Budget time again

Budget time has come around again, and various local entities are having extra meetings to work on the dollars and cents part of government.

Carrizozo Town Trustees began a series of workshops May 1, with others scheduled for May 7, 14 and 15, at 6 p.m. in town hall.

Lincoln County began a two-day work session for the budget Wednesday and continues today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. Various groups which receive funds from or through the county, are making requests, as well as the different county departments. A final preliminary budget hearing is scheduled for Monday, May 14 during the regular county commission meeting.

Carrizozo Board of Education met April 24 and approved a budget option presented by Supt. Danny Burnett. The budget will be taken to the Santa Fe May 10. Burnett will give a report on that state review at the board meeting May 15.

Capitan Board of Education will conduct a budget hearing May 10, at the school administration building.

All meetings are open to the public.

Personnel session deals with employee problems

Carrizozo Town Trustees directed Carrizozo Mayor Cecilia Kuhnel to write letters to two town personnel involved after a two-hour and 15 minute special called closed session for personnel.

Mayor Kuhnel said she will write Chief Choncho Morales and officer Rick Emmons about the items discussed in the session. Both men were called into the session.

All trustees, Harold Garcia, Dale LaMay, Archy Valles and Gilbert Archuleta were present.

Closed sessions are not open to the public. To qualify for a closed session, the items to be discussed must be for certain reasons, including limited personnel matters. Such personnel items include discussion of hiring, promotion, demotion, dismissal, assignment, resignation or of the investigation or consideration of any complaints or charges against any public employee, according to the 1989 Open Meetings Act of the New Mexico Legislature.

Planning and zoning

Members split on access to Airport Scenic Drive

Giving access to some subdivision lots which were blocked by the fencing along Airport Scenic Drive will be the very beginning of development for the access highway to Sierra Blanca Regional Airport.

Lincoln County Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) considered a request to cut the fence for a turnout along the highway after the problem was referred by the Lincoln County Commissioners at their last regular meeting. The commissioners made the referral because P&Z could look into turnouts requests singularly with the county road supervisor and make a recommendation for each request.

At the meeting April 26, P&Z members Patsy Sanchez, Modesto Chavez, Audean Franklin, Mike Randle and new member Bill Elliott heard a request from realtor Greg Masters to grant permission to get a permit to cut the fence along the Airport Scenic Drive and thus allow a turnout for two tracts which now are landlocked with no road access.

Masters said the tracts were replatted in 1988, then approved by the former county commission. At the time the highway also was under construction. When replatted, subdivision developers planned just one major turnout onto Airport Drive with an access road to several lots. Thus the need for numerous turnouts in a short distance along the drive would be eliminated, something which commissioners (former and present) hoped to avoid.

When the design phase for planning turnouts occurred, a turnout for the tracts was noted and marked on a map. But when the fencing contractor stretched the wire, no gate was added at the turnout.

Randall was reluctant to allow the permit for the turnout because he didn't want to rush into a decision which would set a precedent on cutting the fence for turnouts.

When the group took a map which showed the number of lots fronting the Airport Drive they found 13 within one mile. Masters pointed out some of the lots were in the subdivision he represented.

Sanchez said the subdivision already platted and approved in the area would have to be given access, but future developments would have to provide access roads.

Elliott was in favor of granting a permit to cut the fence for the turnout, which costs $25 and is available from the road supervisor.

"You can't block them," Elliott said.

The lots did have some access from the Ft. Stanton Road, Masters further explained. However, when the road contractor, Twin Mountain Rock, which has a lawsuit pending with a landowner in the area, left it took out culverts on the only access road to the tracts. By taking out the culverts, the access was denied to the tracts.

Franklin said being involved with the way the area is developed was the main reason she wanted to be on P&Z. But she favored the turnout for the tracts, since they were approved at the time the road was constructed and are marked for such on the highway engineer's map.

Chavez suggested Masters should go through the mechanics of obtaining the county permit for the driveway. He also said the turnout will need a gate.

Some discussion followed whether turnouts in the area, which is primarily developed subdivisions with few if any livestock, will need gates or cattleguards.

Currently no policy exists about how developed areas along Airport Drive will be accessed onto the highway. Randle was worried that sometime in the future heavy traffic along the drive would make turnouts potential hazards. He also worried about liability to the county, which owns Airport Scenic Drive, if someone had an accident involving livestock, if the turnout was not gated nor had a cattleguard.

