

Carrizozo On Probation For EPA Water Violation

by Barbara Culler

The regular meeting of the Town of Carrizozo Board of Trustees was held Tuesday, March 9. Mayor Manuel Hernandez and trustees Eileen Lovelace, Wesley Lindsay, and Cynthia Morales were present. Trustee James Silva was not present. Carrizozo Town Attorney, David Stevens, was also present. Tomas Vargas, Carrizozo water operator, gave a general report to the trustees. He told the trustees that he received a notice of violation from the United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) for the months of July, August, and September before he became the operator. The notice was a microbiological public notice violation which said that Carrizozo's samples exceeded maximum contaminant level of total coliform bacteria. This put Carrizozo under violation and the town had to re-sample within 24 hours and the re-sample came back positive. The operator at that time did not notify the public which is required in the regulations. Jim Payne, town foreman, said that it is known what happened, how it happened, and where it happened and that the situation has been corrected. Vargas said that both he and Payne are keeping a close track on everything and that all the microbiological samples are now coming back good and that the water system is in tiptop shape. Carrizozo is now under a one year probation. Vargas says that microbiological contamination is very dangerous and can affect the young and the old. He has contacted Gabriel Salinas, from the USEPA Drinking Water Enforcement out of Dallas, who told him that this was a warning and that the next time it would be an administrative order which could shut down the town's water system. Vargas also said that Carrizozo needs back-siphon and back-flow prevention. He said that this is directly related to the violation and he has made an inspection of the town and that Carrizozo has no back-flow prevention devices. The water system is susceptible to contamination and Vargas said that it affects everyone in the community. To ensure the safety of the residents a back-flow prevention system should be put in place. He said that Carrizozo is due this year for a sanitary survey by the New Mexico Environment Department. The last sanitary survey recommended that the town start a back-flow prevention program. Vargas gave a report on his observations and recommendations. Hernandez said that the problem has been solved but the town still needs to look into putting in the back-flow valves. He said they have to start looking at the budget and how many back-flow devices are needed. Vargas said that information is itemized in his report. He gave the trustees one company's price

NEWLY SWORN Capitan Board of Education members Grant Dean, Ervin Aldaz and James Hobbs watch as Lincoln County Magistrate Judge Gerald Dean Jr. signs his name to the oath of office documents. It was a special occasion for Judge Dean, because Grant is his son. Lincoln County Clerk Martha Proctor asked Judge Dean to administer the oath of office, since Judge Dean was not able to canvas the election votes that put his son on the school board. Following the ceremony, the board approved a new $2 million bond issue election to be held May 11. The board re-elected Tom Trost (far right) as president.

Ruidoso Okays Special Tax Election On May 18

by Doris Cherry

On May 18, voters in Ruidoso will be asked to continue a one percent supplemental municipal gross receipt tax that will be dedicated to water system improvements. During their regular meeting Tuesday, March 9, Ruidoso village councilors unanimously approved a resolution that schedules the special election on May 18 to pose two questions to voters. The first question on the ballot asks voters if the village "shall continue to impose the supplemental municipal gross receipt tax for water system improvements"....at the rate of one percent of the gross receipts...to be dedicated to the payment of supplemental municipal gross receipt tax bonds for the Ruidoso municipal water supply system described in the second question. The second question asks voters if they are for or against the village issuing up to $5 million in supplemental municipal gross receipt tax bonds that will be paid for by the supplemental municipal gross receipt tax as described in question one. The money will be used to construct, equip, acquire, enlarge, extend and improve the Ruidoso municipal water supply system. One year ago, the village posed similar questions to voters on the ballot with the regular municipal council and mayor elections. Voters turned down continuing the one percent tax by 24 votes but approved the other. However, without the one percent tax, the village could not issue the municipal bonds to finance water system improvements. Mayor Robert Donaldson said the village worked with its bond counsel on rewording the questions to make it clearer to the voting public that the two questions are tied together. "This is not a new tax," Donaldson said. "It just allows the village to sell the bonds on the existing tax." "We can't have one (question approved) without the other," Donaldson added. Now the one percent tax generates about $1.6 million a year that goes toward payment of existing bonds for water system improvements. Those bonds will be paid off in the year 2003. Donaldson said the village water system needs about $40 million in improvements over the next 15 to 20 years. Continuing the one percent tax and issuing more bonds will eliminate the need to raise water rates to fix the water system, Donaldson said. It also may eliminate the need for forward

Capitan School Sets Bond Elect For May 11

by Doris Cherry

Still in desperate need for additional elementary classrooms and rerouting vehicle and bus traffic for safety reasons, Capitan Board of Education voted to hold a $2 million bond election on May 11. At a special board meeting March 4, newly elected and re-elected board members Grant Dean, Ervin Aldaz and James Hobbs were sworn in by Lincoln County Magistrate Judge Gerald Dean Jr. For Judge Dean it was a special honor, since Grant Dean is his son. Lincoln County Clerk Martha Proctor, who normally would have sworn in the new members, asked Judge Dean to perform the ceremony for his son. After the swearing in, members reorganized their board, again electing Tom Trost as president. "To make him suffer more," joked Aldaz. Hobbs then nominated Aldaz as vice president and the vote was unanimous. Aldaz then nominated Hobbs as secretary, because he knew how to operate the tape recorder, he joked. The vote for Hobbs as secretary was also unanimous. Board member Jack King was absent. Following the reorganization, all four present members unanimously approved the resolution calling for a special bond issue elected to be held on May 11. The $2 million bond will be sufficient to build additional elementary classrooms, and remodel some of the existing elementary classrooms so the district can maintain its small teacher to student ratio. The bond issue will also include enough money to construct a new bus drop off loop to the southwest end of the middle school, and remove the interior parking and drive way. Aldaz said the board and school staff and supporters need to let the voting public know that all the other items included in the first bond issue election were needed elements and will be needed in the future. "We just listened to the voters and lowered the bond amount," Aldaz said. "What we had before was not put in as fluff." School superintendent Diana Billingsley said if the May 11 bond issue fails, the district will have to wait two years to hold another bond election. If that happens the district may make additional classroom space by bringing in portable buildings. Aldaz said the May 11 bond issue is important, and if it does not pass it will impact the regular budget, salaries and supplies, just to make ends meet. "We brag on our student to teacher ratio, but that will go by the wayside in a hurry if we don't have additional space," Aldaz said. Trost said the district can't hire more teachers if there are

