

Trash dumpsters to remain in county, at least for now

By DORIS CHERRY

Call it a spirit of cooperation or call it just plain politics, but the Lincoln County Commissioners acquiesced to pressure from all county municipalities and cancelled their order to take out the free dumpsters Sept. 7.

A letter signed by all five mayors of Lincoln County municipalities requesting the dumpsters be retained, at least until the beginning of the new year when the group hopes to have established some sort of solid waste authority to deal with all the county's garbage, convinced commissioners Rick Simpson, Karon Petty and Bob Hemphill to retain at least 20 dumpsters.

Also, they began the process of creating an ordinance for a 1/8 of one percent gross environmental special receipts tax, which will produce about $43,000 a year, enough to finance the 20 dumpsters.

Not only will the tax help finance dumpsters, but eventually might be added to the 1/16 percent collected by the municipalities for a solid waste authority.

County manager Nick Pappas said Monday the gross receipt tax is the only fair way to help finance such an authority, since it will not burden property owners.

Rather it will tax all who do business in Lincoln County, including tourists, many of whom have caused the excess generation of solid waste.

Also the gross receipt tax will provide a basis for revenue bonds to additionally finance the authority. And since the authority will be the first of its kind in the state, the chance to obtain grants is great, Pappas noted.

Petty spoke of the informal meeting at Ruidoso village hall the Friday before where she was confronted by the mayors who asked the county to keep dumpsters in order to buy time for the authority.

"Ruidoso has a genuine concern," Petty said. "For without the county dumpsters, the county trash will end up in Ruidoso's."

The cooperation also showed Petty there is an effort to pool all the governments together and set up an entity to deal with solid waste.

Not only is Ruidoso worried about added trash in its dumpsters, so are Capitan, Ruidoso Downs, Carrizozo and Corona.

Hemphill used the letter as a positive note for his commission by saying they used the letter writers to help move them toward a solution to the solid waste problem since nothing was being done before the decision to take out the dumpsters.

"It's been a great spirit of cooperation on the landfill scene," he said.

He also had no problem with extending the contract with Southwest Disposal Corp. for the free county dumpsters as long as the other governments are moving toward the solution.

Petty said the county should take the leadership role by setting up the special district commission board, which consists of two elected county representatives, two municipal elected representatives and one appointed by the four from the public. She made the motion for the commission which was approved unanimously.

A meeting to chose the two from the municipalities was called for Sept. 10 in Ruidoso. Within five days the two representatives from municipalities and the two from the county must meet and choose the second. Friday, the group agreed to meet at 2 p.m. Sept. 14 in Capitan to appoint the fifth member of the special district commission.

The commission will be charged with creating an authority board. Once the board is established, the special district commission will not deal with the authority.

The special district commission will consider proposals for the authority's functions.

Pappas explained the authority, which will first deal with transportation of solid waste, will expand to eventually include the Class C landfill acquisition, the collection of solid waste in the municipalities and county and finally buying municipal equipment and a paid staff. The authority could evolve into a quasi-governmental body that acts as a business for solid waste collection. Sometime in the future, the authority could look into its own landfill.

Hemphill agreed the county can't afford to be its own authority because of the vast distances. By including the municipalities, they all can pool resources and funding to make the authority work.

"It makes economical sense if we all do it," Hemphill said.

Branch bank for Corona?

Corona area residents interested in having a five-day-a-week branch bank in their community need to fill out a survey.

A feasibility study is being conducted by Ruidoso State Bank to determine the number of deposits possible in the community.

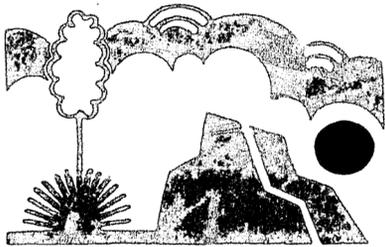

Survey forms are available at Corona Village Hall, Shell station and Corona Trading Company. Respondents are requested to return the forms as soon as possible.

Garcia flexes his mayor pro-tem muscles

Without a hearing, Police Officer Emmons suspended

A Carrizozo Police Officer doing his duty was suspended without pay by the town council and pro-tem mayor.

Officer Rick Emmons, with the department more than a year, was suspended by the Carrizozo Trustees at their meeting Tuesday night, following a lengthy closed session. Mayor Pro-tem Harold Garcia called a session to deal with a number of items, including two complaints against Emmons which Garcia had just received that afternoon.

Mayor Cecilia Kuhnle and clerk Carol Schlarb were in Taos at the New Mexico Municipal League meeting. Kuhnle is a voting delegate for the town.

Garcia also listed three letters from attorneys, a situation about the psychological evaluation on the new temporary officer and police scheduling as items to be discussed in closed session. "I don't make it a practice to divulge the scheduling to the public in a meeting," he said.

At a recent conference on closed meetings, conducted by the Attorney General's office, the issue of police scheduling was discussed and agreed it did not qualify for an exception and should be discussed in open meeting.

Even though officer Emmons went into the meeting room about 8 p.m. to talk to acting chief John Northrup Jr. about another case, he was not called into the closed session where trustees Dale LaMay, Gilbert Archuleta, Patsy Vallejos and Garcia were discussing the various items with town attorney Robert Beauvais.

But at the end of the session, trustees returned to open meeting and unanimously approved suspending Emmons without pay until the personnel discipline hearing set for 4 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 4. The suspension was based on the two complaints heard during the closed session, Garcia said.

Although Garcia did not disclose what the complaints were, Emmons told THE NEWS he was denied due process since he had received no verbal or written warnings, no hearing or request for review about the two complaints.

The complaints dealt with two citations issued to 20-year-old John Saucedo, and a minor traffic accident involving the mother of town employee Manuel Vigil.

"It's kind of funny the only ones that complain (in this town) are the ones whose kids are always in trouble," Emmons said about a complaint filed against him by Saucedo's mother, Patty Saucedo.

