Cyanide contamination found at Cimarron Mill site, EPA says

By Doris Cherry

Poor management practices at the Cimarron Mill near Carrizozo were the main reason for cyanide contamination of a shallow water table under the mill site, explained an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) representative to a group of concerned Carrizozo citizens.

At a workshop conducted at Carrizozo Town Hall Monday, EPA site manager Paul Seminski said samples taken from a monitoring well on the site indicate heavy contamination. Off-site wells, which were drilled at deeper levels, have not been impacted and show no presence of cyanide. Soil and surface water run-off and air were not found to be contaminated at levels above health based criteria.

The group also was informed that another mill site in the Carrizozo area, known as Sierra Blanca, was owned by the same persons who operated the Cimarron Mill. The Sierra Blanca mill and acreage now is owned by the town of Carrizozo, which bought the land because of its location over highly productive wells and springs. Those aquifers are not used for the town's drinking supplies, however.

The Sierra Blanca site did not appear to have any cyanide contamination, however.

Seminski was not sure of what type of process was employed at Sierra Blanca, but preliminary testing has shown heavy metal residues. The same owners, Paul McBride and Bill Thomas, left the Cimarron Mill site and moved to the Sierra Blanca site following a reported cyanide spill in 1982.

"This correspondence led us to include the Sierra Blanca in our investigation," Seminski said.

Representatives from Camp Dresser & McKee, environmental engineering firm from Austin, TX, Hunter Nolen and Jeff Saunders, who were involved with the remedial investigation from August to November 1989, answered technical questions about the testing. Nolen displayed a map of the site which showed well locations and correlated the locations to the amount of cyanide contamination found in the samples taken in each.

An update sheet distributed that night stated onsite monitoring wells in the shallow ground water zone were found to be heavily contaminated, with up to 4,330 parts per billion (ppb). The high number was found in one well, located next to some trenches used in the process to extract gold. That process uses cyanide. The trenches were found to be leaky by investigation crews.

Nolen said two areas on the site which were in contact with the cyanide solutions were of the greatest concern for the crews.

The high level of contamination was found in a sample taken in November 1989, following a sample taken the month before that indicated levels at 110 ppb. The same test well showed samples ranging from 360 ppb. from a test taken in 1987, to 1970 ppb. from a test taken in the same month in 1987. A test taken in July, 1989, showed 2840 ppb. from the same well. Nolen could not say what caused the discrepancy in the samples. The low count was a reason another test was made at the same well. The well was drilled to 50 feet.

Only minimal cyanide contamination, 24 ppb., was found in the deeper, primary drinking water zone. The Safe Drinking Water Act criteria sets unsafe levels at anything above 200 ppb.

Certain soils at the site also were found to have cyanide contamination, mostly those in holding tanks used for the gold process.

EPA will begin the next step in the Superfund process, the feasibility study which will evaluate the possible alternatives for addressing the contamination problems at Cimarron. Seminski said Monday one possible solution will be to pump water out of the shallow water level and treat it.

Carrizozo resident Hal Sims asked if the contamination would be cleared within a year. Seminski said it would take a year to pump and treat the water, but the clean up process, which includes a feasibility study and public comment, will take another year to complete.

Sims said it would be cheaper than the $300,000 spent to use a bottle of Clorox to oxidize the cyanide.

Nolen said treating the water by adding chlorine to the well would not reach all the water in the layer because of the low permeability. The well produces water at about two gallons a minute.

"It doesn't seem to be a very big problem here," Sims said. Seminski replied the continuation will be easy to contain and will not be a 10-20 year process.

Many of those present were concerned about the economic impact to the town because of the current Cimarron site and the Sierra Blanca site. Scott Shafer asked about contamination of the equipment. Seminski said all equipment will have to be decontaminated with either a steam-cleaning process or by rinsing, collecting the water and allowing it to evaporate in the catch basins.

Cimarron Mining was used as a metal recovery mill using a solution of cyanide salt and metal stripper from 1979 to 1982. Before 1979, gold was extracted using cyanide. It was operated by Southwest Minerals Com-

New garbage pickup to begin April 1

Carrizozo town council approved the draft contract with Southwest Disposal Corporation for garbage collection beginning April 1, at its meeting Tuesday.

Although the council approved the contract, some questions about wording in the document were asked.

But town attorney Robert Beauvais, who drafted the contract, was not at the meeting. Which left trustees wondering if they should approve the contract as it was written or get Southwest Disposal Corp. (SDC) to agree to provide services without a contract.

"Our attorney wrote one hell of a contract for them (SDC)," trustee Harold Garcia said.

Mayor Cecilia Kuhnle agreed a number of paragraphs needed definition.

One point questioned was whether the contract was renewable, at current rates, after five years. Garcia wanted to protect the town from year-to-year changes in the contract but wanted to hold SDC to its prices for five years. After the five years, Garcia said the contract should be considered "dead."

Garcia directed town clerk Carol Schlarb to contact SDC about the wording changes and to see if the company will begin its services work without total contract approval.

After the discussion, trustees approved contracting with SDC but withholding total approval until the questionable wording is changed.

Beginning April 1, SDC will begin collection of Carrizozo solid waste. Residential poly carts are at most homes now, as well as the carts from Waste Control, Inc. The reason for both carts being present is to avoid any delay in garbage collection, the trustees said.

After the final pickup next week by Waste Control, the brown carts will be removed.

Residential garbage collection by SDC will cost $9 a month. Additional carts can be ordered for residents at $6 more a month. Commercial dumpsters—two yards, will cost $24 a month for a once a week pick up and $43 for twice a week. Three-yard dumpsters will cost $36 for once a week and $65 a month for twice a week.

SDC plans to have an office in Carrizozo to handle problems. Billings will continue to be made at town hall, Schlarb said.

The council also learned the 35-year-old pump finally quit and town water foreman Faustino Gallegos said it will cost about $8,427 to have it repaired, replaced and a meter required by the state installed. Wesley Weehunt of Tularosa was contacted for the emergency well repairs. Gallegos said the filter plant is being operated until late at night right now to keep up with water demands, because the small pump produces water at half the rate of the old one.

He urged trustees approve the emergency repair funds because Bonito Lake, a source of water when the pump is not operable, "turns over" causing the water to become dirty and hard to filter.

