

Five-member commission plan to get input from citizens

By Doris Cherry

Will a five-member county commission work in Lincoln County?

County commissioners will solicit citizen opinions on an ordinance written to create the five-member board at their March 26 meeting.

At the regular county meeting Tuesday, commissioners voted to begin the process of approving an ordinance to form the five-member board. Along with the board comes the four-year term for all elected county officials, redistricting the county from three to five, and a different type of voting process. Instead of voting for all three commissioners as now, voters can only select their favorite candidate from their district.

Citizens can tell commissioners what they think about this proposal at the March 26 meeting, when the public hearing is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. in the commissioners chambers in the courthouse in Carrizozo.

Copies of the proposed ordinance will be available at the county manager's office in Carrizozo and the county sub-office in Ruidoso on Cree Meadows Drive, behind Ruidoso administration center.

County clerk Martha Proctor presented five-member ordinances from other counties, with two ways of dealing with the redistricting. One way is to have the ordinance specify the districts, the other way is to have the ordinance approving the five member board, then use a professional consultant to draw the districts.

County Attorney Robert Beauvais said the ordinance must be approved and districts drawn by Jan. 1, 1992, ready for the governor's election proclamation at the end of January, 1992.

Commissioners also began the process of obtaining public input for a Community Development Block Grant (CDBG). The grant application must be for a project most favored by the public, but commissioners heard a request from Tierra Del Sol, a Las Cruces housing corporation, to apply for a $200,000 grant to rehabilitate houses owned by low-income and/or elderly persons.

At commissioner Monroy Montes request, Eugene

Gonzales, Tierra Del Sol representative, spoke about a waiting list of 20 housing units in Lincoln County in need of rehabilitation. Rehabilitation can include new septic tanks, wells, energy efficient windows, insulation, electric upgrade, with emphasis on energy conservation measures. Rehabilitated houses cannot be sold for five years after the work, to prevent exploitation of the project.

Montes had also requested awareness of historical preservation on some old county houses in need of rehabilitation, which Tierra addressed in a letter to county manager Nick Pappas.

Tierra was organized in 1973 as a nonprofit corporation to serve the housing needs of Mesilla Valley farmworkers and low income families. It administers rehabilitation programs financed with federal sources, mainly Farmer Home Administration, US Dept. of Labor and US Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, from which CDBGs are made. It has administered similar rehabilitation projects in the county.

All rehabilitation work is done by private contractors, with preference given to local companies. Tierra charges a fee of 6 percent of the grant to administer the entire project, and will do all paperwork involved as well as assist with the grant application.

Pappas told commissioners the CDBG board approved all applications for rehabilitation in the past. He said Tierra has a good reputation of getting the job through and 6 percent is a very reasonable rate considering the amount of paperwork involved.

He said the next legal step is advertising for citizen input to select a project for a CDBG application. He emphasized the wisdom in selecting the rehabilitation project because it falls within the CDBG requirement of assisting low income persons.

Pappas will invite Steve Massey with Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District (SNMEDD), which also administers CDBG projects, to the next county meeting to discuss the application process.

Commission Chairman Stirling Spencer wants payroll figures from the businesses brought to Lincoln County through the efforts of Economic Development Corp. of Lincoln County (EDCLC). He requested such from George Puckett, executive director of EDCLC, who presented his quarterly report at the meeting Tuesday.

Puckett reminded Spencer EDCLC has many projects in the pipeline which have not yet committed.

"Economic development is a long-term project," Puckett said. "We're proud of what we've done."

Of 11 businesses assisted directly, only two have relocated to Lincoln County, both in the Ruidoso area. One of the businesses indicated it desire to relocate in a low altitude area.

But Puckett spoke of the difficulty of luring businesses to small communities with 'Federal agencies taking away rights of private ownership'

Bill Hays manages a large ranch in southern Lincoln County for an absentee landowner.

He is much like other managers and landowners when it comes to the rights of private ownership which are, protected by the constitution, and federal intervention.

"We are losing our freedoms, we are at war," Hays said to the Lincoln County Commissioners at their regular meeting Tuesday.

Hays was talking about federal agencies—Bureau of Land Management, US Forest Service, Environmental Protection Agency and Wildlife Service—which are threatening to take away rights of private landowners for the sake of "endangered species."

He said the "endangered species" listing of the Mexican Spotted Owl in Lincoln County and hedgehog cactus in the Capitan Mountains as the first steps to decreasing private ownership rights in this county. Recently the spotted owl listing shut down the timber industry in Catron County on the west side of the state. Grazing rights permits, seen as private ownership, are being decreased, thus decreasing the number of livestock which results in fewer taxes for the county.

And Hays wants the county commission to exert its right to be involved with the planning stages of those government agencies, BLM and Forest Service especially, to prevent the loss of local input and subsequently the loss of local tax base.

The US chief forester has commented the ultimate goal of the agency is complete non-use, Hays said. That means ranching, farming, timber and recreational use of federal lands could be gone, and thus the economies built around those industries.

Hays listed provisions in federal laws to allow local government input into the planning stages of the various federal agencies, something which must be requested in writing to each.

"If you start, you will be threatened by the federal agencies," Hays warned. He listed examples of problems encountered by a coalition of three western New Mexico counties, Catron, Hidalgo and Luna, and 3 Arizona counties when they requested involvement with the federal agencies. "It was all a bluff," Hays assured.

"You control the destiny of Lincoln County," he added.

