:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Tabernacle services are at 11 a.m., 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. Group prayer meetings are held at 5 p.m. The registration booth will give any other information or directions. An access road is available for car transport of the handicapped, right to the tabernacle. The camp is financed by unpressured freewill donations. A business meeting will be held Sunday afternoon, the 24th.

All local churches and ministers are especially asked to volunteer help. This year, a Camp Meeting cancellation stamp will appear on all letters mailed at Nogal Post Office during encampment.

There are 10 camp meetings held in the Southwest—in Colorado, Arizona, Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma. Each has its own officers and independent meeting programs.

The Nogal Mesa grounds can be reached by the Lincoln National Forest road at the sign turning off US 380 about 5 miles west of Capitan and 15 miles east of Carrizozo; or by the road turning off State Road 37 past Nogal Lake. Further information may be obtained at United New Mexico Bank, Carrizozo, NM 88301, or the Nogal Post Office, 88341. Reservations are not necessary.

The last volunteer workday before opening is Saturday, July 16.

Helicopter used in prison escape no stranger here

The Gazelle helicopter used in the daring prison escape in Santa Fe Monday is the helicopter used in Lincoln County last September to assist in locating a marijuana farm on the Malpais.

Pilot Charles Bella, owner of Bear Helicopters Inc. in El Paso, flew the helicopter to Lincoln County last year for surveillance of the Malpais, five air miles south of Carrizozo. The six-day helicopter leasing cost $18,075.

During the surveillance marijuana plants with a street value of $112,000 were located. There was evidence that other areas had already been planted and harvested in the area.

Bella is a personal friend of Lincoln County Under-sheriff Rex Skellett, who accompanied him on the surveillance flight in the Carrizozo area.

Bella has now been charged with flying three prison inmates to freedom but says he only participated in the dramatic escape because his passengers kept him at gunpoint throughout the flight.

The dramatic prison escape included setting the chopper down in the statepen, picking up the three inmates and flying off. All three escapees have been arrested.

Bella is also known for flying the same Gazelle helicopter in the filming of "Rambo III" late last year in Yuma, AZ.

Capitan (Cont'd from P. 1)

Stewart to fill this vacancy. A motion to this effect was made by Trustee Renfro. This motion did not receive a second. Trustee Rouleau said he felt this appointment should be made with the advice of the council. This was tabled.

Coker announced that village auditor Roy Woodard had been approved by the state.

The council received $3,111 from the state emergency medical services for the Capitan Volunteer Fire Department.

Cemetery board member Lois Aldrich said 1.9 acres of land adjacent to the cemetery had been put up for sale by a Mrs. Nolan of Ruidoso Downs. The cemetery board would like to acquire this land. No action was taken at this time.

Coker said that Dave Strickland had been employed by the village as a temporary general working supervisor. Strickland will apply for grants, oversee daily work activities, help with the new filtering plant and the water drainage situation. The former trustee said the village could have a first class park if "we" went after the money.

Dr. Rouleau questioned "why Strickland?" Isn't the SENMEDD doing the job? Coker explained that the SENMEDD will do the job but will not go out for grants on its own.

Strickland has the expertise concerning water and it was felt that he could save the village money in the six figures.

In response to a question, the mayor said the water superintendent is doing a good job. "We have other things under consideration."

Street Superintendent Guy Henley said he could work with Strickland and felt he could help Capitan.

The council eventually approved the employment of Strickland on a 2-1 vote for a period of three months. His employment will be reviewed at the end of this period.

Mark Martin appeared before the council petitioning for village water. He is currently hauling his water from Capitan. Martin lives two miles north of Capitan and 3 of a mile from Jim McEuen. McEuen gets village water. Martin said only the actual hook-up would cost the village money.

It was later decided that Martin will submit his proposal in writing and the situation will take its natural course.

CARRIZOZO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE President Betty Howell (right) discusses the state horseshoe pitching contest with Dorothy Payne. The state contest will be held in Carrizozo at the Country Club Aug. 26, 27 and 28.

Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce Horseshoe pitching contest gets financial support

The Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce met July 12 and members agreed to donate $100 to help with expenses of the state championship horseshoe pitching contest that will be held in Carrizozo at the Country Club Aug. 26, 27 and 28.

The state contest will be hosted by the Zozo Buzzard Ringers. Vickie Vermillion of Carrizozo is the defending ladies state champion, winning that title last year. Eileen Serma of Carrizozo was state ladies champion in 1986 and 1988.

Dorothy Payne, a member of the local group, told chamber members that entry fees will cover the cost of the trophies that will be presented to winners but that an additional $2,000 will be needed for prize money and other expenses.

Payne pitches horseshoes at the local, state and national level and won a gold medal for her winning performance in the Senior Olympics in St. Louis last year.

The chamber also donated

$50 to help with transportation of the Carrizozo junior track team members who will participate in the Hershey's track meet that will be held in Albuquerque Saturday.

Another $100 will be spent for a full page ad in the Pony Express booklet that will be sold during the Pony Express race Aug. 6.

Willie Lee Martin, co-chairman of the race committee, told of the fundraising events scheduled: a team roping contest at noon July 16, an auction and dance at the Country Club July 23, the sale of silver medallions, and a crocheted blanket that will be auctioned during race weekend.

Plans were made to invite Alamogordo Chamber of Commerce members to the September meeting.

Lincoln Heritage Trust given a valuable gift

Gloria Peppin Valet, granddaughter of George W. Peppin of Victorville, CA donated her interest in the Peppin estate to the Lincoln Heritage Trust at a luncheon at the Wortley Hotel Saturday.

Robert O. Anderson, president of the trust, accepted the gift in the brief ceremony.

With her gift to the trust, Valet said she is assured the building will be restored and cared for by experts.

Others present at the ceremony were Ralph Dow, grandson, Santa Fe; Joanne Moran, granddaughter of Gloria and great-granddaughter of Peppin; Libby Barker Willis, director of National Trust for Historic Preservation, Ft. Worth, TX; Rogers Aston, trust board member; John Meigs; executive director; Gary Miller, trust director; and Bob Hart, trust historian; and several interested local residents.

Following the luncheon the group toured the property, which is located just west of Lincoln.

George Peppin was appointed sheriff of Lincoln County by Gov. Samuel Axtell in May 1878.

Peppin purchased the original three-room adobe house from James Dolan. Through the years it was added to, the last being done by Belle Wilson (granddaughter) and her husband. They converted the east storage room to a kitchen and windows were also added.

The Wilsons lived in the house until the mid-1950s. It was last occupied by Hugh Grafton, who died there in the mid-1960s.

Peppin was a carpenter/mason, building homes up and down the Bonito and Hondo valleys. Among these is the Dr. Woods home in Lincoln. Now open to the public, and the Alexander McSween house, which he not only built, but also was one of the group which destroyed it by fire.

Stabilization of the building is being done by Victor Ramirez of Ft. Stanton. The east wall, which caved in the past year, has been replaced. The walls will be stabilized and stuccoed, and a new roof added.

Libby Willis said the non-profit National Trust for Historic Preservation will provide technical and financial support for the project. It is estimated to cost $200,000 over an extended period of time.

OPINION

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis has successfully pushed through the legislature his Health Security Act of 1988. The law requires employers to provide health insurance for employees. It does not affect employers with less than six employees, and for good reason. Cost of providing such insurance runs more than $1,680 per year per employee. Consider the plight of a small business with five employees that needs to add a sixth one in order to expand the business. Adding that one employee would bring the owner under the Health Security Act and force him to provide the insurance for all six at a cost of approximately $10,080 a year for insurance alone. As a small business man, would you put up with this atrocity—or simply move to New Hampshire? One may be sure that if Dukakis feels so strongly about his Health Security Act in Massachusetts, he will as President of the United States push for the same socialistic program on a nationwide basis.

Under terms of the Health Security Act employers who fail to provide required health insurance will be fined $1,680 per employee by the state. In addition to this disastrous legislation, employers will be forced to pay additional sums into a pool to cover health insurance costs for the unemployed or otherwise uninsured. The Massachusetts Foundation for Economic Research estimates the cost of such insurance to business owners to range from $1.7 to $2 billion a year by 1993. This means that every resident of Massachusetts receives health insurance, with every penny coming from the pockets of business.