by Doris Cherry

Weekend rain and snow produced about three-fourths of an inch of rain in Ruidoso, but that was not enough to dampen the drought conditions. Because of this, the village of Ruidoso is taking a proactive approach to water conservation. Water well production in Ruidoso reservoirs has dropped to the point that the village is now in an Odd/Even watering phase of its current Water Contingency Plan, said Ruidoso village manager Alan Briley during the Tuesday, March 9 council meeting. Briley said he met with department directors to inform them that the village has started to restrict when it waters public grounds. To comply with the upcoming water restriction change in the village water ordinance, watering of village grounds is being done between 6 p.m. to 10 a.m. If the drought gets worse, the village will water only on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday as outlined in the proposed changes to the village water ordinance that will be reviewed in public hearing and adopted on March 30, Briley said. "We think this is a proactive approach to wise water conservation," Briley said. Before Briley's report and the regular business of the meeting began, mayor Robert Donaldson discussed the March 30 public hearing on a $5.67 a month standby water use fee to be imposed on all undeveloped lots. He said he no classrooms to put them in. "And the bus loop is a safety issue, as we planned before," Trost said. "Since the last bond issue election, there have been near misses in the traffic."

Aldaz said he heard people comment that the district did not do enough to inform the public about the February bond issue election that failed. But Aldaz complimented the school administration for its efforts for the February bond issue election. "I thought we held as many forums as possible," Aldaz said. "The only other thing we could have done was go door to door."

Billingsley said she has a list of registered voters who reside in the district and has plans to make phone calls. Also she and other school staff and supporters are registering people to vote. Billingsley said she is planning to do a mail out brochure about the bond issue election. She also plans to hold public forums about the need for the $2 million bond issue election.

Trost suggested Billingsley get Al Clemmons, bond counselor, to help prepare a brochure that shows a more simplified way the bond issue will affect property taxes.

While the $2 million bond issue will take care of the immediate needs for the elementary school and overall campus traffic safety, there are still many more needs.

"There are so many things that are needed at the high school, middle school, and athletic facilities," Billingsley added.

Hobbs said the district has not overspent on its campus. He told of an example in Cummins gym, where a visitor at a recent ball game commented about the one-stall ladies restroom. "We have no fluff on the campus," Trost agreed.

Another athletic facility in need of expansion is the weight room, where more than 80 students at a time are trying to use the equipment. High school principal Darrel Stierwalt said the school is trying to raise money for a temporary weight room to ease the crowding that has also become a safety issue.

Billingsley said the new bond issue does not include enough money to pave Yard Road. However, she is looking into funding from the New Mexico State Highway Department to pave the road that is located half on school property and half on the Village of Capitan property. The new bond will include enough money to build the bus loop that will be accessed from Yard Road. Once the new bus loop is constructed, the existing drive through, and parking by Traylor Gym will be removed and the area landscaped.

Voters who are registered and who reside within Capitan district and are in precincts 3 and 5 and portions of 12A, 2B, 4, 6, 7, 10 and 12C, are eligible to cast a ballot in the May 11 election. Polls for the election will be at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds in Capitan and will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Voter registration for the May 11 election is open until 5 p.m. April 13. Absentee voting begins April 16 and ends May 6.

Board members also approved a resolution that adopts the formal election procedures.

The regular board meeting is set for 6 p.m. tonight (Thursday) March 11.

Gnatkowski Is New County 4-H Coordinator

Pete Gnatkowski began work Jan. 25 as Lincoln County's 4-H program coordinator with New Mexico State University's Cooperative Extension Service.

Gnatkowski, a Lincoln County native, fills the position vacated by Barry Herd who retired in October. Gnatkowski will work in the position for the next year.

"I am really looking forward to working with the kids," Gnatkowski said. He is returning to Extension after 22 years. He worked as the 4-H agent in Otero County from 1975 to 1977.

Since then, he has operated his family's ranch in Lincoln County.

"My goal is to increase 4-H enrollment in Lincoln County. I think the 4-H program has the potential to do a lot for the kids in this area," Gnatkowski said. "I plan to work more in the Ruidoso area to get the southern end of the county more involved."

He has volunteered as the wool judging coach for the county 4-H team and the Corona and Carrizozo FFA teams for several years. He took the two state champion 4-H judging teams to the national competition in Sonora, TX.

Gnatkowski received a bachelor's degree in animal science from NMSU in 1972. He is a member of the Corona Board of Education and the Lincoln County Public Lands Use Advisory Committee. He is also assistant superintendent of the wool show at the New Mexico State Fair. He is a past president of the New Mexico Wool Growers Association and served as co chair of the Lincoln County Fair's Junior Livestock Sale for many years.

Councilor Bill Chance said the gross receipt tax as a funding mechanism allows the village to use resources from visitors or anyone who spends money in the village. "Water rates are just from us," Chance said. "This will help share the payment because we have to build a water system for all who come here."

Donaldson said that two thirds of the gross receipts in Ruidoso are paid by people other than property owners.

Councilor Linda Flack said to sell the tax to the public the village needs to emphasize this is an expense the village will have to improve the water system. "If continuing the tax is not passed, the village will be forced to raise money in other ways," Flack said.

Donaldson said issuing bonds on a gross receipt tax for water system improvements removes the pressure of having to issue general obligation bonds based on property taxes. It also frees up the property tax bonds to be used for other quality of life projects such as the indoor swimming pool and streets.

Within a week, a water system master plan developed by Wilson and Company is to be delivered to the village. Donaldson said the plan is being completed later than anticipated because the company engineers realized how complex and difficult the village water system is to work with. In developing their computer models, engineers went to the village water supervisor Richard Sanchez who explained how it now works. "We have the most complex water system in New Mexico," Donaldson said. "And probably one of the most complex systems in the west."

The election polls will be at Ruidoso Convention Center. Precincts 6, 8 and 10 will be consolidated, and precincts 7 and 9 will be consolidated. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Voter registration for the special election will be open until 5 p.m. April 20. Absentee voting will be at the office of the village clerk in the village administration center on Cree Meadows Drive.

Special Elections

By Ruth Hammond

Three special elections will be held in Lincoln County the next couple of months. The special Carrizozo election will be held April 20, the Capitan School bond election will be held May 11, and the Ruidoso special election will be held May 18. Each of these special elections is important and approval is necessary for improvements.

