

Governor Wants to Close Fort In March

by Doris Cherry

ROUNDHOUSE REPORT, STATE CAPITOL, SANTA FE--Lincoln County must scramble to prepare a proposal for a viable use for Fort Stanton, or the governor will fulfill his promise to close it in March.

Lincoln County leaders met with Governor Gary Johnson in his office in the state capitol building, on Thursday, January 26. Gov. Johnson said he was not "looking to abandon the facility." Instead, the governor wants the facility to be used on a contract basis with the private sector for long term nursing care. While he agreed to look at a viable proposal for an alternative use of the facility, he was also pessimistic any such proposal could be offered to him before the end of the session.

Secretary of Health Alex Valdez echoed the governor about the closure. "According to the governor Fort Stanton will not be used as a state facility," Valdez said. Then Valdez announced that a three phase lay off plan for the 202 Fort Stanton employees will be ready by Monday, Jan. 30. Valdez related how Sen. President Pro Tempore Manny Aragon, D-Albuquerque also wants to close the facility, but yet did not want to impact on the workers or community.

Senator Pete Campos, (D) whose district includes Lincoln County, Representatives Dub Williams, R-Lincoln, Paul Taylor, D-Dona Ana and Barbara Casey, D-Roswell all support keeping the facility open. Taylor and Casey serve on the Legislative Finance Committee which recommended $5 million for operation of the facility this year. Governor Johnson wants to fund it $500,000 for a skeleton maintenance crew after the facility is closed.

Lincoln County Commission chairman Monroy Montes said the commission totally agrees with the phase out of the developmentally disabled patients at the hospital. He then requested the state to provide operating funds for two more years, to give time to develop the facility's next use. But Johnson was not inclined to support two years of funding.

Some of the options presented to the governor were a psychiatric hospital, boot camp or detention facility for juvenile offenders, a veterans hospital.

The governor was most

School Board Elections In Lincoln County On Tuesday

School board members will be elected in the five school districts in Lincoln County during the school board elections Tuesday, Feb. 7.

Corona School ballots will also include the question of whether the school district should impose the two mill levy for property tax years 1995, 1996 and 1997. The two mill levy would not be an additional tax but would be an extension of the two mill levy that is currently in place and will expire at the end of property tax year 1994.

The money would be used for capital improvements, which include erecting, remodeling, making additions to, providing equipment for and furnishing school buildings, purchasing or improving school grounds, maintenance of public school buildings and public school grounds exclusive of salary expenses of the district, and purchasing activity vehicles for transporting students to extracurricular school activities.

The poll for the school board elections will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Voters must be registered to be able to vote in their school district.

Construction People Object To Ruidoso Grade Requirements

Code enforcement of a twelve percent grade requirement for all Ruidoso lots brought construction people to the Village of Ruidoso regular council meeting Jan. 31.

Construction people voiced their opinions about what is perceived to be an unreasonable grade requirement. Further action on the 12 percent grade issue will be taken at a special meeting to be held Feb. 6, after a workshop also scheduled for Feb. 6.

After some professional and informative presentations, citizen input and council discussion regarding the Convention and Visitor's Bureau (CVB) Ad Hoc Committee presentation requesting authorization of Request for Proposals (RFP), the Council unanimously approved the actions which will result in Request for Proposals. The authorization included four of eight recommendations which were provided in a letter presented to the Council from Bill Chance, chairman of the Lodger's Tax Committee.

Councilors approved scheduling a public hearing on amending standards for Fixed Base Operators and airport tenants at Sierra Blanca Regional Airport (SBRA). The hearing will be held Feb. 28 and is proposed ordinance 95-02. Mayor Jerry G. Shaw

Legal And Illegal Dumping Defined

The Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority (LCSWA) held a regular meeting on January 26 in Ruidoso Downs. Eight of the fourteen agenda items were routine making for a short meeting.

LCSWA Manager Joe Lewandowski provided a manager's report which included a copy of an order granting a 20 year permit for a solid waste transfer station located in Ruidoso.

Lewandowski also provided a copy of a two page letter that had been mailed to contractors which clarified "legal" and "illegal" dump sites and gave information on the improved services LCSWA now provides.

Legal sites for disposal of contractor or commercial waste are Capitan Landfill, Gavilan Canyon transfer station, recycling center in Ruidoso Downs, and services paid for by the company such as clean up service, roll-offs, etc.