Emmons appeared before municipal judge S. M. Ortiz on the complaint and charge of disturbing the peace filed by Patty Saucedo Aug. 22. He pled not guilty at the preliminary hearing and requested a jury trial which Ortiz denied because the penalty was less than six months in jail.

According to Emmons, he was doing his duty when he issued two citations to John Saucedo, which eventually led to a confrontation at the Saucedo home later in the morning of Aug. 19.

He had stopped John Saucedo in Carrizozo about 2 a.m. and noticed open alcohol containers. With Saucedo was juvenile Chris Barela. Emmons cited Saucedo for open container and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Emmons took Saucedo to the sheriff's office to administer a breath alcohol test, which Saucedo refused. Instead, Saucedo requested a blood test, which was administered by PA Ernie Gonzales. To take the blood test, a consent form was signed.

The consent form, however, disappeared from the office at the jail, which Emmons did not notice at first. The boys were asked if they wanted to return to the vehicle or go home. Saucedo then asked if he could make some phone calls, which he did, finally reaching Angelo Vega, who offered to go back to him home with him. When Vega arrived at SO, he talked with Emmons while Saucedo went outside.

Emmons had left his citation book on the top of his patrol car outside, but when he went out after talking with Vega, to question Saucedo about the consent form, the citation book was gone.

The two young men had already left in separate vehicles, so Emmons said he followed them to Saucedo's home. As Emmons pulled up in his patrol car, Saucedo was just getting out of the car. "He bolted into the house," Emmons said.

Emmons said he knocked on the door and John answered. Emmons asked for the citation book and consent form which Saucedo denied he had. However, Emmons said he saw the book in Saucedo's hand as he went into the house.

Emmons irate over the missing consent form, then the missing citation book. "It's mind-boggling to think he would take the book."

Saucedo did turn over the citation book to Emmons, then gave Vega his wallet so it could be searched. Vega found no consent form. At first John gave his consent for Emmons to look in his truck, but by then his father was awake and challenged Emmons and refused to allow the search of the truck.

John's mother Patty also was up, however, she was not present during the conversation over the citation book.

Grizzly season opener at Laguna-Acoma Friday

Carrizozo Grizzlies football team will not play Melrose for their season opener Saturday.

Instead, the Grizzlies will travel to the other side of the state to play AA Laguna-Acoma High School at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 31.

Melrose informed Carrizozo it did not have a team as yet and could not play as regularly scheduled. However, Hatch High School had just cancelled its first game with Laguna for the same reason as Melrose, leaving Carrizozo and Laguna without teams to play. It was arranged to have the two schools play to keep their game slots filled.

Laguna is located east of Grants. The easiest way to get there from Carrizozo is to travel west on Highway 380 to Socorro, north on I-25 to Los Lunas then west on State Highway 6. That road comes out on I-40 about 13 miles east of Laguna. Take I-40 west into Laguna.

Coach Mel Holland commented on the scrimmage with Capitan Saturday. He learned his team is still young and has much practice ahead. Overall he was pleased.

The first home game is with Hatch at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 7.

Valley of Fires now has new management

Valley of Fires State Park is now Valley of Fires Recreation Area.

Bureau of Land Management's Roswell Resource area administers the area, located three miles west of Carrizozo on Highway 380, which provides overnight camping, picnicking, nature study and general recreation. The area sits on an island of rock surrounded by a lava flow estimated to be 1500 years old. Known as the Carrizozo Malpais, the flow is considered the youngest in the continental US.

The area previously was managed by the state, which recently reconveyed the patent, originally purchased under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, to BLM.

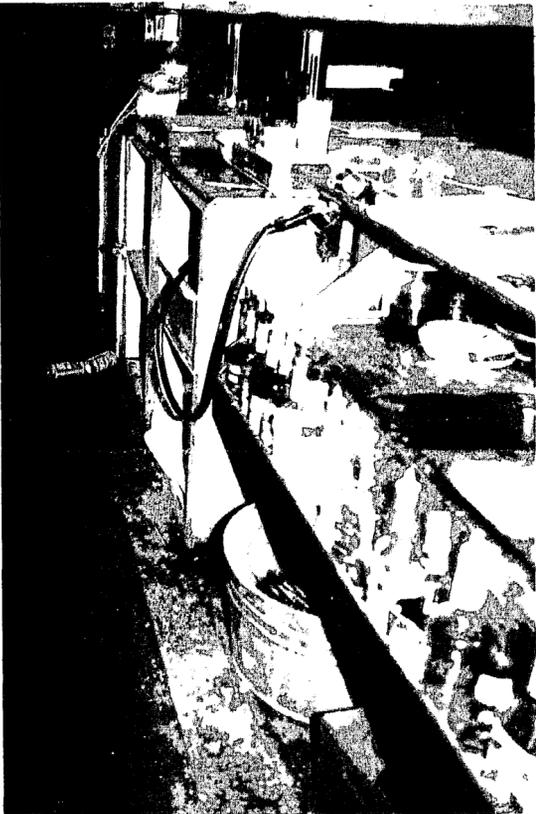

Albert Najjar, who managed the park under the state, now is employed by BLM to continue management of the area. The park facilities include electrical hook-ups for trailers, shelters, tables, barbecue grills and restrooms; all refurbished, replumbed and made partially handicapped accessible. There are camping fees comparable to other areas.

BLM stated the area provides a unique opportunity for the public to view vegetation and wildlife species common only to the Malpais.

Specific information concerning Valley of Fires can be obtained by writing to BLM Roswell Resource Area, P.O. Box 1857, Roswell, N.M. 88202 or by calling 624-1790.

BLM also recommends about 24,000 acres of the lava field surrounding Valley of Fires Recreation Area be designated as wilderness, part of a statewide package of BLM lands to be presented to congress next spring.

BEER CANS LIE where they fell during a burglary of Club Carrizozo last weekend. The thief or thieves apparently like tequila and whiskey with a chaser of beer, since they were the only things missing from the club.

Thieves, vandals hit Club Carrizozo

When Carrizozo mayor Cecilia Kuhnle opened her Club Carrizozo Monday morning as usual she was surprised by broken glass, a kicked open door and missing booze.

