Flag presented for Ft. Stanton cemetery

By Ruth Hammond

Captain and Mrs. E. Victor Schaerer of Ruidoso were surprised when they found the Fort Stanton cemetery is dedicated to the men and women of the American Merchant Marine. Schaerer is a master mariner, United States Merchant Marine, retired.

Schaerer and his wife spoke with Ervin Aldaz, administrator of Fort Stanton Hospital and Training School, and asked if they could take over an ongoing maintenance program for the cemetery as a retirement hobby. Aldaz agreed to their request and the Schaerers began a program to put the old cemetery in "ship shape" condition.

The maintenance program at the cemetery drew national attention Aug. 4 when Lynn Ditto and Joe Sandoval from US Senator Jeff Bingaman's staff presented Schaerer with a flag that had flown over the US Capitol building in Washington, DC. Sen. Bingaman was unable to attend the flag presentation ceremony and sent a letter that was presented to Schaerer by the staff members.

"The Fort Stanton cemetery is a rich natural treasure," Schaerer said. "It is a most unique and interesting part of our nation's history. I know of nothing like it in the country."

The flag will fly from the flagpole that is located near the tall white monument in the cemetery bearing the inscription, "In Memory of the Men and Women of the American Merchant Marine." The memorial was erected by the United States Public Health Service at the end of World War II. The flagpole and monument are now surrounded by wooden posts linked together with large white rope in the shape of a ship's hull.

Schaerer said he installed the posts in the shape of the ship's hull "to provide a salty flavor." He and his wife planted perennial flowers inside the area that will provide a sea of blooms.

Volunteers have helped the Schaerers with the work of cleaning the cemetery. Fort Stanton Hospital and Training School furnished 300 r w wooden crosses that have been erected.

Schaerer has sent a press release to the vice-commandant of the Coast Guard to get further national recognition for the cemetery. Plans are being made to hold a ceremony at the cemetery on Veteran's Day, Nov. 11.

The Schaerers found the cemetery last year when they were driving around Lincoln County getting familiar with the area after retiring to Ruidoso.

Located on a dirt road south of Fort Stanton, the Fort Stanton cemetery appears to be a military cemetery with row after row of small white crosses marking the graves.

Schaerer said, "Imagine our surprise to find the cemetery was dedicated to the men and women of the American Merchant Marine."

The cemetery was established in 1899 when President William McKinley issued an Executive Order setting Fort Stanton aside for the use of the US Marine Hospital Service as a tuberculosis (TB) sanatorium for merchant marines. The choice of location was due to the dry, healthful, year-round climate in the area.

The first patient arrived at the hospital Nov. 18, 1899. During that first year, six TB patients died. The first victim was John Dower, who died Dec. 16, 1899. Dower was buried in the Fort Stanton cemetery as were many more TB victims. There are now more than 1,000 graves in the cemetery. Persons buried at the cemetery include American Merchant Marines, Scandinavian Marines, and former and staff and residents from the hospital.

Three German sailors are also buried in the cemetery. They were in the first US interment camp of World War II located at Fort Stanton. Before America's entry into the war the German luxury liner Columbus was shelled by the British off Cuba in 1939. Rather than have the ship taken by the British, the vessel was scuttled and it sank. The crew was picked up by Americans and they were confined as guests of the US government for the duration of the war at the new Fort Stanton camp.

Aldaz spoke at the flag ceremony and said, "Personally, I can't say enough in way of thanks to the Schaerers for their work here in the cemetery." Schaerer and his wife have made a long-term commitment to maintain the cemetery.

Schaerer, 71, is the 4th oldest life member of the Council of American Master Mariners. He graduated from the New York State Maritime College at Fort Schuyler, NY on Long Island Sound in 1940.

He was one of the youngest skippers at age 26 during World War II. His ship had a crew of more than 40 and carried a naval gun crew of 10 or 12.

Schaerer received an honorable discharge from the US Coast Guard for his service during the war and received an honorable discharge from the US Naval Reserve in 1954. He explained that commercial merchant marines no longer exist during wartime because the marine vessels are taken over by the US Government.

During peacetime, merchant marine vessels are cruise ships and cargo carriers. During wartime merchant marine vessels are converted to troop carriers and general cargo ships carrying materials for the war effort.

LUNCHEON WAS SERVED in a hanger following the Airport Scenic Drive dedication ceremony.

Court wants storage space

Commissioners ordered to help

According to an order signed by District Judge Richard Parsons Aug. 9, the district court has requested adequate storage space for court files for the past four years and eight months.

The order states, "These repeated requests have, in general, been totally ignored by each sitting Board of County Commissioners. The district court has been placed in a position of a consistent violation of OSHA regulations, in addition to placing its employees, the abstractors and other permitted personnel in a dangerous environment.

