

State Plans To Fence Part Of Fort Stanton

by Doris Cherry

About 30 more women inmates are coming to Fort Stanton—as soon as a 10 foot chain link fence with barbed ribbon at the top is installed around the two-story building now referred to as "D" and formerly referred to as Sierra Cottage.

According to New Mexico Corrections public information officer Mike Toms, the fencing will be installed around one of the barracks buildings, not a historic one, at Fort Stanton to secure the facility for 30 "minimum restrict" female inmates. Toms told THE NEWS during a telephone interview that the fence will be installed in about two weeks.

Toms said the reason to bring more women inmates to Fort Stanton is because the state Women's Correctional Facility in Grants, operated by the private company Corrections Corporation of America (CCA), is crowded. The females are the fastest growing inmate population in the state," Toms said.

Minimum restrict inmates are those who have at least four years to serve on their sentences. Toms said inmates come into the prison as medium restrict, then go into minimum restrict and finally to minimum custody when they have about 2.5 years left to serve. Until now, only the minimum custody women have been at Fort Stanton.

"They must have clear conduct and behave themselves to move up to minimum restrict, (from medium restrict)" Toms said.

The new group will be confined to the premises and will be allowed to do work around Fort Stanton only if accompanied by a guard.

Toms assured that women inmates with violent histories will not be eligible to come to Fort Stanton. "There will be no murderers or ones who committed violent crimes," Toms said.

The most common crimes for women are (in order of frequency) trafficking controlled substance, possession of controlled substance, forgery, burglary, tampering with evidence, shoplifting, aggravated battery, first degree murder, and child abuse.

For now, the rolls of ten-foot chain link fencing are laying on the ground to the east of what some knew as Sierra Cottage. There is also a new roof on one of the oldest buildings at Fort Stanton. Fort Stanton Women's Correctional Facility warden Sandra McFadin said her women inmates will not be working on the historic building, which was upgraded as an ongoing project by the state historic properties division. McFadin would not tell THE NEWS about the fencing, or any future changes at the facility and referred THE NEWS to Mike Toms for answers. THE NEWS talked with Toms, but he did not know what building was to be fenced, so THE NEWS called McFadin again who said the building was "D" building, the two story build-

Ruidoso Tables Hearing On Lodgers Tax Increase

by Doris Cherry

Ruidoso Village Council tabled action on a proposed ordinance that increases lodgers taxes by one percent until their October 13 meeting.

During their regular meeting Tuesday, councilors tabled the ordinance until October 13 to allow the village Lodgers Tax Committee, the newly formed Lodgers Association and councilors to review the submitted proposals for a special events coordinator. The purpose of the lodgers tax increase is to pay the coordinator whose duty is to create, promote or bring new special events to Ruidoso that will in turn fill lodging establishments during off times. No one from the public spoke about mayor Robert Donaldson's request to table the hearing until October 13, so the council approved the request.

Another item tabled at the meeting was a proposed ordinance to refund fees for denied planning and zoning applications. Donaldson said he had not had time to work on the proposed ordinance and he requested it be sent to a council subcommittee for review, then to the planning and zoning commission for review and recommendation to the council. Because the proposed ordinance must go before two other groups, village planning director Cleatus Richards suggested the next public hearing be held on November 10. Councilors concurred and approved tabling the proposed ordinance until November 10.

Councilors did approve an addition to the marketing and advertising agreement with Grindstone Graphics and Marketing to provide $30,000 additional for convention and group sales services. Grindstone Graphics owner Laura Doth introduced Barb Sparkman who is to be the convention and group sales director. The village will provide the director with an office in the convention center, office equipment, postage and long distance phone service. Sparkman will help coordinate bookings in the convention center and all other services such as catering.

Doth said their job is to promote Ruidoso and get people to inquire. She said she needed a person at the convention center to answer questions about group packages, and services available. "The people at the convention center aren't equipped with that kind of knowledge," Doth said. She commended the competent staff at the convention center. "Our job is not to run the convention center, the staff handles that," Doth said.

To give incentive for Sparkman to book more groups, she will be given a 20 percent commission for recep-

NO PARKING, NO PHOTOS are allowed at Fort Stanton, according to signs posted along State Road 214, the only access to historic old Fort Stanton which now serves as a state women's correctional facility. County Jail To Stay Open On Trial Basis

by Doris Cherry

The Lincoln County Detention Center will remain open on a temporary basis if the county takes corrective action recommended by the state fire marshal's office.

During the regular Lincoln County Commissioners meeting on Tuesday in their chambers in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo, chairman L. Ray Nunley reported on the most recent inspection and related correspondence from the state fire marshal. In a letter dated August 10, Fire Protection Specialist Paul M. Linville, who inspected the county jail on August 5, listed 12 recommendations for consideration by the state fire marshal and state fire board.

Based on the improvements in the jail since Linville's first inspection earlier this year, he recommended that the Lincoln County Detention Center (LCDC) be evaluated and inspected every 90 days and he recommended the jail be allowed to stay open on a trial period on a limited temporary basis.

Nunley said he was pleased with Linville's visit on August 5, "even though he was kind of tough, it's his job to protect lives." Nunley said they know there are deficiencies in the old jail which is why the county needs a new detention facility.

Linville's inspection report noted that LCDC does not meet criteria for space for its 47 beds and he recommended the number of inmates be reduced to 30 maximum. He also noted that LCDC does not have enough exits for the size of the facility, that cell doors must be opened manually, that the recreation yard does not fit the definition of refuge, that distance from cell block to exit is farther than allowed, it has no automatic sprinkler system, the existing generator is not maintained or maintenance records are not kept, however the generator is tested weekly for operation. Other deficiencies dealt with openings that would allow rapid spread of fire, bull pen not subdivided into compartments to prevent rapid spread of fire, environmental systems do not meet current building codes or national fire codes.

Linville listed 10 other recommendations for the LCDC. He noted that LCDC has a fire evacuation plan, which Nunley credited to current administrator Mike Borrego. However, Linville recommended the plan be updated every six months.