Franklin said other turnouts did not have gates or cattleguards along the drive. Although she favored limiting future turnouts onto the drive, she did realize a decision would have to be made on access onto the highway. "By putting the road out here we made very valuable land out of ranch land... it will be a major development area," she said.

When a vote came to approve a motion to recommend the commission grant a permit, Franklin abstained because she owns land in the area in question. When the vote was called, Elliott and Chavez were in favor, but Randle voted against such a recommendation. P&Z members agreed their recommendation be given to county commissioners who were scheduled to meet Tuesday for a budget workshop.

"It's not cut and dry," Randle said. "I've seen lots of mistakes made in Lincoln County in the past."

Another first-time Lincoln County situation arose when Ruidoso surveyor Tim Collins came with a request to vacate a part of Deer Park Meadows Subdivision units 7-21. The development was originally platted by Lakeside Corp. which defaulted in bankruptcy. Some of the land went back to its original owner, Bob Scribner.

Collins said Scribner wants to return the foreclosed land to raw agricultural land. Roads were "roughed in" but were never completed to county regulations or dedicated to the county for maintenance. In fact, the subdivision is one which was "red tagged" by the county for such noncompliance.

The subdivision also had no power, or water. Because of the unfinished condition, Scribner prefers to return the land to pasture rather than be a subdivider.

None of the lots in the tract have been sold, even though Scribner is paying each lot's portion for the Alto Paving District assessments. Collins said Scribner also will pay off the remaining assessments before vacating the plat.

Chavez said he would like to see more of such subdivisions go back to raw land.

District court

Sentences handed down; jury trials are set

Lincoln County District Court Judge Richard A. Parsons has been busy recently.

The jury trial for Erwin Boyd Bartlett, 29, Ruidoso, was called a mistrial on April 18.

The first step of ladder safety is simple

LOOK UP

Before you climb a ladder, look above you to make sure that there aren't power lines nearby. If your ladder could come into contact with a power line, place it in another location. Most ladders conduct electricity, so you could be shocked, just by holding a ladder that touches a power line.

For more information on power line safety, call or visit your local TNP office today.

OPINION

Some area residents are questioning New Mexico's touristy slogan, "The Land of Enchantment." As this is written, we have had four days and nights of cyclonic and glacial winds, so that slogan might be corrected to read, "Land of Engloaciament." Winds have been constant, coming from every direction; north, south, east, west, up and down. It blows as hard as a liberal legislator and with temperatures as cold as a well-digger's ass in the Klondike. What the wind doesn't blow away, it freezes. Ask any brass monkey. We have the most mobile garbage on earth. Every hour the loose garbage in Lincoln County is rearranged. Why should commissioners worry about a landfill when they can't catch the trash and garbage to fill one? New Mexico should consider imposing a tax on transient garbage, but there is a question of interstate commerce involved because the strong winds may have blown some in from neighboring Texas. Establishing that would make such a tax a federal matter to be prosecuted by President George "Read My Lips" Bush. Of course, his version wouldn't be called a tax; only an "abusers fee." Whatever the tax on mobile trash, it must not apply to the hot air, trash and political excrement issuing from Santa Fe. Impossible? Any state that can designate the Coelophysis as its official dinosaur can certainly come up with a tax on the only thing left untaxed.

But I digress. Four days and nights of hurricane winds has led to suffering and embarrassment, especially for tourists trapped in cyclonic situations in Carrizozo. One tourist, with the wind at his back, found he could save gasoline by turning off the engine's ignition. He was up to 60 miles per hour when he realized that by turning off the ignition he also froze the steering mechanism. La Grone Funeral Chapel is in charge of arrangements.

Lincoln County women know better than to wear dresses when winds get up to 50 miles an hour. An uninformed Texas woman, trapped in the current chilly holocaust, made the mistake of getting out of her car wearing a dress. It immediately went up over her head and knotted around her head. Rescuers from 911 responded and found her swinging by the throat from the bull sign gracing the top of Four Winds Restaurant. Other unwary women have suffered embarrassing exposure when winds lifted their dresses to socially unaccepted heights. US Sen. Jesse Helms has protested, but found the situation was protected by the National Endowment for the Arts. Current cyclonic winds have solved a puzzle for me—why men and women wear those skin-tight jeans. It must be because if these winds ever got under the jeans the wearer would be peeled as neatly as a banana, revealing their treasured secrets.