"On the grounds of urgent necessity, the Court declares the foyer, and all hallways adjacent to the Court complex as emergency storage areas. The Board of County Commissioners are ordered to provide adequate county personnel to effect this transfer, to be concluded no later than 5 p.m., Aug. 10, 1989."

Judge Parsons had written a letter to commissioners March 14, 1989 stating, "One of our most critical needs is for storage."

Commissioners address landfill situation

Lincoln County Commissioners met in special session Aug. 8.

A resolution was approved to petition Otero County Commissioners for their permission for Lincoln County to dispose of solid waste in Otero County from Nov. 1, 1989 through May 31, 1990, if Lincoln County, by signatures of the three Lincoln County Commissioners, enters into negotiations with Waste Management Inc. to contract for the disposal of solid waste originating in the municipalities and incorporated areas of Lincoln County.

During the meeting, a summary sheet was presented in regard to the solid waste situation in the county and programs were presented by Waste Management, Dona Ana County, and Valencia County.

Two major factors in planning to transport solid waste out of the county are: (1) the present county landfill site on Fort Stanton mesa is probably usable until the end of October, based on the current rate of being filled; and (2) the Fort Stanton Hospital landfill will be available only until the end of October when it will become a private landfill for the hospital.

The county will study the amount of solid waste being generated in each area to help decide where to put transfer stations and a compactor.

Marijuana patch found in valley

Lincoln County Sheriff James McSwane reported officers found approximately 37 pounds of marijuana in the Hondo Valley Tuesday after executing a search warrant on property owned by Orlando Gutierrez of Phoenix.

McSwane said the marijuana plants were one to four feet tall and had been cultivated. Many of the plants were found in a pit eight feet wide and eight feet deep.

Sheriff's deputies were assisted by New Mexico State Police. McSwane said no arrests have been made at this time and the investigation continues.

Other sheriff department activities for the week include report of vandalism at Alto Golf Course on Aug. 4 and report of a burglary and larceny at a residence on Hol-

He also said, "We desperately need a smaller courtroom, approximating the size of the Ruidoso Municipal Court Complex." Judge Doughty and Judge Grisham have jury and non-jury trials in Carrizozo from time to time and other judges from throughout the state use the courtroom for cases in which they have been designated as the sitting judge.

Parsons also asked commissioners to "look at the carpet in the courtroom," and added, "It has done its share of duty over the past 25 years."

During a recent commission meeting county manager Nick Pappas said he was looking into the possibility of the county buying property for more courtroom space. The other matters referred to by Judge Parsons were not addressed.

County personnel began transfer of the files at 2 p.m. on Aug. 9. The files will be in the courtroom foyer.

An accident with injuries was reported two miles south of Carrizozo Aug. 5. at 7:57 a.m. State police investigated.

Aug. 5 at 11:03 p.m. officers responded to a call from the White Oaks Bar concerning four or five bar fights. No arrests were made. McSwane said most of the people had left the bar by the time officers arrived.

Aug. 6 at 12:25 a.m. an ambulance was dispatched to an accident with injuries at mile marker 5 on the White Oaks highway. Two people were transported to Lincoln County Medical Center in Ruidoso. State police investigated.

Deputies responded to the plane crash near Sierra Blanca Regional Airport Aug. 5.

2 injured in plane take-off

Two men were injured when the Cessna 172M they were in crashed while taking off from Sierra Blanca Regional Airport on Fort Stanton mesa Aug. 5 at 4:01 p.m.

All three men in the plane were transported to Lincoln County Medical Center for treatment and observation before being released.

Gary Hudman, 42, was piloting the plane with passengers Bily Smith, 36, and Melvin Gray, 47, all of San Angelo, T...

Cause of the crash is not known at this time. Tim Morris, SBRA manager, said information has been sent to FAA in Albuquerque and will be forwarded to the National Transportation Safety Board in Denver for study before a determination is made, probably in about six months.

The Lincoln County Sheriff's Posse and White Mountain Search and Rescue secured the plane until it was removed at 8 a.m. the next morning.

Airport road dedicated

Airport Scenic Drive, the new road to Sierra Blanca Regional Airport, was dedicated Aug. 4 with a ceremony at the airport.

Guest speakers were Lincoln County Commissioner Bob Hemphill, Pastor Jeannie Price, Ruidoso Mayor Lloyd Davis Jr., Lou Medrano from the state highway department, Buddy Bundick, president of Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County, and Ronnie Paulger, president of Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce.

"Song for New Mexico" was performed by Flying J Wranglers James Hobbs and fiddler Bart Trotter.

Former county commissioner W.A. Bill Hart and Medrano cut the ribbon across the road following the program. Hart was commissioner from 1974 through 1976 and helped start the paperwork for the airport.

Tim Morris, airport manager, conducted a tour of the airport and facilities. A luncheon followed the program and ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Investigation at Ruidoso Downs

Ruidoso Downs Village offices and the homes of two village employees were searched last week. The search warrants were approved by assistant district attorney Scot Key and signed by District Judge Richard Parsons.