Linville recommended a minimum of three correctional officers on duty at all times, with one stationed in the bull pen area. He recommended fire watch and checks be conducted by guards every hour and documented; corrections personnel have access to self breathing apparatus and be trained in the device's use; one fire alarm activation, Carrizozo fire department be dispatched to the facility to investigate or act according to the situation; an area of refuge and evacuation procedure must be revised and forwarded to the state fire marshal's office for approval; evaluation of installing smoke removal

Carrizozo Considers Fire Safety Program

by Barbara Culler

The regular meeting of the Town of Carrizozo Board of Trustees was held Tuesday, August 11. All the trustees, Cynthia Morales, Wesley Lindsay, Eileen Lovelace, James Silva, and mayor

Manuel Hernandez were present.

Rene Burton gave an update on several of the Carrizozo Action Team's activities. She said that all 10 new street lights have been put in, and at the caboose that the plumbing is in, the electricity is in but not hooked up yet, the sidewalk and parking lot is finished, and the landscaping will be started shortly. The visitor center signs are prepared but will not be up until it is officially opened, hopefully, within a month.

The Action Team has been working on the tennis court out by the Carrizozo Golf Course. Burton said that the backboards have been put up and will be painted green. The weeds have been removed from the cracks, weed killer will be sprayed, and then the cracks will be filled with cement. They may resurface the court if it is used enough to warrant it. People are encouraged to use the tennis court for tennis, basketball, and skating.

A historic buildings brochure is being worked on by the Action Team for a walking tour around Carrizozo. Burton said that Ann Buffington has selected about 30 houses and buildings that are of interest architecturally. This brochure will be available for people who want to tour the town and see what Carrizozo has to offer.

Bill Mason, from American Entertainment Cable, requested a transfer assignment of Scott Cable /dba American Entertainment Cable cable franchise to Interlink Communication Partners. In a letter, Carrizozo Town Attorney David Stevens asked the trustees to table this until a later meeting so that he could review the contract. Trustees tabled the transfer of the cable franchise until the August 25 meeting.

Carrizozo Fire Department Fire Marshall John Tate, representing the Carrizozo fire department, presented a proposal for establishing a long term fire safety program that would be administered by the fire department. According to the proposal, the fire safety program would reduce TRAIL'S END for the Pony Express Trail Riders was the west end of old Lincoln town. Riders were on the trail of nearly 60 miles that began in White Oaks and ended in Lincoln. Trail riders were treated to chuck wagon dinners and a beautiful full moon on two nights. Riders participated in the Old Lincoln Days parade on Sunday. The trail ride was sponsored by the Lincoln County Sheriff's Posse.

State Plans Fence

ing that some knew as Sierra Cottage.

Sally Burkstaller, one of the organizers of Fort Stanton, Inc. dedicated to preserving and maybe restoring Fort Stanton as a historic site, when contacted by THE NEWS said she had heard nothing about the fencing and state plans to bring in more women. She said when her group went to Santa Fe about the issue of women inmates in the old fort two years ago they were told that no medium security women would be brought to Fort Stanton. Her group was also assured they would have access to tour the historic facilities. "This is what I was afraid of," Burkstaller told THE NEWS.

McFadin told THE NEWS on Wednesday, that this year no one has come to the Fort to tour the museum or historic buildings. Appointments can be made by special interest groups or students to tour the historic buildings. McFadin said tours should be arranged through the Lincoln Heritage Trust in Lincoln, otherwise tours must be arranged through the correction facility administration office well in advance and can be done only when she has personnel available. "The fastest way for a tour is through the Heritage Trust," McFadin said.

When newly elected Governor Gary Johnson ordered Fort Stanton closed as a state hospital in 1995, the facility was empty for more than two years while the state spent more than $250,000 to advertise for a buyer or someone to lease the facility. Unable to find a company or private group willing to pay what the state wanted, state corrections moved in quietly.

McFadin had been warden of the men's minimum security prison at Camp Sierra Blanca which was also closed by the Johnson administration. McFadin told THE NEWS in 1996 that she wanted to create a minimum security facility for women inmates. McFadin had been an assistant warden at Western Women's Correctional Facility (in Grants) before coming to Camp Sierra Blanca. McFadin told THE NEWS then that she had asked that Fort Stanton be made available for minimum security women inmates when the state hospital was closed.

Now more women are being brought in and a fence is to be erected around D building, which is visible from State Road 214 the only public access past Fort Stanton.

History buffs, or those who remember when it was a quiet hospital and school for people with developmental problems, who want a look at historic old Fort Stanton will find it hard to do so as they hurry by in their vehicles. The facility is posted—no stopping, no parking, no photos. Toms told THE NEWS he knew nothing about these signs.

McFadin told THE NEWS that she had the signs installed last summer because of problems with people stopping and talking to inmates. She said no one is allowed to even stop for a quick photo of historic buildings because her guards must check everyone out to make sure they are not a security risk. McFadin said photos of inmates or any of the buildings at Fort Stanton are not allowed. If individuals want pictures of Fort Stanton, McFadin said they are available for purchase at the Lincoln Heritage Trust visitor center in Lincoln. She also said new pictures are being taken of the Fort and will be on sale at the center in Lincoln.

NM Corrections Secretary

Rob Perry is planning to visit Fort Stanton on Friday, August 21, Toms told THE NEWS. Toms said he would try to get the secretary to hold a press conference and he would notify THE NEWS of the time. THE NEWS will have a time and place for the press conference in next week's issue.

the probability of fire and reduce the probability of loss of life and damage to property in the event of fire. It would include fire safety education programs for the schools and public and courtesy (free) fire safety inspections of local buildings and homes. The proposal stated that a fire prevention and life safety program would benefit all citizens of Carrizozo.

Hernandez said that the board would take the proposal under consideration and at the next meeting the board would give their decision about a long term fire safety program.

Carrizozo Chief of Police Angelo Vega said he had good response to the letters he sent out on code enforcement from the property owners and he appreciated the response from the public, property owners, and those who have helped destroy some dangerous structures and pick up trash.

Contract services between the Lincoln County Detention Center and the town for housing and care of prisoners was approved.

Trustees gave approval to waive green fees for the Carrizozo Fire Department Golf Scramble on August 22.

There was no one there to represent the Carrizozo Recreation Center so the trustees took no action on approving resurfacing the bowling alley or approving the hiring of a professional carpet cleaner.

Trustees discussed Census 2000. Town clerk Carol Schlarb said that she had applications at City Hall for those who would like to apply to be a census worker. The deadline on the application is September 1.