Wind and cold aside, gird your exhausted loins for another "Day" to celebrate. May 5 has been proclaimed the 1990 Birdathon by the Southeastern New Mexico Audubon Society. This event is followed by National Pickle Week, May 25-June 3. Pickles, you know, are un-condomed cucumbers dipped in brine, vinegar and spices. Then brace for National Horseshoe Pitching which kicks off May 5-12-13 with Carrizozo's Buzzard Days. The world tournament for horseshoe pitching will be held at Stone Mountain, GA, July 23-Aug. 7, a former bastion for Ku Klux Klan addicts.

Mark Acuff of the Pinal Pioneer, "Arizona's most interesting newspaper, calls for a Dirt Day to complement Earth Day. "Who," he writes, "can be closer to the earth and dirt than residents of Pinal County?" He evidently hasn't been in Lincoln County within the last four days. One of his columnists, Earl Rocky Tymes, disagrees. He writes: "I'm against 'Days.' Not Monday to Monday days, but days such as Groundhog Day, Prune Picking Day, Mother-in-law Day, Kiss your Neighbor Day." He suggests that "Days" are all taken, and "Weeks" are becoming scarce to the point where "Save the Burro Week, Submarine Week, Plant a Tree Week, Hog Week (only in Iowa) and Cow Chip Tossing Week (only in northeastern Montana) are crowding the agenda. He wants an official "I Don't Give A Damn Week" just for the common folks who go to work, pay their taxes, love and take care of their children, go to church, don't mind PTA meetings, write letters to the editor, and watch public television. It will be a carefree week—no mortgage payments, dental bills; when smokers are tolerated, along with horn blowers or deadbeat relatives who come visiting. He wants a week free of lying politicians and tough decisions. He ends his commendable tirade as follows:

"Look at the decisions we make each day: what deodorant to use, what mouthwash is best, how to save the seal. Still we're told to 'Have a Coke and a smile' and 'Reach out and touch someone.' How in the world can we smile and reach out and touch someone with such awesome pressures confronting us? That's where 'I Don't Give A Damn Week' comes in. During this one week a year we common folk won't care if we smell like the bottom of an ape's cage. We will ignore bad breath and dandruff. We'll laugh at everything the spouses utter. We'll ignore bills. And we'll give a little chuckle when our daughter/son announce they've just gotten married and are moving in."

"Yes, sir, it will be one long, happy week. We'll be so happy we'll even believe Texaco is working to keep our trust. There will be no ulcer flare-ups during this joyous week, and I'm certain coronary attacks will decrease.

"And as the sun sinks and darkness signals the end of this blissful week, don't even think of Monday."

Meanwhile, back to trash and garbage. I want these items identified and coded so that, instead of having to provide a landfill for it, it can be returned to the county or state from which it was blown.

In case you think my response to wind and cold is something off the top of my head, one of my first columns for the NEWS (April 1, 1982) reads: "Whoever's in charge of weather in New Mexico is fired. The Columbia had to cancel its Monday landing at White Sands Missile Range in the face of blowing dust and 50 knot winds. It was safer in outer space than it was in New Mexico. At noon Monday, I thought the Columbia had overshot Northrup Strip and was landing in Carrizozo, but it was only a pair of 30-gallon garbage cans on low-level reconnaissance. Over in Three Rivers the wind blew the horns off a billy goat. This Corona cowboy allowed too much space between his seat and the saddle while mounting up, and took off without his horse. He was last seen at 500 feet over Socorro. Anybody reporting for work Monday is entitled to hazardous duty pay."

Inside The Capitol

SANTA FE—Last summer, state engineer Steve Reynolds and state Sen. Joe Page were locked in a battle over Pecos River water policy.

Page represented San Miguel, Guadalupe and DeBaca counties—all in the upper Pecos River Valley. He grew up in Puerto de Luna, on the Pecos a little south of Santa Rosa. His father still lives there on land the family has owned for generations.

The first-year senator introduced a bill in the 1989 legislature providing for some improvements along the river. It was the first measure Page passed through the Senate and House. He received the rookie's traditional salute for accomplishing the feat. But the "final legislator," Gov. Garrey Carruthers, vetoed the measure in mid-May of 1989.