Some person (s) entered the club by kicking open a side door connected to a storage room, then kicked open another boarded up door to gain entry into the bar part of the lounge.

Lincoln County Deputy Charlie Engleking went to the club after receiving the report of a burglary from Kuhnle. He photographed the broken window, doors and damage caused by the entry.

The thief (thieves) apparently liked tequila and whiskey, with a chaser of beer, for five fifths of whiskey and two fifths of tequila gold were gone, along with a six-pack of beer. All the chest coolers were left open and the thief (thieves) dropped some of the single beers on the floor in haste.

Engleking dusted all the cans and other smooth surfaces for any suspicious fingerprints which will be examined in a forensic lab in Albuquerque.

None of the coin operated machines (juke box and pool table) showed signs of forced entry.

A window near the main entrance door was broken and the lath screen covering pried back, but apparently proved to be too difficult, for only a small hole was pried open.

Kuhnle said everything was alright at the club at closing time Saturday, about midnight or 12:30 a.m. Sunday. However, she did not open Sunday and only discovered the burglary Monday morning about 11 a.m.

"It was the shockeroo of the day," Kuhnle commented.

The investigation continues.

Garcia flexes

Emmons said the parents asked him to consider dismissing the charges against their son, which is the officer's prerogative by law. But Emmons checked Saucedo's citation record and found one issued Dec. 31, 1989 for the same charges and refused.

When Patty Saucedo filed the complaint against Emmons for disturbing the peace, she claimed he was shouting profanities and pounding on the door.

Although irate, Emmons insisted he said no obscenities.

The citation on Saucedo are pending until the blood test is returned from the forensic lab in Albuquerque. Saucedo was to have appeared in court Tuesday afternoon, but Judge Ortiz said his mother called and said he already was in school (out of town) and unable to make the court date.

The other complaint against Emmons was over a very minor traffic accident in a private parking lot. When Emmons attempted to investigate at the scene, Manuel Vigil, the son of the woman involved in the accident, came up to him and tried to tell him how to write the accident report. Emmons said it made him angry since the man was not a witness or in either vehicle. Legally, Emmons said he could have cited the man for interfering with a police officer.

After the decision made in open session at Tuesday night's town meeting, Garcia sent Northrup to tell Emmons, who was at the SO dealing with a domestic violence situation.

"He wanted my badge, commission card, car and my gun," Emmons said about the events of late evening Tuesday. He owned his gun, so he kept it.

Emmons was certified by the New Mexico Law Enforcement Academy and worked the 8 p.m. to 4 a.m. shift with Carrizozo Police Department.

One other complaint was made against him, that was from Sandra Morales who took her complaint to the council during Robert Hemphill's administration. At that hearing Emmons was taken into the closed session to discuss the problem.

Tuesday night he had no idea what was taking place. "I have a right to know," he said.

"It's funny criminals have rights but a police officer is guilty before proven," he concluded.

Emmons has retained an attorney with Pickett and Holmes of Las Cruces, who will defend him at the court hearing on the disturbing the peace charge and in the personnel disciplinary hearing Tuesday.

Mayor Cecilia Kuhnel was in Taos and unavailable for comment.

Lady Tigers to return in force

Capitan Lady Tigers volleyball team is already looking good.

Coach Pam Allen said 25 high school girls have come out for practice, with a lot of experience returning.

"We're fundamentally real sound. We do nearly everything well," she said.

Allen attributes most of the team's success to the fact that her girls work extremely hard, with some even working out at home after they leave the gym.

Returning varsity seniors are Cindy Castillo, outside hitter; Kerri Runnels, mid-blocker and defense specialist; Leslie LaRue, mid-blocker and outside hitter; Vicky Sedillo, mid-blocker and outside hitter and Karie Cox, setter.

Returning juniors are Jennifer Eldridge, middle blocker and Crystal Dalton, setter. Kelly Cox, setter, is returning sophomore.

The girls will get their hands on the ball at the Capitan scrimmage set for this Saturday. AAA schools Goddard varsity and junior varsity, Moriarty varsity and JV, Socorro varsity and JV and AAAA Los Lunas varsity and JV will play Capitan. Both Capitan gyms will see action with varsity teams in the old gym and JV teams in the new gym. Admission is free.

The regular season will open with Tatum Sept. 7 in that town.

Allen foresees a good season with a good schedule of teams to play.

TIGER FOOTBALL
Capitan football season begins at 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 31, when the Tigers play Eunice on Tiger Field.

Government's battle with New Mexico UFO witnesses

By KATE MacGREGOR

(Kate MacGregor is a writer/columnist for Sunmount Syndicate, Santa Fe, NM.)

To hear Robert Lazar tell it, the government sent him to a top-secret base located in the corner of the Nevada Test Site where he was assigned to examine the power sources of spaceships.

But to hear the government tell it, Robert Lazar does not exist.

A scientist who claims a background and credentials in physics and electronics, including a degree from MIT, Lazar has come forward with a story both bizarre and controversial: As a civilian employee for the US Navy in 1984, he was transferred from Los Angeles to a site called Area 51 in the southern Nevada desert, where, he contends, several alien spacecraft are housed.

His job was to disassemble the flying saucers in the hopes of identifying and understanding the advanced propulsion techniques used to fly them.

Unwilling to keep hidden what he considered the greatest story in the history of the world—that some physical contact has been established with another intelligence in the universe—Lazar eventually went public despite a shroud of government secrecy. Last fall, KLAS-TV, the CBS affiliate in Las Vegas, NV, interviewed the scientist, at length, before producing a carefully researched nine-part "special report" about his claims.

Asked about Lazar this week, personnel officers at Los Alamos told Sunmount Syndicate they could find no record that he was ever employed at that laboratory. Nonetheless, a reporter's check revealed Lazar's name listed in an official 1982 laboratory phone directory, and a 1982 news article, apparently about the same Robert Lazar, appeared in the Los Alamos Monitor.