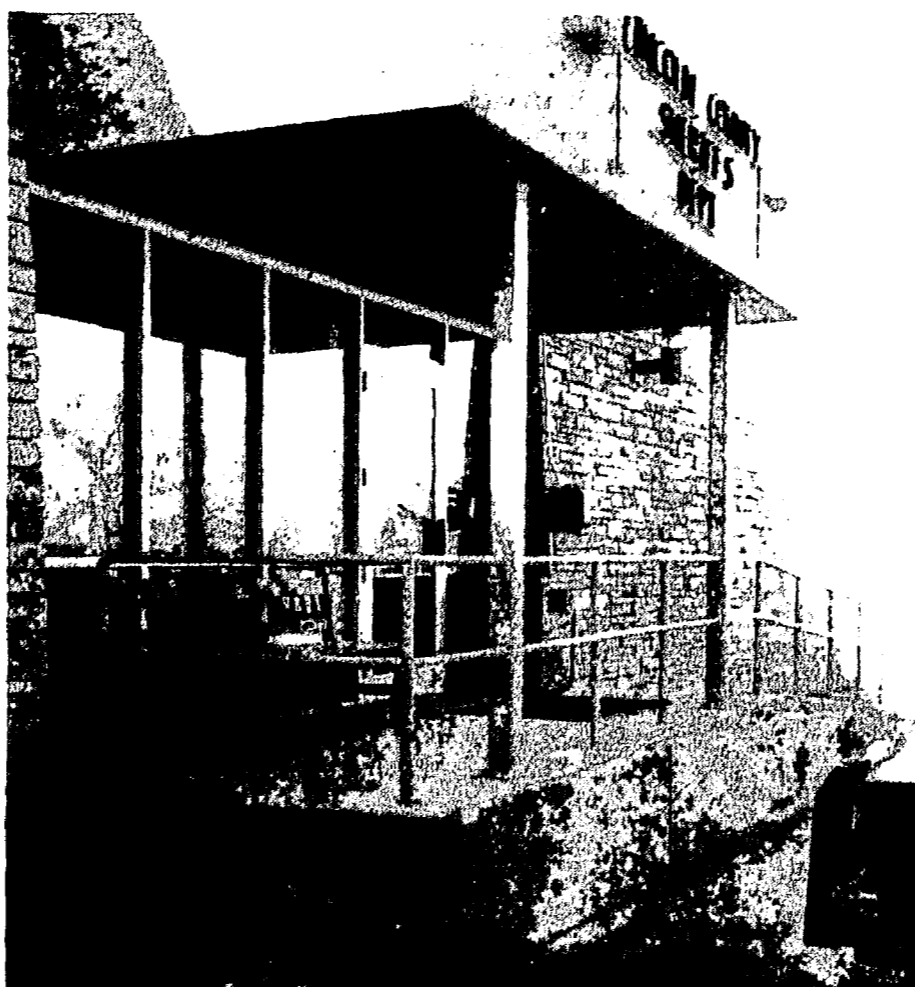

Illegal sites are in any dumpster the contractor is not paying for, in any residential dumpster even if the person is paying a residential fee because the residential fee is only for waste from the home, not construction or commercial waste, and next to any container or in an illegal dump site.

LCSWA has purchased roll-off containers and truck for construction sites or clean-ups. Lewandowski's letter stated the service provided by LCSWA is 40 to 60 percent cheaper than the service provided by haulers out of Alamogordo.

Lewandowski sought authority from the board to present amendments to the ordinances of the entities serviced by LCSWA to allow the hiring of a solid waste code enforcement officer and/or delegate individuals in LCSWA to those duties. This is a next step in pursuing a priority of code enforcement mentioned in the 11 Jan 95 letter to contractors which states in part "Enforcement is

ACCESS TO THE LINCOLN COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo may meet ADA standards but does not meet the requirements for people with knee or hip problems unable to walk up ramps. The ramp to the right, the only access to the door at the sheriff's office, is at a steep incline, probably too steep for a person in a wheelchair unless the person has help. There are no steps leading into the sheriff's office for those who can walk up steps.

Campos Bill Would Fund Area Projects

SANTA FE, N.M.--Senator Pete Campos has introduced legislation that, if approved, would provide $53.3 million for public works projects in his Senate district, which includes San Miguel, Guadalupe, De Baca and Lincoln counties.

The projects have been placed in one bill to highlight the fact that the roughly 37,500 people of Senate District 8 have similar infrastructure concerns that revolve around education, health and safety, and recreation, Campos said. Improving all three areas will improve the general quality of life, Campos said.

Campos urged the residents of the 10,500-square-mile district to come together in a collective effort to support needed infrastructure for rural communities.

"These are all meaningful projects that have been requested by community leaders to enhance the quality of life in Lincoln, De Baca, Guadalupe and San Miguel counties," Campos said. "The need to provide a better living environment throughout all of New Mexico is becoming increasingly important. A systematic replacement process for our aging infrastructure requires a sound local and state partnership."

Campos added, "I will continue to use every avenue available to strengthen New Mexico's infrastructure foundation, which I consider to be a key to a strong economic base."

Highlights of Campos' proposed legislation include:

* An appropriation of $1.8 million to build an indoor arena at the Glencoe Rural Events Center (former Sales Barn) in Lincoln County.

* More than $1.1 million to wastewater system repairs in Ruidoso; more than $220,000 for the purchase of water rights and water system improvements in Ruidoso Downs; $300,000 for a water project in Corona; and receptive to the suggestion of a detention facility for middle school age juveniles, offered by Rep. Williams. He said that Fort Stanton could be a facility that would provide intervention for middle school aged offenders, instead of sending them to Springer from which they graduate to the state penitentiary.

The governor said repeatedly that he was "wide open" to suggestions, and agreed with some of those offered. "Those are viable options, but I don't see them occurring on such a short fuse," he said. Johnson was also skeptical of whether the existing staff at Fort Stanton could be retrained within that time frame.

Campos said he will work closely with the administration to identify alternatives for the facility and he was to meet with cabinet secretaries Monday.

Fort Stanton employees Carmen Burch and Shannon Brazel said the buildings do not need much renovation, and employees already deal with people with behavior problems. Brazel pointed out that Fort Stanton is a desirable location. "Our place at Fort Stanton, people have freedom. It's a nice place to be," Brazel said.

Montes said that the families living at Fort Stanton would be a plus in a juvenile detention facility, by giving troubled youth a family structure they are missing.

"It would be a mutual benefit to the state and county," Montes said. "Don't turn your back on our future and our children."

Johnson did not disagree with Montes, but again said that making it happen at Fort Stanton was the problem.

Sen. Campos asked if the governor would consider a proposal if a viable one is developed and offered.

"I have a wide open mind," the governor said. "But I honestly don't see that a proposal will come out and meet the needs in this amount of time."

Johnson pointed out the court decree to move all DD patients out of Fort Stanton into community settings. "The decree came down. While we want to work this through, at some point you all knew there was going to be this pain."

Burch responded that since 1993 Fort Stanton was aware of the plans for the DD patients, and the state's plan to converting the hospital to a long term nursing care facility with renovations of buildings and retraining of staff. "We found there is a need for people with behavior problems needing long term medical care, which the private sector will not accept, and Las Vegas is full," Burch said.

Montes asked the governor what message he could take back to his county. "That $250,000 bi-weekly will no longer be spent by the state?"

"Right," Johnson answered. "It will close, but we'll work with all involved to lessen the impact. I'm wide open to finding a use in another capacity."

Johnson said that he will look at any proposal which shows a need and is not a duplication of services already offered. He said that a location for a high security juvenile "boot camp" lock up has been pinpointed for an unused facility in Los Lunas.

The governor said that he has not budgeted any money for such a boot camp at this time however.

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley said that Fort Stanton has plenty of room for such a facility, 1,300 acres. Montes said that the offenders could be used as a work force, to pay for their keep, and to avoid "warehousing" the troubled youth. Montes went on to say that the facility could be expanded to house more than 150 youth.