Improvements are needed in many areas. The Capitan School needs to build additional elementary classrooms and remodel some of the existing elementary classrooms. Each year more children are attending Capitan School and the additional classrooms are needed for the school to continue the small teacher to student ratio. The bond issue question on the ballot will ask if the school district should be authorized to issue general obligation bonds in the amount of not exceeding $2 million with the money to be used to build additional elementary classrooms and remodel some of the existing elementary classrooms and to address safety concerns by improving and upgrading school grounds, especially the school bus drop off loop. If you have questions about how the money will be used, contact the Capitan School Superintendent Diana Billingsley.

Children of today are our leaders of tomorrow and they deserve the best education possible. Keeping small teacher to student ratios provides a better learning environment. Overcrowding classrooms, especially in elementary school, deprives children of their right to not only learn, but to enjoy the learning process. Smaller classes allows teachers to spend more time with each student and give them the personalized attention needed. When students are herded through the school day in overcrowded situations they are in danger of losing their precious gift of wanting to learn. Building additional classrooms and remodeling existing classrooms in Capitan should be a priority for every person living in the Capitan School district.

Keeping children safe needs no explanation. The school bus drop off loop and removing parking and the driveway inside the school grounds will help keep students safe. Little children move quickly, often not paying attention to vehicles. The school bus drop off loop needs to be constructed as soon as possible for safety.

Even though many voters living in the Capitan School district may not have children in school, their lives will be affected through the years by what and how these children learn. Today's students will be the taxpayers of tomorrow. Today's students will be the elected officials of tomorrow. Today's students will be the adults and parents of future generations. Today's students need the best foundation for the job ahead of them. That foundation begins in the home but it is strengthened by their learning experiences in school.

There are no frills in the Capitan School bond election. It asks voters to approve money for what is desperately needed now. Think about the children, think about their future, think about your own future, and carefully consider what is necessary when you vote.

Special elections in Carrizozo and Ruidoso concern gross receipt taxes. Voters in Ruidoso will be asked if the village should continue to impose the supplemental municipal gross receipt tax of one percent. The money will continue to be used for water improvements. Carrizozo voters will be asked if the town should adopt a gross receipt tax of 1/8 of one percent. The money would be placed in a special fund to be used to repay a loan in the event Alasca defaults on the economic development revolving loan from the state. Alasca plans to help Carrizozo by bringing an industry to the area. Each of these special elections is important. Vote! Vote!

Ruidoso Continues Debate On Carports

by Doris Cherry

Ruidoso Village Council could not agree on proposed changes to the Ruidoso architectural controls that would prohibit portable carports, exposed metal siding (except on mobile and manufactured homes) and exposed unpainted cinder block in all but the industrial districts.

Instead councilors, during their public hearing March 9 on the proposed changes, approved continuing the public hearing on the proposed changes until their March 30 meeting.

The main issue about the proposed changes dealt with carports. As the proposed changes read, temporary or portable carports would be prohibited, and no carport could not have exposed metal support poles. Councilor Bill Chance said he had a problem in restricting metal support poles because they are the sturdiest material available. "Painted metal is not offensive to me," Chance said.

Village planning officer Cleatus Richards said it was all appearance and exposed means "to view." Village attorney Charles Rennie said the intent was to prohibit prefabricated carport units.

But councilor Leon Eggleston said permanent carports could have metal poles. Mayor Robert Donaldson said carports could have metal poles if they were covered with wood.

The proposed changes extends the ban on metal siding on buildings in all districts except C-4 commercial district or on accessory buildings in all districts if approved by the P&Z. The proposed changes allow metal siding in residential districts on mobile or manufactured homes. The changes allow metal siding residences or accessory buildings, but prohibits raised rib, v-rib, R-panel metal siding or similar metal siding. Prefabricated storage buildings in residential areas must not be more than 120 square feet or 10 percent of the size of the residence.

Village manager Alan Briley said he understood the changes would also prohibit exposed metal such as wrought iron, and require that all metal be covered. "What about wrought iron?" asked Chance. Rennie said it would apply only to support poles.