Page was furious. His blame fell on the broad shoulders of Reynolds, not only the state engineer for the past 34 years but the pre-eminent authority on Western water law. Despite Reynolds being a giant in his field, Page decided to take him on.

Reynolds was nearing the end of a brilliant defense of New Mexico's use of Pecos River water. Two years earlier, a federal court had ruled that our state owed Texas more than 340,000 acre-feet of water taken in violation of the Pecos River Compact. Texas wanted the debt paid with water. That sort of judgment would have dried up farming in much of the Pecos River Basin.

Reynolds fought to pay the debt in money. Texas said that would amount to around $1.2 billion. Late last summer, a special master appointed by the court ruled that New Mexico owed about one percent of that amount. Once again, Reynolds was a hero.

He was a hero, that is, to nearly everyone but Page and some of his constituents along the upper Pecos. Page contended that Reynolds had told Pecos water users to continue taking water from the river in the same amounts they had before despite the Texas suit. The result, he said, has been that water projects now needed along the river couldn't be undertaken because the money which should be used for those purposes was having to go into a savings account to pay the Texas judgment.

The Reynolds-Page battle continued through the summer of 1989. In August, I wrote a column suggesting that despite the many honors that were continuing to be accorded Reynolds, possibly he had erred a little on this one. The day the column appeared, Reynolds called to express his disagreement.

He said it was the first time he had been challenged by the press since the late Will Harrison used to take him on in the 1950s.

There was no rancor in Reynolds' voice. He enjoyed a good battle and he was ready for this one.

But one Joe Page died a month later, a heart attack victim in his early fifties.

And now they are both gone. Last week Reynolds, 73, succumbed to a diabetes-related circulatory problem he had been battling for nearly 10 years.

The wisdom of Reynolds' handling of Pecos River water policy has lost its two biggest adversaries. We won't get to see the former UNM student body president and football team captain fight one more battle to prove he was truly the water czar.

What we will get to witness is a battle over Reynolds' successor. For 35 years no governor has had to make a decision on hiring a state engineer. Not hiring Reynolds at the end of his two-year terms that are established by statute would have been unthinkable. Actually, former Gov. Toney Anaya is said to have thought about it but had the thought interrupted when he became embroiled in even bigger controversies toward the end of his term.

Reynolds served under 10 different governors since his original appointment in 1955. During nearly all that time Phil Mutz was an engineer working under Reynolds. Mutz has been appointed by Carruthers as acting state engineer. Carruthers' spokesman Eddie Binder says the governor isn't likely to quickly nominate a new engineer.

There has been conjecture Carruthers might name a respected former colleague from the New Mexico State University civil engineering department to complete the year. There are also rumors the governor could try to ram a two-year appointment through a special session this summer.

INTERMARRIAGE

My favorite historian, Marc Simmons in his "New Mexico Scrapbook" column in Socorro's Defensor Chief, writes that for many years promoters of the tourist industry have advertised New Mexico as a tricultural state. Simmons notes that it is a catchy phrase with exotic overtones which they hoped would lure visitors.

"The three cultures are understood to mean Indian, Hispanic and Anglo, which coalesced on the upper Rio Grande to produce a distinctive way of life . . . The complaint is that tricultural leaves out Black. A better word is multicultural, say the critics. . . Over the past 300 years numerous other cultures have contributed to the formation of New Mexico society. Comanches and Pawnees from the plains, for example, were absorbed by the Pueblos and the Spanish settlers. . . The French provide an additional example. Their traders, trappers and explorers entered New Mexico at an early date, intermarried and gave us such names as Gurgule, Alarid, Labadie and Archiebeque. . . Also in the last century groups like the Greeks, Italians, Irish, Germans, Japanese, Chinese, Lebanese, Jews and Arabs immigrated to New Mexico made their contribution, and within a single generation merged with either Hispanic or Anglo culture." Simmons says that it was the native New Mexicans who early decided that if a person was not Indian or Hispanic, then he must be an Anglo. "Thus, Anglo was transformed into a cultural term, applying to English-speaking Americans. And thereby, in local usage, Blacks, Browns, Orientals and other became Anglos."

WHY IZZIT?
In an effort to familiarize myself with areas of New Mexico that my ancestors may have hung their hats, I read books that mention the counties Lincoln, Chaves, Dona Ana, Otero, Socorro and San Miguel. Most Anglo authors make note of "a Mexican," or "a few Mexicans," or "several Mexicans." Why is it that these people seldom have names?