Kuhnle questioned if the town needed a contract with Weehunt to keep from getting charged more than the quoted price. Gallegos said Weehunt had the pump out and knew what needed repair and did not anticipate additional costs.

"Look how long it takes to make a contract," Garcia said.

The trustees approved taking from the water project funds to repair the pump as soon as possible. The repairs are expected to be completed by the end of next week.

Another item concerning water was the sale of water to Jones Construction Company. Before the pump went out, the town was selling water to Jones $5 for 1000 gallons, from drinking water supplies. However, Gallegos suggested Jones take the water from the golf course well after the pump went out.

Jones then put a pump into the golf course pond ran a pipe with a meter on it to the street next to the park.

County commissioners

Packed audience debates county landfill problem

Lincoln County Wars nearly flared again in the Lincoln County Commissioners chambers Monday during a hearing to approve Ordinance 1990-1.

But despite verbal bullets shot from different sides, commissioners approved Ordinance 90-1, regulating refuse and solid waste and creating a permitting process for proposed landfills.

Factions for restrictive regulations for landfills in Lincoln County, as defined in the ordinance, emotionally upheld the requests for such limits as 250 feet from the bottom of a landfill pit to groundwater. While the other side, including Kenneth Nosker, who is in the process of permitting a landfill on his property in Glencoe, said all the restrictive regulations would eliminate any site in Lincoln County.

The three-hour hearing for Ordinance 1990-1 was filled with emotional appeals from Hondo Valley residents who considered the situation a test case. Jan Tracy said the reason for the ordinance is to protect vulnerable areas, where the beauty is the only thing that attracts tourists to the area. "Tourists are our trade on Highway 70," she said.

Dave Bollschweiler of Bollschweiler Engineering in Las Cruces, who was doing the required testing at the Nosker site for the state permitting process, said the county is "drawing a circle around yourself," with the regulations. Any solution to the solid waste problem will not be cheap, he added.

Nosker then referred to the high costs of regional landfill concept studies, and said transporting any county garbage to a regionalized site would increase collection rates. A raise which will send people to future commissioners complaining of the high costs of collection, Nosker predicted.

Mike Hurd, San Patricio, supported the ordinance and said hidden costs will be in the mistakes which will result in the county paying higher costs in the form of contamination later on for garbage disposed of cheaply in local landfills.

Gary McCaslin from the Roswell Environmental Improvement Division (EID) office said no one town, or government entity involved in the regional landfill will have the say on how fees will be charged, rather all participants will be involved.

Part owner of the Coe Ranch in the Hondo Valley, Robert Trimble, said the decision of whether one site is good or bad is not the issue, rather "are we going to control our own destiny."

"Our water is important to us, more important than anything in this county. We can never replace the river, a gift of God," Trimble said. Others agreed with Trimble that the community should not take a chance on contaminating its water.

Boschweiller and Nosker challenged the two-mile limit to any flowing streams in the landfill regulations. "What about the sewage from the Ruidoso Treatment plant," Boscheiller asked. Ruidoso was fined by the Environmental Protection Agency for dumping raw sewage into Rio Ruidoso.

One resident told how he had caught a two-pound native brown trout in the river Nosker referred to and said to stop polluting now.

Commission Chairman Karon Petty at one point offered to trade county land which does not fall in the two-mile limit to rivers for the land Nosker proposes for a landfill.

Nosker was suspicious and asked Petty if, as a realtor, she would make anything in the exchange.

"There are alternatives," she said. "If you're uncomfortable with me voting, I'll refrain."

After more than three hours of debate over the emotional issues, Tracy said the majority of the Hondo Valley residents did not favor the Nosker landfill and encouraged the commissioners to be "ruthless, objective and unselfish."

George Mehdoza Jr., whose father owns a restaurant in the valley and lives next to Nosker, said the group was losing sight of what the commissioners were doing—establishing a source point of origin document. "Those fighting each other are the ones who most care (about the valley)."

After some more discussion, and revisions to the document, commissioners approved the ordinance. But it was not a unanimous vote, Petty and Hemphill voted in favor and Rick Simpson against. Simpson had favored deleting the grandfather clause which will allow any permitted or registered landfills already operating in the county to continue. He considered the time when the state closed the county landfill and left the county without a place to dump its garbage. "We were not grandfathered then," he said.

The ordinance provides for definitions of garbage, refuse, solid waste and so on; allows for police enforcement of any violations found in the county; defines regulations for a landfill permit (only after a permit is obtained from the state EID) and penalties. Certain amendments, such as allowing agricultural wastes to be buried on the property owners land, were added on request.

Copies of the ordinance are available at the county manager's office in Carrizozo.

Before the commissioners came to the controversial Ordinance 90-1, they considered another controversial request—additional space for the district judge offices.

District Judge Richard A. Parsons has asked the commissioners for additional space since last year. Nothing was physically done, but recently commissioners offered the room at the end of the county building which houses the assessor's office. That room is occupied by appraiser Paul Baca and another appraiser. The commissioners did not want to give up the entire end unit and take away County Assessor Julia Samora's office.

Judge Parsons and District Judge Robert Doughty both appealed to commissioners Monday to give up the entire space for offices for the judge and his secretary and a witness conference room. Judge Parsons said the need for separate witness rooms is very vital and told of a situation where an irate witness pulled a gun. Both judges considered moving into the end rooms as a "Bandaid," temporary solution.

After hearing the judges' arguments and hearing from Samora, who was not happy about being moved into the already crowded assessor's quarters, commissioners approved letting the judge have the large end room and the small room, now used as a coffee storage room, by June 1. The offices will have to be remodeled to accommodate the judge's needs.

Since the space is a temporary measure, Lincoln County will be faced with considering a major building project to accommodate the district court needs in the future.

In other business, the commissioners:

—okayed the request for bids for six bleacher units for the Lincoln County Fairgrounds be advertised, with a clause that states "subject to funding." The funds for the units will come from the $75,000 appropriated by the special state legislative session. The governor has until April 8 to veto.

—approved the lease agreement with New Horizons Developmental Center in Carrizozo.

—agreed to advertise for requests for proposals for auditing services since the county has contracted with Don Wingfield for the last four years.