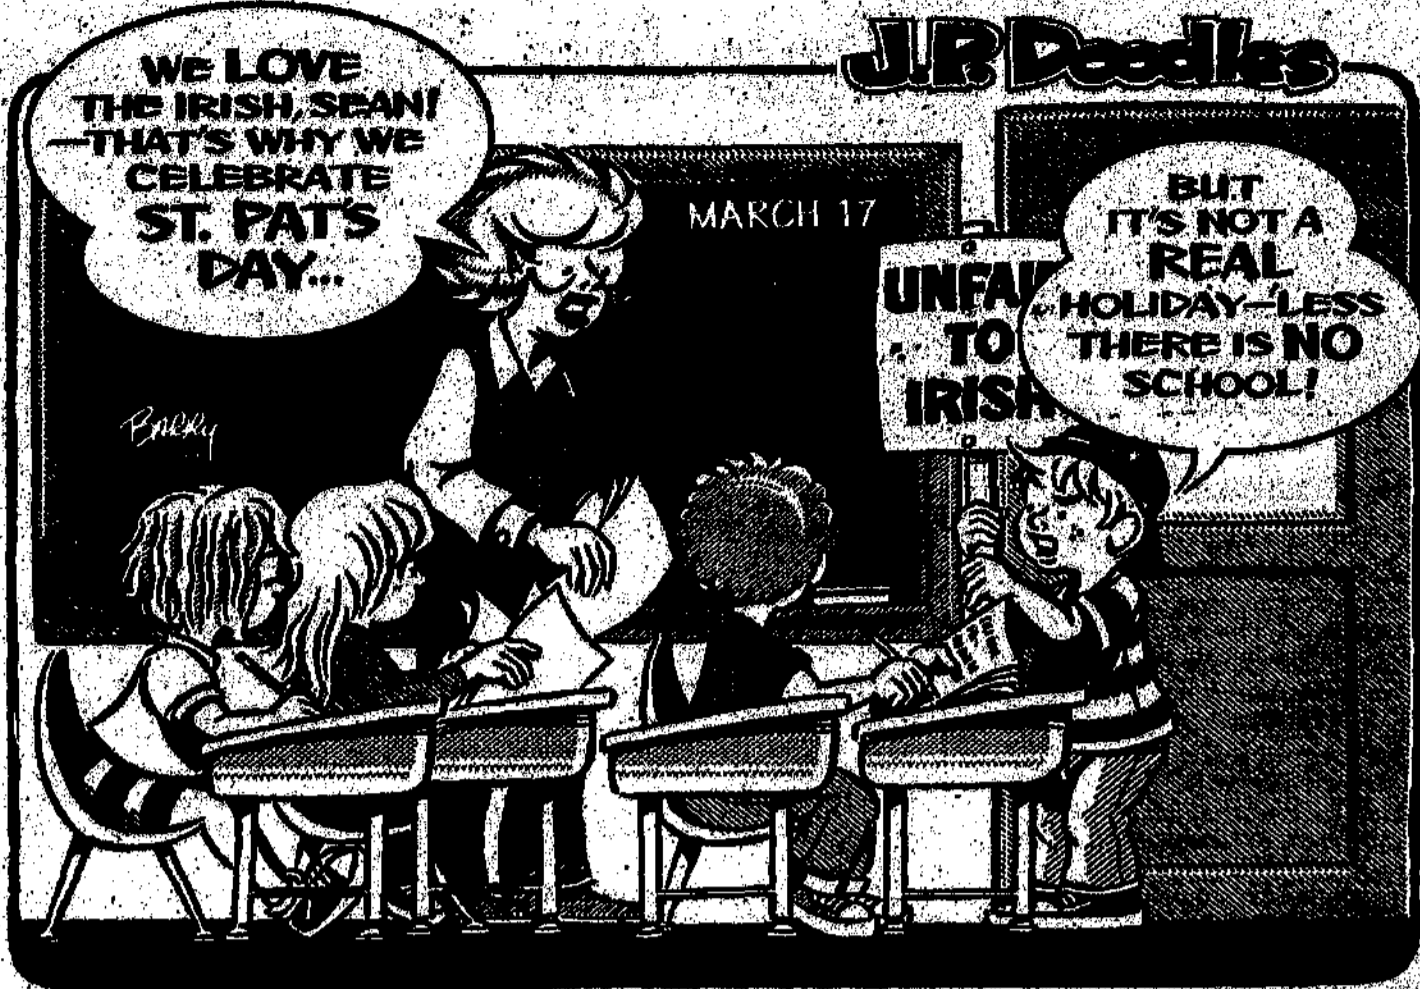

"That is very much restrictive," Chance said. Eggleston agreed there are wrought iron posts. Flack asked if decorative wrought iron posts would have to be covered.

Donaldson said there is not much wrought iron in Ruidoso, except on mobile homes. "Some want architectural controls more than this," Donaldson said. "Our intent is to eliminate metal buildings."

Flack said the intent is not to keep someone from decorating a home with wrought iron. Donaldson said the changes mainly apply to carports. "We just want to prevent portable carports from showing up all over town," he said.

Rennie said the proposed changes were a "creature of P&Z." When Donaldson called for public comment, P&Z member Ross Dingman said he had a problem with the metal pole part. He said he objected because he thought metal poles were structurally sturdy-

by Jay Miller

SANTA FE - What's new about this legislative session? Well, first let's look at some things that haven't changed.

*Gov. Gary Johnson's unwillingness to sell his ideas to lawmakers or to do any horse trading.

*Partisanship. *Gubernatorial road trips to sell his ideas to the public. He did that in 1997.

*Governor's refusal to testify to a legislative committee. All governors have declined such invitations.

*Legislative indignation about the governor not testifying.

*Threats of special sessions. We're now in the fifth year of this "strange marriage" between a Republican governor who believes in unnegotiable truths and a Democrat Legislature that is accustomed to getting its way. Voters returned them all to office last year, which is either a sign that we like gridlock or that we were out of our minds. The bottom line is that we shouldn't expect most things to change.

But one thing is different. Legislative leaders have been willing to cut to the chase. Normally all important bills are left until the last few days of a legislative session so they all can be laid out on the table as bargaining chips. The more chips, the more flexibility parties have in reaching agreement.

This session, however, is more partisan than ever. The Democrat leaders of both houses seem intent on bullying their Republican counterparts more than ever. Republican leaders have announced in advance that they will vote against any veto override attempts even if they like the bills. The governor has threatened more vetoes and Democrats intend to find out if he means it.

So instead of sending the governor bills to veto after the session ends, when they can't do anything about them, legislative leaders are sending them early so the governor has to act before the legislature adjourns on March 20. Then they can test to see if Republicans will solidly support the governor on override attempts.

In the second week of the session, Gov. Johnson line-item vetoed the Legislative Finance Committee staff out of the Feed Bill that supports the legislative branch of government. His problem was three auditors added to the LFC staff. The LFC said it needed to increase accountability of the executive branch of government. The governor said the auditors harass his cabinet secretaries. Lawmakers quickly sent the governor a new bill increasing the LFC staff by only two instead of three people and not calling them auditors. The governor signed it.

Lawmakers then sent the governor an Accountability in Government Act. He signed that too. Then they sent him a tax amnesty act similar to one he vetoed four years ago. He signed this one.

So far, so good. But that was the easy stuff. Democrats wanted to see if the governor would veto a roll back of state park fee increases one of his agencies had imposed. They knew Johnson doesn't like taxes. But he reminded them in his veto message that he likes user fees.

The next bill to the governor increased penalties for hate crimes. Johnson had vetoed a similar bill four years ago, saying all crimes are hate crimes. He said he'd even dust off the same veto message this time. Sure enough, he vetoed it.

But his veto message didn't mention anything about all crimes being hate crimes. That could have been due to publicity that the FBI compiles statistics that show only about one percent of all crimes are hate crimes.

The budget bills were the next ones lawmakers readied for an early submission to the governor. But the education budget was slowed down when Senate Democrat leader Manny Aragon unilaterally slashed one of his fellow Democrats' pet projects, causing enough Democrats to join with Republicans to defeat the measure and send it back to a conference committee.

The governor's action on those bills may cause an even more exciting end to this session than usual.

CAPITAN NOTES

By MAUREEN SULLIVAN

Greetings from my old house by the side of the road to your house!