Resolution 1998-16 received approval from the trustees. Antonia Samora, of Alamogordo, contacted the town after having received a code enforcement letter on the building she has in Carrizozo. She told the town she was on a limited budget and could not afford to have the building demolished, and asked for the town's help. The resolution states that the town found the property to be in a ruined, damaged, and dilapidated condition and as such it constitutes a menace to the public comfort, health, peace and safety; according and pursuant to the property owner, give the Town of Carrizozo the approval to remove debris." The resolution allows the town to demolish and remove the debris without charge to Samora. Trustees said if there are any more requests for help in demolishing and/or removing debris they will be handled on an individual basis.

Selection of streets for the 1999 Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) application in prioritized order, are: (1) G Ave. from 14th Street to 17th Street, (2) H Ave. from 14th Street to 17th Street, (3) J Ave. from 14th Street to 17th Street, (4) to curb and gutter 14th Street from E Ave. to J Ave., (5) 2nd Ave. from 8th Street to 12th Street (if it qualifies), and (6) Lava Loop.

Other items approved by the trustees are: Lovelace's attending the New Mexico Municipal League Annual Conference in Taos, the monthly expenditures, and one business registration.

THOUGHTS

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Fort Is Off Limits

By Ruth Hammond

There are rolls of fencing on the grounds at Fort Stanton here in Lincoln County. Historic Fort Stanton was established May 4, 1855 and served as a military post until August 1896. It was never fenced during the years it was a military post. Fort Stanton was transferred to the Marine Hospital Service in April 1899 and became a federal hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis (TB) in seamen. In 1952 drugs for the treatment of TB became available and the hospital was no longer needed for seamen. It was never fenced during the years it was a Marine Hospital. Fort Stanton was transferred to the state of New Mexico in 1953 for use as a state TB hospital and served in that capacity until 1966. It was never fenced during the years it was a state TB hospital. Fort Stanton served as a hospital and training school for people with developmental disabilities from 1966 until it was closed by orders of governor Gary Johnson in 1995. It was never fenced during the years it was a hospital and training school. Fencing was not needed at Fort Stanton for more than 140 years. Then the state decided to make it a women's prison.

Now the 27 rolls of fencing on the grounds at Fort Stanton are to be used to build a fence 10 or 12 feet high around Sierra Cottage. The top of the fence is to be razor wire, to discourage prisoners from trying to escape. Sierra Cottage, formerly the home of people with developmental disabilities, will be used to house 30 to 80 minimum restrict female prisoners. Minimum restrict may sound as if these prisoners are minimum security prisoners with restrictions on their activities but if that is true why do they need a high fence with razor wire across the top? If only their activities are restricted it would seem high-fencing should not be necessary.