—signed a certificate of appreciation to Kathleen Williams for her numerous hours with EMT training.

—appointed Bill Elliott to fill the vacancy on the Planning and Zoning commission created by the resignation of Lamoyne Carpenter.

—signed a cooperative agreement for road repair with the US Forest Service and the City of Alamogordo for the Bonito Lake road. Simpson was not pleased that Alamogordo only offered $3000 as its share, rather than the $5000 previous agreed to. Since the tourist season to the lake begins soon, Simpson okayed the agreement to get the work done.

—tabled a resolution creating a transportation district in Lincoln County which will allow the sale of bonds for the Ironhorse Railroad. Inc. The Ironhorse group proposes a narrow-gauge steam railroad. Hemphill expressed concerns, that were expressed to him, that such a district would allow Ruidoso to move the county seat from Carrizozo, and other questions about the authority's power. Although the group did not think such a scenic railroad would qualify that, the commissioners agreed to invite state transportation officials to talk at the next county meeting.

"laughable small amount" of cyanide contamination did not warrant EPA notice. But he wanted the EPA to solve the problem in order to free up the land for something other than monitoring.

Seminski said the overall goal of the EPA is to protect the environment and safety of citizens, especially since there is a potential for a threat to the drinking water.

Representatives from the New Mexico Bureau of Mines questioned why the EPA was so long in responding to the problem, if the risk is so great, since the cyanide contamination was known for six or eight years.

In response to Carrizozo mayor Cecilia Kuhnel's question of how long the tests will take at the Sierra Blanca site, Seminski said about six weeks, beginning in May. He assured Kuhnel the town will not be held liable for any testing or clean-up costs at Sierra Blanca because the town bought the land not knowing of the previous operations and is considered to be an innocent landowner by EPA.

EPA will pay for testing and remedial action at both Carrizozo and Sierra Blanca, Seminski added. However, the state of New Mexico, from an EID fund, will have to pay a 10 percent match for the remedial action.

EPA has the authority to enter the Sierra Blanca site, Seminski answered to a question about whether EPA has to have cooperation with the town to do so. He said former trustee Albert Baca had requested EPA investigate the site for the town. Any results from the testing will not hold up the Carrizozo remedial process, Seminski said.

A formal report from Camp Dresser McKee will be available at town hall some time in May. The report first must be approved by the EPA.

Also Monday, Saunders requested anyone with information about the Sierra Blanca mill to inform the EPA.

Patricia Serna announces candidacy for tax assessor

Patricia A. Serna, presently chief deputy tax assessor, is announcing her candidacy for Lincoln County Tax Assessor on the Republican ticket.

Serna is a lifelong resident of Lincoln County and is a graduate of Carrizozo High School. She is the daughter of Alex M. Serna and the late Adelina C. Serna.

Serna has worked 19 years for Lincoln County, one year in the treasurer's office and 18 years with the county tax assessor's office. She was deputy assessor and computer supervisor for her department prior to being promoted to chief deputy tax assessor in February, 1989.

Serna has been trained in many specific aspects related to duties of county tax assessor. She has attended two computer seminars in Dallas, TX, one for computer operator and the other for computer programming.

Serna is a member of the National Federation of Republican Women, Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce, First Monday (Republican), New Mexico Association of Assessing Officers, and St. Rita Catholic Church.

"If elected, I will continue to serve the people in a professional, equal, fair and courteous manner and will seek ways to make the office more efficient in all aspects," she said.

New garbage . . .

The water at the golf course is not drinkable.

Jones' needs will result in more than $300 a day for the town, trustee Dale LaMay predicted. He suggested Gallegos monitor the meters for an accurate charge.

Garcia asked if any problems might come from the Game and Fish Dept. which has an agreement with the town to stock fish in the golf course lake. It was agreed the fish might have a better environment if the water is more aerated by drawing water and filling with the golf course wells.

Trustees approved the sale of non-potable water at the golf course lake to Jones at $5 per 1000 gallons, with Jones responsible for metering and making sure the water supplies for the golf course are not affected.

LaMay suggested any funds earned be returned to the golf course.

A late minute bit of business was brought up when Judge S.M. Ortiz requested the trustees consider his position as personnel director. Ortiz said trustees did not reappoint him, and as a result he has not received the extra compensation for those duties.

Garcia agreed the trustees have not appointed the personnel director's position and that the town has not paid for such duties in the last month.

"We want you to continue in the office, we just don't want to pay you," Garcia said.

At that point, Mayor Kuhnel called for approval of the closed session for personnel as on the agenda.

The trustees were in closed session from 7:22 to 8:50 p.m. When they returned they took no action on the closed session discussion. However, they agreed to delay discussion about Ortiz's request until they could talk with the town attorney.

In other business, the council:

—approved the former Airport Committee.

—approved five business registrations.

—heard from audience members about problems with "fly-by-night" companies who come through town offering services. A Carrizozo resident recently questioned such a person about his business credentials and found the man had none. The resident waded signs put at the ends of town informing such people they are legally required to have a business registration to do business in the town of Carrizozo.

Kuhnel said the town seems to have a rash of such business people in the spring and the town needs to take measure to deal with them.

Schlarb suggested anyone approached by a questionable business person to contact town hall. Police Chief Choncho Morales will be dispatched to investigate.

Garcia said it was worth looking into putting up signs.

—heard trustee Gilbert Archuleta congratulate Chief Morales for his job with investigating and giving citations to a person found damaging property at the Evergreen Cemetery.

—discussed the rumors about Ruidoso trying to take the county seat away from Carrizozo. Resident Joan Means said discussion at the Lincoln County Commissioners meeting Monday about formation of a transportation district in the Ruidoso area led to the rumors. She said it was agreed at the county meeting the district would not have authority to move the county seat, since the train proposed is for a scenic route.

Garcia said many in town depend on Carrizozo being the county seat.

—heard about a Solid Waste Conference, to which the town is invited, scheduled for April 20 at Cree Meadows Restaurant in Ruidoso, sponsored by the county.

Steam railroad project for county advances

It's official! The Ironhorse Railroad is now known as the Ironhorse Railroad Foundation, Inc., a not-for-profit public corporation which has the ability to solicit tax exempt donations and other funding.