Government everywhere has hit upon the health issue to tighten its grasp on every aspect of an individual's private life. In California the governor had to veto a recent mandatory helmet law for motorcyclists passed by the legislature after a 20-year struggle. Never mind that a biker has a right to "pursuit of happiness" in his own manner, even if he sustains multiple head injury that lands him in Bikers Heaven. Nobody gets hurt except the biker if he disregards the rules of safety, but supporters of the helmet legislation disagree. They say somebody else does get hurt. Follow their logic: An injured motorcyclist who does not have enough health insurance will find the state obligated to pay the difference in medical costs. Therefore, motorcyclists should be compelled to wear helmets to reduce the potential cost to the state! Sure. And if the dog hadn't stopped to water the fireplug he would have caught the rabbit.

Many years ago in this column I predicted that the government's program to provide lunches for elementary school students was a foot in the door for eventual take-over of all parental responsibilities for care and raising of their children. At that time I suggested that if nutrition for children is the responsibility of government rather than of parents, then it would be a matter of time before the same government would "find" that parents were also incapable of adequately clothing, housing, entertaining and providing medical care to children, and would move in to fill the void. The present US Congress has moved closer to that goal by enacting legislation that provides nationwide daycare centers for children. Congress would allocate funds for the centers and set up guidelines for their management. Cost to US taxpayers is estimated at between 8 and 9 billion dollars a year.

Break-up of the family, which the federal government has encouraged and nurtured since the 1930s in many overt and subtle ways, leaves parents little alternative but to put their small children in these daycare centers. By doing so both parents are free to hold the outside jobs necessitated by government-induced inflation, high taxes and rising costs of living. With the family unit in disarray and a welfare program in high gear, it is logical that otherwise prudent parents would turn to government to absolve them of full responsibility for the care and raising of their children. Congress is delighted to accept the responsibility, for it feeds its passion to control just about every aspect of human life in these United States.

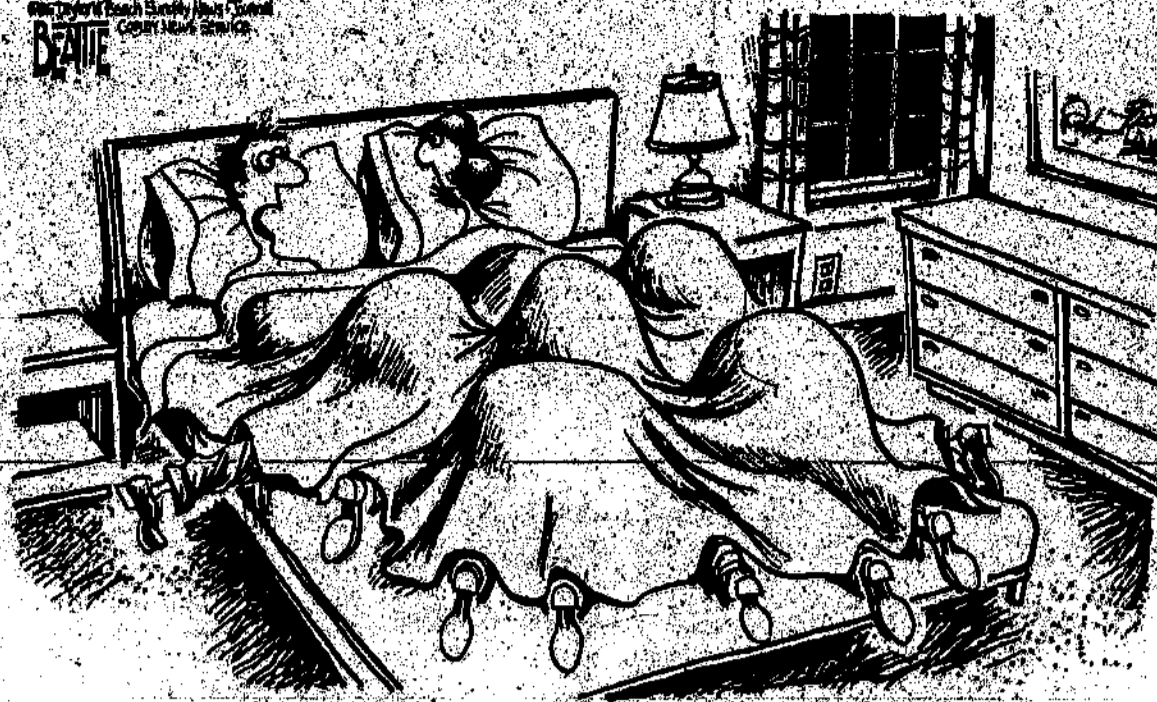

Mandatory seat belts are a product of the same logic, that if people are killed or injured it is the state that suffers. We are almost at the point where smoking will be prohibited, where a person's right to choose his own lifestyle yields to the right of the state to protect itself. If this is the government's stance, and it certainly appears that it is, how long will it be before it will be unlawful to drink alcohol? Since fatty foods are unhealthy, mustn't the state take action to outlaw them because the state is the ultimate victim? If you think I may be unduly alarmed by all this, consider that the US Supreme Court recently ruled that our private garbage cans are subject to surveillance, confiscation or inspection. Is the kitchen and bedroom next?

Thus it is established that government has the power and the will to intrude itself into every phase of a person's life. That means almost total control of individuals by a government founded to guarantee individual rights. The process is a 100 percent reversal of rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights, thanks to a power-mad congress on one hand and a policy-making court system on the other. (Please note that congress is careful to exempt its members from such laws. They'll be eating fatty food while the individual American is doing slammer time for the same offense.)

Here we are fighting a war against drugs that cannot be won when we should be fighting a war against congressmen who are doing more to destroy America than the drug lords. There is no way to stop the use of drugs except, possibly, by executing all users and pushers on the spot. There is a way to stop congress. If a congressman is in office, vote the bastard out. If he is being elected to congress, make sure he stays no more than two terms.

People who enjoy taking risks and running chances are those who built this country. They civilized the country. They defended the country and still do. There is, thank God, no such thing as a riskless

SANTA FE—Should voters be trusted to set their own tax rates?

It is an argument heard every time lawmakers debate whether to grant additional local taxing authority.

Invariably, one of them will say something like "If we give people the right to tax themselves, some of them will be dumb enough to do it."

This has been a major argument against a constitutional amendment to permit county bond elections for books and other library resources.

A favorite comment goes something like this: The history of local governments in the United States has shown that they may spend immoderately when there are no debt limitations.

It is an evidence of the arrogant attitudes of some lawmakers. What can be a better expression of our citizens' feelings than a vote cast by secret ballot? That right is exercised without the slightest bit of intimidation.

What worries these lawmakers the most is that if they let local folks raise taxes to meet their needs, they are more likely to balk when the state comes along and asks for a tax hike of its own.

State lawmakers are a cagey bunch. They allow local governments less taxing authority than nearly any other state. This allows New Mexico legislators to play the role of sugar daddies who take home the goodies from Santa Fe.

And what is the primary tax they allow local governments to levy? It's the property tax—a revenue source which House Taxation and Revenue Committee Chairman Dick Minzner of Albuquerque calls the most unpopular of all taxes.

A few years ago our lawmakers in Santa Fe decided to "get the state out of the property tax business."

That may sound generous but the real intent was to have someone else do the hard work.

Cities, counties, school districts and the various other local taxing authorities were not exactly overjoyed. Cities and counties had been making some inroads into the more popular sales tax as a revenue source and weren't happy to see the damper put on that.

Minzner has threatened to seek a Garrey Carruthers veto if ever a local taxing authority gets its hands on anything other than the property tax.

He proved true to his word when McKinley County won the right to ask its voters for sales tax revenue to build itself a court house. Minzner was not able to stop it in the legislature but he managed to convince a governor, not of his own party, to veto the measure.

The proposed constitutional amendment allowing counties to sell bonds for library books is addressed more appropriately from another angle.

Counties were originally allowed to go into debt for buildings, roads and bridges. Six years ago we approved an amendment adding water systems, sewer systems, airports and sanitary landfills.

Now we are adding library books.

The important question is whether this is an appropriate method of buying library books.

Certainly a literate society is essential to our survival. City and county officials should be willing to pony up the bucks for a reasonable amount of library resources.

But in the last six years, a lagging state economy has caused many cutbacks. Most public libraries in New Mexico bought fewer books last year than they did in 1982.

This proposed solution requests a new method of financing book purchases. Instead of doing it out of recurring resources, we borrow the money to buy the books.

It sounds ridiculous at first. Books don't last as long as buildings or roads and not even as long as county dumps. People would still be paying for them long after they're worn out.

But bonds can be sold for varying lengths of time—just like the options we have in financing a house or car.