"Lincoln County wants to make a commitment and be a part of guidance for the youth."

Fort Stanton employee Wilma Webb said that the Fort has a farm, greenhouse, ceramics and wood shops which could be used for youth programs. "The juveniles could have animals, and cows to milk," she said.

Montes said that a juvenile facility at Fort Stanton would not duplicate Springer. "Troubled youth need a push in the right direction," Montes said. "In Springer they get a degree to the penitentiary or the welfare system."

Johnson was concerned about how the buildings and staff at Fort Stanton would meet federal regulations for such juvenile facilities. "Maybe that is viable," he said.

Montes said that the employees are in a "panic mode" because the closure affects theirs and their families' lives. "Already 10-20 have decided not to seek re-employment," Montes said. "There are already casualties."

Governor Johnson dismissed the group and they left without any real answers. The group did know that they will have to work fast to come up with a proposal the governor will consider.

Capitan School Board members Tom Trost, Beverly Payne, and Jack King, and school superintendent Diana Billingsley were at the meeting, along with county commissioner Bill Schwettman and county Republican party official Bob Nys.

Billingsley said Lincoln County has a lot to do fast for some type of plan.

Schwettman said that the county is working with the Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District (SNMEDD) on this problem. "Not much capital funding is needed for the facility," Schwettman said. The facility has been undergoing remodeling of cottages to meet the requirements of a long term medical care facility. "I talked with the governor Wednesday (Jan. 26) and he knows this," Schwettman said.

Billingsley said that the closure will impact on Capitan Schools, as will the current lawsuit filed by several middle-sized school districts to require a revision of the school funding formula. "Capitan now gets extra money for being a small school, if the funding formula is changed we could lose some of our programs," Billingsley said.

Lincoln County residents can write the governor at Hon. Governor Gary Johnson, State Capitol Building, Santa Fe, NM 87501.

Governor's Advisors?

By Ruth Hammond

Governor Gary Johnson may be trying to run the state of New Mexico the same way he ran his private company but there is one major difference. It is safe to assume that when he was running his successful private company he relied on people who were educated in his business to give him good advice. If he had accepted advice from the man off the street his business might have been less than successful, if not a failure.

The state of New Mexico should be allowed the same courtesy Gov. Johnson required in his business. Gov. Johnson should not only accept advice from experts in the field of the matter he is considering but Gov. Johnson should DEMAND expert advice.

The Fort Stanton situation is a prime example that Gov. Johnson is ignoring the experts and relying on the advice of a few people who don't know what they are talking about.

Gov. Johnson is apparently unaware that the state of New Mexico paid big bucks to do a study to determine what the best use would be for Fort Stanton after the facility stopped being a hospital and training school for persons with developmental disabilities. Many man hours, and woman hours too for that matter, went into the study. It was only after long and careful deliberation that the team recommended the state use Fort Stanton as a facility for geriatric patients and people with brain damage. It was determined that Fort Stanton could provide long term care to a segment of the population that was not being served, and desperately need the service. The state agreed.

Now Gov. Johnson has taken it on himself to loudly announce the state does not want to be in the long term care business. Did he make this decision after listening to his chosen few advisors who are unaware that the state did make the choice to be in the long term care business? Or did he decide that making money for the state is more important than human lives?

Gov. Johnson should never have need of a geriatric facility, not with the money he has made in private business, and not if he accepts only expert personal financial advice. But that doesn't mean that everyone in New Mexico has that much money at their disposal. That doesn't mean that everyone in New Mexico can afford private care for their loved ones. And that doesn't mean that Gov. Johnson should expect everyone in New Mexico to be as independently wealthy as he is.

It has been reported Gov. Johnson has selected a "few" people as his advisors. It was not announced if any of these advisors have experience in government. It was not announced if any of these advisors are less than wealthy. It was not announced if any of these advisors GIVE A DAMN about the people.

Maybe Gov. Johnson does not have a family member who has Alzheimers, and maybe Gov. Johnson does not have a family member with developmental disabilities but that does not excuse him from the responsibility of making certain the state provides the best care possible for these people.

When Hitler decided to eliminate the disabled, (they were called defectives at that time) and when Hitler decided to kill the Jews he did it with the explanation that the world would be a better place with only the superior race existing.

Now New Mexico has a governor and a select few advisors who may not be taking action as extreme as Hitler did but in the end, when the elderly and retarded have been excluded, just what difference will there be between the two doctrines?

Gov. Johnson should take a long look at himself and decide if he really wants to help the state and people of New Mexico or if he just wants to ignore the very people who elected him. Gov. Johnson should take a long look at himself and decide if the best way to help people is to eliminate them.

EDITOR—"Good For You, Governor Johnson"

I'm so proud to know a Republican cares about our poor underprivileged criminals. At last, maybe they can have better living conditions. Lets drop their good time—better not give them incentive to leave early and who knows maybe it will even develop into grants for college educations, as well as permanent housing and care.

Cut off funding for these old people; you know, the ones that are unable to work any more. The ones that are sick, dying, alone, and unable to care for themselves. Next, you bet—cut off aid to the mentally ill, because it only stands to reason without help, they'll be able to kill a few people, (or themselves), and be cared for instead by your new prison program too. We don't have to worry about the Developmentally Disabled people—now having been mainstreamed, several of them (many more to come), are now enjoying the prison system. PRISONS ARE THE NEW WAY TO GO. WHO SAYS PRISONS DON'T WORK!!! YEA REPUBLICANS, OUR TAX DOLLARS ARE AT WORK!!! I LIKE SIMPLE SOLUTIONS!!!

Don't tell your children to join the Armed Forces—you'll become a forgotten Vet. Instead join the New Mexico Penitentiary system—your every need will be met.

Thanks again Governor Johnson.

J. CANO, Capitan.

EDITOR—The letter in your January 26, 1995 edition from Ursula Goss was very well stated. She shares my opinion, and has prompted my letter.

My husband, Bill, and I have had several years' experience in caring for the disabled in the People Care group homes in Roswell. We've worked as volunteers for five years trying to make our own contribution in a small way. We have learned a lot, particularly about politics in New Mexico! But we have also learned about the needs of many disabled poor people.