According to the affidavit for search warrant, the Village of Ruidoso Downs, Mayor Jake Harris, Village Clerk Janice Polk, and Village employee Bobby Zamora are listed as defendants.

Apparently the items being searched for included a TV set, hot water heater, purchase vouchers, inventory list, telephone records, and the Village bylaws and procedure in purchasing and bidding.

An affidavit for the search warrant contained a statement of facts which included information about the hot water heater being purchased by the Village and being installed at Polk's home, and an electric heater purchased by the Village was taken to Polk's home with the implied consent of her employers.

The affidavit also contained information that the Village allowed a village employee to purchase a TV set and charge it to the Village and to make payments to the village until the TV set was paid off.

The affidavit also stated Polk made personal long distance telephone calls using the village telephones and the bills were subsequently paid by the village.

No charges have been filed and Key would not comment on the apparent investigation.

When contacted, Polk said all statements would be made through Ruidoso Downs Village attorney Richard Hawthorne. Hawthorne said he had nothing to add.

The Village council meets Monday. A statement may be made after the meeting.

Bill Richardson tests the water in Ruidoso

US Representative Bill Richardson was in Ruidoso Aug. 8 and 9 to meet with local people. Monday evening he met individually with people to discuss matters of interest and Tuesday morning he met with the public at a breakfast.

Two Fort Stanton Hospital and Training School employees met with the congressman Tuesday evening. Louis Padilla, from the Fort Stanton Medicaid certification office, and Greg Holguin, director of administrative services at Fort Stanton, asked Richardson for a statement or commitment concerning future operations at the hospital.

Richardson said he thinks the hospital should stay stable and said, "I am in favor of Fort Stanton and will try to help keep it open."

Richardson also said, "Just as a courtesy, I will discuss the matter with Congressman Joe Skeen and Governor Carruthers."

When asked why he was considering running for the office of governor, Richardson said, "I think I can make a difference if I do decide to run for the office." He said his major concerns were education, environment and drugs.

Boyd Barrett, storyteller

Noted author to hold seminar

"Chasing New Mexico History Around the Southwest" is the title of Leon Metz' weekend seminar to be held in Lincoln Aug. 25-27.

"Now" is the time to register for this glimpse into the true history of Southern New Mexico and Lincoln County. See the schedule of events at the end of this article.

Author-historian Leon Metz rides straight out of the pages of his seven books (The Shooters, Pat Garrett: Western Lawman, and others).

As a premier researcher and debunker of note, Metz brings the Old West in accurate focus. His lively style relates facts, sometimes gritty, sometimes humorous, but always with a historian's accuracy.

Dallas Morning News' Texanna Editor Bill Biffle wrote: "With his John Selman: Texas Gunfighter, Metz became the biographer of John Wesley Hardin's killer. And the definitive biography of Hardin will be written only when Metz writes it—soon he promises."

Leon's written and spoken stories range over the West like Remington's and Russell's paintings or a John Ford movie. In addition to his books, he writes for magazines, newspapers and historical journals. His three-part series, "Pancho Villa," is currently being scanned by several West Coast production companies.

Metz was born and educated in Parkersburg, WV and has lived in El Paso, TX since 1948 when he was a staff sergeant at Fort Bliss, which he later portrayed in his book Fort Bliss: An Illustrated History. He is past president of Western Writers of America and was honored by the organization in 1985 with the prestigious Saddleman Award for his over-all contributions to interest in western writing. He is probably the most sought after lecturer in the Southwest of gunfighters, western lore and the military. In 1987 he presented more than 150 of his programs to groups in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona—and as far away as New York.

Leon's workplaces have ranged from West Texas oil fields, to law enforcement, to the halls of higher learning as an archivist, assistant to the university president, aide to a large city mayor—all leading to his major role as a writing and speaking historian.

Register now by calling Ann Buffington at 653-4304 or Bob Hart at 653-4265.

Friday, Aug. 25, 7 p.m.—Registration and reception at Casa de Patron, Bed and Breakfast (the old Juan Patron home) in Lincoln. 8-10 p.m.—"Southern New Mexico History—An Overview" Casa de Patron courtyard.

Saturday, Aug. 26, 10 a.m. to noon—"The Military and the Indians of the Region", Fort Stanton. Afternoon—Free time. There will be a guided cemetery tour of Lincoln-area grave-sites. Or explore Lincoln on your own. 7-10 p.m.—"The Military and the Indians of the Region" continued, Lincoln County Heritage Trust courtyard.

MR. AND MRS. STEPHEN SCALES of Los Alamos announce the engagement of their daughter Gretchen Joanne to Gary Dean Lindsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley B. Lindsay of Carrizozo. SCHOOL HOURS

School will commence at 8:10 a.m. and be in session until 2:10 p.m. There will be some minor deviations in the length of the day at school to accommodate bus scheduling.