Tuesday morning and it is a bit past six o'clock. Tom will be here in a couple of hours to pick up my efforts to deliver to my special friend Ruth, and at this moment and time I have not even a iota of an idea of what I am going to put down on this missive. So be patient and bear with me and we will all be surprised at the outcome I am sure. So here goes:

My eldest son, Terrence Patrick arrived from Brazil on Friday night, or should say on Saturday around three in the morning. His brother Tom met him in El Paso. On arrival, Terrence appeared fine and with some hugs and not much conversation, we all bid each other good night. We were all past the conversation level. By mid afternoon, Terry as we all call him, was a very sick person, wringing wet with perspiration and shaking with fever, then ice cold. Blankets and more blankets, wringing wet sheets to be changed and laundered, checks and more checks on how he was feeling was the "NORM" for the ensuing 24 hours, but thank God there was a light at the end of the tunnel and by Monday evening Terrence Patrick finally made it downstairs for a couple of hours. Still not anywhere near his usual self, but assurance that he was still among the living. And so my prayers were answered as they have been, so many times in the past.

But I do apologize that I do not have any news to impart to you folks, so will substitute with some bits and pieces that are here at my finger tips.

Going through some old, very old I must add, clippings I came across the following taken from "The Front Row" in the Des Moines Register by Elizabeth Clarkson Zwartz.

While Marjorie ("Ma Kettle") Main was in town, a traffic situation occurred near the theater where she was appearing, and the actress got a good look into the Paul Sullivan's car. There sat the Sullivan's tiny Patricia and their two small sons, Terry and Tom. "What a beautiful child!" the actress said, drawn first to Patricia, and then seeing the two small boys, remarked, "What a wonderful healthy family."

Capitan Chamber Announces Parade Schedule Is July 3

The Capitan Chamber of Commerce met March 1.

Members learned that Mollie Mason had represented the chamber at Career Day Feb. 26 at the Convention Center in Ruidoso.

And ad in the Vacation issue of New Mexico magazine has generated many telephone calls concerning the area.

The telephone number for Capitan Chamber is 854-2273. It was announced that Dr. Seidel will be at Dr. Rouleau's old office three days a week on a half day basis.

It was announced that the Smokey Bear Stampede parade will be held Saturday, July 3 this year. This parade is sponsored by the Friends of Smokey.

President Frank Warth appointed Wayne Mason and Jack Johnson as a nominating committee for new officers.

The chamber sign east of town on Highway 380 will be renovated.

When a friend of the Sullivans heard of this flattering encounter he asked, "Did you ask for 'Ma' Kettle's autograph?" "Why no," said "Pa" Sullivan, glancing around and throwing out his chest, "She didn't ask for MINE!"

And folks that was a long time ago, but I will not reveal just how long ago it was.

Am just opening some small books of this and that and submitting some things I hope some of you will enjoy, because I have no news to impart:

Only What I Need
God seldom gives me what I want, but gives what I need,
I ask for wealth, he gives me health, for love, he gives me seeds.

"Go sow the seeds," He seems to say and, "Love will grow for you"

And health will be the wealth you need to share the love you grow.

And when I pray for worldly goods and comforts of a king

He fills my heart with little joys for simple, common things.

And when I beg of things I see or envy to my mind

He guides my steps to happy souls who are completely blind.

So now I just come unto Him in simple humble prayer,

And only ask He keep me safe from harm and Hell's despair.

For he has shown that He will not reward my prayers of greed

And will not give me what I want, but Only What I Need.

Michael Duina

And with your permission will close with the following, also selected at random, but the name of the author caught my eye. His name was Lewis Sullivan. Not any kin; I am sure. After all, Sullivan is almost as common a name as Smith or Jones.

Use Words with Caution

"All the beauty, all the joy, all the love that man has known, all his kindness, all his yearnings, all his dreams for better things; his passionate desire for peace and an anchorage within a universe that has filled him with fear, and mystery and adoration; his daily round of toil and commonplace; his

Doctors Group Asks Capitan For Help

by Doris Cherry

A group of doctors from Roswell have stepped in to fill the gap of medical care in Capitan.

To help make the transition from Dr. David Rouleau, who closed his practice on March 1 after providing family practice medicine in the village since 1977, the doctors from Rio Pecos Medical Center in Roswell are asking for financial help from the village.

During the regular March meeting of the Capitan trustees Monday, March 8, Dr. Ray Seidel thanked the trustees for allowing him to come into the community to provide medical care. Seidel said Dr. Rouleau closing practices was a big loss to the community, but he hoped he could "fill his shoes."

Dr. Seidel and his physician's assistant will hold office hours from 7 a.m. to 12 noon Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, in Dr. Rouleau's old office. His telephone number will be the same as Dr. Rouleau's also. Seidel said he has leased the building for six months, but must begin looking for another facility immediately, because Dr. Rouleau

And with this I rest my case and also the cut third finger that seems to continuously get in my way this morning.

So for another week, God bless each and all that read my trivia and even those that cannot be bothered.

Adios, sayonara and have a good week.

P.S. Please call if you have any news items, large or small. This is Your column. We all want your news, not just my ramblings.

County Considers Funding Indigent Health Care Fund

by Doris Cherry

Lincoln County has no Indigent Health Care Fund. Lincoln County is one of two New Mexico counties without a separate Indigent Health Care fund. Without a separate fund, the county basically "borrows" money for indigent health care from the 4.25 mill levy imposed on county properties that goes toward the infrastructure and operation of Lincoln County Medical Center (LCMC) in Ruidoso.

For several years, Lincoln County Commissioners have discussed the need for a separate Indigent Health Care fund, which will be matched by the state on a three to one basis. But county commissioners have been hesitant to create a fund beyond the mill levy to the hospital, because they disagree on how to finance such a fund.

Encouraged by the Maternal Child Health Council to hold hearings on creation of such a fund, Lincoln County Commissioners conducted their first in a series of public hearings on Indigent Health Care on Monday, March 1 in Ruidoso Convention Center. They heard several touching stories about the dire need for an indigent fund to assist the working poor who do not qualify for Medicaid, Medicare and who cannot afford insurance.

Thirty one counties in New Mexico have a separate tax to pay for their Indigent Health Care funds, said county attorney Alan Morel during the hearing. By state law counties are allowed to impose county wide up to three-eighths of a percent of gross receipt taxes. The county commission can impose the first one-eighth percent which is subject to a negative referendum that requires a petition signed by people in numbers determined by the numbers who voted in the last election. The first one-eighth percent can be used for anything.

The second one-eighth percent is just for an Indigent Health Care Fund and can be imposed by county commissioners without a vote and is not subject to any referendum.