We used our own savings to buy the homes, remodeled them with an "Affordable Loan"—and have pleaded for help from the State Mental Health Division ever since. Other families and friends helped with loans, too, in order to meet all the State Licensing requirements, Federal ADA Laws, and City safety and fire codes. We now answer to eleven different regulatory agencies, including the I.R.S.!

We remain undaunted, continuing to struggle to provide decent, homelike, supervised homes for ten adults with mental illness. (Two are veterans.) At present, People Care is receiving $1.56 per person, per day, from the Mental Health Division, with this meager amount to end on June 30. We are dependent on United Way of Chaves County, churches, caring individuals, and our own fundraising efforts. Roswell Serotoma Club gave us $6,000 for our large, beautiful kitchen in the "Three Gables" home at 800 N. Richardson, and have

Earlier in the day on which he signed the measure funding the Legislature's expenses for the coming year, Democrat leaders said they were hearing rumors that Johnson would use his line-item veto power to slash some of this session's proposed expenditures.

But later in the day, Johnson signed House Bill 1 intact, some 18 hours before his three-day deadline. And thus the first major battle of the session was averted.

At about the same time as Democratic legislative leaders were claiming information about at least a partial veto of their bill, former Gov. Toney Anaya was being interviewed on a local radio station.

When asked for his advice to the governor, Anaya said Johnson should think carefully about whether this is a fight he wants to pick. During his term as governor, Anaya vetoed the legislative feed bill three times one session. His relations with the Republican-controlled legislature never recovered.

Whether he listened to Anaya's counsel or that of his own advisors, Johnson was wise to avoid this battle. He could have claimed that the 18.8 percent increase over the last 60-day session two years ago was beyond the parameters he has set for executive agency increases.

But legislative leaders could have argued that total increases for all state government over the same two year period increased by more than 18.8 percent. In addition it's only an 11.3 percent increase over last year's 30-day session.

The main reason for Johnson to stay out of a battle over legislative expenditures, however, is that he can claim no expertise on the operation of a legislature. There's no sense slashing the budget of another branch of government unless he wants similar treatment for his own budget request.

A veto of the legislature's first bill passed would have signalled Johnson's intent to fight about everything and could have led to quick retaliation against some of his nominees for cabinet positions.

In addition, the feed bill has lawmakers and all their staff on edge until it is passed and signed. Until that happens legislators don't get their first per diem allotments and staffers don't get their first pay checks. Johnson will have plenty of other issues about which to be drawing lines in the sand. He has put his foot down firmly against any further funding for the New Mexico Hispanic Cultural Center, a project begun last year. And the tax-cut issue is sure to draw a lot of lines.

In fact the governor may veto the second bill to be sent to him by the legislature. Senate Bill 1 appropriates $7 million to the Gadsden Public Schools, along the border south of Las Cruces.

Gadsden is faced with tremendous growth problems, coupled with a very low tax base. Constructing buildings to house all its students has been an increasing problem.

Two years ago the legislature decided to address Gadsden's problem by appropriating money to the district outside the normal process of allocating a large pot of money to a council that divides it among the state's schools based on where the greatest needs exist.

Then-Gov. Bruce King vetoed the appropriation because it circumvented the system. Last year, despite help from the Public School Critical Capital Outlay Council, the district's needs had grown to the point that few disagreed a special appropriation was needed. But a last-minute oversight left the appropriation out of the legislature's big pork barrel bill.

When the mistake was discovered within minutes of the '94 Legislature's adjournment, Senate leaders promised Gadsden's appropriation would be the first bill they introduced this year.

It was, but a new governor is taking the same position as former Gov. King. Johnson says he especially doesn't want to start going around established systems so early in the session.

The bill is on a fast track to the Governor's Office, so the stage is set.

Balancing Federal Budget Will Take Work But Is Not Impossible

The new Republican congressional majority has set a difficult task for itself balancing the budget by the year 2002 without raising taxes or reducing Social Security and national defense. The naysayers, it's an impossible goal. But on closer look, it may be do-able after all.

by PHILIP C. CLARKE

Critics have called the GOP plan to balance the budget "fuzzy" or "hypocritical," one requiring "draconian" cuts in spending. Some have claimed that balancing the budget while cutting taxes and protecting social "entitlements" and defense would require spending cuts of at least 30% in the remaining government programs. Others have argued that the planned cuts would total some $1.2 trillion over the next seven years. Spending reductions of such magnitude may indeed seem incredible. But a recent report in Investor's Business Daily, puts the numbers into context, showing that it's not so "impossible" after all.

Using official budget data, the report shows that federal spending actually can continue to increase at an annual rate of 3% over the next seven years and still produce a budget surplus by the year 2002. The reason is that the economy continues to grow at a greater rate, producing ever larger tax revenues. So, to get a balanced budget, all lawmakers have to do is slow down the rate of growth in federal spending. Although Social Security, defense and interest on the debt - which can't be cut - account for half of total federal disbursements, there's still plenty of spending that can be cut. In fact, over the next seven years, Uncle Sam will shell out more than $7 trillion for so-called discretionary programs, if current trends continue.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, balancing the budget gradually over the next seven years without raising taxes will require approximately $1.2 trillion in spending cuts, or about 14% of the current "discretionary" programs. Which, as the Investor's Business Daily report says, is pretty much in line with what many large corporations have been doing to streamline their operations and make their businesses more competitive. In fact, says Christopher Gopal, a partner at the consulting firm of Ernst and Young, "many of the larger companies have exceeded that level of cuts through a combination of re-engineering and restructuring."

For corporations, this often means not only laying off some workers, but also rethinking the entire business operation from the ground up. And this is just what reform-minded Republicans have been promising for government operations. Ironically, in this respect, President Clinton now seems to be trying to outdo the GOP reformers. But most Republicans are looking for "still" bigger cutbacks. House Majority Leader Dick Armey (R-TEX) said recently that he has "a long list" of programs and agencies he'd like to see eliminated.

There certainly is no shortage of ideas. The Heritage Foundation, for example, has proposed cutting $609 billion in federal spending over five years by, among other things, killing subsidies for Amtrak, public television, arts and

For the Love of Gregory

by Joann Rice

Editor's Note: This column relates a five-year-old's conversations with his grandmother.