Commission Chairman Stirling Spencer, a rancher himself, spoke of the changes in the wording of grazing permits which would take away rights of the permit holder to graze livestock on federal lands and putting the rights at the whim of the area director.

Spencer said agricultural industries have respect for the forest.

"Ag people are not mass-attack people," he said.

He spoke of how the government puts pressure on livestock producers by putting pressure on financial

New board of education views legal problems

Carrizozo Board of Education reorganized and familiarized itself with legal problems at a special meeting Tuesday night.

Members elected J.C. Richmond as president, Nick Serna vice-president and Eugenia Vega secretary. Members Gary Hightower and Jan Barham also attended.

Afterwards, Richmond recessed the meeting for a reception with the 20 people who attended. After the reception, the board went into a two-hour closed session to discuss pending litigation and personnel.

When members came out, they agreed to multiple representation by the school's law firm, Simon, Cuddy and Friedman in Santa Fe, in the lawsuit now pending against board members, Supt. Danny Burnett and Principal Mel Holland. No action was taken on personnel.

The board stated the process of getting the football field lights upgraded by football season. They authorized $2750 for Gary Anderson of Musco Southwest Lighting Inc. of Chandler, AZ to begin design work for the lights.

A tax compliance certificate to allow the school to receive $3547.20 in SB9 money from the state was approved.

A work session was set for 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 12 in the school administration conference room. The next regular board meeting will be March 19.

MacVeigh honored as history teacher

A step into Bill MacVeigh's classroom at Capitan High School gives an idea why he was chosen Outstanding US History teacher for the state of New Mexico by the Daughters of American Revolution (DAR).

Flags from countries now existing and now defunct hang from the ceiling, creating a riot of colors—mostly red. Maps color the walls to educate students of current events and historic ones. Interesting community personalities visit class and speak, show slides.

Students speak highly of him, and two wrote letters of recommendation in support of his nomination by the local Sierra Blanca Chapter of DAR. As did Dr. David Townsend, history professor at NMSU-Alamogordo. MacVeigh was one of five nominees statewide.

MacVeigh, who has taught history for more than a dozen years, sponsors the Capitan Mock Trial team and the student senate also.

Because of the Mock Trial regional MacVeigh was unable to accept the award from the DAR national president at the state convention in Albuquerque over the weekend, but he sent his wife Dot to accept the certificate and $100 prize.

MacVeigh said he was very honored to receive the award.

Elected officials give their reports

Lincoln County elected officials gave reports to the Lincoln County Commissioners at the conclusion of the meeting Tuesday.

Their reports are as follows:

Treasurer Janice DuBose said her office has begun mailing Alto billings for the April 1 due date. The second half property tax reminders will be sent at the end of the month. She reported the transition from the former administration is going smoothly in her office.

Assessor Patsy Serna reported her office just mailed the 1991 notices of evaluation to property owners. If anyone has complaints about the evaluation, now is the time to do it, Serna said. She has until April 1 to make adjustments to the evaluations.

Sheriff James McSwaine said he is sending officers to school before the racing season starts, to be prepared for the busy season. He is staying in the budget.

Clerk Martha Proctor told of spending a few days in Santa Fe lobbying for the county. She also is working with a polling and research company hired to help with redistricting. She hopes to

Nogal VFD completes training techniques

Feb. 5 marked the date for the Nogal Volunteer Fire Department's First Responder graduates to celebrate their graduation and receive their certificates of completion from Kathy Williams, instructor.

The Nogal VFD has been activated this past year and currently has 20+ members. They have been trained in brush and structure fire fighting techniques. Recently they were able to show the community of Nogal what they have learned by fighting the 15 acre fire in the Loma Grande area.

Anyone in the Nogal fire district who has not received their telephone emergency stickers, can receive them by calling 354-3016. Be sure and specify how many phones you have so you get the correct amount of stickers; should have one for each phone.

Everyone is welcome to join the Nogal VFD. If interested, call 354-3016 or come join the meetings of the 1st and 3rd Tuesdays of each month at the Forsythe Hall in Nogal.

population less than 1000. EDCLC is in the planning stages of reconstructing and rebuilding its original committees, with emphasis to be put on training the volunteers.

Commissioner Bill Elliott asked how EDCLC plans to receive revenue next year. Puckett said, "same as last year." EDCLC receives funds from a three-quarter mill levy imposed by the former county commission. As a provision, EDCLC must reapply for funds annually. Montes wants economic development for the county's young people, who are leaving to work in other counties. He wanted EDCLC to work with "home grown" businesses more.

Puckett spoke of possible sponsorship of a junior achievement program in conjunction with private business. Montes considered integration of young people into the business community a job of EDCLC.

Montes also asked Puckett if EDCLC has the expertise to do an economic study to use when confronting federal agencies (see related county commission article). Puckett said EDCLC has the expertise and will charge nothing, since it is funded with county money.

A variance from the required road width was finally granted to the owners of Fox Run Subdivision in the Alto area. The owners requested the road be only 26 feet, instead of the 28 feet required by county subdivision rules. The subdivision was one "red-tagged" last year in order to get developers to comply with the county rules.

A variance was granted to allow a narrow cul-de-sac by the former commission, but after review by commissioner Elliott, road manager Bill Cupit and Bonito Fire Dept. Chief Howard Puckett, all agreed the cul-de-sac had to be cleared of the two large juniper trees in the middle. Elliott said the road was not a thoroughfare and would make no problems being 26 feet wide. The width is sufficient for emergency equipment. The road does need to be brought to a standard of a 6-inch deep gravel bed.