SCHOOL LUNCH PROGRAM

The Capitan Schools participate in the National School Lunch Program. Meals will be .90s for elementary students and $1.00 for high school students. Available in the Schools office are guidelines and applications for the FREE and REDUCED meals.

COMPUTER ASSISTED INSTRUCTION

Beginning this school year (1988-89), the Capitan Schools will implement an Integrated Learning System (24 Station Computer Lab) for all students in grades Kindergarten through Eighth. The primary emphasis will be in Reading, Math Skills and Concepts and Language Arts. There are thirty-seven separate courses available in this system. The following year, the Lab will be expanded to include students in the Ninth through Twelfth grades.

Some unique features of this System are: a CURRICULUM: 1) Includes continuum of curriculum covering math, reading, language arts, and computer education from primary to adult basic education levels; 2) Provides instruction appropriate for remedial, average, and gifted levels; 3) Includes programs specifically designed for early childhood education which match Kindergarten objectives for cognitive skills; 4) Aligns with State Competencies. INDIVIDUALIZATION: 1) Uses adaptive testing techniques for placement during the first 10 sessions; 2) Uses sophisticated techniques to determine appropriate sequence of instructional activities for students; 3) Uses pattern of responses and mathematical models to judge mastery rather than percentage correct; 4) Continually assesses each student's mastery level across a complete range of skills; 5) Based on that mastery assessment, moves the students forward or provides additional tutorial help, instructional review, or prerequisite skill practice as appropriate; 6) In each instructional session, adjusts proportion of exercises to emphasize skill areas in which the student is weak. INSTRUCTIONAL FEATURES: 1) Provides problem-solving environments in which students can experiment and explore solutions; 2) Integrates critical thinking skills in each course. Challenges the students to explore and apply concepts; 3) Integrates science applications in a comprehensive math course; 4) Incorporates specific teaching of problem-solving strategies in a comprehensive math course; 5) Provides speech utterance essential for instruction; 6) Uses speech in instructional significant ways - In directions and specific tutorial messages that respond to student errors; 7) Provides tutorials which appear at the instant a student makes an error and provide instruction specific to the error; 8) Includes a guided writing course which uses a word processor, spelling checker, and idea processor, as well as instructional components in the writing process; 9) Reports academic progress of each student at any time; 10) Pinpoints practice skills for each student in which they need instructional intervention; 11) Provides diagnosis and instruction in one integrated system with no separate testing required.

The Capitan Schools feel that with this learning system, it's balanced curriculum and it's excellent teaching staff, students will dramatically increase their achievement growth rate. Future plans call for terminals and modems to be checked out and students to work in evenings, weekends, and summers through a computer connecting into a home telephone jack.

OPINION

● YOU, as have many others, been touched by the plight of the homeless. This outpouring of compassion has reached a national "high" which may result in taxpayers being charged to house these homeless, itinerant bums who are a part of the coalition to demand and get what they want—all at somebody else's expense.

● JO Ann Garlington is a staff writer for the Santa Rosa (CA) Press Democrat. I hired her as a reporter for the Sebastopol (CA) Times following her graduation from journalism school. In the following article written by her she captures in essence, I believe, the utter depravity and irresponsibility of the homeless which I hope will be a lesson to all Americans. The story begins with the next paragraph:

Good Samaritan Judy Nielsen no longer describes herself as a bleeding heart. Today she and her husband, Bill, are shoveling debris, garbage and the ravaged remains of family mementos from the Gads Hill home they opened to two women and their children after hearing about the plight of the homeless on a television newscast.

The Nielsen's three-month struggle to reclaim their three-bedroom home in a middle-class neighborhood off West College Avenue ended Tuesday when they got legal possession of the remains of what had once been a comfortable home.

Nielsen fears her house is more likely to be condemned by the health department that fetch the $180,000 market-price most homes in the subdivision are bringing.

"It looks like a crack house," said Nielsen Friday as she stepped gingerly around beer bottles, broken furniture and piles of abandoned clothes. Rotting food, including gnawed corn cobs, littered the floors. Ants crawled over dirty dishes and take-out food cartons.

Everything of value, including bikes, skis, guns and ammo stored in a locked garage and attic, was stripped from the house. Even baseboards and heating vent covers were missing.

"I suspect most of it went to a flea market," said Nielsen. What remains is headed for the dump.

The nightmare for Nielsen, 48, a housewife and mother of three, began when she viewed a spring newscast, "I Want to Go Home."

The program told the plight of homeless families, including a woman then sheltered at Cross Roads, a now-defunct Santa Rosa Avenue shelter operated by the Vietnam Veterans of California.