You are What You Eat

I spent three weeks away for the Christmas holidays. When I came back home, I called Gregory and asked him to come over, because I had a gift for him.

When he walked in the door, he said, "I hope this present isn't snacks."

"Why not?" I asked astounded. "I thought you were the snack eating champion of this district."

"Oh brother, Queen Mother. Leave it to you to bring that embarrassment up. I bet you told everybody in town that I'm a little pig. Why don't you just get me a trough. Then you can just slop it full of goodies every day." He buried his head in his arms on the table. "I'm so ashamed!"

"A little humility is good for you," I said. "But why don't you want any snacks?"

"Because I'm on a diet, that's why!"

"A diet? What on earth for," I asked.

"You just have to hear the whole orful truf, don't you, Queen Mother. You just can't let it rest, can you? You're just gonna go on an' on 'bout it 'til I spill my guts. Alright, I'll talk! I can't stan' any more 'his torture! I'm on a diet 'cause I can't get a single pair a my bluejeans buttoned!"

"There now. It's out in the open. Now you know. Now the whole world will know. I'm fat! Are you happy now, Queen Mother? Oh woe is me." And he buried his head again.

"I know this idea is probably way out of reason, but why don't you just buy bigger bluejeans?"

"I 'spected that from you. That's what all fat people do. They just keep on buyin' bigger an' bigger clothes 'til there's not any left. Then they are doomed to walk aroun' the streets wrapped up in a giant beach towel!"

"Well get a colorful one," I said. "Maybe with tropical birds all over it. Or flowers. Red ones. Flowers are always in style."

"Can it, Queen Mother. An'

now that I think 'bout it, I bet you got a few beach towels in your closet!"

"Me? Nay, I say. I'm as skinny as a rail."

"Hmmp. If they used you on a track, the train would derail. An' after lookin' at eberbody in this famby, I got more than a sneakin' 'spicion that fat is 'herited. Eberwhere I look people got pounds hangin' off all ober them. So I guess I'm just doomed."

"Well, break out the beach towels!" I said.

"Oh brother, I'll never hear the end a this."

"On a more serious note, Gregory, you aren't fat. You are just a growing boy. But being fat doesn't make you or any one a bad person. No more so than having freckles, or wearing glasses, or being deaf, blind, or crippled. And there are a lot of people like that, too. Everyone in the world looks and acts different. And that's a good thing. It wouldn't be a very exciting world if everyone was exactly the same."

He sat with his chin propped in his hands, thinking. Then he said "I 'spose it would be pretty borin' alright. It would be kinda like eberbody habin' the same name, only worsor. You would never be able to find your mom in the mall if you got lost, cause all the moms would look the same. An' your friends would look the same, so you wouldn't know who your best friend wuz. An' what if you didn't like one person? Well then really, you wouldn't like anybody. 'Cause eberone would be the same. Boy, a kid like me could berry quickly get real confused. Sheesh, Queen Mother, it would be a disaster."

"Or worsor!" I said.

"Well, I'm gonna start bein' nice to all the people, no matter what they look like. I'm just gonna be glad they look all different. But there is somethin' I'm confused 'bout. Animals look the same. I mean, if you've seen one monkey, you've seen 'em all. How do they tell who their moms an' friends are?"

"I was afraid you would ask that Gregory. How about if we save that for another day."

entertainment, ending highway demonstration projects and killing community development block grants. Other groups have created similar lists, including the Congressional Budget Office. Each year it produces a 300-plus-page volume of some 200 budget-cutting proposals.

"When it comes to tackling entitlement programs like Social Security and Medicare, however, the going gets tougher." Last year, a bipartisan commission set up by President Clinton to study this issue failed to agree on any entitlement cuts. Still, as the Investor's Business Daily notes, many entitlement programs have been greatly expanded in recent years. Cutting back on just these additions, it says, "would save substantial sums of money." Also, the "Earned Income Tax Credit" has seen its cost double since 1990 because of expanded benefits and eligibility enacted under President Bush and Clinton. Unless checked, these costs will double again in the next three years.

Clearly, if the federal budget is ever to be balanced, the time to start toward the goal is now.

CAPITAN NOTES

Greetings from my old house by the side of the road to your house.

Happy birthday to you. Happy birthday to you. Happy birthday dear Dorothy, Happy birthday to you. Happy birthday to you Dorothy Smith and we wish you many, many more of them. Capitan owes you a debt of gratitude for all the time and hours you spent doing things for us and trying to make Capitan a better place.

Some of the good things that have happened have been due to your diligence and endeavor, so the tip of our hats to you Dorothy and a lot of thank yous and may God bless you and keep you.

Please pardon me while I take a bit of time to boast about my lovely granddaughter. Katherine Maureen Anderson, better known as Katie Anderson, daughter of Dr. Patricia M. Sullivan and Jace Anderson of Omaha, Nebraska, won a Bronze Medal in the Skiing competition in Aspen, Colorado two weeks ago. She competed with young folks who were all older than she. The winner of the Gold Medal was a 12 year old boy from Argentina and the winner of the Silver Medal was a ten year old boy from Australia. And my Katie is just an eight year old girl from Omaha, Nebraska. Congratulations Katie. I cannot put into words how proud I am of you and your Uncle Tom is mighty proud of you also.

NOTICE! Feb. 8 is the monthly meeting of the Capitan Association for Family and Community Education (Extension Club).

Congratulations to Stormy Trost on his promotion to Lance Corporal in the Marine Corps. My eldest son Terrence P. Sullivan also enlisted in the Marines when he was fresh out of high school and he also was a Lance Corporal before he left the service. Stormy is a very fine young man and has been one of my favorite folks since I moved to Capitan 13 years ago. Stormy is the son of Tom and Ruby Trost of Capitan and is now stationed in Camp Hansen in Okinawa, Japan. Stormy graduated from Capitan High School in 1992 and entered the Marines in 1993. Congratulations Stormy and the next time I see you, I will expect another hug.