If counties want to keep going back to the voters every couple of years to see if they want to buy more books, the bonds can be very short-term.

The City of Albuquerque has been buying books that way for 15 years. This amendment would allow counties to get into that act.

So, if books aren't a priority for county commissioners, they can always let voters up their own taxes.

What do you suppose would happen if we got to vote on some of the other items in the county budget?

Ruidoso ex-employers start recall of council, mayor

By J.A. "Al" JUNGE

It has been four years since the last Ruidoso Council recall and it now faces another.

But this time it is different.

In 1984 those behind the petition thought that all council members and the mayor would lose their jobs—but they were wrong.

The petitioners used a state law which allowed the size of a council to be increased or decreased with a minimum of four members and a maximum of 10. However, only the council members were involved, the mayor was not.

It was never determined if the recall petition was aimed at the mayor, the council, or both.

The 1984 recall petition required only 84 signatures, which were easily obtained. For reasons which have always escaped me, there are those who will sign a petition for whatever cause, and, in some cases, without reading the petition they are asked to sign.

After signatures are verified an election is held to determine if the voters want a change in the makeup of the council. If voters say "yes" then an election is held to choose the new council.

The voters in 1984 opted to increase the council to six members and the four councilmen, whose record while in office was exemplary, were fired and replaced by five inexperienced individuals and one who had experience but who died shortly after the election.

During the next four years a total of 11 persons occupied the six positions on the council.

The performance of the councils since the 1984 recall is a matter of public record. There is a great difference in the rationale for the need of the 1984 petition and the one now in process.

In 1984 two local taxpayers sought the petition because the city council had refused to annex property for one of the petitioners and had taken the other to task for failure to pay for city services and to abide by a contract with the city.

Now we have two ex-employees of the city who recently lost their jobs and have decided to recall the council and the mayor. Their action can only be viewed as vindictive and self-serving with results that will help no one and, in particular, the petitioners.

The fact that the petitioners have based their cause on a state law which governs changing a city council to a five-member commissioner form supports the contention that the main target in this case is Mayor Lloyd L. Davis Jr.

If this is not so, petitioners could have used the same statute as was used in the recall of 1984 merely changing the size of the present council back to four members or by an increase to 10 members. In this situation the mayor's position would not have been affected.

If voters decide to opt to a five-member commissioner form of council the positions of the present six council members and that of the mayor will be abolished. A new

Republicans attend state convention

Republican County Chairman Rhonda Johnston and 18 delegates have returned from the New Mexico Republican Convention held last weekend in Albuquerque.

Purpose of the convention was three-fold: elect 17 delegates and alternates to represent the state at the National Convention next month, choose a man and woman to the Republican National Committee, and to write to party platform.

Among those elected to the national convention to be held in New Orleans in August is State Representative Ben Hall of Lincoln County.

Phelps Anderson of Roswell was elected national committeeman, Shirley Leslie of Albuquerque was elected national committeewoman. She defeated former Lincoln County Chairman Penta Pool. Johnston gave a seconding speech on behalf of Pool's nomination.

Keynote speaker was former presidential candidate US Senator Robert Dole. Also addressing the 794-member convention were US Senator Pete Domenici, Governor Garrey Carruthers, and US Representatives Joe Skeen and Manuel Lujan.

Issues addressed in the GOP platform include revenues and expenditures, education, crime and public safety, jobs and economic development, human concerns, judicial system and the environment and natural resources.

Lincoln County delegates included Rhonda and Hugh Johnston, Noema and Jack Page, Cal Cowden, Peggy Holden, Pat Humé, Inez and Robert Tanner, Audéan Franklin, Bob Bohks, Bill Gallaher, and Lester and Yvonne Lanelli. The Johnston's daughter Sarah served as convention page to Gov. Carruthers and others on the dais.

society—but tell that to congress. If our early settlers played by today's rules there would never have been a Mayflower or a Plymouth Rock, much less a United States of America.

Speaking of taking chances, here is an old American ditty that should cheer you up:

You have two chances— One of getting the germ And one of not. And if you get the germ You have two chances— One of getting the disease And one of not. And if you get the disease You have two chances— One of dying And one of not. And, if you die— Well, you still have two chances!

mayor would be selected by the five commission members from their group, leaving four commissioners and a mayor in office. This system also would enable any commissioner to be recalled individually without the entire group being affected. We could have non-stop recalls going on continuously. There are several cities in New Mexico operating under the five-member commissioner form of council. There is a divided opinion as to whether this is the better system of city government.

Why are recall petitions necessary to good government? Why are so many so disenchanting with those they elect to govern?

The fault lies with the voters themselves.

To complain and criticize is easy.

To take an interest in city affairs requires some effort.

To attend council meetings and committee meetings takes

To stand up and fight in a race for a public office, taking the slings and arrows along the way, to give your time and efforts whether you can afford to do so or not, that is the supreme effort—and too few are willing to go all the way.

Recalls are not the answer.

A Window on Lincoln County — by P.E. Chavez

Had a horticulturist been consulted when White Oaks was named, the former gold mining town would be known today as "Quercus Gambelli, NM". The Gambel Oak, the true name of the trees that dot White Oaks Arroyo, is also known as scrub, Rocky Mountain, Utah and blue oak. Shown taking a bath at the creek is Chex, one of three dogs owned by Charles Blucher of White Oaks.

WILD AMERICA

The dog days, which we now enter, get their name because Sirius, the so-called Dog Star, rises and sets with the sun this time of the year. TV Guide says that on television the dog days are synonymous with reruns, but not this past week.

Noteworthy to TV previewers included an ABC New Special, "Drugs: A Plague upon the Land," which aired Saturday and Monday evenings.

When I checked the TV schedule for Saturday I had planned to watch Channel 5's "Wild America," a look at wild animals that have adapted to civilization and thrive in urban areas. A similar program was appearing on Channel 7, "Drugs: A Plague upon the Land," which showed most of the main characters under the influence of drugs.

AFFLUENT USERS

The Saturday and Monday ABC news specials told about the spread of violent drug gangs into suburban and rural areas; scandals involving law-enforcement personnel engaged in drug trafficking; the often futile and fatal efforts of the police to rid the plague; links between drugs and the workplace.

Saturday's hour showed drug trafficking, the courts and the prison system. The report on Monday examined the magnitude of America's drug problem. Drugs included alcohol and medical care—all.

Peter Jennings pointed out drug use in poor neighborhoods as compared with substance abuse among the affluent.

I came to the conclusion that affluent drug users can stay out of all sorts of trouble.

The Rio Grande Sun's account of a judge in a DWI case has probably by now caught the attention of the MADD group (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.) I have been following the newspaper reports and was surprised at the turn of events.

POLITICALLY MOTIVATED

According to the SUN, the district attorney assigned to prosecute Magistrate Judge Baltazar Archuleta on DWI charges said he didn't know about a blood alcohol test which might have convicted Archuleta until it was too late to get the test into evidence.

But the supervisor of the two rookie police officers who arrested Archuleta outside Chama in February said the omission was politically motivated.

Information about the test was included in police reports forwarded to the district attorney's office, according to Chama State Police Sgt. Richard Martinez.

"I told the officers there was nothing to worry about in this case because the judge hung himself," Martinez is quoted in the SUN. "The DAs knew about the test. If they didn't include it, it was because he was a judge, a political figure."

PINCH-HITTER

Archuleta was acquitted of DWI and four other charges after a defense witness challenged the validity of a breathalyzer test. The prosecutor failed to introduce in court the results of a blood test taken at Espanola Hospital about two hours after the arrest.

A spokesman for the state police crime lab said the second test showed Archuleta's blood alcohol concentration at twice the legal limit and would have corroborated the breathalyzer test.

Questioned about his failure to introduce the critical evidence, Armando Torres first said he didn't know there was a blood test until the week before the trial. Later, the SUN continues in its report, Torres said he found out about the test on June 27, the day before the trial. The situation was further

CARRIZOZO'S PAST

Saturday, members of this household went on another county sightseeing trip, this time to White Oaks, once a prosperous gold mining town. I told my sons that many merchants from Carrizozo's history first conducted business at White Oaks then moved to Carrizozo when things got slow.

For example, the Ziegler Bros. business which became "Petty's" then "Gambles." Now the building is boarded up and vacant.

The boys were in the middle of a yawn when I told them that their grandfather, Abe Sanchez, was born in White Oaks in 1905. My sons were surprised to learn that my dad's parents did not come from New York City to this once thriving mining center.