Spencer said the real dilemma is the road issue in general. Elliott agreed and called for a committee to take a second look at the road regulations because in some mountainous terrain, the 28-foot wide roadway is "asinine."

Another road request was looked at Tuesday when Ed Goodrum asked he be allowed to lock two gates on the ranch he manages, since the "county roads" are just two rut tracks leading to the gate and a windmill. To keep track of who has access across the ranch to two sections of BLM lands, Goodrum wanted to keep just one gate open for the road which goes by his house. He told of seeing unknown tracks to the gates and finding the gates open.

Goodrum also asked the roads on the county map marked FO-31 and FO-32 be closed and taken off the road map.

Pappas suggested the request be processed by the road review committee. He also spoke of the current process of developing a new county road map to be presented to the public as a draft, which will be subject to citizen input.

Commissioners accepted the only proposal for data processing services from Triadic, which currently serves the county. The proposal was to be reviewed with approval at the next meeting.

Bentley Construction of Nogal was low bidder on the remodeling of the Zia Senior Citizens Center recreation room in Carrizozo. Bentley bid $6996.22 to convert the fire truck bay into a recreation room for seniors. The bid award was contingent on Bentley's proposal meeting all specifications of the remodeling request.

Pat's (Joiner) Welding Service in Capitan was the only bidder on the Lincoln County Fairgrounds arena renovation. Joiner's bid of $8800 exceeded the $8500 the county fair board has to spend on the project of expanding the existing arena in Capitan.

Beauvais said a problem with the bid was it did not specify which tasks would be performed for the $8800.

Commissioners accepted the $8800 bid according to the proposed plans in the manager's office. Elliott said the fair board could come back to the county for the additional $300 if needed.

Pappas also announced a problem with insurance for the rodeo. The county had assumed ownership of the fairgrounds a few years ago in order to carry the insurance which had become too high for the previous fair board. Now, the insurance company will not cover rodeo participants.

Fair board member Ralph Dunlap said the insurance problem is different from before when the board sought coverage for spectators, this is for the rodeo competitors.

Spencer requested the manager clarify the coverage and notify the fair board.

Commissioners approved appointments of Democrat Ruth Hammond, Republicans Inez Tanner and Toutie Fouratt and alternates Democrat Jerry Shaw and Republican Pat Hume to the board of registration, as requested by Proctor.

A certificate of appreciation was given to Linda J. Fuchs for her work on the Lincoln County Fair Board.

Approval was given to Sheriff James McSwane to apply for law enforcement protection funds of $21,500, to be used for equipment and training.

A $16,000, no interest loan was granted to the Glencoe-Palo Verde Fire Dept. after a lengthy report from chief Angel Chavez. The one-year loan was to help the department purchase a new fire truck and pumper.

In order to upgrade its status and ability to obtain more state fire funds, the department has purchased a tanker from Bonito Fire Dept., a 1000-gallon pumper, fire fighting protective gear, and has sent its members for training. The department hopes to upgrade its status even further with purchase of the new truck. Commissioners told Chavez to return next year if the department needs additional funding for the truck.

Commissioners also approved a resolution to compensate Martha Guevara who served as county manager during Pappas' medical-related absence and Joe Vega for his work as county road manager. Letters of commendation will be placed in each's file.

The next county meeting begins at 9 a.m., March 26.

Elected officials

ask for approval to consolidate districts and move one line in the process of legislative redistricting.

"It does help to lobby personally," Proctor noted. As for department heads, county manager Nick Pappas requested and received approval to spend funds to expand the county's main-frame computer capacity by 600 MEG by using state purchase approved services.

Pappas told of the road department employees wanting paychecks on Friday rather than Tuesday as now. The request will be on the next meeting agenda.

Lincoln County Heritage Trust director Bob Hart has put together the application for the Certified Local Government.

Pappas presented a list of provision for absenteeism provided by the various county committees. Commissioners passed a resolution last month establishing a policy which will purge members who have missed more than three meetings. County attorney Robert Beauvais suggested the commission policy be sent to the various committees and boards, rather than having separate policies for each.

Pappas also told of the need to reroof parts of the courthouse, and the time to get county employees on a little padding (carpeting) has come. Recarpeting the district court room must also be done soon.

On use of county automobiles, Pappas recommended the sheriff's secretary not use a county vehicle, and recommended EMS director Maggi Bohks be allowed to keep the county EMS truck 24 hours a day.

Road manager Bill Cupit said the job is a challenge. He credited the department as good, but in need of "shaping

In the March 11, 1971 issue of LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS the official county population was 7,560. That figure came from the 1970 census, which showed the population down 2.4 percent from the 1960 figure of 7,744. The 1970 census counted 7,368 white persons in Lincoln County, 41 Negroes and 151 persons of other races.

The census showed 583 children under 5 years; 1966 ages 5-7; 4,136 ages 18-64 and 875 who were 65 or older. The entire population was classified as rural. The census counted 4,950 housing units; 1797 occupied by owners, 643 by tenants and 2510 vacant (included for vacation use). The median value of owner-occupied houses was $9,700, compared with $7,100 in 1960. The median rent paid in 1970 was $63 a month. Of all occupied housing units, 2174 had piped water, toilet and bath, while 266 lacked some or all plumbing.

Carrizozo learned $150,000 will be spent on the airport to make it "one of the outstanding airports for towns the size of Carrizozo," Mayor Johnson Stearns reported.