While tales of unidentified Flying Objects (UFOs) are fascinating and newsworthy, however, neither the sightings nor even the credibility of witnesses like Robert Lazar tell the whole story.

Equally intriguing is the concerted, sometimes extreme measures apparently taken by various arms of the US government to discredit, ridicule, harass, suppress, and even intimidate individuals who claim any knowledge about, or experience with, UFOs.

Such tactics are not new to New Mexico residents, who constitute one of the largest groups of UFO witnesses. In the late 1940s and 1950s, there were more reported UFO sightings in the state of New Mexico than anywhere in the world. Since New Mexico was then the nexus of the most sophisticated military activity of the era, many of the individuals who reported the sightings were military personnel associated with the 509th Bomb Group at Roswell, the White Sands Missile Range near Alamogordo, or with Los Alamos where the atomic and hydrogen bombs were spawned.

According to many of those witnesses, they were frequently ordered by their government superiors not to discuss their experiences. Their reports were often classified, which prevented public dissemination. Some were even threatened with loss of retirement or subjected to outright discrimination if they made what the government considered "indiscreet" comments about what they had seen.

Much of the documented suppression tactics centered around the 1947 crash in Roswell, New Mexico of what the Army originally called a flying saucer. Photographs taken by the Roswell Daily Record, a venerable and respected New Mexico paper, were splashed across newspaper pages throughout the US, and, according to Jack Swickard, the former editor of the Record, the words "flying saucer" were published for the first time by that paper.

More than one hundred witnesses to that explosion are still alive, and some have waited 40 years before admitting that they were ordered to falsify their reports. Some of those interviewed by Sunmount Syndicate:

●Walter Haut, a retired Army lieutenant who acted as the official press liaison at the time of the incident, wrote the original press release announcing that the US Army Air Force, as it was then called, had recovered the crashed remains of a "flying saucer." Immediately inundated by press inquiries from around the world, Haut was ordered by a general to retract his earlier release and identify it as a government weather balloon instead.

Haut now says he was told by his commanding officer never to mention the term "flying saucer" again. Haut resigned his commission less than a year later.

●Among the officers

associated with the government's infamous investigation of UFOs called "Project Bluebook" was an Air Force Major named Milton R. Knight. Yet the Air Force reportedly eradicated Knight's records when he was suspected of discussing his activities with the media. Even though Walter Haut himself and others had served with Major Knight for many years, and knew Knight's serial number, the Air Force insisted that no such individual existed.

●Lt. Bob Shirkey was a flight operations officer for the US Air Force at the time of the Roswell crash. He told KLAS-TV that he had been dispatched to a local funeral home to obtain caskets for the bodies of alien creatures that had died in the crash. Contacted at his Roswell home recently Shirkey refused to discuss, over the telephone at least, various government efforts to silence him.

●Major Jesse Marcel, a former Army intelligence officer who has since died, was in charge of loading the New Mexico wreckage onto a transport plane and flying it to Ft. Worth Army Base in Texas. According to Swickard, who is now editor of the Farmington Daily Times, Marcel is said to have made a virtual deathbed admission that the remains he saw in the New Mexico countryside in 1947 were "not of this earth."

Not surprisingly, interest in the Roswell crash has not waned in the 43 years since its occurrence, nor has the federal government revised its policy to downplay the incident. Cory Beck, publisher of the Roswell Daily Record, says documents about the crash remain classified by the Army and Air Force. Beck continues to receive inquiries from interested parties around the world, and a major film company is currently considering producing a movie about the bizarre crash.

The crash was depicted in a 1980 non-fiction book entitled The Roswell Incident which, according to Beck, was widely read in the community. The television series "Unsolved Mysteries" featured the crash in a late 1989 episode, and camera crews and journalists from both the US and abroad routinely request information from the Daily Record.

William Moore, the Los Angeles-based author of The Roswell Incident says the government has not attempted to discredit his journalistic credentials or to cancel the book. He has, however, been approached by various government agencies, including the Air Force Office of Special Investigations, which has given him what he calls "disinformation."

"UFOs are a magnet for every crackpot in the country," cautions Moore. "So one must be very careful in analyzing documentation. Certain agencies stir the UFO pot, for some reason, and there is a tremendous amount of disinformation and phony documents circulation in the UFO community. Some are extremely sophisticated, and some are merely diversions from the truth."

More recently, an Army sergeant, based in Roswell and assigned to the New Mexico Military Institute, reported another UFO sighting. His veracity immediately came under attack from

KEEPS D.A. JOB

New Mexico's Supreme Court said 7th Judicial District Attorney Lee Deschamps did break the law, but refused to remove him from office.

The four charges made by a Socorro County grand jury: that Deschamps had drunk beer while driving on business; that he routinely exceeded the speed limit while on business; that he instructed one employee to sign his name on a court pleading and another to notarize that signature; and that he had entered into a consulting contract with the husband of one of his employees.

Deschamps did not deny any of the charges. He cited the size of the judicial district (which includes Catron, Sierra, Socorro and Torrance Counties) as the reason he needed to speed. Chief Justice Dan Sosa Jr. said (according to The Citizen serving the Estancia Valley) that the court had not been asked to determine if laws had been violated. The question Sosa said was whether Deschamps was guilty of gross incompetence or gross negligence. The court, he said, did not find either.

PEN PALS

Superior Court Judge Raymond R. Norke wants to edit letters for a booklet he wants to distribute to Hartford, CT school students to scare them away from a life of crime. He has asked about a dozen men in prison to write to him.

Norko has given new meaning to the term "pen pal" says a story in Insight. He has asked criminals convicted in his courtroom to write him letters from prison, telling him all about life behind bars and how they got there.

Several letters warn about the dangers of drugs: "Believe me when I tell you that once I made the choice to do drugs all my other choices were made for me," wrote one inmate serving 11 years on a variety of charges.

"If you're doing drugs now I won't tell you to stop," wrote the prisoner. "You have to make the decision for yourself. I will, however, tell you one thing your dealer doesn't tell you. All drugs come from with a triple guarantee: (1.) Jails (2.) Institutions (3.) Death. If nobody can reach you with words, then look me up when you get here."