Hondo woman is EMT of the month

By DOROTHY GUCK

The Lincoln County emergency response personnel won well-merited gold stars for their efficient and proper handling of the mock disaster staged here recently.

But county EMTs are performing less dramatic and often unnoted every day volunteer services that prove the worth of their training and care.

Vacation time can not only result in more vehicle accidents due to increased traffic, but other mishaps as hiking falls, sunstrokes, overexertion, bee stings, snake bites, water hazards, etc. When necessary, the EMTs are quick to respond whether the call for help appears minor or major.

The county association chose Bonnie Reynolds Jones as EMT for July. She was born and schooled in Lake Arthur, has two sisters and a brother in New Mexico, and a mother in Hagerman. A former husband is deceased.

Bonnie met Bill Jones the summer of 1977 at the Nogal Mesa Ranchmen's Camp Meeting, and they were married later that year. Bonnie and Bill lived in Roswell until 1982 when Bill became permanent pastor of the Baptist Church in Timmie.

They both took their EMT training in 1984 in Hondo. "We started with 20 trainees," Bonnie said, "and ended with 7. That number was reduced to 4 certified EMTs for a while. But now, we have Bill and Diane Schrecengost, Donna Crandell, Anne Moir, Terry White, Frank and Donna Sisneros, and Gail Hopkins to share our calls. Joe Appoda is an emergency driver."

Many of their ambulance runs are made for accidents on Hwy. 70, but often entail a need to use their personal autos to help stranded motorists whose cars break down.

"I'm not too alert this morning," Bonnie said. "We were out until the late hours of the night, helping some teenage boys who had car trouble on Border Hill. Thankfully, it was not for an accident call, just mechanical problems.

"My first run was a car accident in which one woman had a broken back, and another a broken ankle. The patients were carefully lifted on the gurneys after suitable first aid precautions had been taken. I was feeling quite satisfied that I had remembered my training and had worked so quickly. But when we were ready to transport the women to the hospital, the ambulance door wouldn't close. I was perturbed that we wasted another 2 or 3 minutes while I searched the cause and found an overnite case of one of the patients that was blocking the door, where I had unthinkingly placed it. Minutes are so precious when lives might be endangered. I was always careful after that to stow any object where it was safely out of the way.

"Incidentally, the woman with the broken back wrote a letter to the newspaper complimenting our care of her, and to tell us she was able to walk again."

Bonnie told of a boy suffering a gunshot wound on the Arabella road during hunting season. That was one of several hunting incidents that inflict injuries requiring the help of the EMTs to transport persons for treatment to the hospital. Often, the injury is not serious, but the fear and panic of the patient and his companions can be traumatic. With the boy, the wound was not a serious threat to his life or limb. He was given the necessary application of medical attention at the scene before being placed in the ambulance to be taken to the hospital. The fear he suffered was far worse than the injury.

"One of our chief jobs," Bonnie said, "is remaining calm and trying to allay the fears and anxieties of the patients. Two girls from Chicago had a wreck with their car. We transported them to the Ruidoso Hospital. They were not hurt badly, but needed to remain in the hospital overnight for observation. They called to reserve plane tickets in Roswell for the trip home next day, then worried how to get to Roswell in time for the plane departure. I offered to drive them and pick up their luggage from the wrecked car. Well, they were released so late, I was stopped for speeding by a state policeman. I explained the reason for the speed. The officer looked at one of the bruised girls wearing a C collar, and waved me on my way. We made it to the airport. Days later, I received a letter of thanks and a check from the girl's father.

"Another time, an elderly couple from Las Cruces was in an accident. Weeks later, their children stopped by our home to personally deliver thanks

Wild horse round-up on the missile range

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE—The New Mexico Livestock Board, with the help of White Sands Missile Range, will round up a substantial number of horses on the range in August. The horses will then be offered for public sale throughout the state of New Mexico.

The missile range, which was formed in 1945, has numerous small herds of feral horses within its boundaries. The horses are descendants of ranch animals which escaped or were left behind by ranchers when the range was established. Since then, the livestock board has periodically rounded up some of the horses to control their population.

It is estimated there are now about 1,000 horses on the missile range. The population continues to grow and now exceeds the ability of the land to support the horses.

The last roundup at White Sands was in 1981 when 553 horses were captured.

A schedule of horse sales and their locations will be advertised later.

White Oaks In The News

By Willa Lee Martin

The Pony Express Committee met July 10 to make final plans for the team roping that's taking place in White Oaks on July 16. We moved the starting time up to 12 noon instead of 2 p.m.

We also went through old newspapers and pictures of people in order to decide what we are going to put in our Pony Express brochure. We all had a lot of fun going through articles and pictures we found.

We are meeting on July 13 to put the Pony Express brochure together at Bob Watson's home. The brochure will go to print on July 15.

The Pony Express is having an auction and dance on July 23 at the Carrizozo Country Club. If anyone has anything they would like to donate to the auction, please call 648-2192 or 648-2172 for information.

Harlen Webb is making the saddle to be given away to the first place winners of the Pony Express Race.

We have had a good bit of rain in the White Oaks area. Good for grass and good for livestock, good for everything.

Myself and my two sons, Charles and Eddy Fannin, are sort of newcomers to White Oaks and the people here have made us feel right at home. Thank you all in White Oaks.

OPINION

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis has successfully pushed through the legislature his Health Security Act of 1988. The law requires employers to provide health insurance for employees. It does not affect employers with less than six employees, and for good reason. Cost of providing such insurance runs more than $1,600 per year per employee. Consider the plight of a small business with five employees that needs to add a sixth one in order to expand the business. Adding that one employee would bring the owner under the Health Security Act and force him to provide the insurance for all six at a cost of approximately $10,000 a year for insurance alone. As a small business man, would you put up with this atrocity—or simply move to New Hampshire? One may be sure that if Dukakis feels so strongly about his Health Security Act in Massachusetts, he will as President of the United States push for the same socialistic program on a nationwide basis.

Under terms of the Health Security Act employers who fail to provide required health insurance will be fined $1,600 per employee by the state. In addition to this disastrous legislation, employers will be forced to pay additional sums into a pool to cover health insurance costs for the unemployed or otherwise uninsured. The Massachusetts Foundation for Economic Research estimates the cost of such insurance to business owners to range from $1.7 to $2 billion a year by 1993. This means that every resident of Massachusetts receives health insurance, with every penny coming from the pockets of business.

Government everywhere has hit upon the health issue to tighten its grasp on every aspect of an individual's private life. In California the governor had to veto a recent mandatory helmet law for motorcyclists passed by the legislature after a 20-year struggle. Never mind that a biker has a right to "pursuit of happiness" in his own manner, even if he sustains multiple head injury that lands him in Bikers Heaven. Nobody gets hurt except the biker if he disregards the rules of safety, but supporters of the helmet legislation disagree. They say somebody else does get hurt. Follow their logic: An injured motorcyclist who does not have enough health insurance will find the state obligated to pay the difference in medical costs. Therefore, motorcyclists should be compelled to wear helmets to reduce the potential cost to the state! Sure. And if the dog hadn't stopped to water the fireplug he would have caught the rabbit.

Many years ago in this column I predicted that the government's program to provide lunches for elementary school students was a foot in the door for eventual take-over of all parental responsibilities for care and raising of their children. At that time I suggested that if nutrition for children is the responsibility of government rather than of parents, then it would be a matter of time before the same government would "find" that parents were also incapable of adequately clothing, housing, entertaining and providing medical care to children, and would move in to fill the void. The present US Congress has moved closer to that goal by enacting legislation that provides nationwide daycare centers for children. Congress would allocate funds for the centers and set up guidelines for their management. Cost to US taxpayers is estimated at between 8 and 9 billion dollars a year.

Break-up of the family, which the federal government has encouraged and nurtured since the 1930s in many overt and subtle ways, leaves parents little alternative but to put their small children in these daycare centers. By doing so both parents are free to hold the outside jobs necessitated by government-induced inflation, high taxes and rising costs of living. With the family unit in disarray and a welfare program in high gear, it is logical that otherwise prudent parents would turn to government to absolve them of full responsibility for the care and raising of their children. Congress is delighted to accept the responsibility, for it feeds its passion to control just about every aspect of human life in these United States.