At their monthly railroad meeting March 7, members were also told of a well-received briefing given to the New Mexico State Department of Transportation on March 6 in Santa Fe, detailing the accomplishments to date made by the Ironhorse Railroad Foundation.

The foundation has requested Lincoln County to declare itself a Transportation district and the foundation has notified all neighboring counties of its intent.

A brochure has been printed and will be used to explain the goals of the foundation and to solicit funding and donations. The funding committee is presently seeking affluent members, interested in preserving the heritage of steam power, to help solicit large-scale donations. The committee is also investigating the services of professional fundraising organizations.

The next major steps to be taken by the foundation are to complete a feasibility study and an economic impact report at an estimated cost of $80,000. The State of New Mexico may be able to help accomplish this.

Barbara Duff of Ruidoso has agreed to donate the use of a piece of land in downtown Ruidoso to the foundation upon which a railroad car will be placed and used as offices and meeting place for the Ironhorse Railroad. The Southern Pacific Railroad has been contacted as a possible donor for the railroad car.

Williams honored by EMS

Mrs. Kathleen Williams of Nogal, NM, was honored recently when she received the 1989 Instructor/Coordinator Award for her outstanding contribution to the EMS (Emergency Medical Service) education program in EMS, Region III.

Mrs. Williams, who is also an EMT-I (IV Tech) serves with Carrizozo, Corona, and Capitan EMS and has trained many of the EMTs in Lincoln County. Over the last two and one-half years she has spent 700 hours training EMTs and First Responders. At present she is conducting a class of 16 in Corona.

Three-mile zone around airport deemed unconstitutional by P&Z

Some questions about the legal validity of Ruidoso's claim to annex the Sierra Blanca Region Airport and thus control a one-mile zone around it, came up at the Lincoln County Planning and Zoning meeting Thursday, March 22.

With barely enough members to form a quorum, P&Z reviewed the zoning maps prepared by Ruidoso surveyor Tim Collins and the Lincoln County Assessor's Office. While in that review P&Z member Ben Hall questioned the constitutionality of Ruidoso's claim to three miles around the village as an Extra Territorial Zone (ETZ). Currently the village has zoning control for one mile around the village limits. That ETZ is by joint agreement between the village and county.

However, the village proposes to extend that ETZ to three miles.

Hall, suspicious of the proposal, went to the state statutes in county manager Nick Pappas' office. When he returned to the almost informal meeting he showed the state laws which define the limits of ETZs. A municipality with more than 1,500 and less than 20,000 legally can have an ETZ of one mile. Municipalities with population of 20,000-200,000 can have an ETZ two miles wide. And municipalities with population of more than 200,000 can have the three-mile ETZ.

Ruidoso also currently views the three mile zone as a planning jurisdiction, and has an agreement with the state to send building village inspectors into that area.

"They have no authority to go out to the three miles," Hall said and referred to the state statutes which restrict such zones.

Member James Sanchez suggested the county commission define the ETZ and inspection-planning jurisdiction.

Pappas said he would request an update about the ETZ from the commissioners at their next workshop session, begun to cover county business without extended meetings.

Sanchez also wanted Pappas to get a commissioner update on the airport annexation's constitutionality with an Attorney General's opinion.

Pappas said the county cannot ask for an AG opinion, but the questions could be directed through Hall, who is a state representative.

The county commission went along with deeding the airport to the village, Collins reminded. Sanchez replied the zoning designation will affect the mapping process.

"They own the property, the county gave it to them," Hall said. If the annexation is legal, the village has the jurisdiction to create the ETZ, up to one mile, he added.

"If it's not legal, the county can go up to the airport limits and zone," Hall continued.

Sanchez requested an AG opinion in writing, so county residents will at least know the legality has been questioned. "We are responsible to the county residents."

"If it's not legal we would be amiss to give up this area," Hall agreed.

Hall went on to say there is nothing illegal to annex contiguous property. But when the annexed property is 18 miles from the village limits (such as the airport to Ruidoso), Hall began to question the validity.

Pappas said a precedent was set in the state for such non-contiguous annexations when Roswell annexed the former Walker Air Force Base, now the Roswell Air Center. The highway connecting the city with the Center was used as the basis for annexation.

"It didn't affect the county before, but now it does because of the mapping," Sanchez said.

Hall said those areas might be questioned in the future and a legal opinion would be strictly a precaution in the zoning process.

Although most of the county will be zoned agricultural, some areas will require careful thought and public input to determine zoning designations. Some areas which have been subdivided with restrictive covenants will need to be researched.

Collins suggested the zoning ordinance be amended to include the wording that will allow restrictive covenants to be upheld. Pappas added the covenants will have to be more restrictive than the ordinance, however.

Historical zones also might be considered. Currently, only the Lincoln area has such a zone. White Oaks, Nogal and Oscuro areas could be viewed as historical zones.

Hall said property owners make the decision if they want their area to be zoned historical.

White Oaks property owners have not requested such a zoning designation, but Sanchez predicted the zoning might start the "wheel rolling to become an historical zone."

Also during the examination of the rough draft zoning maps, which at this point do not show zoning designations, Collins said the working mine claims in the county need a designation. Sanchez suggested the claims be zoned industrial.

Property owners in all areas to be zoned will have a chance to speak their feelings when public hearings are scheduled later this year. All owners will be contacted by certified mail also.

Pappas suggested Collins be allowed "carte blanche" to work on a preliminary coding of the different areas for presentation at the public hearings, because he had confidence in Collins. He also suggested the help of Albert Baca in the assessor's office.

"The zoning process takes time," Pappas said. "Even if we turtle along."

The zoning ordinance will govern lots of property for years to come, Pappas continued, a reason to take time in zoning designations.

P&Z also heard from Hubert Quintana who is working on a land use project for the Diamond A Cattle Company in the Hondo Valley. Diamond A is looking toward future land use, a plan which might include residences in the ranch holdings.

50th anniversary celebration for Roy, Mary LaMay

Roy E. and Mary H. LaMay will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Friday, April 6.

AG rules county zoning ordinance invalid

The 1988 Lincoln County Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance is invalid.

"Lincoln County's apparent failure to adopt the zoning maps referred to in the Zoning Ordinance is fatal to the ordinance's comprehensive plan and therefore, the ordinance," were the words in a written opinion from the New Mexico Attorney General (AG) received in the county manager's office March 27.