Guy and Linda Payne of Portales were house guests of Beverly Payne over the weekend. Linda celebrated her birthday on Jan. 30. Congratulations Linda. January 30 is also a most memorable date for me also. I celebrated, or whatever you want to call it when you are all alone, the telephone doesn't ring and no one knocks on your door and it is your 57th wedding anniversary. It brought back a lot of memories and I had plenty of alone time to reminisce. Reminiscing took me back to the wedding itself, which was almost a disaster. Now in the rethinking and the relating it is hilarious but at the time I couldn't believe all that was happening right up to the time we said our I do's. Do you wanna hear this? Well, here goes.

I was a secretary to the Director of the State Income Division in the state of Iowa and my husband was a salesman for the Burroughs Adding Machine Company. He came into our office one day trying to sell new typewriters, the first electric typewriter on the market and was explaining all its wonders and my concentration was on him not on the machine. He was six feet tall, had dark brown hair and I knew he was a wonderful dancer. I had viewed him dancing with another girl at one of the Capitolian parties at the Fort Des Moines Hotel, our monthly get together for all state employees. The first time I saw him was when he was talking to the receptionist in the State House. I was working up on the third floor of the State Capitol and when we took our breaks, we sometimes just walked out into the rotunda and peered down the two floors to the first floor. When I saw this Adonis I was impressed. So as soon as he left and I could make my getaway I dashed like a "hit and run driver" for the stairs and almost tripped going down them to ask the receptionist who the good looking guy was. "Why," she said, "That is Loretta Sullivan's younger brother from Ottumwa. Loretta Sullivan was the private secretary to the Superintendent of Banking and one of those exclusive secretaries that were in the inner circle right with the Governor. I then dashed calculating to see if I knew anyone that might just happen to know of someone that just might know Loretta Sullivan. Incidentally Loretta Sullivan was one of the most beautiful woman that I have ever met, beautiful to look at and certainly beautiful to know. Luck was with me on the following Sunday after church. As I was descending the steps of St. Augustine's church, Loretta Sullivan and her brother Paul were waiting. I started to walk on by, but Loretta called to me. It seemed that Paul had noticed me and had asked her to find out about me and so I could have saved myself a lot of "wear and tear" if I had just been content to let nature take its course. But that was never one of my strong suits, letting nature take its course. I always had to give nature a boost. We dated, we danced, we fell in love and had set our wedding date for June. His boss had other plans. He was selected to go to Detroit, Michigan, for a six weeks training course in the full line of Burroughs' Office Machines and to be given a territory when he returned. He said he was not going off to Detroit and leave me behind SINGLE. He did not trust my not dating behind his back. (Later when he would retell the entire episode, he would relate that I would not let him go to Detroit without being married to him.) Whichever, perhaps it was a bit of both of us that wanted to get the "itching" behind us when he left. Well we set January 30th for the big day and we had to be married in Shenandoah, Iowa. There was only one Catholic Church in the county and it was in Shenandoah. My parents had taken positions at the State Hospital in Clarinda, Iowa and that was 30 miles from Shenandoah. Naturally I wanted to be married where my folks could attend and give me away, so to speak. We had a couple of our friends, Cecelia Hornbostel and Ed Slobers, that were to drive from Des Moines and stand up with us. My roommate at the time was the daughter of the Superintendent of the State Hospital and I went home with her on Friday evening, we drove down from Des Moines, and Paul was to drive over on Saturday afternoon with his parents and his sister Cecelia from Ottumwa. What is that old adage about the best laid plans of mice and men? Well you ain't heard nuthin' yet, as the saying goes. Saturday, Jan. 29th southern Iowa had one of the worst snow storms in its history. Roads were closed, cars simply could not navigate and warnings were out not to try. Paul called me and said they had started out three times and could not get past a slight hill. Too slick. He had checked and the only transportation in the direction of south by southeast from Ottumwa, Iowa, was a freight train that arrived in Villisca, Iowa at two o'clock on Sunday morning. (Our wedding was scheduled for 9 o'clock on Sunday morning in Shenandoah, Iowa, just the opposite direction from Villisca, Iowa. The only solution was for my friend Elsa and I to meet him in Villisca at 1:30 in the morning. We could make it. The roads weren't quite so bad down that far south or southeast, I should say. That did not give too much of a spread between getting the bridegroom, getting a few winks of sleep and getting to the church on time, 30 miles away, now did it?

Well another paragraph and time for you all to take a deep breath. I have only begun this saga. This was a wedding for the book.

Finally at 4:30 a.m. the freight came chugging in to the station. Paul stepped off the train from the caboose where he had a decent place to sit, with my flowers in one hand and his suitcase in the other. He handed me my wedding bouquet with an apology. "Honey I asked them to put the corsage where it would be cool and not wilt. They thought I meant real cool and they put it out on the back observation platform and they froze. "O.K." I returned, what was one more disappointment anyway? We trekked back to Clarinda where we deposited Paul and his suitcase with a friend of Elsa's with the strong reminder that the wedding was at 9 and it was 30 miles away. "Don't worry" he countered, "I'll make it. I've made it this far." He had a point. He then added that we shouldn't expect Ed and Cecelia, my bridesmaid and his best man to make it. To myself I am a thinkin', don't know if I can either. I was so tired and looked anything but a lovely bride to be. The next morning, after about three hours sleep we arrived at the door where we had just deposited Paul three hours earlier. My father went to the door and there was no response to his knock. There was also no response to his pounding. We then dashed down to the oil company where Elsa's friend had his business and he gave us a key and when my father finally got inside the house, there was no sound except my intended bridegroom's snoring.

Well, we did make it to the church, late of course, and we did have our attendants, believe it or not. Halfway through the service someone gave me a sharp poke in the back and it was the friends from Des Moines. They had put on chains and made it through. (I felt that I was about to be put in chains myself.) Well after a wedding breakfast served by Elsa's parents in their quarters back in Clarinda, saying our good-bye's to my parents, giving thanks to my host and hostess, Ed and Cecelia said they would take us as far as Centerville on their way back to Des Moines and we could catch the local train the next noon. Do any of you not know what a local is? It is one of those puddle jumpers that creeps along and stops at every cross roads between creeks. The train was packed and I do mean packed. We were not the only stranded folks out in the territory that were "sans" automobiles. And of course, no one had a reservation. A reservation was unheard of and we just took our chances on getting a seat. And where do you think the bride and groom finally found recently provided our residents with a washer/dryer and stove unit for the "Carriage House." But for food and staffing, we are "on our own." Just a small subsidy from the State for each disabled person would make a big difference in the quality of care.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ursula was right. Our veterans, our elderly, and our disabled deserve better care in New Mexico. Unless housing and care can be provided by the private sector (believe me, I know that this is impossible, since the income of the disabled is not sufficient to pay for the care they need!), the State must come forward with a viable alternative. Otherwise, these neglected people will end up on the streets, in jail, or in the State Mental Hospital—a much more costly alternative for the taxpayers of New Mexico. Many lack the family support that most of us take for granted.