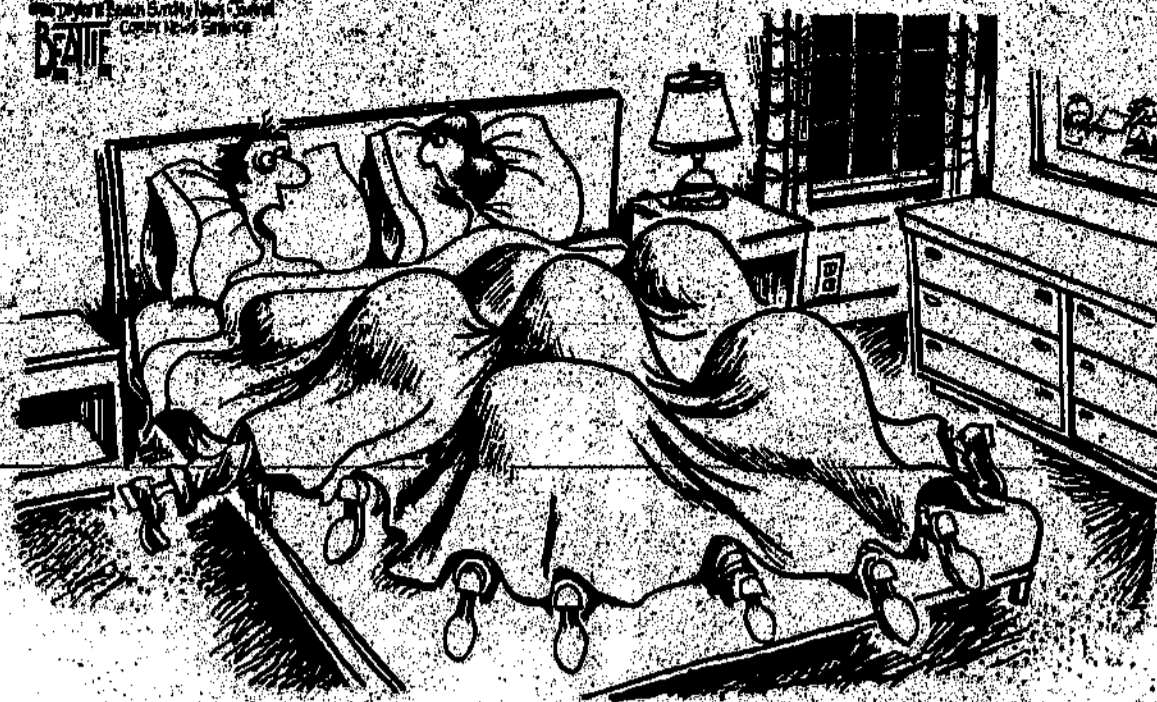

Mandatory seat belts are a product of the same logic, that if people are killed or injured it is the state that suffers. We are almost at the point where smoking will be prohibited, where a person's right to choose his own lifestyle yields to the right of the state to protect itself. If this is the government's stance, and it certainly appears that it is, how long will it be before it will be unlawful to drink alcohol? Since fatty foods are unhealthy, mustn't the state take action to outlaw them because the state is the ultimate victim? If you think I may be unduly alarmed by all this, consider that the US Supreme Court recently ruled that our private garbage cans are subject to surveillance, confiscation or inspection. Is the kitchen and bedroom next?

Thus it is established that government has the power and the will to intrude itself into every phase of a person's life. That means almost total control of individuals by a government founded to guarantee individual rights. The process is a 100 percent reversal of rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights, thanks to a power-mad congress on one hand and a policy-making court system on the other. (Please note that congress is careful to exempt its members from such laws. They'll be eating fatty food while the individual American is doing slammer time for the same offense.)

Here we are fighting a war against drugs that cannot be won when we should be fighting a war against congressmen who are doing more to destroy America than the drug lords. There is no way to stop the use of drugs except, possibly, by executing all users and pushers on the spot. There is a way to stop congress. If a congressman is in office, vote the bastard out. If he is being elected to congress, make sure he stays no more than two terms.

People who enjoy taking risks and running chances are those who built this country. They civilized the country. They defended the country and still do. There is, thank God, no such thing as a riskless

SANTA FE—Should voters be trusted to set their own tax rates?

It is an argument heard every time lawmakers debate whether to grant additional local taxing authority.

Invariably, one of them will say something like "If we give people the right to tax themselves, some of them will be dumb enough to do it."

This has been a major argument against a constitutional amendment to permit county bond elections for books and other library resources.

A favorite comment goes something like this: The history of local governments in the United States has shown that they may spend immoderately when there are no debt limitations.

It is an evidence of the arrogant attitudes of some lawmakers. What can be a better expression of our citizens' feelings than a vote cast by secret ballot? That right is exercised without the slightest bit of intimidation.

What worries these lawmakers the most is that if they let local folks raise taxes to meet their needs, they are more likely to balk when the state comes along and asks for a tax hike of its own.

State lawmakers are a cagey bunch. They allow local governments less taxing authority than nearly any other state. This allows New Mexico legislators to play the role of sugar daddies who take home the goodies from Santa Fe.

And what is the primary tax they allow local governments to levy? It's the property tax—a revenue source which House Taxation and Revenue Committee Chairman Dick Minzner of Albuquerque calls the most unpopular of all taxes.

A few years ago our lawmakers in Santa Fe decided to "get the state out of the property tax business."

That may sound generous but the real intent was to have someone else do the hard work.

Cities, counties, school districts and the various other local taxing authorities were not exactly overjoyed. Cities and counties had been making some inroads into the more popular sales tax as a revenue source and weren't happy to see the damper put on that.

Minzner has threatened to seek a Garrey Carruthers veto if ever a local taxing authority gets its hands on anything other than the property tax.

He proved true to his word when McKinley County won the right to ask its voters for sales tax revenue to build itself a court house. Minzner was not able to stop it in the legislature but he managed to convince a governor, not of his own party, to veto the measure.

The proposed constitutional amendment allowing counties to sell bonds for library books is addressed more appropriately from another angle. Counties were originally allowed to go into debt for buildings, roads and bridges. Six years ago we approved an amendment adding water systems, sewer systems, airports and sanitary landfills.

Now we are adding library books.

The important question is whether this is an appropriate method of buying library books.

Certainly a literate society is essential to our survival. City and county officials should be willing to pony up the bucks for a reasonable amount of library resources.

But in the last six years, a lagging state economy has caused many cutbacks. Most public libraries in New Mexico bought fewer books last year than they did in 1982.

This proposed solution requests a new method of financing book purchases. Instead of doing it out of recurring resources, we borrow the money to buy the books.

It sounds ridiculous at first. Books don't last as long as buildings or roads and not even as long as county dumps. People would still be paying for them long after they're worn out.

But bonds can be sold for varying lengths of time—just like the options we have in financing a house or car.

If counties want to keep going back to the voters every couple of years to see if they want to buy more books, the bonds can be very short-term. The City of Albuquerque has been buying books that way for 15 years. This amendment would allow counties to get into that act.

So, if books aren't a priority for county commissioners, they can always let voters up their own taxes.

What do you suppose would happen if we got to vote on some of the other items in the county budget?

Ruidoso ex-employee recall of council

By J.A. "AJ" JUNGE

It has been four years since the last Ruidoso Council recall and it now faces another.

But this time it is different.

In 1984 those behind the petition thought that all council members and the mayor would lose their jobs—but they were wrong.

The petitioners used a state law which allowed the size of a council to be increased or decreased with a minimum of four members and a maximum of 10. However, only the council members were involved, the mayor was not.

It was never determined if the recall petition was aimed at the mayor, the council, or both.

The 1984 recall petition required only 84 signatures, which were easily obtained. For reasons which have always escaped me, there are those who will sign a petition for whatever cause, and, in some cases, without reading the petition they are asked to sign.

After signatures are verified an election is held to determine if the voters want a change in the makeup of the council. If voters say "yes" then an election is held to choose the new council.

The voters in 1984 opted to increase the council to six members and the four councilmen, whose record while in office was exemplary, were fired and replaced by five inexperienced individuals and one who had experience but who died shortly after the election.

During the next four years a total of 11 persons occupied the six positions on the council.

The performance of the councils since the 1984 recall is a matter of public record. There is a great difference in the rationale for the need of the 1984 petition and the one now in process.

In 1984 two local taxpayers sought the petition because the city council had refused to annex property for one of the petitioners and had taken the other to task for failure to pay for city services and to abide by a contract with the city.

Now we have two ex-employees of the city who recently lost their jobs and have decided to recall the council and the mayor. Their action can only be viewed as vindictive and self-serving with results that will help no one and, in particular, the petitioners.

The fact that the petitioners have based their cause on a state law which governs changing a city council to a five-member commissioner form supports the contention that the main target in this case is Mayor Lloyd L. Davis Jr.