A letter from the county commissioners was forwarded to the AG's office by State Rep. Ben Hall in which commission chairman Karon Petty asked whether the special use permit section of the 1988 Zoning Ordinance is enforceable. The answer reads "according to your letter, the Zoning Ordinance, including the special use permit section, is invalid and unenforceable without an accompanying zoning map."

By state statutes county regulations governing zoning must be in accordance with a comprehensive plan, the letter reads. The statutes governing a county's zoning authority do not specifically require a map be included as a part of the ordinance; however, statutes require publication of the title and general summary of any zoning ordinance before it come effective.

The argument arose last year after Lincoln County attorney Robert Beauvais announced the ordinance special use permit section was invalid and unenforceable because it did not have maps on which to base the need for special use. Commission chairman Petty argued this was not so because of the severability clause in the ordinance.

"Because Lincoln County did not adopt the zoning map referred to in the Zoning Ordinance and the map is necessary to ascertain the boundaries of zones established by the ordinance, we conclude the entire zoning ordinance is invalid," the letter reads. "That the Zoning Ordinance contains a severability clause... does not save the special use permit regulations. The New Mexico

Supreme Court has stated that 'while the effect of a declaration of severability in the ordinance creates a presumption that the ordinance is divisible, we cannot dissect invalid portions and reframe an ordinance from the valid portions where the remaining features will be substantially affected by the removal.'"

The letter cites several cases involving zoning ordinances and the need for a comprehensive plan and map.

"Without the maps, there is no way to ascertain district boundaries and the effect of the specified use restrictions, including the special use permit regulations," the letter reads.

"An ordinance is invalid which refers to a map which does not exist, even though an ordinance creates no ascertainable districts and fails to inform land owners of the restrictions applicable to their property," the letter quotes from a book by R. Anderson, American Law of Zoning.

"The original copy of the ordinance together with the proof of publication and supporting maps shall be filed in a book kept for that purpose and authenticated by the signature of the county clerk," the state statutes read. According to a case entitled Jacobi vs. Zoning Bd., an entire ordinance, "including special exception provisions, falls in the absence of a comprehensive plan."

The opinion is signed by Elizabeth A. Glenn, assistant AG.

The county currently is working on the zoning maps at the Planning and Zoning level. However, the maps are not complete and are still weeks away from the public hearing portion of the approval process. Before the maps are approved, zoning designations must be made on different parcels, then the public can add input about the designations. All landowners affected by the zoning will be notified by certified mail, also.

FINANCING "HANDYMAN" SPECIAL

QUESTION: I have a chance to buy a "Handyman Special". It is worth $48,000 but I can get it for $40,000 because it needs repairs. I can arrange for the $40,000 financing, but will need another $8,000 for repairs. Any suggestion?

ANSWER: Your answer may be a construction commitment loan based on the future value of your home — after improvements. If the bank agrees to a 75% loan, they will give you $30,000 (75% of the $40,000 sale price) for payment to the seller. It will release the remaining $6,000 (75% of $8,000 improvements) for payment when the work is completed. Be sure you have reliable estimates. Construction costs have a way of escalating.

Big Brother comes calling

Sunday, April 1 is Census Day 1990.

This year's count marks the 200th anniversary of the US Census and becomes the 21st to be taken of the country's population.

By press time, most residents will have received a copy of the census form in the mail. Most residents will be asked to fill the form and keep it until a Census Bureau worker arrives on Sunday, April 1. Some forms will request the residents to return it by mail.

Residents are asked to fill out either the 14-question short form or a 59-question long form. The long form includes multiple part questions and are sent to a sample of households. Those households will be asked about housing characteristics, citizenship, education, ancestry, residence five years ago, language, military service, disability, labor force participation, transportation and income.

The short form includes questions, which also are on the long form, about each household members' name, relation, sex, race, age and year of birth, marital status and whether or not the person is of Hispanic/Spanish origin. The short form also includes questions about the household building, such as vacancy, and the number of rooms. The value of the property, and rental payment also are asked. All answers are confidential.

Information collected in the census is grouped into statistical totals which help government, business and industry to plan more effectively.

So when the census bureau worker comes to the door Sunday, be ready with a completed form, to make your count, count.

OPINION

●Once upon a time the story of Little Red Riding Hood was a children's bedtime story. Today it is a political and social commentary on how the government intervenes to protect minority rights, enshrine justice, and punish the transgressor. The burgeoning bureaucracy, along with new discoveries in people management, require that the story of Little Red Riding Hood be frequently updated. The staff of the Councilor, a Shreveport, LA weekly newspaper concerned with such heresies as constitutionalism and political morality (cross yourself), has revised the story to remove the fantasy and to make its reading and telling more meaningful and credible to today's children. I have added touches of my own to update the story and make it conform to today's standards. In it, you will note that court justices are disposed to deal more fairly with the Wolf who was, after all, only doing his thing. Children, gather 'round

●Little Red Riding Hood was asked by her mother (not told, you understand) to take a basket of food to her grandmother who lived along in a cottage deep in the forest. A Wolf lurked nearby and heard the conversation. This misguided but essentially decent quadruped raced madly to the grandmother's cottage and chased her into the forest. (Note that the Wolf no longer eats grandmother, for which a tip of the hat to Third World countries that have recently given up cannibalism—and to organized vegetarians and assorted deplorers of violence.) The Wolf then dressed himself in her nightgown (a pander to transvestites and a step forward toward making him "queer" in the next updated version) and jumped into bed to await the arrival of Little Red Riding Hood.

●There was an exchange of pleasantries when the kid arrived, and an observation by the myopic and ill-tutored lass that grandmother had bicuspidas as big as those of Jimmy Carter, a nose as elongated as Barbara Streisand's, and eyes as fanatical as those of Ralph Nader. The Wolf snarled racial slurs at the young female and chased her from the cottage after which he ate the basket of food.

●Hearing, the ruckus, a woodcutter (who turned out at the trial to be a member of the John Birch Society and a friend of Col. Oliver North), rushed to the scene to kill the Wolf with his axe, thus setting in motion a series of events that were to cause him the utmost god-damned astonishment.