Ruidoso Downs residents seek a grand jury. More than 100 residents of Ruidoso Downs filed a petition with district court clerk Edward Penfield in Carrizozo, seeking a grand jury investigation of alleged conflict of interest in the Ruidoso Downs government. The petition bore 141 names. It asked the grand jury to seek removal of Ruidoso Downs city council members H.D. Pope and Billie Hale.

The alleged conflict of interest involved allegations that Pope, Hale and five others involved in city government also owned land developed through Ruidoso Downs Development, Corp. Inc. that was zoned and offered for sale to the federal government. The other five were H.A. Parnell, former executive secretary of the local housing authority, Vaden McCray, former chairman, and four former members of the planning and zoning commission—Grace McCray, Mrs. Homer Allison, Pope and J.A. Crockett.

District Court Judge Richard A. Stanley was expected to call the jury.

A 1500 acre grass fire near Claunch was the result of a power pole broken by the wind. About 400 acres were on the Surratt Ranch, about 200 acres on the Erramospe Ranch, the remainder on the old Lupe Gabaldon Ranch owned by John A. Hightower.

Cattle in the area happened to be in other parts of the pastures and were not trapped as they might have been.

Healthcare scholarships available for students

A 1991 scholarship program for Lincoln County high school students has been announced by Lincoln County Medical Center (LCMC). The purpose of the program is to encourage local students to enter and successfully prepare for careers in the healthcare field.

To qualify for the scholarships, a student must be a graduate of a Lincoln County school. The graduate may attend any accredited two or four-year institution. A grade point average of 2.8 or higher must be maintained for continued scholarship up to four years.

According to Valeria Miller, LCMC administrator, the program is a good service to the student and, ultimately to the community. "We want to encourage local students to enter the healthcare field for a number of reasons. The demand for workers in many areas is high; students who choose the fields will have numerous job opportunities. We also want to provide the chance for students to remain in or return to Lincoln County to work at our hospital," she said.

To apply for the Lincoln County Medical Center scholarship program, the applicant must submit a letter of application along with letters of recommendation from two teachers and from the school administrator.

Applications should be sent to Valeria Miller, Administrator, Lincoln County Medical Center, Drawer 3CD, HS, Ruidoso, NM 88345. Deadline for application is April 15.

Drama class wins honors for 'Murder Most Fowl'

Capitan High School drama class brought home a "first time ever" award last weekend.

The 15-member cast of "Murder Most Fowl" took their production, with the help of teacher Molly Weber, to the state Drama Festival at Eastern New Mexico University in Portales last weekend and were awarded honorable mention for overall production.

The Capitan students performed in front of about 350 thespians from 25 New Mexico and Texas high schools, and the judges who were staff at the ENMU department of theater. The high schools competing included Roswell High, Goddard, El Paso's Eastwood, Lubbock's Coronado and Ruidoso, which also got an honorable mention for its 40-minute play.

Each production, and student thespian, was critiqued by judges afterwards and were given comments on strong and weak points.

The Capitan thespians are: Cassie Imhoff, Dawn Stricker, Dianna Lively, Stephanie Vinson, Keri Champion, Kerri Runnels, Charley Tracey, Paul Whipple, Tony Cantrell, Aaron Quintana, J.J. James, Daniel Parker, Christopher Smith, Weiden Smith and J.R. Smith. The Smiths played the three sheriffs who brought the house down, said Weber.

"Murder Most Fowl" was a cow-country kind of a tale, Weber said. The students performed the play before Capitan audiences early in February.

The next student production will be a dramatization of Smokey Bear's story set for April 16. It will be preceded by a dinner.

Federal agencies institutions and their lending agencies.

Spencer added his skepticism of agencies like BLM, in light of a county meeting last year when BLM representatives were not quite up front about land planning such as the proposed land exchange in the Lincoln Valley, a subject of a public hearing last Wednesday in Lincoln.

According to reports, BLM told those at that public hearing the exchange is a done deal and would involve two years to complete, during which time no grazing will be allowed on the areas along Rio Bonito, nor extensive camping.

"It was right down sneaky," Spencer said of the county meeting with the BLM representatives.

He attributed the current federal policies to an unknowing public majority in the eastern part of the US.

"This is not favoritism to the rancher, farmer or land baron," Spencer added. "It attacks the tax base and governmental rights of the county."

Hays said environmentalists don't realize what non-use means. "Those bird watchers won't be in the forests," he said if non-use policies occur. He listed an example of a non-use Alaskan forest, where tourists can buy a ticket to ride a train which travels through the forest, with no stops allowed.

Non-use is not the best way to deal with lands, Spencer maintained, his comment based on studies by universities.

Commissioner Monroy Montes said the livestock and tourism industries would be devastated if such policies came about, and all would be affected in the county.

In order to have the commission exercise its right to protect private property right in Lincoln County it must do three things: an economic analysis of the county to show the tax base from tourism, livestock and so on, to prove to the federal government; develop a land use plan (not zoning) such as livestock, orchards, recreation such as hunting and the tax dollars from these; and request in writing to all federal agencies to be on their planning committees to be part of their decisions.

Hays warned the Forest Service would try to deny access to these planning meetings, but the county cannot be denied.

The coalition of western counties and three Arizona counties will meet March 13 in Deming City Hall to talk about the federal agencies. Hays asked a commissioner attend the meeting to hear of how those counties have dealt with the federal agencies.

If you don't think this endangered species thing is serious, letters from back east indicate the federal agencies are taking away private lands, Hays continued. "This is scary."