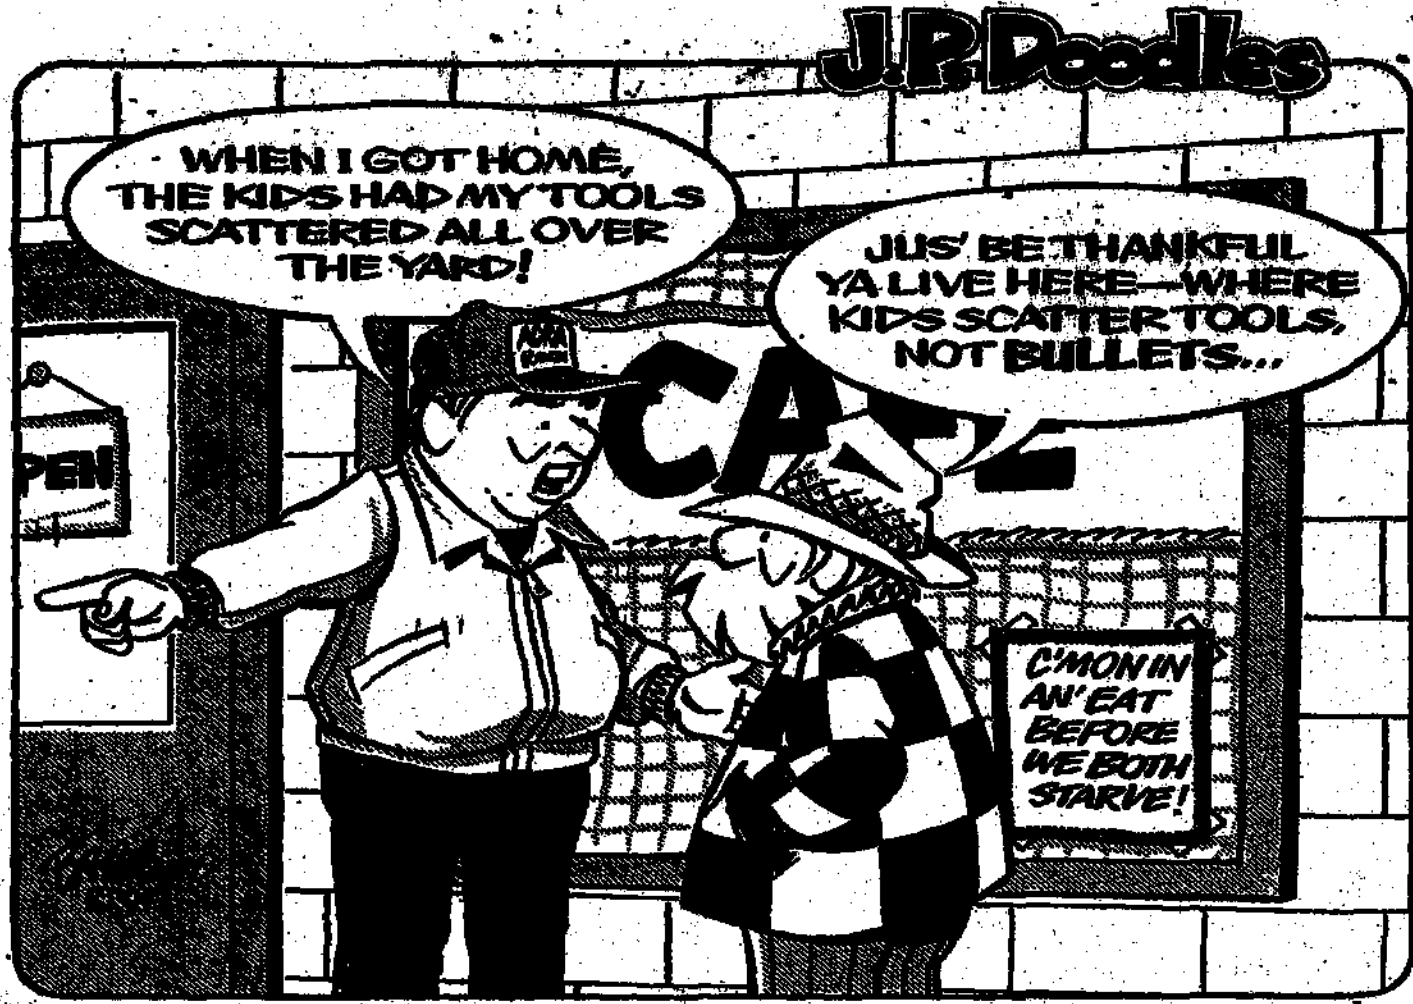

When the state decided to use Fort Stanton as a women's prison it was supposed to be for a short period of time, not more than two years. It has been almost two years now and instead of making plans to move the women prisoners to another facility, the state is planning to put up a high fence and bring in more prisoners. Hey, Mr. Johnson, is this the way you keep your promise to the people?

We have been told the women prisoners now at Fort Stanton have helped preserve the historic buildings and we want each of them to know we appreciate their hard work. We also appreciate their work at the Fort Stanton Cemetery and their help with the annual Merchant Marine and Memorial Services last year and again this year. These women prisoners now at Fort Stanton have helped keep Fort Stanton and the cemetery in good shape but we wonder if the minimum restrict prisoners will do the same. If they are kept behind a high fence it will certainly restrict their participation in any of the restoration of historic buildings and at the cemetery.

Fort Stanton is the best preserved pre-Civil War Fort in the United States and should be open to the public, not put off limits from history buffs. Fort Stanton should be open for tours and for people to take photos, not be removed from public view. There have never been encircling walls at Fort Stanton because it was an offensive post but now that is being changed. Fences will be built, and people will be denied access to a major part of history, not only Lincoln County history and New Mexico history but US history.

The former residents of Fort Stanton, the military, now long gone, and the TB patients, many long gone, and the people with developmental disabilities who lived there most of their lives, will be deprived of visiting their former home because fences are to be built. Fences to keep people out as well as to keep prisoners inside.

SANTA FE: What is negative campaigning and what isn't?

We're about to get schooled on the subject, whether we want to or not, as both Republicans and Democrats make it a frequent topic of conversation.

House Democrats brought the subject to a boil at the beginning of the month with a news conference to announce they were holding a seminar for their candidates on the positive aspects of campaigning and ways to stop negative campaigns. House Speaker Raymond Sanchez asked all Democrat and Republican candidates for the Legislature to sign a petition pledging to run a positive and clean campaign.

Not surprisingly, all Democrats signed and the state GOP chairman and the chairman of the Republican Legislative Campaign Committee both said their people won't be signing. Not that Republicans admit to negative campaigning any more than Democrats do but they contend that 40 years of Democrat control of the Legislature is worth talking about, and as long as they stick to the issues, it isn't negative.

So are issues vs. personalities the difference between positive and negative campaigns? Democrats would disagree. At the beginning of the 1997 Legislature, Senate Democrats complained loudly about Republican campaign ads, especially in Albuquerque and Las Cruces, that unfairly portrayed some of their colleagues and former colleagues as soft on crime and soft on violence against women. Republican consultants, they alleged, had taken meaningless procedural votes and portrayed them as key votes in cookie-cutter ads used against several candidates.

Two days after the House Democrat challenge, state GOP Chairman John Dendahl accused Democrat gubernatorial candidate Martin Chavez of breaking the pledge with the first of Chavez's television ads, which Dendahl said attacked Gov. Gary Johnson. Chavez said it wasn't a negative ad, it merely compared his position on Social Security with Johnson's position.

"Comparative" ads have been a source of controversy for a decade in New Mexico. The first time I heard one, Steve Schiff was using the tactic in his 1988 contest with Democrat Tom Udall for Manuel Lujan's vacated seat. Schiff explained that drawing comparisons between candidates is the kind of help voters need. That's true. The one problem with comparative ads is that a candidate gets to define his opponent's position and then possibly draw unwarranted conclusions.

General election campaigning usually doesn't start until September, with negative ads coming later, and sometimes not until the final few days, when it is too late for charges to be refuted. But not this year. Gov. Johnson started his campaign ads on July 1. Chavez, who had challenged Johnson to hold off until September, countered with his own campaign on August 1. Johnson's campaign ads don't mention Chavez, so they can't be called attack ads, although they do criticize government and politicians, in general.

Campaigning also has started at the local level, in the Roswell area, at least. Only July 10, the Chaves County Republican Finance Committee mailed a letter soliciting contributions that has some Democrats hopping mad. I've received several copies of the letter; which accuses Democrats of all the usual sins, plus a few new ones, even blaming them for corporate welfare. The stationery lists 29 members of the committee, some of whom are said to be nervous about their inclusion.

It appears we're in for three months of analysis by each party of the other's ads. Although it will get tedious, it may be good to have a focus on campaign tactics and a discussion of where the line should be drawn.

Rep. Heather Wilson and challenger Phil Maloof say they don't want their next campaign to be the mud bath the first one was, but both promise to answer the other's attacks. Maloof has changed managers and consultants. Wilson probably won't have as many of Sen. Pete Domenici's staff managing her next campaign.

But that won't change much. The orders for both will still come from Washington.

Private Prisons Don't Have To Answer To The Public

COMMENTARY by Doris Cherry

The troubles at the Torrance County Detention Facility near Estancia should be a warning signal to all counties that are considering allowing private enterprise to run their jails.

The Torrance County facility is operated by Corrections Corporation of America (CCA). About two weeks ago, an incident occurred at the facility where several guards were taken to the hospital. Little was said to the media about what happened.

Even New Mexico Corrections is having trouble getting answers from CCA, because CCA does not have to answer to the state, or to the public. CCA is a private company and legally does not have to disclose its internal problems.