If this is not so, petitioners could have used the same statute as was used in the recall of 1984 merely changing the size of the present council back to four members or by an increase to 10 members. In this situation the mayor's position would not have been affected.

If voters decide to opt to a five-member commissioner form of council the positions of the present six council members and that of the mayor will be abolished. A new

Republicans attend state convention

Republican County Chairman Rhonda Johnston and 12 delegates have returned from the New Mexico Republican Convention held last weekend in Albuquerque.

Purpose of the convention was three-fold: elect 17 delegates and alternates to represent the state at the National Convention next month, choose a man and woman to the Republican National Committee, and to write to party platform.

Among those elected to the national convention to be held in New Orleans in August is State Representative Ben Hall of Lincoln County.

Phelps Anderson of Roswell was elected national committeeman. Shirley Leslie

Keynote speaker was former presidential candidate US Senator Robert Dole. Also addressing the 784-member convention were US Senator Pete Domenici, Governor Garrey Carruthers, and US Representatives Joe Skeen and Manuel Lujan.

Issues addressed in the GOP platform include revenues and expenditures, education, crime and public safety, jobs and economic development, human concerns, judicial system and the environment and natural resources.

CARRIZOZO'S EAST
Saturday, members of this household went on another county sightseeing trip, this time to White Oaks, once a prosperous gold mining town. I told my sons that many merchants from Carrizozo's history first conducted business at White Oaks then moved to Carrizozo when things got slow.
For example, the Ziegler Bros. business which became "Patty's," then "Gambles." Now the building is boarded up and vacant.
The boys were in the middle of a yawn when I told them that their grandfather, Abe Sanchez, was born in White Oaks in 1905. My sons were surprised to learn that my dad's parents did not come from New York City to this once thriving mining center.

WILD AMERICA

The dog days, which we now enter, get their name because Sirius, the so-called Dog Star, rises and sets with the sun this time of the year. TV Guide says that on television the dog days are synonymous with reruns, but not this past week.

Noteworthy to TV previewers included an ABC New Special, "Drugs: A Plague upon the Land," which aired Saturday and Monday evenings.

When I checked the TV schedule for Saturday I had planned to watch Channel 5's "Wild America," a look at wild animals that have adapted to civilization and thrive in urban areas. A similar program was appearing on Channel 7, "Drugs: A Plague upon the Land," which showed most of the main characters under the influence of drugs.

AFFLUENT USERS

The Saturday and Monday ABC news specials told about the spread of violent drug gangs into suburban and rural areas; scandals involving law-enforcement personnel engaged in drug trafficking; the often futile and fatal efforts of the police to rid the plague; links between drugs and the workplace.

Saturday's hour showed drug trafficking, the courts and the prison system. The report on Monday examined the magnitude of America's drug problem. Drugs included alcohol and medical cure-alls.

Peter Jennings pointed out drug use in poor neighborhoods as compared with substance abuse among the affluent.

I came to the conclusion that affluent drug users can stay out of all sorts of trouble.

The Rio Grande Sun's account of a judge in a DWI case has probably by now caught the attention of the MADD group (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.) I have been following the newspaper reports and was surprised at the turn of events.

POLITICALLY MOTIVATED

According to the SUN, the district attorney assigned to prosecute Magistrate Judge Baltazar Archuleta on DWI charges said he didn't know about a blood alcohol test which might have convicted Archuleta until it was too late to get the test into evidence.

But the supervisor of the two rookie police officers who arrested Archuleta outside Chama in February said the omission was politically motivated.

Information about the test was included in police reports forwarded to the district attorney's office, according to Chama State Police Sgt. Richard Martinez.

"I told the officers there was nothing to worry about in this case because the judge hung himself," Martinez is quoted in the SUN. "The DAs knew about the test. If they didn't include it, it was because he was a judge, a political figure."

PINCH-HITTER

Archuleta was acquitted of DWI and four other charges after a defense witness challenged the validity of a breathalyzer test. The prosecutor failed to introduce in court the results of a blood test taken at Espanola Hospital about two hours after the arrest.

A spokesman for the state police crime lab said the second test showed Archuleta's blood alcohol concentration at twice the legal limit and would have corroborated the breathalyzer test.

Questioned about his failure to introduce the critical evidence, Armando Torres first said he didn't know there was a blood test until the week before the trial. Later, the SUN continues in its report, Torres said he found out about the test on June 27, the day before the trial. The situation was further

Wild horse round-up on the missile range

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE—The New Mexico Livestock Board, with the help of White Sands Missile Range, will round up a substantial number of horses on the range in August. The horses will then be offered for public sale throughout the state of New Mexico.

The missile range, which was formed in 1945, has numerous small herds of feral horses within its boundaries. The horses are descendants of ranch animals which escaped or were left behind by ranchers when the range was established. Since then, the livestock board has periodically rounded up some of the horses to control their population.

It is estimated there are now about 1,000 horses on the missile range. The population continues to grow and now exceeds the ability of the land to support the horses.

The last roundup at White Sands was in 1981 when 553 horses were captured.

A schedule of horse sales and their locations will be advertised later.

White Oaks In The News

The Pony Express Committee met July 10 to make final plans for the team roping that's taking place in White Oaks on July 16. We moved the starting time up to 12 noon instead of 2 p.m.

We also went through old newspapers and pictures of people in order to decide what we are going to put in our Pony Express brochure. We all had a lot of fun going through articles and pictures we found.

We are meeting on July 13 to put the Pony Express brochure together at Bob Watson's home. The brochure will go to print on July 15.

The Pony Express is having an auction and dance on July 23 at the Carrizozo Country Club. If anyone has anything they would like to donate to the auction, please call 648-2192 or 648-2172 for information.

Harlan Webb is making the saddle to be given away to the first place winners of the Pony Express Race.

We have had a good bit of rain in the White Oaks area. Good for grass and good for livestock, good for everything.

Myself and my two sons, Charles and Eddy Fannin, are sort of newcomers to White Oaks and the people here have made us feel right at home. Thank you all in White Oaks.

ble on Border Hill. Thankfully, it was not for an accident fall, just mechanical problems.

"My first run was a car accident in which one woman had a broken back, and another a broken ankle. The patients were carefully lifted on the gurneys after suitable first aid precautions had been taken. I was feeling quite satisfied that I had remembered my training and had worked so quickly. But when we were ready to transport the women to the hospital, the ambulance door wouldn't close. I was perturbed that we wasted another 2 or 3 minutes while I searched the cause and found an overnight case of one of the patients that was blocking the door, where I had unthinkingly placed it. Minutes are so precious when lives might be endangered. I was always careful after that to stow any object where it was safely out of the way.

"Incidentally, the woman with the broken back wrote a letter to the newspaper complimenting our care of her, and to tell us she was able to walk again."

Bonnie told of a boy suffering a gunshot wound on the Arabella road during hunting season. That was one of several hunting incidents that inflict injuries requiring the help of the EMTs to transport persons for treatment to the hospital. Often, the injury is not serious, but the fear and panic of the patient and his companions can be traumatic. With the boy, the wound was not a serious threat to his life or limb. He was given the necessary application of medical attention at the scene before being placed in the ambulance to be taken to the hospital. The fear he suffered was far worse than the injury.

"One of our chief jobs," Bonnie said, "is remaining calm and trying to allay the fears and anxieties of the patients. Two girls from Chicago had a wreck with their car. We transported them to the Ruidoso Hospital. They were not hurt badly, but needed to remain in the hospital overnight for observation. They called to reserve plane tickets in Roswell for the trip home next day, then worried how to get to Roswell in time for the plane departure. I offered to drive them and pick up their luggage from the wrecked car. Well, they were released so late, I was stopped for speeding by a state policeman. I explained the reason for the speed. The officer looked at one of the bruised girls wearing a C collar, and waved me on my way. We made it to the airport. Days later, I received a letter of thanks and a check from the girl's father.

"Another time, an elderly couple from Las Cruces was in an accident. Weeks later, their children stopped by our home to personally deliver thanks

The proposed constitutional amendment allowing counties to sell bonds for library books is addressed more appropriately from another angle.

Counties were originally allowed to go into debt for buildings, roads and bridges. Six years ago we approved an amendment adding water systems, sewer systems, airports and sanitary landfills.

Now we are adding library books.

The important question is whether this is an appropriate method of buying library books.

Certainly a literate society is essential to our survival. City and county officials should be willing to pony up the bucks for a reasonable amount of library resources.