But New Mexico is the only state in the southwestern area which allows local government to make laws equal to the federal agencies.

"We have that opportunity," Hays appealed. And if the federal agencies don't cooperate by allowing local government to add input, the district attorney can take legal action to make them do so.

Spencer requested the county manager contact the adjoining counties concerning these issues. But Hays suggested Spencer attend the Deming meeting since quick action will be needed for input into policies affecting Lincoln National Forest and the Capitan Mountains.

Hays considered the local input into federal policies vital to the county's economic health.

To ranchers like Peg Pfingston of Lincoln area, whose family has grazed federal lands for generations, federal policies mean a decreased livelihood.

At one time, Pfingston grazed 325 head, now he can graze 108 and the future appears with more cuts to that grazing permit on the same range.

It impacts his pocketbook directly.

It impacts the county—by impacting the industry which sustain its tax base.

● The New Mexico Legislature is about to increase our taxes by $32 million—without first cutting one dime from current state spending. Already we have the fourth largest tax rate among the 50 states. And with the fourth largest tax rate we rank 45th in individual income per annum. Is it not strange that one of the poorest states has one of the highest tax rates?

● Something similar happened when I was practicing curmudgeonism in California. Jerry Brown was governor. He was spending Big Time. Until the people rose in rebellion, a tactic I heartily recommend to New Mexicans unless they just love being taxed to death. Here is my comment on Gov. Jerry "Guru" Brown when he was trashing California in 1978.

● Gather round, folks, it's storytelling time; time for a fabulous fable. This is timely because our guru governor hasn't made a State of the Nation Speech in weeks, thus depriving Americans of their guarantee that all's right with their world. This fable was begun by Joseph C. Keesley and embellished by me. It's called "The Gift of Minus." Like all good fairy tales, it begins with "Once upon a time..."

● Once upon a time long past there lived a king called Midas who was given the power to turn everything he touched into gold. He soon tired of the gift and called on the gods to take it from him, but while it lasted he was able to make himself the richest man on earth.

● When Midas died his son Minus succeeded him. But the son was a royal chump, deficient in many things. Where Midas had used his wealth sparingly, King Minus went in for all sorts of extravagances. Most of all, he loved to erect huge buildings, saying they were necessary for government business. Then he hired as public servants all who were willing to take jobs, and he paid them handsomely. At the same time he gave generously to the drones who refused to work. Sometimes it seemed that he hated the wealth his father had created, so anxious was he to give it away.

● In time, and sooner than you think, all the gold was gone and the kingdom was broke. His subjects then showed up at the palace gates demanding the gold they used to get so freely. The public servants worked even less than usual, and there were threats against Minus's royal person. At this point the king became worried and studied his father's records for the secret of turning things into gold. But, alas and alack, he could learn only that it had been a gift of the gods.

● Panic-stricken, he threw himself before the statue of the Great God Mammon and called on him for help. The statue remained mute for a long time. Then, tiring of the king's yammering, it spoke to him thus:

● "Foolish king, what good would it do to give you the gift you crave? How long did your father's great wealth last in your hands? Therefore, I will not grant you the gift you ask, the gift that was his. Instead, I will give you knowledge so you and all rulers from this time forth will have the power to draw to yourselves all the wealth you desire. I will teach you the art of taxation." There having been no such thing up to that time, King Minus was puzzled, and asked for enlightenment.

● The God explained that through taxation a king had only to point to someone and that person would be compelled to deliver gold to him in such measure as the sovereign commanded. Through this power a ruler could get gold from all things—a craftsman's workbench, a shop in a bazaar, or even from building a home. The king was delighted. "Mighty Mammon," he cried, "this is even better than the gift possessed by my father." "True," agreed the god, "but far more dangerous." A fearful man, King Minus asked about the dangers.

● "This gift," said Mammon, "is one that calls for moderation, and moderation is not in the nature of many who rule. Your sire had sense enough to turn off the golden flood when he learned its shortcomings, and he did not waste what he had acquired so easily. I fear that you and many others who have this power, will use it foolishly. Doing so, they will destroy themselves, their people and their kingdoms."

● With that the statue fell silent. But it spoke truth. For in the years ahead, King Minus taxed and taxed and spent and spent until his angry subjects turned on him in a manner too unpleasant to relate in this family newspaper. Nor was he the last to suffer this fate. Since his time it has happened again and again; yes, right up to the present, where the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of King Minus, King Guru Brown II of the Kingdom of Lowered Expectations (formerly known far and wide as the Golden State) had plundered his people of their treasure after the formula of God Mammon. The gold that was his for following the advice of Mammon was being dissipated upon the lazy,

THREE MAJOR CORPORATIONS PROTEST U. MASS. WAR PROTESTORS BY CANCELING CAMPUS JOB INTERVIEWS

Raytheon, manufacturers of the life-saving Patriot missiles; as well as another defense industry, Pratt & Whitney, along with Exxon, were among potential employers of graduating students at the University of Massachusetts.

Raytheon and Pratt & Whitney were scheduled, during the university's annual career fair, to interview 40 U-Mass students as job interviews — in the midst of a recession where getting a job is terribly important to graduating seniors.

But then, these corporations learned that on this notoriously left-wing campus, their presence would be picketed by the campus anti-war movement.

So, Raytheon, and Pratt & Whitney all took an almost unprecedentedly intelligent action. They pulled out of the career fair at U-Mass. Exxon recruiters arrived at the Amherst campus on Tuesday night, learned that their effort to hire U-Mass students was going to be protested by U-Mass students — and walked out before noon the following day.