●The Wolf's first wail brought 36 federal, state and county law enforcement officers to intervene in the dispute. Various pressure groups joined the effort to stay the life of the Wolf.

●The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals ordered the woodcutter arrested and fined for failing to advise the Wolf of his rights. The NAACP argued that all canines are created equal, and that the Wolf was merely a "disadvantaged Saint Bernard who had been denied equal opportunity." The Federal Labor Relations Council ruled that the Wolf had not been adequately represented in negotiations with Little Red Riding Hood. The Bureau of Land Management, which had jurisdiction over the forest, banished grandmothers and little girls from the forest as disruptive influence and hazards to wildlife.

●The Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'rith charged that the woodcutter was anti-semitic and merely wanted to kill the animal because it had a Yiddish name (Wolf) and that the woodcutter would not have been so abusive if the animal had had a Spanish name (Coyote). HEW sent down 12 bureaucrats to sign up the Wolf for Food Stamps. Students for a Democratic Society resurrected folk-hero Abbie Hoffman, who argued that Little Red Riding Hood was actually over age 30 and therefore had no rights. Jane Fonda made a special appeal in behalf of the Wolf, contending that the animal only wanted to "make love, not war." Her enthusiasm on behalf of the Wolf zoomed when she learned that Little Red Riding Hood wasn't really "red" after all, as was vouchsafed by Mikhail Gorbachev himself.

●The Sierra Club charged that the woodcutter was a "secret agent of taxidermists" and that he was a trophy hunter who deserved 20 years in federal penitentiary for threatening the life of an animal. Leftists in 50 state legislatures amended their gun-control bills to include a provision that would outlaw axes. President Bush of "kinder and gentler" fame issued an order to all federal agencies to banish woodcutters from the forests because of an alleged "adverse environmental impact."

●OSHA issued an order to all hardware stores and hardware manufactures requiring that no one be sold an axe unless he had a master's degree from Brandeis or Howard University in "Correct Uses of Axes, Hatchets and Adzes." OSHA also ordered that the blades be blunted and that 137 warning notices be printed on the handles. A group of congressmen got together with the TV networks and a federal judge to change the Wolf's name from "Michael Sharpfang Wolf" to "Martin Luther Wolf." Then they introduced bills to create a national holiday: "Martin Luther Wolf Day."

Inside The Capitol
By Jay Miller

SANTA FE—The special session of the 1990 New Mexico Legislature will go down in history as the first to be held outside a state capitol building at least since New Mexico began its legislative assemblies under the territorial government of the United States in 1851.

At that time, the Palace of the Governors had been in use for 241 years and would be occupied another 35 years as the seat of government until a new capitol was completed in 1886. The new capitol was surrounded by controversy from the very beginning. Six years later it was completely gutted by a raging fire of "incendiary origin." Lawmakers moved back to their former capitol in the aging Palace of the Governors for eight more years until they could build another capitol in 1900.

Modern day lawmakers were forced to "rough it" this year in their makeshift surroundings outside the capitol. In the House chambers at the state Land Office building, legislators sat shoulder to shoulder during sessions. The Senate had it a little easier with assigned seating and at least one seat in between each solon.

There was no room to spread out papers, so most lawmakers used clip boards to keep all the loose papers together.

Rules were toughened. No smoking was allowed in the chambers. Lobbying was prohibited in the chamber and surrounding hallways. Observers and media were restricted to the back of the room.

By Day Two, those rules started to bend. Come the third day, lawmakers, lobbyists and media roamed the chambers, freely interacting during floor sessions. It reminded oldtimers of the former capitol in which conditions were much the same. There was a small gallery in each house but lobbyists, press and visitors were allowed complete access to the floor of both chambers.

For the most part, lawmakers made the best of their Spartan surroundings. They greeted their new working conditions with good humor.

Traditionally, every legislature begins with a committee being dispatched from each house to report to the other body that they are organized and ready to begin work. In the House, this year, the heaviest lawmakers were assigned to walk the two or three blocks one-way to the Senate to make a report. But when Speaker Raymond Sanchez got nothing but complaints, he smiled and said, "I guess we can just use the phone."

The skeleton staffs employed by this session performed outstandingly under very trying circumstances. It all worked during the four days the legislature met. The crunch of a 30-day session would have been too much, however. It is imperative that the capitol be renovated in time for the 1991 session or the support system will never hold up.

It was obvious to those who stayed up most of the night covering the marathon sessions that renovation work is proceeding rapidly. The lights never went out in the capitol building. Crews are working on a 24-hour basis to stay on schedule. Chain link fences have gone up around the building and parked cars have been replaced by construction trailers.

Some have compared the conditions under which lawmakers worked this session with those endured by the founding fathers of our nation, who labored in the sweltering 4th of July heat in Philadelphia and in the crowded church pews of Richmond, VA in the First Continental Congress.

But nothing can compare with the conditions faced by New Mexico's founding fathers in the first Territorial Legislature in 1851. The following quote comes from The Santa Fean magazine of February 1974.

"The ancient Palace, rebuilt many times, was again falling apart. Its walls, up to six feet thick, were stained and crumbling. Its roofs, covered with tons and tons of mud, sprouted a splendor of wildflowers and grasses but leaked copiously and sagged dangerously. The rooms were dark and gloomy and the floors of undressed boards lay rotting on the earth."

It took the First Territorial Legislature 35 years to get out of those surroundings over a century ago. Anything that happens this time should be an improvement.

BLM has horses for adoption

If you have always dreamed of owning a horse and have a lot of love and patience, the Bureau of Land Management's (BLM's) "Adopt a Horse" program may be for you.

Because of an innovative cooperative program between BLM and the New Mexico Department of Corrections, wild horses are available to adopt for just $125 and a few other simple requirements.

The wild horses are gathered off public land throughout the West and are "halter broke" by inmates at the correctional facility. The program helps the horses get used to being around people and it also helps rehabilitate inmates.

By fulfilling a few simple requirements you could be the proud owner of one of these fine animals. Basically, all you need is to be 18 years of age, have no convictions for inhumane treatment of animals, and have adequate facilities and means of transportation to provide human care and proper treatment of the animal.