The third one-eighth percent is totally subject to a positive vote in an referendum. One-sixteenth of that last one-eighth percent can go to the county's general fund, and the other sixteenth can go to the Indigent Health Care Fund. In total, the county has ability to impose three-sixteenths of a percent of gross receipt tax toward an Indigent Health Care Fund. County commissioner Wilton Howell said without a separate Indigent Health Care Fund there are three "injustices"—property owners pick up the whole tab; health care providers other than LCMC cannot access any indigent care funds as they are set up now, and indigent people seeking health care have no choice now to what service they receive. Howell said with a gross receipt tax to finance an Indigent Health Care fund transients and tourists would pick up part of the tab.

During the public portion of the hearing, Dr. Arlene Brown, chair of the Maternal Child Health Council said that a poll of medical providers other than LCMC showed they provide at least a quarter of a million dollars worth of indigent care. "If we had an Indigent Health Care Fund the providers could be reimbursed," Dr. Brown said. "A number of doctors offices are in danger of going under if we don't provide reimbursements for the care they are giving for free."

Dr. Brown said the Maternal Child Health Council has suggested three ways to finance an Indigent Health Care Fund—with gross receipt taxes, property taxes or a combination of both.

Indigent Health Care funds are available for not-for profit organizations, home health care, ambulance, counseling centers and outlying health clinics.

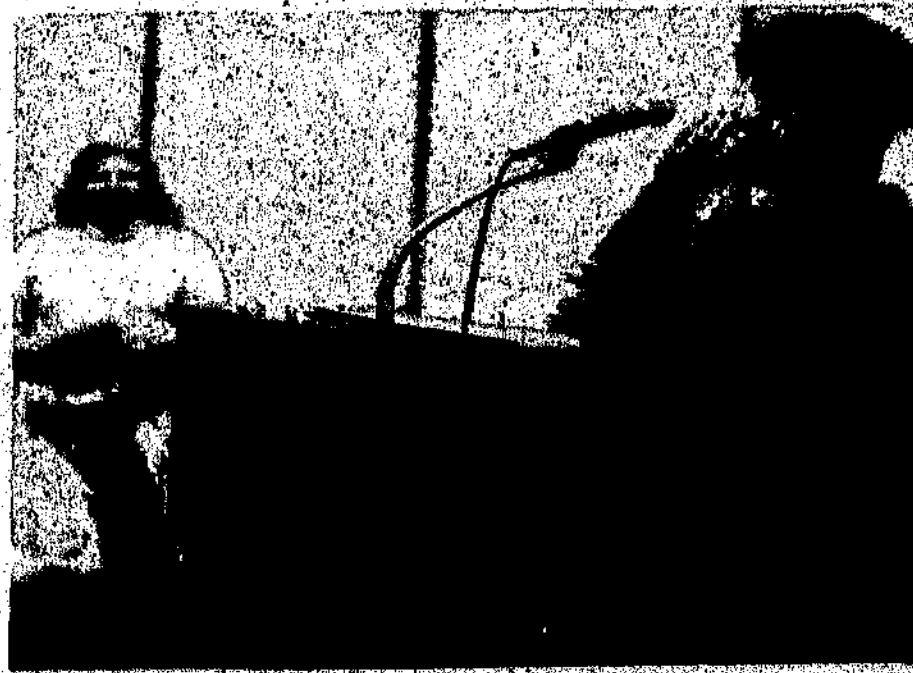

Theresa Luna, the public health nurse for the county, encouraged commissioners to create an Indigent Health Care fund because it would benefit the communities "we all live in." She told the story of a woman who learned she had breast cancer two years ago. Because the woman had no way to pay for medical care locally she was sent to UNM Hospital in Albuquerque. "But University Hospital would not accept her, because she was from a county without an Indigent Fund," Luna said.

Luna said the woman wanted to come to the hearing that night, but she was unable because she has too many health problems.

Katherine Anderson told her story next. She told of how she grew up as a good student, Girl Scout, college honors graduate and started a promising career teaching deaf children. But by age 28 she was in the full stages of manic depression. Years later she ended up in Ruidoso at the counseling center "a shell of a person." She praised the center for getting her on the right medications with a wonderful counselor. However she does not qualify for Medicaid, and she cannot afford all the medication she needs.

Prisilla McNutt represented her sister-in-law whom she only referred to as Diana. Diana was a high school graduate who attended college and worked with special education students and was community involved. But a divorce three years ago led to her mental breakdown. She was referred to the counseling center and was doing real well with her medications. But she couldn't afford to continue with the medications because she worked part time and did not qualify for Medicaid or SSI. So she decided to wean herself off one medication, which eventually led to another breakdown. She ended up in the middle of Highway 70 and she was picked up by the police and put in jail for three months. From there she was shipped to programs in Alamogordo, then to Las Vegas state hospital where they said she needed Medicaid and counseling. So they sent her back to the county jail.

When Diana got out of the county jail, she went back to the counseling center, but again she could not afford the medications and now she is back in a program in Alamogordo. "I would like to have this Indigent Health Care fund so Diana can have somebody to talk to," McNutt said.

DR. ARLENE BROWN addresses the Lincoln County Commission while Wanda de Figueroa passes out information about the Indigent Health Care fund, during a special hearing held March 1, in Ruidoso Convention Center. Commissioners set another hearing on the fund during their March 18 meeting to also be held in Ruidoso Convention Center.

Dick Weber, president of the Home Health Services of Lincoln County, said the bottom line is: "we are our brothers-keepers." He said in 1997-98 the home health services gave away $28,768 worth of services. "We owe it to our citizens to provide indigent health care," he concluded.

Rhoda-Glick, also a member of the Home Health Services of Lincoln County, said non-hospital based providers need access to an Indigent Health Care fund. Currently the system leaves people with long term medical needs on the "verge of abandonment." She gave the example of a woman whose brain tumor left her unable to care for herself. Prior to the Medicare funding cuts, the woman had her care provided for, but now Home Health gives away $800 worth of care to her plus the care she receives from her church.

Wanda de Figueroa, a member of the Maternal Child Health Council and associated with Presbyterian Medical Services said one group without any access to care is undocumented women and children. They often wait until medical problems are severe and end up at the emergency room.

Catherine Cooper from the Counseling Center spoke on behalf of her clients, many of whom are not able to speak for themselves. She said her counseling services do not need an indigent health care fund, but many of her clients have multiple medical problems and need lab work and medications. "I hear tonight that working people are no longer able to work because of mental and physical problems," Cooper said. "But they can't afford insurance or payments, and many are too proud to go for free doctor's care."

Cooper told of a client who wanted to tell her story but was not stable enough to be there. "She wants to go off Medicaid, but she can't as she can't afford her medications without it," Cooper said.