After shedding tears for those less fortunate than her family, Nielsen picked up the phone and called Cross Roads. She said she could rent a portion of her house at reduced rent to a "nice woman with a child."

Cross Roads sent Della Pereira, the woman interviewed in the newscast.

The west Santa Rosa home was then occupied part-time by the Nielsen's 25-year-old daughter, Beth, and used to store many of the family's little used but treasured possessions accumulated over a 27-year marriage.

Four years ago, the Nielsen's moved into a new home on Santa Rosa's east side. They kept the house for their daughter, whom Nielsen describes as borderline retarded. Because the daughter was often out of town, Nielsen thought it a good idea to rent part of the 1,450-square-foot house to someone in need.

When Pereira told a heart-wrenching story about trying to get back on her feet, Nielsen had no doubts about her mission to help.

"I've always been a bleeding heart," said Nielsen, a former foster mother.

Pereira and her 9-year-old son were no sooner in the house than she said she had a friend also in need of shelter. Judy Sonnenfelt was eager to share the house.

Nielsen said OK to Sonnenfelt after hearing her compelling story of trying to straighten out her life. Each woman was charged $300 a month rent with no last-month payment or deposit required. The house would normally rent for about $1,000.

A month later, without permission from the Nielsen's, Cheryl Lindsay moved into the house.

Nielsen said the three women and their children weren't the only ones who lived in the house. But they were the only ones Nielsen knew by name or who agreed to pay rent.

Nielsen said her daughter, who was supposed to continue living in the house, was locked out by the tenants after spending only two days there after it was rented.

Beth alerted her mother that the tenants weren't the needy people her mother sought to help.

Nielsen remembers getting mad at Beth when she first reported her suspicions.

"I told Beth she had too much (material luxuries) and these people were needy."

By Jay Miller

ALAMOGORDO—There is talk down here in the South that the Victoria Peak gold hunt is just about to resume.

Rumors have it that the Department of the Army has notified Norman Scott, head of Expeditions Unlimited, that it is ready to start negotiating the cost of the infrastructure it will need to provide in order to open part of the White Sands Missile Range for one, last, definitive, year-long search for treasure trove.

Scott has been hired by the Ova Noss Family Partnership to lead the hunt for the fortune in gold bars that late Milton E. "Doc" Noss says he found in a cavern below Victoria Peak in the San Andreas mountains of southwestern New Mexico nearly 50 years ago.

U.S. Rep. Joe Skeen, who represents the Southern New Mexico congressional district in which all the excitement is taking place, has attached an amendment to the National Defense Authorization Act, directing the Army to allow the search, requiring payment for all services provided by the Army and permitting White Sands Missile Range to receive direct payments from the Noss Partnership. It was the last item that has stalled negotiations for years. Normally reimbursement payments would go into the U.S. treasury. The federal government red tape involved in ever getting credit for their expenses has discouraged

WSMR officials from ever allowing the search.

Otherwise, White Sands and the Army have no objection to the expedition. They would love to have the legend put to rest one way or the other.

The legend got its start in the early 1940s when Noss reportedly showed his wife and a few friends a crude bar containing gold. He said there were thousands more where that came from. The lure of treasure made it easy for others to embellish the story from there.

Some said the gold was hidden there by the Aztecs when Spanish explorer Hernando Cortes was pillaging their vaults of gold and precious jewels. There are dozens of stories of Spanish priests hiding gold in New Mexico so it wouldn't have to be sent back to Spain. There are stories of gold miners from the 1850s on, hiding their gold in the peak. Others say that when Maximilian became emperor of Mexico following his coup in the 1860s, he shipped the gold north to be hidden from the Mexicans. Some say Confederate officers hid the money there at the end of the Civil War to finance the second rise of the South. And there are stories that Victoria, himself, the fabled Apache chief, melted down gold items he had stolen from the interlopers on his land and hid them there in the late 1870s. Or maybe it was Geronimo, who was also known to have frequented the area.

Doc Noss probably didn't invent many of these stories since he wasn't known for being much of a historian. Doc was mainly a hustler. According to local legend, he sold quite a few shares in his gold find until he was finally shot by a disgruntled investor in the late 1940s.

But there are always those who are eager to add their own creativity to a legend and thus perpetuate it a little longer.

This legend gained enough credence over the years that big names like New Mexico Attorney General David Norvell, high-powered attorney F. Lee Bailey and Stanford University got involved in a search effort in the early 1970s. The time was too short for searchers to find any more than the cavern on that expedition.

This treasure hunt will have a full year if all goes as planned. It will concentrate deeper under the main peak and will use sophisticated electronic sensing equipment developed by Stanford University. The Army hopes it will be the last search because they are tired of chasing people away from the waste recovery zone. There has also been talk of a renewed effort to search for the gold.

INCREASED ACTIVITY AT HOLLOWAN AFB

There will be an increase in flying activity in the Hollowan Air Force Base area beginning Aug. 18 and continuing through Aug. 25. The heavier load and activity is attributed to a variety of reasons and will include both day and night flights.