Parents and legal guardians may adopt a wild horse and allow their children to assist in caring for and training the animal. Adopters must provide their own means of transporting the animal from the adoption center to their home. Vehicles may include horse trailers and commercial livestock trailers as long as they meet minimum standards for the maintenance and feeding of the horses required by the bureau.

Adoption hours at the horse facility are 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday, Wednesday, and Friday of each week. To reach the Southern New Mexico Correctional Facility follow the signs to Interstate 10 west of Las Cruces.

Schools applauded

EDITOR—During the week of March 19, a client of Plains Realty and his wife spent four days in Carrizozo. They are considering purchasing real estate in the immediate area.

Since they have two school-age children they indicated especial concern about the Carrizozo Public School. As a result, they spent most of one day at the school, taking videos of the school, talking to school personnel and visiting classrooms, etc.

Before they left on Thursday, March 22, they visited my office and discussed their stay in the area. One of the first topics, dwelt upon the time they spent at the school. Their reaction was, and I quote, "we were very, very impressed with the school and the school's programs." They then went on to tell me about the several hours they spent at the FFA Barn, again I quote, "the FFA program is fabulous."

I write this letter since there are many of us who are very proud of our school but it is also gratifying to get the same reaction from people outside our immediate area.

Incidentally, the people whose reaction appears above are young, college graduates and have traveled worldwide.

WOODY SCHLEGEL,
Broker,
Plains Realty.

How to heal America

EDITOR—If you have lost confidence in our lawmakers, you are not alone. I do not believe that our founding fathers ever envisioned such a creature as a career politician. Rather, they visualized dedicated individuals serving as representatives of the people for a few years then returning to private life.

Consider the problems:

1. extreme gerrymandering resulting in safe districts where it is nearly impossible to unseat an incumbent.

2. legislators accepting huge sums of money from special interest groups and beholden to them.

3. too many decisions based only on concern for reelection.

4. too much law being passed by the initiative process, a result of state legislators being unwilling to offend special interest groups and losing their financial support.

We can give our politicians the incentive to do the right thing by:

1. a limit of one term only, 4-6 years, staggered for experience.

2. offering very attractive salaries.

3. no retirement pay.

4. limiting remuneration for speeches and value of gifts.

5. greatly reducing free mailing privileges.

6. taking redistricting out of the hands of politicians and giving it to non-partisan commissions.

America's democratic system has been a model for the world over, but we have allowed it fall into disrepair. We must get it back on track or be overwhelmed with cynicism and moral despair.

RAY PARNAY,
Sebastopol, CA.

Correction

EDITOR—I need to make a correction in the article on the Carrizozo School Bond Issue.

Let me start by saying that I was correctly quoted by Ms. Cherry. The correction is, what I incorrectly listed as the taxable value of $22,500 should have been listed as the full value.

To clarify the numbers, let me use two examples. The high end of assessment in District 7 is around $87,500 full value. This gives a taxable value of $22,500 and would be a tax increase of $17.64 per year, or $1.47 per month. The average is $22,500 full value and a taxable value of $7,500. This would be a tax increase of $5.88 per year, or 49 cents per month.

To find out the exact dollar amount in a particular case please contact me at 648-2347 and I will help you with the research.

BOB HEMPHILL,
Carrizozo.

Policy on letters to editor

We welcome letters to the editor, but our established policy regarding them are being ignored. First, letters are to be held to, no more than 300 words. Second, they must be signed and a telephone number indicated for verification. Third, the use of letters to prolong disputes between two or more parties is not permitted. Fourth, letters are subject to grammatical corrections. Recently, attempts have been made to provoke a series of exchanges that involve personalities, using the newspaper as a go-between for disputants. Hereafter, there will be one letter accepted from each side in such a dispute. Further, all letters exceeding 300 words on such issues will not be published because of lack of space available for letters to the editor.

FOOTAGE EDITED

Don McAlavy says in the State Line Tribune (serving Farwell, TX and Texico, NM) that he and five others connected with the Billy the Kid Outlaw Gang (BTKOG) of New Mexico were at the BTKOG headquarters at Taiban, NM recently when an ABC camera crew came to shoot scenes for a presentation on national television. They were included in the 10-minute segment that aired on Prime Time.

"It was amazing that they shot some 35 hours of footage at Taiban, Fort Sumner, Lincoln, Tucson and Hico and then edited all that to just 10 minutes," McAlavy said.

McAlavy wrote the outdoor drama "Billy the Kid" which plays each summer at the Caprock Amphitheater, south of San Jon, NM. He mentioned the outdoor drama to the television crew, but they were only interested in the Billy the Kid photo findings; if Billy is buried at Fort Sumner and if Pat Garrett really killed him.

"So I lost my chance for some free publicity on national TV," said the charter member of the BTKOG.

DANG COMPUTER

In spite of finds by forensic experts who compared with a computer the only known authentic photo of Billy the Kid with photos of other people, including Brushy Bill Roberts who claimed to be the Kid, the controversy still lingers on.

Bob Hefner of Hico got his say on the ABC-TV live coverage of the controversy. Says McAlavy: "Judge Bob Hefner, who is Brushy Bill's chief champion and booster, will not likely throw in the towel. He'd rather take the word of bullet-scarred Brushy Bill over a dang computer any day."

PUBLIC COURT RECORDS

According to Insight magazine, a Newport woman asks the court to recognize that ordinary citizens have a right to keep their divorce a family affair.

In the lawsuit filed in Rhode Island the woman, whose divorce is about to become final, she is suing The Newport Daily News to keep her name and address off its monthly list of the newly divorced. The grounds: that publication would violate her right to privacy.

The newspaper draws its divorce list from family court records, which are public, and it says the divorces are newsworthy.

TWO WIVES EQUAL

Meanwhile District Court Judge Patricio Serna says that two wives equal 90 days, according to a Rio Grande Sun headline.

Serna sentenced a former Espanola resident convicted of attempted bigamy to 90 days incarceration at the Tierra Amarilla jail. Floyd Lee Zamora, 32, currently of Albuquerque, is perhaps the first to be convicted of a crime related to bigamy (having more than one wife) in Rio Arriba County in 50 years.

Serna felt that some confinement was necessary handing down the sentence that included 274 days probation. Serna gave Zamora credit for the 16 days he already spent in jail while being held for the crime.