Two things I "learned" from these books: Indians were the first to populate the area and Anglo people settled the area. These settlers from New York, Kansas, and Texas tried Mexican foods, borrowed Mexican architectural ideas for building houses, and some married señoritas. All pertinently sprinkled their language with Spanish words: adobe, lasso, rodeo, tortilla. The books give Anglo settlers first and last names even if they only stopped to water a horse or change a wagon wheel.

NAMELESS MEXICANS
Mexican characters in some books are described only as male, female, young, old, pretty, heavy-set. I have a theory why this happens. I will begin with a make-believe story full of inaccuracies and distortions. The main character is: me. All names are fictitious except mine.

It is 1878. As I walk (naturally) down main street Lincoln (earlier known as Placitas) I become absorbed in thought: "This place could one day draw thousands of people during August. A parade perhaps and mock gunfights. People may come from as far away as Arizona Oaks. Even Texas and Arizona (believed by some to be the site where the first Chile pepper was planted). Tourists from Ohio, Ruidoso and New Jersey will line the streets munching on burritos, nachos and sopapillas."

My train of thought is interrupted by Henry McCarty, who pesters me to take his picture. "One day you'll be sorry you didn't take a snapshot of me." (Henry has many aliases: Henry Antrim, Billy Antrim, William H. Bonney.) I tell the short kid to bug off, which he did.

Suddenly I hear gunshots. I hide behind a rain barrel. I see John Doe, a Jay Hawker, kick the bucket (die). My first cousin Rosita also sees the man die. Now here is how a "history" writer 112 years later might record the "hysterical" event in his book:

"A Mexican woman (me) hiding behind a rain barrel witnessed the death of eminent Lincoln County Clerk John Doe, former resident of Kansas. The killing is still under investigation. Down the street Rosita Smith, who had just gotten down from her carriage, also witnessed the death. Parasci in hand she headed for the nearby mercantile. Yards of ruffles, laces and a bustle (a frame worn to swell out the fullness at the back of a woman's skirt) restricted Rosita from going in the door. To avoid stray gunshots she took a dive into the horse trough (a long boxlike water container for livestock). Rosita, a fine Spanish lady (not Mexican) was married to prominent Lincoln County Assessor Tom Smith who moved to Lincoln from the Little Apple (as New York City was called in the early days)."

SPELLING AGONY

Now let's try the shooting incident tale by giving the nameless Mexican woman an identity: "The woman who witnessed the death of Lincoln County Clerk John Doe was Paulita Bliza Sanchez Guruce Padilla Aragon Pacheco Trujillo Marino y Chavez, also known as Pablita, or simply 'Polly' and less often 'Patsy'."

In conclusion, the Anglo (in my opinion), that Anglo writers often omit the use of Hispanic names: (1) Names are too long. (2) The spelling is murder. (3) The pronunciation can drive them up a wall or (4) The printing costs will come down if Hispanic names are used sparingly.

Smokey Bear Museum had 426 registered visitors last week, among them Rolland and Lucille Wiley. His grandparents settled here and had a blacksmith shop. His grandmother's family Sidwell settled near Red Bluff Country near Artesia in 1892. They drove sheep and goats into the mountains from around San Angelo, TX. Rolland's father was Frank Wiley, foreman of the Circle Diamond Ranch on the Honda at the time Rolland was born in Picacho. He was very interested in Pine Lodge. He said he saw his first "logs" there when he was a kid. His first school was the Hog Waller school at Arabella, north side of the Capitan Moun-

Fundraiser for students to attend national competition

Capitan Elementary students who are members of the Odyssey of the Mind team will be walking Saturday.

To take them to the national Odyssey of the Mind competition in Ames, Iowa, at the end of May. With them they will take their state first-place projects.

The Saturday walk-a-thon will raise money by taking pledges for each mile walked on the Nogal Campground Road, along Indian Divide. Odyssey members or stand-ins for members who cannot walk the distance will be marking the miles for the trip to Iowa. To make pledges call Capitan School at 354-2238 and ask for Mary McIlwain, who will arrange for a student to take the pledges.

The reason for all the fundraising is the Capitan Division II team took first place at the state Odyssey contests in Albuquerque, April 21.