In addition, the company is being looked at for problems at other facilities in other states.

Do the citizens of Lincoln County really want private enterprise to operate a new jail?

Why are so many governing bodies so ready to allow a private run company operate their facilities?

Once turned over to private enterprise, there will be no answers to questions about jail operations, because they won't have to give them.

Our own state corrections department keeps some things to itself. Despite verbal prom-fans in main corridor and bull pen areas in existing openings; fire drill and evacuation drill must be conducted every 30 days and at least one drill witnessed by representative of the state fire marshal's office; all electrical appliances and devices in cell blocks be operated on set period of time and turned off and disconnected during sleep periods; combustibles, such as newspapers and magazines, in cell block areas be kept to minimum and no matches or lighters, even by detention officers.

Commissioner Rex Wilson, who attended the inspection on August 5 said he and Nunley challenged Linville on some things and came to an agreement. "We are fortunate to keep the jail open on a temporary basis," Wilson said. "Most things are doable."

Commissioner Wilton Howell questioned the fire drill and wondered if the inmates would be taken out every month. But Nunley said the drill is for the staff to learn how to evacuate inmates, especially since cells must be opened independently.

Commissioner Monroy Montes was concerned about having to hire three more personnel which he estimated could cost $90,000 a year, for watching fewer prisoners than now. Howell was concerned that any time there are more than 30 inmates in the jail, they would have to be sent to Otero County at a cost of more than $50 a day. "At some point," Howell said. "We have to decide if it is cheaper to maintain the current jail or do something about the prisoners until we get the new jail built."

Nunley said he wasn't prepared to get into discussion about additional personnel until he is able to meet with the state fire marshal. Wilson said three new jailers would cost more like $60,000 a year. Commissioner Bill Schwettmann also attended the inspection, but only when Nunley had left, to avoid a quorum. Schwettmann said he thought it was a good meeting with Linville.

LETTERS to the editor

EDITOR: I have many books—too many. Many are old, 50 years and more, some much older. They are good friends, and used. Some are falling apart, poor things.

The other day I used one of those old companions, a 67 year oldie, it calls itself a "Lexicon" and decided to glue it a bit together. And while I was doing that my eye fell on the name Raiffeisen. The man lived in Germany, was born in 1818 and died in 1880.

What intrigued me when I read the little note was that Mr. Friedrich Raiffeisen is considered the founder of the rural loan associations. The German term is rather cute: Lanliche Darlehnskassenverein. Don't try to pronounce that, you may get a knot in your tongue.

What had happened was actually quite simple. The folks who lived in some rural areas in Germany had trouble getting loans. And when they did the interest was so high that nobody was able to afford such loans or were never able to pay them off. In translation that was called interest servitude or even slavery. So, what the guy did was to get a bunch of those folks together and convinced them to put whatever they had in one pot and whenever there was an individual that need a loan was provided from this pot for little interest. As usual, when there is a clever idea, the principle of the thought caught on, spread, and when that happens it needs to be organized, laws are made, etc., etc., etc.

Anything new about that? Not at all. We have the same thing here in the good old U.S. of A. It's called credit unions. Their slogan: Not for profit! Raiffeisen found a simple solution during a troubled time, in a time of need, for simple folks who were in need.

We have a similar problem in our own time, the problem is health care. Horror stories come to light every day about rejections for immediate emergencies, rejection of treatments that would save someone's life, etc. The ideas of the possibility of a review after rejected treatments will not help because it may come too late for somebody. The presently existing system is essentially designed for a profit making arrangement. It works only for those who are able to pay whatever it costs, but not for those unable to afford the treatment. One of our major health care problems is that a profit has to be produced for the "services". For someone who is really ill this is unbearable.

How about the Raiffeisen idea: A health union, not for profit. The HMOs and the insurance companies would fight it tooth and nails as they fight the credit unions. But, perhaps this may work. Even the so despised Government would not be involved: We, the people would do it, have representatives to govern the system. It would not work? Watch the history of Mr. Raiffeisen's idea!

Capitan To Consider Annexing Properties

by Doris Cherry

Capitan Motor Vehicle Division (MVD) office will be open one additional day thanks to an agreement between the village trustees and the state of New Mexico.

During their regular meeting Monday, August 10, trustees approved an amendment to their contract with the state to have the Capitan MVD open on Tuesday in addition to the Tuesday and Wednesday hours. The village hired another clerk to help with the MVD office.

Now that the village has sufficient water rights to take care of future growth, trustees are looking at requests to annex properties that are surrounded by village properties. During the 1994 drought trustees approved a resolution putting a moratorium on annexing properties until the village had obtained more water rights from Eagle Creek, drilled its second well and had more water storage. Two of those conditions have been met and bids to drill the second well are to be opened and awarded soon. Also in 1994 trustees passed an ordinance to restrict outdoor watering to specific hours.

During the meeting Monday mayor Norm Renfro broke the tie vote in favor of a motion made by trustee Debra Ingle to look at amending the resolution that imposed the moratorium on annexing properties, to allow annexation of properties that are bounded by the village on three or four sides. Trustees Ingle and Benny Coker voted for looking at amending the resolution and trustees Leroy Montes and John Whitaker voted against it.

Trustees send annexation requests to their planning commission for review and recommendations. Planning commission member Bobbie Shearer told trustees Monday, that the commission members had a split vote on the annexation requests and they set conditions to consider annexation.

Tracey Phillips, whose property is bounded by village land on three sides told trustees that she was told by realtors that her land was in the village, so she bought her land thinking it was in Capitan. Her property is located on the west side of the village subdivisions and is surrounded on three sides by village property.

Trustee Ingle was in favor of annexing the property, since the conditions were met—settlement of Eagle Creek water rights, new water storage and the other well. But Montes was concerned about annexing the property because of the resolution establishing the moratorium. "We haven't changed our resolution," Montes said. "As long as we don't change it I don't see how we can allow anyone to come into the village."

Phillips asked if the resolution would change when the water conditions were all met, but Montes said, "It could, but I won't say it will."

Shearer said there are five county properties that are surrounded with at least three sides of village property. One tract is totally surrounded by village property, another has a road that is half in the village and half in the county. Two of those five tracts belong to an individual who has not requested to be annexed and in the past refused to be, Renfro said.