Opinion . . . (Cont'd from opposite column)

accusations were correct came in mid-May when she came to the house for the first time to collect the rent. When the rent was not forthcoming and she saw numerous illegal tenants and viewed some of the damage being done to the house, she began eviction proceedings.

"I did everything wrong," said Nielsen. "I have never rented a house before and didn't know what to do." After making several mistakes in the eviction process, Nielsen finally got to court only to hear a judge reduce the amount of back rent owed.

The judge also gave Sonnenfelt and Lindsay an additional three days rent-free in the house. Pereira did not make a court appearance.

Pereira, Sonnenfelt and Lindsay could not be reached to comment on this story.

Although the tenants were legally evicted Tuesday, people have been re-entering the house each night, said Nielsen.

"I changed the locks, but they still got in," said Nielsen. When she entered the house Friday she found the stove on and a pan of soup in the refrigerator. The back sliding door was open.

"I don't go in there alone," said Nielsen, who is afraid for her safety and that of her family.

"They threatened to torch this house and the house I live in," she said. "They've threatened to bomb my car."

Nielsen filed a complaint with the Santa Rosa Police Department. "Police will follow up on the grand theft complaint," said Lt. Rodney Sverko.

Nielsen estimates that at least $10,000 in property was stolen. "It may take another $10,000 to restore the house," she said. "We'll have to take out a loan to do this," she said. Once the house is presentable, Nielsen said it will be sold. She wants no part of renting it and is afraid for Beth to live in the house again.

● THE rest of the story is that Ms. Pereira got free legal advice and representation in court. When the owners went to inspect the house, they were refused admittance by these nice people. It appeared that Pereira, at suggestion of her attorney, got the court to issue an order to keep the owners out of the house. What was not reported in the press is the fact that when the Nielsen's asked the bums to leave the house, Pereira demanded $3,000 to move out. They refused. Payment of the backmail would have been a good investment considering that putting the house back together will cost the owners about $20,000.

STRENOUS HANDSHAKE

Last month a Dixon, NM man said an assistant district attorney shook hands with him too strenuously and asked the court to determine damages from the overly firm handshake.

The suit says the man immediately cried out in pain and grabbed at his right shoulder and elbow. In the first count the man alleges battery by the violent pulling of the plaintiff's hand. On the second count of negligence, the man claims that the assistant DA had a legal duty to shake hand in a manner such as not to injure. He breached that duty, the suit claims, by "yanking the plaintiff forward and clasping the plaintiff's hand too firmly."

The defendant was not aware that the plaintiff suffered from a prior injury to his back and at the time of the handshake was wearing a back brace beneath his shirt.

THREATENED TO SUE

Did you hear about the controversy between Warner Brothers and Groucho Marx concerning a movie title? The company threatened to sue over "A Night in Casablanca," a Marx Brothers film which Warner Brothers claimed could be confused with its own "Casablanca." Groucho Marx, as always had a reply: "I'll sue you for using the word 'Brothers'."

FINANCIAL SCANDALS

The groom wore black and white and looked pale. His bride wore the traditional white.

Former Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu, 70, and Dimitra Liani, 38, were married last month in Athens. They planned to honeymoon on the island of Cephalonia, where the groom would recuperate from pneumonia.

The bride's public affair before the wedding helped bring down the defendant's suit.

of financial scandals in the administration headed by Papandreu for eight years.

MARKETING OPPORTUNITY

Hugh Hefner finally tied the knot, and you'll never guess what the bride wore. Clothes.

Jeers instead of cheers were addressed to the famous 63-year-old bachelor when he wed Kimberley Conrad, a 26-year-old playmate. TV Guide's Insider section gave Hugh the jeers sign because he packaged the ceremony as a television program that viewers paid to see on the Playboy service.

By turning the wedding into a marketing opportunity for his company, Hugh makes a sham of the concept of marriage, TV Guide says.

COPS ON BIKES

Seattle has found that its pedal-pushing patrol has become quite the urban crime fighter.

Wheeling 18-speed mountain bikes into parks, doorways, narrow alleys and under viaducts, Seattle's squad of 20 bike officers have averaged five times the number of arrests made by downtown foot patrols over the past two years.

Criminals still aren't used to the cops on bikes whipping around the corner and taking drugs right out of their hands. They look around and don't see a patrolman, car or horse. Wheeling and dealing has a new twist.

NEW CITATION FORMS

Espanola city police have ordered 5,000 uniform citation forms now required by the state motor vehicle department. In adopting the forms, city police will be in sync with police departments statewide, all of whom will be using identical ones, designed to cut paperwork and reduce confusion.