He was indicted last year on a bigamy charge for marrying in Rio Arriba while already married to another woman. The second marriage was declared null and void last fall, based on Zamora's claim that he was intoxicated at the time of the marriage. His first marriage ended in divorce since the incident.

SWEET AND SOUR

According to Oscar Wilde, says a Time article, "all history is gossip. By that definition, Liz Smith is one of America's premier historians." Through her syndicated column and New York television show she tells the follies and the triumphs of the famous. "Some folks can't wait to lap up her latest morsels; others think she ought to have her typewriter confiscated."

Arriving in New York City in 1949, she learned her trade at Modern Screen, Newsweek and Sports Illustrated and by working in radio and TV. Walter Winchell was her idol.

viewed in 1963, presented the most complete view of daily life from the Hispanic perspective. A life where neighbors and family alike were close-knit because of the isolation of the tiny villages or placitas. The violence of the 1870-80s affected daily life.

Lincoln County Extension Homemakers Club (EHC) members crowded the Carrizozo Women's Club last Friday for its annual Cultural Arts Show.

Members entered various arts and crafts for competition and Lucille Wilson, Dolores Constantine, Betty Grananda and Cora Carcopa from Otero County EHC judged. Members listened to Ann Buffington, president of Lincoln County Historical Society, speak about the pioneer women of Lincoln County.

Following this year's theme, "Pioneer Days—Pioneer Ways," Buffington told of the difficulty she had finding written accounts of women's lives in the 1800s, because most written history is about men, war, politics and violence. History of daily life was mostly from personal records like diaries, letters and journals. She encouraged women to continue to "preserve your own personal history."

"We're all making history every day," she added. Buffington focused most of her talk on the writings and interviews of four Lincoln County pioneer women: Lily Casey Klasner, Sophie Poe, Lorencita Miranda and Helena Coe.

Klasner wrote a journal which came to be known as a book entitled "My Girlhood Among Outlaws." The original journal was lost after Klasner's death but was found in an abandoned adobe house in the Hondo Valley by late Ruidoso author Eve Ball.

Poe wrote the book "Buckboard Days." It is a recollection of life on the frontier in Lincoln County 1882-86 and includes a biography of Sheriff John William Poe, Sophie's husband, who was killed in Lincoln. Miranda, who was interviewed in 1963, presented the most complete view of daily life from the Hispanic perspective. A life where neighbors and family alike were close-knit because of the isolation of the tiny villages or placitas. The violence of the 1870-80s affected daily life.

Women tended gardens, plowed fields and were often active partners with the men in the ranches. Women rode sidesaddle, however.

"A large family was an asset, so that usually meant the woman was pregnant or nursing," Buffington said. Infant mortality was high,

Trinity Site

Public can visit the site of first atomic bomb explosion

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE—Trinity Site, where the world's first atomic bomb was exploded in 1945, will be open to the public on Saturday, April 7.

The National Historic Landmark is open twice a year, on the first Saturday in April and October.

Trinity is located on the northern end of the 3,200-square-mile White Sands Missile Range, between the towns of Carrizozo and Socorro, New Mexico. For the upcoming Trinity Site tour there will be two ways of entering the restricted missile range.

Visitors can enter through the range's Stallion Range Center which is five miles south of Highway 380. The turnoff is 12 miles east of San Antonio, NM and 53 miles west of Carrizozo. The Stallion gate will be open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Visitors arriving at the gate between those hours will receive handouts and will be allowed to drive unescorted the 17 miles to Trinity Site. The road is paved and marked.

The drive is 170 miles roundtrip and there are no service station facilities on the missile range. The caravan is scheduled to leave Trinity Site at 12:30 p.m. for the return to Alamogordo.

Cameras are allowed at Trinity Site but their use is strictly prohibited anywhere else on White Sands Missile Range.

The Senior Citizens monthly last Wednesday was a huge success last Wednesday. The Senior Center was filled with laughter and gaiety; pretty spring cottons on very pretty ladies, and the food was delicious. Perhaps it being the first day of spring contributed to its success. If you are a Senior Citizen and if you have not attended one of these parties, we all urge you to do so. Credit for the success of our Senior Citizen is due to efforts of Virginia Danielson, our president, and to our very fine Capitan site manager, Henry Silva.

A most interesting workshop was held in Ruidoso by New Mexico CowBelles from all over the state. Inez Marrs is secretary of the Inez Mexican CowBelles.

The Sacred Heart Guild met Wednesday in the church hall for their monthly meeting. A nice potluck dinner was served. Guests were Bill and Edie Joyce from Midland, TX.

The 59 people who attended were served lunch by the 4-H mothers of Carrizozo. This was a fundraiser for them to send 4-H members to Washington, DC this summer. Ann Buffington from Lincoln spoke about pioneer women, some from this area.

Joe Gesting and Wayne McGee, from the Otero County Electric gave a very informative talk and demonstration of the use and dangers of electricity.

The judged display of crafts, crochet, ceramics, quilts, wool weaving, paintings, clothing, toys, dolls, jewelry, pillows, albums and other things was open to the public from noon until 2 p.m. Of the 85 entries there were 46 1st place ribbons awarded, 21 2nd place and 10 3rd place. The overall Best-of-Show was won by Bessie Jones for her white wool shawl. She had spun the wool and woven the shawl. Mollie Mason from Capitan Extension Club was the Pastoral Arts chairman the past two years.

Scott and Patty McGee were house guests of Wayne and Mollie Mason on March 20-22. They are from 29 Palms, CA where he is stationed in the Marines.

TUESDAY, APRIL 3
—Polls open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at Carrizozo Schools Administration Building for the General Obligation Bond and Public School Capital Improvements election. Any registered voter living within the Carrizozo School District is eligible to vote. Carrizozo Schools is asking voters to approve a $540,000 bond issue for various projects and the two mill levy. The bond will raise property taxes about 78 cents for each $1000 of taxable value of property, if passed. Property taxed at $10,000 will realize an increase of $7.84 a year, for example.

The two mill levy is an ongoing tax that allows schools to pay for maintenance and other needs. Salaries, however, cannot be paid with either bond or mill levy funds. If approved, the mill levy tax is matched by New Mexico Dept. of Education funds.

Information about the bond is available from the school or from information booths in various Carrizozo locations.