MAKE IT DO

"Use it over, wear it out, make it do, do without." —a good quote to have handy when money isn't handy.

Here are some tips to help you stretch that dollar: Left over vegetables? Make a pureed sauce from them and blend into canned soup.

If your cake falls in the center, use it as a base for pudding. Hard and dry cookies can be ground and used as topping for pudding, ice cream or fruit.

Save the old blanket for padding the ironing board. Over this stretch a piece of old sheet. Clean out your closet, garage, and shed to make extra money at a weekend sale. Ask a friend to join in with their items so that bargain hunters can have a better selection. Place an ad in the Lincoln County News, divide the cost.

Life Savers candies can be used to hold the candles in place on birthday cake. Arrange the candies in a design on top of the cake and then insert the candles inside the candy holes. Keep a set of house and car keys in a film canister. Let a friend keep them for you in case you lock yourself out of the house or car.

Commissioners

Phill said.

Once the authority begins to assume countywide collection, how to bill the customers remained a question. Petty said the only way the authority can work is to have mandatory fees for all county residents (this was also discussed at the Friday meeting).

County treasurer Shirley Goodloe asked if the billing would be on the property tax rolls. Pappas said it could be, but fees would be charged to all households, not just property owners.

Such answers will be required of the authority board once it is established.

Discussion about which 20 dumpsters to leave in the county (there are now 24) led to talking those at commercial businesses to other locations. Petty noted the county solid waste ordinance required businesses to provide their own dumpsters.

In answer to a question from Simpson about commercial rates, Joe Lewandowski of Southwest Disposal Corp. (SDC) said it depends on location of the business, but probably would not be as high as those for the county. Since some of the isolated dumpsters are costly to service, and SDC cleans around the dumpsters, the overall rates are averaged for the county services.

Audience member Stirling Spencer complimented the "real spirit of cooperation" but wanted to know why the county had 1/8 and the cities 1/16 gross receipt taxes and what the county will have to give up to become part of the authority.

Pappas said the 1/8 was imposed by the state legislature. However, Lincoln County has no gross receipt taxes now. There are provisions within the structure of the special district commission to allow for withdrawing.

The county will renegotiate with SDC to keep the 20 dumpsters in the unincorporated areas, with locations to be determined later. Hemphill suggested county residents petition to have a dumpster moved to a location.

Spencer said the county commission should put time limits on keeping the dumpsters to "keep the group moving."

"Anything over four months is moot," Hemphill commented. (Their term expires in four months and all are not seeking re-election.)

The rest of the county business was conducted in record time, with approval given to the 1990-91 budget with the minor revisions over clarification of transfers from funds, the list of property removed from county inventory and a complaint about a county road.

Jerry Carroll of Oscura Hall county supervisor Tommy Hall road CO-111 east of Oscura was getting washed out to the point of endangering someone's health. Hall also said many other county roads were in the same condition following recent heavy rainfall and the road crews are working to repair them.

OPINION

● Back in 1977 during another oil crisis in the United States, I wrote an OPINION column for my California newspaper. Conditions today brought on by the Iraq situation in the Middle East, which includes the rise of gasoline prices by as much as 20 cents a gallon so far, call for a review of my comments at that time. Here is reproduced the column that appeared in the Sebastopol (CA) Times on Dec. 8, 1977. Let's see how it plays today:

● Recently The Contra-Costa Times, Walnut Creek, CA, conducted a study that proves (all over again) alcohol is better than gasoline for powering automobiles. Alcohol is cheap to produce, burns clean, meets emission standards without pollution control devices, and can be made from just about any organic matter—wheat, corn, sorghums, cornstalks, sugar cane, sugar beets, fruits, vegetables, garbage, trees, bushes, whatever. The Times got a test car. Without modifying the engine, a mixture of alcohol and gasoline resulted in 35% better mileage, 25% more power and emissions well below EPA standards. It started me thinking. As a child I recall that when we were out of gasoline for our 1924 Ford touring car, all we had to do was pour corn whisky in the tank and take off. Of course, whisky was more expensive than gasoline, so this was for emergencies only. With gasoline costing 9 cents a gallon and corn liker 50 cents a pint, you can see how uneconomical it was to use booze. But the picture has changed. Gasoline is now $1.44 a gallon, far more expensive than a gallon of alcohol—and we don't have to import it from abroad.

● The Times also published an ad for Studebaker trucks that appeared in magazines and newspapers back in the 1930s, one of which is reproduced here. It ran on alcohol, and the company claimed a 45% saving on fuel. Another ad (not shown here) offered McCormick-Deering tractors designed to run on alcohol without any change in the engine.

ATTENTION TO SUGAR PLANTERS

STUDEBAKER TRUCKS

The New Studebaker Trucks are now built to use alcohol instead of gasoline, a saving to you of 45% on fuel. We now have a limited stock on hand, and are prepared to demonstrate and prove to you the saving you can make with Studebaker Trucks.

● Let's go back to the 1920s. Racing cars ran on almost pure alcohol because of its high efficiency as a fuel. During the 1930s a product known as Agrol, a 10% blend of alcohol and gasoline, was widely marketed in the Midwest. In the 1940s, let it be remembered that Germany's ground war machine ran almost totally on alcohol fuels in the waning days of World War II. Only this year the State of Nebraska conducted a 2 million-mile road test involving gasoline cut with 10% alcohol (ethanol). Researchers found no difference in auto performance. Only a few weeks ago an organization, WIFE (Women Involved in Farm Economics) drove in a caravan from the West and Midwest to Washington, DC, in cars fueled with gasoline, a 10% mix of alcohol and gasoline. They reported no problems and no unusual wear. They did report a near 10% increase in mileage on their cars.