The Peace-At-Any-

Pricers who picketed the Career Fair with placards and anti-war literature, numbered no more than 15, according to the New York Times. But these 15 peace-niks not only tried to undercut our armed forces in the Persian Gulf; they also cost 40 of their fellow students job interviews — at a time when jobs are not easy to obtain.

All is not lost, however. Both Raytheon and Pratt & Whitney agreed to the job interviews — on their own home ground, not on the campus of U-Mass. Therefore, because 15 peace-at-any-pricers chose to protest on campus, 40 of their fellow students have to travel off campus for job interviews.

SANTA FE—"I can't get no tax exemption."

That's the lament Senate Pres. Pro Tem Manny Aragon says special interest lobbyists are singing in response to his SB 591 designed to eliminate loopholes in the state's gross receipts tax.

The refrain, is sung to the 1965 Rolling Stones' hit "I can't get no satisfaction."

It is likely some of the interests that are proposed to be taxed, will get some satisfaction. Aragon's $200 million proposal is expected to pass in some form but with a number of amendments to restore exemptions to many of the interests that are imperiled.

But some will get "no tax exemption." The 1991 Legislature is fervently "sweeping the corners" looking for every bit of revenue that may be acceptable to a majority of lawmakers as not being a tax increase.

Aragon's measure includes many of the revenue-increasing methods identified by the Legislature's interim committee that looked at the state's tax system during the past year. Many of those tax questions have also been introduced as separate bills. Because of Aragon's stature as top guy in the Senate, there is a general feeling that his bill will be the vehicle for finding any additional revenue.

One consideration the interim committee looked at was the practice of people with large estates along Albuquerque's North Valley putting a cow or a horse on their property and qualifying for agricultural tax treatment. An Albuquerque TV station focused attention on that matter last week.

Another money-saving idea the interim tax committee developed was the elimination of the one-percent-for-the-arts program that passed the Legislature in 1986. At that time lawmakers decided, all "public projects would include one percent of their costs for art works to decorate the buildings.

But this year's committee felt eliminating the requirement would be a good way to save a few bucks. It seems that a lot of arts organizations disagreed. They pointed out that New Mexico is heavily into visual arts. Santa Fe boasts to selling the third highest dollar amount of art in the nation.

Second-term Rep. Paul Harrington of Truth or Consequences got to carry the bill. Its first hurdle was the House Appropriations and Finance Committee, chaired by Rep. Max Coll, the provision's sponsor when it passed the Legislature five years ago.

"I can't believe this bill was introduced," said committee vice-chairman Henry "Kiki" Saavedra.

"Neither can I," Harrington apologized.

The bill went down to quick defeat.

It's always the new kids on the block who get talked into introducing the innocent-sounding but controversial measures, such as eliminating public art projects, requiring bikers to wear helmets or outlawing cockfights.

The cockfighting bill always sounds like a pushover to pass. Who wouldn't want to stop such a slaughter? Lots of folks, it seems. Even Coll got caught on that one soon after he came back to the legislature 10 years ago following a lengthy layoff.

But Aragon is no newcomer. He has taken on a battle over which there will be a lot of bloodshed. In an apparent challenge to Gov. Bruce King, the Senate leader has gone after the agriculture industry.

"You could fill a room with all the exemptions farmers and ranchers have," Aragon told a Senate Finance Committee hearing last Sunday afternoon. "We have exempted the feeding of livestock; but we haven't exempted the feeding of human babies in New Mexico because families have to pay gross receipts tax on groceries," he said.

Possibly Aragon is using the agriculture exemptions as a lever with Gov. King, who has said he isn't enthusiastic about wiping out the exemptions on his own industry. King has indicated he is still evaluating the measure, trying to decide what he can support.

Aragon may be hoping he can trade agricultural exemptions for some bigger fish in another part of the stock tank.

A female pigeon will not lay eggs without seeing another pigeon. If no other pigeon is available, her own reflection in a mirror will suffice.

Letters to the Editor

"Democracy" at work

EDITOR—Yesterday afternoon, in a display of raw political power, the Senate shot down Senate Joint Memorial 8, which I had sponsored. As you no doubt recall that legislation called on Congress to propose an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to limit the terms of office for members of that body.

Senate President Pro Tem Manny Aragon of Albuquerque made a motion to table this bill indefinitely. By making that particular motion, debate on this important issue was shut off before it even began, because such a motion cannot be debated.

Some of my colleagues who would have liked to have joined me in debating term limitation were flabbergasted by Senate Aragon's ploy. Even one senator who indicated that he would probably oppose term limitation spoke out against the motion to table indefinitely because he felt, as I did, that the subject was worthy of discussion. Unfortunately, Senator Aragon was successful in persuading a majority of our colleagues to support his motion. Thus, the door was slammed shut on this issue in the Senate.

I am convinced that the people of New Mexico would, at a minimum, like to have this issue discussed openly and frankly by their elected representatives in the legislature. I realize there are two or more sides to this issue and I'm sure that the voters know that as well. But, until such time as they convince the leadership and members of both houses of the legislature of this fact, I'm afraid we'll continue to get short shrift on the issue of term limitation.

WALTER D. BRADLEY,
New Mexico State Senator,
Clovis.

the indifferent, the wastrels, the drones, the scoundrels and the sexual queers. These unworthies came to outnumber the productive workers that were sorely taxed. The king's tax collectors labored mightily, by night and by day and even on holidays, to extract gold from the king's anguished subjects. This treasure provided banquets and orgies for a court that demand still more.