Montes was concerned that annexing the tracts would set a precedence and the village could not turn down any requests to annex.

Resident George Tippin was concerned how annexing new land would affect the village 40 year water plan. Tippin said the plan shows that with full build out in the future, each water meter could be getting 10 percent less water. "This is a good argument to stay where we're at and not expand," Tippin said.

Tippin was also concerned that any new tract annexed could be subdivided into much smaller lots. Shearer said the condition of annexation is the tract cannot be subdivided and can have only one water tap.

Ingle said they should consider amending the resolution on the moratorium for properties with three or four sides bounded by Capitan. But Whitaker said he didn't see giving an answer to Phillips that night.

Renfro said a new resolution could only allow properties with three or four sides, which to him was different than properties with only one contiguous side to the village. And only two people with such three-sided properties had applied for annexation.

Montes also was concerned about amending the moratorium resolution for certain individuals. "We should amend it for all to come in or none," he said.

Ingle then made the motion to look at amending the resolution. When trustees tied their vote, Renfro said he wanted to take a look at amending the resolution and broke the tie in favor of Ingle's motion. Renfro said the issue will be considered at the next meeting.

Another planning commission issue was settled when trustees approved two meters for Riley Smith who owns two 25 by 100 feet lots in the village's core area. By village ordinance, each lot is entitled to one water meter. Smith placed a dwelling crosswise of the two lots and wanted both meters. Shearer said there was confusion when one dwelling crosses two lots and the commission wanted the trustees to consider changing the ordinance about water taps. But for now because the ordinance allows the taps the commission recommended approval of the two taps. They also recommended changing the ordinance about water taps on the 25 foot lots. The "core area" of Capitan was platted in 1900 with 25 by 100 foot lots, each of which is entitled to a water tap, regardless if a dwelling takes up two or more lots.

Tippin suggested the lots be re-plated in such instances, but village attorney Dave Thomsen said re-plating was an unnecessary expense. "There is another way to handle this," Thomsen said. "The 'Z' word." Thomsen was quick to add that he knows the residents do not favor any zoning.

Renfro agreed the ordinance needs to be revised about the small lots. But Coker said the village could not discriminate against someone for owning 25 foot lots.

Finally, Coker made the motion to allow the two taps for Smith's two 25-foot lots.

In other business, trustees: --Approved a resolution that allow the village to dispose of 1991 records.

--Approved a resolution that accepts the $25,000 state appropriations requested in 1997 and approved in 1998, for water improvements.

--Accepted the library contract renewal for the village to pay $150 a month to help with utilities.

--Approved precinct workers for bond election in September.

--Approved information brochures for bond issue election that will be mailed to village residents and property owners.

--Authorized the clerk to pay off the loan to purchase water rights, saving the village $20,000 in interest, and the loans for the copier and jet router.

--Amended the village Infrastructure Capital Improvement Plan (ICIP) to make a public safety facility to be the top priority project. Trustees held a public hearing on the ICIP and the next Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) project. Since water has been addressed trustees approved the new facility to house the fire department, ambulance and police department as the top priority for the 1998-99 ICIP. For the 1999-2000 year, additional street lights and sidewalks are the top ICIP priority.

--Tabled approval of a proposed ordinance that will repeal several water, sewer and solid waste ordinances and combine all into one "utilities ordinance." During public hearing trustees said there are no change in fees with the proposed ordinance, rather it will combine previous ordinances into one that addresses utilities. Because of several changes and additions to make to the draft ordinance, trustees requested those be made and brought back at the next regular meeting for public hearing and possible action.

Private Prisons Don't Have To

(Con't. from P. 4)

Our old fort is no longer ours. Next Friday, NM Corrections Secretary Rob Perry is supposed to be at Fort Stanton. That is the time we can tell him what we think about this expansion.

Elected county officials need to think hard about allowing a private company to run our new county jail. Governor Gary Johnson and his corrections secretary need to think hard about allowing private companies to run our state prisons. Once they are out of our public hands, they are gone, and these companies answer to no one but their stockholders.

Public run facilities are at the mercy of the public, who can demand answers and who can vote.

Let's keep our prisons and jails operated as governmental entities, and let's tell our elected officials that is what must be done. Or else we lose total control over the most serious task required of civilized societies—incarceration.

Another planning commission issue was settled when trustees approved two meters for Riley Smith who owns two 25 by 100 feet lots in the village's core area. By village ordinance, each lot is entitled to one water meter. Smith placed a dwelling crosswise of the two lots and wanted both meters. CORONA NEWS

Showers really help, but everyone is waiting for that one good rain. 0.3 appears to be the norm this far.

Bill Sharp attended the Roosevelt County Fair in Portales where his granddaughter, Julie Paiz, was showing her lambs and calves. One calf won a second place and sold for $2,500 per lb. The Grand Champion brought $3. Mrs. R.L. Sharp and Larry Sharp accompanied Bill to Portales, and Jerry went over for one night and the calf sale. They will leave Wednesday for Estancia and the Torrance County Fair where other grandchildren will be competing.

Carol Roper and son, James, were on vacation last week and attended the Roosevelt County exhibitions.

Doug Riley is in the University hospital in Albuquerque where he underwent surgery to clear an infection. His mother says his condition has improved.

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Bob Burton drove to Albuquerque where Bob visited with Doug Riley and Mrs. Riley. They saw Ernest Dishman in Belen, and he sent regards to all, reminding his friends to stop by when in the vicinity.

Jonathan Harelson spent last week with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Harelson. His mother, Peggy, came from Roswell for the weekend, and all attended church services Sunday morning.

Jim Carroll of Ruidoso will be in the pulpit at the Presbyterian Church here Sunday, August 16.

Corona schools start Monday, August 17.

Carol Hutchinson with the State Agency on Aging was visiting the senior center here Tuesday, interviewing and taking pictures.

Crown CowBelles met Thursday morning, August 6 in the school board room with seven members present and four guests: Eva Mae Holleyman of Corona, Lisa and Kendra Encinas of Los Lunas, and Sue Hughes of Estancia. Kendra presented the program by repeating her talk, "Beef - Fact or Fiction", that she gave in the Beef Ambassador contest at the state CowBelle mid-year meeting in Ruidoso last month. Her speech was good and her posters excellent. It was suggested that she put her posters on exhibition at the State Fair. Kendra, 15 and a Belen high school sophomore, is a little shy but says she will enter the contest again next year.