● President Carter has proposed a reduction of 10% in the use of petroleum-based gasoline as a national energy goal. Yet, by simply converting present grain surpluses to alcohol for fuel, 4/5 of that goal could be reached immediately and not one bit of grain would be removed from the market place to achieve such a saving. Why, then, has this administration chosen to ignore this obvious solution to the energy crisis—if indeed one exists? If Washington and Detroit could agree to use gasohol (10% alcohol, 90% gasoline), oil imports could be cut by as much as 20%, a new major industry could be created, there would be a ready market for all farm products, industry could grow, and the environment would be improved.

● There is some hope from Washington, where the energy crisis originated and where, alas, it must be solved. The 1977 Food & Agriculture Act authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to spend $60 million for four pilot alcohol distilleries, none of which have been built. $60 million for pilot distilleries for a product that has been tested and approved more than 60 years?

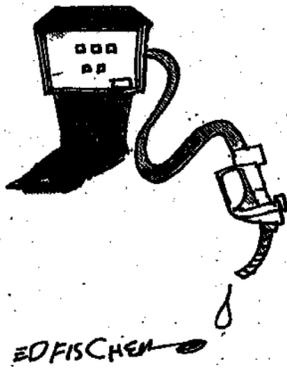

● Meanwhile, we continue to spend billions of dollars abroad for Arab oil, which weakens the financial structure of the nation. We spend other billions

CONGRESSMAN ASPIN THREATENS WAR — AFTER SLASHING OUR DEFENSE BUDGET

The scene is Capitol Hill. The time is just hours after the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq.

The speaker is the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, the Hon. Les Aspin, Democrat of Wisconsin, who declares dramatically:

"We need to tell Hussein that an invasion of Saudi Arabia means war!"

And how has Armed Services Chairman Aspin and his fellow Democrats supported the United States ability to make said war? Why, Mr. Aspin & Company had just slashed the nation's defense budget by $24 billion.

The US Air Force, if it is obliged to bomb Baghdad, is counting on its few B-2 Stealth Bombers and fighters to evade enemy radar and missiles. The Aspin program to a complete halt.

They arranged to cut the US Armed Forces by 129,000 volunteers—many of them life careers—who will be sent to unemployment lines.

The Democrat-controlled Congress also gutted SDI—which could be as important to our national defense as the Spitfire was to England.

The cuts of our national defense have been so bad that the Defense Department has had to charter civilian planes to move troops.

The bulk of armored equipment such as tanks has to go on ships and takes 30 to 45 days.

Aspin & Company even slashed the production of the Tomahawk Cruise missile—one of our most effective weapons—as well as the Army's ATACMS missile. The ATACMS can dump hundreds of anti-tank grenades on massed enemy vehicles 100 miles away.

But Aspin & Company refused to fund it. And yet this man, Les Aspin, wants Saddam Hussein threatened with our war effort—which he has so extensively undermined.

SANTA FE—New Mexico's judges are squirming about the 1990 elections—and maybe having some second thoughts.

Two years ago at this time they were eagerly promoting a constitutional amendment to give themselves a job for life. As with some other amendments on the 1988 ballot, the judges had dressed up their proposal in the robes of "judicial reform." And it worked!

Gullibly, we allowed into our constitution a provision that no judge, who was in office prior to Jan. 1, 1989, will ever have to face an opponent. Judges who were appointed since that date will have opposition in this election and then they are home free.

Part of the judicial concern relates to confusion voters will have between judges who must run in traditional partisan elections and those who only must stand for "retention." Judges in the latter category will be on a different part of the ballot, possibly struck in with constitutional amendments and bond issues.

Since ballot questions are rejected much more often than incumbent judges are voted out of office, there is reason for concern that some judges could be unintentionally turned out of office by those intent on voting against every ballot question.

In retention elections, voters are asked to simply vote "yes" or "no" on whether specific judges should keep their jobs. A committee of judges is working with Hoyt Olfton, director of the state elections bureau, on issues such as where to place the names of judges, who are running in the retention elections and on how to word the retention question. If judges are to have a part of the ballot separate from partisan races and separate from constitutional amendments and bond issues, it creates a problem of finding enough space on a ballot that is restricted in size in order to accommodate voting machine parameters.

The District Judges Association has discussed the possibility of conducting a $20,000 television ad campaign to inform voters about the new judicial election process, but it has apparently fizzled due to disagreement among the state's 59 district judges about its necessity.

A couple of judges most concerned about the confusion between partisan elections and retention elections are Harris Hartz and Bill Bivens of the Court of Appeals. Both will be listed in the same area of the ballot as other candidates for retention. Voters will have the choice of saying "yes" or "no" to each of the judges. But since there are only two candidates in that section of the ballot, both judges are worried voters will think they must select between the two.

The Hartz-Bivens conundrum may be the most confusing on the ballot. The situation was created when the state Supreme Court ruled that Hartz can stand merely for retention even though he has never faced a partisan election. The anomaly arose because of the timing of Hartz's appointment by Gov. Carrey Carruthers. It came after filing day for the 1988 elections but before the effective date of the new law. Hartz, thereby, becomes the only judge who has never had to run in a partisan election.

The judges and the bureau of elections do have their headaches with the new system, but it is voters who have the biggest problem. Where are they going to get the information necessary to vote "yes" or "no" on each judge in the retention elections?

Supporters of the 1988 constitutional amendment that created this mess told us a select committee would evaluate judges and make recommendations to the electorate. It is an elitist method of deciding who should stay, but it is better than nothing—which is what we're getting this year. Nobody quite got around to fulfilling that promise.

The sad fact remains that regardless of its limitations, having an opponent to which a judge can be compared is the best way of evaluating the judiciary. That opponent is in a natural position to inform voters of any flaws in the judge's performance. Through listening to the two candidates debate the judge's record, voters can decide how accurate the opponent's charges might be.

But until voters decide to take selection of judges back into their own hands, the best we can hope for is that the judiciary will get its act together enough to start telling us in 1992 whom they think we ought to retain.

These disposable cardboard tubes that come with so many household items can make perfect holders for many holiday gifts. Wrap with pretty paper and tie ends close with yarn.

drilling in frozen wastelands or 2,000 miles at sea for the oil for which we already have a substitute. Switching to gasohol would mean solution to the problem of over-production on the farms and the elimination of farm subsidies. There is no way we can run out of organic material to manufacture gasohol for that material is constantly renewable.