If anyone out there wishes to help with People Care, Inc. (a non-profit 501(c)(3) organization), you may contact us at home in Ruidoso, at (505) 257-7601, or you may stop by the homes where we often work, at 800 N. Richardson Ave., Roswell. Many caring people have made this project possible. You probably know that our residents were not eligible for Ft. Stanton placement, since they are classified "mentally ill." In fact, since they didn't participate in the lawsuit against the State, they have been left with few alternatives. It looks as if the only way to receive help in New Mexico is by "court order." And this seems to override common sense solutions.

P.S. My phone is (505) 257-7601. I think you may know of our on-going efforts—You have helped in the past.

FRANCES M. JONES,
Ruidoso.

EDITOR—Your legislator needs to know that recycling is important to you, THE CONSUMER, and to New Mexico's environment.

I strongly encourage everyone who wants to promote recycling, and solve our solid waste problems in New Mexico, to contact hers or his local legislator by calling the New Mexico State Capitol Building switchboard at (505) 986-4600, and asking for the legislator's office. Tell your legislator to support the Beverage Container Recycling Act.

The Beverage Container Recycling Act which I am introducing into the New Mexico House of Representatives will benefit taxpayers, and recycling programs throughout the state. By taking the beverage containers out of the waste stream, it reduces the enormous cost to dump solid waste at the landfill. Reducing the amount of solid waste also extends the life of landfills, which currently in New Mexico have less than a 10-year life expectancy.

Under the Act, beverage producers will contribute 7 cents per container to a fund, from which customers will be redeemed at 5 cents a container with a qualifying recycler. Recyclers will receive the 7 cents per container, to cover the redemption and 2 cents for their handling. Grocery and liquor stores will not be required to handle the containers to be recycled. The containers will be redeemed at a certified recycling center to assure that the materials get back into the recycling loop.

The Act provides an exemption for beverage producers which use refillable and reusable containers.

Several organizations, including the League of Women Voters, and 25 municipalities have endorsed the bill, and its concept.

The Beverage Container Recycling Act will put money back into the pockets of New Mexico consumers. I strongly urge you to call your legislator and express your support of the Beverage Container Recycling Act today.

'Carrizozo School News'

New Mexico High School competency exam for 10th graders will be held Feb. 6, 7 and 8. The exam will be given in a different two-hour block each day.

The purpose of the exam is to test the level of general knowledge and skills gained by students in their school career. The state has mandated that a student may not receive a high school diploma without passing all parts of the exam.

Sophomores are encouraged to be present and prepared with plenty of rest the night before each test block.

Blossom and Beau activities will be held next week, Feb. 6-9. A pep rally will be held Thursday, balloting for Blossom and Beau will be held during 7th hour, and there will be a Spirit Banner contest for the junior and senior high classes.

Thank You

For all the people who didn't receive our personal thanks, we would like to express our sincere gratitude for all the flowers, prayers, food, and donations, during our loss of our beloved mother. Thanks again to all.

two seats side by side? Right next to the men's restroom and I swear every male on that doggoned train had to empty his bladder every five minutes. And every doggoned male that came trit-trotting back to that blasted rest room gave me the once-over, naturally because that handsome hunk that I just linked up with for life was slouched down in his seat by the window, his collar loosened, his tie askew, and snoring and snorting like a steam engine. When I had poked him to shut him up, it was better to just let him alone than to witness his reaction to my poking. I sat and wondered, what could possibly be ahead with such a beginning? As I looked up sidewise at him, my husband, that I usually thought of as a Greek God, suddenly looked just like a doggoned Greek! And now how did your wedding turn out? After talking to Darlene yesterday and Netta today, they have some stories that will top mine. Do not know if they will share them, though but how about it girls? We can all use a good laugh.

So yesterday between a few tears now and then, suddenly I would burst out laughing. Now it is hysterical. Then it was traumatic.

And if you have read this far, have a happy week and remember that sometimes yesterday's biggest problems can become today's biggest jokes. Adios and have a good week.

Proper Clothing Care In Closet Is Important

By Betty McCreight
 Lincoln County Home Economist

Whether it's the start of a new year, or a new season, it's a good time to check your closet for clutter.

Inside the closet, all clothes should have plenty of room to "breathe." Don't jam suits, dresses, skirts, pants and blouses into the closet or you may find unsightly wrinkles, tucks and other undesirable styling innovations.

Pants often suffer from being incorrectly hung. Puckers occur most often in the knee areas and are caused when pants are folded across the lower bar of wire hangers. To cure this problem, hang pants on special pants hangers that suspend them from the hem. In this way, gravity helps pull the creases straight and remove minor wrinkles.

If closet space is limited, blouses and shirts can be hung on vertical shirt trees. Button each shirt or blouse before hanging. Padded hangers are good choices. They cost extra but also help prevent creasing and stretching of the shoulder area. Some men prefer to store their shirts in drawers instead of hanging them in the closet. This practice, too, will save closet space, but practice is needed to fold the shirts properly so they don't need time-consuming touch-up pressing. Suit jackets and sport coats should be hung on shaped wooden hangers to preserve their shoulder fit. Use a good stiff brush to remove dirt and lint from under suit lapels, the collar and cuffs so suits look fresh longer.

Ties can be kept crisp looking by hanging them (unknotted) on a tie rack, not leaving them loose in a drawer.

To prevent knit sweaters from stretching out of shape, always keep them folded and sorted in a drawer or shelf. Shake sweaters after wearing to allow the yarns to return to their natural shape. Fold the sweater with the sleeves tucked behind the body and the bottom under the top. This keeps them almost wrinkle-free.