But in the last six years, a lagging state economy has caused many cutbacks. Most public libraries in New Mexico bought fewer books last year than they did in 1982.

This proposed solution requests a new method of financing book purchases. Instead of doing it out of recurring resources, we borrow the money to buy the books.

It sounds ridiculous at first. Books don't last as long as buildings or roads and not even as long as county dumps. People would still be paying for them long after they're worn out.

But bonds can be sold for varying lengths of time—just like the options we have in financing a house or car.

If counties want to keep going back to the voters every couple of years to see if they want to buy more books, the bonds can be very short-term.

The City of Albuquerque has been buying books that way for 15 years. This amendment would allow counties to get into that act.

So, if books aren't a priority for county commissioners, they can always let voters up their own taxes.

What do you suppose would happen if we got to vote on some of the other items in the county budget?

Ruidoso ex-employers start recall of council, mayor

By J.A. "AI" JUNGE

It has been four years since the last Ruidoso Council recall and it now faces another.

But this time it is different.

In 1984 those behind the petition thought that all council members and the mayor would lose their jobs—but they were wrong.

The petitioners used a state law which allowed the size of a council to be increased or decreased with a minimum of four members and a maximum of 10. However, only the council members were involved, the mayor was not.

It was never determined if the recall petition was aimed at the mayor, the council, or both.

The 1984 recall petition required only 94 signatures, which were easily obtained. For reasons which have always escaped me, there are those who will sign a petition for whatever cause, and, in some cases, without reading the petition they are asked to sign.

After signatures are verified an election is held to determine if the voters want a change in the makeup of the council. If voters say "yes" then an election is held to choose the new council.

The voters in 1984 opted to increase the council to six members and the four councilmen, whose record while in office was exemplary, were fired and replaced by five inexperienced individuals and one who had experience but who died shortly after the election.

During the next four years a total of 11 persons occupied the six positions on the council.

The performance of the councils since the 1984 recall is a matter of public record. There is a great difference in the rationale for the need of the 1984 petition and the one now in process.

In 1984 two local taxpayers sought the petition because the city council had refused to annex property for one of the petitioners and had taken the other to task for failure to pay for city services and to abide by a contract with the city.

Now we have two ex-employees of the city who recently lost their jobs and have decided to recall the council and the mayor. Their action can only be viewed as vindictive and self-serving with results that will help no one and, in particular, the petitioners.

The fact that the petitioners have based their cause on a state law which governs changing a city council to a five-member commissioner form supports the contention that the main target in this case is Mayor Lloyd L. Davis Jr.

If this is not so, petitioners could have used the same statute as was used in the recall of 1984 merely changing the size of the present council back to four members or by an increase to 10 members. In this situation the mayor's position would not have been affected.

If voters decide to opt to a five-member commission form of council the positions of the present six council members and that of the mayor will be abolished. A new

Republicans attend state convention

Republican County Chairman Rhonda Johnston and 15 delegates have returned from the New Mexico Republican Convention held last weekend in Albuquerque.

Purpose of the convention was three-fold: elect 17 delegates and alternates to represent the state at the National Convention next month, choose a man and woman to the Republican National Committee, and to write to party platform.

Among those elected to the national convention to be held in New Orleans in August is State Representative Ben Hall of Lincoln County.

Phelps Anderson of Roswell was elected national committeeman, Shirley Leslie of Albuquerque was elected national committeewoman. She defeated former Lincoln County Chairman Peña Pool. Johnston gave a seconding speech on behalf of Pool's nomination.

Keynote speaker was former presidential candidate US Senator Robert Dole. Also addressing the 794-member convention were US Senator Pete Domenici, Governor Garrey Carruthers, and US Representatives Joe Skeen and Manuel Lujan.

Issues addressed in the GOP platform include revenues and expenditures, education, crime and public safety, jobs and economic development, human concerns, judicial system and the environment and natural resources.

Lincoln County delegates included Rhonda and Hugh Johnston, Noema and Jack Page, Cal Cowden, Peggy Holden, Pat Hume, Inez and Robert Tanner, Audean Franklin, Bob Bohks, Bill Gallaher, and Lester and Yvonne Lanelli. The Johnston's daughter Sarah served as convention page to Gov. Carruthers and others on the dais.

society—but tell that to congress. If our early settlers played by today's rules there would never have been a Mayflower or a Plymouth Rock, much less a United States of America.

Speaking of taking chances, here is an old American ditty that should cheer you up:

You have two chances— One of getting the germ And one of not. And if you get the germ You have two chances— One of getting the disease And one of not. And if you get the disease You have two chances— One of dying And one of not. And, if you die— Well, you still have two chances!

mayor would be selected by the five commission members from their group, leaving four commissioners and a mayor in office. This system also would enable any commissioner to be recalled individually without the entire group being affected. We could have non-stop recalls going on continuously. There are several cities in New Mexico operating under the five-member commissioner form of council. There is a divided opinion as to whether this is the better system of city government.

some additional effort. To stand up and fight in a race for a public office, taking the slings and arrows along the way, to give your time and efforts whether you can afford to do so or not, that is the supreme effort—and too few are willing to go all the way.

Recalls are not the answer.

Why are recall petitions necessary to good government? Why are so many so disenchanting with those they elect to govern?

The fault lies with the voters themselves.

To complain and criticize is easy.

To take an interest in city affairs requires some effort.

To attend council meetings and committee meetings takes

Sumpter said. "Special thanks go to T. L. Wilson, Ruidoso Office Supply and Ace (True Value) Hardware of Ruidoso for their donations of supplies for the track meet," he added.

The Grizzly meet next year will be sanctioned by the Athletic Congress of the USA (TAC) and will be sponsored by a new youth sports organization that Sumpter plans to create to promote New Mexico youth athletic endeavors and excellence.

A Window on Lincoln County — by P.E. Chavez

Had a horticulturist been consulted when White Oaks was named, the former gold mining town would be known today as "Quercus Gambell, NM". The Gambel Oak, the true name of the trees that dot White Oaks Arroyo, is also known as scrub, Rocky Mountain, Utah and blue oak. Shown taking a bath at the creek is Chex, one of three dogs owned by Charles Blucher of White Oaks.

WILD AMERICA

The dog days, which we now enter, get their name because Sirius, the so-called Dog Star, rises and sets with the sun this time of the year. TV Guide says that on television the dog days are synonymous with reruns, but not this past week.

Noteworthy to TV previewers included an ABC New Special, "Drugs: A Plague upon the Land," which aired Saturday and Monday evenings.

When I checked the TV schedule for Saturday I had planned to watch Channel 5's "Wild America," a look at wild animals that have adapted to civilization and thrive in urban areas. A similar program was appearing on Channel 7, "Drugs: A Plague upon the Land," which showed most of the main characters under the influence of drugs.

AFFLUENT USERS

The Saturday and Monday ABC news specials told about the spread of violent drug gangs into suburban and rural areas; scandals involving law-enforcement personnel engaged in drug trafficking; the often futile and fatal efforts of the police to rid the plague; links between drugs and the workplace.

Saturday's hour showed drug trafficking, the courts and the prison system. The report on Monday examined the magnitude of America's drug problem. Drugs included alcohol and medical cure-alls.

Peter Jennings pointed out drug use in poor neighborhoods as compared with substance abuse among the affluent.

I came to the conclusion that affluent drug users can stay out of all sorts of trouble.

The Rio Grande Sun's account of a judge in a DWI case has probably by now caught the attention of the MADD group (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.) I have been following the newspaper reports and was surprised at the turn of events.

POLITICALLY MOTIVATED

According to the SUN, the district attorney assigned to prosecute Magistrate Judge Baltazar Archuleta on DWI charges said he didn't know about a blood alcohol test which might have convicted Archuleta until it was too late to get the test into evidence.

But the supervisor of the two rookie police officers who arrested Archuleta outside Chama in February said the omission was politically motivated.

Information about the test was included in police reports forwarded to the district attorney's office, according to Chama State Police Sgt. Richard Martinez.

"I told the officers there was nothing to worry about in this case because the judge hung himself," Martinez is quoted in the SUN. "The DAs knew about the test. If they didn't include it, it was because he was a judge, a political figure."

PINCH-HITTER

Archuleta was acquitted of DWI and four other charges after a defense witness challenged the validity of a breathalyzer test. The prosecutor failed to introduce in court the results of a blood test taken at Espanola Hospital about two hours after the arrest.

A spokesman for the state police crime lab said the second test showed Archuleta's blood alcohol concentration at twice the legal limit and would have corroborated the breathalyzer test.