Jule Storch, assistant administrator at LCMC, said to qualify for indigent care at LCMC a person must be a resident of the county at least three months. "We are talking about the working poor who are not eligible for Medicare or Medicaid," she said. "Without a funded Indigent Health Care fund, I don't know how long LCMC can sustain this free care."

County commissioner Ray Nunley, who is a pharmacist, told another sad story of a Chaves county woman who was unable to be reimbursed for care at LCMC because the county has no Indigent fund.

Maurson Coleman, co-administrator of Home Health Care of Lincoln County, said 42 home health care providers in New Mexico closed last year. "I know working poor who want to contribute," she said. "But they have no running water or electricity." She said an indigent health care would benefit all medical providers. "It's not us against them, the hospital against others. It's just a model that would allow for all providers," Coleman added.

County commissioner Rick Simpson said, "We're all on the same side, we just need to figure how to fund it."

County commission chairman Rex Wilson closed the hearing. Commissioners unanimously voted to hold another hearing on the issue. Howell suggested to have it at the regular March 18 meeting in Ruidoso. But county commissioner Bill Schwettmann suggested having separate hearings in Carrizozo and in the Hondo valley not during a regular meeting with 30 other items. Nunley agreed with Schwettmann to have a separate hearing.

er than a lot of wood. "I don't know how we can't allow the use of metal uprights," Dingman said. He agreed the intent was to get away from the "$500 stick in the ground things. But there has to be some way to allow aesthetically pleasing metal poles."

Once again Chance said he thought it was too restrictive to take away sturdy painted metal poles. "I appreciate eliminating the portable eyesores, but leave the other alone," he added.

Donaldson then said it could lead to people using a metal frame with a temporary cloth or plastic cover. Flack said that people who want to put up something tacky at their place will. "It's hard to regulate good taste," Chance replied.

Eggleston said a problem is a lot of portable buildings don't require a permit to install. Donaldson said the proposed changes need to better define temporary or portables. He then suggested continuing the public hearing to March 30 to give the attorney time to "clean up" the definitions.

Councillors unanimously approved continuing the public hearing to their March 30 meeting.

Odd/Even Watering

has gotten considerable comments from the public that the standby fee is double taxation to owners of undeveloped lots, because they must also pay the village impact fee when they finally build on a lot. Donaldson said the village needs something easier than the impact fee. "I've seen the turmoil the impact fee has created," Donaldson said. Donaldson then recommended there be an agenda item on the March 30 meeting to eliminate the impact fee. "I think the standby fee is a fairer way to go," he said. The impact fee is not doing what was intended. I don't have a problem in admitting when we're wrong. Impact fees on new subdivisions will remain, as Donaldson had no problem with that. "But on existing lots we should go with the standby fee and dump the impact fees." He said the standby fees will generate nearly as much money in the long run as impact fees.

Councilor Bill Chance said he understood the impact fees were based on the idea to regulate growth. However, he also had received numerous calls from people who had a house on multiple lots who would have to pay both impact fees and standby fees. Chance said he assured these people the village would not charge standby fees by the number of lots. But Chance too agreed it should be either impact fees or standby fees. Donaldson said the village was subdivided in unusual ways, including 25 foot wide lots given away with subscriptions to the El Paso Times years ago. He said the village should allow property owners to combine lots to create larger lots without having to replat.

"I think someone who buys a lot today, and builds in the future will see the benefit of keeping the lines maintained," Donaldson said. "But to hit them with $4,400 (in impact fees) is too hard to understand."

In another water discussion, councilors approved an addendum to the airport hangar lease agreements that raised the monthly water fee to $21.75, the same base fee Ruidoso commercial water users are charged. A.C. Ackerman, who with Bob Dolgener have a lease for a hangar at the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport, said the situation was complex. He said the cost of the monthly fee was not the issue, but he thought the village should include the basic water fee in the price of the lease, because they use very little water. Also, he said the hangars are constructed at the lease holder's expense and in 20 years become property of the village.

Ackerman also argued that C.E. Burdine was having a hangar built that would include an efficiency apartment for his pilot to stay at when visiting Ruidoso and thus he would need much more water and should be charged a fee.

Airport manager Tim Morris said he looked at all the issues and is trying to be friendly and fair. Morris said there is a two inch water line to each hangar, put in at cost to the village. However, the hangar owners do not have to have a faucet, and thus no monthly fee if they wish. One hangar at the airport does not have water.

Councilor Bob Sterchi said each hangar owner has the choice of hooking up to the water.

Village manager Alan Briley said the intent is to charge the base monthly fee if the hangar is hooked up with

Councilors approved the addendum to the lease agreements charging the $21.75 month base fee.

Doctors Group Asks

wants to convert the office into a residence at the end of the six months.

If the community is receptive and his business expands, Dr. Seidel said he hopes to have another doctor in the Capitan office by mid-July. "What I want from Capitan is patronage and subsidy for rent in the short or long term," Dr. Seidel said.

Because Dr. Seidel is part of the Rio Pecos Medical Group, he is able to accept Medicare, Medicaid, Medicaid and about 250 different types of health insurance payments. He also will have access to specialists in gastroenterology, endocrinology, OB-GYN and a dietitian, who will rotate visits to Capitan and Ruidoso.

The opening of the Capitan clinic will be financed by his Ruidoso office, Dr. Seidel said. He also said Dr. Rouleau suggested to him that the village might subsidize the start-up of his office. Dr. Seidel said the village could construct a clinic office, then lease it to his group, so the village will have control over the type of medicine that is practiced. For now Dr. Seidel requested the village help subsidize the rent for Dr. Rouleau's building.

Capitan Mayor Norm Renfro said he talked with Dr. Seidel about the village helping him start an office. However, any decisions would have to be made by the board of trustees, and must be legal, Renfro said. Village attorney Dave Thomsen said the village is prohibited from donating or lending money to a private service, unless the service directly benefits the village of Capitan. For instance, the doctor could provide physicals to village employees, Thomsen said.

In response to questions, Dr. Seidel said he is a board certified family practitioner who focuses on patient satisfaction. He also said Dr. Rouleau's medical records will be kept in the office building for now and Dr. Rouleau's former patients can get their records from the office, or they can open up new files with Dr. Seidel. "I'm not officially assuming responsibility for Dr. Rouleau's records," Dr. Seidel said.