You may need to raise or lower the rods in your closet either to gain more storage space or to make clothes easier to reach. If you lower the rods, you can often add one or more extra shelves above the rods for more storage space. Rods mounted 48 inches above the floor with three or four shelves above the rod provide good storage for boys' and men's clothes. Rods mounted 60 inches above the floor with two shelves above the rod will work satisfactorily for girls' and women's clothes. Young children will be able to reach their clothes if rods are only 36 inches above the floor.

Regardless of closet size, you can prolong the life of every garment in your wardrobe if you care for clothes properly. Never store soiled clothes in a closet because dirt weakens the fibers and makes them wear out sooner. Also, unpleasant odors can spread to other clothes.

Medicinal Value Of Plants

The little pills we take for our health which come in all sizes and colors may not all be produced from synthetic materials in the laboratory. In fact, one fourth of those pills contain at least one natural product isolated from a plant. And, it is likely that more plants would be used for medicinal purposes if we knew more about them. However, chances to obtain such knowledge is becoming less and less likely. The reason is that demands from an increasing global population of humans are initiating a gradual disappearance of tropical rain forests. These forests contain one half the number of species of plants on this earth.

As rain forests gradually dwindle in size, so do the numbers of primitive human cultures which inhabit them. This reduction of cultures is caused by the disappearance of primitive human habitat, as well as the spread of modern technology into those cultures. Various primitive people have exploited plants for medicinal purposes for centuries, but unfortunately, written records of their uses were not established. Such information was passed down verbally from one generation to the next. Therefore, it is virtually impossible for scientists to recapture most of the medicinal practices which were used. However, this does not mean that we throw in the towel.

Two primary modes of action will enable scientists to acquire knowledge about medicinal plants. One is to lobby for means which will decrease the rate of destruction of tropical rain forests. This decrease may enable workers time to examine plant species for their medicinal value. The other is to collect information about medicinal plants from the remaining elders of primitive cultures. Either action is a difficult and lengthy task, but the effort is enhanced by knowledge already known about some medicinal plants.

Here are some examples. Drugs extracted from the periwinkle of Madagascar are used to treat leukemia and Hodgkin's disease. Drugs obtained from the Pareia of South America are important muscle relaxants. Contraceptive pills and cortisone are produced from yams grown wild in Mexico. These are all important curing agents, but medicinal plants are not restricted to use by humans.

Wildlife also uses plants for medical purposes. Chimpanzees swallow certain leaves whole. These plants have oils that apparently kill disease-causing bacteria, fungi, and parasitic worms in the digestive tract. One researcher observed the diet of a pregnant wild elephant for a year. At the end of that year, the elephant took an usually long trip toward a river bank and consumed an entire tree. Four days later, she gave birth to a healthy baby elephant. That kind of tree was never a part of her diet. Interesting enough humans use the same remedy, in that pregnant women in Kenya commonly brew a tea from the bark and leaves of the same tree to induce birth of their children. Rhesus monkeys eat dirt in certain areas that they live because it contains a high concentration of the active ingredients in kapectate. These ingredients are used to treat diarrhea.

These are just a few remedies witnessed among wildlife. One wonders if humans will ever discover the many other medicinal uses of plants used by wildlife worldwide, not just from forests, but from deserts and grasslands as well.

welcomed the new airport manager as one who had previously worked at SBRA and had been a member of the community for a number of years, as highly qualified for the job.

Village manager Gary M. Jackson reported the Grindstone water treatment plant construction is on schedule as is the Highway 48 reconstruction project. The construction on Highway 48 should begin in the fall of 1995. State grant monies for parking signs in the downtown area of Ruidoso may provide up to $2,500 in matching funds. The name of a local person was provided as a possible vendor of these signs.

Jackson did not have enough information on the Eastern New Mexico University and public library project to provide a report. He did mention that it looks like a joint powers agreement would be required.

Bids were rejected for work to be done on the library and the Senior Citizens building.

Street renumbering for more effective response to 911 emergency calls is going into its final phase. One citizen, who cited previous experience as an emergency response vehicle operator, said that greater confusion would result. Based on input from municipal employees, the council decided that to attempt changes to renumbering for a single complaint would result in still more complaints. The council approved the final phase of renumbering.

A professionally prepared audiovisual presentation to explain the mid-year budget to the public and to the council was presented using color graphs and compared "Last Year At This Time" figures with current figures to provide a basis of comparison.

The council appointed Linda

Black and Scott Miller to fill two vacant positions on the Planning and Zoning Commission and C.K. Scribbling to the vacant position on the Arts and Film board.

Major Shaw said she would be going to Santa Fe on Wednesday, preparing to lobby the Legislature on issues near and dear to Ruidoso. There will be a reception at the El Dorado Hotel in Santa Fe on Thursday evening. Members of the council stressed to citizens in the audience the importance of letter writing and direct participation in the political process, if possible.

Some of the issues mentioned by council members and the village manager included gaming, Fort Stanton, and grant monies.

The council also approved Resolution 95-06, expressing the historical, economic and educational importance of the Fort Stanton site to people of the Village of Ruidoso and to Lincoln County. The resolution requests an ongoing dialogue with the Governor's office in order to come to some reasonable terms as to the future of Fort Stanton.

one of the Authority's priorities this new year."

Lewandowski provided feedback on meetings held in Carrizozo regarding Carrizozo's disposal needs. Carrizozo Trustees decided to advertise for contract proposals for its disposal requirements.

LCSWA attorney J. Robert Beauvais sent a letter which sought to confirm "that the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority has elected to abandon its status as a non profit corporation."

Lewandowski responded in a letter of January 23 stating "The Authority has never operated as a corporation, instead we have operated as a governmental entity through joint powers agreement." The Board concurred with Joe's response.

New business concluded the meeting with a discussion of an "adopt a street" type of program. Ideas presented included adopting a slogan, the possibility of individual municipalities providing a central warehouse for local people to borrow such things as yard tools, the possibility of providing trash liners with a slogan and perhaps contacting such organizations as "Keep New Mexico Beautiful" and "Keep America Beautiful".

The more routine items included approval of a change to purchasing policy to align it with the state's procurement policy, approval for Lewandowski to solicit proposals for LCSWA's insurance needs and approval of the mid-year budget. The next meeting of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority will be February 21.