The new forms will make life easier for officers issuing traffic citations.

for all offenses rather than one for each violation. Across the top are listed the six most common traffic violation, including speeding, failure to use seatbelts, or lack of insurance. There also are blank spaces underneath for the officer to fill in other offenses if necessary.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

A Pittsburgh judge has ruled that a horse is not a motor vehicle. The ruling comes in the case of a man charged with driving under the influence and not having lights on a motor vehicle. The "vehicle" the man was driving was an Arabian Appaloosa.

Ron Nestor of suburban Pittsburgh was charged after the horse he was riding was hit by a pickup truck. The horse died.

Nestor was charged with drunk driving; the no headlights charge followed. The judge threw the case out of court.

He ruled Nestor could not be charged with driving a horse while under the influence and without lights because the animal is not a motor vehicle.

The district attorney's office for violation of federal and state anti-cruelty laws should step in and take over where the judge left off.

Old Lincoln Days draws record crowd

By Rosalie Dunlap

Old Lincoln Town saw more people in town than ever before with the estimate being over 6,000 people, making it the largest attendance to date.

Visitors had their choice of food vendors, arts and crafts booths and stands, watching the spinners and weavers, blacksmithing, and visiting with old friends and making new ones.

The State Monuments and the Lincoln County Heritage Trust had all their museums and buildings open. Boyd Barrett presented his one-man show at the visitor center, the Texas 4th Army Cavalry and the New Mexico Territorial Militia had their exhibits and demonstrations.

The 4th Cavalry had their sabers, pistols and close order drills, canon firing and orientation classes on uniforms, care of horses and equipment.

The cavalry bivouaced in front of the convento and their drills were held on the west side and back of the San Juan Church. Down the street was the New Mexico Territorial Militia around the Montano Store. The Mountain Men held their muzzle-loading and black powder shoots, and the knife-throwing and tomahawk throws in this area.

On Saturday afternoon the Danza Matchin Pavo Real Dancers of Clint, TX performed on grounds west of the church. Further east were more food booths, beverage booths, shops, and a garage sale. At the La Placita, Janice Gnatkowski and Bessie Jones were weaving and spinning on the porch.

On the lawn of the Dr. Woods residence, Todd Robinson was showing a 12-minute video of his documentary of Billy the Kid, and Jack and Vera Forrester were whittling, blacksmithing and knitting. The La Paloma complex was busy with arts and crafts.

Everyone enjoys a parade and the one this year did not disappoint anyone. Included in the parade were flag bearers Peg Pfingsten and Dan (Buckshot Roberts) Storm, queens, sheriffs, wagens of all kinds, people in costumes, antique cars, and lots of horses.

The performance of "The Last Escape of Billy the Kid" also had a record attendance. There were a lot of new and young cast members. An added attraction this year was Laura Amastae doing the Mexican dance "La Negra" from the state of Jalisco, Mexico. The Artesia square dancers performed before the performance Saturday and also participated in the fiesta scene. Neil Waters returned from California to play the part of Frank Coe. Billy Shrecengost played Billy the Kid with his son Thomas as John Tunstall. Bill Wise, Carrizozo, did the live music on a keyboard for the can-can girls as well as playing the part of Mr. McSween. Mrs. McSween was Katherine Sanchez. And the favorite was Dan Storm's portrayal of "Buckshot Roberts."

Dave Parks was narrator again, with Jon Amastae, Ralph Dunlap, Beverly Hammond, Wayne and Marilyn Ward, Betty Shrecengost, Jon Amastae, and the children who did the children voices. We had new voices also. Casey Ward and Patricia Coleman handled the spotlights and Rosalie Dunlap the light director. Diane Shrecengost was director of the pageant.

There were more parade entries this year than there has been for several years. There were more categories than there were trophies, and next year the pageant group hopes to have more trophies.

The winners were best man rider, member of the Broken Wing Gang; best woman rider, member of the Broken Wing Gang; best children's entry, pony and cart with Shana and Shiella Crandall and Shawna Shrecengost; best antique car, Ken Gorman, Roswell; best wagon, 7E of Hoof and Wheels group of Carlsbad; float, American Legion Auxiliary of Captain; single entry, the Texas 4th Army Cavalry of Lubbock, TX; best mounted group, Texas 4th Army Cavalry; best frontier

The fiddler contest winners were: under 21, Coye Robbins, Capitan; 21 to 65, Cindy Maroon, Capitan; over 65, Alva Parker, Portales, 1st, Smiley Mauldin, 2nd; and John F. Wolf, Crossroads, and Gene Brown, Roswell, tied for 3rd.

FFA plans activities

Carrizozo FFA alumni and supporters will meet at 6:30 p.m., Aug. 14 in the vo ag classroom.

Items to be discussed include financial planning for the 1989-90 school year for the county fair, national FFA convention, and judging contest, scholarship and reorganization of funds, officer elections, selection of vocational advisory committee for 89-90, alumni activities, review of tentative curriculum, and a tour of the wood-working shop.