President Lanita Rasak and treasurer Wanda Duke reported on the Ruidoso meeting. They enjoyed the officers' skit and want Crown to give it at a special meeting. They reported some controversy over the beef checkoff and gave copies of reasons in favor. The president stated that there are some evening hours vacant for tending the state fair booth. She suggested stopping by for an hour or more at any time, the more the merrier and always plenty to keep one busy.

The treasurer reported that $100 had been sent Cream of the Crop and letters had been sent out regarding it. The motion was made to accept the by-laws as amended. The vote FOR was unanimous. The Woman of the Year committee will send out nominating ballots immediately, to be returned to Mrs. Duke by September 15. CrownBelle's New Mexico

Man of the Year is Laurie Kincaid of Carlsbad. Crown voted unanimously to meet six times a year regularly on even months. The next meeting will be Thursday, October 1 in the school board room with lunch at the school lunch room. Mrs. Rasak will make year books to reflect this change in meeting dates. The NMSU Ram Test is to be on alternate years now, and this is not the year for it.

It was stated at the Ruidoso meeting that parents and CowBelle members should check text books to determine what contents are contrary to our way of life. This is really a scary situation. One person has already written an author protesting the view that ranchers abuse the land.

The program for the October meeting will be announced.

Tim Kane worked on his place over the weekend and said he had one-half inch of rain which was welcome but caused some delay. Mr. and Mrs. Kane will return in two weeks to accept delivery of their new home. The Albuquerque Off Site Construction Co. has given them a late August date. The Kanes hope to be in full residence by October 1. Joel will come from Chicago to attend school in Corona. Mr. Kane expects to spend less time on his truck.

FOREST SERVICE ALLOWS FIRE TO BURN IN THE CAPITAN MOUNTAINS

Lincoln National Forest is letting a lightning caused fire to burn without suppression in the Capitan Mountains Wilderness Area.

Started by lightning on August 8, the fire will be allowed

We welcome them to a less hectic life. It will be the first time they have moved into a home that did not need papering, painting and cleaning.

Barbara Bradley visited friends here Wednesday before going on to Mountainair for church services and then to see her mother, Dorothy Bradley, who lives in a village south of Belen. Barbara had been in El Paso for the funeral of an aunt and had come with family members to Carrizozo for a few days. She is a senior in college at Waxahatchie, TX and works at an Assembly of God Church in Dallas. She expects to get her degree in Theology next spring and then do post graduate work for at least a year. She is involved with the youth group of about 300 in her church.

Mrs. John Ware, and daughter Karen of Norfolk, VA visited last week with Karen's aunt and cousins, the Kesslers. Courtney and Karen are with their family in Muleshoe, TX while the father is on a six month navy cruise in the Mediterranean.

Mrs. Shirley Jennings left Saturday for her home in Anchorage, Alaska. While here she completed the paper work so that her son Jay Williamson's picture and name will appear in the Vietnam Memorial in northern New Mexico. Jay, a CHS graduate was a CPO and a helicopter pilot. He was shot down in 1986 at age 25 on his first mission out in Vietnam.

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings plan to leave Alaska in October, probably settling in Montana for business reasons, although they are not ruling out a move to Corona.

MARTEA GUEVARA
 Acting County Manager

Published in the Lincoln County News on Thursday, August 13, 1998.

LCSWA Future On Shaky Ground

by Doris Cherry

In September Ruidoso begins collecting its own trash, pulling out of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority (LCSWA) of which it has been a member since 1990.

Ruidoso has hired Leonard Corona to direct the trash operations for the village, bringing back the man who before LCSWA ran the village trash department. During the regular village council meeting Tuesday, village manager Alan Briley said Corona did not go over to LCSWA when the trash operations were transferred there in 1990. Briley said Corona knows the village and he looks forward to Corona coming on board.

But the remaining trustees on LCSWA are not so confident. Monday night, Capitan village trustee Debra Ingle asked for direction from the other trustees about what to do with the LCSWA manager. She said the manager has not produced a transition plan for employees after Ruidoso pulls out, which "puts the authority in a bind under the Fair Labor Standards." Ingle said the fair labor standards require that employees be notified of a plan within 30 days of the transition.

"This tells me the manager isn't taking care of the authority," Ingle said. She referred to discussion by Lincoln County commissioner Monroy Montas on July 24 about his wanting the county to pull out of LCSWA and create its own solid waste department under the road department.

"Capitan, Carrizozo and Ruidoso Downs will be hurting if the county pulls out," Ingle said.

LCSWA board passed a joint powers agreement (JPA) in April to accept Ruidoso's separation. Capitan, Carrizozo, Corona, Ruidoso Downs and the county also approved similar JPAs. Ingle said the JPA became effective July 1, yet Ruidoso's four members continue to vote on the board. "Ruidoso shouldn't vote on the plan (transition) or the process to reorganize," Ingle said during the meeting. She also alleged that the July LCSWA meeting was illegal because of the JPA.

But at the Lincoln County Commission meeting on Tuesday, LCSWA manager Jerry Wright told THE NEWS that the JPA states that Ruidoso will have only one vote on the LCSWA board after it separates. Until the day Ruidoso actually begins collecting its own trash, Ruidoso has its four members on the nine-member LCSWA board, Wright said. After the separation the LCSWA board will have only one representative from each entity, including the county.

Ingle at the Capitan meeting said that on August 18, LCSWA has to have a plan for its employees. "It will take having Capitan, Carrizozo, Corona and Ruidoso Downs to be there (at the meeting) because the county has only one vote," Ingle said. "The board will have to take charge if the manager won't do it."

Ingle said the employees have been expressing concern and need to know where they stand and the citizens need to know what will happen so "we won't end up swimming in garbage after September 5." Ingle said she has visited with Carrizozo Mayor Manny Hernandez and Carrizozo Trustee Cynthia Morales who is the town's representative on LCSWA about the situation. Trustees said they supported Ingle on any decision she makes on the LCSWA board.

Capitan Trustee Leroy Montes said he thought there had been problems with all the LCSWA managers. He also said the biggest problem with LCSWA is the board meeting is during the day and working people can't attend.