● Alas, as did King Minus, King Guru Brown II broke his kingdom. Even he was reduced to travel by a cast-off Plymouth of uncertain vintage. He could not afford to live in the Royal Residence, and paid 2 family lackeys $800 each per month to abide therein, while he slumbered fitfully upon a rented floor and survived by junk food.

● Had King Guru Brown II recalled the fate of his forebears, King Midas and King Minus, he may have had a happy end. But he was no student of history. So the people rose in anger and stormed the palace gates. A new and terrible weapon, the Jarvis/Gann Tax Initiative, was swung into position before the gates, and more than one million angry subjects pulled the trigger mechanism of the huge cannon and the Kingdom of Lowered Expectations ceased to exist as of June 6, 1978. Thus it came to pass that, after the manner of King Minus, King Guru Brown II was "wasted" in a manner too unpleasant to relate in this family newspaper.

COWCHIP AWARDS

Early in 1991 Albuquerque Journal announced their State Cowchip Award recognitions. Among the ones that brought a smile to my face:

*A Farmington man who threw a handful of marijuana seeds into his yard "just to see if they would grow" was arrested after agents found several plants six feet tall.

*Exasperated by the rampant depiction of a howling coyote, a "just to say no to coyote art" campaign was begun by a group calling itself the Santa Fe Society for Prevention of Visual Cruelty to Humans.

*Three inmates at the Roswell Correctional Center were swiftly recaptured after escaping from the district attorney's office, where they had gone to research their cases in the law library.

*After ejecting an Albuquerque Journal reporter from a scheduled meeting with state attorney general candidates, US Attorney William Lutz said the public was excluded and the newspaper shouldn't have tried to send anyone. There was no word on whether the seminar carried through on its declared topic, which was "media relations."

*Promoting in-state vacations for New Mexicans, Gov. Garrey Carruthers spent a week delivering the message through the northern counties, then left for a vacation in Colorado.

*John "Tony" Werner, a Bernalillo County assessor candidate who died after the ballots for the primary election were printed, nevertheless finished fourth among nine candidates. Said a friend: "The boys all decided to vote for him out of respect."

*Workers at the Santa Fe Animal Shelter raised $400 with a dog wash at the flea market.

*In an effort to coerce the legislature into passing several alcohol-related laws, Gallup Mayor Ed Munoz threatened to post highway billboards at the state borders, warning travelers that New Mexico is the "drunken driving capital of the nation."

*An experimental psychologist at the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology found that chile may be truly addictive, especially because it releases the body's natural painkillers, called endorphins. "We get slightly strung out on endorphins, but it's no big deal," said researcher Frank Escorn. It's a wonder, the endorphins, he said, are 100 to 1,000 times more potent than morphine. He said the same reaction is triggered whether you eat a hot chile or hit your thumb with a hammer.

*After a big advertising sign went up in Santa Fe saying that no gophers were forcibly relocated to make way for a medical complex, the leasing agent admitted none had been there to begin with.

*The City of Albuquerque spent so much money on a fancy, one-of-a-kind carpet for the Convention Center that it couldn't afford a protective pad to go under it.

*A bingo player who won a $140,000 Rolls Royce at Sandia Pueblo said she doesn't drive and came to town on a bus.

*Miffed because Albuquerque Mayor Louis Saavedra chose to hand out a three-page report instead of appearing in person to deliver the state-of-the-city address, City Council President Steve Gallegos charged that the mayor had first disseminated the information in a speech before Rotary Club.

"The councilors are the ones who have to deal with the budget headaches," Gallegos said, "not the Rotary Club." Saavedra countered that he didn't think the council meetings were an appropriate forum for a state-of-the-city address. "They start the meetings off with an hour and a half of announcements and proclamations," he said, "then they take a break for pizza."

*Concerned about reports that some elected officials were moonlighting, the Bernalillo County Commission asked for a constitutional amendment that would require the sheriff, treasurer, clerk and assessor to work 40 hours a week.

*Designers rejected the idea of placing Navajo rugs in the new governor's office, saying they would be too expensive. Instead, they ordered rugs made in the Philippines.

*When Elle, a high-tone fashion magazine published in New York, set out to write some stuff about New Mexico, it first referred to the "Chimayo Indians" (Chimayo is a town, not a tribe), then called the Jicarilla Indians "Hickories."

*A boy wearing a gorilla mask and a white cape held up a Las Cruces restaurant on Halloween and escaped with an undisclosed amount of money. Employees, who were wearing costumes, said they had thought he was one of them.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE...

The "Justice" Department approved a $734,000 expenditure to finance a study of Playboy, Penthouse, and Hustler magazines to determine the influence of these magazines, if any, upon juvenile delinquency and child exploitation. A newsbit in Straight Talk says that the "magazines are obscene, pornographic, seductive, malicious, and degrading. And the Justice Department is stupid." (Straight Talk boasts that it publishes truth beyond the media coverage; facts without fear or favor.)

Meanwhile Capper's reports that cows will soon be chewing their cud and burping for science. Washington State University researchers exploring the effects of livestock on global warming want to find out how much methane cows and other cud-chewing animals produce when the belch. Cattle will be fitted with equipment in backpacks to gauge their gas emissions under a $70,000 US Environmental Protection Agency grant to determine if such methane discharges can be reduced.