WSMR officials from ever allowing the search.

Otherwise, White Sands and the Army have no objection to the expedition. They would love to have the legend put to rest one way or the other.

The legend got its start in the early 1940s when Noss reportedly showed his wife and a few friends a crude bar containing gold. He said there were thousands more where that came from. The lure of treasure made it easy for others to embellish the story from there.

Some said the gold was hidden there by the Aztecs when Spanish explorer Hernando Cortes was pillaging their vaults of gold and precious jewels. There are dozens of stories of Spanish priests hiding gold in New Mexico so it wouldn't have to be sent back to Spain. There are stories of gold miners from the 1850s on, hiding their gold in the peak. Others say that when Maximilian became emperor of Mexico following his coup in the 1860s, he shipped the gold north to be hidden from the Mexicans. Some say Confederate officers hid the money there at the end of the Civil War to finance the second rise of the South. And there are stories that Victorio, himself, the fabled Apache chief, melted down gold items he had stolen from the interlopers on his land and hid them there in the late 1870s. Or maybe it was Geronimo, who was also known to have frequented the area.

Doc Noss probably didn't invent many of these stories since he wasn't known for being much of a historian. Doc was mainly a hustler. According to local legend, he sold quite a few shares in his gold find until he was finally shot by a disgruntled investor in the late 1940s.

But there are always those who are eager to add their own creativity to a legend and thus perpetuate it a little longer.

This legend gained enough credence over the years that big names like New Mexico Attorney General David Norvell, high-powered attorney F. Lee Bailey and Stanford University got involved in a search effort in the early 1970s. The time was too short for searchers to find any more than the cavern on that expedition.

This treasure hunt will have a full year if all goes as planned. It will concentrate deeper under the small peak and will use sophisticated electronic sensing equipment developed by Stanford University. The Army hopes it will be the last search because they are tired of sending people away from the Nevada recovery area. They are also fed up with being accused of having purposes. In the unlikely event anything is found, it will be deposited with the U.S. District Court in Albuquerque until a determination is made about how to split the findings. Obviously, the State of New Mexico would get its share. It probably isn't quite time for lawmakers to start deciding how to spend it just yet, however.

STRENOUS HANDSHAKE

Last month a Dixon, NM man said an assistant district attorney shook hands with him too strenuously and asked the court to determine damages from the overly firm handshake.

The suit says the man immediately cried out in pain and grabbed at his right shoulder and elbow. In the first count the man alleges battery by the violent pulling of the plaintiff's hand. On the second count of negligence, the man claims that the assistant DA had a legal duty to shake hand in a manner such as not to injure. He breached that duty, the suit claims, by "yanking the plaintiff forward and clapping the plaintiff's hand too firmly."

The defendant was not aware that the plaintiff suffered from a prior injury to his back and at the time of the handshake was wearing a back brace beneath his shirt.

THREATENED TO SUE

Did you hear about the controversy between Warner Brothers and Groucho Marx concerning a movie title? The company threatened to sue over "A Night in Casablanca" a Marx Brothers film which Warner Brothers claimed could be confused with its own "Casablanca." Groucho Marx, as always had a reply: "I'll sue you for using the word 'Brothers'."

FINANCIAL SCANDALS

The groom wore black and white and looked pale. His bride wore the traditional white. Former Prime Minister Andreas Papanicolaou, 70, and Dimitra Liant, 38, were married last month in Athens. They planned to honeymoon on the island of Cephalonia, where the groom could recuperate from pneumonia.

The pair's public affair before the wedding helped bring attention to the fact accusations were correct came in mid-May when she came to the house for the first time to collect the rent.

When the rent was not forthcoming and she saw numerous illegal tenants and viewed some of the damage being done to the house, she began eviction proceedings.

"I did everything wrong," said Nielsen. "I have never rented a house before and didn't know what to do."

After making several mistakes in the eviction process, Nielsen finally got to court only to hear a judge reduce the amount of back rent owed.

The judge also gave Sonnenfelt and Lindsay an additional three days rent-free in the house. Pereira did not make a court appearance.

Pereira, Sonnenfelt and Lindsay could not be reached to comment on this story.

Although the tenants were legally evicted Tuesday, people have been re-entering the house each night, said Nielsen.

"I changed the locks, but they still get in," said Nielsen. When she entered the house Friday she found the stove on and a pan of soup in the refrigerator. The back sliding door was open.

"I don't go in there alone," said Nielsen, who is afraid for her safety and that of her family.

"They threatened to torch this house and the house I live in," she said. "They've threatened to bomb my car."

Nielsen filed a complaint with the Santa Rosa Police Department. "Police will follow up on the grand theft complaint," said Lt. Rodney Sverko.

Nielsen estimates that at least $10,000 in property was stolen. "It may take months to get it back," she said.