The winning project was a challenge to design and build a vehicle propelled by a rowing motion in order to drive around the world. As part of the project, girls on the team portrayed three different countries and told of three aspects of each country.

The vehicle was built by the team members from bicycle parts, PVC pipe, plywood and a fabric cover with oars attached to a wooden lever. The students had to build the project entirely themselves with no help from the coaches.

Competing with 13 other statewide teams, Keith Witham, Cody Turnbow, Kyle Jones, Philip Koreny, Meaghan Vison, Malini Fuagnvathi and Angie Hutchinson took the first place prize.

Last year, the Odyssey team only watched the state contest, making this the first year for competing. Now the team will take its award winning projects to Iowa State University for the national contests, May 31-June 6.

One challenge presented by the competition is that all projects could not cost more than $75. That included all props for the skit and the vehicle parts. Coach Mary McIlwain said the reason is to keep the competition even for all schools, regardless of the school's size.

Another reason McIlwain is excited is the winning team competed with much older students. Since teams are arranged by class, the winning team had to compete with those teams which has 6th graders also. Fuagnvathi, Vison and Hutchinson are 6th graders, but the other team members are in the 5th and 4th grades. Most of the other teams consisted of 6th graders, McIlwain said.

Division I team of Amber Goodloe, Amanda Koreny, Stephanie Childress, Chris Hall, Ty Davis, Klay Jones and Amanda Bird also competed on the state level. The team which designed and built an animated character, then prepared a skit around that character ranked fourth against 12 other teams. The students are from grades K-3. Jacque Childress was coach for the team.

Coaches McIlwain, Childress and Gloria and Archie Witham, and several moms will travel with the team to Iowa.

The team will be out walking Saturday, with hopes to bring the total of money raised to $3,500. Already about $1,200 has been raised.

Local groups help out on Earth Day

Local groups celebrated Earth Day by participating in the Rio Bonito Riparian project, April 21.

Capitan 4-H Club, Capitan Brownie Troop 99 and Capitan Junior Girl Scout Troop 92 helped plant grass and trees in the Ft. Stanton-Bonito River area.

Capitan 4-H members gathered four pickup loads of trash littering the highway near the Ft. Stanton landfill site. They also assisted the Soil Conservation Service with planting grass seed at the reclaimed areas of the landfill to help stop erosion.

The Brownies and Junior Girl Scouts also helped with the trash pickup and the grass planting, coordinated by Greg Hauser of the Soil Conservation Service.

In the afternoon, 4-Hers planted Ponderosa pine seedlings along the Rio Bonito to provide regeneration of the land. They also planted green ash, black walnut and Russian olive seedlings to help prevent stream bank erosion.

4-H members participating were Garrett Goodloe, Drew Smith, Jason Edwards, Josh Peralta, Cody Erwin, Thomas Roybal, Jody King, Justin King, Sheryl Dockery, Randy Hutchinson and Holt Hutchinson.

About 20 Brownies helped clean and plant grass with some of the Junior Scouts.

The juniors also interviewed some of the volunteers during the day to earn a patch. Scout leaders who helped were Jeanie Whipple, Kay Tracey, Merced McGrath and Kristi Lane. Carol Hauser also helped with the activities.

Betsy Eldridge to graduate from ENMU

Betsy Eldridge from Capitan is among 388 candidates who will complete graduation requirements from Eastern New Mexico University this spring. They will be eligible to participate in commencement exercises on May 11. Eldridge will graduate with honors with a bachelor of science in education degree in elementary education.

Facing Responsibilities

Children can influence their parents just as parents can influence children. When we fail to instill in their hearts strong conviction, they receive the message that we have no strong convictions. Gradually our will is broken down, and we permit them to do things we never dreamed we would. Instead of bringing our children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, we are brought down in nature and admission of the Devil. Our children may do wrong, but they must not do wrong with our consent and blessing.

In this day and time, all of us who are parents, grandparents, teachers, or anyone concerned about the welfare of our children, be they little or teenagers, desire to see that they receive the guidance needed to become good citizens and take their place in society, able to function and contribute. This is a noble goal. It will take a concentrated effort on our part, a never ending vigil. We must face our responsibility. The future of our generation lies in the balance.

Agency: DOD, U.S. Army, White Sands Missile Range, NM
Commanding General, U.S. Army White Sands Missile Range has been designated the functional staff proponent. For Headquarters Department of Army, the Army Staff (ARSTAF) proponent and lead office is Director, Test and Evaluation Management Agency.