Questioned about his failure to introduce the critical evidence, Armando Torres first said he didn't know there was a blood test until the week before the trial. Later, the SUN continues in its report, Torres said he found out about the test on June 27, the day before the trial. The situation was further

CARRIZOZO'S PAST

Saturday, members of this household went on another county sightseeing trip, this time to White Oaks, once a prosperous gold mining town. I told my sons that many merchants from Carrizozo's history first conducted business at White Oaks then moved to Carrizozo when things got slow.

For example, the Ziegler Bros. business which became "Petty's," then "Gambles." Now the building is boarded up and vacant.

The boys were in the middle of a yawn when I told them that their grandfather, Abe Sanchez, was born in White Oaks in 1905. My sons were surprised to learn that my dad's parents did not come from New York City to this once thriving mining center.

Hondo woman is EMT of the month

By DOROTHY GUCK

The Lincoln County emergency response personnel won well-merited gold stars for their efficient and proper handling of the mock disaster staged here recently.

But county EMTs are performing less dramatic and often unnoted every day volunteer services that prove the worth of their training and care.

Vacation time can not only result in more vehicle accidents due to increased traffic, but other mishaps as hiking falls, sunstrokes, over-exertion, bee stings, snake bites, water hazards, etc. When necessary, the EMTs are quick to respond whether the call for help appears minor or major.

The county association chose Bonnie Reynolds Jones as EMT for July. She was born and schooled in Lake Arthur, has two sisters and a brother in New Mexico, and a mother in Hagerman. A former husband is deceased.

Bonnie met Bill Jones the summer of 1977 at the Nogal Mesa Ranchmen's Camp Meeting, and they were married later that year. Bonnie and Bill lived in Roswell until 1982 when Bill became permanent pastor of the Baptist Church in Tinnie.

They both took their EMT training in 1984 in Hondo. "We started with 20 trainees," Bonnie said, "and ended with 7. That number was reduced to 4 certified EMTs for a while. But now, we have Bill and Diane Schreengost, Donna Crandell, Anne Moir, Terry White, Frank and Donna Sisneros, and Gail Hopkins to share our calls. Joe Aproda is an emergency driver."

Many of their ambulance runs are made for accidents on Hwy. 70, but often entail a need to use their personal autos to help stranded motorists whose cars break down.

"I'm not too alert this morning," Bonnie said. "We were out until the late hours of the night, helping some teenage boys who had car trouble on Border Hill. Thankfully, it was not for an accident call, just mechanical problems.

"One of our chief jobs," Bonnie said, "is remaining calm and trying to allay the fears and anxieties of the patients. Two girls from Chicago had a wreck with their car. We transported them to the Ruidoso Hospital. They were not hurt badly, but needed to remain in the hospital overnight for observation. They called to reserve plane tickets in Roswell for the trip home next day, then worried how to get to Roswell in time for the plane departure. I offered to drive them and pick up their luggage from the wrecked car. Well, they were released so late, I was stopped for speeding by a state policeman. I explained the reason for the speed. The officer looked at one of the bruised girls wearing a Q collar, and waved me on my way. We made it to the airport. Days later, I received a letter of thanks and a check from the girl's father."

"Another time, an elderly couple from Las Cruces was in an accident. Weeks later, their children stopped by our home to personally deliver thanks

Wild horse round-up on the missile range

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE—The New Mexico Livestock Board, with the help of White Sands Missile Range, will round up a substantial number of horses on the range in August. The horses will then be offered for public sale throughout the state of New Mexico.

The missile range, which was formed in 1945, has numerous small herds of feral horses within its boundaries. The horses are descendants of ranch animals which escaped or were left behind by ranchers when the range was established. Since then, the livestock board has periodically rounded up some of the horses to control their population.

It is estimated there are now about 1,000 horses on the missile range. The population continues to grow and now exceeds the ability of the land to support the horses.

The last roundup at White Sands was in 1981 when 553 horses were captured.

A schedule of horse sales and their locations will be advertised later.

White Oaks In The News

By Willa Lee Martin

The Pony Express Committee met July 10 to make final plans for the team roping that's taking place in White Oaks on July 16. We moved the starting time up to 12 noon instead of 2 p.m.

We also went through old newspapers and pictures of people in order to decide what we are going to put in our Pony Express brochure. We all had a lot of fun going through articles and pictures we found.

We are meeting on July 13 to put the Pony Express brochure together at Bob Watson's home. The brochure will go to print on July 15.

The Pony Express is having an auction and dance on July 23 at the Carrizozo Country Club. If anyone has any thing they would like to donate to the auction, please call 648-2192 or 648-2172 for information.

Harlen Webb is making the saddle to be given away to the first place winners of the Pony Express Race.

We have had a good bit of rain in the White Oaks area. Good for grass and good for livestock, good for everything.

Myself and my two sons, Charles and Eddy Fannin, are sort of newcomers to White Oaks and the people here have made us feel right at home. Thank you all in White Oaks.

Capitan students at international rodeo in Nevada

Justen and Owen Washburn, Capitan High School students, attended the Nevada International Invitational Rodeo, July 7-10 at Fallon, NV.

To qualify to go to the NIIR, a student must finish in the top eight contestants in the state for the year.

Justen finished 6th in saddle bronc riding and Owen completed the year in 7th place in bull riding.

Justen is a 1988 graduate of Capitan High School and his cousin, Owen, will be a junior at Capitan High School this fall.

Saturday, July 16, as previously mentioned in last week's paper.

The Capitan Chamber of Commerce held its meeting, Monday, July 11 at the Smokey Bear Restaurant.

The Capitan Church of Christ is holding its Vacation Bible School.

Jessie Cervantes has donated a cord of pinon and cedar wood to Tawnya Reynolds to sell tickets for a raffle to help earn money for her expenses to the National Beauty Pageant. All proceeds go for that purpose. Tawnya is 8 years of age.

Myrl Ray spent a week in California with her son R.E. who underwent bone surgery at the Loma Linda Hospital. He is home in Oklahoma and doing fine.

It seems the Lone Tree Bible Camp is not so well known here as it is over the entire US. Timothy and Charlene Worral, owners and operators, purchased the land and have worked hard to get it built, and that is great to know that it is progressing. It has grown from nothing to a staff of 25. Regularly there are 150 attending. At times when there are teens there has been as many as 300. Her parents spend six months here and six months near Jackson Hole, WY.

A special thanks goes to the Carrizozo Fire Dept. which placed its truck in the July 4 parade.

Capitan will be one of 32 teams participating in a statewide pass scrimmage July 28-29 in Las Cruces. This is in conjunction with the North-South all-star games. The Tigers will be in the division with the larger AAA and AAAA high schools.

Coach Blaine Miller told the News that two-a-day practice sessions begin Aug. 8. He also said that "the majority of the players have been working hard this summer and I expect an exciting season for the players and fans." Coach Miller is looking for a good scrimmage game in the middle of August.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Environmental Improvement Division has received an application for a Radioactive Materials License from Edmundo R. Lucero, P.E., for a density/moisture gauge to be stored at 330 Main Street, Carrizozo, New Mexico and to be used at temporary job sites throughout New Mexico.

During the early part of the evaluation period the Division will invite interested parties to review and comment upon the application. The EID may, at its discretion, retain consultants to assist in its evaluation of the application. Relevant comments and questions received by the EID from various agencies and interested parties will be forwarded to the applicant for its response. Correspondence associated with the application will be on file with the Radiation Protection Bureau and will be available for inspection by the applicant and any other interested parties.

The Division has required the company to provide complete plans and other materials concerning, among other things, the public health, safety and environment aspects of the proposed activity.

The license application will be analyzed carefully by the Division. During this analysis, the application will be carefully reviewed to ensure that there are no deficiencies, that the application meets all applicable requirements and that there is no reason to believe that operation will violate any laws or regulations. If the Division is so satisfied, it will issue a Radioactive Material License, to expire in five years.

The activities of all licenses are inspected periodically to assure compliance with regulations and license conditions.

The application is available for review at the following locations:

Harold Runnels State Bldg., Room N2258, 1190 St. Francis Drive, Santa Fe, NM 87504-0968.

It is anticipated that the review period will require about one month. Written comments and requests for public hearing will be accepted for 60 days after publication of this notice. Written comments regarding this license application should be directed to the Radiation Licensing and Registration Staff, Environmental Improvement Division, P.O. Box 968, Santa Fe, New Mexico 87504-0968.