● The President still believes that the energy crisis can be solved by imposing higher taxes on gasoline, making it too expensive for people to buy, or by a rationing program that can only reduce the industrial output of the nation and adversely affect every American. It is strange that, even though gasohol has been tested and proved for 60 years, nobody wants to talk about it. But if we got into a shooting war tomorrow, I'll wager the army would be fighting on gasohol within 30 days. And maybe it's going to take a war to bring it back on the market.

Letters to the editor

Confront the waste problem

EDITOR—Our county commissioners were voted into office by the people of Lincoln County to act and make decisions for the health and welfare of everyone. Unfortunately, it seems they have been grappling with the problem of waste management for some time with absolutely nothing being accomplished. In fact, since their most recent decision to suspend dumpsters service to county residents we are now headed in the other direction—back to the Dark Ages. The decision to force county residents to haul their two plastic sacks of garbage to a remote compactor shows little common sense.

Entrusted with the leadership responsibility of dealing with waste management, our commissioners have failed to handle our problem. Dumping their mistake back in the lap of the taxpayer is not a long-term solution. It is a nationally known fact that future trash disposal is going to cost more money. Long term taxpayers dollars wisely.

Since trash has become everyone's problem we need to address it now, not a year from now. The county should have considered investing in a large, efficient regional recycling center. Not only to serve our needs but as a long-term investment and potentially profitable venture. An investment of this type could include both the public and private sectors. Mutual investment from a business venture of this type could prove advantageous to both sides.

Recycling has become the buzz word of the 90s. Everyone's for it but no one wants to take that first step. It seems every county wants to see what the other will do before taking the plunge. It's just not profitable, it's a common reply you hear from every laid-back official. Granted recycling will take some organization and a market for the product. Both are somewhat lacking at the moment. So why not initiate a temporary solution in the interim?

One solution might be to collect and stockpile recyclable goods until the market becomes lucrative enough to turn a profit. Until technology catches up with the demand for raw materials why not use our vast land reserves for long term storage capability. Storing glass, metals, paper, used tires, and plastic just might be feasible. Throw that idea at a politician and watch what happens. Sure it will take a sizeable investment, but look at the alternative—landfills already bulging to capacity. Frustration is when you talk waste management with the county, you fall on deaf ears and get the same answer—we're working on it—yet nothing gets done. The county, however, has come up with a distinctly new approach, bury your head in the sand and hope someone else comes up with a solution. Tell the public what it wants to hear and postpone the inevitable. Don't take any action that could be politically embarrassing or that one might have to take the heat for. Then gracefully bow out of the landfill issue.

Options are currently available but need to be acted upon before we, the taxpayer, can benefit. Trash to energy is a viable alternative that might be implemented as a stop-gap measure until recycling gets a positive push forward. This technology currently exists. This county is not going to diminish in size. We are going to grow and the problems will grow with us.

The regional landfill is another alternative, and like trash to energy, has its drawbacks. Costs are high, but is burying our trash the answer? For our protection regulations require expensive monitoring, test wells, and plastic liners. Federal and state guidelines for the future will most likely prohibit this type of disposal. Just dealing with the tonnage of garbage in the future will cause nightmares for government officials.

The landfill, as we know it today, will soon be the way of the dinosaur. Government is making it harder and harder for municipalities to use this form of disposal. Clean-up costs from underground pollution will be prohibitive and public sentiment is waning for support of this type of solution. The public is demanding that officials look closely at viable alternatives and act accordingly. Lincoln County should be in the forefront of waste management. We have the opportunity to begin a solution before our quality of life is gone.

Taxpayer responsibility is to support a plan laid down by knowledgeable experts so we can expect reasonable results from our tax dollar investment. Government responsibility is to enact a plan which is worthwhile, that the public can and will support.

MIKE RANDLE,
San Patricio.

In this case, Carrizozo police officer Rick Edmunds was suspended for two weeks Tuesday night for the heinous crime of arresting a young man for DWI. There was no investigation of the officer's conduct in the matter. If you want good officers, stand behind them. Don't slap them in the face until you find out whether they really committed a wrong. One of these days you may be in real trouble and need that officer. And he might say, "I can't help; I might be doing something wrong and I'll get in trouble." The Smokey had 1388 registered visitors last week.

The Republicans held a free barbecue with everyone invited at Innsbrook Village Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.

Happy birthday to Imhoff, Aug. 25, and Curtis Reeves, Aug. 29, and Myrum Whitaker, Aug. 17.

The Capitan Tigers held their football scrimmage last Saturday.

The Ranchers Rodeo held at the fairgrounds last Saturday was a big success. They hope to make that an annual affair. Those who entered found it to be very rewarding.

Sherry Gowen and Colynn Washburn are attending ENMU in Roswell.

Mr. and Mrs. John Whitaker celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary Aug. 25. I wish this lovely couple many more happy years together.

Ronnie, son of Raymond and Barbara Sanchez, graduated from the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, Aug. 22 with a degree in criminal justice.

Mr. and Mrs. Fernie

The Lincoln County Pony Express Committee regrets NOT mentioning these people for their help with the race this year.

Mike Gaines and the Vo-ag Lab for processing the beef, Elaine Marks for taking phone calls, Misty Moberley and El Paisano Restaurant and anyone else who wasn't mentioned.

The Pony Express Race relies upon obtaining donations and help from individuals either directly or through ads in our brochure. This requires a lot of leg work by the committee, who are all volunteers with regular jobs and cannot devote full time as their job requires.

This year the committee is getting a head start on next years race. We are putting together a calendar for 1991. It will contain history of White Oaks and some of its buildings. It will cost $5.00 and will be out October 1, 1990. A person will be able to purchase them from:

- Birdsong's Cattle Cages
- White Oaks
- Roy's Gift Gallery
- Carrizozo
- El Paisano Restaurant
- Capitan
- Texas Cafe
- Hwy 70/Ruidoso

We again thank each and everyone for their support!