Dr. Seidel also answered questions about his hospital preference. Dr. Seidel said where he refers a patient depends on the level of care needed and whether the new administration at Lincoln County Medical Center (LCMC) in Ruidoso improves the standards of care. Dr. Seidel said in the last three and a half years he has been in the area he has sent most of his patients to Eastern New Mexico Medical Center (ENMMC) in Roswell because it is superior to LCMC, it has more specialists and patrons appear to be happier with service at ENMMC than LCMC. "For now about 90 to 95 percent of my patients are admitted at Eastern," Dr. Seidel said. He does have admitting privileges at LCMC also, but LCMC "makes it very difficult for a non-Presbyterian doctor to practice medicine there."

LCMC provides mostly family practice and GYN services, Dr. Seidel continued. Also it does not have doctors in the emergency room. While Dr. Seidel called LCMC medically substandard, he said LCMC's staff is excellent. "If LCMC had doctors in the emergency room I would feel more comfortable about referring patients there," Dr. Seidel said.

"I'm excited about coming into Capitan," Dr. Seidel said. "I think the area is growing and has a lot of potential." Renfro said the trustees will probably hold a public hearing to find out what the community thinks about subsidizing a clinic. That plus a legal opinion, Dr. Seidel said he is now working on a strategic plan for space within a year.

Vargas was asked if there would be any problems with the water between monthly testing and he said there wouldn't be as the chlorine is kept at a level high enough to kill any bacteria that would be anywhere in the line. Payne said that Carrizozo has had six months of clear water since the violation and the September violation was not because of the water but because a report was not turned in. Vargas and Payne said that they check the water daily.

Trustees approved Vargas attending the New Mexico Rural Water Association 21st Annual Statewide Technical Training Conference, April 19-23, in Albuquerque.

Stevens reported to the trustees on the draft of the Carrizozo Zoning Ordinance that he and town clerk Carol Schlarb are working on. Schlarb said that what they have done so far is to make the membership change to the Planning and Zoning Committee (which would go from seven members to five members), and put in a section on mobile home subdivisions. She said that they will add in their draft home occupation and subdivision planning and platting. Stevens said that he also wants to address conditions of usage and variances so that there is more flexibility.

Lovelace, who was not at the last meeting, explained why she had brought this need to the trustee's attention. When someone is trying to buy a large piece of property and subdividing it into lots, especially if it is in an agricultural area, she wants there to be certain restrictions. Examples that she gave of these restrictions are: where are the roads going to go and what specifications for alleys. Lovelace said that she didn't want "helter-skelter" homes going into an area. Lovelace said that she knew there were a lot of changes that needed to be made. She said that there already is subdivision zoning through the state, however, she would like to have the town's subdivision zoning in place as well.

Stevens said that some of the items not addressed in the current Planning & Zoning Ordinance are: road specifications, road requirements, no alley requirements, no water service requirements.

The trustees asked Stevens and Schlarb to continue to work on the draft and bring it back to the next regularly scheduled meeting.

Three items were discussed at the meeting that pointed out the need for an updated Planning & Zoning Ordinance. The first item was: Karin Steinhilber request Home Occupation R-2 Apartment and Small Family Residential which was approved by the trustees.

Steinhilber has a home art business in which she does oils, watercolors, pottery, and some woodwork which she sells at flea marts and craft fairs. She was requesting a home business license. She told the trustees that there would be doing little retail at her home as she goes to the people who commission her work. She said that at most possibly one client per month would come to her home.

Stevens said that it would probably qualify as a hobby.

The zoning code requirements say that the area she uses in her home should not be more than 1/4 of the home, and that according to her diagram the area she was using was not more than that. Stevens said that her business could pass as a hobby.

The second item was bought up during audience participation. Mr. Hobbs, a resident of Carrizozo, asked the trustees how to get permission to add a trailer to his current residence. He is going to attach the trailer to the house to provide more room for himself, his wife, and his son. He is going to put a roof over it and box it in. This area is zoned R1 according to Schlarb. Stevens said that there is a prohibition against mobile homes in R1 zoning, but there is conditional use in which you can include one mobile home per lot of record which must be approved by the trustees. The trustees told Hobbs to see Schlarb and make an application for conditional use to be bought before the trustees for their approval.

The third zoning item was a continuation from the February 23 regular board meeting. This was Scott Goewey requesting Home Occupation R-2 Apartment and Small Family Residential. Patsy Sanchez said that she had asked for a variance at the last meeting for Goewey.

Goewey told the trustees that he wants to build a pottery workshop behind his home. Goewey said that his shop would not be for retail but a place where he can make small scale pottery and a few bigger and more expensive pieces. Some of the larger pieces can be up to 15 feet long and 4 feet high. These larger pieces are one of the reasons he needs a large workshop. He will be using both electric and gas kilns.

At the last meeting, Sanchez said that the workshop would be 850 square feet. She said that the zoning ordinance says that it can only be 200 square feet which is not very large. Stevens said that was for a home occupation and that home occupation was what was on the bottom of the diagram that was turned in by Goewey. Stevens said if he wants to be home occupation then he has to fit under that definition.

Stevens said that Goewey may not want to go for a variance. Stevens said that more information on what he does perhaps is needed and maybe the site should be looked at.

He said that when that is done perhaps his request could be made to fit within the current ordinance.

Stevens read what the variance was and said it did not give the trustees a lot of leeway. Stevens said that the problem he has with the size is the home occupation says 200 square feet for a detached building (the drawing shows the building at 850 square feet). Goewey told the trustees that 200 square feet was pretty small space for anyone who works with his hands no matter what they do. Stevens made the suggestion of connecting the house and workshop. He told Goewey if this was a hobby and not a home occupation then there would be no square footage limitations. Stevens said that a hobby can not produce an income of more than $500 per year and Stevens thinks that assumes that you are selling out of the location and that is not what you are doing.

Stevens said that the above provision on size shows the need for revision so that the trustees can be flexible to encourage people rather than discourage them.

The building also was five feet from the property line and would have to be moved further from the property line. Stevens was asked if notice had to be given to neighbors and he said there was nothing for neighbors notice or approval on a variance. A variance is done by an administrative act of the board of trustees.

Goewey told the trustees that the building will take a while to happen and come in stages as money becomes available, but he needs to know if he can do it.

The trustees gave approval to Goewey with the condition that Stevens, Goewey, and Sanchez will get together to meet area setback requirements for Goewey's hobby.