Tuesday morning, during the Lincoln County Commission meeting in the courthouse in Carrizozo, county commissioner Monroy Montes said he had talked about the LCSWA transition twice in the last month. He was still concerned about LCSWA's future in three weeks when Ruidoso begins its own collection. "I suggest the county take over a department and run it with three people or less and do our own solid waste collection," Montes said. He had no figures of what it would cost to do this. Montes was interested in the revenue generated from the county's portion of the solid waste collection.

Jerry Wright, LCSWA manager, told Montes that the county could take over the trash collection and make it a revenue source. "Once Ruidoso is out, the county is the biggest customer," Wright said. "Without the county, the authority's existence will be real marginal."

County commissioner Wilton Howell said any trash fee should be based on what it costs to collect trash. He said if the current fee is producing revenue and is more than what it costs to pick-up trash in the county, it could be reduced, or services improved. But Howell wanted the county to take over trash collections, use county inmates to operate the solid waste department, and use the revenue from the county trash collection fees and apply that revenue toward a new jail.

Wright said he asked for inmates to work for LCSWA a number of times, but the arrangements were never made. Wright said it was against the law to charge fees higher than what the service costs.

Wright said LCSWA has a grant for two new rear loading collection trucks which will be used mostly for county collections.

"We can't wait until September to see what LCSWA becomes," Montes said. So in answer to a question from commissioner Rex Wilson, Wright said LCSWA will lose about half its revenues and will cut its current 28 employee staff to about 14 after Ruidoso pulls out.

Howell asked if Wright has a plan of which employees will be affected. "The employees are excited and concerned," Howell said. Wright answered that the LCSWA board will make a decision when it meets at 2 p.m. Monday, August 17.

County commissioner Bill Schwettmann said he was not in favor of pulling out of the partnership until the county talks with the other entities. "We may ultimately benefit by staying with our partners. The county has no plan and I'm concerned about operating a profit making entity with county employees," he said.

County commission chairman Ray Nunley asked Wright what has been accomplished in LCSWA since he became manager. Wright said two and a half years ago most of the equipment was unsafe and unserviceable, now LCSWA has enough money in reserves to replace its equipment. Now LCSWA has eight new roll off containers with two to be placed in different communities on a rotating basis and the other six to be leased out to contractors which makes revenue for LCSWA.

Two and a half years ago, LCSWA had serious employee problems, now most employee

Ruidoso Tables Hearing

five services provided. Receptive services are when a person arranges everything needed for a successful convention-from transportation, lodging, meals, to the actual convention and catering if needed.

Doth said a private receptive services company is thinking of coming to the village, but until then, Sparkman will provide the receptive services for the convention center.

"All doors are wide open if we aggressively market Ruidoso," Sparkman said to the councilors.

Doth and mayor Donaldson spoke about the Tourism Association of New Mexico meeting and the state tourism department retreat held on Monday in Ruidoso.
Donaldson said that people who had not been to Ruidoso in 10 or 15 years were stunned and excited about the progress in the village. For the orange barrels on the highway construction area, Donaldson said the tourism group thought it was a good sign of progress, and did not match the number of orange barrels in Santa Fe.

A sign advertising a lodge located off the main street must be upgraded in the next 30 days or it must come down.
Councilors reconsidered a license they granted to David Goodman for the Cree Manor inn because they had restricted the sign area to 100 square feet. But village manager Alan Briley asked the issue be on the agenda because the ordinance about the signs
"grandfathered" in signs that were in place before the ordinance. "The ordinance says nothing about the size of (grandfathered) signs," Briley said. Under the conditions the council imposed, Goodman would have to tear down the sign and replace it with one that was only 100 square feet.
The existing sign is about 120 square feet. Briley asked that the council amend its action and allow the existing sign to stay up.

But councilor Bob Sterchi who made the amendment to require the sign to be 100 square feet, said the sign needs to come down. "That is the rattiest sign...it's an embarrassment to the village," Sterchi said.

After discussion, Briley and village attorney John Underwood suggested councilors table the action for 30 days during which time Goodman must upgrade the sign or he must meet the 100 square foot size, or upgrade the sign within 30 days or the sign must come down.

Finally councilor Leon Eggleston made the motion to amend the council's July 28 action for the Cree Manor sign and allow the existing sign to remain if it is brought to code within 30 days, or the grandfather condition is null and void. Councilor Bill Chance seconded the motion and all councilors approved it.

In other business, councilors:

LCSWA Future

problems are being created by Ruidoso's separation and the uncertainty of job security, Wright continued.

Montes said that at the last LCSWA meeting, some of the board members wanted larger trash containers in the county. Wright said that is why LCSWA is replacing the side loading trash trucks with rear loaders that accommodate larger containers.

Nunley was concerned about making the road department responsible for trash. "In the last 12 months the county road department hasn't been able to keep up with the roads," Nunley said.
"How are we going pick up trash with three employees?"

Road department supervisor Albert Hernandez said that when he first started working for the county he picked up the trash for the whole county by himself. "If I get good help we could pick up the whole county," Hernandez said.
"Supervising two or three (for trash pick up) would be okay, but not if I have to pull the road crew."

Montes said the trash would be a separate department.

Wright reminded commissioners that before LCSWA the county did not have to deal with a Subtitle D landfill, it did not have to haul the trash 72 miles to the landfill and did not have $19.50 a ton tipping fees. Currently LCSWA makes two hauls a day to the landfill, after Ruidoso pulls out, Wright said it will drop to one haul a day.

Nunley said he could not see giving the road department more to do than roads.
But Montes said they could create a department with minimal personnel, new equipment and larger dumpsters.

County resident E. J.
Fouratt suggested the county go to private industry. "As long as you're going to study the issue, put it out for rfp and see what happens," he said.

Ruidoso councilors put out an rfp for private enterprise to collect trash in the village.
After analysis by village staff,
the council accepted the recommendation to create its own department and do the trash collection with village employees.

Schwettmann said whether the county considers private enterprise or taking over, commissioners should consult with the other four LCSWA partners. "We haven't consulted anyone else but ourselves," Schwettmann said.

"They (representatives from Capitan, Carrizozo, Corona) weren't at the board meeting," Montes responded.