Reason says that The Heritage Foundation reports that the government will spend $1.75 for each new dollar of taxes in the budget accord. By now, most people know that the package includes $500,000 for a Lawrence Welk museum, but negotiators failed to cut many other questionable programs: $100,000 to study the sand on Waikiki Beach; $100,000 to develop soybean ink; $3.4 million for shrimp aquaculture; $5.1 million to fight witchweed.

Curfew hours for the town of Carrizozo (after 9:30 p.m. to 5 a.m.) were advertised in a legal. Grizzlies win shot at regionals

It's on to the regionals for the Grizzlies.

The Carrizozo boys basketball team won a berth in the regional contests at Loving this weekend by defeating Ft. Sumner 79-55 for the District 3A championship in Carrizozo Saturday.

The Grizzlies outshot the Foxes in numbers of successes and attempts. The Grizzlies scored on 31 of their 61 two-point field goal attempts while the Foxes scored 20 of their 37 tries. The Foxes outshot the Grizzlies with three-point baskets scoring on 2 of 4 tries. The Grizzlies made two attempts for the three-point scores, adding points with only one. At the free throw line the Grizzlies scored on 14 of their 21 tries, Ft. Sumner scored on 9 of their 17 attempts.

Ft. Sumner's 26 turnovers didn't help either. The Grizzlies had only 14 turnovers with excellent defensive rebounding.

Senior Guy Archuleta led the Grizzlies with 22 points. He had 10 successful buckets in 16 tries, made a three-point attempt and scored on two of three free throws. He caused three turnovers, made two defensive rebounds, 10 assists, six steals and two deflections.

Chris Schlarb made 14 points, scoring on six of 10 two-point attempts, caused one turnover, made three assists, one steal, one deflection and one block. He was successful on both shots from the charity line.

Justin Portillo scored 11 points. He was successful in four of his five two-point field goal attempts, he scored on three of his four free throws, made one offensive rebound, two defensive rebounds, one steal and a half turnover, two steals and one deflection.

Rebel Sandoval made 8 points also, with two, 2-point field goals, one 3 pointer and one free throw. He made three defensive rebounds, 10 assists, six steals and two deflections.

Coby Sims scored four points, with total success at the basket. He made two turnovers, two assists, three steals and one deflection. Bryan Turnbow also scored four points, his one field goal attempt successful and two of two free shots adding points. He made two offensive rebounds.

James Silva scored two points with his successful field goal. He also made one offensive rebound, four defensive rebounds, one turnover, one assist, two steals and one deflection. He had no luck at the free throw line.

Players Chris Barela and Heath Rickman made no points. Barela made one defensive rebound, a half turnover, two assists, three steals and one deflection.

Coach Ron Becker also played Cory Collins with the varsity team Saturday.

At the conclusion of the game Saturday, officials announced Archuleta, Sandoval, Schlarb, Portillo and N. Chavez had been named to the all-district team.

The Grizzlies take their 28-1 record to the regional games beginning at 6 p.m. Friday in Loving. The Carrizozo boys will play the Lake Arthur Panthers (19-7) in that first round. Loving (22-0) will play Ft. Sumner (12-13) at 7:30 p.m. Friday. On Saturday, the championship game begins at 7 p.m. Both teams in that game will advance to the state tournament in Albuquerque the week of March 11.

Carrizozo junior varsity boys wrapped up their season at Magdalena Feb. 23. They ended with an 11-2 record. They were 10-0 against other junior varsity teams. The two losses on the record came when they played in the Floyd Tournament against Capitan, Floyd and House (all varsity teams).

The Carrizozo boys beat House but lost to the Capitan and Floyd varsity boys.

JV players were freshmen Davin Epperson, George Vega, Gilbert Barela and Blas Herrera, sophomores Heath Rickman, Nathan Portillo, Cory Collins and Anthony Archuleta.

Creamy Basil Salad

It's that time of year when the temperature runs high—but our energy levels run low. These months, even the most enthusiastic of cooks look for ways to conserve energy and minimize kitchen time.

Creamy Basil Salad is a cool, refreshing "make ahead" pasta salad. Those whose spare time amounts to "a half an hour here and a half an hour there" will appreciate that this dish can be assembled in different stages. Cook the pasta and make the dressing the night before and keep refrigerated. The next day, steam the vegetables and refrigerate for a few hours before tossing them with the chilled pasta and salad dressing.

Those who prefer to make the whole dish ahead of time can do that too. If refrigerated, it will easily keep for two days.

The dressing, made with evaporated skimmed milk, vegetable oil, white wine vinegar, fresh basil and seasonings, is easily whipped up in a blender. All of the ingredients for this easy-to-make dressing are as close as the cupboard shelf. In addition, Carnation evaporated skimmed milk is a lower fat milk alternative for those concerned about their fat intake.

Creamy Basil Pasta Salad (Makes 7-8 cups)

- 1/2 cup undiluted CARNATION Evaporated Skimmed Milk
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- 2 tablespoons chopped sun dried tomatoes (optional)
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil*
- 1/4 teaspoon cracked fresh pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon seasoned or garlic salt
- 5 cups cooked rotini pasta, drained and chilled
- 2 cups sliced, cooked vegetables, chilled
- Parmesan cheese, grated (optional)

In blender container, place skimmed milk, oil, vinegar, tomatoes, basil, pepper, and salt. Process 2 to 5 seconds. DO NOT OVERPROCESS. Chill in large bowl, combine pasta and vegetables; toss with chilled dressing. Sprinkle with freshly grated Parmesan cheese, if desired.

*or 1 1/2 teaspoons dried basil