Summary and Proposed Action: The U.S. Army White Sands Missile Range (WSMR) is proposing to construct and operate an Aerial Cable Test Capability (ACTC) from mountain peaks at WSMR using a large-scale aerial tramway on which vehicles will traverse in captive flight. The vehicles act as targets for testing ground-to-air and air-to-air missiles or launch platforms for air-to-ground munitions. This testing technique, developed at Sandia National Laboratories, Albuquerque, NM has demonstrated technical and economic advantages over tests using manned or unmanned aircraft. The Sandia Facility is limited in capability and satisfies only a small number of the DOD's programmatic requirements.

Four alternatives are being considered. The first three alternatives are to install the proposed ACTC at one of three WSMR sites. The fourth alternative is to do nothing. The No Action alternative would preclude adverse environmental impacts arising from the erection and operation of this facility. However, this type of testing would continue to be conducted with manned and unmanned aircraft, using more costly and frequently less technically rewarding techniques.

Three sites on WSMR were selected as alternatives after an evaluation of a total of ten sites. The sites were: (1) Coso Peak, China Lake, CA; (2) Cactus Peak, Nellis Air Force Base (AFB), NV; (3) Trigo Peak, Yuma Proving Grounds, AZ; (4) Gila Mountain, Goldwater Bombing Range, AZ; (5) Rattlesnake Ridge, Fort Bliss, TX; (6) Madera Canyon, Kirtland AFB, NM; (7) two towers on Eglin AFB, FL; (8) South Oscura Peak, WSMR, NM; (9) Fairview Mountain West, WSMR, NM; and (10) Fairview Mountain South, WSMR, NM.

Each site was evaluated based on available mountain support for the aerial cable, resulting span length, and cable clearance above ground. Sites 1, 2, and 4 were eliminated from consideration because they had mountain support at one end of the cable but would require a tower at the other end, resulting in potential interference with ongoing operations. Sites 3 and 5 were eliminated from consideration because of an insufficient safety footprint to support the proposed testing. Site 7 was eliminated from consideration because it required tower supports at both ends of the cable. The remaining three sites are potential sites, with South Oscura Peak (site 8) providing the greatest cable clearance above ground at the desired span with mountain-to-mountain support. A more detailed description of the siting process will be addressed in the EIS documentation.

Scoping Process: Comments received as a result of this notice will be used to assist the Army in identifying potential impacts to the quality of the environment. Individuals or organizations may participate in the scoping process by written comments or by attending a public scoping meeting to solicit inputs of significant environmental issues associated with the construction and operation of the ACTC at WSMR. This scoping meeting is scheduled for 9 May 1990, at the Carbine Auditorium, Physical Science Laboratory, New Mexico State University, corner of Espina and Stewart Streets, Las Cruces, NM from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. In addition to this scoping meeting, written inputs to the scoping process are solicited. Comments in response to this Notice of Intent (NOI) or as part of the scoping process are requested in writing within 30 calendar days from publication of this notice in the Federal Register.

Questions concerning the proposed action or the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) process for the action or comments on this NOI, should be addressed to Commander, U.S. Army White Sands Missile Range, ATTN: STEWS-IDDC (Mr. Henry B. Stephenson), White Sands Missile Range, NM, 88002.

Other written inputs concerning the scoping process should be mailed to the contracted consulting firm, Physical Science Laboratory, ATTN: Mr. Roy A. Cunniff, Box 30002, New Mexico State University, Las Cruces, NM 88003-0002.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO PREPARE AN ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STATEMENT FOR THE PROPOSED CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF THE AERIAL CABLE TEST CAPABILITY AT WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, NEW MEXICO.

Agency: DOD, U.S. Army, White Sands Missile Range, NM
Commanding General, U.S. Army White Sands Missile Range has been designated the functional staff proponent. For Headquarters Department of Army, the Army Staff (ARSTAF) proponent and lead office is Director, Test and Evaluation Management Agency.

Summary and Proposed Action: The U.S. Army White Sands Missile Range (WSMR) is proposing to construct and operate an Aerial Cable Test Capability (ACTC) from mountain peaks at WSMR using a large-scale aerial tramway on which vehicles will traverse in captive flight. The vehicles act as targets for testing ground-to-air and air-to-air missiles or launch platforms for air-to-ground munitions. This testing technique, developed at Sandia National Laboratories, Albuquerque, NM has demonstrated technical and economic advantages over tests using manned or unmanned aircraft. The Sandia Facility is limited in capability and satisfies only a small number of the DOD's programmatic requirements.