Stokes and Rene' of Norwalk, CA are now permanently located in their home here, and both are retired. Happy retirement to you both.

Catherine Grantham died Aug. 21 at the hospital in Albuquerque. She had undergone heart surgery earlier this year. We will miss her terribly for she was such an outstanding person. She was a lovely lady to be remembered for many years.

The American Legion Boys State Bowling Tournament was held Saturday and Sunday at the Carrizozo Bowling Lanes. The high bowler was Barbara Ward with a score of 682, Pat Bailey was a close second with a score of 671, third place was won by Bob Stephens with a score of 663 and close behind was Roland Bailey in fourth place with 647. Congratulations to all of you, not for just your high scoring, but for taking of your time to enter

Magistrate Court

Magistrate Judge Gerald Dean Jr. bound over two people to district court this week.

Acie Houston of Ruidoso was bound over for trial in district court on charges of unlawful sale of alcoholic beverages and manufacture, sale or possession for sale without a license.

Peter Compton was extradited from New Jersey where he was arrested on an outstanding warrant on Aug. 16. He will appear in district court on five counts of issuance of worthless check(s) in Sept. 1987.

Other persons through magistrate court include:

Anna Maria Flores, Roswell, fishing without a license, ordered to pay $80 in fine and costs.

Richard B. Hill, Alamogordo, careless driving, $252 fines and costs.

Leo Halloran, Clear Lake, IA, defective equipment, $36 costs and fees.

Richard E. Martinez, Alamogordo, fishing without a license, $30 costs after proof of license.

Phillip H. Cordova, El Paso, TX, speeding 87/55, no insurance, $252 fines and costs.

Felix Trevizo Jr., San Elizario, TX, no insurance, $36 costs after proof of insurance.

William H. David, El Paso, TX, no insurance, $36 costs and fees after proof of insurance.

Gillham Trucking Co. driver Howard Leroy Hoar, this tournament for such a noble and worthy cause.

The Cattle Baron in Ruidoso was the lucky place this past week for two Capitan birthday celebrants. On Aug. 19, the Roland Baileys hosted Bob and Thelma Stephens to dinner and an afternoon at the races for Bob Stephens. His age? Ask Bob. On Aug. 20, the Baileys entertained Cele Annertone for dinner and whatever year Cele reached, she certainly does not look it. Anyway Cele, birthdays are just numbers, right?

Colby Service of Albuquerque was a weekend visitor of Dr. and Mrs. Allen Service.

It is good to have Mr. and Mrs. Ed Payton back home. They spent part of the summer with Mrs. Payton's family in Idaho.

Greeley, CO, defective equipment, $36 costs and fees.

Gary K. Nunn, Belen, expired registration, $36 costs and fees after proof.

Eduard D. Guerra, Hondo, TX, fishing without a license, $80 fine and costs.

Michael Embry, Lovington, fishing without a license, $110 fine and costs.

colleagues, moving him to file a discrimination lawsuit against the US Army. By believing in flying saucers, he contended, he was, in effect, labeled a "UFO nut" which jeopardized his military career.

If the US government has officially undertaken the mission of "debunking" the UFO mythology, as many published reports suggest, then the process seems to have backfired. In 1947, 90 percent of the US public had heard about UFOs, according to a Gallup Poll. By 1966, not only had 96 percent of the public heard of them, but more than five million Americans claimed to have witnessed a UFO. By 1973, 15 million Americans had seen one or more UFOs.

Both witnesses and skeptics agree that belief in flying saucers is a personal matter, and should not expose anyone to personal or professional ridicule. But then in places like Roswell, crediting the existence of UFOs has always been more than a matter of casual opinion.

Around Corona

Present and former Cedarvale citizens are already making plans for a reunion the first weekend of August next year.

Dorothy Bradley was the NM director/delegate to the National Trappers Convention in Little Rock, AR. She was accompanied by her family on the nine-day trip.

Last week Mrs. Bradley and Roy attended the NM Trappers Rendezvous held at the Odd Fellows camp in the Manzano Mountains. Mr. Bradley and Barbara joined them late Friday. All returned Sunday afternoon.

The Corona Baptist Church is planning a revival Sept. 6-9 with evening services beginning at 7 p.m. Floyd Goodloe, Capitan, is the evangelist and Greg Horst, Capitan, is in charge of music. The 11 a.m. Sunday service will be followed by a covered dish dinner. Everyone is invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. W.W. Korges left after church Sunday in Menlo Park, CA after spending a few weeks in their vacation home here.

Mark Cartwright had the grand champion pig in the San Juan County Fair last week. It sold for $4.15 per lb. and brought him over one thousand dollars.

Mrs. Ethel Huffman was a recent visitor in Corona, and while here visited the cemetery and searched for the grave of her infant brother. She was accompanied by a daughter and son-in-law, the Buntens. Mrs. Huffman is the former Ethel Moulton and the mother of Frank Bond, Republican candidate for governor.

Crown CowBelles will meet Thursday at 10 a.m., Sept. 6 in the school recreation room.

Sheriff's report

What began as a report of a loud teenage party ended in a high speed chase from Capitan to Ruidoso late Saturday.

Capitan police officer Tom Hammontre responded to a report at 11:23 p.m. from Scott Childress that kids were having a loud party near his residence.

After Hammontre and Sheriff's Deputy Connie Hopper responded, the incident turned into a high speed pursuit, with Robert J. Hernandez, '19, San Patricio, leading the way in his Mazda pickup.

About four units eventually got involved in the chase, including two from the Ruidoso Police Department.

Hernandez was caught at a roadblock set up on the corner of Paradise Canyon and Sudderth Drive in Ruidoso. He not only eluded police, but had a keg of beer in the back of the truck.

Hernandez was arrested on charges of residential burglary under $250, minor allowing self to be served, open container, contributing to the delinquency of a minor and a bench warrant from Judge Mansell of Ruidoso. Total bond was set at $13,000, no 10 percent allowed. He remains in Lincoln County Jail in Carrizozo.