Four alternatives are being considered. The first three alternatives are to install the proposed ACTC at one of three WSMR sites. The fourth alternative is to do nothing. The No Action alternative would preclude adverse environmental impacts arising from the erection and operation of this facility. However, this type of testing would continue to be conducted with manned and unmanned aircraft, using more costly and frequently less technically rewarding techniques.

Three sites on WSMR were selected as alternatives after an evaluation of a total of ten sites. The sites were: (1) Coso Peak, China Lake, CA; (2) Cactus Peak, Nellis Air Force Base (AFB), NV; (3) Trigo Peak, Yuma Proving Grounds, AZ; (4) Gila Mountain, Goldwater Bombing Range, AZ; (5) Rattlesnake Ridge, Fort Bliss, TX; (6) Madera Canyon, Kirtland AFB, NM; (7) two towers on Eglin AFB, FL; (8) South Oscura Peak, WSMR, NM; (9) Fairview Mountain West, WSMR, NM; and (10) Fairview Mountain South, WSMR, NM.

Each site was evaluated based on available mountain support for the aerial cable, resulting span length, and cable clearance above ground. Sites 1, 2, and 4 were eliminated from consideration because they had mountain support at one end of the cable but would require a tower at the other end, resulting in potential interference with ongoing operations. Sites 3 and 5 were eliminated from consideration because of an insufficient safety footprint to support the proposed testing. Site 7 was eliminated from consideration because it required tower supports at both ends of the cable. The remaining three sites are potential sites, with South Oscura Peak (site 8) providing the greatest cable clearance above ground at the desired span with mountain-to-mountain support. A more detailed description of the siting process will be addressed in the EIS documentation.

Two women charged with disorderly conduct

A brawl in a local bar has been taken to court.

An incident in the parking lot of the Four Winds Lounge in Carrizozo on April 14 resulted in charges of disorderly conduct and interference with an officer filed against Carrizozo residents Carol Schlarb and Carmen Ramirez.

According to police reports, the lounge called the police about a fight, and that one person might have a broken nose. When Police Chief Choncho Morales and officer John Northrup arrived, they found the man bleeding from the nose and the two women screaming about who was involved in the fight. The officers called physician's assistant Ernie Gonzales, who came and treated the injured man. The man then was taken home by an officer, although the women wanted to take him.

Although no arrests were made at the incident, charges were filed against the women by Morales on April 17.

Last Friday, April 27, the women were scheduled to appear in Municipal Judge S.M. Ortiz's court for their first appearance. However, word was sent by their attorney, Don Dutton, to waive the first appearance on the women's behalf to plead not guilty to the two counts of disorderly conduct and interference with an officer.

Town attorney Robert Beauvais will represent the town of Carrizozo.

A court date has not been set at this time.

NOTICE TO LINCOLN COUNTY PROPERTY OWNERS PROPERTY TAXES DUE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that 1989 Property Taxes became due November 10, 1989 and will become delinquent December 11, 1989. Taxes may be paid in full by December 10, 1989, or in two equal installments, with the second half becoming due April 10, 1990 and delinquent if not paid by May 10, 1990.

Pursuant to Section 7-31-50 of the New Mexico Property Tax Code, a minimum penalty of five dollars ($5.00) or one percent per month must be charged on all delinquent taxes, and pursuant to Section 7-31-49, one percent per month must be collected on all delinquent accounts.

Pursuant to Section 7-38-53, property taxes are the personal obligation of the owner of the property and the sale or transfer of property within that tax year does not relieve the former owner of personal liability for property taxes in that year. Failure to receive a bill is not sufficient cause to ask to have penalty and interest waived.

Owners of personal property, such as mobile homes or office equipment, who have allowed taxes to become delinquent more than two years will be served with a demand warrant for collection of these delinquent taxes, pursuant to Section 7-38-53 of New Mexico statutes Annotated 1978, if delinquent taxes are not paid in full by May 10, 1990.

If you have questions concerning your property taxes, please contact the Lincoln County Treasurer's Office at 505/648-2397 or 505/648-2525.
